Skytop site may solve stadium dilemma

The future of the Syracuse Univer. aity football proggarn and related sporta programs will depend upon decisions made in the upcoming mon. cos concerning the builimg of a new cornty football stadium. The proposed

He said football and basketball are the "significant financial contributors to oux athletic department."

If we didn't have the income from football it is probable that otir athletic department funding would have to be changed, and it is alao posinible that some of the minor sports wonld have to be cut," Dye said. "But we are hopeful

Dye said many of the other sites under consideration by the county are in need of landfill or have parking problemb.

"We have to remember that we are dealing not with a profeasional team but a collegiate one with a built-in con tingency of support from the campas,' Bennett said. "To acquire land downtown would be too expensive and could mean loang some of the univer sity support.

SU plans renovation of Hall of Languages

By Maura McEnaney

Plans for the renovation of the Hall of Languages are underway, according to Harvey H . Kaiser, vice-president for facilities administration. If sufficient funds are raised, Kaiser eaid, work on the building could begin as early as May and be completed in.September 1979. The work would temporarily dis. place all the building's offices and clasprooms.
Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers is expected to make the announcemant of the planned renovation at an Executive Commaittee meeting of the Board of Trustees in December. His decision, according to Kaiser, will be based upon the success of the Capital Fund Campaign, a $$ 35$ million dxive designated mostly for the improvement of campus facilitien:

Approaching

Syracuse University may be on the verge of a golden age.
Never in recent history have the university's prospects been as overwhelmingly favorable as they are now. Under Clifford L. Winters, vice chancellor for administrative operations, SU has balanced its budget for five consecutive years. Few private universities are able to balance their budgets and the feat was not common at SU under earlier administrations.

From this sound fiscal base, the university is preparing major improvements in its physical plant and its acaderaic affairs. Over $$ 2$ milion wras spent this summer to repair campus buildings. The changes are not highly visible ones, but they have paved the way for some dramatic changes in the near future.
Within the last week university officials have confirmed speculation that plans exist for three major projects. The Hall of Languages is scheduled to undergo a complete renovation beginning in May 1978. Renovations will take about 14 months and some scheduling problems may axise becatae the building will be closed from May '78 to September ${ }^{2} 79$. A "University Mall" to be formed by closing University Place from Crouse College to the Faculty Center is also being planned. The top block of University Avenue, between Waverly Avenue and University Place, would also be closed. Michael O. Sawyer, vice chancellor for univeraity relations, hopes the streets can eventually be torn up and planted with grass to provide "more people space" on the campus.

The university's thorniest development problem is still the construction of a new foothall stadium. City support for the stadium appears at an ebb but the university's need continues to grow. Archbold Stadium has a max. imum of two years of ucefuhess remaining, and unloes a stadium is built soom the football programi will have to be phamed out:
Loes of foothall revenues would have frightening repercussions and might eventually cause the demine of much of the githletic department. Faced with paying between $$ 8$ million and 515 millizon for a stadium or dropping big time football and its monetary rewards, the university is ikely to opt fore the etadiam.
While dramatic changee are in the affing in the university's playsical

The cost of access

The withdruwal symptoms from the drug of injustice are excruciating

Stéphen K. Bailey

America's institutiona of higher education are facing massive problems in conplyring with new federal rules requiring them to provide broad access to programs and facilities for handicapped stadents.

In a lecture in Marwell Auditorium this past July, Bailey, former dean of the Maxwell Graduate School Citizenship and Public Afiairs and now acting preaident of the American Council of Education, discussed the frustration university administrators feel toward the new rules. He related the story of one college president who informed of the cost of compliance, "threw up his handa and said bitterly, "What up mis handa and 'Well'a the use?
Such frustration is understandable. The financial cost of compliance with the new rules may run as high as $$ 1$. billion, creating difficulties not juzt for colleges which must find the money, but also for students who must ultimately bear much of the cost through tuition and fees. Balancing the virtue of providing complete education for the handicapped is the vice of suddenly thrusting massive costs upon the present peneration of college students.

Should handicapped students have the right to go to achool anywhere they choose to (assuming they qualify for admissions)? The concept of open choice mayy seem attractive - but it Creates aevere problems for individua schools. A small liberal-arts school in by a court to provide a sign-longered interpreter for a single deaf student ennotpreter for a single deaf stucent en rolled in summer school, at a cost of $$ 750$. The student paid $$ 210$ tuition.

Moreover, the burden falls unequally on different colleges. The older the school, the more its campus buildings are likely to lack ramps, elevators, lifts and other aids to the han dicapped-and the more it will cost to provide complete access.
And who will pay for alleviating these historic injustices? Unquestionably universities will have to pick up part of the tab-but many adminiatrators in higher education are justifiably disturbed at the near-total absence of federal fandz to asgist in compliance. with the federal rules compliance With the federal rules. Congress, charges one college president, "is appropriating private funds for what it deems a public good.' Onde solution which might menit con sideration is to limit the number of universities whose physical plants are renovated to make them full-acceas universities for handicapped studentes. Such a aystem would have to involve choosing a wide range of schoole, both academically and econornically; and some system would have to be devised to distribute the cost among all collegres and univeraities. In the long run avoidance of duplication could reduce the costs for all.

If it is necessary to make all schools acceasible to the handicapped, a large part of the solution is finding a realistic system for shouldering the cost. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has set up a $$ 100,000$ fund to explore ways to keep the coats providing access down as constructive as this is, it is only a start. The cost will still be prohibitive, and meeting it will require substantial federal assigtance, and a gradual approach to meeting goals.

Some of the cost burden will inevitably fall on all students-but the federal government, private organizations, and handicapped studentsas a group, through some form of fee or tuition surcharge, must bear a portion of the cost, lest it become an unreasonable burden for students already pressed by inflation's pressure on college costs.
It would be far easier for America's colleges and universities to forget about the problems of providing access dicapped. But the problems exist, the federal rules are on the books, and institutions of higher education must confront the question of how to confront the question of how to aleviate the iniustices of the past students they serve today,

According to the admissions department this year's freshman class has reversed the trend of falling Scholastic Aptitude Test scores. This fall will also see Shaw Hall make its third attempt at the "living-learning center" experiment. A new approach to community learning idea may finally make Shaw a success.
SU's administration is extremely aware that recent developments have been almost uniformly positive. Sensing that Syracuse University has become an attractive product, the SU administration has hired a number of qualified professionals to make aure their prodict sells. Within the last year, the university has hired at least four persons to "create an image." The efforts of Vice-President for Public Relations Joseph V. Julian and his staff should result in more contributions for the university's fund drive and more qualified studenta for the university's classrooms.
The administration's outlook for the future wras described by one of its mernbers as "euphoric optimiam." But while the administration is working to insure the future, students must be concerned about guarding the present. The exciting feats of years to come would be less impressive if they were accomplished at the expense of the present student population. Balancing the budget, for instance, is an impressive accomplishnent; however, it pales when one recalls tuition has risen 90 per cent in the past 10 yeara.

The university's improvernenta in academics are landable, but are undercut by a senseleas policy of forcing talented faculty members to retire at age 65. The university's inconsigtent efforts in dealing with facaity tenure and promotions alao hinder efforts toward academic excellence.

It is tempting to forget student demands for a more powerfal voice in the university decision-maling process wheh more glamorous projects lie ahead. But while thewe may be good timee at Syracuee, they are times for students and their representatives in Student Association and the Office of Student Affairs to be alart. ## New York's pot law

By David Abernethy
New York State's marijuana laws were transformed in late June from among the nation's harshest to among its most liberal with the passage of a measure decriminalizing possession of up co 25 grams of the drug.
The law, passed by the State Senate June 28 and subsequently signed by Gov. Hugh L. Carey, makes possession of up to 25 grams (seven-eighths of an ounce) a violation, technically not a crime, and punishable by a $$ 100$ fine.
The new law sets the following penalties for possession and sale of marijuana:

- Possession of up to $\mathbf{2 5}$ grams is a violation, punishable by a $\$ 100$ fine for the first offense, $\$ 200$ fine for the second, and $\$ 250$ fine and or 15 days in jail for the third offense.
- Poaseasion of 25 granas to two ounnces, or any public diaplay or use, or a gift of up to two grams or one joint is a Class $B$ or use, or a gift of up to two grams or one joint is a Class $B$ misdemeanor, punishable by up to three months in jail or a $$ 500$ misdemeanor, punishable by up to three months in jail or a $$ 500$ fine.

$$ 1,000$ fine.
- Possession of eight to 16 ounces, or sale of 25 grams to four ounces, is a Class E felony, punishable by up to four years in prison.
- Possession of 16 ounces ta 10 pounds, sale of four to 16 ounces or sale of any amount to a minoria a Class D felony, csmying a penalty of up to 7 years in prison.
- Poasession of over 10 pounds, or sale of over 16 ounces, is a Class C felony, with a penalty of up to 15 years in prison.
The new law, sponsored in the legislature by Assemblyman Richard Gottfried (D-Manhattan) and Senator Douglas Barclay (R-Pulasici), passed the Assembly 79-64 and the Senate 32-28. The egislation was supported by Democratic leadership in the Assembly and by the leaders of both parties in the Senate, as well as bemblyand
The provisions of the bill were a compromise reached after the May 16 defeat of a measure which would have decriminalized possession of up to an ounce. The assembly defeated that bill after a strong anti-decriminalization drive mounted by the State Congervative Committee.
Robert Voorhis, statewide decriminalization coordinator for the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG), attributed passage of the compromise bill to strengthened support of party leaders.

UU abandons plan to hike grad prices

By Scott Rohrer
Opposition from the Office of Student Affairs (OSA) has killed a University Union plan to charge nonstudent prices to graduate students. The announcement came last nightin a joint statement from representatives of UU, OSA and the Graduate Student Organization.

Ulysses J. Connor, director of student activities, refused to comment on why his office opposed institution of the dual price system.

In the statement, UU chairpersons Martin N. Grant and Lynne $B$. Millheiser wrote that to attempt to institute the plan "would erode communications and relations between these factions and would cripple any future attempts to attain a solution to, the inequities in UU funding:"

UU sought an increased allocation from the GSO Senate to be more equitable with the $$ 11.84$ received from with the $$ 11.84$ received from each undergracuate. However, the senate voted to allocate $$ 1.84$ per head or $$ 5.971$ instead of the $$ 13,000$ UU requested.

UU Council then voted to charge graduates higher prices for all UU events. To be fair. UU later extended the hike to SU faculty, staff, administrators, students of University College, SU law school students and spouses. and children of the above groups. Graduate, representation was also barred on UU council.

Grant said he feels Connor did not-back UU's policies because of logistical problems involved in instituting them inval ved in institating them set UU was planning to identify these groups by the color of the these groups by the colorai ibs bacicground on Thair Teaching Asemants andr Teaching Aeaintants background as faculty. According to the faculty's contract, they can only be charged undergraduate prices. Thus, UU cannot force faculty to pay graduate prices, thereby eliminating a means of distinguishing Erads from faculty. Grant also said the faculty. Grant also said the costs of hiring spotters would not be economically feasible. Connor said there would have been some problems but "I can't detainidem at this time.
Grant said he believes Connor was concerned with other student organizations following UU's example by charging discriminatory prices for certain groups.

Student psychiatric services at the Syracuse University Health Center were realigned and redefined during the summer months, based on the recommendations of a task force of students and administrators.

The task force made its recommendations in a report anbmitted to the chancellor last year.

According to Robert Boney, executive director of Student Services, the heavy case load carried by one paschiatrist carried her assistant during previous years indicated the university needed facilitative prychiatric services, rather psychiatric services, rat
"By the end of the first week the psychiatrist had her agenda filled for the entire semester," Boney said. The psychiatrist spent her time referring students to private and public agencies as well as the clinical psychologist in

The plan, approved in outline by the faculty, created three divisions to replace the six groups which A & S students are now required to choose from.

The three new divisions Humanitiea, Social Sciencea and Mathematics and Sciences. - are being defined by their "intellectual sense," according to Mark Brown, assistant dean of A & $S$.
For example, Brown said, one committee will work to determine whether a course dealing with laboratory psychology, a social science course, could be better placed in the Mathematics and Sciences division.
Another committec, cochaired by Brown, is working to define basic skili re quirements outlined in the Standard Plan
The Skill Fequirements Committee has suggested that "baric proficiency" in expository writing, as defined by the plan, may be achieved by having students take second semester writing courses in departments which wish to offer them.
Brown said writing courses in history, political science or philosophy can conceivably fulfill the requirements, wheress formerly only

By David Abernethy Syracuse Univernity is open for businese again.
According to Regiatrar Carole Barone, about 14,500 Carole Barone, about for fall studente will register for fall courses today and tomorrow in Anchbold Gymanasium.
To register, a student enters the gym at the time determined by the last two digits of his Social Security number. The entry time appears on the master caxd in each registration packet, Barone said. and the student may enter the gym any time after the assigned time.
Before going to the gyma, the student must go to his home college to pick up the packet and get an acadernic clearance stamp, Barone said.
About 3,500 stadents with unsettled SU accounts havean added step. These students must go to the Bursar's temporary offices in the Women's Building gym and satisfy financial obligations before receiving their packets.
The temporary offices are Open today from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. (closed noon to 1 p.m.) and tomorrow from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m_(closed noon to 1 p.m.).

After their packets are stamped, students proceed to the gym to register. Course times and locations are listed in the Time Schedule of Classes, available at most academic buildinge and the main SU bookstore A bout 300 changes and additions are listed in and four-pations pull-out section of the Sept. 1 pasue of The Record, alao available at most academic buildings, the bookstore, and st registration

Incoming Syracuse students assigned to extended housing

By Dick Stirba

About 175 freshmen and transfer students have been assigned by the Office of Residential Life (ORL) to "extended housing" in student lounges, guest rooms and study rooms in nine lounges, guest rooms and st
Last year at this time there were over 600 of them. ORL attributes the improvement to a more accurate estimation of how many accepted students-would actually attend Syracuse University.
Most of the students who are in temporary housing responded to their SU letters of acceptance after the May 1 deadine, ORL said, and were notified of the extended housing situation before they arrived on campus.
James B. Morgan, director of ORL, said he expects about 100 of the students to be moved into normal rooms next week. Morgan anticipates that about 100 no-show students will provide the necessary space.
"I wish there was more privacy." remarked Ricardo Quiteril, assigned to the second floor lounge in Flint Hall.
"I was looking forward to a split double," he said, explaining that when he came to visit the campus this summer, he stayed in asplit double in Haven Hall.
"I wonderif we'll be able to live together," he said, looking at the three vacant beds, desks and wardrobes of his prospective roommates.
Downstairs, Adrian Roe said he liked the Downstairs, Adrian Roe said he liked the lounge because it was bigger than the openlounge because it was
"This looks like an interesting room," he said, motioning to the bailt-in stove.
Space used this year to house students, was, in general, better than normilal rooms, because many of the lounges have stoves and refrigerators; Morgan said.
"The biggest problem will begetting students to move' out of the lounges, Morgan said.
Students living in temporary housing will pay less than those in regular rooms in most cases. Morgan admitted the extended apace "might not be adequate" because of the lack of bookshelves, bulletin boards, and convenient lighting fixtures which are a normal part of dorm housing.
Joan Colleli's father termed his daughter's extended housing situation in a Flint lounge "something like camping out."
Are the accommodations worth the $$ 400$ each student in the lounges is paying? "Frankly, no," said Mr. Colleli.

When students are moved out of extended housing into normal rooms they will be charged the regular price on a pro-rated basis, Morgan said.

At last count, a breakdown of students in extended housing was as follows: Sadler Dorm 27, Flint - 32, Boland - 32, DellPlain - 30, Booth - 22, Marion - 12, Day - 10, Shaw-4, Haven - 2, and Whitman Cottage - 2.

Syracuse pursues football 'enlightenment'

Abstract

By Joel Slasheriko It seemed so good. A vastly improved 6.5 record in 1975 ... experienced perobonnel returning at almont every position . . . a relatively easyachedule. 1976 was to be the year of the Great Syracuse Football Renaisaance. But instead the program whas agzain plunged into the Dark Ages. plunged into the Dark Ages. The defense proved almost totally ineffective, allowing nearly 4,000 yards ineffective, allowing nearly 4,000 y and 263 points to 11 opponents. Although quarterback Bill Hurley Aained prominence with some tremengained prominence with some tremenUniversity offense became too dependent on his talents. By the end of the season opponents learned the way to shut off the Orange offense was to shut off the Orange quarterback. Demoralized by two, early-sesaon defeats (including an embarassing 41-3

"Caruso is young and inexperienced," Maloney said. "He's a good athlete though, and Ithink it's just a question of experience.'
For the Syracuse offense there should be few questions of experience, only results.
With the Joss of only one lineman, the offense returns essentially intact and Maloney seems determined to make it a unit not dependent on one man.
"Bill Hurley's certainly a key to the offense." the SU coach continued,
"He's a marvelously skilled athlete "He's a marvelously skilled athlete as the season went on. He's shown this year that he's picked up and is reasdy to keep going.

"Let's just get this thing kicked off. Let'splay. We've got some good people here," he said. 'I'm as eager as the team. It's really pointless to get involved in that bort of thing.
Regardless of rhetoric, all that remains to be been, of course, is the outcome. Should the Orange fall to the ground as they did last year, Maloney is prepared to deal with it but still unable to understand the criticism that landslides toward him after a losa.
"This football program was really down. As amatteroffact, Ireally didn't realize how down it really was when I first came here. Last year's Syracuae University soccer team finished with a record of $6-5-1$ and at one point seemed likely to make the NCAA Division I playoffa. But they were also a ceam with many problems, and late in the season, as the problems gained momentime, the team lost it.

This year's team can realistically have as grod a record and should eliminate the invernal problems that plagued them in 1976. That would lay the foundation for an excellent year in 1978 because, as head coach Bill Goettel said, "The trotiblemakers are gone."
Gone also is leading scorer Pavao Milkovic (personal reasons) and two-year starting goalie Bryan Rocine (religious convictions). With only three seniose returning, most of the 1977 starters will consist of freshmen and sophomores who must pick up the slack.
"We're hoping for a winning season," gaid Coettel as he watched his team practice under the home lighta of Coyme Field. "We're young, small and skilled, so we are going to use a

The single factor which will affect the Orangemen most is whether they will be able to play as a team. Last year, freshman Milkavic, a Yugosiavian, received a scholarship over players who had been with the SU progrann for three years. Consequentily there were jealousies, and ceam unity was missing. With those players gone and the number of scholarships up to four, Syracuse has a good hance to do better than break even.

in affirmative action program

By Donnir Andersen Fobert Hill, the recently appointed special assistant to the chancellor for affirmative ac tion, wants to see Syracuse University achieve "the best efrirmative action record in this part of the country.
"Just as Syracuse University is known in other fields of

Robert Hill
"I'd like us to be the best in equal opportunity and afGraative action."
Hill was director of afGrmative action at Fairleigh Dickinson University in Rutherford. N.J., since 1974 . Fill's appointment at SU became effective Aug. 1. He succeeds David D. Jones, who died last year.
Since he has been at $S U$, Hill has been acquainting himself with the university.
'I have met with the chancellor to define goals and chancellor to define goals and outline objectives," Hill said. "I have met with the afGrmative action committee of the University Senate. 1 have the University Senate. I have consulted with the director of affirmative action, Lois Henning, on the needs of the office. I have assigned a high priority to completing work on Title IX. (Title IX of the Education Act of 1972 prohibits sex discrimination in educational institutions receiving federal funda.) I havegonearound and introduced myself to key adminiatrative and academic leaders.'

As head of the affirmative action program. Hill's reeponsibility is "to insure fair play prevails for everyone," he azid. "Traditional ways of doing business, to the extent that they discriminate against certain groups, need to be examined and changed. It is also my reaponsibility to administer anti-discrimination legislation and regulations and to help create a climate conducive to affirmative action.
"I intend to work with the affirmative action office and the administration to develop sound practices that have bases in equal opportanity and afinmative action.
"I intend to undertake an educational project to enlighten members of the university community ans to Whatecuat opporturity and af frmative action nee'and what theymennoty "Equal opportanity and affirmative action are pervasive by nature and should reach every corner of the university.
"Equal opportunity and affirmativeaction mean not only to make sure more minorities and females are hired, but to determine how they are treated, promoted and compen. sated."
crimination cannot be proven by statistics alone. "If a high percentage of clerical workers are women, is this evidence of discrimination?" he asked. "If a high percentage of administrators are men, is this evidence of diacrimination?
Discrimination is a heavy term. We can talk about low percentages and low salaries, but one must be careful in concluding that this is due to disCrimination. Discrimination can be determined only after on analysis of all the facts and information. I'm probably too new here to determine what discrimination exists."
Asked if affirmative action policies could create problems of "reverse discrimination," meaning that a minority person might be hired instead of a more qualified non-minority person, Hill said, "There is no such thing as reverse. discrimination.
"Either an institution is discriminating or it is not." he said. "Either an institution has a policy of equal opportunity or it does not."
Hill said he thinks it is possible to change discriminatory attitudes people on campus might have through con-sciousness-raising education.
"It is possible to change those people who are operating out of ignorance by educating out or ignorance by ed
"We find the members of an educated community are most ignorant when it cornes to minority affairs," he said. "Sometimes a preoccupation with elitism prevents people from understanding thoge who are different.
"Achieving affirmative action in a university institution involves educating some of the most educated people in the country," he continued.
"There are people who are aware of certain truthe but don't want to accept them because of their fears for their own security. and there's not much you can do for them.
"I have been known to save $a$ soul or two." Hill said. "I was able to point out to people that equal opportunity is in the equal opportunity is in the interest of everyone An arbitrary application of personnel practices can benefit you one day and do you in the next. Let's take a basic fair stand and apply it across the board,"

Law school construction awaits funds

By Bruce Levine
A proposed extension to the Syracuse University College of Law is not expected to materialize for more than five years, a ccording to Dean Craig W. Christensen of the law school.
Christensen said last ẅinter that it would be necessary to build an addition to E.I. White Hall soon to provide space to expand the law library collection and follow recommendations of an accrediting body a few years ago.

In an interview last week,

Christensen aaid a three-year internal renovation project on White Fall was completed this summer. But, he said, thereno longer is any room to enlarge the library.

The school is "now removing space that wasn't extra space," he said. Theschool has cut student locker and lounge space to make room for the collection, he continued.
In May, Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers told the Board of five years a major addition must be built to house the growing collections (of the law library), and intense study of this matter is already well underway."
Christensen called the ability to raise sufficient funds the "crucial thing" and said it is "unlikely that (fund raising) can be done in a shorter period than five years." He said that before construction caṇ begin. architectural plans must be developed to attract donations. He estimated the cost of the ad. dition at between $$ 3$ million and $$ 4$ million.

What do you expect from your college experience?

Fact: In 1967 undergraduate enrollment at Syracuse was 8500. Today enrollment stands at 11.000 undergrads.

As schools grow increasingly impersonal, fraternities grow increasingly personal, absorbing more and more of the responsibility for the moral and social development of the individual. We at Delta Upsilon had forseen this trend $\mathbf{1 5 0}$ years ago when our founders set forth the means of developing a quality of leadership and character unique amongst fraternities then and now. Secrecy, and the more familiar and condernned methods of pledge rushing have no place at Delta Upsilon.

The UNPLEDGE brother is based on:
Our ideals alone drstinguish us from other fraternities, and those ideals are reflected in the quality and spirit of our brotherhood. UNPLEDGE, our motto, exemplifies our persistent intent to achieve the ideal fraternal living situation.

What began on a fogshrouded night in eariy spring, when the low $C$ bell clapper was myateriously removed from the Crouse College belfry, ended on a similar note in late July.
Responding to a call, Syracuse University Safery and Security found the clapper braced against the entrance to the John Crouse maneoleum in Oakwood Cemetery.
The clapper, from the largest of the Crouse belis, apparently was the victim of a graduation prank. A group calling itself "Hemizard"' called The Daily Orange the day after the theft and said the clapper would be returned in an unusual manner.
The same group called the Syracuse Herald-Journal in July telling the newspaper to check the mausoleum. The caller said the group planned on returning the clapper

SU eecurity officer James Mallette and two cemetery officialm retarned the 150 . pound-plus clapper to the School of Music where it is still awaiting installation.

Law school computer system gives easy access to records

By David Morgan
A new computer which com pacts days of legal research intio minutes of button pressing went into operation a few Weeks ago at the Syracuse University College of Law.

The LEXIS legal research computer gives instant acceas to over 3.5 , million court opinions and 1.5 million statutes in record, according to Thomas C. Kingsley. school Librarian.

The computer contains all federal judiciary opinions and gtatutes plus lezal documents from the U.S. Code and selected libraries dating back to 1933, In addition, LEXIS can draw upon state judiciary records since 1940 .

All records can be found without the need for tirne consuming index terms and head notes. Kingsley said. A researcher can retrieve legal in cher can brion by formation by the use of key

Eggers brings back beanies in greeting to freshman class

By David Abernethy Beanies are back. Even the chancellor wears one. Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers may have reinaugurated the beanie tradition when he stepped to the lecturn of the CrouseHinds Theater of the Civic Center Monday nipht to welcome the Class of 1981 .
Clad in traditional academic cap and rown the chancellor cap and gown, the chancellor removed his cap. perched a small and said, "Mermbers of the class of 1981, I bid you welcome to Syracuse University."
An audience of about 800 freshmen first gasped, then laughed-and another "traditional" welcome began. "I'm Mel Eggers," Eggers continued. "I have the good fortune to serve as chancellor and president of Syracuse University." The chancellor defined his job for the assembled freshmen as "making sure all the members of the university do their jobs as well as they can.

Eggers brienty outlined the history of SU's growth and development, and explained some of the university's educational phatosophy, We belleve in ed cating the whole person." Eggers said, referring to SU's liberal arts requirements.

SU "has achieved more than any comparably endowed independent university," Eggers baid. The university's goal 'Ts to help you become more than you ever expected or predicted you would be."
Eggera urged the freshmen to "develop an identity as a class" and suggested reinstituting the practice of choosing class officers. abolished in 1970 .
At various points in his address, the chancellor called upon other individuals to speak to the freshman class. Roger Sharp, history department chairperson. greeted the class on behalf of the faculty and urged involvement "in the quest for knowledge.

venture between student and professor," Sharp said. He ad vised the freshmen to take ad vantage of the opportunity to develop "informal, one-to-one celationships with their instructors.
Rich Crowell, Student Association president, told the freshmen to "asgert yourselves as individuals.
"Retaining your identity" is a problem on large campuses, Crowell said. "By Wednesday or Thursday you will have stood in more lines and recited your Social Security number more times than you care to remember."

John H. McCombe, dean of Hendricks Chapel, told the freshmen that ${ }^{\text {Hendicks }}$ Chapel is alive and well" and nvited them "to the process of value seeking" which he said the chapel seeks to promote.
SU's newest studenis received some respite from the advice in the form of musical entertainment: the SU Marching Band periormed. as did Frederick Marvin, and recent soloiat with the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra.
Eggers finally cautioned the freshmen against an "obsegsive concern for the future.
"Experience the process of Syracuse University." hessid.

TC revives budget, old campus tradition  By Connie Hardesty  money" to the yearbook staff

The Traditions Comminsion (TC) is bringing the beanie back to Syracuse University with the help of an administrative frrend.
In order to "revive some old traditions" and its budget, TC caps on the Quad during orien caps on whe quad during orientation week, according to Jim Hutchins. TC external chairperzon.
Most of the $$ 1,125$ used to purchase the beanies came from James Gies, administrative assistant to the chancellor.
"Sure, I gave it to them . . It seemed a worthwhile thing to do," Gies said, explaining the $$ 1,000$ loan drawn from his personal office budget.
Gies said he and TC had an "understanding" that the loan would be repaid, but admitted there was a "possibility" all of his money would not be returned if the bennies did not sell. "I took a chance," he said, "and it paid off.
"It happens in lot of things," Gies said, describing an instance "a couple of years ago" when he loaned "seed to "improve their product"* So far approximately 1,000 beanies, enough to repay Geis, have been sold, according to Tina Foley, TC advisor.

Profits from the rest of the beanie sales will be used to increase TC's budget, which, according to Hutchins, has been shrinking in past years as "allocations are down and costs are up."

Hutchins said he thought the beanies would be successful because "people are Atarting to get a little crazier. At one time, kids were really crazy," he faid. "But the war and the late 60 and early ${ }^{40} 70 \mathrm{~s}$ changed all that. Now, there's a tendency more for kids to have a good time." Hutching stressed that the beanies are "sort of a joke, a souvenir . . something to take home and show to friends, or have when you're 87.
"We're making them available to everyone," he available to everyone, he said. We want to get away from the attitude of freshmen that they re down

Law students face ALTERACTS fee

By Jamie Beckett

Law students must pay $8 a year to use Alternative Action Services (ALTERACTS) according to Gary Thomas. ALTERACTS director. The fee resulted from the law school senates failure to cal year, he said
Although law studente voted this spring to provide partial funding to ALTERACTS, no exact sum was set because the school does not determine its budget until the fall, said George Billinson, law senate president.
ALTERACTS has requested $$ 2.75$ per law student, for an ap-" proximate $$ 1,916$ total. Thomas said.
In a July letter to Billinsón. Thomas said ALTERACTS would issue a "proportionate refund" to each law student who paid the fee, depending on what percentage of the ALLTERACTS budget request the law aenate provided. For example, should the senate grant 25 per cent of ALTERACTS' 1977.78 budget request, students who had paid the fee would receive a $$ 2$ refund.
Thomas estimated between 75 and 100 law students have already paid the fee.
The amount of law school funding may proportionately reduce the $$ 8$ fee, he said.

Hillel urges boycott over holiday classes  By Sean Branagan

The Syracuse University chapter of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation urged atudenta to boycott classes yesterday and woday to protest the scheduling of classes during the two days of Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year.
Rabbi Milton H. Elefant, director of Hillel, said the scheduling is an "infringement on students' night of religious freedom." Posters urging students 0 boycott classes were placed around campue.
A practicing Jew is obligated to attend day-long Rosh Hashanah services. Rabbi Elefant stressed that Jews "are obliged not to participate in any secular activities.
"Because classes are scheduled on these holy days," he said, "studenta and teachers are put in a peculiar position. And, the relationship between student and teacher is on the line.
Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers refused to comment last night on Rabbi Elefant's allegations of SU's "infringement" of religious freedom Harry W. Peter, vice president for admissions and records, said that at the la mevision seasion of the culendar committee "special efforta were made to provide an extra holiday, and that is why Yom Kippur is now a holiday.

"Consideration was given at that time," Peter continued, "to making Rosh Hashanah a holiday," but that could not be done while meeting "the other obligations" with which the committee was faced.

Pefer also said that attendance at SU is the reaponaibility of the atudent, and that "those teaching make every effort to be sensitive" to students" religiouspractices.
Rabbi Elefant said the purpose of the boycott is to show the administration, Rough the number of cancelled classes and/or absent studenta, that these two through the number of cancelled classes and/or absent students, that these two days should be holidays. The boycott, the rabbi said, is not only for Jewish also being solicited by these posters, he said.
Ed Fowers, a sophomore, sees the boycottas having repercussions. Hesaid "SU should consider giving a holiday in this case, but because of the way Hillel is going about it, the boycott may upset other sectors of the university. A problem might arise around Good Friday and Easter:

Another student commented that the day was not a legal holiday and therefore SU shourd not grant a day off.

Rabbi Elefant said a law was recently passed making certain holy days, includiag Rosh Hashanah, legal holidays for the State University of New York.

Johnny Winter LP traces blues' roots

By Michael Collier

Johnny Winter's latest release, Nothin' But The Blues, is just that-a good biues album.

It's his second "back to the roots" effort and follows last year's collaboration with Muddy Waters entitled Hard Again.
All the songs on the new album are Winter originals except for"Walkin" Through The Park," a McKinly Morganfield composition from 1959.
The album's opening cut, "Tired of Tryin"," is more or less a typical blues ang, with heavy backbeat and a lot of harmonica from veteran bluesman James Cotton.

On "TV Maman". Winter varies his style with slide guitar and vocals, and a minimum of permasioni. The song also features the unusual sound of his metal-body acoustic guitar: The all-encompassing "Everybody"s Blues" is in the slower blues style, compasaing "Everybody's Blues is in the siower blues atyle, similar to Have you Ever Loved "Drinkin" Elues" is also in the Dominos. The side s closing cut, Drinkin Budid Bromberg or the traditional vein, the kind of blues that David Bromberg or the The album's closer "Walkin'
The album's closer. "Walkin' Through The Park,"' features Nuddy Waters on vocals, which is indeed a relief after 35 minutes of Winter's abrasive and sometimes contrived howling. But whether it's rock or blues, it's Winter's trademark.

Open house draws few SU freshmen  By Steve Ruinsky

Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers' open house. for this year's freshman class had plenty of refreshments, guides and administrators. The one thing it lacked, however, was an abundance of freahmen.

According to Eggers, the program was an attempt to make the chancellor bettier known to new btudents. Eggers anid the recepKon was partially in responge'to ihose students "who say they never gee the chancellor' in their four years at Syracusie Univereity.
Melvin C: Mounts, vice president for student affairs, said the open house was part of a desire to "negate theimpersonal image"

One Traditions Cornmission guide estimated less than 100 students attended the reception.

Mrs. Eggers siaid not as many students showed as had been expected. Many nonfreshmen attended the reception making it dif-

But why eo few guests?
A number of grides said there was not enough publicity for the affaiz.

Kim Worth, a freshman in the School of Visual and Performing Arts, agreed. She said she knew nothing a bout the reception antil her-roommate told ber abont it.

Absentee voting in home elec tions makes as much sense as having the city of Syracisio vote-nbsentee in Boise, Idaho elections There is the same amount of voter involvement in both:
The biock to voting locally is three little sections the board of elections keeps under its hat: little gections 151n, 161 b and 151 c , which say students neither gain nof lowe residency when they go to college in-state. The board of electiona told the attorney, "As long as you fail to get an injunction we will continue to viclate the law." The forecast for this year is no brighter.

The board of elections rationale for denying students the right to vote locally is obvious. If students voted here in the community they live in much of the year, they could actually have a voice in what goes on. The board of elections' actions supports the un constitntional cxiterion of having to own property to vote. The lack of property - and of property taxes levied against students - is the only thing that dis tinguishes students from other residents.

Studenta who have the gudacity to exercise their "unalienable right" are forced to go through the agonizing process of voting and registering by mail; an undertaking that requires you to become a pen pal with your local board of elections in order to hit certain key dates for "restistering to register" and other absurdities. In 1975, six counties failed to mail studenta their ballots.

Traditionally, the voting system offerstwochoices: support your candidate or don't vote. Through negligence, the board of elections chose the second for thousands of atudents.

to vote at school?

Con: Tim Wendel

The David Berman case involving residence requirements for voting has brought an emotional outcry for a change in New York State law. Intereat groupt are currently challenging the andents of the states election law, hopinon where they go to school Lawyer Fichard J. Brickwedde and the Syracuse chapter of the New York State Public Interea Research Group (NYPIRG) contend Syracuse Univeraity students ahould not have to prove hemselves residents. Labeling the procedure "A has sle," Brickwedde and NYPIRG say students live in Syracuge and therefore ahould vote in Syracuac.
A glick alogan. The only thing they isnowe by thei argurnent is voter remponsibility.
A student who is too lazy tago through the red tape of obtaining residency would also be too irresponsible to study the isuues and candidiates of the Syracuse and Onoridaga County races. Also, such students and Onoridaga County races. Also, such atudenti ofteir vo not have to inve with the consequences of heir voting action. Most leave Syracuse aoon afte At presen.

To become residents studente mast Gll out an afindavit declaring their marital atatus, local address, principal source of in come, employment status, driver's license and cas egistration
The local board of elections decides whether the applicant qualifies as a resident. If someone is denied residency, the board must give its reason in writing. The applicant also has the right to go to court to appeal the board's decision, at the atate's expense.
Every semester in university classes, students are asked such questions as "Who is the mayor of Syracuse? City auditor? County executive?" The number of atudenta able to correctly answer these questions is discouragingly low.
In an environment where SU students and city residents live in different worlds, cominginto contact with each other very little, it seems ridiculous to allow one to help decide another's affairs. If students obtain a blank check to vote in Syracuse and Onondaga County, why nof send ballota to city residents so they can vote in the next Student Association presidential election?
NYPIRG would eagerly welcome an infinx of liberal voters to counteract the conservative constituency of Onordaga County. This fall, tration drive in an attempt to upset the local political apple cart.
For those students who wish to become resident voters, a day in court may be annoying, but in their eyes well worth the trouble. Meanwhile, their classmates would be better suited voting in their home cistricts. The political activities of those districto, even after four years at $S U$, are more influential upon their voting behavior.

Religious holidays: no need to boycott

On the basement bulletin board in Hendricks Chapel there is a lange yellow poster, similar to dozens posted around campus in the last week, urging in large bold letters a "Class Boycott on Rosh Hashanah."

At the bottom of the poster an astute individual scribbled in blue pen, "Why?"

Why indeed? The posters don't explain.

If the boycott is intended to enable students to celebrate religious holidays according to their personal convictions, we're all for that. So is the university. Ac cording to the chancellor's office. university policy for some years has directed all members of the faculty to refrain from giving new work or exams or taking attendance when. SU conducts classes on religious holidays.

We support that policy because it guarantees each student choice to attend classes or not on various religious holidays. The university should consider publishing the policy in the undergraduate catalog with other academic regulations. The policy, however, is reasonable and far as is.

If the boycott is intended to coerce the university into adding Rosh Hashanah to the academic calendar as a regular holiday, meaning cancellation of classes, we disagree. Several religious holidays, notably Christmas and Yom Kippur, are already holidays on the calendar. To ask the addition of another holiday, which would require lengthening the semester to comply with state class time minimums, seems unreasonable to us.

If the boycott is supposed to heighten awareness of the holidays and encourage their celebration by Jewish students, it is an unusual tactic, but one to which its propogators are entitled.

A- fair and liberal policy exista to allow each student to make his own choice on attending classes on Rosh Mashanah. In our view, no "boycott" is necessary; all that is needed is for each student to consider his own convictions and to act accordingly.

SU couple spends summer 'on the rocks

By Ira Chineson Throughout August the close friendahip of R.L. Stoltz and Lisa Graves was on the rocks. Yet neither of them worried very much; in fact. they would n6t have haditany other way-
That's because the two Syiacuse University atudents and this summer they lived out the dream of every climber - a chance to tackle some of the most challenging rock formations in the Western United States. While others may have relaxed and gipped cold beers, Stoltz and Graves Devila Tower Wyoming and El Dorado Colorado.

Up until now rock climbing has been thought of as a poor relation to monntain climbing. But there is a difference. As Stoltz explains, "In rock climbing it is not if you get to the top that mattera but how you get to the top." There is a greater emphasis on style and technique.
The couple began their Needles in Custer State Park, South Dakota. Graves described The Needles as a "'series of tall granite spires." Since they are rarely climbed by even the moat skilled climbers, the ascent by the pair was noteworthy.
Next came Devils Tower, a 12,000 foot formation located in the middle of the Wyoming prairie. It was Stoltz's second climb of the Tower, making Graves and himself two of the 4,000 who have climbed it since 1930 .
However, the toughest climb lay ahead. It took the couple over 10 hours to safely negotiate Disappointment Peak in Wyoming's Grand Teton Mountains.
"It was pretty rough because we only had a quart of watersaid. They also narrowly missed running into a dangerous storm. dangerous storm.
The danger factor is not downplayed by the two climbera. "You usually get a chance to make one mistake," Stoltz said. Anything unusual that might happen will get you killed."
In spite of the danger, Stoltz said he felt safer climbing than driving his car. "While 1 climbed 1 at least felt in complete control of the situation," he said.
Though the pair believed they exercised good judgernent during their climbs, there were those who wished differently. During several climbs, Graves and Stoltz received some ghoulish attention from nearby campers. "A lot of nearby campers. "A lot of these people. Wanted to see blood or else they couldn't imagine anyone climbing without killing himself," Stoltz said. He remembers one lady earnestly asking if he wanted to die young.
Stoltz and Graves finished off the summer by safely climbing in El Dorado and Boulder Canyons in Colorado.
Back in Syracuse this semester, Stolitz and Graves intend to make occasional local climbs, though it's a sure bet that come the summer of '78 they"ll be back on the trail.

Greeks promote advantages of SU fraternity, sorority life

By Bruce Levine
About 1,500 students on campus any it's Greek to them - and they're not talking about an ancient language.
They say they are talking about friendships. a different social infe, schorastic consciousneas - known as fraternity and soronty livina.

Joining a Greek house is "a decision for life," gays. Nancy Grady, president of the Syracuse University Panhellenic Association, or "Panhel" as it is widely Known.
Grady and Tom Ogden, president of InterFraternity Council, suggested various reasons why people pledge to become brothers or sisters in a Greek House.
"You're joining $a$ fraternity for the brotherhood and if you're not, you don't belong in one," Ogden said. "It's a chance to be closer to a lot of different types of people."
All mororities and all but one of the fraternities are national organizations with chapters across the country. The only local fraternity, Kappa Phi Delta, is now applying to become a member of a national fraternity.
Ogden said "little sisters." women who are ceremoniously imitiated and frequent the fraternity house, attendpari besthers at resource for dates.
Sororities usually have formals to provide social hife and sometimes a fraternity will have a closed party where an entire sorority house is invited, Grady explained. Also, one worority has "little brothers" which provide datea.
Because of the number of people in the house, nveraging $30-50$. Ogden said, it is easy to get a group together to throw a football around or to go out for pizza and beer.
But the fun and games do not prevent Greeks from being atudents, Ogden naid. "Some people asy it's harder to study" in a fraternity house which, at timen is trae he said, "but it's no harder than in dorms. Some fraternity houses have facilities for it (rtudy):" he noted.

Due to the respect among the members of a house if someone is told he is playing his stereo too loud he will turn it down, which is not often the case in a dormitory, Ogden said.

Greek life also allows for maintaining ties with alumni. "It gives you a place to come back to," Ogden said. "Alumni Weekend is mostly for Greeks." During Alumni Weekend. the Greek houses on campus are packed with recent graduates.

Grady eaid she likes to talk to the "adult" members of her sorority, Gamma Phi, to discuss how things have changed and get their perspectives on Life. She said most students do not get to talk to people older than themselves unless it is their parents or friends of parents.

Some individuals pledge a house because of the physical facilities it may offer, Grady said. A Greek house has more to offer than just a dorm-like room, the brothers Bay.
One fraternity has a complete darknoom and many houses have small libraries as well as art and living rooms. In addition, most of the houses have full kitchens which may bing on around-the-clock to the
"It's a house, it's a home. There's no way I'd spend five years in that place (Brewster Hall) when I could have this," said a graduated Delta Tau Delta brother last wreek during one of his regular visits to that house.
In recent yeara, more people have been attracted to join the Greek system. Last year, a new fraternity opened on campus and in January Alpha Epsilon Phi will get its own

Increase your options from the beginning.As a freshman in college, you are looking ahead to a grod first year. Your ultimate goal is getting that college depree.

To make that degree more meaningful, you should increase your options from the beginning.

And you can do that through Army ROTC.

Army ROTC offers practical leadership with on-hand adventure training. Youll get management experience, which aids in developing men and women to shoulder greater responsibilities at an earlier age than most other graduates

You can be part of this exciting curriculum in the first two years. And there's no obligation. You'l earn $$ 100$ a month for 10 months each of in fact: rends much like a novel. its realism-and novewleigeable. trentment of legal edrucation balanced by well-developed characterw and suspense over Turow's fate.

But the characters may be one of the few flaws in "One L," for his presintation of them detracta bomewhat from the book's otherwise, firm credibility.
Turow states in the preface that all the events are real, but adds that he han changed not only names but backgrounds and has combined and to repred personalities in order to represent more adequately the general character of my ex. perience." Whether he aucceeds the reader cannot be certain, but it seems a substantial liberty- to take for a book which purports to be a realistic count.

At the same time the book impresses one with its candor. "One L"' captures and communicates effectively the municates effectively the upheaval in one's first year in upheaval in

Turow discusses his confrontations with insecurity, the conflict between generosity. and academic competition, and the wearing effect of the woribload on his marriage and relationships with fellow otadentik The reacier can almost feel the bitter discouragement that prompted Turow to maive an appointment (later canceled) with the law school's peychiat rist
"One L" is a book with adual nature. The director of a Ralph. Nader atudy on legal education in America called it "a grood read for every college student contemplating law school who wants to know: What is it really, Like?" One senses he is right, such is the sense of authority and knowledge with which Tyrow writes.

At the mame timet the book has a readability that transcends its subjects. A few passages in which Turow writes pedagogically of hie ideas for improving legal eduction may bore the nonlaw atudent But much of his experience is cormmon to almost all students: his diecussion of hia and hia fellow students' apprehension over studentan apprehension over grades and exams is an ple.
"One L" is of definite interest to the stuadent considering law school. But it in not a primer for prospective law students; it is an honest and readable book about an emotional experience, and is relerant to etradents in any academic discipline.

The film distinctly shows the frustration and heartbreak that members of the entertainment industry had to withstand during the 50 s . Heckie Brown, the star of the show Prince "swrites" for, is blacklisted for trying to attract the attention of a girl who was a known communist sympathizer.
The producer of the show (Herschel Bernardi) suffers the frustration of blacklisting. He cannot produce the too quality sight into the horror and heartbreak of blacklisting. Several scenes involving the actor Brown display the fear and apprehengion he felt as a resuit of being blacklisted. This script was even con1976 sidered as a nominee for the 1976 Acaderny Awarda.

Subtle wit helpa to keep the pace lively and acts as a oubconscious reminder to help point up the total In one scens of blacklistingIn one scene, for example, crince and the producer are criticized by a hotwinded, not-go-important sponsor, who feels the show's characters "appear pretey pink." Prince jokingly interjects that it s probably too much make-up, complete fool.

Although settings are bland, they properly accompany the seriousneas of the subject matter. Kitt uses red in almost every acene, and as the only dorninant color in the settings. Ritt seems to be mirroring the government's belief that "the reds are everywhere.'

Despite these assets, the film does have aeveral problems. The pace drags in several spots, most notably during the scenes involving Howard's girlfriend (Andrea Marcovicci). Better edicing could asso have eliminated some of th slower moving sequences.

Ass a whole, "The Front" is far from being a masterpiece. However, the movie is successful at getting its point across, which is perhaps the most important aspect of the film, Ritt superbly demonstrates the ugilness of the McCarthy era and the horror of blacklisting.

'Live!' offers British group chance for U.S. success

By Tim Wendel
Be Bop deluxe's first four albums made the rock group a headliner act in their native England, but have produced only a ripple of recognition in the big bucks record market of America.
Although their latest effort. Live! In The Air Age, (EMI) offers little new material, the album could be the group's passport to financial success in this country.
Led by guitarist Bill Nelson, Be Bop deluxe plays tight rock with fiery intensity.

Onstage Nelson looks like a British banker, wearing a silk ghirt, tie and finely tailored Oxford Street suit, but his gripping solos remind one of

Bands' reunion albums attempts to regain fame  By Bxace Pilato

It started few years ago with some of the premiter 1960 s bands getting back together Spirit, The Bee Gees, and sepperwol. Fox most mazic ans, the magic seemed to be gone from the earlier days, yet hey welcomed chese almos forgotten faces back.
But in the laat six months or so, the reformation rate has skyrocketed. It seems as though everyone is giving it one more shot; a final fling with fame with the hope that he fans have remained.
The most renowned regroupng has been that of Crosby Stills & Nash. This is the fifth time they've tried recording together since the release of the classic L. P"Deja Vu" seven years arro Somehow, they were able to do it (maybe because they didn't invite Neil Young this time).
In 1974 , all four of them reunited for a massivesummer tour. Although the music was just as gorgeous as ever, the tour was hampered by egohassles.
They travelled on the tour apart from each other, and the attempted album becarne two different ones - the Stills Young Band and the second album from Cmsby & Nash. Stephen Stills later admitted to the rock press that they had toured for the money. This is understandable aince it frossed over $$ 5$ million.

But what about the 1977 Crosby, Stills & Nash reunion? If the tears is having problems getting along this time, they're sure keeping it a gecret. sure keeping it a secret. All reporta have indicated that all reporta have indicated that all three are not only thrilled with the new album and tour, they re having fun as well.
Last spring, in Syracuse, a former member of Stephen he had been told by Stills that he had been told by Stills that the then upcoming reunion was only being done for the bread. But who knows? Maybe they biarted out that way and decided the music was more important. Either way, it doesn't matter because they've blessed their fans with a nearflawless album and an exceptional towr.
Not all regroupinge have been as successful as the recent $C S & N$. After 18 mon ths of disbandment. Mountain wot back together for several poorly attended tours and two albums that were diskrace in comparison with the older records. The sime has happened with Spooky Tooth. Free and a long list of others.

Many of the recent reunions aren't total ones. After an em barrasingly unsuccessful solo career. David Clayton Thomà assembled nine musiciansand called it Hlood. Sweat and Tears, the band that brought him fame as lead singer. But the current B,S and T doesn't contain any of the orikinal

Police investigate bomb threats aimed at SU gay student group  bornb in your building and it

By Dick Stirba
Syracuse city police are investigating the origin of two bomb threats telephoned to the Gay Student Association (GSA) at Tilden Cottage, IIS Collere Place, last Wednesday night.
About 75 etudents were evacuated from the building by police shortly after 9 pm. A search revealed no bomb.
The first caller, described in a police report as a white male between 27 and 35 years old with a deep voice, told a student at GSA, "There's a bomb going to go off in the building tonight."
A few minutes later, a caller reportedly sounding like the first one told another student at the GSA office. "There is a will go off at 11 o'clock."

John Zrebiec, director of Syracuse University Safety and Security, said the two descriptions were so similar that he would have bo say the

Then there were the stories. Last year one reporter had gotten sick and did not get his helmet off in time. On. their last press fight, someone told me, one reporter got so panic-stricken they had to land after 10 minutes.
Major Gord Wallis, the team leader, said we would be up for 30 minutes in a "basically normal flight" with simple maneuvering and formations. Again he stressed not to talk to the pilots at certain times.
"It's not eafe really," he said and signaled it was time to go.

Five minutes after climbing into the cockpit, Thompson and O'Reilly had me gtrapped, helmeted and mad me btrapped, heimeted and plugged in toradio communicatione between the lead and the eight other pilots and also to an intercom with Thompson.
I sat to Thompson's left and we had daplicate controls, as in automobile school cars. There were wo foot tredals and a control stick between my knees.
"If you get gcared." O'Reilly had warned me, "just don't grab that stick.

Thompson told me to release the safety pin on my ejector seat. I felt like I was pulling the pin on a hand grenade. Then he closed the canopy and I heard it click shut over our heads. In what seemed like 10 secondis he had run asystems check, given O'Reilly the thumbs ap bign and we were on our way, taxiing down the airstrip behind Snowbird | How. |

I took some photographs, sat back and relaxed. The dials fascinated me. In the center of the pance were tiny lights which gave an inetant check of parts of the jet. Then there were nine dials duplicated on either side which measured such things as altitude, slope, direction and speed.
We were taxiing with our nose close to the tail of Snowbird 42 and heat waves from the tail distorted our vision. Thompson told me the engines put out about 620 degrees Centigrade. I did not figure out until later that was 1,148 degrees Fahrenheit.
Over the radio I could hear some chatter about FOD's.
"Hitat's flying object debris," Thompson told me. Apparently, the jets wers kicking up some metai litter on the runway. $O^{\prime}$ Reilly had told me that if a hawk should crash through the plexiglasas canopy, it would not go through the double layers of my helmet visor, but he did not any anything about flying metal.

I filed away the questions I wan going to ask and let niy mind dyif among the clouds. It was so peacefu with the faint sound of the engine and Thompson's breath in the intercom.
The aailboats in Narragansett Bay presented us with a spectacular view, which we enjoyed right side up and alightly tilted. But anore im presanve was the controlled freedon we enjoyed. My mind raced through philosophical paces of life, death and pleasure. It was plain old fun, to boot.

Nice bridge," Thompson said. I nodded down at the Newport Bridge and realized that Thompson was from Ontario and dad not know where he was exactly. It occurred to the to play tour guide but I could not talk. The pain was easing.

We changed formation again and the jets seemed closer logether. Thompson was talking about the overlap of responsibility among the pilots because they are "rusting the other guy to maintain his position."' Some of them had flown together only for a few months and I was marvelling over how much they trusted each other after such a short time.

I looked over at Thompaon. I knew nothing about him but had just signed my life into his hands. Who was he? I could hear his breathing in the intercom and when breathing was an effort for me I would follow his pattern. I could almost hear his heartbeat and blood flow. We soemed as intimate as twing in a womb. I trusted him entirely, knowing only his name and that he seemed as self-controlled as he was self-assured.

His gloved hand was wrapped firmly around the control stick. What prevented him from just hitting that stick and going where he wanted? He had total control over his

"What do you think?" Thompson asked. It was the third time he had asked me. I had not answered him yet because his question came as an intrusion. I wanted to ask him if there really is a God. I Eigured he would know. Instead I managed a "wow."

The abdominal problem, which had been plaguing me for months was completely cleax the day after the flight, and my system began to function normally.
For about three days after the flight I had trouble doing mundane things and sought constant ex citement. I could not even manage to keep my car within the epeed limit. Life tasted better.

NYPIRG chapter to add 10 staff members

By Sean Branagan The Syracuse University chapter of the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG) will soon add 10 full-time taft members, mabing it the largest campus office in the state. According to Berm nard Melewski, regional NYPIRG director, this addition will bring the Syracuse staff to 12.

Interviews for the positions Will probably begin next week. Melewnid said.
Speaking about his plans for his soon-to-be-acquired staff members, Melewski said he had three primary projects in mind for Onondaga County These are:

- Establishing an "action center" to spearhead a movement for reforms in the county's small claims court system. This project include educating the public on the use of the small claims court, Melewinki added.
- Studying barriers for the handicapped in Onondaga County. Melewski said a team would analyze accessibility of major county buildings to the handicapped and then push for immediate 'inexpensive" changes.
- Dealing with energy conservation. Melewaki'a proejections for this project, still in the planning stages, consist of an "energy hotline," an energy conservation library and surveys of homes to aid in achieving energy efficiency.

Why tomorrow's professionals choose Hewlett-Packard's first family of advanced calculators today.

They're proven performers. In space. On Everest. In the labs of Nobel laureates. Since we built the first, back in 1972, our advanced calculators have been tested by millions worldwide, and they've passed.

They have staying power. Today's classroom problems quickly grow into tomorrow's on-the-job problems. HP calcularors are designed and builr to handle both. They're investments in a future that happens fast.

They're easy to use. HP calculators not only grow with you; they grow on you. They feel natural, comfortable, because we designed them to work like you think.

They're efficient. HP calculators take the direct approach. All feature RPN, a time-saving, parenthesis-free logic system. All programmables feature a memory-saving keycode merging capability.

They're personal. Professionals design their own ways to solve their particular problems, and they expect their calculators to be versatile enough to accommodate them. Ours are.

There's a variety. To say we offer a full line is an understatement. We offer a choice. That's why we publish a unique "Selection Guide" that spells out the capabilities of each. Your HP dealer has your free copy.

Gíve our country a college education.

As an Army ROTC graduate, you bring more than training and gold bars to your new job in the active Army Army National Guard or the Army Reserve

You also bring a college education which makes you one of our country's most valuable. assets. Why? One reason is the wailth of experiences and ideas you bring with you. This enables the Army to better relate to an ever changing society.

And since youll be an Army officer, you'll have plenty of opportunities to put your ideas to work. In fact, you'll be ranning your own show, right out of college

Another reason we value your education 50 highly is that the people youll be leading are better educated and more highly motivated than ever before. This makes your job as an Army fficer more of a challenge.
to help you meet this challenge when you get out of school, we'll help you while you're in by giving you a living allowance of up to $$ 1,000$ each year you are enrolled in Advanced ROTC.
There are also opportunsties for scholarships that cover tuition, books and lab fees.

That way, you can make the most of your education. And when you graduate, our coxintry can make the most of it too.

$\star$ Colby

Cratimed trom one aurveillance now ensbles the United States to count other countries' nuclear minetiles and "know exactly where they Colby stressed a need to coninue secret intelligence activities Citing threata of nuclear warfare from Communist superpowers and errorism or economic warfare from less developed nations, Colby said the United States needs effective foreign intelligence to deter attacks and defend itanlf.
He added, "I think we must ook ahead to a noore positive wae of intellizence.
Colby proposed use of intelligence to "negotiate problems before they fester and explode into violence." He aid intelligence helped procure the 1972 Strategic Arms Limitation Talks ge Arms burds by ming it possible for the United states and the Gaviet ETrion to each be sure he other gide was not violet he other Colby the agreement.
Colby maid American intelligence differs from other nations in that "we insiat that American intelligence operate under American law," which he described as a "novel concept for intelligence."
American intelligence traditionally operated "outside the legal machinery," Colby said, though recent trends in public opinion have brought the CIA within legal limitationa.
At a press conference before his apeech, Colby claimed investigations by Congress and a special presidential committee into illegal CIA ac. tivities in the 1960 and 70 a have"handicapped to someex tent" CIA activities. However the investigations "probably were necessary," he added.

Colby refured to comment to the press on allegations made last week in a New York magaxine article claiming that: Vice-President Rockefeller, who chaired President Ford's special commission on CIA activities, asked Colby to help cover up some illegal CIA ac tions. He did say he considers the Rockefeller Commission report a "comprehenaive" one repart a "comprehenaive" one on CLA actions
He said the investigations "managed to create a misim" pression" thatillegal activities are contiguing in the CIA, though according to Colby" he stopped all auch activitien aiter becoming director in 1973.

Reiterating his support for egislation to make it a crime cor ex-CLA pergonnel to difa close secrets they learned during CIA aervice, Colby emphasized the legialation he proposes would impose sanctions only on CIA peraonnel, and wowld not "gag" newspapers or other publications which receive secret information and decide to print it.

SU initiates radio network

By Joel Stasheako Syracuae Univergity foot ball and baaketball games will be broadcast beginning this sesson on the newly formed Syracuse University Sports Network. The network's broadcasts will be picked up by nine radio stations throughout New York State for football and six stations for basketball.
"The university, in cooperation with WSYR-AM, has been able to set up a statewide radio network," Baid Melvin C. Mounts, fairs. "We have outlets which range from Niagara Falls to New Rochelle in the east and west and Watertown and Binghamton in the north and south."

All the network's broadcasting will originate from WSYR-AM, the flagship station of the new hookup. The Sytacuse station's sportscasters, Joel Mareinis and Dave Cohn, will also do the piay-by-play for the network.
"We set up the network for Several important sign-up . deadlines for women's intramurals are approaching. Sept. 20 is the deadline for indoor soccer while Sept. 23 is the last day to sign up forindividual golf. Sept. 23 is also the last day to sign up for singles tennis play.

This year there is a forfeit fee of $\$ 5$ for accer and $\$ 3$ a person for tennis which must be paid upon registration. Interested wornen may register from $9 \mathrm{a} . \mathrm{m}$. to $4 \mathrm{p} . \mathrm{m}$. Monday through Friday at Room 139 in the Women's Building.

There will be a women's intramural manager's meeting tomorrow at 6:30.p.m. in Room 206 of the Women's Building. Any living center, sorority, academic department or other SU women's group which is interested in participatinig in intramurals must send a representative to the meeting. Sign-up procedures, team organization and other important duties of the intramural representatives will be explained at the meeting.
If anyone has any questions about women's intramurals they can contact Nadine Chase at Room 139 in the Women's Building or by phone at 423-2508.

The Syracuse University rugby club practices each week 4:30 p.m. on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thuradays on the Hookway Tract. New members are welcome and no experience is necessary.

The sign-up deadline for the men's intramural tennis singles tournament is today at 3 p.m. All interested persons must sign up at the intramural office in Archbold Gym.

The student athlete-coach meeting for all women who are interested in participating in intercollegiateathletics will be held tonight at $7: 30$ in the Women's Athletic Office, first floor, Women's Building.
babically three reasons," said Mounts, whose office was instrumental in organizing the radio chain. "Firstly, we firmly believe that Syracuse University is a complete institution in research, academics and athletics. I don't know of any other university in the state that can make that claim and we'd like other people to know about it
"Secondly, we are also sagesesting that we've got a regional sports center at $S U$, regional sports center at SU, not only for the city of Syracuse or Ononclaga County York ares. "And thirdly. we hav friends and alumni scattered throughout the state and wed also like to reach some of these people," Mounts said.
"Anytime you can broadcaat across the state," said SU Athletic. Director- Les Dye. "you increase visibility and that's what our program is all about.
"We can also use the provided time to speak of our interesting academic programs on campus," he added.
Mounta similarly feels that the strength of the new network will be in publicity for SU.
"I'm not sureit will haveany direct financial impact to Syracuse Univeraity at all." Mounts asid. "But its real importance lies in the public relations it will provide us with."

The five stations broadcasting both football and basketball are: WSYR-AM Syracuse, SiBX-AM Utica, WABY-AM Albany, WWNYAM Watertawn and WKOPAM Binghamton. WMSA-AM Messina WHOD-FM Niagara Falls, WSAY-AM Rochester and WVOX-AM New Rochele will cover only SU foctball while WROC-AM in Rochester will only pick up the basketbsil broadcasta.

"Syracuse has improved over 100 per cent since last year," said Oregon State University football Coach Craig Fertig after his team's victory.
"I thought we played with intensity. We had good football gpeed. I think we'll be all right next week," said Syracuse Head Coach Frank Maloney after his team's loss.

Indeed, this year's Orange squad may be improved and they are most certainly a more intense group of people than tinue to be streaky on offense and consistently penetrable on defense.
On offense, the Orange lacked speed in the backfield. Art Monk backs Bob Avery and Art Monk had trouble making for extra yardage. Instead, they found themselves lying on the blue-green Astroturf of on the bluegreen Astroturf of Parker Stadiurn with gaims of less than a yard. Senior Avery managed only 38 yards on 14 carries. Monk, a sophomore, fared little better, gaining only ten yards on 4 rushing attempts.

Buffalo's Bill
Mr. Excitement himself, SU quarterback Bill Hurley had a hand time getting the Orange offense rolling but finally turned in the gutay performance that Maloney had been hoping for. Huriey rushed for over 100 yards before being

When he went to the air Hurley was just as successful, completing on eight of 15 for 110 aerial yards. His receivers, who penetrated the Beaver dropped the ball on three other occassions.
${ }^{-}$Every time the ball was hiked to him (Hurley) my heart was in my mouth," Fertig said.
Maloney can only hope that fortunewill favordaring in the case of Hurley. The junior field marshal still continues to play with that reckless abandon that excites spectators and scares the hell out of cosches. Hurley recovered two of his team's three fumbles and made several key blocks for his backs.

Syracuse boots Warriors 4-1

The Syracuse By Rick Burtion team opened its 1977 geason lagt Saturday with a 4-1 victory. Had television's Gomer Pyle been on hand for the firgt half he would have been obligated to say, "Suhprise...Suhprise!" about the final outsay, SU played like a team of Gomer Pyles in the opexing half, well meaning but inept. In fact the Siena Warriora (a Division III achool play: ing varsity soccer for only the third year) acored ing varsit when Orange goalie Mike Westcott canght a bouncing shot, loet his balance and fell into the nets. When the referee did not aignal a goal Westeott threw the ball out to Warrior forward Mick Neely who promptly hicked it for sood.

Mick Neely who prompty typified Syracuee's efforts top to that point. Everything the team was doing was going the wrong way, Much of this misdirection was due to the players unfamiliarity with each other. The starting eleven included five players who had not been on last year's team and as the Orangenem had only been practicing for days, their stiffness was understandable.
days, their stifiness was understandable.
The Orangeraen scored less than two minutes later when Freshman rom Case chased down Siena goalie Pete Beid, took the ball away from Siena goalie Pete him and scored.

After the game, Case who was a high mehool All-American at Fayotteville-Manlius, commented on his first coillege game.
"It was fun" said the 5 " 9 " forward who acored twice and added an assist. "It's getting better. We're still a bit rusty becautee we haven't had enough time to work together."

When ho was agked whother he thougcts he would be expected to fill the shoes of departed leading scorer Pavao Milkovic, Case said soitly, "I hope not. I don't want to be a Ravao. I, just want everyone to get in on the action.

Roller ball

That must have been the general sentiment oixpreased at the halftime tall by conch Bill Goettel and his staff because the aecond thalf went much more smoothly. One reason wast the inapired team play of junior halfback. Ted Hollenbeck. Hollenbeck, who apent much of last year and all of the first half on the bench, did an excellent job of controlling the midfield and inspiring his teammates to pass.
The second half also brought about s change in the play of center halfback Brimen Feeney. At 14:59 the sophomore scored what proved to be the xame winner when he and Case combined on a pretty play in front of the Warrior net Case broke through the Siena defenders after a long pass and when Beid charged out to meet him Case popped the ball up over Beidr's head This caused the Siena keeper to run past the ball and Feeney cocred easily into an exply net.
Hollenbeck set up the third graal at19:16 when he glided down the field controlling the ball. Feeney fired to Case who kicked it in with hi back to the met. Sophomore Steve Marconi rounded out the socring with a blistering sho from ontaide the box less than mimute later. A masterpiece of architectural and artistic ingenuity, Loew's State Theater on South Salina Street represents a portion of history which saw downtown Syracuse as a thriving cultural center. Though time has slightly tarnished its grandeur, the slighaly tarnished its grandeur, the rieed to retain this structure as our cultural heritage femaing.
ur cultural heritage remains. parent that no detail in craftamanahip was too gmall to tend to. Pillars, or nately decorated in gold leaf and flowers, rise from the red carpet to the promenade which overlooks the expan sive entrance hall. It was from this promenade that musicians would entertain the customer as he waited to get to his seat.
A mural presenting an oriental procession, complete with dancing girls and an elephant, covers an entire side of the lobby. This oriental motif, which pervades the decor, Iends itself to the fantasy-like atmosphere.

There is a sense of eerieness as one ascends the dimiy lit steps to the balcony. A Tiffany chandelier which once hung from the care. Many sculptured ceiling is now gone. Many including wall sources, filigreed brass lamps and lamps in art deco shaped ike the solar system

Before entering the auditorium the theater-goer might have stopped by the marble fireplace in the men's room to chat with a friend. Or perhaps he would pause by the pagoda as it spouted water into an alcove of hand cast tile, In any case it was his chance to enjoy the sur roundings of a king for a 25 cent admission charge.

The auditoriurn itself contains 3,000 red velvet seate. Gargoyles, Berpents and lions, all in gold trim, surround the audience. Eagles perched atop each piller atand guard. There is not a square inch of wall or ceiling space that is not covered with some type of ornamentation.
A huge shell-like proscenium frames the stage with patterns more intricate than those on the walls. In front of the stage, a hydraulic orchestra pit would raise the musicians to the stage for the overture, then back down again.
Every expense was taken to make the theater the most up-to-date and luxurious of its time. Its construction is a feat which can never be repeated. Some hope it can remain intact for posterity.
Any student interested in helping renovate the theater can come by any Saturday or Sunday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Loew's is on the Corner of South Salina and Jefferion Streets.

Faculty reports minimal effect of boycott

By Jacqui Salmoni
Although a number of students reportedly missed Tuesday and Wednesday classes to attend morning services for Rosh Hashanah, several eachers said the effect-on class attendance was minimal.
Rabli Miltoan E. Elefant, director of the Syracuse Univergity Chapter of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation, said about 700 to 800 atudents attended Rosh Hashanah services on Tuesday and about 500 to 600 were present yesterday. He said services were from 9 a.m. to $1: 30$ p.m. and that those stadents who attended "certainly boycotted their classes.'

Hillel urged atudents to boycott classes on Tuesday and Wednesday to protest the scheduling of classes dur ing the Jewish New Year. Posters an nouncing the planned boycott wer placed around campus Rabbi Elefant aaid earlier that the purpose of the boycott was to show the admainistration, through the number of canceled classes and absent students that the two days should be holidays.
A practicing Jew should attend both day-long Rosh Hashanah bervices, he axid. The number of students attending services was higher on Tuesday, because Reform and Conservative Jews observe just one day of the holiday.
Registrar Carole A. Barone said yesterday that she had not heard of canceled classes or low attendance because of the boycott.
"I think it was just a matter of some students choosing not to go to classes and the faculty trying to be sensitive to this," she said
In the College of Arts and Sciences, teachers said they saw little effect on their classes.

Robert $G$. Jensen, geography department chairman, said he had not heard of any canceled classes and had not noticed fewer students in the class he taught yesterday morning.

Survey shows high campus grocery prices

By Fich Lurie
Higher prices at grocery stores on Marshall Street are tavaing many studenta to shop outside the univeraity area.

John Giarwsiso. night manager at Gondori's Saper Duper store, 2922 E. Genesee St, said Syracuse University students "are a very important part" of the store's business.

A eprokesparson for Price Chopper Discount Foods said yeaterday, the chain is in its "peatc season" for grocery galen because of the rectant infilux of SU students.

Prices of nine grocery items at four storea in the university area and three supermarikete were recently compared. The stciree werse Brad'a Bxews, Victuala and Stewn; Way In Grocery; Student Choice Fooda and the SU Bookstore. The three supermarketa surveyed were Liberty- Market, 901 E. Geneere Street. A Frice Chopper spokesperson saild the-chain's policy fs to be directly competitive with other stores. Fie said prices for the chain axe generally contralled by the chain's main watehouse in Schernectady.

Giarreso said bin store'f managumarit survers pidces in the uruncminess athe area. The etore Amoing thope format he mpind prices

SU area merchants gave various reasons for disparities among prices. Churchi Ayoub, owner of the Way In Grocery on Marshall Street, said his prices are "the same as in other stores."
Ayoub said he bases his prices on a low profit markin.
"My percentage (of profita) is about the smallest you'll see," Ayoub said.
Nabil Bijialy, owner of Student Choice Foods on Marshall Street, suid some digparities are due to differences in diatribution costs. While largestorea sell in enough volume to buy directly from manufacturers, small grocers must buy from distributors, adding to costs, he said. Bijjaly also cited high overhead conts in the Marshall Street area.

Dave Veneski, asaiatant manager for the SU Bookstore, called the boolcstore grocery prices "in line."
"We don't charge deliberately more than we have to." Veneski said.
Veneski said the bookstore is only intended to sell "convenience foods." He said the prices are similar to those in convenience store chains, such as 7 11.

Another problem with shopping in amall stores is the lack of large packages, which often cost less per serving than smaller packages Ayoub said his store does not sell large packages because demand for them is low. "If I keep big items in th? store they will go bad. No one will buy there.'
Bijjaly said a good way to save money while shopping on Marshall Street is to shop for specials in various stores. In addition, some products, such as yogurt, are cheaper on Marahal Street than elsewhere in the city.

"That's fine, Clark, but a lot of otudents are concerned that the ordinance has put a damper on SU's heralded night life."
"On the contraty, my friend, SUis on the verge of a cultural renaissance, and we have this ordinance to thank for it Instead of those bestial Greek beer blasta and wild opening week block parties, students will now be forced to tran to quieter and more digmified ac tivities to fill their nighttime hours."
"Not necessarily, Clark. What's to atop people from sitting in their dorms and peoplefrom sitting in their dorms beer? As long as their and drinting beer? As 50 ng as their noise travele

"It won't work; those flip-top cans make too moch noise when you open

"Some students are complaining that the ordinance violatea their privacy and that it restricts their

SU's budget: a memo from the galley

"Sail on, o ship of state"
Henry Wadsworth Longfellow
"SU Holds Budget Ship Stecody" Syracuse Poat Standard

There has been much celebration on the decks of the "SU budget ship" over the university's fifth contecutive balanced buidget. Having survived several harrowing experiences in the "Financial Periences in the Minancial Straits," SU's admirals have become so obsessed with the future they have forgotten the costs of the voyage.

We, in the galley, having rowed this ship for several years from a seat coeting somewhere in the vicinity of $$ 6,000$ have a few things to say:

The administration obviously feels it has won a major battle, but the victory was achieved at the cost of educational quality.

Vice Chancellor Clifford $L$. Winters Jr. admits "some austerity meanures" were taken. In its recent celebration of the balanced budget The Post Standard does not enumerate what these measures were. Among them, however, were tuition hikes (termed by Winters as "modest and moderate") of over 9 of theae students were forced to live in dorm lounges and dorm libraries never meant to be occupied.

Dr. Winters also seems pleased with the fact that the university has not been adding people to its payroll. While the number of students has risen dramatically the number of faculty has remained unchanged. This has resulted in overcrowded classes (most notably in Newhouse and the per cent two years ago and over 6 per cent last year.
The university also recruited unusually large classes in 1975 and 1976 to help pay old bills. Over 600 School of Management), an unhealthy reliance on the teaching abilities of a large number of graduate students, and a atrike by overworked English Department TAs.
Winters also makes much of the university's energy conservation efforts. For students in SU's dorms this meant being able to aee their breath when they awroke on many February mornings. One girl reported a room temperature of 49 degrees fahrenheit and temperatures in the mid-fifties were not uncommon.

Syracuse has its eyes on the future, but has shown a tendancy to insure that future at the expense of its present students. It has happened before and it will happen again, unless there is some noise from the galley.

'I like to buoy people tip when they're down Everybody's got a little bit of something," she insists. "We're not all talented. We're all possessed with qualitiea you can't condemn," she asserts earnestly.

Mrs. Jones has been buoying people up at Syracuse Univeraity for nine years. She has worked in Kimmel, Watson and Sadler dining halls.

It tastesk like mom's cooking when Molly Jones dishes it aut at Sader Dining Hall. (Phote by Josh Sheldon.)
"I liked Kimmel, but I like it here (Sadler) too. Oh. and I loved. Wataon when they had a dining hall, but that's gone," she remembers, and the eyebrows she penciled in, in two straight dark lines, are:pulled together in a pondering frown.
For Mrs. Jones* working in a Syracuse University dining hall is a worthwhile experience. "There's so much going on all the time. It's nice to be around young people. It makes me feel young too." the whispers.
Students who know her agree. According to Don Rivas, a law student and resident advisor in Lawrinson Hall, "She's carefree, outgoing, a witty individual unusual at times. She's jubliant to an extreme.
Rivas added, "I never see her depressed and I've known her for four years."
Mra. Jones admits, "I have my moments."
"But," Rivas bays, "She covers them up."

Some students do not know Mrs. Jones as well. Sherri McKibben, a junior nursing student, said Molly seems nice to me. She'll give you what you want to eat. I've never seen her evil or anything.
A freshman at the College of Environmental Science and Forestry was not as impressed. "She's nice but doesn't listen to what you're saying." said the woman.
Still, according to Mrs. Jones. "When I see someone a little shy, I try to warm up to them, get them started." In her nine years at SyTacuse, Mrs. Jonea believes mhe has known - at leagt by namie - nearly 1,000 students.
Mra. Jones believes ahe likes to be around young people because she misses her danghter. When Koas Leenman, a senior, breezes into the dining hall and says to Molly, "Hi, Mom" it oniy reminds her of her daughter, $24-$ year-did Marilyn Menmewisch, a nursing student and graduate of Purdue Univeraity.
Lving in the Wet End of Syracuse Mrs. Jones is no longer married and lives alone. Her time away from the university is spent puttering around with plants and reading "anything $I$ can pick up."
"I don't cook much at home, but when I do, I like my own cooking. I like to go dancing. Ilike to live it uponce in a while," shesays with a deep chuckle.
"I go a lot to Twin Trees, a pizzz place in the West End."
Mrs. Jones says she enjoys everything about Syracupe - including the bitterly cold weather in the winter. "I don't mind it a bit. I came back to Syracuse after living in Indiana for 23 years.
Indiana, meant leaving a broken madana, meant leaving a broken marriage, a tedious job as a parts marriage, a tedious job as a parts inspector in a plastic factory, and her danghter. "I goto seemy daughter once danghter. "goto aee my daug, a year." she says and sighs.
a year." she says and sighs.
At 10 a.m., Mrs. Jones stubs out her last cigarette, stuffe escaping wisps of the steel-gray wig under a hairnet. Her doll-like mouzh is outlimed with enough dark pink lipstick, as she rises to start towards the kitchen.
"Hey Molly! What'cha have for lunch today?" one youth yells down the serving line.
Mrs. Jones, a jovial woman in a light blue and white uniform, grins, and answers. "Veal cordon blew" pronouncing bleu, "blue". She winks at him and heaps his plate with last night's veal patties, before wishing him a good day.

Why tomorrow's professionals choose Hewlett-Packard's first family of advanced calculators today.

They're proven performers. In space. On Everest. In the labs of Nobel laureates. Since we built the first, back in 1972, our advanced calculators have been tested by millions worldwide, and they've passed.

They have staying power. Today's classroom problems quickly grow into tomorrow's on-the-job problems. HP calculators are designed and built to handle both. They're investments in a future that happens fast.

They're easy to use. HP calculators not only grow with you; they grow on you. They feel natural, comfortable, because we designed them to work like you think.

They're efficient. HP calculators take the direct approach. All feature RPN, a time-saving, parenthesis-free logic system. All programmables feature a memory-saving keycode merging capability.

They're personal. Professionals design their own ways to solve their particular problems, and they expect their calculators to be versatile enough to accommodate them. Ours are:

Crouse college bells need costly repairs

By Barbara Bradiey
About $$ 18,000$ worth of maintenance work ia needed on the Crouse Colkege bells, according to Harvey H. Kaiser, vice oresident for facilities administration. The work will clude general repairs on the bells and their supporting structure.
Kaiser said several firms have examined the bells to give estimates, but no firm has yet been chosen to repair the structures. He did not know when the bells would be in antisfactory condition.
The money for repairs has not been budgeted because the extent of necessary repairs is not known, Kaiger udded.

pus in the past four yearm, membership has remained the same, she said. "There definitely is growth in the air." That growth in particularly evident now writh fraternity and sorarity "rush, to attract new morarity cush' to attract new members underway One fraternity got its own One fraternity got its own houme last year and another is scheduled to move into a house in Jnnuary. Grady said SU is about one year behind the national trend, "but we re going to catch up fast.

This week and next the 27 fraternities on campus are having open house to enconturage men to pledge, or otate a desire in joining the house.
Unlike the sororities, most if not all of the fraternities will not all of the fraternities will have free beer and offer tours have free beer and offer tours of the house and discuss Greek life. Sororities last yeay prohibited the wee of alcohol during rush in accordance with secommendations made by the National Panhellenic Association.
The fraternities invite rushees back who they feel would At in well with the regt of the brothers, according to Tom Ogden. president of the InterFraternity Association Grees Council with Grady. Ogden said when the brothers do not think someone would be comfortable becom ind a member of their fraternity: they are able to recommend a more appropriate house.
Fraternities are tooser tor the initial open house while sororities start with a mare formal structure.

Last week and earlier this week women interested in investiquting Greek life registered to participate in the ruah process. Women still interested should contact Rush Chairperson beth Bowers at 422-8654 immediately to register.

Once a women has remistered, she is scheduled for a group which will visit each of the $1: 3$ sorority houses and talk to the sisters there. Open house began yesterday and continues throurh tomorrow evening
The rushees then "preference" as many as four times, each time designating houses to which they woald they tigt the thrn and, on Oct. 3 they list the three sororities, in order of preference, which they would like to join.

The Panhellenic As sociation has a quota aystem whereby each marority may offer a maximum number of bids. Grady explained this is supposed to make sure all of the houses get new members and keep the syatem strong. During the formal rush preceeding this period, the rushees are not supposed to visit the houge at other than the times scheduled after preferencing.
Grady said it is infrequent that thereis an unmatched bid where a rushee cannot get an invitation from any sorority in which she is interested. If there are many unmatched bids, "it's probably an indication that there's room for another sorority on campus.

After every house has had an opportunity to fill its quota. a house may accept as many new bisters as it chooses.

There is alao the option of searehing for a job on one's own. In the inamediate area around SU the two best beta are the businesestions on Marshall and Westcost Streets. An informal survey of the buainesses on the two streets ound most gtores plan to hire as many students this year as they did last year.
Most business managers agreed with the manager of the Westeott Cordial Shop, who favored "Graduate studienta, or juniors and seniors at the very least."
Many managers are reluctant to hire atudents because they think atudentis are leas

Another option open to jobhuntery is private employment agencies. Students should be careful at practices among varioum agencies vary greatly. A formex personnel supervisor for an area department store chain advises job applicants to be especially aware of those "overly obvious little thinge" that can and do make or ruin a prospective employer's first impreasion. This is eapecially important when one contiders that "first impressions are almost always fasting, whether for better or worse, due to human nature," as he said.
An impression of apathy ather than motivation, according to the personnel supervisor, was ample reason to turn down many applicants. Students who etill cannot find a job they like need not sive uphope. Turnover among employes later in the year will probably open up zew opportunities for persistent jobhunters.

A&S offers tutors, 'survival' workshops

By Mitue Chriatman

Tutorial servicea and a series of survival skills worlshops are being offered as an aid in leaming bagic study skills and ine creasing understanding of course materials.
Individual tutoring if available in any aubject area or course, anging from reading to physics. Workshaps are scheduled on study techniques, exam preparation and performance, note taking, preparing a research paper and reading improvement. Two one-credit woricshops will be offered on "The Employment Interview" and. "Improving Your Research Paper Writing."

There is no fee for the workshops, but advanced registration is equired. A student may get a tutor or register for a workshop from 9 a.m. to $5: 30$ p.mn. Monday through Friday at the Office of Academic Support Services, 240A HEC. The office also hasa bervice for teating reading and writing skilla.
Tutors charge a fee averaging $$ 3.75$ an hour. A limited number of free tutors are available.

This program was initiated last fall as part of the College of Arti and Sciences. To date over 900 studerte have been served by the office. Rachel Tadros, coordinator for the office, Baid that feedback has been 95 per cent positive.
"A lot of tuturing is working towards increasing confidence," Tadros said.

Tutors for the service are Syracuse University junior, senior and graduate ftudenta who meet minimum requirements set by the Offioe of Academic Support Services. Tutors are required to go through training program prior to meeting with a student and may work closely with the instructor of the course.

Educator to give sermon

Dr. Thomas A. Bartlett, former president of Colgate University and the University of Cairo, will give a guest sermon in Hendricks Chapel at 11 o'clock this Sunday.
"In an effort to make maximum use of Hendricks Chapel the chancellor has invited one of the nation's leading educators,". said Marian Borst, secretary to the chancellor. She said there may be other chances in format at the chavel.
John H. McCombe, dean of Hendricks Chapel, said there have been several guest spenkers in the past at Sunday services. He said no changes of the chapel format are planned.
The title of Bartlett's sermon is "Responsible for What?" Barlett is presently president of the Association of American Universíties.

Those eligible for the exemption include married students with dependent children, commuters who live at home with their parents and are Enancially dcpendent and participants in special programs which require students to be away from campus.

The decision to grant exemptions to certain groups of students was made by administrative officials over the gummer, according to Health Service Administrator Susan Feit.
The health fee has been a source of discontent for studenta who feel the price of health coverage at SU is greater than the service greater
In the past, Feit aaid, Health Service received about 1,000 requests a year for exemption quem the fee, "very few" of which were granted.
The university officials decision to grant requesta for exemptions to special groups, Feit said, is a positive liberalization of the fee policy.

Feit called the fee "a part of living in the Syracuse University community. There is no way to make people think kindly about a fee they don't want to pay."

Requesta for exemption from the fee must be made by filing an application with Health Services no later than Oct. 15 for the fall semester and Feb. 15 for the spring semester.

The Syracuse soccer tam hams it up after scoring goal in late Saturday's win over Siens College. The scane wasn't quite the same Tuesday night after they lost 3-0 to the Cortiand Red Dragons. The SU booters, now 1-T, face the University of Buffalo on Saturday. (Photo by Mark Friedman.)

Red Dragons burn Orange

By Rick Burton

To any that the Syracube Univeraity soccer team was outplayed by the Cortland State Red team was outplayed by the Coxtland State Red Dragons Tuesday night would not be enough. It would be like s.
plain looking.

Consider these game statistics, Shots on soal: Cortland 18. Syracase 2. Goalie Saves: Mike Weatcott of Syracuse 15, Scott Manning of Syracuse 2. Final Score: Cortland 3, Syracuse 0.
"We're very young." SU coach Bill Goettel said. "And they were very strong.
The Red Dragons showed their strength early in the game when they took the opening kick and immediately attacked the Syracuse goal. With less than two minutes gone Cortland had taken five corner kicks and put heavy pressure on Orange goalie Westcott.
Due to the outstanding efforts of Westcott and fullbacks Dana Jenner and George Olsen, SU was able to weather the storm for most of the first half. But finally, with 10 minutes to play

Syracuse casualty list grows

It reads more like a daily casualty report from Vietnam than the injury list of a football team:

- Defensive tackle Ron Kichardson, out for season with a knee injury;
- Defensive back Brian Ishman, out for season with a severely fractuied leg:
- Linebacker Jim Collins, out for season due to a knee injury;
- Offensive guard Dave Rettig, out for the season with a dislocated elbow,
- Running back Mandel Robinson, a doubtful starter for Saturday's game because of a shoulder injury.
For Syracuse University head footbali coach Frank Maloney, the loss of these starters, four of them permanentiy, is a great worry
"I think what concerns me the most about all these injuries is that we've only played one game and we've already lost some very valuable people," he said.
Perhaps nothing hurt Maloney and SU more in their loss to Oregon State University last Saturctay than the injury to sophomore Richardson.
'Ron's injury was a turrific blow to us the relentleas Cortland attack finally took its toll. The goal came when Neil Moore cruised down the left side by himself, cut into the middle, and forced Westcott to commit himself to his play. The shot hit just under the bar on the left side.
The shot hit just under the bar on the left side. aecond half, one by leftside fullback Matt Judge aecond half, one by left side fullback Mativudge at $20: 44$ and the other by Bill Reed at $34: 20$. The at $20: 44$ and the other by Bill Reed at $34: 20$. The blame in all cases was caused by the fact that blame in all cases was caused by the fact that the Red Dragon with the bal Was never picked seemingly non-existent.
"They destroyed us in the midfield," one $S U$ player said.

We went with a 4-2-4 tonight," Goettel said. "We attempted a zone because we knew they were powerful on their wings."
Goettel will have to discover the anawers to his midfield problems before his next game, which ia with Buffalo on Saturday.
Rick's Kicks: Syracuse's only real offensive chance came in the second half when the Orangemen had a direct kick from about 20 yards in front of the Cortland goal.

We're pretty fortunate at his position, though, since we still have Bernie Winters,' Maloney eaid of the $6^{\prime \prime} 2^{\prime \prime}$, 238-pound Winters. "He played tackle for ns last year and we'll just slide him back into that position this week. Either Marvin Jones or Kevin Yard will take over at defensive end."
Maloney called sophomore Robinson an "extremely doubtful" ©tarter for Saturday's Ar chbold Stadium opener against North Carolina State.

Mandel played well in Oregon since he was hurt very early in the game," Maloney said. "But he hung in there well and played well with the pain.
It now remaina for the rest of the Orangemen to leara to play well with the extreme discomfort of missing five starters.
"I think that our second-line people are good enough to do the job for us," Maloney said. "But we just have no choice at thís point. We're hurt, but I'm confident we can go into our game Saturday fielding a good man at every position."
Yet Maloney gtill cannot be too encouraged by his formida ble liet of injured. For him the war is still only one week old.

On the nature of sports heroes

In the sixth game of the 1975 World Series, Fred Lann, the ubiquitons cemterfielder for the Boston Red Sox, crashed into the great green monster wall of Boston's Fenway Park while running down long fly ball. As Lynn lay atunned and ob viously injured on the warning track, the Cincinnati Reds better raced to a triple and anation of television viewers held their breath in anticipation of the worst.
Lorna was able to shake off the injurs and after a brief rest retarned to the game. He said later that in the intensity of the moment he had paid no attention to where the wall was.

Thirty years earlier, "Pistol" Pete Reiser was a young, promising outfielder with the Brooklyn Dodgers. When he first came up from the minors he wan touted by the New York press to be the second coming of Joe Dimaggio. But while Reiser enjoyed several anperla'tive senaons, his greatest boast field on a secord he ever set - was that he was carried off the field on a stretcher 19 times.
Most of Reiser's injuries came from the reckless abandon with which he chased down fly balls into walls. On other oc casions he was knodked unconscious after getting hit in the head with a pitch. Throughout his career Reiser became known as a player-who was willing to risk personal injury no matter what the cost.
From the media accounts of the Pete Reiser story, what can we learn? That it is admirable to be intense, reckleasly dedicated and fearless?

That young sandlot athletes should imitate his style and run into fences, collide with opposing players, orslam into fire hydrants and lamp posta while trying to catch a ay hall?

Self defening
On the other hand what could we learn from Mr. Reiser? That he never learned to take care of himself or mustain a That he never learned to take care of himself or sostain a prolonged carter by learming aelf-respect and paysical accident - a player turning an ankle - and a player that sustains injuries with regularity by runming headlong intc cement walls.)
Reiser's story is of course no isolated case. No clearer example exists of our absurdity to hero-worship the insane than the attention given in the media to that mental incompetemt Evel Kneivel and his various attempted television auicides.

Kneivel rides a motorcycle across the Smake River Canyon. He slides through a wall of fire and brealss bones in him body. Is thia man hero material? Kneivel is destroying himself and marketing his cratzy death wish in toys, games and now movies, All scross the eountry kids are driving bikes over planks, jumping garbage cans and ditches, breaking their small bones.

Something is definitely wrong
Most children cannot differentiate between being reckless and being brave. Unfortunately, most of the time neither can the medita!

Look at the press given to Kneivel, the injured Mickey Mantle, who played a game while blood seeped out of an open wound in his back or even locally in the case of Roosevelt Bouie, the star of the $S \mathrm{~S}$ baskethall team who played in gacnes last year with his hand in a cast.
All these people are presented to wh by the iports media as herces. Must the sports media hero then have total disregard for his body? Determination is a virtue, but when it is used to destroy or neglect yourself, it is a aerious flaw.
Although themedia has taught we differemtly I question the foll tales that imply that a) It is more important to finish the game than get medical attention; b) It is most important to stop the play (as in football) nomatter what cost to the body.

What iesaon?
If heroes are to teach us something about apport it akould be that they exemplify the need for self discipline in the arena of eport Disciplined athletes whose minds and bodies are one ahould be given more of our respect becringe they have aelf respect for both their minds and bodies.
Chuis Evert is a-world champion, yet she never dives headlong to the tennis court chasing shots. She doesn't

Legitimacy of GSO comes under question

By Scott Rohrer
Namesilike Jack Label, the first Graduate Student Orgenization president, have long faded from the campus scenc.

The details concerning the formation of GSO in 1969 have apparenely faded alsa.
Director of Stmdent Affairs Peter Baigent, who was a graduate student in 1969, said

Pot violation leaves

 'taint of criminality'
Ey Dick Stirba

While not technically a crime, possession of leas than 25 grame of marijuana under New Yous York State's "decriminalized" druglaw can still leave "a taint of criminality" in the eyes of criminality in the eyes of prospective employers, Ac cording to Gary Sommer, cording to Gary Sommer, Services

Possession of leas than 25 grams is a yiohation. An arrest will result in a permanent arrest record, though not a criminal record.
Some employers do not see the distinction between the two, Sommer said.
Moreover, Sommer ssid, the decriminalization : section is only one of 11 sections of the law and applies oniy to posseebion in a peivate place. Powses sion in a "public place" is a misciemeanor gunishable by a jail bentence.

The Penal Law state a public placa is ."A a place to which the public or en mbstan. tial cranp of persons has accese, and includes but is not limitod rinco hightis yo tranaportition schocis, plinces of amumement parki, places oromidement parice, playgropnd and poxtiont of apertinent tioman and hoth of apartunent hoppeps he could not remember how GSO came into being.

A petition which circulated among graduate students last epring claimed that GSO was néver ; ap proted Sy gradiate ozudente and thre Sif ebould ceage recognition of it Baigent aaid GSO, along with the two other student governments, Student Association and Law Senate, evolved in a different menner.

Persons charged with a violation are issued an appearance ticket popularly compared with a parking ieket.
An appearance ticket is not like a parking ticket," Sommer said, but is technically an arreat. A person $\begin{gathered}\text { erved with an }\end{gathered}$ apreath Apersonaerved witian appearer aplen in Syracuer City Court, he said. so Sommer called the violation a noncriminal charge in a criminal proceeding. It is handled like a criminal case that gives it the taint of crimainality,"
Most students arrented for possession are arrested "because of their own tupidity." Sommer said. The most common situations in which persons are arrested are: 1) baving plants growing in windows; 2) smoking in a car, and 3) batant public use or use at parties which are the subject of noise complaits.
Sommer said.

He anid he felt GSO's legitimacy,"has been built up over time."
Melvin C. Mounts, vice president for student affairs, said : "to " the ": beat of my knowledige a referendurn of the type people commonly think of was never held. I think it (GSO) came into existence when a proposed constitution was passed at a meeting" in 1969. He added he had noidea how many students attended.
There apparently are no strict university guidelines for forming a student Government. Mounts said his government if it represents the studenis' needs.

GSO president Ross Burke said he felt GSO has the right to represent graduate students because it has been recognized by the Board of Graduate Stadies, the Cifice of Student Affaire (OSA) , and the University Senate. He added that the 1974 constitution was approved at a wellpublicized" meeting.
Ex-senator Peter Wesael said last spring that only 100 students attended the 1974 meeting. thus there was no consensus of the majority of grads.

The petition evidently gained few signatures and is no longer circulating. Mounts speculated that if it had gatinered "a gignificantly large number of signatures it would have put OSA in a "dis comforting position.
"If such a situation did arise we would want to try to tap grads in a systematic way ${ }^{* 7}$ to learn of graduate feclings towned GSO, Mourits said. Baigent said OSA would have to "think deep, hard and fast" if a petition was presented.
In GSO's first year it only had a budget of $$ 7,000$ with just $$ 3,230$ allocated to campus groups. The budget steadily groups. The budget steacily grew to its present level of $$ 96,000$. Ender Rich $96,000, Under Rich Campbell's administration in 1974, the current constitution was adopted.

"Early fall we also have a problem with room changes, particularly on North Campus," she said.
But, Crawford admitted this year has been "one of the smoothest yet," a statement that means something from this 21-year veteran of Syracuse University housing. Crawford's roots at SU go back to the 1940s when her father Finla Crawford was the first and only vice chancellor of Syracuse University. In 1954, after working in New York City for the National Tuberculosis Association, Crawford returned to SU for graduate school and for a graduate achool and for a pasition as a resident adviser, (located "where the Dellplain (located "where the Dellplain loading dock is now shat later

SU class

By Dana Wilson
The attitudes of Syracuse and Lemoyne College freshmen and seniors toward having children will be surveyed this semester by a sociology class, Introduction to Research, SOC 318.
William Pooler, asociate professor of sociology, and his students will work as "colleagues" On the survey which will include personal interviews with 300 male and female students at the two schools.

The survey will gauge the student's attitudes about religion, degree of commitment to starting a family, mitment to starting a fanniy, or career, college experience and other important background factors in relation to how many children they will have.

In 1967, a similar survey was published by Princeton's University Press on Catholic and non-Catholic college

SU class

By Dana Wilson
The attitudes of Syracuse and Lemoyne College freshmen and seniors toward having children will be surveyed this semester by a sociology class, Introduction to Research, SOC 318.
William Pooler, asociate professor of sociology, and his students will work as "colleagues" On the survey which will include personal interviews with 300 male and female students at the two schools.

The survey will gauge the student's attitudes about religion, degree of commitment to starting a family, mitment to starting a fanniy, or career, college experience and other important background factors in relation to how many children they will have.

In 1967, a similar survey was published by Princeton's University Press on Catholic and non-Catholic college provided the funds.

Michael Sawyer, vice chancellor for university relations, yeaterday said the money came from the Office of Student Affairs. Melvin C. Mounts, vice-president for student affairs, could not be reached for comment.
Delivery of the ambulance was expected in late August, but problems and "red tape" involving the purchase order delayed delivery, Werner said. MCU, operating from an of-get ambulance; very good' year
fice in the SU Health Center, provides emergency ambulance service, routine medical transport and various types of first-aid training to SU students, faculty, staff and guests free of charge. The nnit is completely staffed by volunteers. Strudler said MCU hopes to use an ambulance borrowed from Eastern Ambulance until the new one is delivered. If an ambulance is not available, ahe said, Eastern Ambulance will provide emergency service free of charge to anyone who would normally be transported by MCU on calla received through MCU's emergency line, 423-4299.

MCU's first ambulance was purchased. with donatione from fund drives, Werner said. MCU planned to raise money for a new ambulance last year in the same wance last year in the same way, but the thet" werar maid hat, Werner said.
MCU's main source of operating funds is Student As-

MCU almo receivea fod help from'SU Health Servicea which pays MCU's phone and gasoline bills and occasionally provides fundsin emerrencies.
"Health Service has been ex. cellent in terms of giving us money for things we've needed," Werner said.

Donations provide "about $$ 25$ year" at most, Werner said.
MCU handles between 5,000 and 6,000 calls during the academic year. Werner said, and has a ataff of aboit 30-50 and has a ataig of about 30 -50 operates 24 houre a day. he added.
Werner aaid the staff is now all etudents, although it is open to faculty and staff. New volunteers need not have prior experience, since MCU trains its own staff members, he added.

Law fee supports few campus groups

By Thomas Coffey Studenta in the College of Law pay a $$ 35$ student fee, $$ 7$ higher than the normal graduate student fee, Despite this, the law student fee funds only two organizations outside the law school. Student Legal Services and Alternative Action Services (Alteracts), according to George Billinson law senate president.

Billinson said he was "aware of charges that law students get something for nothing nothing-
"I don't . know if these charges are justified," he added.

Student Legal Services received a full allocation from the Jaw senate, while Alteracts received a partial allocation, Billinson said. "Some senators are upset at Alteracts due to the $$ 8$ fee they"re'charging law students this year." he added.
Student Association President Rich Crowell said he, Billinson, and Graduate Student Organization next week to discuss this situation. Crowell did not in. dicate what action might result from the meeting.

The law student fee funda many organizations within the law sehool, according to Billinson. Among the groupa funded are: the Journal of Internafional Law and Cominerce, the Moot Court program, the Environmental Law Society, Black American Legal Students Association. (BALSA) and two legal fraternities. Three dollars of each law student fee also goes to the New York Public Interest Research Group.

Crowell said there is confusion regarding law senate fublocationg becauge decisions on allocations are made in Oo nn SA Hend GSO decide tober. SA and GSO decide on "Sations in the spring.
SA is more coordinated as far as the budget allocations are concerned than the law senate," Crowell said. He explained SA has committees which examine budget requests, while the law senate does not.
Billinson said he was aware that the timing of the law senate's budget allocations causea problems. "This is the last year we will decide on allocations in October," he added. "Next year we will make them in the spring."

British official visits SU

By Mike Stanton
It whe a clase reunion of gorts befween the American Syracuse University professor and his Brition friend, now a powerfal nuember of British Parliament's House of Com mons.
Thirty years ngo, SU political science Prof.Julian $R$ Friedman studied economics at the University of London with Rusgell Kerr, who today chairs the House of Commons
Select Committee on Nationalized Industry.

Yesterday, Kert visited SU during a three-week "holiday" in the United States which in in the United states which in cluded lunch with congres Shonal friend Sen. Frana Church iDidaho) as well as a truly colonial event: a Boston Red Sox-New Looking and sounding like Winston Churchill during his "finest hour," Kerr felded questions from students in Friedman's foreign policy class (POS 353), discuasing everything from his role in Parliament and faacination with American government to the controversial Concorde landing issue and Great Britain's equivalent to Watergate.

Kerr described his com mittee, which regulates more than 30 national companies, as being in such popular demand by Parliament members that some are "prepared to buymeadrinkoo casionally" in hopes of landing a committee sest
Even in Weatminater's stately Parliament chambers, stately Parliament chambers, though, drink-buying occasionally blooms into corruption. $r$ said public con fidence in governiment wa Shattered a few years ago by a scandal in volving a prominen architect, who was caugh bribing, government officials

Kerr almo applanded the congreasional committee sybtern in the United Statea for posgessing more clout than House of Commons committeem.
But when it came to the heated issue of whether the British Concorde supersonic tramsport ahould land in America, Kerr was not as pieased.
Closely associated with the British aviation industry and leading aupporter of the Concorie, Kerr contended that "we anve reached the Euperanic age.
Instead of trying to turn back that age, which would damage the health of Great Britain's aircraft industry Kerr axgues that ways should be sought to minimize the noise problem. The development of quieter engines and time reatrictions hat would prevent Concorde in that lateatnighad

Hillel urges holiday on Rosh Hashanah

By Dick Stirba
Syracuse University Hillel plans to renew its efforts to make Rosh Hashanah, the Jewiah New Yeax, a holiday on the university calendar next year.
Acknowledging the organizational difficulties of this year's Hillel-sponsored class boycott, Susan Schneider, president of the SU chapter of the B'nai B'rith Hillel foundation, said it was a qualified succesa.
Schneider said next year's effort will aim for organization of the University Senate and parents's phone in and write in campaigns to the Parents Office.
Hillel will also seek the support of Chancellor Melvin A Eggers, who Schneider eanid *was pretty definite in that he did not think it was important to have it (Rosh Hashanah) off."
Schneider said she had talked to Student-Association President Rich Crowell about possible action by thie University Senate. Shetermed the administration resistance to granting the holiday a "sturnbling block" to students who wish to observe the Jewish New Year

Because parents pay such a large amount of money to the university in tuition Schneider said, the opinions of parents, in letters and telephone calls, will induce change.
Kenneth P. Goodrich, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. called the class boycott "a symbolicissue"and emphasized the university's difficulty in scheduling the necessary number of class days in a semester.
Ronald $R$. Cavanagh, religion department chairman, said he supports the creation of the holiday if there is a proposal to the proper committees in the administration. "I understand this as a serious concern" of Jewish students Cavanagh said He said he had talked to Harcy W sale III vicepredu Harry W Peter III, vice-president for admelieves and records, and believes the administration had given "sipnificant consideration" to the creation of Rosh Hashanah holiday.

Former GSO Comptroller Thai Van Khi said last April that he could not account for certain office expenditures because: normal university procedures for purchasing materials were being circumvented.
Thai said the biggest abuse was in the use of petty cash. Instead of using the proper order forms to acquire the petty cash, certain GSO of ficers were allegedly just returning the receipts.
"Upstate New York's only club with live

Burke said the "problem was that people did not for using petty cash This year for using petty cash. This year GSO will be enforcing procedures and will set a limit on petty cash use, he said.
An intermal account, existing within the operations and overhead account, will be established to keep a detailed and complete record of administrative expenses and transactions.
Tony Irvin was bired a few weeks ago as assistant to the comptroller to help process funding requests, and thus keep a closer check on spending, Burke said.

Boyer said Irvin does "the hard work" - requisition forms, and recording code making everything ready for me to do the accounting." Burke said he and Boyer instituted these changes with the guidance and approval of Business Manager H. Austin
Pohl, representing the Office of Student Affairs.

It By Bruce Pilato

 It Was like a rock ' $n$ ' roll barasingly small: approximately 850.The 8,500 geat War Memorial echoed the droning sound of bored musicians while the audience sat or stood motionless. The majority of the audience were 13 -year-old kids who didn't even bother lintening to the music they were too busy trying to roll joints in the dark as guitarist Johnny Winter returned to Syracuse last Wednesday night. It was probably one of the Weircest shows performed at the arena. Opering the glig was a group of unknowns called Tracy Cozta.
Next carne the onalaught of a punk-rock band, The Dictators. These guys are the MC5 of 1977. A short time later the lights went down and Winter and his band came on. Altough he even took hits offiointa offered by the audience, it was clear he didn't want to be there.
His wet was short und lacked the vitality of his earlier rock carser. His band was often aloppy, as was his playing. At best, Winter and his supporing cast were having a good-time jam es. were having a good-time jamses. sion.
With the exception of a few rockers, Winter played nothing but the blues. He hasn't burned himself out; he did an excellent job with "It"s My Own Fault," playing and singing up a storm. But for the most part Winter

Sunday marks the seventh anniversary of the death of $J i m i$ Hendrix. Known as one of the greatest guitarists of all time, Hendrix became one of the most celebrated performers of the rock scene. He died in hif sleep at the untimely age of 27, at the height of his career. Many elements made up the life of Jimai Hendrix: the man, the artist and the pop culture hero. He was a pertornent and the trageties excome with being a rock star.
come with being a rock staried the Greatest rock guitarist, a claim that greatest ock guilarish, a claim that me was more than a novelty merely by the fact that his records meretill seling today. In short, the gase of Jimi Hendrix's career is too much, Hendrix's death shocked almost everyone who knew him. But there were those who aiw it as a perfect op portunity for financial gain. It was only a few months after his passing that these certain individuals began taking advantage of Hendrix, and his fans.

ln 1965
In 1965 Jimi Hendrix made some dermonstration recordings with a rhythm and blues singer named Curtis Knight. They were produced by a young New Yorker named Ed Chaplin. In total, 31 songs were recorded in a period of two years. featured Hendrix as quality and musician for Knight. In 1967 bafter Hendrix's leap to fame. Chaplin and Knight released two gibums of this material, labeling them "Jimi Hendrix" alb labelig face was pla all over the covers, with little mention of Knight.
A furious Hendrix had them stopped almost immediately. Yet within weeks after his death. these recordings were re-issued. Since his death, Knight and Chaplin, with only 31 songs, released 21 different Jimi Hendrix albuma.
The worst aspect of this practice was the titling of these albums, such as Jimi Hendrix At His Best, The Genius Of Jimi Hendrix and Jimi Hendrix' 16 Greatest Ffits. Hendrix fans bought these discs believing they were getting the brilliant music of the guitarist they knew; only and played got these records home they realize how they'd been ripped off.

Even Hendrix' legitimate label. Warner Brothers Reprise, has eleased eight albums that Mendrix crapped hecause he felt the weren't good enough to be released. Many of the Warner releases arestill brilliant, although many are not and should never have been released.
In September 1970, when Jimi Hendrix died, the following were available to his fans: six official albums. two Jimi Hendrix-Curtis Knight albums, a 15 minute segment from the Woodstock oundrack album, a few film appearances and one appreciation Since Since his death, however, these Ggures have changed greatly. In Europe and in America, there are now more than 125 "Jimi Hendrix" albums he plays on. There are also albums he plays on. There are also available. He appears in'at least nine films and there was even an off. Broadway musical about him. A dozen books have been published and now there are three Hendrix organizations. Not to mention all the posters, T-shirts, ash trays, cloth prints and buttons. According to his lawyers, over 165 legal actions have been taken involving the Hendrix estate, along with countleas others involving his record label and his former manager. Business never interested him. He Buan onil concran with hia mer and his fans Since his death both have boen exploited to maarthty degrees.
Those who have taken advantage of the Hendrix legacy were aever concerned with the music, the fans. or the mand himmelf. Their only concern was with his money and themselves. But Hendrix summed it all up shartly before he died when h. said It's funny how most people love the dead. Once yon're dead.

 program begins at SUBy Comnie Hardeaty Putting into practice the idea that "counseling is too good to be just for sick people," the Office of Residential Life (ORL) has initiated a counselor - in residence program in six university residential areas.
The purpose of the two-year program is to "pick up some of the loose ends of counseling needs students have," said counselor Philly Mantella.
"There were counseling services around before, but they were fragmented," she continued.
According to ORL, the counselors will provide individual and group therapy, referrals and crisis intervention services for students living in each residential area, and training programs for staff members in those areas. All counseling is confidential. The six counselors and their

Orange defense faces big test

By Joel Stashenko

Apprehension.
That has to be the feeling the Syracuse foothall team has as it looks to tomorrow's game with North Carolina State.
After all, SU gave up 360 yards on defense last week against Oregon State University, a team which isn't especially renowned for its offensive punch. And tomorrow they go againgt N.C. State (a squad which is known for its offensive firepower), in the 1977 Archhold Stadium opener.
N.C. State, the team that last year averaged over 340 yards a game in total offense.
N.C. State, the squad led by a fine quarterback in Johnny Evans.
N.C. State, the team with running back Ted Brown, who Is rated one of the beat in the nation.
And also (thankfully for SU), N.C. State, the team that gave up 397 yarda a game on defense last year en noute to a 3-7-1 season. "They're a very erratic team," aaid Frank Maloney, Syracuse head football coach. "They run the same Veer-type offense we runand they are very effective at it.
"In their first two games this year they gained an incredible 900 yards in total offenae," Maloney gaid. "And they fumbled the ball an equally incredible 18 times."
The Wolfpack is awresonere when they avoid theae mistakes. In their initial two games of the year (a $28-23$ lose to Enst Carolina and a 14 -0 victory over Virginia), N.C. State quarterback Eyans has passed for 374 yards and Brown has rushed for 150 yards in 33 attempts.
"Evans is a fine quarterback," Maloney said. "He's very similar to Bill Hurley in the way heruns with the ball and he's obviously a very fine passer.".
"But Brown is the guy we're concerned about." Maloney said of the 5' 10 ", 188 -ponnd Wolfpack back. "He's a junior, and right now he's gained more yardis in his career than any other Atlantic Const Conference runner at the sarae point."
SU must oppose these potent offensive performers with a defensive lineup which has been shuffled due to both injury and poor performances.
Either Kevin Yard or Marvin Jonee will atart at defensive end in place of Bernie Winters, who will atart at defensive tackle in place of Ron Richardson. Fichardson will start fornoone during the rest of the season due to a knee surgery-
In the secondaxy, Maloney plans a shakeup because of the unimpresaive performance SU Warriorback Joe Carruso put in against OSU
"We had a lot of puravit problems at Oregon State," Maloney aaid. "Our secondary men just weren't getting to the runners who cot past the line.
'Right now I can asy that Warren Harvey, Larry King and Terry O'Leary will betart, but I can't tell you where, and I also can't aay who'l be the other starter.
On offease, Mandel Robinson remains a doubtful starter for Syracuse because of a shoulder injury.
This will be the third time in history that the two teams havemet, with N.C. State winning both previous tixnes. In 1972 they triumphed at Raleigh, N.C. $43-20$, and in 1974 Syracuse lost $28-22$ at Archbold.
But those were the days when N.C. State was a bowiteam. Now both teams are not, and that should lead to an interesting game between two good offensive teams with not-so-good defensive squads.
We've played real hard all eason," Maloney eaid. "We feel that's all you have to do and the other things, like winning, will take care of itself. I'm encouraged at this point."
But something mone will be needed than mere encouragement to defeat the Wolfpack. Perhaps 13 or 14 men on defense for stazters.

Pack in the Pack

No experience needed for SU

By Barry Lambergman In any professional sport, veteran athletes eventually step aside in their waning years and make roon for yonng blood. A good team is one with a balance between the ardior. of the young and the eadershipof the veterans. Un fortunately, this formuls can not always, be concocted in the college ranks. Veteran leaderrhip is sometimes forced to step aside at an untimely uncture in the team's growth by way of graduation,often leaving a coach with nothine but a zealous and hopefulty talented bunch of kids.
Enter the Syracuse Uni versity cross country team. Semior cocaptaina Bil O'Brian and Mike Borghard are now SU alumani, which leavea the team void of veteran eaderahip. To make mattars worse, the team han no seniorn at all. The new cocaptains are ophomore Brian Trippany who seerns to have all the tools of a good team leader, and Chris Carroll, a transfer from Manhattan last year, who is a quertion mark as he has not yet returned to school. So overall; the team is unsure as a group in that real leadership has not yet emerged.
However, the team is in good hands as Andy Jugan returns for his sophomore corching year after an 11-6 Beason. Asristant Coach Ron Stimeon left Syracuse at the end of the track season and has beon replaced by Dick Finher.
While this may not exactly be a bright picture, crass cotur. try supportera should not lose faith by any means. Lant year's top two runners, (who left school at the end of croks country season to become a chef), have been amply replaced by weay of an ex. cellent. recruiting year. Freahmen Neil Rosenblad from Wading River, and Miks Sayere from Statem Ialand, ghould be the team's top two runzers this season. Another froshman, William Scarbrough, from Lisbou, N.Y. is monther hopetnl.
"Eate Yrour wal digherents"

Coach Jugan said, "in that We're not as strong out in front, a lot atronger chrough the middle, and not as deep at about our 14 . through 16 positions. Wie should have eight or nine guys around Trip pany thia year, but that etill leaven us with grap and we could have a different guy on top atany pointin the seaton." Seven lettermen retum from last year's team, but while rumners such as sophomores Jerry Josselyn, Mike and junior Frank Lowry retorn as improved ranmers, there is a long list of injury-etricken harriers. Trippany is not in peak shape as he is suffering from Achilles' teadinitis. Sophomore John Buckley and junior Bill Warford are hurt, and as if that's not enough, Sophomore Mark Stanffer i loet for the eeason with a broken leg-
The schedule is also tougher than lant years'. Cortiand was dropped and powerful East Rochadsbarg picked up. bechester and Colgate have been scheduled on the same day instead of separately as in the pabt; leaving a space for The Greater Rochester Track ciub to compete later in the seanon. The fryst meet of the Beason is Saturday against falo.
"This year any opponent on our schedule is capable of beatingus," Jugan saia. There are no more pushover teams like last year, U Mass. is probably the only team we can't really beat."
In any case, as the saying goes, gannes aren't won or lout on paper and in crose country a good legrer is more important than a good leader.

Quietly spreading outwards, his smile adds corners to his round face, "You know on the apcorners to his rownd tace, You know on the apd. plication forms where it asks for religion and' says others?' A rush or laughter. Mapts chaplain-at-large for "others.'

Actually, his official title is Chaplaiz-at-large for Far Eastera Religions, but Zen Buddhiat monk Louis Nordstrom is more interested in exploring the potentiala of his newly created titio than in measuring its length.
"I'm not intereated in selling anything," Nordstrom said, "I'm interested in the intellee tual fireworks that could result between an East-Wert dialogue."
Nordstrom's appointanent grew out of a desire to "realize and reaffirm the pluralistic nature of religion on campus - in the world, for that matter"* explained Darrell J. Fasching, as sistant dean of Hendricks Chapel.
"It updates this university's original vision. Fasching said. "There probably wasn't a Buddhist on campus when Syracuse was founded, but'it baw education then, even with its Chris tian roots, as offering religious pluralism. Now horizons have changed, religion has exhorizons,
"They simply put their appointrnent where their mouth is - 80 to speak" Nordstrom said. "It is an experiment as to what extent this exchange can work.'
lt is a new or at least, different experiment. According to Fasching. Nordstrom's appointment is "probably the first time any university in the U.S. has hired a Buddhist chaplain."
"I can explaini Buddhism in intellectual terms and get rid of a lot of the exotic trappings," Nordstrom said. "Intellectually, religion is a dead subject among students and I feel it is inaportant to make religion an open question again."

Nordstrom is genuinely concerned over the limits of intellectual exercise. Experience is as important, he says, and it is the religious experience that has faded in the West.

Buddhism addressed the human condition as it is," Nordstrom explained. "Its first principle is that humans suffer. Right, who hasn't felt that? Christianity is founded on the idea that man is sinful, and that's not something everybody feels."
Nordstrom is not auggesting that Christianity is not a valid philosophy. He feels that it and other Western philosophies have become so removed from experience that they have lost their popular attraction.

Philosophers used to be people you could torn to for help with everyday problems," Nordstrom said. "But todiny a philosopher in a Nordstrom sad. But today a phinosopher in a university risk

Nordstrom's fluid, expressive face suddenly lost its smile. "Western philosophy needs help, I really bemoan what's happened to it:"

Nordstrom, 34, earned a Ph.D. from Columbia University, but turned away from western philosophy and towardzen Buddhism.
"I didn't get involved in Eastern religion in an intellectual way", Nordstrom said, "I had just had my fill of words and of teaching philosophy. I didn't want to read it, I wanted to feel it."

First introduced to Buddhism through his wife; Sharon, Nordstrom was particularly impressed with a former prize fighter she brought home from a Catskill's Buddhist monastery.
"He seemed so alive in the moment," Nordstrom recalled. "When you talked he seemed to listen with every pore of his body. I was impressed with his toughness and courage."

Nordstrom became director of that monastery in 1974, leaving two years later because he felf "a true monk lives in the world and contributes. to the world.'

He came to Syracuse from the monastery as an assistant professor of religion, teaching courses from the 'contemporary' religious movements in America to the idea of religion as experience, an idea in which he fervently believes.
"I believe very much in the practical nature of religion," he said. "Intellectualism - and I don't want to sound like an anti-intellectual is valuable because it brings out and presents so many problems, so many questions. But often these problema can't be solved intellectually and that creates desperation."
Citing the example of his own life, Nordstrom said, "It became crystal clear to me there was no way intellectualism could solve my problems. It had pushed me to the abyss, which is good."

Nordstrom has used Buddhist meditation as a bridge acrose that abyss, but he emphasizes a bridge across that abyss, but he emphasizes the differences between it and the popular the differences between it
"Buddhism and TM are worlds apart," Nordstrom pointed out, rejecting TM's notion of momentary blise.

Nordstrom instead described meditation as a tool toward enlighterment. "You have to get to know your own mind," he said, "It is the importance of the quality of the mind behind action."

Answering our mail：

Questioning legitimacy

In a letter publinhed on this page， Rose Burke and Eric Boyer，GSO raise tome legitimate and interecting questions aboutour editorial calling for areferendum on CiOC＇s legitimacy fithe Daily Orawge，Sept＇16）．
Several of these questions we shoald have answered in the criginal editorial． A few aimply misstate our editorial position 保 Either case，the questions raised by Burlve and Boyer bear raised by Burlve and E answering point by point
1．Other than the DO，who feele thait GSO has so seriously betrayed the interests of graduate students that its legitimacy is at stake？We don＇t feel that way．GSO may hise dome a fine job of pxomoting the interests of graduate atudentis；that is not the bassis of our call－for m referendum．GSO＇s periormance as a student inferest group is incelevant to whether or not group is irrelevant to whether or not grads choee GSQ as a meana for grads choee GSQ as a promoting those intereats． promoting thase interesta．
2．What are the specificissues behind the questions of legitimacy？Once again．Burke and Boyer attempt to reduce the question to＂what GSO has done wrong．＂but the issue is how GSO obtained its power，not how it uses it． ＊Vague challenges to GSO＊s legitimacy leave everyone necessarily coninged，write Burke and boyer．We urged a referendam．
3．Who would hoid a referendum on the legitimacy of GSO？A good ques－ tion－one．We bhould have answered Friday：Obviously the referendum could not be nun by GSO；an independent authority，Buch as the Of－ fice of Student

4．Suppose sraduate students voted．．．to diseotve GSO？What would happen to the fanding of organizations sweft at the DO．Stwelent Legal Services ard Altercicts．．．？In the ualikely event graduate stndemts did vote to dissolve GSO，they would have to begin imbsediately holding open meetings to organize a new form of student government．We pould recommend holding the referendum well in ad－ vance of budget hearinge，to avoid unnecessary cornfusion．
5．Have simitar referendia been held for SA and the Law Student Senate？II not，Burke and Boyer contend，the DO supports a double standard．This is nonpertse．In our view，all students， nonsense．in our view，ail stuicnis， graduates，umdergraduates and law students，should choose their own form of student government in free elections． ofstudent government in free elections．
G．Do mechanigmas exist within GSO for chamging the organization．．．？As for changing the organtiaction．．．？As Burke and Eoyer astutely point out， there is an opportunity for participation by craduate etudenta in GSO．We assume graduates can change or improve GSO from within． but we do not believe piecemeal participation by individual students in GSO affairs can lend legitimacy from the entire．GSO conatituency．
We believed when we wrote our original editorial last week that a referendum was not something to be rushed into，but rather to be carefally considered，and planned．We remain convinced that a referendum is the best way to give GSO permament political way to give legitimacy or to allow grads as a legitimacy－or to allow grads as a atudent commanity to alter or replace student commanitt their govermment．

Abortion is a problem typical of the 20th century there is no bolution． Instead，we choose beach is a separate tragedy．
Even the most avid right－to－lifer must acknowledge the anguish of bear－ ing an unwanted child and the despair of seeking an unsafe and illegral abor tion．Only the most callous pro－abor tionist can deny the feeling of remorse， however alight it might be，in eliminat ing the potential of a living being：We must deal with one of the most vexing problems of cur age without a humane alternative．
The issue has been debated so intensely and for so long that most interested parties have long ago as sumed fixed positions and a standard sumped fixed positions and a standard bying efforts，demonstrations and publicity campaigno that develops cach time the issue comes before Congress，the main issue in the abor－ tion dilemina is forgotten．

For if we could answer one question． all the issues which have becorme en－ tangled in the abortion dilemma would become tangential．＇Vhe question：what is a human being？

The temptation is to say we kmow what a human being is．It is an entity like you or I with brain waves and a furnctioning heart who can exist independent of its mother＇s body．But this argument is a shallow one．
Black peopie were kept in slavery for over two centuries because their owners contended blacks＂weren＇t like you and 1．＂German Jews were sent to their deaths in prison camps because the leader of that time argued that they＂weren＂t like you and i．＂
Saying a fetus is not alive because it is not likeyou or I is continuing rhetoric of opprestion Americans are atill strugriling to be free of．
Conception occurs after the union of two human bodies and its product，if given the chance，will grow to maturity and contimue that process．Every form of human life，be it in or beyond the womb is constantly becoming pometh－ ing different．Human life is a process． And no one stage of the procerse in more human than any other．If we pass judgement on the unborn，we mitist ex－ pect，one day，to have similar judgement passed upon ourselves

In an informal discussion with imembers of the committee, some floor residents discussed the adyantages and disadvantages of going coed.
Some students said people who moved into the opposite wing would have to walk much farther to the bathroom. They also said having the wings coed may make it harder to study.
Other students pointed out that onily the students who wanted to move would be inconvenienced. They also thought having the floor coed would create a happier and more relaxed atmosphere.
A questionnaire on the floor going coed will be handed out today.

The Office of Education (OE) is soliciting proposals from organizations which have had nationwide experience in collecting consumer loans and in tracing the whereabouts of defaulters.

The succeassful bidder for the contract will be required to locate defaulted borrowers, es tablish a payment schedule and arrange for payments to be made to OD. The collection agency will also recommend whether OE should take legal action on debts the organization is unable to collect.

The agency will be paid a pexcentage of the payments collected. The federal government has directly incured mpproximately one-half of ell loap in the Guprenteed. Stadent Loan Program.

UU sought an allocation of $$ 13,761$ but received only $$ 5,971$. The UU Cotincil voted to charge higher prices to grads for all UU events. Burke said in principle he agrees with this idea. However, due to opposition from the Office of Student Affairs, the plan was not implemented:
A GSO Senate committee will contact representatives of the law school. senate to initiate discussions on the law school's lack of representation in the Univergity Senate. Because law students have no formal right to run for University Senate positions, they must run as GSO representatives. However, one requirement for being a GSO senator is paying a GSO student activity fee, which law stadents do not.
ESF; however, pays $$ 12$ of their activity fee to GSO but has no representation in the GSO Senate. The executive committee will initiate discussion with ESF concerning their fee level and achieving greater cooperation between the two organizations.
In other senate action, Nancy Gentile was appointed senate chairperson. The sernate elected Pamela Irvin secretary-recorder.

Howard Freeman, Julie Mayne and Gary Kromer were unanimously elected University Senate repreaen. tatives.

Bruce Turkle and Grace Leahy were elected as representatives to the Board of Graduate Studies. Scott Tiedke and Christa Stischeck were elected justices to the Graduate Student Court.

Report analyzes SU dropout rate

By Bruce Tallerman freshme approximately 2,600 Univeraity this semester, an estimated 800 will leave SU and not return in the next four years.

This finding is based on the attrition rate of gtudents between last year's fall and spring semesters, which the Office of Admissions Office of Admissions and Records reported was 5.6 percent, and a report co-authorized by Patrick Terenzini, director of research for the Office of Student Affairs.
The report, entitled "Attrition in the Class of 1974 , found that 31 per cent of the students who entered as freshmen in the fall of 1970 , left gchool and did not return to SU in that four-year term. Terenzini said the attrition rate neither drops nor rises significantly over two or three four-year periods.
The admissiona office documents only the net attrition rate between two semesters and takes into ac count atudenta who expect to return, or who have completed their degree requirements. But the Office of Student Affairs report focuses on students of a single freshman clasa who "drop out" of SU with no expectations of returning.
Terenzini said most 日tudents

One reason for a hirh attrition rate among freshmen may be failure to find a "niche" in an academic environment. Student-faculty interaction is cited in the report as one of the more important elements in an portant elements in an academic environment. This is more frequent and rewarding among students who stay in school longer.
Harry W. Peter III, vice president for Admissions and Records, believes that incompatability between atudent and achool "can be ascribed to inadequacies on the part of the university. to the inadequacies of students, and to the inability of the university to cope with a given student's inadequacies.
Among other common contributors to attrition, Terenzini cited financial reasons, family sickness and "dissonance bichween and cinterests and preferences." Academic appreferences. Academic apunrelated to the dropout rate. unrelated to the dropout rate.

By Mindy Martin
One need, not be a millionaire to bring the mirage of his dream houge into a reality; one can build it in miniature for a few hundred dollars.

The Dollhouse Place, owned by Dick and Eunice Taber and Ann and John Sellers, can be found in Syracuse Mall on the corner of Salina and Washington Streets. It is replete with materials and ideas for the construction and the furnighing of dollhouses Instructional pamphlets and kits on all phases of the craft are also sold.

In addition, the store owners conduct workshops. The Tabers, who have built many shadow boxes and an elevenroom dollhouse, belong to a dolihouse-making club. Many of the club's projects are on exhibit in the store and some are for sale.
The shop is threequarters filled with accessories. Readymade ones range from a tea set costing $$ 43$ to a pacifier for 50 cents. The creative person can find everything from oriental rugs to needlepoint or chandeliers to macrarne.
Original paintings by a Syracuse woman and other hand-made adornments line the shel ves. Most of the accessories fit the one inch to one foot mold required of the average dollhouse.

The -merchandise is imported from all over the world but principally, comes from Taiwar. As Mr. Taber ex plained, the selected stock comprises "a cross section of what we would want in a dollhouse.
The projects generally take about two or three years to complete, but Mr. Taber feels one would not be dispirited about the long time.
"You can do a little bit and still feel like you have ac complished something.
Those with limited space should not be disheartened either as smaller ahadow boxes will comfortably suit their needs. Mr. Taber also stressed that a special workehop-ia notnecessary as the litchen table will micely auffice.

Students on the On-the-Go and Commuter plans can have 35 punches in their meal cards exchanged for coupons valued at 25 cents each. Students interested in taling advantage of the offer should go to the Food'Service office in the lower level of the Women's Building.
The Commuters plan has a maximum of 195 punches per sernester, while On-the-Go has 318 punches.
Dernester, While On-theGo has 318 punches. use the coupons at the snack bars at Sadler Hall, the College of Law, the Skybarn on South Campus, and at the Commons and the Rathakellar in Slocum Hall.

Koehler explained that the plan was devised for two reasons. First, that Student Association requested coupons for concessions at sports events, and second, that Food Service hopes to make meal plans more attractive to students.

Students have been allowed to use Food Service coupons at the conceasions since last year.

It is honestly hard to conceive of them being any worse, and as crazy as it sounds, $38-0$ was a misleading score. It should have been
The firat quarter ended with SU behind by three, but with the Orangemen having run only six offensive plays from scrimmage. In the meantime, the N. CF. State offensive machine was just beginning to roll.

Rumninz Wolfpack
The Wollpack took the opening kick-off and behind the Vickers and Rickey Adams, moved 76 yards to the SU four. moved 6 yards to the Su four, Jay Sherrill came on to kick a 21-yard field goal.

After Bill Hurley threw an interception on the next series, N.C. State atarted from the Syracuse 35 -yard-line and in seven plays was again inside the SU Eive. But a fumble by State quarterback Johnny Evans was recovered by Kevin Yard and SU had eacaped again.
But in the second quarter there was to be no eacaping. With 8:55 gone in the second period, Evans completed a 27 yard touchdown pase to State receiver Terry Crite for a $10-0$ Wolfpack lead.

After SU lost 15 yards in the ensuing series and was forced to punt, State came right back to score again. Running back Ted Brown burst up the middle for a 14-yard touchdown run and a 17-0 Wolfpack lead at the half.

Syracuse has bome good individual players, but their real trouble today was with their offense," said N.C. State head rootball coach Bo Rein. "I think their offense let thern down. The main problem with their defense was they were out "Whe field just too darn long.",
We got off to a bad start," Maloney said. "The interception took some of the starch out of us, too. When you get down $17-0$ you get forced out of your game plan. We wanted to have a mixed plan both runs and passes but our field position was poor."

Poor Placement
And it didn't get any better in the second half. SU started the second half with the hallat their 23 -yard line, but a holding penalty put them at the 12 and they were forced to punt. N.C. State roared back on three long-gaining runs by Vickers; but again the Wolfpack drive was etopped by an Evans fumble, this one on the Syracuse eight.
Yet SU simply could not move the football and twice more in the third quarter they were forced to punt the ball away. The second time gave N.C. State the ball on the Orange 46 and in eight plays they marched the ball in, with Brown scoring again from five yards.

The brightest moment for SU occured in the fourth period when the Orangemen put on their most positive offensive movement of the day. Led by second-string quarterback Ron Farneski, SU marched 49 yards to the State 42 their yards to the State 42 their game, and only the aecond time they were over the 50 -yard line) but there an illegral procedure call hurt the drive and Farneski killed it by chrowing an interception.
North Carolina State added two more scores in the fourth quarter, one in dramatic fashion. With the Wolfpack for once backed up on their own five-yard line, Evans handed off to Brown on a dive play to the left of the State line.

Bustin loose
Brown burst through the SU line, broke to the outside and raced the length of the field for a 95 -yard touchdown run. The play was the longest in N.C. State history:
Renerve quarterback Scott Smith made the score $38-0$ when he ran the ball in from the five after a Jim Sessler fumble had given the Wolfpack the ball deep in SU territory.
"Syracuse was very aggres. sive, and caused a lot of our mistakes," Rein said, "but they really lack team speed. which was very apparent when we had our becond and thrid team players in there against them."

'I just don't know why that happenedr" Winters added. "We're just going to have to look at the films to find out." The SU offense, usually a factor on the field, displayed about as much movement as a line at Marine Midland Bank. "As good a job as our defense. did of containing their outside. game," Rein baid, "we know that their offense is about five times as good as they shovered today."
"We just don't know what in going wrong," Hurley said. "We know it is a problem with have to look at the films to find out where."
"We"ll have to take a good long look." Maloney adided. "We are not going to start wholesale shakeups."

Postgame observations

The :Zero'cuse grid review

By Mike McAlary

It was perfection.
The Keystone Kops would have been proud. F. Troop themsel ves would have paid homage to a job well done.

Buster Keaton and Charlie Chaplin would have bowed in respect.
The great ones always yield to the new young talent when the time comes, and right now the time has come for the Zero'cuse football Orangemen to be recognized...because they have become very, very good at being very, very bad.

In Saturday's game they proved they could do it all. They can punch, they can dance. They can famble, they get kicked in the pants.

Of course, all this is said with tongue-in. cheek; there isn't roally anything fonny at all about the way SU played this Saturday at Archbold. In fact it's traumatic. If they continue to play like they did this w
In fact if this keeps up, Syracuse, ironically nough, might even get a winner. If they drop to Division 11 they would wind up playing the likes of lthaca and St. Lawrence. Not exactly eiants in the world of college foothall. Indised they Syracuse football program in in deep trouble and they all know it.

The Syracuse offense was chronicaliy inept in their firat home outing. The greatest Syracuse kush came with about 10 minithes to play when knalf the finne in Arehbold etarted heading for the exits. Bill Hurley, the much-heralded hurler for the Orange, led a backfield charge that was flatter than a day-ald keg of beer. Hurley's only defense of his play, and a very good one, wan that he was violently sick before, during and after the game

But the blazne can't just fall on the very capable whoulders of Hurley. His backe. Avery and Monk, are without a doubt very gutsy players, but, unfortumately, it looks like they run in slow motion Againat Oregon State two weeks ago they had trouble getting around the corner. This week they hiad trouble even getting to the corner.

On defense, the Orangernen need experience fast. They misged assignments much of the time and over ran the ball on other occasions. They are a litlle too earnest. A little too overeager. Mentally, they aren't quitters. At the end of the Eame Saturday, all they had left wias their pride. They were embarrassed, and they were hurt by the boos from the crowd, bit they stayed: They might-have lost but there are notloters on defense.

Where Maloney's Orangemen go from here is anybody's guess. They-have now played theix worst game in him coaching tenure. There in probably not a perion in Syracuse who wouldin't agxee that they wera one miserablo footivall toam on Saturday. The vital question is whet her they can turn their season axound. If Bo; it wrould most cartainly mann a reprieve for Oramge football. If not eret reedy for the Ithaca Bomberi. In . the: meaptione Syrracriec, football in dying- to get bettior.

Violent imagery colors poetry of visiting writer

By. Dick Stirba

Irving Feldman approached his poetry with a fierceness which belied his calm exterior Monday afternoon in the 1934 Room of Newhouse II.

The rough quality of his voice lent an abrasive tone to his poems' violent images. Feldman was the first speaker in the Syracuse University sexies of visiting writers.

The violence of Feldman's imagea in "Seeing Red" contrasts markedly with hir approach to the hascic quastions of lifo posed in his sixite of poemsientitled "Three Tales:
The poem: addreases Leibnix' philoephoic questions mbout the Erention of man. Foldman maid.

Whovi It there momething and not nothini, Feldman anked his audience phetorienily, Becaneb, we have been spared:
The threejpart poem is besed on the idea that God rested on the seventh day instead of destroying the world and starting the creative process over again.
But Feldman does not limit himself to harsh reality as is exchibited in the poem, "As Fast As You Can," which ex. plores the spiritual filights of the Gingerimead Man, even as he is crumbling in the mouth of the wolf.
Freldman, à profeasoir of English at the State University of New York ait Buffalo, : was born in New York City and attemded City College of New Yor and Colnmbia Univertity.

City resident held on shoplifting charge

By Marsha Eppolito

A Syracuse resident was arrested and charged with shoplifting and poasession of a hypodermic needle after a fight broke out in front of the Syracuse University Bookstore Monday afterncon.

Rodney Spaulding of 1919 S. State St. was arrested after alledgedly taking two watches worth between $$ 80-$ 100$. Bail was set at $$ 1,004$ and arraignment was acheduled for 9:30 this morning.
According to witnesses, Sheldon Furlong, a bookstore security guard, Furlong, a bookstore security gaard, told the suspect he was under arrest as told the suspect he was under arrest as the suspect tried to leave the bookstoreSpaulding reportedly resisted as the guard attempted to handcuff hirn. A struggle ensued and glass was broken in a bookstore door.
Diann Straus, director of Syracuse University Bookstores, Inc. said Spaulding was seen by a security guard taking watches from a case. Bookstore personnel said three men were involved.
One man escaped and another was not charged because of insufficient evidence.
Witnesses said the suspect had a knife in his possession. Witnesses said the suspect dropped the watches into a box while the struggle was taking place.
City police were called by Syracuse University Safety and Security after a caller,gaid a "hattle"swas in progress in front of the bookstore. According to Syracuse city police, an investigation is underway.

Yom Kippur

Syracuse Univeraity will suspend classes Wednesday after 6 p.m. in observance of Yom Kippur. Classes will reaume Thursday around 6 p.m.

Some confusion had arisen concerning when classes would be held. The university's fall schedule of classes reported Yom Kippur would be observed on Thuraday. A note circulated Monday from Carole A. Barone, university registrar, said classes would be suspended Wedniesday "at sundown." In terms of the university's class schedule, Barone said; that meant ending classes around 6 p.m.
All University College courses scheduled for Wednesday night have been canceled.

The UJB hears all undergraduate disciplinary cases arising within the university except cases of academic dishonesty. Most hearings concem bookstore thefts, according to Chief Justice Scott Gordon. UJB's first hearing is tonight at 7 p.m. in Grant Hall.

Once a student has been apprehended, he is sent to Peter M. Baigent, director of student affairs, where he is given the choice of appear. ing before the UJB or an administrative hearing board.
Proceedings begin with the chief justice reading a security report desasked to explain the event in his own words. Board members ask the student questions enabling them to decide a plan of disciplinary action if necesplan of cisciplinary action, if necesthe case a verdict is reached and the the case, a verdict is reached and the student is informed of the decision. If the student feels the board's decision is unfair, he may request another hearing-
The aanctions range from guilty $\rightarrow$ no action to expulsion for the remainder of the student's undergraduate academic career. Other actions include official reprimand, disciplinary warning, disciplinary probation and suspension for one semester.
According to Gordon, the purpose of UJB "is to give the student an alternative to the administrative hearing board." The board's main goal is to persuade the student not to commit the crime again; find out why the act was done, and punish the atudent if necessary, he aaid.
UJB decisions are totally independent of any faculty super vision. Gordon serves as a liaison ministration. UJB also offers advice to ministration. ## Registration drive held

A threeweek voter regis ration drive by the New. York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG) began on campus yesterday. Fifty-nine persons applied to register to vote in their home counties in the drive's first day.
Students may pick up information and voter regis tration-forms between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. at the HBC patio through Oct. 8. There will be booths at night at all major dorms during the next three weeks. Absentee ballot ap plications are also ávailable. The registration driveis'part of a coordinated effort by NYPIRG to register students at about 20 college campuses state-wide. Last year over 100,000 voters were registered through the campaign.

Report analyzes water

The New York Public Interest Reaearch Group (NYPIRG) will release a report Sept. 28 declaring water in Poughkeepsie hazardous, due to toxic chemicals in the Hudson River.

The study was conducted by Walter Hang of the New York City NYPIRG office, along with the Environmental Defense Fund (EDF). The report will be of "national importance," said Joseph Salvo NYPIRG environmental coordinator.
A series of 12 articles that recently appeared in the Poughkeepsie.Journal which mplied a link between drincing wiater and the rising ancer rate relied heavily on information obtained from the study prior to its release, Salvo said.

Marjorie tended to make outright contradictions, especially when ahe was trying to sort out other people's messes for them. It would have been nice to see Janice come out of her gloom. but Marjorie was more interested in soothing her night now.

"Anyway," she said.
The sky was starting to turn from white to yellow, it was getting too warm for fall, and some maniac bird outaide the window kept making an irregular sort of chirping sound. It sounded ridiculous, and the bird would not shut up. Janice seemed to like it though listening with that ironic half-gmile for about two solid minutes. Marjorie got about two solit.
"Anyway, what?" she said.
Anyway, what anyway," Janice stalled, pulling herself out of a dream and riveting hex gaze on Marjorie. "Anyway, I decided yesterday to start coping."
"You what? Really?'
"I have to get off my tuah and get to work."

"Yeah. I know." Marjorie shragged back her shoulders, stretciced her arms forward lethargically, made to get up then stopped. "No more living in the past?" she shot at Junice, half joking. Janice looked serene for once, without even dreaming, Marjorie thought. It was remarkable, almost a miracle, especially for a Monday morning, "Well", Janice said, "I'ma still not going to ditch all that stuff everybody calls $s 0$ romantic, about the world being beautiful. Since Ilived it before, I'm going to keep on. I mustive even realized the world's pretty fine from some kind of objective viewpoint, because I still believe it even though 1 was happy then and now I'm in the pits."

"I dunno. He's so far away. It doesn't really matter. It would be nice."
"Why, if he's so far?"
"Because that's how 1 feel about him:"
"But you're not going to live in the past." Marjorie's voice wavered between a question and a statement.
"You're not.
"Nope."
Something beemed in focus again about Janice
"Well then why did you let me go on with that sermon?" Marjorie yowled, halting the bird"s yaps awhile.

I didn't."
"No, I mean why didn't you tell me about your decision right then? Why'dja let me go on talking?'
"Because,"Janice drawled, pitching a teaspoon into the sink, "yrouhad to go and lug Barbra Streisand into it, that's all."

To the editor,
I would like to say a few words in response to Mike McAlary's article "On the Nature of Sports Heroes." In it, he attacks puch well-known sports Sgures as Pete Reiser, Joe Namath and even Mickey Mantleas "reckless, self-defeating. ing at it friom a completely practical, rational point of view, there can be few enterprises more pointleas, more wasteful of time, money and energy than the whole grargantuan professional sports industry.
But why look from a practical point of view? No one ever said pro sports were supposed to accomplish anything. We do not go to football games, as Mr. McAlary implies, for games, as Mr. McAlary umplies, for Sitting up in the grandstands or in front of ous elevision gets, we do not care that Satchel Paige was able to keep pitching into hia 50 s "because he cared enough to take care of his body." Of course, we are happy for him, we wish him well, but is he really "more deserving of our hero worship" than Joe Namath or Mickey Mantle?

I bay no. What we want from ona heroes is not common sense, sound health and tortoiselike longevity. We want someone who captures our imagination, who brings un to the edges of our seats - Namath charging through a murderous defengive line with a crippled knee, Evel Knievel risking his life at Snake Knievel making

If Mr. McAlary wants moral instruction, let him go to church. If he wants physical fitness and perfect health, let him jog twice a Lay otagnant by the roadzide. Ashby attempta to do away with the many inanities and cliches concerning the depression that could have tripped him up.

Guthrie's autobiography provided the material for the plot that spans only a couple of years beginning in 1936. The book must be vivid for it provides episodic tales on which the film is centered.
The film opens in Texas with Guthrie (David Carradine) a poor and restless sign painter and amateur philosopher. One day after impatienceand tales of Califormia get the better of him, Guthrie leaves his wife and two children without even and two chilaren without even a goodbye and sets out for the counters the promised land until he accidentally becomes friends with a strong willed folkainger and union organizer named Ozark Bule (Ronny Cox). Guthrie joins up with Ozark and becomes fithous as a folk singer and organizer. But for the man who organizer. But for the man who must keep in touch with the Guthrie is eternally back on the road.
Director Ashby has done away with any climares and opts for a atraight and very informal way of telling thestoryThis film is no angry inthe depreasion. The zlternately humorous, bittersweet and warm atmosphere maket this film more realistic than any embittered indictment could be. to bother some audiences Many people aren't willing to sit through the depiction of only a emall portion of Guthrie's life where there is no exciting conclusion. Thisisnot to say that there aren't any exciting scenes. There are some highly charged scenes of antiunion strong-arm men who challenge Ozark, Guthrie and their pro-union supporters. And the picturing of a huge, Andden dust storm that engulfs sudden dust storm that engulfs séconds is as exciting as one seconds is as exciting as one could wish.
Gretchell's script never idolizes Guth script never idolizes Guthrie. It presents a man often irresponsibie and insensitive to those who really insensitive to those who really had to be free above all, even if had to be free above all, even if it meant being oppressed for what he believed in. Gretchell and Ashby make no judgments upon Guthrie, and oy presenting him with all his stubbornness Guthrie comes across as a real person, not a legend or a representation of the common man. Still, Gretchell makes Guthrie too understated sometimes. Guthrie"s statement as he looks over a crowded, impoverished work camp, "Something oughta be done about this," sounds too simple, too undexplayed for a man who articulated his thoughts so well in song.

Students ‘shoot it up’ at SU rifle range  By Bruce Tallerman

Grmer students- ido hpmowaik watoh television, fiderathteboards or aleap in their eqpare time. And some Ehoot riflem.
r-It's hot easy to acquire access to the rifie range in the basement of Archbold Gymnasium, but almost anyone who wants to shoot can.
"You don"t have to display any prior marksmanship akills to shoot on an in tramural "team," explained Nick Wetter intramurals chairman at Syracuse University. "As long as proper enthusiasm is shown, the poten-tial-for rifles will be there," he said.

Another way to take ad vantage of the 4 -point range equipped with 22 rifles is by joining the Rifle Club. The club has been in existence since 1973; when riflery was dropped an an intercollegiate sport Now, "The Rifle Club has the same status as any other club," said Andrew Mogish who heads club sports at SU
Army ROTC has traditionally supervised the range, not only for its own cadet training program, but for the Rifle Club and in tramural shooters as well. It also provided mast of the equipment. "Army ROTC were the people with the expertise,"

But now, Army ROTC is dropping its affiliation with the Rifle Club and will reserve its equiproent for ROTC staff and recruits.
Captain Sheldon Winter-mute-cited as a resson "a lack of personnel and resources to sponsor the club," noting that the Airmy ROTC staff had used its own time to watch over "outside" Bhooters.
In the future, the Rifle Club will obtain its own guns with a bond sent by the Office of Student Affairs to the Civil Marksmanship Program, a federal subsidiary for approved organizations and clubs. Army ROTC will main tain an advisory function over the range. the range.

The Rifle Club will be headed by Professor Mark Fleishman, whosaid the range may beopen for longer periods of time now that ROTC wil have less jurisdiction over in trarnural and club shooters.

But what if you're not in the Rifle Club, not involved with Army ROTC and don't have the time for intramurals, but still want to shoot rifles?
According to rifle range personnel, it only takes a minimum of instruction, a nominal fee, and a little bit of patience to live out your dream of being the next Annie Oakley.

No. it's not FEI headquarters in Washington. Instead, it's SU's rifle range located in the depths of Archbold Gym. (Photo by Eruce Martin.)

Schiéss said caution should be taken to see 'whether we're calibrating in past mistakes or whether it's reverse discrimination."
She cited a paychological atudy in which feelings of helplessness were shown to be higher in blacks, the elderly and women of any color.
"Maybe we do have a chance to right more wrongs in this country than in any other,"
she said, adding that the academic community has a rolein deciding what is rightor wrong.
McCombe said Ray Irwin, "one of the most talented readersin this part of the world," will be at next week's Monday Munchies at 11:45 a.m.

Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers was scheduled to appear at this week's discussion, but was "called away

Women's field hockey

SU girls offer new look

By Andrey H. Lipford
For those who are not professional students or diehard football fanatics, Septermber means more than the end of summer freedom or just the women's vargity field hockey team is preparing to leave its mark on another year of Syracuse University sports.

After a commendable record of $8-2.2$ last season, coach Muriel Smith's troops lost one player, Sue Sharon, to graduation, Senior Anita Ridgeway will not be playing this year due to other commitments.
"Anita is a fine, spirited player." coach Smith said. "She'll be missed."

Stand-out returting veterans include junior Claire Belser and senior Betsy Altmeter, the eam's first and second leading scorers respectively, and junior Peggy Coleman, Whorn coach defensive players." Belser, this year's recipient of the wornen's field hockey scholarship sharpened her skills at a Pennaylvania hockey camp this suramer.

Aithough practice has been underway forjust a few weeks, coach Smith finds the new group of recruits impressive. Becky Heremans, a junior cransier, and freshman Martha Patrick, are top candidates to see varsity action this season.

Quick stick

"She's quick," Smith noted about Hèremans, "she has a good atick.
In addition to the varsity field hockey squad, a jumior varsity squadif also being eatablished.
"A regular game allows for just 11 starters and 2 aubstitutes, which limits the number of team members," coach Smith explained. The junior varsity squad, which will consist of funior varsity squad, which and those upperciasanen anable to make the varsity equad, will allow more girla to participate. The Sept 23 contest with Willinm Smith College, and the Oswego match on Oct. 20, will feature action from both squads

A new defensive twist has been added to coach Smith's game plan this season. The conventional hockey line-up calla for five forwards, three halfbacks, two fullbacks, and a goalie. Smith's new strategy, reduces the forward line to foux, Two "links" will back up the forward line, followed by three halfbacks, a "sweeper," and the goalie.
The sweeper, coach Smith said, is the fifth forward. She serves as an extra defemsive player, picking upany oppoaing player who has gotten past her opponent.

Speed and stamina are essential with this strategy. Smith points out, as the forward lineis. Covering the same ground with one less player. The game plan makes the team atronger defengively, and Smith believes she has the personnel to execute it well.

Orange goals
This season's goal?
"To. make the state tournament." coach Smith says. This year's squad is more competitive than past year's, yet their schedule is basically the same.
"Last year was a good year," Smith said, noting a tie with ficld hockey power St. Iawrence as a bighlight of theserson. "St. Lawrenceifan excellent team, and we were happy with atie, she explains. "We probably could have puiled it out with better field conditions, becaisse when To make the state towmarment, she addis, you Io make the state tournament, she ac have to "beat the good teans, not tie."

The interest in field hockey is growing, Smith noted, with the hociky scholarbhip attracting more players of better quality. Maybe the team will convince you that there's more to fall than football.

Orange legmen: a great show

By Barry Lambergiana
In theatrics, the opening nightiof a show is said to be a good indicator of how the bhow will do in the weeks to come. While the SU crose-country team miny not be ready for Syracuse Stage. with any luck this season's opener will be an indication of their futh any luck performance.

- SU defeated Niagara $21-38$ low score wins in cross country) and Exffalo 15-49 at Buffalo Saturciay. Sophomore Jerry Josselyn took first, while setting a record for the new course. The other top Orange runners were junior Frank Lowry and freshman Mike Skyers, tied for third; sophomore Mike Kohlbrenner, sixth; freshman Neil Rogenblad, seventh; and sophomore Petex Bodine, eighth.
"Everyone ran well," Coach Andy Jugan said. "considering nobody on the team made the trip who has been on the team for more than a year.

Joaselym was just auper. Overall, the times were not that good, but the courae was six instead of the usual five miles and the grass was long which also Elowed runners* times."
This Baturday will beorne of the tough ermeets of the season for SU as they go to Weat Point in a dual meet against Army and SUNY Albany-
"Army is always tongh on their own course" Jugan said. "We have to concedefirst place to Alitz (Curt, winner of the ICAAs last year), but if we get a lot of guys to place in the middie we can beat them. This week 81 seconds separated our top five runners, which is too far a gap. We'll have to cut that down to about 30 seconds to have any chance of beating them.'
LAMB CHOPS: Sophomore captain Brian Trippany did not run in Buffalo. He is suffering from Achilles tendonitia. His status for the Army meet is still in the air...Sophomore Joe Brett quit the team on Thursday. He is reported to have lost interest in maning--Mike Sayers hometown was listed an Lisbon, N. Since 1973, enrollment figures at Syracuse University's School of Management have nearly doubled, matching a national trend toward business as a career choice.
"Undergraduates are becoming more and more concerned about their degrees producing marketable jobs," said Ruth Funk, management school program coordinator. "There has been a changein emphasis in recent years. Both the School of Management and the School of Public Commonications have seen remiarkable increases in their enrollments."
However, 10 years ago, National. Business magazine warned, "Business is missing the boat. With the young generation and this is ironic since the federal, city-and state governments bent over backwards to give summer, jobs to students."

Other periodicals indicated that college students of 1967 distrusted business' slick-sell advertising and the enticing but deceptive picture painted of the business world. Students wanted to make a contribution to society and to receive rewards other than material ones, it was believed. believed.

Ayn Rarid, a noted author, gave a speech in 1967 to a large Midwestern university, claiming the reason for this negative outlook on the business world was that "young people have no idea what capitalism is."
According to a follow-up poll by Paychology Today magazine, one of the most popular goals of conege students in 1967 was to develop a tily endorsed by 79 per cent of the men intertily endorsed by 79 per cent of the men interIn 1976 , only 61 per cent of then
In 1976 , only 61 per cent of the atudents surveyed considered this important. The top priorities seemed to be "becoming an authority in my field. having administrative resin my field, having administrative res ponsibility for the work of others, gaining recognition in my field, and being very well off famancially." While there was a slight increasie over the past 10 years in the goal of "helping others," membership in the Peace Corps and Vista markedly declined.

According to the same poll, business has shown a steady increase during the pastseveral years as a career choicr. In 1968 , business was appointed as acareer choice by 11 percerit of the freshmen vinterviewed, as compared to more than 16 per cent in 1976. Despite funding from government grants, scholarships, and rising tuition fees, the money a university receives is not enough to cover the cost of operation.
Contributions and donations from local and national corporations, alumni and private individuals are needed to keep most universities afloat. Syracuse University is no exception.
Many programs are imsecure needed and additional income. Large corporations contribute annually to SU. as Syracuse" University Food Service has not recovered $$ 10,000$ worth of meal card grids stolen during regisration, according to Food Ser Vice Director Dennis Koehler.

Dining hall workers are monitoring meal card grids for the stolen packet. The 100 grids are identified by numbers ranging from 1401 to 1500.

The theft oceurred the first day of registration at about 5 p.m. according to Daniel Sheridan, revenue analyst for Food Service.

"The improvement and importaince of private education is one of the reasons cor porations should contribute financially to universities," said Robext Hull, director of university relations.

Benefits from SU students-in the form of in come gained from student spending ($12,375,000 in 1975 76) and educational services the university provides through University College are two reasons corporations contribute to SU, Hull said.

Contributions and donations are not always given with charitable intent or private education in mind, because they also provide a big tax break.
"Up to 5 per cent of a company's total revenue can be used for contributions, with a full government refund," said Michael Sawyer, vice chancellor of university relations. "Also, a corporation improves its image and garners publicity with contributions.'

Lacal corporations provided many monies to the university, close to $$ 1$ million last year. National corporations are also contributers, especially those based in New York City.
"New York City is very important to Syracuse Univer portant to Syracuse Univer sity, said Sawyer. Corporations based there realize porations based there realize the number of important SU alumni and usually contribute renerously." New York City based companies contribute nearly $$ 250,000$ last year.

While donations to the university are substantial, cor porations could be persuaded to give more, Sawyer said.

The Orange Pack
Some contributors are mainly interested in Syracuse sporta. The Orange Pack is an sports. The Orange Pack is an organization that solicits funds solely for use in the athletic department.

The Orange Pack is a support organization," said Joseph Szombathy, assistant director of athletic affairs. "We raise contributions that aupraise contributions that supplement the income w
The "Pack" started in late 1973 under the direction of former SU basketball coach. Roy Danforth. It was then called the Hardwood Club. He organized 2,000 members to solicit contributions that would be used for basketball recruiting-
In 1974, the program was expanded to includeall programs in the athletic department.

Our fabric, hand printed on cotton, can be used in endless ways. It can be "framed like a picture, stuffed like a pillow, hung like draperies, and sewn like a dress."

105 Broolica Drive, Fayetteville 2 blocks past f'ville Mall-in Limestone Plaza 9-5:30 Mon.-Sat.

During the firat year, the Pack received abous $$ 100,000$ from alumni, private individuals and SU sport fans said Szombathy. The donations have increased steadily over the years. Approximately $$ 150,000$ has been received so far this year. he said.
${ }^{4}$ The Orange Pack appeals to supporters of SU sports. A pride factor and personal satisfaction help influence donations," said Szombathy"Also, we tiry to get famous alurani to help in a contribution drive. Floyd Little, Jim Ringo and Jim Brown continue to correspond with alumni and individuals," he added.
Major corporations also contribute to the Orange Pack, Szombathy said.
"Crouse, Hinds and the Carrier corporation have made substantial contributions to the Manley Seating Campaign (the addition of 1,300 geats in Manley Field House), as have wealthy individuals," Szombathy said.
The Orange Pack is currently a low-key fund raising program which may make increase in the future, but right now the need is not imperative.
"Contributions to the sport program will continue as long as the program is successful, said Szombathy. "And the program will be successful as tinue. It's a lovely circle!"

The alumi Association association ernploys three methods in soliciting contributions for the university, according to: Jim Seitz, Annual Giving dírector and Eleanor Ludwig, Director of Alumni Programs.
"They are direct-mail, ${ }^{\text {a }}$ group of approximately 76,000 alumni are known to our office. Names and addresses are on Names and addresses are on year," Seitz said. "Phomathory year," seitz said. "Phonathons contact all residents

The third type of solicitation is personal solicitation. Membera of the alumni association have certain key contacts which are personally solicited. Usually these contacts contribute $$ 500$ or more, according to Seitz.
Individual contributions can be dual credited through corporations, usually for tax purposes. Both the corporation and individual gets credit from the association, Seitz axid.
A matching gift program also helps contributions, said Seitz. "If an employe donates a minimum of $$ 100$ or a maximum of $$ 1,000$, the corporation for which he works matches his offer."

The alumni association usually deals with undergraduate alumni (graduates with B.S., B.A. degrees). However, "friends of the university are contacted when they have past records of donations,". Seitz said. According to records, 24,193 contributions, totaling $$ 1,750,992$ were recei ved during the 1975 '76 fiscal year.

Alumni of the univeraity who have become celebrities have not contributed substantially to the association, according to Seitz.
"Suzanne Pleshette (the costar of "The Bob Newhart Show") probably wouldn't give a dime," said Seitz. "She Ginches when she's called the 'Syracuse Kid' on 'Hollywood Squares.'
The monies received pays for SU's utilities, maintenance, salaries and various other university expenditures, Ms. Ludwig said.
The association sponsors programs, trips, movies, dances and many other activities in an effort to raise money.
'These various activities help to shape a person's attitude towards us," Seitz said. "We influence their decisions to contribute while gaining additional funds for us.
Large and small corporations; local and national corporations; wealthy, private individuals; blue-collar individuals; alumni; non-alumaverage Joe, contributed $$ 48,225,000$ to Syracuse University's annual payroll in the fiscal year 1975,76. The future promises more.

Operators to receive new student listings

By Claudia Estelle
"Sorry, we don't have a list yet. You car try icity in formation if it's an offcampus phone, or try the dorm's man deskif it's a campus number." University information operators have been helpless in their efforts to get students in touch with each other. The reason is simple: operators will not have a list of studen telephone numbers until Friday-

The students have until then (Friday) to say ' $I$ don't want to have my phone number in the campus direc tory," said John E. Meagher, director of telecommunications.

Operators "were originally supposed to have the lists on the 13th," Meagher said, "but thë registrar let something out to the effect that students had until the 23 rd . (to request until the ${ }^{23 n d}$ (to request Syracuse University to numbers), so that's what we numbers) to live with
"As students have been signing up for individual telephone ing up for individual telephone," Meagher said, "their service, Meagher said, their chief operator."
Students who live off-campus and have filed their pus and have filed their telephone number with SU air registration will have theirnumbers released to the campus operators on Friday as Off, Meaghier said.
Off-campus students who have not registered their telephone number with the university can call the campus operators at 423-1900.

A rare chance

Their letters arrive almost every day here; some hand acrawled, some yped; some bright, even witty, and some tinged with a despair one canno help but feel in every word. They come from many different places and people, but they all say pretty much the same thing.

Please write me.
They are letters from prisoners. People who cannot move or speak freely with friends or family, as we do. People whose only links to the "real world", outside prison are"the letters they receive from someone. Anyone.
"I have no one to correspond with
II have no family
Life here is very lonely
"Life here is very lonely
The Daily Orange receives dozens of letters like these every year. As in the past, we are keeping letters and addresses of prisoners in a file, and members of the university commonity interested in corresponding with a prisoner can obtain a mame and address at the DO, 1101 E. Adams St., Syracuge, N.Y. 13210.
But, why write a prisoner? Certainly it's not an obligation for us to correspond with these lonely strangers. But as a friend of ours suggests, it is one of those rare chances to make someone else happy. That alone makes it worthwhile.
"Love and peace," one of the more recent letters was hopefully signed. This is an opportunity to give some.

More time for Maloney

It was whispered by fans listening to the radio broadcast from Corvallis as Syracuse lost to Oregon State two Saturdaya ago.
It was sung with gusto in the atands last Saturday as SUwas getting badly beaten by North Carolina State.

It was advocated in print by Monday'a Syracuse Herald-Journal in bold headlines on their editorial page.

What were they all saying?
"Goodbye Frank.
Frank Maloney that is. Syracuae Univeraity"s head football coach is the man who in responsible for answering to the Syracuse community when his team is beatan. And, because of the nature of coaching, he is the man who is given litile or no credit when hia team is victorious. He is the man who embodies SU football.

Whose legitimacy?

To the ediftor,

As a graduate gtudent in the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Com munications, I have been operating under the impression that the faculty have been trying to teach responsible journalism. After the publication of the Sept. 16 DO ax ticle, "Legitimacy of GSO come under question" and accompanying editorial, 1 must come to one of thre conclusions: (1) Scott Rohrer and David Abernethy have never taken a class in journalism at Newhouse; (2) both of the aforesaid "jour nalists." as a matter of personal policy, ignore the basic precepta taught in the school; or (3) these basic precepts of responsible, well researched "investigative journalism" are not taught here. I cainot serioualy consider valid the last of the three; therefore, either Rohrer and Abernethy are not journalists or and Abernethy are not jov
The DO article Friday was rife with blatant disregard of even the With blatant diaregard of even the most banic precepts of good inves tigative reporting (which I assume is legitimacy of GSO is under quention; this is also put forth as a main point in the atory. Yet nowhere in the story does it mention who is doing the questioning. It appeara it is the DO rather than responsible members of the graduate community, that is do ing the questioning and trying to anawer the

The article quotes Peter Baigent director of student affairs, and Melvin Mounts, vice-president for student affairs, as saying they cion't know how the GSO came into ex istence: it stops there. The correct and full history of GSO is readily available if you looik in the right places. That is the job of a good reporter - to bit the right places first I gained acceas to thein formation which had "faded away" after about two minutes of searching in the GSO office.
The article dredges up an affair which was thought settled last spring and which in rightly called in the editorial "a demogogic campaign." It is obvious that, with no real background into the purpose and conduct of the petition campaign the reporter pulled out the DO files on GSO and included mome choice verbiage in his story without an ade quate update - except to mention the patition compaign died quietly for lack of gupport and lack of any for lack of support and lack of any teal leginimacy ikselk. The campaiga was motivated by an intra-GSO political clant and serious ques Gina g of an interpretation of the GSO constitution. The political fac tions are either gone or leas traculent this year and the GSO constitution is undergoing reviaion this fall. The GSO has risen to the occasion and is tidying up its own constitutional problem.
I don't think any graduate otadent who has bothered to check into GSO and study its actions is worried abont illegitimacy of the organization. It appeara that it's only the worry of two very umin formed undergraduate journalists who haven't bothered with such trivial thinge as facts or research and who nimply want to shake the tree to see what falls out.

I believe the DO has done everyone - especially the graduate students and GSO - a great disser vice with its hasty and ill-planned "expose." It may" come close to fulflling its new obligation to the univerwity commonity by writing ar ticles on the history of GSO and SA and by striving to improve ite trach record on coverage of legitimate raduate student concerns and by doing both objectively.

Student housing demand raises off-campus rents

By Daniel F. Brown Student competition with local residents has increased the demand for apartments in the Syracuase University area. leading to higherrentsand displacing local families, ac cording to David S. Michel, commissioner of the Sýracuse Department of Community Development.
The trend toward students living off-campus does cause some hardships to the com"although I wouldn't advocate forcing all students to live on carmpus."
The university maintains no records on the number of records studen living in apartments but Patrick T. Terenzini, director of research for the Office of Student Affairs, said about 40 Student Affairs, Baid about 40 per cent of suduate and undergraduate graduate and undergraduate students choose to liveoff-campus. Subtracting the estimated number of persons commuting or in university or Greek hous ing from the total number of full-time graduate and undergraduate students, it can be estimated that about 5,400 students lived in area apartments during the spring 1977 semester,

Jean Crawford, assistant director of the Office of Residential Life (ORL), cited privacy, economics and. in creased control of one's en vironment as three major reasons students choose to live off-campus.

It does provide students a place to live for 12 monthis a year," Crawford said, "but it's cheaper only in terms of food."
She said rents in this area are higher than in other areas of the city, although rent is often less than the price of a dorm room. Any savings made in monthly rentare usually absorbed by winter heating costs and other utility bills, Crawford said. Depending on the particular lease, however, a landlord may pay heating n land for land development of the ning Department, aaid, "It's been traditional" that students pay higher rents in the univeraity area than they would in comparable housing elsewhere in the city.

Charles Ladd, section chief-

"The landlord is going to try and get as much ale possible from anyone he rents to," said Ladd. "Often students are willing to spend more than an average family would becanse their parents are paying the rent." This usually results in local families being forced to seek housing in more af: fordable areas, he said.
Ladd said the profitable student market for apartments has, over the years, provided economic incentives to convert many owner-occupied homes to student-occupied housing by either renting housing, house or breaking it up into house or breaking Ialier apartments.

Ladd said no comprehensive people in the SU ares that in people in the su area that in recent years have applied for zoning variances to convert family homes into smaller apartments. From the data he has seen, however, Ladd said be believes there have been more requests in the university area for this kind of variance than elsewhere in Syracuse.

According to Ladd, if several houses on a block are allowed to be converted to student apartments, some other area residents will also decide to sell out. "It scares people in the neighborhood sometimes," he said, "but it's not necessarily a bad thing.
Michel said an unfortunate side effect of the increasing numbers of apartments is the increased deterioration of buildings. Absentee-owned property is usually not as well kept as owner-occupied property, he said.
Carmen S. Melero, a housing olanner for the Syracuse Department of Community Development, said this is bevelopment, "there is no continuity from year to year. The student is a yery transient type of is a vent."

According to Melero, most students do not invest their timeor money in major repairs or renovations in apartments as they feel it isn't worth it for the length of time they will live there. Landlords are also there. Landlords are also aware of the high turnoverrate and are reluctant to perform costly renovations for short-
"Form the kind of lifestyle the student has, he needs a high performance type of unit," Melero arid. "These housen were designed for a different kind of use and many are now suffering from overuge.'
*Especially aince the landlords are probably getting a good buck, the city must be aggressive in enforcing the housing code in the area." Michel said. "Landlords in other areas of the city might have a real lack of money to bring all of their buildings up to code specifications. I doubt that those in this area can make the same claim."

Michel said that the construction costs will be great, "but the demand is so great and the rents they can charge are so high, students charge are so high, students of the population that can afford it."
Michel said an enrollment decline in the university could cause $S U$ to consider tightening its regulations regarding off-carnpus living, In its attempt to keep dormitories full, however, Michel said SU will have to make dorms more attractive.
"The university is trying to upgrade its housing so that it is more preferable," Crawford said, citing improved furnishings, new programs and sophomores living on south campus as examples.
She said ORL, will conduct a survey to see what students want in university housing. "Whether we can provide what they want, I don't know," Crawford said.." "Ultimately, any improvements would have to be paid for by the students."

For another view of the university, the Record appears every Thursday.

The Record is usually viewed as the administration's answer to the DO, but associate editor Lincla Gordon says that view is outdated.

Although she said the newspaper was conceived in 1970 as an altemative to the then-radical DO, it now tries to present a more balanced picture of the university.
"I think you get a complete view of the campus by reading both (the DO and the Record)."
The Record includes univeraity announcements, appointments and promotiona, a campus calendar which lists the following week's events on campua and profiles on prominent or retiring faculty members.

Intramural alternatives

Tennis, football, golf anyone?

To Found By Brad Bierman
To round out their. college lifestyle at Syracuse University, many students turin to intramural sports and campus recreation as a form of physical education. Each year there is an extenaive range of aports to choose from, and 1977-'78 is no exception.

During the fall semester there will be nine team sports for men (golf, tennis, softball, bowling, floor hockey, table tennis, touch football, cross country and indoor soccer) and five individual participation sports offered (tennis golf, table tennis, handiball and bowlings).

In the spring the team sport choices are volleyball. sking, swimming, nife, water polo, track and Field, horseshoes and the most popular sport: basketball.

Last year over 190 teams competed in the three basketball leagues, with play through the entire semester at Archbold Gym.

Individual sports in the spring are: foul shooting, squash, racketball, badminton and paddleball.

For the women in the fall there is a choice of indoor soccer and volleyball in team sports. and solf. tennis, cross coumtry and table tennis for individuale.
In the second semester basketball is the only team sport, but individual sports are: skiing, squash, swimming, badminton, foul shooting, racketiall and track and field.

Campus Recreation Director Nick Wetter is proud of what his department offers and is annually optimistic about student participation.
"An arual, I expect a good year ahead of us, and I was especially pleared with the tarnout of girla at their organizational meeting last Thursday. We have a very dedicated worker in our graduate assistant. Nadine Chase, and I can see a more organized women's program in the future.

Tickets can be obtained today, tomorrow and Friday for Saturday's football game at Archbold Stadium egainst the University of Washington. Ticket offices at Archbold Gym and Manley Field House will be open from 10 anm. until $4: 30$ p.m. all three days.
Tonight at $7: 30$ the $S U$ soccer team plays Brockport State under the lights at Coyne Field.

By Drew Schwartz

Very few people attended last year"e home matches of the women's volleyball team; perhaps they equated Gym A of the Women's Building to Philadelphia's HellevaeStratford Hotel home of legionnaire's disense).

Whatever the explamation, it can be eanily conduded that a large portion of the.SU strdent body was unaware of how succerstiful the wornen were last year. Wespite their best season ever, the efforts of the aquad were virtually anknown.
The "No-Names" of volleyball are now diligently preparing for the upcoming season"s opener on October 4. They will try to exceed their accomplishments of last season, which included a 24-8 record and a third place finish in the New York State Amateur Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Championshipa.
"I've reatly been impressed in the practices held so far Goldbaxd said. Im contident that we'll do as well as we didlast year, if not better:
The reason for Goldband's optimism stems from the fact that there are seven returning players. Combined with a talented group of freshmen, it adds up to a aquad that, aceording to Goldbandi, "has a akill level which is 50 per cent better than last year"苜*
In addition, team members have been working hard in practice and their attitudea have been especially good. It appears that the abulitues of the 15 team members are approximately equal. For this reason, Goldband is stressing the team concept of play and bas not yet named a captain. Maybe the roster's mix of seasoned players and freshmern providing fierce competition for starting spots will be another benefit to the team.
Goldband has high hopes for this year'a edition of the women's volleyball team. Her goal is to better last year's rank of third in the state and tenth in the Eastern-Regional Championships.
The atate toumament will beheld Nov. 11 and 12 . If Syracuse is guccessful in the states, they will then be invited to the regionals, which take place the following week. Thia encounter features top-night competition, since only 16 colleges participate in an area which stretches from Maine to Washington, D.C., and as far west as Pennsylvania. If the Orangewomen place firistor second in the regional skirmish, they will be eligible for the secondional tourriament.
Whatever paychological barrier prevented volleyball loyalists from attending last year's games has now, with any luck, been from atcencing last years zames has now, with any inck, been "everybody loves a winner" - will go down the tubes.

Disregarding the calibier of the teams and the feelings of the teams and the feelings of the fans, Archbolds face has also changed. The six-and-a-third-acre area has changed from the time excavation began in April 1905 to the recent demolition of the colonnade above the main entrance on Irving Avenue.
The idea for the concrete stadium was originated by Chancellor James $R$. Day, according to Syracuse University sports information files. The arena's plans were done by two School of Architecture professors, Revela and Hollenbeck. A farge natural hollow near the site.

SU football: the fading of expectation

The hopes and expectations for a While the team was fast in Syracuse. last week, there was still'time for hope. So everyone makes it to the first game So everyone makes it to the irst game before the illuaion fades; the chartered bus loads from Auburn; the wellto-do magazine fine-line sketches of elegance as they hold their "tailgate parties" toasting each other with fashionable mixed drinks. The father with his two young sons toting orangeseat cushions and binoculars. And the studentis with the wine sacks, beer, schanpps, and the yellow rain slickers folded over transform the crowd into bright dabs of yellow mixing with the reds and greens in an impressionistic painting.

Those whose business it is to know such things say Syracuse must have a winning season before enough money to build a new stadium can be raised. Without a new stadium, they say, this could be one of the last seasons for footcould.

Despite all the criticism of football's violence and dependence on "big time money." it would be a loss to the camus if this is one of the last seasons. Because Syracuse University grew up with football.
In the early days football was Syracuse's pride and passion. Chancellors championed its cause, fraternities vied to outdo each other with signs taunting the opposition. In the fall of 1907, 70 years to the day next Saturday, Syracuse opened at home in the newest stadium in the country -a Aift of Stan Syracuse got its achool colors from football. The original colors were pink and blue and the team was known as the "pink tide" No self respecting player will clad himself in pink, but a few shades darker - crimson red and they all clamor for it. Orange was as close as Syracuse could get.
Fierce rivalries developed in the sport, back when everyone knew their school's alma mater. One sleepy Monday morning in 1920 students were 80 excited that Syracuse had beat Pittsburgh at an away game that they ran from their classes and formed a sity Place Etory dance down Univer sity Place. Even Chancelior Day, in full year, that the games had to stop. There are still signs of it on cempus, behind Bray Hall.

Most of all, football gave Syracuse a national reputation. Names like Jim Brown, Floyd Little. Ernie Davis and Larry Csonka keptSu in the headines. And it was around football that Syracuse experienced the growing pains the whole country was facing in pains the whole country was facing in the late 60a in dealing with racism and equal opportunity. In 1970 Coach Ben racial discrimination in selecting players. Near the end of his career, one charge was said to have been valid. The football recruiting program.has yet to recover.
Today, with its arcade torn down for safety and its crumbling structure pat-ched for another seson, the comched for another season, the cornparision between the stadium and the state of the football program forms a glaring analogy.
Syracuse has let go of other sports like baseball, the sport that lured Stephen Crane here in 1891. But footuniversity and its autuma afternoons when it. shows some of ita low tspirit.
In that end last Saturday, it was 38-0 their favor. "There was never any doubt, one student said standing among the litter of bottles in rapidly emptying Aurchbold:
The experts have zaid it for years: - Ford to find vehimpion fodthill teame af-except for Notre Dame. It is this exception that keeps SU and a dozen other universities hoping that if Notre Dame can do it, so can they.
But hopes for a great football season fade fast in Syracuse. With the team 0-2 in games "they had to take to have a winning season" the tailgate partiers Tich upper class from Cazenovia and days raking leaves in an auturan setting most of us think exista unfounded in our memory. At 0.2 , maybe 0.3 it is hard to believe this year will be different.

If a new stadium is to be built, it is this group that will have to contribute. The team belongs the most to them and the rich alumni. This is where SU erred in trying to persuade the city to pay for a stadium. It is not the inner-city mid-die- and lower-class Italians, Greeks and blackes who would use a stadium they would be taxed for, but their rich neighbors.
If this is to be one of the last years with a sport this university grew up with, no one knows it better than those reteran: fans decked out with seat cushion, poncho and hip flask. It is these fans who can remember the last time a Syracuse Univeraity football team was mational champions - 1959 The same year the current freahman class was born.

She added that it will give students the opportunity to apeak with more agencies and get a better idea of the career options available in Syracuse.
In view of last year's similar project, Attridge anticipates the coming event to be more of a success. Approximately 150 students attended last January's one night program. Since this year's event will be held for a longer period of time, outside, and in nicer weather, Attridge is optimistic about the turnout. She noted that all 50 agencies left last year's fair with a list of volunteers.
An unexpected result of last year's program was that representatives from the agencies got acquainted with one another for the first time. Attridge said although many of the companies were involved with similar lines of work, few really knew what the other was all about.
"It was exciting for us to see," she commented. there will also be eight cultural and information. groups available to students. Some of the groups represented will be the War Memorial, the Civic Center, Salt City Playhouse and the Everson Museum

Staff separates Mount Council

By Mike Christman Mount Council, the governing body for Flint and Day Hall residents, is being abolished, to be replaced by separate councils for the two dormitories. Flint and Day will plan meparate activities and dorm policies, meeting together periodically to plan Mount activities.

The decision to split came at a Mount Olympus staff meeting before the fall semester began, according to Bill Charters, Day Hall resident adviser (RA).
He said the staff was concerned with the difference between the number of, freshmen living in the two dorms. Flint Hall is about three-quarters freshmen, and Day Hall is about onequarter freshmen.

The focus of the split is that the halls have increasingly different intereats. There was always this controversy on who was spending the money," said Panla Kosin, Flint dorm director. "It was not a staff decision. it was a staff discussion."
"There was a matter of a lost constitution and problems from last year," Flint RA Janet Schmitt said. "There was a definite need for reportedly attended the forum reorganization.
Last year's Mount Council President Rion O'Hanley was charged with forging about $$ 946$ in Mount Councilchecks. O'Hanley pleaded guity to a reduced charge of disorderly conduct. Since he was granted a conditional discharge charges againist him will be dropped if he is nnt arrested within one year.

An informational oheet explaining the problems of last year's council was distributed to Mount residents and discussed at floor meetings. An open forum was held Sept. 11 to discuss the format of a new council. About 150 persons
"The split council was a virtually unanimous decision of everyone there," Charters said. Charters said Day Hall has already elected its foor representatives, who will meet on Sunday to draw up constitution.

"Murder by Death" was an experimental departure for Simon which obviously failed. Give an audience the light, frothy comedy/melodrama of The Odd Couple" or "The Prisoner of Second Avenue" any day - at least it won't need to take NoLoz or Pepto-Bismol to sit through thern.

'Hope' has intellectual appeal

By Jon Van Duyne They're not the Beatles. Months after Klasta's first album appeared, there was speculation across the country that klaatu was becredly Rumors ran rampant, and teary-eyed Beatle fans cheer fully put the Klaatu album on their turntables. All the controversy sent the album soar ine up the charts.
Hope, Klaatu's
album, doean't sound like the Beatles, but it doesn't mound like any other group's music either. Some groupa like Blue Oyster Cult or Kiss feebly attempt to project a surrealistic, occult inage Strip away the theatrics and one finds ordinary degenerates trying to earn a buck.
An strange an the group is, the music in oven stranger, but chis doesn't infer inbehind the exoup is obvious.

The mugicians employ instruments that range from the Russian balalaikas to the harpsichord and Moog synthesizer.
The songs are an excursion through jazz, heavy metal, classical symphoniea, Elizabethan music, space rock, opera and themea that could have accompanied a 1930 shorror show or The Wizard of Oz. Such diversity can't be labeled "easy listening": But the diversity does make it enjoyable.
"Whe first side begins with "We're Off You Know," a cosmic ragtime piece that is reminiscent of the cantina band in "Star Wara" "Madman," and "Long Live Politzania" incorporate a diversified, dignified blend of heavy metal and clasaical overtare.
The second mide is an extended composition about a lighthouse keeper in deep space. The songs are al interrelated and the music is an exotic, fowing masterpiece The last song, "Hope," is the only song that bears any sem blance to a Beatle work. The track sounda very much like a George Harrison composition from his "All' Things Must Pasa" period.

Unfortunately, the lyrics don't match the musical ex cellence. At times the rhythmic pattern is forced, producing such gems as: "In our warp when time and space are one/We can no longer see the sun/In fact there's mothing there for us to see/For light is nowhere near as fast as we."

But the occasionally inane lyrics don't detract from the album's overall intellectual appenl.

It's possible that Klaatu may be gmong the sroupa to Ell the intellectual void left open by the Beatles. There's always Hope.

Student Center changes more than name

By Comine Hardesty

 formerly the Stadent Activity Center - has changed more than its name.During the summer, the Of. fice of Student Affaira division of student activities officially took over the operation of the center from Food Service, hiring a new manazer and staff and replac ing virtually all of the equipment in the buildirig.
"The axrangement we had lagt gemester was a temporary one," Ulysges J. Connor, director, of student activities, explained. "We used their (Food Service's) bervices as operators of the Student Center until ure of the Student Center until we could organize ourselves to maintain the operation.

Part of the transifer of the center's operation was the replacement of acting manager Dick Jones, a Food Service employe, with Craig Brush. Brush is the manager of Jabberwocky. a coffeehouse located beneath Kimmel Din ing Hall. Brush said Connor asked him to do both jobs
"baaced on my experience at Jab."
Althongit he says it in not easy, Brush plans to remain manager of both places indefinitely.

The major changes ao far have been to "put more center" Brush gaid into the center, Brush said, "When it opened, everyone shought it Was a very pretty structure but it was sterile. it needed Bomething to iven it up." Brush said he believes the new furnishings, graphics and decorating the bar a little bit" have made the center more atmactive to studenta.
The center's new fumishings include tables amd chairs for the study lounge and Seats for the study lounge and Rame and coffee tables placed throughout the building. Ae cording to Connor, the only piece of furniture left in the building from last year is a $$ 2,000$ couch in the first floor lounge.

Comnor said the new furnishinge are "aboolutely necessary" because "all of last year's furnishings were on oan from Drumlins, a country club owned by the university. Grush baid wom tor the arnishings were on loan forn other places in the university, ncluding the Faculty Center. All of last year's game machines were aiso replaced. hail machines has three pinbail machinea, a television video game, a pool table, a foosbail table and ajukebor. A television should be deliverred any day now, Connor seid. Entil then, one from the Faculty Center is being used. The Student Center still acks kitchen equipment. A charcoal broiler, a sandwich unit, a dishwasher, shelving. coolers and freezers are all on order and were supposed to have been delivered, but "every vendor has lot us down so far," Steven K. Gauly, assistant director of etudent ac tivities, said. "Their latest deadline, sad we're going to hold with it, I hope, is Oct. 1."

Gauly arid the kitchen is planned to open Oct. 3 .
Last year the center borrowed kitchen equipment from Dramlims and Frod Service.

Lockers similar to those found in bus stations and airports have been installedion the second foor of the center. For 10 cents, a student can store belonginge in the locker for up to 24 hours. Connor said the lockers were bought because they are "always available to anyone who needs them and at any particular moment."

Connor estimated the cost of outfiting the $$$ tudent Center was "liess than $$ 20$-or $$ 30,000$ " and corered by "funds made available by the university ${ }^{* }$ The money will be mepaid through Student Center's proceeds or profita, Connor aid.
The major change planned for the center now is in its ment.
Brush said he plans to improve the variety and quality of the menu. He is also planning "a few specials," such as a Saturday brunch. "The prices will be the sampe as last year," he added. "We"re gear. ing it for a student budget."

Connor said he doubted very beriously" that drink prices would belowered. Brush axid he belleved the center was "undercutting" moat of their competition "when you consider the equipment and facilities."
"Students shouldn't expect drink prices to be the same an at the Orange," he said. "We pour a good drink."

Connor said the center could accornodate groups for special functions as receptions added that catering *might be an area for looking to in the future
"We've got to be careful not to overextend ourselves," Brush said. "I firmly believe if You try to do 200 many thinge, it won't come out to anything." The center has a board room which any gtudent group can use for meetings. Arrangements for the use of the room can be made throngh the Office of Eventa Schednling, in Wataon Thestre, 423-4240.
The Student Center will be open this year from 9 a.m. to 1 open this year from 9 a.m. to 1

State coalition lobbies for student interests

By Miaryanin Jacob
We make an impact" in the state legislature for students, sid Julie Mayne, SU representative of the Independent Students' Coallition (ISC).

ISC is an organization in New York State serving the interest of students in independent, privately owned colleges and universities. Once every six to eight weeks, representatives from 45 schools throughout the atate meet in Albany for executive meetings.

Two of the major concerns of ISC are financial aid and lobbying in the state legislature for measures favorable to students.
Last year, when the Higher Education Services Corporation (HESC) had a backlog of upwards of 400,000 unprocersed Tution Agsistance Program (TAP) applications, ISC got access to recorde so they could notify students of their TAP status.

ISC made suggestions and recommendations to HESC when it held meetings abliciting evaluations of a new TAP application designed to avoid problems
Aecording to Mayme, ISC's lobbying was ixsportant in the campaign to have the maximim TAP award increased to $$ 1,800$. Governor Hugh Carey has pledged his support to an increase, although the exact amount has not yet been apecified.
Lobbying for election law reform is another project of ISC. It is working to change student voter registration so students can register to vote where they go to school rather than by abeentee ballot.
ISC is also lobbying for two proposals concerning the Higher Educational Opportunity Program (HEOF), a program designed to help educationally and economically disad vantaged students.

Orie proposal calle for an increase in the amount of money for counseling aervices awarded to colleges with HEOP students. They also nupport a proposal which would give HEOP students the right to use HEOP funds when applying to graduate achools or seeking employment.

ISC has been in existence for a year and a half. Former Student Association Fresident Jim Messenger rerved an ISC executive director from January to June 1977, and helped ound the organization

Messenger cited the lack of a statewide organization representing students from independent colleges as One of the reasona for the initiation of ISC. He also said SA had received many complaints about state and federal financial aid, problems whieh could be helped by the state legislature. An organization auch as ISC would be able to reach legialators, he said.
"This year should be a good year for ISC," Messenger said, notimg that next year is an election year.
ISC is planning to hold organizational meetings in Syracuge this fall. For information, call Julie Mayne at 455-5334

"And the crowds were back. Those steel stands they put on me in 1951 were always full now and pressmen from all over the country crowded into me to see the "Pietymen" as they were known then.
"Ben went, 5-3-1 in 1957 but in 1958 it was 8-1 and a trip to the Orange Bowl. There was nothing but promise in the air then, and I felt young again. 'Then came 1959. Ah; 1959 the sweet year when promise finaily turned to reality. When opponents turned to jelly in me under the onslaught of Ben's troops. They went 10-0. They were national champions.

But from then on I've gotten old. Sure there were good teams, and that tragic Ernie Davis won a Heisman Trophy for running in me, but Ben never could get the magic back from ' 59 .

Indeed, Martin is riding a crest of popularity that seemingly won't fall.

And it's easy to see why after Wednesiay night's show at the Onondaga War Memorial. Mattin had the audience eating out of his hand. Pocket instamatics flasked and people rushed the stage throughout the show, everyone trying to get a part of the brightest star in the comedy world.
But it really didn't matter, because Martin came to them. Venturing out into the audience to "massage each and every one of you " and climbing the popcorn-littered aisles to shake hands with

"And then no one seemed to care about the defense or the offense or me at all. All they talked about was war and peace. Instead of coming to games to cheer, they sat on my old steps and smoked funny smelling cigarettes and hardiy watched the games at all. If they had spent half the energy cheering at games that they did at those protest marches everything would have been fine.

But Martin doesn't seem content to rest on his comic laurels. The show began with a shart film called "The AbsentMinded Waiter, "tarring Martin (as guess who?), Buck Henry and Terri Garr. "I want to get more into films," he said last year after his Hendricks Chapel performance. "Television tends to be too much of the same thing over a long period of time." Although the short film may foreshadow Martin's future, his on-stage performance has changed little over the years.

With a repertoire that resembles a month of Gong Shows, Martin juggled, made "fun balloon animals," played banjo, performed, card and magic tricks and "got amall."
"Comedy is not pretty," he warned his audience.
"It's great to be back in Syracuse because it's a great place to surf". he said. "It was such a big hithere that I kinda guess they took it to the Weat Coast."
And Martin seemed to be thinking ybout the West Coast or other far-away places as he mechanically signed autographs after the show. Now, long after the flashy white suit and makeup had been shelved for his next performance, Martin shyly stood in plain clothing protected by his promoter and protected by his promoter and several roadies. 1 m rumanig muttered, looking for the exits.
"Thanks for a great show, thanks for a great evening,' shouted an excited girl, clutching a small piece of paper with Martin's name on it.
"Thanks for the forty cents," he shouted back.

March on Washington

Although "MUSH" could describe what N.C. State turned SU into tast Siturday, it means what Syracuse hopes to do to Washington when the Huskies invade Archbold Stadium tomorrow. Game time is $1: 30$ p.m. Today is the fast day for students with athletic activity cards to pick up their student tickers for the game. Ticket windows at both Archbold Gymand Manley Field House will be open today from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Archbold talks  Zonka, Little & concrete

It still stands. True, it is now ired and weather beaten, and this summer an operation was performed to remove the end zone towers. But it still stands. Archbold Stadium is now roughly 70 years old and if the old concrete form could talk it old concrete form could talk it might say:
"Ah, all this talk about losses and new stadiums and new coaches is a lot of bull. Schwartzwalder was here they never talked about defeats or new stadiums. They talked that's about all that happened in me in those days.

But, let me see. 1907? Yes, 1 remember that year, but barely, very barely, just like a little kid remembers his first years.
frat fey tell me SU won the first football game it played. It was $28-0$ over Hobart. Sept. 5 all of those bigwigs there to all of those "That old Roscoe Day was chancellor then. God, he must have weighed 275 pounds! I'm glad my concrete had get or he might still be there on yard line. 10 rows up.
ard line. 10 rows up. John Archbold who Day would soak for money every so often when he wanted a contribution or a new building. He was there, and they say he brought the concrete to make me, too, but 1 never did like taking the name of that guy.

The stadium they called me then, that was all, just 'the stadium,' and it wasn't until the ' 20 s ' and " 30 s when they stuck the name Archbold in front of it. I always liked the stadium' myself, but then -I didn't have much say in the matter.

Anyway, they finally got around to finishing me in 1908. I was different then, with just the concrete part and a pretty white canopy over one part of the stands. And the game of football was different, too. Most guys wore no helmets, or if they did they were these little leather caps that offered about as much protection as the blue beanies the freshman and sophomores had to wear back sopho
"But they played pretty good football. In 07 they were $5-3-1$ in their first year in meand in in their first year in me and in the next 28 years the two losing records.
"They beat them all in those days - Carlisle, Pittsburgh, days And all the time football became more sophisticated and the padding for the players larger, and the players themselves got larger, too.
"And those players were good, too. All you hear nowadays, are the guye that played in the 50 s and 60 s Brown and Davia and Little and that fullback whose name I still can't pronounce - Zon ka? - well, anyway, there were some fine boys playing back in what you call the Stone Ages.
"Guys like Joe Alexander and Jack McBride and Pappy Waldorf and - ah - what the hell? No one has ever heard of these guysanyway, and no one cares either.
"Bid you know that in ' 15 Syracuse played 12 games and gave up only 16 points (and only 16 first downs)? And they had a defensive line that year which in total weightadded up to about half a ton. Just like they do now a ton. Just like they do now.

But what's the use Everyone nowadays wants to hear about the 50 s and 60 s . Schwartzwalder liked Ben Schwartzwalder. He took over in 1949 gfter we'd had 6 straight losing gensons. The crowds were getting smaller and intereat in me was dying. But by 1952 we were playing Alabama in the Orange Bowl "For some reason I always liked Gentle Ben. He always seemed to me to be like a block of granite, and his players were just like him - tough through and through. No fancy plays for him, no double reverses or flea flickers where half the guys on the field don't even know what team they're on. No sir, he was tough and he had a tough offensiveline, and they used to. grind their opponents into my grass.
"And they won, often, very often.

Everybody thinks that all went fine and dandy with Jim Brown. He was the first of those great running backs everybody hears so much about, but he really wasn't nothing until he was a senior.
"He drove Old Ben crazy that year. I think it was ${ }^{4} 56$, because he came back so improved from his junior year. that he really messed the offense up. He kept getting to the holes faster than the blockers would open them up. But he was great and the team: went 7-1 and just loist the Cot ton Bowl by one point to Texcas

Washington in town

Will the Huskies chew the Orange?

By Mike McAlary
These are the times that try fan's souls.
Syracuse is (gulp) playing a game of foothall this Saturday and the moment of impending disaster or possible exial tation is upon us.

This week's crisis is the University of Washington Huskies.
The Huskies ( $1-1$ ) are not exactly hot dogs, but then they'renot sick puppies either. They areled by a very capable quarterback in Warren (Reverend) Moon and by some even more capable run ning backs in Joe Steele and Ron Gipaon. Steele, the more durable of the two, has gained 126 yards this year on 29 carries

When Moon takes to the sky, he has proven himself to be one of the better passers in the Pacific Eight. He has hit on 19 of 37 attempts for 220 yards and one touchdown. On the receiving end of those passes 11 times has been flanker Gary Briggs, a sophomore who red-shirted last year with a shoulder separation Moon's other star is "Spider" Gains, a junior with blinding (9.6) mpeed in the 100
On defense the Huskies lack the big bite. They have already given up. 672 yards-against their opponents this season. Their gigen up problem is an inexperienced line. Only one senior, team captain Dave Browning, holds a btarting role. Browning, the captan Dave Browning, holas a Btarting roshingtow team. He right tackie, is the tallest player on the Washington team. H stands 6 amparatively speaking. Juniors Michael Jackeon, John Borley and Willey Galoia all have a year's experience at the Kerley and Willey
The Huskies secondary is the most solid part of the Washington defense. All four starters from last year's team have Washington defense. Al four biarters from returned to play this year. Senior Wayne Moses and juniors John returned to play this year. Senior Wlaynemoses and giviorsonly Edwards, Nesby Glasgow and Kyle two touchdown passes this year.
Syracuse, hardly a Clockwork Orange of late, should have at least a chance of defeating the Washington team. If it's not even close, as in the case of last week's 38-zip shellshocking by North Carolina State, then the Orange are in truly sad shape.
Speaking of sad shapes, Mandel Robinson, who had hoped to start this week after injuring himself in the Oregon State game, is a doubtful entry again this week after injuring his right leg in practice this week.

Senior Bob Avery, who sprained his knee in the N.C. State game is a doubtful starter, as is linebacker Chris Shaffer who bruised his right thigh. Freshman Dennis Hartman and Art Monk are the probable starters in the Orange backfield. Bil Hurley, who was of his form last week with a case of the flu and leg bruise, will be back in the quarterback slot this week. Thns far this season Hurley is the team'e leading rusher with 82 yards and has co

Frank Maloney, the center of much attention lately, has decided to stay with his original starters on both offense and defense and has not gone hog-wild with a new shakeup in his team. Many of Maloney's players have interpreted this as a vote of confidence in them.

After last week's game, Maloney admitted that he didn't see much that impressed him and even apoke in pastoral tones when he said, "I'm not down on our kids. They are withit. I feel bad for he baid. 1 told them they were a better team than they played today."

We'll see about that on Saturday.

Students rally to protest alleged DO anti-Semitism

By Dick Stirba
About 10 students rallied in front of The Daily Orange newspaper office Fridiay to protest what they called "blatant anti-Semitiam" and "bad taste", on the part of the newspaper's editors.

The protest centered on the responsibility of the editors in printing a letter to the editor proming a letter to the edior Wednesday's DO..
Martin Shapiro, editor of Sabra, the Hillel publication, called the letter "an open mockery" of Hillel adviser Rabbi Milton Hi Elefant and of Jewish dietary laws.
In the letter Alfredo urged a boycott of classes based on the pronouncements of "the Most High Rev. Milton Jeraffe" and requested all observers of the Sturrealist Church of Arnerica holiday "to refrain from the use of any whipped non-deary toppings and from performing any and all bodily functions during the Holy. Holidays."
Shapiro criticized the indgirent of the DO editors in choosing lettera to print on the newspaper's editorial page.

Aryeh Cohen , a graduate jouryahlomem, madezt and spokesmann forythe demonertatoris, told reportiors "we felt this letter was in bad taste." Cohen said the letter "blatantly ridiculed our spiritual leader."

Cohon asid he was asking Jim Naughtom, DO editor in chief, for a written apology to Jewinh ntadents.

While femonetratore picketed outside the office at 1101 E. Adrams St. Cohen delivered a writien statement to Naughton in the second floor newsroom. The statement wais sipaed "concerned Jwish signed and the Bayit."
The Rayit - which means "house" in Hebrew - is "a vehicle for Jewish political ac vebicie," Cohen said
The one-page statement expressed "outrage" at the prinpressed "outrage" at the prin ting of *an insulting and defamatory letter" and cited the DO for the publication of "a blatantly anti-Semitic cartoon" laat February-
The statement demanded " $a$ writton apology for the runming of the letter" and "a higher level of responsibility" from the editors.
We're, not going to apologize," Naughton Baid. "I don't feel it (the letter) is antiSemitic. We all thought it was fairly humouous. There's no one on campus above humor. rriter's viewpoint would compromise the DO's editorial page, Naughton said, adding phe 00 will print rieproint even if they are unpopular.
"That's the whole point of an editorial page," Naughton said.
Howard Mansfield, DO managing editor, said he first learned of the demonstration when Rabbi Elefant announced it at Yom Kippur eervices be was attending Gervices be was Elefant gaid "the editora of the DO are anti-Semitic ${ }^{\circ}$ and have no regard for the feelings of Jewish people on campus, sccording to Mansfield Fabbi Elefant said he did not call for the demonstration but backed the Bayit's actions "absolutely." because Naughton and editorial editor David Abernethy" encouraged those viewpoints which were of anti-Jewish and antiSemitic nature.
"I have seen them express a negative attitude toward anything Jewish," Elefant said.
Elefant called "for a sense of fairness and a sense of reapect for Jewinh tradition" from the DO editors.

Students rallied at The Daily Orange nowapaper affice at noon Friday to protatt what they celled an editorial "policy of irrest ponsibility." Although the $\mathbf{4 5}$-minute raliy had only about 10 participants, the event received wide local medit coverage.

Students may receive emergency loans

By Marilyn Kalfus
Stadents who nnexpectediy find themselves short of money may qualify for emergeney loans from the univergity, according to Frank S. Saurman, deputy director of the Ofrice of Financial Aid.

Saurman said the nonintereat, short-term loans may be granted for reasons other than emergencies, but the loans are intended to cover unanticipated expenses.
"If a student comes to school in the fall he knows he'll need a place to live, he knows he'll need books," Saurman explained. "If they don't have money for books or a place to reside, this doesn't qualify as a reasonable request. Eut we try to bend."

In addition to the requirement that atudents be registered and enrolled full-time, they must have no outatanding debt to any university office, including the bookstore, for any eemester other

To the editor, I write merely to express my enjoyrnent of the humorous letter by Mr. R.d. Alfredo

To the editor,
Regarding the recent Hillel call for a ciass boycott on Fosh Hashanah, a number of points come to mind. If the Syracuse University administration decides to adopt Rosh Hapbanah as aschool holliday, it meems to me they should adopt any and all halidays of other religious persuasions in order to preclude the posorder to preciude the pos sibility of discriminating againgt any other group. If thil course of action is tollowed, then we could expect

To the editor,
David Abernethy's editorial (DO Sept. 15 ) on the university's attitude towards of Rosh Hashanah clearly misses the point.
Though scheduled for these days, new work certainly is, and there is no way to recapture the nuances of a particularlecture, no matter how good the notes

On access

To the editor
In the DO (S.ept. 7), David Abernethy wrote an editoria headined "The Cost of Access." The article reflected a reliance on limited information sources, notably the American Council of Education and college administrations. The estimated cost of accessibiny for the pandicapped for college campurn an unown quantity due to insufficient research cive to insuificient research was projected (on the basis of was projected (on the basis of building size), ll can safely say building size), can asfely say that that figure is unreasonably high.

As part of a federally sponsored research project, my as sociates and I have studied the cost of making individanal buildings accessible and the economic benefits that accrue. Some exiating buildings can be made basically accessible with little cost. Others cost substantially more. The actual cost depends on design conditions, not building size. Furthermore, making a campus accessible, in terris of the new federal regulations, does not require that all buildings be totally accessible.

Since 1968 , all new construc. tion funded in whole or in part with federal funds -and this includes a aubatantial number of university buildings should have. been desigmed to be accessible in compliance with the Barrier-Free Act (PL $90-480$ ). New buildings can.be made accessible for less than 1 per cent of their total construction cost. If buildings built since 1968 are not accessible, since 1968 are not aceessible, there is no question in my mind universities should foot mind universinea should foot

Letter: to the editor should be typewritten, double or triplespaced on a 57 -character Line, prifferably not on erusable bond paper. We rewerve the right to edit for usauge, brevity, clarity and tagte Letterz should bi mailed or detivered to The Daily Orange, 1101 E-Adaris Sti: Syrecuise, N.Y. 15210.

As a hetedine in The Record, the ad ministration newrepaper, etated fagt week, Sacco and Vanzetzi hiave recaived. "an artietic reprive." So has the Syracuse University commanaity.
Work has commenced on repairing Ben Shahs"s tamous mural "The Pas fion of Saceo and Vameeth," witich has graced the extit wall of HBC mince 1967 . An art conservator has been hired to worl on the deteriorating mortay botween panele of the mural whilethe building and grownds arbund it ane being tonched up to be more compatible with the artwork. The repsix work is trned to coincide with the opening of an exhibition of Shann's mural work in the Joe and Emily Lowe Art Gallery this month.

We commend the university for commmenciog work on preserving Shahn' beputiful moral. By nccepting remponaibility for repairimg the work, the university indicates a willingnese to accept reaponaibility for preserving SU's artistic heritage for comind senerations of atudento.
We hope thin acceptance of rew ponsibility is to be a comprehensive one. Even as we commiend those who have given their efforts to insuring repair of the Shahn mural, we feel obliged to point out other art works on campus that have suffered from meglect as well. A notable example is Anton Refregier's mural in Wateon Theatre, now tucked behind a curtain in Symppse's studio.

SU is and should rem uin a university whose rich artistic resources provide whoyment and anrichment to pro new enjoyment and anchich the copachnew class of atudents. To un, the repair work on Shahn's mural is welcome first tep toward that goal

The controversy over 'anti- Semitism'

Editor"s note: Appearing below is a statement distributed at Friday': proteat in front of The Daily Orange offices:

The charges

As concerned members of the Syracuse University Jewish community, we wish to express our outrage over yet another display of antidewish mentiment expressed via the printing of an insulting and defamatory letter entitled "Whose Holidays?"' in Wednenday's Daily Orange.

The letter was insulting to the spiritual leader of our community and made a mockery of what to us is the holiest time of the year. By demeaning a religious group's desire to attain greater religious freedom at the university, the author of the letter has shown open contempt for our neligious beliefs.

By printing this irresponsible letter in The Daily Orange, its editors have reverted to a policy of irresponsibility. This includen the pablication of a blatantly anti-Semitic cartoon last semester during the Paulette Goldberg incident and the misreporting of other incidents involving both the Jewish and non-Jewish commanities.
The Daily Orange is a atudent publication supported by student fees. If it will not respect the religions beliefs of theme stadents, then those students shoald and will withdxaw their financial support of the paper.

We demand that the editorm of The Daily Orange isoue a written apology for the ranning of the letter and further demand that a higher level of nesponsibility be souglat by those editore.

We respect The Daily Orange's night to treedion of the preas, one of our nation's mont important rights. We demand, however, that such rights be need responsibly, not maliciously.

Concerned Jewrish students and The Bayit

The response

Most newsipapers make a practice of publishing the commentes of their readers including't those which criticize the paper. The Daily Orange follows that practice -itis part of our reaponaibility to provide an open forum for public discussion of issue for the aniversity community.

Seldom do we. reepond to much comments; generally we have our say; our readers have theirs, sind everyone has the benefit of hearing both sides. In the case of recent protest over alleged ant-Semitism practiced by the DO, however, we think it's important our readers be informed of our viewpoint.

We have been accused of being anti-Semitic by Rabbi Milton E. Elefant, in a sermon at Yom Kippur services, and by studenta in letters and in a protest Friday in front of the DO.
The Daily Orange is not anti Semitic. Its editors are devoted to maintaining objective news coverage and a fair-minded editorial policy, without resorting to religious or racial prejudice of any kind.
We were accused because we wrote editorials opposing eatablishment of a university holiday on Rosh Hashanah, while supporting the right of studenta to practice their religious convictions without academic penalty. Thope who accused us of anti-Semitism for that reason have unfortunately confused honest disagreement of opinion with religious prejudice.

We were accused because we published a letter by Mr. R.J. Alfredo which lampooned the ef. forts of ptudente to obtain a holiday on Rosh Hashanah. Both Alfredo's viewpoint and his antirical manner of presenting it caused offense to a number of students.
Such offense is inevitable. We think responaible editorial page publishes the broadest spectrum of opiniona it poasibly can, including controversial ones auch as Mr. Alfredo's. We think Mr. Alfredo has the same right to publish statements of his opinion as the protestors who picketed the DO Fridey, and whose atatement is publighed ó this page.

We do, as the protestors pointed out. reserve the fight to edit or exclude letters on basis of taste. However, that policy is intended to preclude publication of obscenity or personal abuse, not to suppress opinion. We think Mr. Alfredo's letter was fairly well executed and contributed to campus discussion contributed to campus discussion of theissue. Furthermore, no one on campus is above humor.

The tactic of crying religious oppression to combat political opposition is nothing new. It occurred position is nothing new. it occurred last spring in controversy over the Paulette Goidberg incident. It is convenient, but by no means constructive, to use empty charges of prejudice to obscure the real issues.

We sympathize with any group's efforts to protect its religious freedom, but euch efforts are connterproductive when that freedom has not been challenged. We understand the intentions of Concerned Jewish Students and the Bayit, but, in attacking The Daily Orange (or Mr. Alfredo for that matter). we feel they are off base. The Daily Orange has never, under its current leadership, opposed Jewish religious freedom. Rather, the most comprehensive discussion of anti-Semitism was conducted in the pages of the DO. The discussion was prompted by a piece-solicited by the DO and written by Dean John H. McCombe concerning anti-Semitism's roots in the Christian tradition.)

We do not seek to offend anyone, we seek only to do our job. We do not apologize for doing our job.

Symphony opens season with mixed performance  By David Koeller

Labt weekend's Syracuse premiere of John Corigliano's 'Concerto for Oboe and Orchestra" marked the opening of the 1977.78 Syracuse Symphony concert geason. Muric Director Clsistopher Keene alsoled the orchestra in keene also led the orcheatrain works by Stratuss, Mous-
The soloiet in th
The soloist in the Congliano was Philip MacArthur. the symphony's principal oboe. MacArthur, who has appeared many times with the symphony as soloxist, is a member of the College of Visual and Performing Arts* faculty.
The piece, which makes great demands on the soloist, 13 an excellent vehicle for displaying MacArthur's cońsiderable talent. The piece makes uze of the imstrument's rull range, requires excellent breath control and makes use of such devices as multiphonics - multiple pitched sounds - and, in the final movement, the imitation of Gheita - an Arabic form of oboe - by playing. the astrument without the ase of tongue or lips on the reed.
Each of the five movernents is designed to show off a different aspect of the oboe. The piece does have some interesting and exciting moments, but besides virtuosic display, the piece has little else to offer. It is not much more than oboe obligato with orchestral accompaniment.
Of note. however, are the first and last movernents. The first movement pokes fun at the ancient and solemn rite in which the oboe plays the note to which orchestra tuncs. The aboe begins by playing its A. only to reise the pitch and thereby create the tonal-tension on which the movementis based. Uaed as themes are the anpeggios and string fifths that are often heard while the orchestra tunes.

The fifth movement, the only one where the orchestra plays any substantial role, is an imitation of the Arabic folk dance. It seems out of place for such an exotic sound to be in a work that includes polyrhythrns, multiphonics and the rest of the modern devptase an Arabic flavor and captare an Arabic flavor and provides a colorful close to the piece.

Closing out the program was Moussorgsky*s "Pictures at an Exhibition." There have been many orchestrations of the original piano cornaposition, including ones by such notables as Keith Emerson arrd Ista Tormita, but it is the version by Maurice Ravel that holds the preeminent postition and which the orcheetra pexformed.

Maestro Keene*s in terpretation placed the emphasis on the rhythmic pspects of the music His accents were sharp and crisp. and the staccatos spaced. This proved to be both an asset and a liability.
$\therefore$ In the section titled "The Old Castle," his sharp accents in the bass accompaniment led to s- punchy sound that took sway from the lyrical melody of the saxohone. However in the "Hut of Baba Yaga" this zame attention to rhythw and mecent made an incredilly exciting peprormance.
F One of the best zeictions was the "Cataconinbess: where all of its inherent tension.

The climax, of course, was the "Great Gate at Kiev" where again Keene let the brass loose to create a scene of regal eplendor.
While on the whole Keene followed the acore, he did engage in one major change. engage in one major change, Goldenberp and Gchumule" Goldenberg and Schumyle" and the "Limoges," Keene inserted a restatement of the opening "Promenade." While inserting some variation of the Fromenade theme might serve as unifying force and serve to emphasize the rondo structure of the piece, a literal res tatement of the opening was a mistake. It did nothing to develop the Promenade theme, was too long and most ime portant, while a literal regportant, while a literal restatement of a Bectionis usually balance Keancs a sense of created created mbsiance and digcontinuity in the work.

Also included on the program were "The, Star Spangled Banner." the Overture to Johann Strauss's "Die Kledermaus" and, as a memoriai tribute to the late conductor Leopold Stokowski, a moving reading of Stokowski's own arrangement of Bach's "Air for the $G$ String:"

Long, cold winter predicted

As asual, it's gring to be a long, cold winter.
This winter will be longer than last year'e with normal seabonal temperiaturen. The amount of mowfall wrill be greater than usual and will be accompaniod by occasional sleet and rmin storms, according to Horace Meredith, a private consulting meteorologist in the a privata con

Meredith referred to the uanaily brief and severswinter of last year, asying that we can expect "a winter of cold spells followed by brief thaws that will linger into April. We had a very cold Docember and January and an unusually mild March and April; this year we will experience intermittently warm and cold temperatures from December through April."

The increased sleet and rainfadl predicted by Meredith will lower the anowfall average for the year, but a severe snowstorma in late January or carly Fobruary will raine the nverago above the normal amount for the area. The anticipated storm, however, will not be as devautating as the one which crippled Buffalo last winter, Meredith explained, because Syracuse is not situated as close to the Great Lakes, which intensify storma.

Lust winter's weather can be explained in termas of balance. When one of the continental United Statea has unusually warm or cold wenther, another will balance it out. It was uncommonly warm and dry in the western half of the United States so the cold weather, another will balance it out it was uncommonly warm and dry in the western half of the United States and the cold weather halror the united States so the cold weather coming down from the Arctic moved to the East, When the situation finally chapged in the West, Syracuse had warmer weather.

Despite its housing shortages, Syracuse University is giving up one of its largent houses - a 20 bed room Georgian-style mansion. situated on one-and-one-half acre grounds.

The mansion, 100 Windsor Pl. Was buit in 1928 by Hiram Weisberg, E Syracuse businessmant according to Thomas Lipa, director of the SU saal estate offica. Weisbergidonated the house to SU in 1927 on the condition that he be allowed to live there untithe ciled, Lipa said.

According to Lipa, the house includes three fireplaces, a sunroom and servants' quartars.
Lipa said the house is useless to SU because of local zoning ordinances. The mansion can only be used as a single family dwelling. (Photo by Bruce Johnson. 7

Orange clean Wash; Huskies tamed 22-20

"I think everybody had us already buried in the grave." By Mike McAlary -Frank Maloney They had truly saved it all for a rainy day.
The Syracuse University football Orangemen, a team many had listed as among the nonliving after last week, came beck to defeat the Washington Hualices 22-20 Saturday in apectacular fashion Lazarus himeslf couldn't have staged a better comeback.
An on agrain-off again rain greeted an up again-down again Orange football team that was simply as good at being good this week as they were at being bad last week.
"I don't think Ihave ever felt better in my life and I don"t think we have ever enjoyed a victory more than this," Maloney bubbled after DaveJacobs'late gamewinning field goal "Mhis team and the coaching staff have been together all year. This is a most satisfying win."
Satisfying for Maloney and company indeed, but even more important to cnlookere was the fact that the Orange really can be impressive - in a positive way.
The Orange trailed $20-19$ wath just over 4 minutes left in the game, after Washington quarterback Warren Moon had capped Syracuseline and into the end zone untouched fram the SU four But then the Orange staged a comeback that could have brought tears to the eyes.

A band on the run
Bill Hurley, the Orange quarterback, dropped back to pass on first down from his own 29 yard line. He looked longand then he looked short. Then he ran like hell. Hurley picked up 19 yards and ookedshort the ball rested on the Syracuse 48.
Freshnan Dennis Hartman, starting his first game in the Freshraan Dennis Hartmaxa, starting his first game in the Syracuse backfield, took Hurley's handoff on the next play and Syracuse backfeld, took Hurey's handoff on the next play and dove up the middle for six. Hurley dropped back again to pass, dove up the middie for six. Hurley d. Thped belooked very sick. Then he ran like hell. Hurley picked up 11 yards and the Referee marked the ball at the Washington 35 -yard line.
Hurley rolled right on the next snap and pitched to Art Monk, who was rnet at the line of scrimmage by a pack of Huskies. No gain. Maloneythen told Hurley to pata the ball, and with $2: 37$ left in the game Bill Hurley ran back to the huddle and called an option right pass play.
The junior quarterback took the snap from center and swept right. He looked left to Mike Jones and then he looked left to Rich Rosen. Then he ran up the middle . . . like hell . . . and picked up 12 yards.

On the next three plays Hurley handed off to Monk twice for five yards and to Hartman once for four. Then the Orange called time out with 35 seconds to play and Dave Jacobs ran out on the field.
Jacobs mariked his spot on the Washington 21-yard line. Then ge picked up a piece of grass and dropped itinto the wind. It blew he picked up a piece of grass and dropped it into the wind. It blew Spinney hiked it and Ron Farneski held it just as Jacobs started to put his best foot foreward. He punched through the ball with his right foot and then he watched it sail through the uprights. On the sidelines Bill Hurley was cheering like hell. So was just about everyone else in the Archbold concrete gridiron pit.

With 23 seconds left in the game Jacobs kicked off to the Huskies for the final time. They returned it to their own 25 -yard line. Two incomplete passes and 18 seconds later it was all over. The Orange had won their first game since a mainy day last October when SU beat Temple. Since then the Orange had lost six when Sh gameat.
Thaight gamea. and the Huskies, but they really didn't matter comparied to the drive. The Orange had to produce at the last moment and they did.

When it was over Maioney sat smiling and when SU Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers came into the room to congratulate him, Maloney gaid:

The Chancicllor noeded that last woek."
The Chancellor looked atamned.
But then again, a lot of people looked stunned after the game Saturday. Miracle's have a way of stunning people.

Welcome back to the land of the living.

The stardust twins

Last second magic at Archbold

By Joel Stashenko
Syracuse's starduat twins for a day stood side by side in the Orange locker room after Saturday's win over Washington. Each tried to give the other credit for the winning drive which buried the Huskies $22-20$.

I knew all we had to do was get the ball down the field," SU quarterback Bill Hurley said. -Once we got it inside their 40, , knew we had a good chance with him kieking.

Everyone was just great, the defense, the offense, the special teams," said Syracuse placekicker Dave Jacobs. "But he was the one today that was Mister Magic for us.'
It seemed to be the greatest of injustices when Washington quarterback Warren Moon bootlegged into the end zone with $4: 28$ left to cive the Hiugkies a 20-19 iead. Up to that last Huskie drive, Syracuse had played well - too well to lose.
"At that point." Syracuse football coisch Frank Maloney said, "I was sick to my stomach. i thought, 'oh, no. here we go again.' We'd played so well and then we were going to lose."
But for once they were degtined to win. Hurley's magic was truly bewitching as he moved the team 57 yards in eight plays escaping from the pockel when no Orange receivers were open, sidestepping tackiers and running. bridianty on the open feld. He took SU into sconng po pasking situation.
"We did a poor job tackling on that last drive," said Washington head coach Don James. "We knew Hiurley couldn't thxow that well, and we had him trapped a couple of times and let him out for the big gains. We knew thatif we let them get any yardage Jacobs is one of the best placeikickers in the country?
The ball was on the Wakhington 25-yard line with 35 seconds on the clock when it was time for Jacobs to become oner of the stardust brothers. He trotted on the minddy field as his "twin" Hurley trotted off One had already doge his job in dramatic fashion, the other was about to do his in an equally exciting way.
"Ron Farneski, who's the best holder in, the world, told me before the kick to keep calm, Jacobs said. "I just had to kick the ball and let the line do their job and block.'
And kick the ball he did. From a perfect suap by Steve Spinney the ball was get, from a perfect set by Farneski the ball was kicked, and from a perfect 31-yard kick by Jacobs the game was won:
"I had complete confidence in him," Matopey said. "These kinds of kicks are old hat for him. He's got ice water in his veins."

We couldn't have had more confidence in Jake," Larry King. SU defensive back; said. He's proven himself since he was a freahman here and he keepe on doing it with every game.
"I had great confidence in him." Hurley said. "He'll give you his beat shot every time, and since we were that cloge

Hey, I'll tell you," Jacobs said as he listened to this proise from the SU quarterback, "He', he man you should talk to.
Hut affer SU's diramatic win, there was magic in the air everywhere.

SA to hold voting today

By Marsha Eppolito

Elections for 125 Student Association Assembly seats will be held today from 10 a.m. to $5 \mathrm{p} . \mathrm{m}$. The assembly is the SA legislature.
An "active" assembly is expected this year, according to Rick Margolius, SA vice-president for student programs.
Assembly candidates must have a 2.0 grade-point average or better and cannot be on academic probation.

This year, two candidates were ruled ineligible because of their acadernic standing. One off-campus candidate challenged herineligibility and yesterday, was found qualified to run.

Lawrinson Hall has been highly political and thus extremely competitive in elections in the past few years, according to Hugh MacNiven, SA vice-president for administrative operations. He added that Shaw Hall operations. He added what shaw interesting to watch to see if the will be interesting to watch to see if the political activity. Officampus political activity. Off-campus competition has been weak, with candidates
Only 76 candidates will appear on the ballot in this election. The rest of the seats will be won by write-in candidates. MacNiven said 76 candidates for 125 seats is" "about average, if not above average,"
When a candidate chooses to run, he must sign a release giving the Office of Student Affairs (OSA) permission to obtain information pertinent to his qualifications. SA is notified if OSA finds a candidate ineligible.
When a write-in candidate wins, his eligibility is confirmed by OSA afterwards.

Fan spends a lifetime watching the Orange

Every time the, Syracuse University football team plays a home game they're assured of having one fan who won't leave at half time. His name is Artie tidovitch.
The 79 -year-old fan is a familiar sight along the Syracuse sidelines. At every home game he paces up sand down the sidelines ehouting as if overy play meant the game. He has been a fan of the Orangemen for his entire life.

Beinga native of Syracuse, Lidovitch was on hand when the first games were played at Archbold Stadium.
S'I remember when I was a kid we used to smeak into the stadium to see the game," said Lidovitch. "All the folice knew we would do it. but they did nothing "about it."
7 After leaving Syracuse for a short time, Lidovitch treturned to work at the university. First he was a window washer. After the opening of Manley Fieldhouse the was in charge of keeping it clean. It was here that Fidovitch got really involved with fhe football programa.

Drring his long association with SU football Tidovitch has seen both the best and the worston the Orange gridiron. He also has built up his own collection of favorite teama, coaches and players.
in on the $1959-60$ team was the' best I'vers. ever seen "play." admitted Lidovitch. "No matter who they piay played that year they always won big. It was'easy to pront for a teamilike that."
goot for a team: like that"
Colgate in 1956, 43 point performance, agringt Colgate in 1956, was the most impressive effort Lidovitch could recall. However, Lidovitch tabbed Brinie Davie and Floyd Little as the best rumping bacch: in: SU bipapry.
"Both Davis and Little were really good. I think Little was a bit faster, he could outrun anyone," he said. "But Davis won the Heisman Traphy, so youknowhe was good, too.
"Off the field they were perfect gentlemen," commented Lidovitch on Davis and Little. "No matter what the situation, either on or off the field, they conducted themselves as perfect gentlemen.'
Comparing players from one era with players from another is difficult. Lidovitch has found that the player of today has changed along with the times.
layer of today has changed aiong with the times. 50:. Right now the students don't seem to pay any attention to their team.
"I can remember when the students would always greet the team after an away game, win or lose. Now they don't care," said Lidovitch. "They don't realize it but their support means a lot to the team,' Although Lidovitch is now retired, he atill helpa out in the equipment room, at Manley Fieldhouse twice a week.
"The reason 1 come down here now is because I like young people. I love coming down here just to talk with them,': said Lidovitch." 'I would really miss it if I couldn't come down here.
Despite a bad start, Lidovitch believes this year's team will rebound the reat of the way.
"It hurta me inside to see these kids lose," admitted Lidovitch. "But they're a tough bunch of kids; Iknow that. They'Il come back, just wait and seep, they'll come back.:
How well the Orangemen do the rest of the season notone: mows for sure. However; win or lose, the Orange football team can always count on having one die-hardtan.

What SU needs: an immodest proposal

All this has prompted on the verge of a "Golden" Age."Mere renovated buildings and torn-up roads will The State University of New Yo higher education. colleges and community colleges all buit scads of Did Harvard tremble? Did Yale lower its tuition? Did Syracuae explain what "Orangemen" were? No, of course not.

Tod Porter

Will a mere football team catapult us into the forefront of the academic world? Again, I must gay no. The whole object of football is to get the ball into theiend zone. This becomes ridiculously easy if (as onebright Harvard sophomore figured outy you wait until the opposing team has left. You can then put the ball in the end zone for as often and for as long as you please.
When Haryard, and later the rest of the Ivy league. discovered this it meant; the end of taking footbal! seriously. If Syracuse really wants a good team wie should build a new stadium and then not tell anybody where it is.
Some people have argued that having a good football team (in the sense people from Nebraska and other uncolonized areas of the country define it) will the university. I also must question this. How bright can these people really be if they are willing to pay $$ 6,000$ a year to watch 22 young men fight over a pig bladder? Education is supposed to be light, truth, bladder? Education is supposed to be light, truth, nights with Shakespeare. All these people are interested in is a halffack who can wiggle his hips while running sideways.
not have it. We would be the first major university (acutally the first umiversity of any kind) to liave the weapon that President Carter personally chose for the protection of this country.
I must admit that theidea is not totally original. A student aenator at my old college once proposed that the student association buy a battleshipand thereare a few colleges in the Midwest with artillery. But we would be the first to have real nuclear-strike capability.
There are several reasons why the cruise missile is a good project. First, it is a defense project, and as the Pentagon is always telling us, defense projects are good for the economy- By the time the project reaches full production levels I guarantee there will be no unemployed nuclear engineers in the Syracure area.
Second, the cruise missile is cheap, or at least relatively cheap. A single missile only costs $$ 1$ million and this cost can probably be defrayed by hiring graduate students and professors who are up for tenure to do the work. For the $$ 35$ million the university wants to spend on improvements and renovations in the next ten years, we could have a fleet capable of attacking most of the world. It is obvious which is the more deserving project.
Third, the sheer technological achievementitselfis enticing. A cruise missile flies at less than 250 feet at 2500 miles per hour with a range of 700 miles. Sending nuclear devices through the mail would be inferior in both sheer appeal and reliability (suppose the package was returned to sender).
Finally, we could defend Onondaga Lake against any foreign invasion. The Syracuse name would be Viewed with respect bordering on awe. Members of the university administration would be sent as ambnssadors to small countries who wish to have our protection. With our growth as a major power culture protection. With our growth as a major power culture might finally come to Syracuse and we cou such renowned groups as the Sex Pistols.
See if they ever laugh at our weather again.

What SU doesn't need: big-time football

I wonder if $I$ am alone in finding offensive the editorial on footballinthe DO. In it the editor, Jim Naughton, argues the university should "market"; itself by having a "winning football team with a flashy running back." The DO states, "A nationally ranked football team attracts top quality students. And while some faculty. members are indifferent or contemptuous toward athletics, they are not indifferent toward the money itgenerates for their own salaries.'
Putting aside the ethical questions raised by the editorial, there are serious factual issues. Specifically, I challenge Mr. Naughton to demonstrate that big time football puts money in my pocket. My opinion is that it costs money, which must be riade up in other ways, such as through higher tuition or lower faculty salaries.

In reply:  Dale Tussing

I have in the pasit heard it hinted that football helps support the other sports, a proposition I find dabious, especially when all costis of the footballiprogram, and not just those Ahown in the athletics budget are taken into account. But have never before bean it count. But thave never before heard it suggested that football Gelps support suggested that football helps suppo the academic side of the university.
Mr. Naughton has argued that a nationally ranked football team attracts "top quality students." I would be interested in the evidence for this. To my knowledge, Syracuse Univergity's share of top quality students has not share of top quality students has not varied with the success or failure of our football teams. Nor is there any evidence that donations and conathlotic; program) are related: to our footbail fortunes.

While they have never so stated, the university administration evidently decided some time about six years ago to play losing, big-time football. That is, a decision was made to continue to tional opposition, but not to devote the tional opposition, but not to devote the resources necessary for consistent winresources necessary for consistent winning football. Winning football today is expensive in the extreme, which is why state schools (together with a few private schools with large external support for athletics, such as the University of Southern California and Notre Dame) consistentiy dominate the top 20. Without the support of taxpayers, SU has really very little chance of developing the winning football that was possible, for instance, in 1959 .
Six or so years ago, SU faced three choices. The same choices exist today: bal., in our a lot more money into footbal, in order to resume the winning ways of the past. This option runs immediately into.the question of where the money is to come from. SU faces chronic fiscal problems, and its faculty have not received real (i.e., inflation compensated) salary increases for six years. The administration evidently feels (and I am sure they are right) the additional costs of winning football would exceed the additional revenue thereby generated.
2. Drop big-time football. This option was rejected by the administration, probably in the main because of the prositity it certainly would have generated among focal busineaspeople and politicians, and among key trustees. On economic groundsalone, it was and is the most sensible course. 3. Continue big-time -football, but without the resources required to assure winning records. This option sure winning records. This option would continue to keep Syracuse's would continue to keep Syracuse's name on TV screens and sports pages name on TV screens and sports pages around the country. This, and not a around the country. This, and not a nationally ranked team or a "flashy running back," seems to be what the running back," seems to be what the administration feels is minimally necessary for student recruiting, fundraising and keeping downtown happy. Besides, there is always the outside chance that the kind of recruiting breakthrough Mr. Naughton prays for might in some year overcome the budget problem. to yield a winning season.
In I97I-72, an Ad Hoc University Senate Committee on Athletic Policy examined all aspects of sports policy, examined all aspects of sports policy, including the future of football. The including the future of football. The from faculty, staff; graduate and from faculty, staff, graduate and undergraduate students, trustees and alumni, was unanimous on every other issue than football - i.e., on other men's sports, on wornen's sports, and on intramurals. On the question of the future of football. half the committee took the first position (expand football resources), and half took the second (drop football). No one supported the third position. which is evidently the one adopted by the administration.
Those of us who took the second position, incidentally, pointed (among other things) to the state of Archbold Stadium, and the fact that it would soon be necessary to undertake major soon be necessary to undertake major outlays to replace or rebuild it. This was pointedly denied by the administration, in the person of Vice Ministration, in the p

All of us on the committee evidently underestimated the university's ability to continue a big-time program with less than big-time resources. No one should expect miracles from this approach.
It may now be appropriate to resume the debate. The administration may be happy with today's football program (which may not be responsible for the recent successes in undergraduate recruitment, but which evidently has done no harm), but no one else is. Those on the committee who advocated dropping big-time foothall were not "indifferent or contemptuous toward athletics, as is clearly demonstrated by our positions on other issues. We were simply convinced, as I remain convinced, that big-time football is a luxury which Syra ford.

What SA needs: tangible achievement

Student governments area dying breed. Ours is no exception.

Certainly our Student Association is nol dying in terms of losing its administrative existence: Elections are still héld, positions filled, appointments made, student fee money parceled out annually. The mechanisms continue tio function. But student government at Syracuse is dying.
It's dying because: student in: volvement and participation have fallen to levels of absurdity. Last spring an election on constitutional refprms. was voided constitutional reforms, was voided the constitutionally required five per cent. Today is election day for SA Assembly seats, and, we frankly expect voter turnout will not be much better.
The usual answer to this problem is that the effectiveness of student government is being snuffed by apathy. Such an answer conjures ficials fighting valiantly to achieve constructive goals while combatting recalcitrant administration and student apathy simultaneously.

We see the problem in a slightly different light. No doubt apathy is the excess of our decade, as thoughtless and political rage was the excess of the 1960's. But we challenge our incumbent student officials to answer this: Why should anyone care? What is SA doing that positively affects student ing that posis

New women's crew set to make big splash

By Audrey H. Lipford
"They've come a long way, baby." and now they even have varsity status. 1971, "they" (the women's crew team) 1971. they (the women's crew team) have at last blossomed into $x$ full fledged intercollegiate varsity team. Coached by Mark Lyvers, a 1977 Syracuse University praduate and four-year member of SU's men's crew team, the women rowers are in their first year of varsity competition.
"It was recognized (this year) by the university as generating enough interest to be an intercollegiate sport," Lyvers said.

Made up primarily of freshmen, the girls were literally recruited at regis tration and on the Quad during the first week of school.

We had posters up in all of the cam pus buildings," coach Lyvers said, Potential members registered, then " just came to the boathouse and start ed rowing," he said.
"There weren't really any tryouts," Lyvers pointed out. "Tryouts are people-oriented. They come to see if they like something, and if they do they stick with it. If they don't, they don't stay with it.
In addition to the freshmen; the team also consists of a few upperclassmen and transfer studentis. Most of the group, to the pleasure of Lyvers, is relatively inexperienced in rowing. "Of the 25 . to 30 giris on the team, about six or seven have rowed previous years here," he said. The rest are freshmen, and " 20 to 23 of them had never rowed before last Monday. I prefer people without any experience at all, then you can teach them everything they need to know," he said.

So far Lyvers hasn't found any real standouts on the team, but notes he has worked with the group just two weeks.
"I'm real happy with the team's progress," he said. "We have a lot of good athletes, and that's basically what I like to work with."
Since this is the team's first year, only those upperclassmen who had rowed in past years were eligible for the team's one athletic scholarship. This year's recipient is Mary Jo Darymple, a sophomore nursing major from Connecticut.

Boat rockers?
How will the newborn team fare against its more seasoned opponents? largely depends on who we race. You can have a good boat one year, but if everyone else is good that year, you don't fare as well. In another year, that same boat could beat everybody.

The women"s:rowing schedule this year includes some of the nation's top 10, such as Yale University, Radclifte College, the University of

Orange kickers booted  By Greoffifobson

ITHACA - There was good news and bad news for the Syracuse University soccer team in Saturday's game againat. Ithaca.

The good news was the Orange ended their three-game scoring drought on'cocaptain Pete Arthur's first-half goal.
The bad news was Ithaca scored twice and defeated Syracuse 2-1. It was Su's fourth straight setback aince an opening win againat Siena.
"How can you win when you take 79 shots in four gaines and scoreonly once?" SU soccer coach Bill Goettel asked.
Even worse, the goal camefrom Arthur, a fullback, and heightened apeculation that the Orange forward line left for Christmas break three months eariy:
As the first half unfolded it looked lince SU would continue its ecoreless etreak Geveral times the ball rolled tantalisingly through the lthaca goal mouth un wuched by SU. Most passes were either too short or too long, and othery were har mlessly kicked just by the Bomber goal. When Ithaca scored first at 25:20 of the argt haif on a header by Dan Bernadin, another anutout appeared in progress.
But surprisingly, the score spurred Syracues to its finetot play of the aftertion Arthur's tying goal at 31:40 came in a drive from 30 yards out, aided by a screen Grom forward Willie Geiger.

Arthur then rallied Syracuse at the other end of the field with two outstanding ndividual plays. When SU goalie Mike Weacott was drawn out of the goal lace:in the half, the senior raced to the goal mouth and blocked an- Ithaca shot toraver gure score. The hall rebounded to a Bomber in front of the goal, but Arthri kicioed the next drive away. The score was 1-1 at the half.
The second half was a completely different story. Ithaca- outshot the Orangemen $15-3$ and outplayed them in every category--The only bight spots were Weacott and freshman midfialder Faisal Ahmed

'Average' turnout yields full assembly, several ties  By Marsha Eppolito  Pauline Mojeiewicz, Wendy Paul Leighton Richardson  rison, Peter B. Muller and Ar-

With parital results in from yesterday's Student AsSA officials expect to fill all 125 geats by Thursday. SA has "more names than seats" because of widespread ties, according to Hugh MacNiven vice-president for ad-vice-president for

The 8.1 per cent turnout was considered "about average," as 896 voters were cast out of an approximate 11,000 combined SU and College of Environment Science and Forestry undergraduate enrollment. Results will not befinal until all winning writein candidates can be contacted. The confirm winning write-in candidates' qualifications before victory is considered official. Assembly representatives must have at least a 2.0 grade point average and must not be on academic probation.
According to SA officials, no write-in candidates defeated declared candidátes.

By. Martta Rose

We are in the midist of $a$ communications revolution. The mass media surrounds us, so it appears to be quite obvious why there has been a trend towards the communications field: it contains potential careers," said Henry F. Schulte, dean of the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Commumications.
In 1972, undergraduate enrollment in Newhouse fordual and aingle majors was 717. By 1976 this figure skyrocketed to 1818. Schuite alao attributed this audden upsurge to a growing interest in creating aocial good through com munications.
Enrollment in the Newhouse School has doubled in the past five years or so, but this factor is not exclusive to Newhouse. The trend is nationwide. National enrollment in communications schools has gone from 12,000 in the-early sixties to 64,000 last year.

Like the industrial revolution, the com munications revolution aignifies change," he said. "New advancements are constantly being made in the field." The dean said the tremendous power of the mass media was demonstrated through such national crises as Vietnam and Watergate.
Although he said all of the departments in the Newhouse School show yearly growth, broadcast journalism has shown the greatest increase in number, Schulte said.
No departments are falling off in enrollment, however," he said. "In fact, this year we had to employ a limited enrollment because we simply don't have the facilities to handle the amount of applicants.'
Some students' reasons for choosing Newhouse were:
$\because M y$ program director recommended Newhouse very highly," commented a freshman broadcasting student.
"It was closer to home than most other schools," said a sophomore newspaper student.
"Well, the state schools are really poor concerning journalism. And all the prominent newsmen from my hometown, Buffalo, went to $\mathrm{SU}^{\text {" }}$, zelevision-radio sophomore said.
"Newhouse has a good photography department," remarked a aphotojournes, it's cheaper than BU.'

Fire marshals cite bookstore violations

By Tony Sims
The Syracuse University Bookstore was cited for major fire riolations this week.
Fire marshals of the Syracuse Fire Department cited the bookstore for blocking all exits and possible lanes to the exits.
In the event of an emergency, stock on all three floors of the store would have prevented the safe exit of employes and customers, acconding to city fire officials.
"We stock more materials for the September rush and we got cited for blocking the exits;' said Dave Venesky, assistant director of the bookstore. "We are usually one step ahead of the fire department but we got behind with the September overatock.
"The city fire department wrote us a letter, telling of the violations and an inspection within the next week or 10 days," Venesky said. "They gave us enough time to get everything together."
The bookstore rented a van to store the overload, according to Venesky. Most of the obstructions have been cleared and all possible violations have been eliminated, he said.
"The truck we have rented contains 320 square feet of space to handle the surplus stock," Veneaky said. "However, there is still overstock. But there is no problem, we could probably pass a federal inspection."
If violations remain after a city inspection, city and university marahals have the authority to close the bookstore, city marshals esid.
"Marshals do have the authority to cancel business licenses and close establishments," said Harry Boyle, safety administrator of Syracuse University Safety and Security. If the aitzation is handled within the time period allowed (seven to 10 dayi') there are no problems."

Management school creates tutoring fund

By Maryann Jacob
A fund to help School of Management students obtain free tutoring has been establianed in the name of the late Dorothea L. Chandler, associate professor emeritus of business education.

Chandler, who died March 11. 1977, taught business education and business communication at Syracuse University -for 25 years. She was a frequent consultant to business and industry, and lectured widely.

Health violations halt lunch program

The Cy Rick Stanley The Community House lunct program, which attracted over 100 people daily in past years, has not been offered this year because of health violations in the Community House facilities.
":A county health inspector visited the facilities on Monday and compiled a list of renovations which.must beimplemented before the lunch program can resume," Comminnity House Director Michael Dolcemascolo said. Dolcemascolo could not estimate the cost of the needed equipment.
The equipment needed includes a three-unit sink, a hand-washing sink and canopies to cover the food once it is served, he said.
"The buffet was not rest taurant style or fast-food style," Dolcemascolo added. "It was a relatively small operation until this past year. Then the luncheon grew in Then the luncheon grew in popularity, the. Community House luncheon came under the scrutiny of the Office of Student Affairs over the summer, Dolcemascolo said.

A number of memos came down from the Office of Student Affairs regarding the health violations. They pointed out that we did not have proper licensing to run such a program" Doleemascolo said. "At first I felt-oppressed about the situation, but I've come around to see their point of view. The university wanted to protect itself against any violations," he added.

Dolceinascolo will meet this morning with a restaurant supply representative to compile an estimate of how much the equipment would cost.
Because the Community House is subsidized by Hendricks Chapel, Dolcemascolo will forward his cost estimates to Hendricks Assistant Dean Darrell J. Fasching. Dolcemascolo noted that the budget of Hendricks Chapel may not be able to absorb the expense of the equipment.

Dolcemascolo said he is pessimistic about reopening the buffet.

Fickle fandom

To the editor,
In what was a well earned victory over Washington State last Saturday, I discovered the majority of SU fans in the student section to be more annoying than the rain dripping down thy neck.
The student section provided a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" type of support to the Syracuse football squad. Chanting "Go Orange" when things were going good, then resoring to "boo" and "you suck" when the Orangemen atarted to falter.

Then, like a loyal fan, giving jubilant cries again when blocking a punt or a field goal attempt.
The Syracuse football team is hampered by injuries and its losing reputation; this is ewident, but how does one expect the team to get "psyched-up" and pull themselves together when ita pans are as intogether when ita fans art as in-

Loew's Theatre: an antique worth preserving

Loew's Theatreis down to its last chance. If $$ 25,000$ is not raised by Oct 12 the building will be torn down.

The theatre is one of the last of its kind in the country. It was built during the depression, when the purpose of going to the movies was eacapism. The interior reflects this with rich oriental ornamentation, large chandeliers, goldfish:pools and Tiffany glasswork. It is what is known as "fantasy architecture."

But reality threatens to end this fantasy. The Syracuse Area Landmark Theatre has recruited Harry Chapin to champion: the theater's cause. According to producer Joe Desantis, Chapin's Oct. 11 benefit concert mast nearly sell out the theater's 3,000 seat auditorium if Loow's is to be saved.

If the concert is to sell out, it will be Syracuse University students who will be largely responsible. There are few Chapin fans among the city's businessmen, so the theater's fate is tied closely to the university.

Whether atudents like Chapin or not, a positive response to the concert is essential. Harry Chapin will be a sidelight that night. For those who attend, the theater will be the command performance.

The concert will prove that Loew's Theater can still serve a need today. Since it seats more than the Civic Center it can attract more popular acts - the ones that find the Civic Center too small and who don't like to play in cavernous halls like the War Memorial.

It is a rare antique that is both beautiful and useful. Loew's Theater is an rare antique.

Incompetence wipes out Beach Boys' solo album

By Marc LeVine
When we think of the Beach Boys the first things that usually come to mind are choir. boy harmonies and superficial but fun songs paying homage to summers gone by. Not miany of us; however, often think about the members of the Group as individuals (except Brian Wilson) nor their respective talents.

Part of the reason for this might be that none of the performers have ever before released a solo album, until now. Dennis Wilson, the most daring Beach Boy (and only real surfer in the group), has released the first Beach Boy solo album entitled Pacific Ocearz Blue.
The album consists of 12 new rhythrn and blues compositions penned, arranged, produced and performed by Wilson himself. Any die-hard Beach Boy fan might think all this work by a music world veteran would make for an excellent album - wrong. It does not take long for anyone to decide that Dennis has no talent at all as-an individual.

First of all, one might want to commit suicide after listening to his depressing lyrics and melodies. Furthermore, his lyrics make no sense, like in the song "Friday Night: $O h_{r}$ oh it's Fridas night/ The white punks play tonight/ Shirts off you motorcycle rider/ Night hinder/Andpeople who pray/ $I$ believe my Jesus/ Is in my soul.
If it's not bad enough listen: ing to Dennis Wilson's pitiful songs, there's his voice Wilson's. voice makes Rod Stewart and Joe Cocker sound like operatic stars. His raspy. weak voice makes it more difficult to understand his already incomprehensible lyrics. His performance on this album makes it hard to believe he is affiliated with the Beach Boys.

Some might think that because Dennis is Brian's brother some of the more brolific Beach Boy's talent might have rubbed off on him might have rubbed ofrion him area in which Brian certainly arcels Unfortunately at least excels. Whis Bran Dennis at ontis albim, Denins appeara inept ine this area too. Most instrumentals drown out the instrumentals drown out the vocals. This is especially evident in the R&AB song however Wrong. isolated is not, however, an isolated case. Also, there, are definite changes in frequency modulation among the songs on the album. The most marked case is between the sonks "Farewell my Friend" and "Rainbows." This can prove to be rather annoyigs.

Lowe art gallery shows work of muralist Shahn

An art Bhow focusing on the mural art of Ben Shahn, the artist of the Sacco and Vanzetti mosaic on the east wall of HBC, will open tomorrow, and continue through Oct. 30 at the Joe and Emily Lowe Art Gallery. It will feature drawings, prints, original cartoons and easel paintinge relating to Shahn's murals.

Shahn supervised the execution of the 12-by 60-foot Sacco and Vanzetti mural and attended its dedication in 1967, two years before his death. The Sacco and Vanzetti case had stirred Shahn's sympathy, and he created a series of paintings and prints related to the theme, several of which are in the show.

Health Center cites rise in number of VD cases  By-Pranlx Scimone  checkups during the last

Today's Syracuse University stadents tend not only to be more soxually nctive than their predecessors, but more aware of the dangers of venereal disense.

These trends are shown by an increase in certain kinds of VD and a dramaticincrease in the number of students going to the VD clinic of the Student Gynecology (GYN) Clinic for checkups.

Dr: : Vincent Lamparella, medical director of the Student Health Center, reported there has been a definite increase in such venereal diseases as herpes genitalis and crabs. Syphilis has been almost nonexistent on the SU campus and the gonorrhea rate has not increaped dramatically, he said.
According to Lamparella, most stadents who suspect they have VD actually have something resembling it. Lamparella said approximately 5 per cent of those who come in with warts have venereal warts.

In March 1975107 students visited the VD clinic while last March 181 students went to the

By Missy Cid
The North Campus daytime bus scheduie has been cut from 20 runs to four according to Scott W. Klein. Student Ass sociation vice-president of university-community relations.
The cutbacks resulted from financial difficulties and $a$ lack of riders, according to Steven Cohen, Syracuse University manager for parking and administration. Because of an increase in costs, cuts had to be made on the runs that "least affect the most number of students," Cohen said.
Klein said the cutbacks should save the university $$ 1,500$ a year. Cohen said there was no way to estimate the savings.

While North Campus bus runs have been reduced 80 per cent, the Manley and Vincent routes haveincreased to meet a large demand. The Slocum Heights schedule has remained the same while the Winding Ridge route has added a bus at 8:30 a.m.

Figures for crab lice, herpes and venereal warts are estimates. There were 50 cases of scabies reported for both men and women.

More significant is that over 400 patients were treated for urethritis. Urethritis is an inflamation of the urethra which can be caused by any number of things - gonorrhea, bacteria picked up during intercourse, or allergy to certain kinds of soap, Lamparella said.

Cradling the phone, she reached for a piece of scrap paper and pen while the person on the other, end of the line gave her a phone number. A pile of, newsletters and brochures lined one cormer of her deak and a nearby bulletin board listed upcoming campus board listed upcoming activities.
In the midst of organizing this week's Community Share Fair plus being director of the Campus Volunteer Center, Sally Attridge had her hands full.
"I think l'm prejudiced," At tridge amiled when she hung up the phone. "I've always enjoyed working with people."
People have played a vital role in Attridge's job experiences, which range from teaching the handicapped to swim to a more recent foray in coaching a girls' softball team in DeWitt.
"I like starting things," said Attridge, wife and mother of four children. "It's important to get things going."
Attridge had a lot to get going when she came to the Campus Volunteer Center two years ago. Although the volunteer program was already established, she had to make contact with local agencies, students and basically "let people know" she was there. A DeWitt resident, Attridge "felt just like a freshman" when she first came to the uni versity. For this reason, she believes she understands some of the uncertainties students may face and considers the volunteer center "a super opportunity" for them.
The Campus Volunteer Center, funded by the Center, funded by the city of Syracuse and the City of Syracuse and the profitorganization. Unlike the profit organization. Unlike the

Some of the career options offered in the program are teaching at pre-school and teaching at pre-school and, cooking and photography. Atcooking and photography. Attridge considers herself $a$ "matchmaker" for agencies and students. She sends forms with information about students to agencies, who, in turn, contact the students suitable for their jobs. Last year Attridge placed students in 65 different agencies. Along with work options at agencies, the volunteer center also has contacts with philanthropic projects.
The concept of student volunteer work has become increasingly attractive over the past five years, contrary to popular belief, according to Attridge. Volunteers are no longer "altruistic people carlonger altrusic people cartridge. "Students get somethtridge. Students get aomething out of it for themselves, also - it's a two way deal." also - it's a two way deal." She added that students want. to give of themselves while - Clso exploring career options. Career options are not the only reason students join the volunteer center. Attridge noted some people enjoy a break from their courses and will choose to work in an agency that has nothing to do with their area of study. She recalled an engineering student who teaches swimming and another student who coaches high sehool fontball simply because "he loves it."
Attridge enjoys working with young people more than any other age group. "I find student groups fascinating," she said, and added leadership skills are being emphasized in groups more than ever before. It is important that students develop training in leadership," Attridge said, and commented that the volunteer center is a good starting point for such work. She believes the experiences gained from volinteering often put students ahead of many adults who have never had practical training.

Attridge's door is open to students all week from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at Community House, 711 Comstock Ave. She said, "I wrelcome the opportunity of spealing, meeting and working with all interested students."

Poge'Iz  Septerniter 28. 1977  Orange laxmen stick to defense

By Alan Fectenn

Following a disa ppointing spring, SU lacrosse coach Roy Simmons is surprisingly confident. We think we ought to finish in the top 10 in the nation next spring," he said. "That's what we're shooting for.
Thoughta of cracking the Division 1 top 10 may bea bit ranh for A team that finished 17 th in the polla last year after an 8-6 season. Syracuse is also missing two of its top acoring attackmen from a year ago. John Engelken has graduated while Larry Storrier has also left the squad. However, a revamped defence and many returning ahooters give Simmons enough confidence to make auch bold predictiona.
For the first time in 10 years, SU placed two players on the honorable mention list for the All-America team. Senior at back to lead an Orange offense which averaged 12 goals a game last spring:
Discovering, however, that his freewheeling style of play alloyed more gools than it Bcored, Simmons decided this fall to switch some of his offensive punch to defense. After steady play at middle last year, juniors John Desko and Bill Udovich will bring their quickness to the backline.
"John is the fastest player on the team." Simmons said, "and Bill is so coachable, he'II never make the same miatake twice." the quickest defensive trio for the Orange in a long time. "We are going to be a lot wugher on defense this year." Simmons said

Hoping to make Simmon's predictions come true is new as sistant coach Jay Gallagher, who will be handling the defensive unit. Gallagher, member of a national champion Cornell team four years ago, guided the defense at the University of North Carolina (7th ranked) last year.
One of his star pupils is sophomdre goalie Jamie Molloy. Molloy will welcome any defensive improvement, as he was blitzed with shots last spring. Entering his second season as a starter, Molloy is experimenting with a newly styled stick. "There's 24 per cent more surface area with this stick and it isn't any heavier" Simmons said. Only two others tike it now exist. But more will be available for the spring season. "There's not ing in the rules that says he can't use it," Simmons added. SU opens its fall campaign with a horne match against Cor tland State tomorrow. Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Coyne Field.

Orange runners get sidetracked

By Barry Lambergman "The best laid plans of mice and men often go awry." The "great race plans" of Andy Jugan and the cross country team went awry Saturday as the Orangemen (now 2-2) ran like mice among men in losing to Army 18-45, and AJbany State, 23.36, at West Point.
The shocking part really wasn't loaing to Army though. for they feature probably the top runner in the East in Curt Alitz, who won the race in with an identical time. But losing to Albany State, however, was far from expected.
"It was the first time they"ve ever beaten SU." Jugan said. They've got a good team this year. Theyre 6-0. going for the pionship.

But still our inexperience showed lot. When the Army runners got so far ahead, we lost our concentration and rave up," he added.
Although it rained before, during, and after the meet, there was one brigit apot for SU - the performance of freshman Neil Rosenblad who placed third, only seven seconds behind Alitz.
"Neil was running right with the Army guys until the last halfmile,". Jugun said, "when he had a mental lapas. But overall he ran an excellent race.
One problem was that we Lowry, (finished 7th in 27:09), Jugan said, "while the other two teams were comprised mostiy of juniors and eeniors. So there was a maturity factor So there was a maturity factor involved But 1 don't really accept that as an excuse for our poor performance. I don't poor performance- I don't country we can't run with for country we miles."

Sophomore Jerry Josselyn finished 15 th for the Orangemen in 27 minutes, which was a passable time, but captain $=$ Brian Trippany, competing in his firat meet of the geason, gtill showed signs of his Achilles tendonitis problems as hefinished 27 th in 28:25.
"Even though April or May was the last time Trip was in good condition,"Jugen said, 'I thought he would do better based on the sheer ability and guts he showed me last year." The Orangemen open their home season at Drumlins Saturday againot powerful state rival Cornell. Last year Btate rival Cornel. Last year went down to the wire.

Mitchell said the new seate will be automated. "Arranging the old bleachers required a great deal of time and manpower," he added. "The newly installed seats will unfold with the fliek of a switch.
"Student: seating locations have not yet been decided," SU Athletic Director Lea Dyesaid. However, 3,700 seats will be reserved for our stadents. The renovations will provide a better vintage poinf and more everyone."
The actual seating facilities, which have been contracted to the Hussey Manufactiting Co. of North Berwick, Maine, will coat approximately $$ 976,000$.
The lighting, heating and ventilation have also been upgraded. The light level has been increased for easier viewing and heating, and vering and heating hand verchangion tucts have been direct heat and to reduce humidity. This work is a continuation of mechanical changes that were implemovation in 1975, when the tartan floor was installed.

Mitchell also ssid the main court has been centered and now runs north and south. The scoreboard is now aligned main to all onlookers.

Sorne minor changes were noted by Mitchell. An additionas, overnead dide of the vuilding fracing Coyne Stadium, providing easier access for vehicles entering the field house. Also two new geld house. Dye indicated there will bea more colorful atmosphere at Manley during future seasons. The center circle of the court has been painted orange with two white "Syracuse" semicircles. The foul lanes have been painted blue and a four-foot orange border surrounds the edge of the court. The new beats are orange and blue.
The axena is used not only for basketball but for other sports and cultuxal activities. Mitchell sees the renovations as aids to improving Manley Field House as "multi-purpose arena."

Program to correct violations

It will-cost about $$ 4,000$ to clear up health code violations which ahut down the Community House lunch program, a supply company estimated yesterday.
A.connty health inspector Monday compiled a list of renovations which must be completed before the Junch program can begin again, according to Community House Director Michael Dolcemascolo.

The Johnison Restaurant and Supply Co. eatimate included the cost of labor, a three-unit sink, a hand-washing sink and canopies to cover food being served.

The funds for the repairs will come out of the Hendricks Chapel budget, which subsidizes the Community House, according to chapel Assistant: Dean Darrell Fasching. "We'll squeece it out somewhere" he said. "We'rehoping wee can do it for less (than the egtimate) anyway."

Dolcemascolo said," We should be able to cutit in half, He attributed the hinh figure to mon-university labor cogts and quotation of the best equipment in the estirnate.

Some of the equipment and labor needed can be acquired from the miversity purehasing department, according to Dolcemascolo.
Fagching. Dolcemascolo and Hendricks Chapel Dean John H. McCombe will work together to determine where the funds will come out of the chapel budget.
The buffet-style lunch program attracted over 100 people daily. Once a small operation, the program's popularity graw. with atudents and professors going to Community House and conversing over cups of coffee, Dolcemascolo said.
The program's popularity caused the Office of Student Affairs to point out that Community House did not have a proper hicense for the program, he said.

Tuition rises

By Dave Berman

Students will pay $$ 20$ (tuition) per term. The sons and daughters of ministers of all denominations will be charged half the above price. Liberal reductions will be made in special caseg.

Undergraduate tuition at SU has risen 9,750 per cent, to $$ 1,950$ a semester, since the university opened in 1871.

However, Clifford L. Winters Jr., vice chancellor for administrative operations, said that, "over the last four or five years, the increase in tuition is slightly less than the increase in the cost of living."

Botween 1972-73 and 1976-77, tuition rose 33.21 per cent, from $$ 1,370$ to $$ 1,825$, a sernester. The consumer

Winters said tuition at SU will  S vionsly be, higher than pablic institutions and second-class private schools," but the university remains "a good buy" compared to cost increases of other consumer goods and services.
The university makes inveyear projections of the inflation rates and updates them every year. These estimates have been "relatively accurate in the past," according to Winters.
"We are assuming a 5 to 7 per cent inflation rate for next year," Winters said, "and hope to keep tuition increases about 1 per cent below this rate."
Based on a 4 to 6 per cent increase, undergraduate tuition at SU for 197879 will be somewhere between $$ 2,028$ and $2,067 a bemester.
Winters said the official tuition rate for next year will not be announced until early February after the university budget is adopted by the University Senate Budget Committee.
Undergraduate tuition has risen every year since 1967-68, with increases ranging from 5 per cent to 13.04 per cent. The average increase during that period has been 8.07 per cent.

Gebman has forgotten little from his career as an news photographer, and if he's certain that he will win the Pulitzer, it's imposeible to argue with him.
Gebman began his career as a copyboy for the old Brooklyn Standard Union. After high achool graduation he moved into the paper's art department but soon became interested in photography.
"The photo department so in the photo department so I me into it," Gebman recalla. "I Ggured it would be eanier than working in art."
After a short gtint with the Union, Gebman found himself with Acrae News Pictures, a yndicate forerunner of the United Press. He worked at Acme for 15 years, most of which was spent in New York Geb Gebman's early speecialty was crime stories, the more was the so the better. There was the so called 'Red Riding Hood' murder in Elmont, Long fland where a young girl wan cilled in her houge.

I went out there the day after the murder, and while $I$ was shooting pictures in the farnily garage I accidentally dropped a ticket from a bingo game," Gebman said. "The next day I heard the police were using the ticket as a clue. I had to call them up and tell hem it was mine.
Another time Gebman Ieft his footprints in blood at the Bcene of a grisly triple murder. Such aggressive photographic pursuit aeemed to characterize much of Gebman's work. He worked during a highly competitive era in Amexican newrpapers: Photographers were expected to get a picture using whatever means they could.

Many times, as Gebman ikes to recall, the photographer was not above staging a picture. "I was sent to Yorkville (which had a large German population) to get something on the reaction of the people to the conviction of Brumo Hauptmann, the kid, nap-murderer of the I-indbergh baby," Gebman said. "1 weat into a bar, got a big beer mug, Gilled it with change, and then hung a Little sign on it saying "Hauptmann defense fund." Accoriding to Gebman, when According picture of the mug appeared in newspapers around the country it started the ball rolling for other more legitimate defense funds.
Once, in order to scoop his competitors, Gebman ar. ranged to shoot a dramatic wirnuprthe day before she acswimly won a meet He was so tually won a meet. Te was so ance of victory that he asked the awimmer mother to come lown to the pool wearing the same dress she planned to wear at the meet. "I Still another bit of trickery had. Gebman asking a golfer friend to poue club in hand while thanging upside down from a tree.

Along with the aly novelty hoth Gebman made several notable mews picturea. By his own account he is the only per$s o n$ to ahoot two award-winning pictures of Franklin and Eleminor Roosevelt.
"It was a rainy might in New York when I got a picture of FDR inaide a car handing a cigarette to his son tohan." Gebman said. Headmitsitwan A "ome shot, hitor-mise picture." His prize-winning pic ture of Eleanor Rocsevelt was ahot as slie stood in front of a mirror idjusting an orchid minutes before adidessing a New York women"f club.

Gebman disliked many of the politiciams he had to follow around. He still believes most of them were a "bunch of phonies". His greatest wrath is reaerved for former New York Cov. Thomas Dewey.
"When Dewey wan Manhattan district attorney he got angry, at New York photographers becauge we had taken a picture of his wife, who he didn't like to have photographed," Gebman recalled, "Because of the to stop taking any pictures of to stop taking any pictures of

One of the more interesting aspects of Gebman's carcer Whares did toric World war II I wae often sert out to shoot pictures of

"WFe would develop the film, place thean in our files with appropriate captions and then send a copy to the navy department in Warimgton.* Gebman claimed, many of the Japanese were surpected spies who Acme agreed to photograph for naval intelifgence.

In the " 30 s and ' 40 s , Gebman remembered, a photographer was considered a special per son, someone who had the power and connectionst to do a Fot of good for certain people.
"Whenever I went to a nightclub I never had to spend a-dime," he said. "The press agenta used to pick up the tab becanate they realized what it meant to get a favorable picture out of someone like me."
For a short time in the mid'40s Gebman quit newspaper work in order to head a department at Paramount Pictures photo studio. He spent much of his time thinking of publicity gimmicks to send ont to papers across the country. The project he mose enjoyr talling about is the opecial scanty bathing suit he helped design for actress Susan Hayward. Gebman still prowdly shows a large publicity picture of the actress wearing his creation.
After quitting the Parkamount job he retarned to newspapers as a staff photographer on The New York Jourhal American. He left in 1949 to come to Syracuse to work for the then-fledgling WHEN television station.
Though he now works for the film center, Gebmanis concentrating much of his energy on finishing his novel. Though reluetant to discuss the plot, he does say that his writing style is influenced by his photography career. "I think of what would make a good picture then $I$ describe it in words," he said

If Gebman's Writing is half as interesting as his life he may become a pretty successful author.

Author debuts with 'enigmatic' work

BOOK REVIEW: "The C Book" by Edmund. (Weatcott St. Publishers, 4 pages, manila)
"The. C Book" is an endearing, though at times enigmatic, problematic and ambiguous book. The author, known to his readers as "Edmund," has etridently led the way to where many have predicted - the reduction of language back to symbola.

These symbols, this bringing of language full circle so to speak, brings literature up to date with television viewers while, paradoxically (I might add), throwing it back to the Stone Age.

Faux pas:  Howard Mansfield

It is this startling literary device employed atrinningly to develop character and move the plot that makes this book dissertations are forthcoming from the academic grist mills on this subject While it may bea bit early to say; this is a book that marks a turning point stands as a benchmark to its age and makes a good coaster.
In three devilishly simple drawings, as innocent as if a child had drawn them. Edmund tells the story of ... God knows what. But don't let that distress you - the important thing is the atyle, not the substance. As with most breakthroughs, substance will come. It is this enigma, used as $a$ counterpoint to his ambiguity, that will keep them talking at parties for monthg.
The symbolic nature of the number of drawings - three - has divided "Edmundian" analysts. There is the first illuatration, a cell, or potato if you will; the second, a four-footed creature of some nomenclature; and the third and most puzaling, what appears to be a car licking up a person at the base of a seat-like object. Why three objects? $\mathbf{A}$ future vision? The journey of Ulysses retold? Jungian psychology finally explained?
Some interpreters feel that the three objects in the "C Book" are really four a cell, a cat, a chair and a car. Really, these literary analysts are from that forgotten school of reading books that something is what it seems. The lack of practioners of this view in our unitersities' English departments today points out that this is a silly way to read.
This reviewer thinks the best theory is not, as some have suggested, that the drawings explain three stages in Darwinian evolution, Marx's rise of the proletariat; the levels of being or alternate side of the street parking, but rather the three stages of plot development as posed by Aristotle. Edmund has brought literature back to its elemental Greek roots.

Briefly the stages:
Purpose - the motive to do somerhing: the cell desires to be a cat
(Op. cit. Daedalus Nov. 1945)
Passion - the unforseen incident: becoming a cat, the cell is not happy. (note: see the person next to you.)
Perception - i.e., as it were, hindsight: The cell in the form of the cat having seen the errors of its ways geeks to get home by car only to confront his maker: the godhead represented by the chair.
.The most puzzling part of the novel is that the next page-and-a-half, fully two-thirds of the novel, are blank. Some say he is representing T. S. Eliot's "The Wasteland," while others contend he could not think of other objects that began with the letter $C$.
"The C Book" by Edmund is truly unique, but let us add a cautionary note. The title indicates that 23 sequels are possible, as is the posthumous publication of "The A Book" and "The B book."
In retrospect, I liked this book because it is good.

Defending orientation

To the editor,
As a Summer Orientation student leader, Ifeel compelled to reply to the article which appeared in the Sept. 21 DO, "Summer Orientation Program attracts few new stucents. The article is misleading to those readers who do not know the structure of the program, making an extremely successful program appear to be a sparsely-attended, poorly-run affair.

- I disagree that only a few attended orientation. Your article states 1,116 students out of an estimated class of 2,500 came for the program. Mathematical calculation reveals that 1,116 is 44 per cent of 2,500 . Is close to half of the freshmen class a few students? A definition of "few" seems to be necessary to a void being misleading.

Further, Daniel S. Willett is in no way qualified to speak for the Summer Orientation Program. Mr Willett was one of the many contact perbons in the various schools and colleges of the university. If Ms. Swift chose to deal with the academic aspects of the program why were no other college represen tatives contacted? Mr. Willett has every right to comment on the quality of the program's academic counseling for Arts and Sciences. However, he is in no way authorized to speak for the program financially or to. comment on whether the program will continue. Yet nowhere program will continue. Yet nowhere in the article is Mr. Willett'sconnection with the program made clear.
The reader is led to believe Mr. Willett is authorized to speak for the Willett is program.

Why isn't Tina Foley, the director of Summer Orientation, a primary source for the article? Are the extremely positive aspects of the program to be ignored in favor of misleading, if not false, supmisieading, if not false, supWouldn't it be better reporting to use Wouldn'tit be better reporting to use the judgment of the office in questwo sources exists?

Are financial and attendance figures to be used as the only criteria of the auccess of the program? Are the people involved of no imthe people involved of no im portance? Everyone involved with the program put in a great deal of time and effort into reaching our coals for the program. Our goal wasn't to see every incorming freshman; rather, it was to help those freshmen who chose to take advantage of the opportunity. The article alludes only briefly to the "top-notch counseling" we did. This counseling was done both on an academic and on a very personal level. I personally feel I made the transition to college an easier one for many students. Are these successful aspects of the program to be overlooked?
Why don't you ask the freshmen who attended the program whether or not it was a success? Aren't they the best judges?

Not a solution to the world's problems

The problem with 20th Century man is that he seeks comman is that he seeks comprehersive solutions where none exist.

If any problem in the world deserves our attention, world hunger must. From Syracuse to Calcutta, more than a billion people face the problem of hunger as part of their lives, every day. And yret the very magnitude of the problem tends todefeat solutions to it.
But before you say "World hunger is too big for me to do anything about" and flip to the sports page or the classifieds, stop and think about this for a minute.

You don't have to solve the problem. Just do something to make it a little better.
This weekend a 10 -mile CROP walk for hunger will be held in Syracuse. Marchers will attempt to raise money to alleviate the hardship of those who face hunger each day, both here in Syracuse and elsewhere.
These marchers, no matter how diligent, no matter how many sponsors they obtain, cannot solve the problem of world hunger. Eliminating thie problem is beyond the resources of any community or any nation.

But they can make things a little better.
The world has a whole agenda of problems which are beyond the power of any of us to eliminate. But we have an alternative to wrapping ourselves in the artificial security ourselves in the artifial security of the campus, tucked away from the ordeals of our fellow human the ord beings.

We can do something to make things a little better. David Abernethy for The Daily

Shuttlebus operator challenges new law

Shuttlebus owner By Scott Rohrer is challenging Police Chief Thomas $J$. Sardino's right to act as enforcer and judge of the Ground Transportation Ordinance.

The ordinance, enacted by the common council last year, regulates the routes and time schedules for taxis, limousines and shuttlebuses in the city and for the airport.
Nellenback's lawyer, Melvin E. Holm, said yesterday he felt the ordinance is unconstitutional because Sardino has the power to act as policeman and judge.

Nellenback was fined $$ 200$ for alleged violations of the ordinance at two hearings conducted by Sardino in August.
Last week Holm secured a. stay of payment from a state Supreme Court judge until the case can be heard Oct. 17 .

Sailing the high seas for the America's Cup

By Bruce Tallerman

Hugh MacNiven did some unusual jobs on some unusual boats this surmmer.

I was a gopher for the America's Cup," said MacNiven, who spent the summer taking in the ocean breezes sailing over the bounding main at the most prestigious yachting spot in the world, Newport, R.I.
"On busy days, I was everywhere at once," said MacNiven, explaining that his was an unofficial affiliation with the races. "I was not a crew member, but I got myself into the realm of the America's Cup."
MacNiven helped out aboard Enterprise, Independence, and the eventual cup winner, Courageous.
A typical day for MacNiven would begin at 8 or 9 , when the boats left the dock for one or two 24 -mile preliminary trial races. He would fill in on odd jobs during the races, helping out however the captains saw fit.

While the main action took place in the water, the America's Cup is more than just a sporting event. The atmosphere surrounding Newport is teeming with wealth, luxury and a tight-knit social group.

Perhaps.the one exception was Ted Turner, skipper of Courageous. With everyone talking about the intricacies of asiling. Turner seemed to have other things on his mind. "Ted had a habit of introducing himself by saying, 'Ted's my name baseball's my game.' "In addition to piloting Courageous, Turner owns the Atlanta Braves baseball tearn, whodidn't fare as well as his ship this year. MacNiven assessed Turnex as flamboyant, colorful, but extremely illtempered at times. "But out on the boat, it was all sailing." MacNiven recalled about the accentric skipper.
It was not by chance that MacNiven found himself ensconced in the America's Cup races. "It's all personal contacts," he said. MacNiven's first boating experience was inside a dinghy at age 15 months. Since then, he has participated in numerous competitions, including the Nationals, which his family won in 1964.
"Sailing is a part of my life," said MacNiven, although he is unsure if it would be worth entering his own boat in the America's Cup competition some day. "Very few people sail Gran Prix.
It's easy to see why. The skippers of Independence and Enterprise weren't as for tunate as Ted Turner. Said MacNiven, after having seen the thrill and the agony close up, "After three years of work and over a million

Alaskan pipe dream

By Ira Chineson

For most students a summer job is a necessary evil, a chance to pick up some extra money by pumping gas or washing dishes. If you're lucky it can be easy and painless.
That's not the case for Syracuse University senior Richard Hantz. When the winter doldrums set in Hantz can look back to a summer spent as a security linewalker on the Alaskan pipeline.

A linewalker does what the namesuggests:he or she walks the pipeline looking for leaks and other forms of damage and sabotage. Hantz, a soft-spoken native of Anchorage, got the job in mid-June after hearing about it from a friend.
'The linewalker program was set up at the last minute by the federal government, and they set aside a number of jobs for students." Hantz said.
The actual hiring of the walkers was done by a private security company. In order to get the a private security company in order to get the manipulation.
"I knew the
1 knew that many security companies are almost paramilitary, so when I went for the job interview I wore a tie and suit and sure enough I was hired before some sloppy, long-haired people," Hantz said.
Once hired he was sent to the Glenn Allen camp on the southern section of the pipeline. The camp, one of the largest on the pipeline, served as a base for almost 400 workers.
According to Hantz, the routire of the linewalker varied little during his nine-week stay. Work began at 7 a.m. so most walkers were up at 6 in themorning. At the Glenn Allen camp there were nine two-person teams, made up of both men and women. They worked under several supervisors who were responsible for driving the teams out to their respective patrol posts.
"My patrol began 70 miles north of the camp, so it took a fair amount of time just getting to work," Hantz said. He was also drawing a $7anthour salary while riding to work.

On the job Hantz had to cover a certain amount of territory a day. He's candid about the work. "A lot of people in the camp couldn't Work. A lot of people in the canop couldn't Hagure out what we were doing for our pay, "There were not any difficult jobs in the whole program," he added.

Another potential danger was the amount of sabotage directed at the pipeline. "Some local people would shoot at the pipeline because they hated it and there was always the danger one of us would be hit," Hantz said.
This sort of opposition occasionally took on comic overtones. According to Hantz there were two young "pack rats" who tried to blow up a small section of the pipe with dynamite. They thought so much of their action that they took photographs of the bombing. The explosion did little damage but when the police caught up with the men they found the incriminating pictures.
For Hantz and the other workers life back in the camp was a bit dull. They received one radio station and one television channel. However, there were daily showings of movies and. despite oil company claims to the contrary, Hantz pite oil company claims to the contrary, Hantz anys thatalc

The most publicized pipeline problem this summer was the explosion at the Number 8 pump station. Pipeline officials suspectingsabotage would send male linewalkers to guard the station, only to have thern return when sabotage was ruled out. "I was disappointed. I wanted some excitement," Hantz said.
Excitement or not, the pipeline has found a booster in Hantz. "I was pwed by the whole thing. It's quite an engineering achievement," he said.
The only thing Hantz worries about is the influx of people the pipeline has brought to his home state. "As long as they keep the road home state. "As long as they keep the road along the pipeline closed to general trat

He recently spent "over, $$ 11,000$ in one month just on air fares." But after the third week in October, Jenmer will accept no more speaking engagements.
"I like them. I just wish they were all in my back yard," he says.
Although Jenner will cut back on his $$ 2,500$ to $$ 3,000$ a shot lectures after Jan. 1, he will continue to be just as busy. He has signed a major television contract with the ABC television network involving participation as a sports commentator, as well as two movies and 26 appearances on "Good Morning, America" every yearthrough 1980, the year ABC will probably sign the mext American Olympic hero.

Jenner is also under contract by Wheaties and Buster Brown shoes. But today he decides to give the area papers some ink about another role as Capital Hill lobbyist. He has recently spent several days in Washington, D.C. hop-

The scene changes to late afternoon at the local junior high school gymnasium, and Jenner is discussing the proper technique of running at a clinic for young athletes.
"You have to be able to sprint, but still have some distance in you, too," he tells the captive audience - an audience which includes parents, the school band, cheerleaders, the varsity club, and some younger brothers and sisters:
"You have to try and keep all the events you participate in as simple as you can," he continues.

Jenner rarely demonstrates his running technique; rather he uses mermbers of the high school track and field teams. As four hurdiers, two boys and two girls, are put through their paces, Jenner watches and points out their weaknesses to be the crowd of 650 . next. That's it bring that leg right down, Jenner exclaims, watching the lead leg action of his group while munching on some popeorn.

His microphone begins to make a high pitch sound due to technical difficulty, and the activity momentarily comea to a halt.

She got talking with some of the officials and they told her to enter the puppy. Well, she did. but she couldn't stick around, so one of the officials walked the dog in the show. And guess what? Barney not only won the first prize in the puppy division, but he also took best of show. They want him to start touring the country. Can you beat that? Another super star in the Jenner farmily."

At today's press conference Jenner tells how he plans to make a living in sports television.
"I have four years to work with as a color commentator for ABC. At the end of that time I hope to be able to stay in the booth not as a ex-jock, but an a qualified sportscaster," he says.
Jenner plans to start doing the play-by-play on ABC's regional college football games next year, while branching out to report on "The Superstars" and motorcycle competitions.
"But I've got a big problem with this. Everybody else starts at the bottom and works their way up. I had to start bango, at the top on national television. I'm just trying to stay there."
From there the conversation changes to Jenner's formula for financial success and it is different from others such as Mark Spitz.
"I was 26 after the 1976 Olympics and had been speaking in front of people for a living for four years before. people for a living for four years before. I remember Mark Spitz saying hespent

"Besides, those guys were only surviving on their names and that does not last too long," he adds in a low not last too long," he adds in a low voice.

A half-hour later, the schedule dictates that it is time for the conference to break up.

Jenner walks out of the dining room stopping every few steps to sign an autograph for somebody's friend or relative. After making his way through the hotel lobby and down the hall to room 143, he pauses and looks back at the staring faces. He wears a necklace proclaiming the year "1976," and the Olympic team watch is strapped to his wrist.
*"I am sort of happy to be cutting back on this, it is becoming a drag," hesays. ${ }^{\text {an }}$ I feel like. I am always living with strangers. I know they're good people, but to me they are still strangers.

That afternoon Jenner flies out of Buffalo for Albany, then on to New York City, continuing to Kalamazoo Mich., Iowa City, Iowa and Lincoln Neb.

During his absence, the Marquise realizes that she is pregnant. Despite her claim of innocence, the dishonored parents aend her away to live alone with her children. The count anxiously hears of the news and prepares to renew his proposal.
It becomes apparent that the noble count, in a time of moralistic weakness, took advantage of the Marquise while ahe was in a deep, opium-induced sleep.

The Marquise's pain is profound. Although she consciously has no idea of the cause, she senses conflicting

Moog synthesizer echoes in Crouse  By Huxb Burke

Strange inhurian sounds echo from the dark turreted castle. Inside, a slight, balding man is surrounded by a huge machine covered with dials, switches and gauges. It dwarfs his figure, but he doesn't feel threatened. In fact, he is content.

The synthesizer is an analogue, or non-computer type. The initial Moog components, purchased in 1967 , lend their name to what is now technically called a hybrid symthesizer, one made up of components from several different companies. According to Morris, who personally installed most of the equipment, this allows for a more diverse set of capabilities.

The sound originates from 12 "oscillators," which can imitate conventional ingtruments or make sounds with unique characteristics. The machine can make music or sounds of nearly any description, including the human voice. This is accomplished by altering tone color and other characteristics.

With four massive speakers, four-track recording equipment and four-foot-high amplifiers, one would think that such an arrangement would use a lot of electricity. Actually the machine uses less electricity than a 50 -watt light bulb.
Each semester Morris teaches a class of 40 atudents, some of whom have little or no musical background. Although the synthesizer can make musical sounds, Morris stresses that it is a medium rather than a musical ingtrument. Manual dexterity is not necessary.
SU has no synthesizer majors, although some other schools such as the State University of New York at Albany do. Morris class has no prerequisite other than sophomore status or above.

WHY IS SICLINDA STENFUULER DEANOFBEIR?

WHY NOT?

Fellow Beer Persons,
Life is full of unanswered questions such as: Is there intelligent life elsewhere in the universe? And if so, do they wear socks?

In beer, however, there are no unanswered questions. Because there is only one word for beer, and you know it.

Schlitz.
Therefore, as your Dean of Beer, I suggest you research the essential rightness of the word for yourself at your next social function. Or even your next antisocial function.

And please note: The recommended source material for locating the word can be found in any phone booth. In other words, look in the Yellow Pages. Under "Beer.'

Thank you.

Students gain experience through advertising club

By-Cindy Fitts

Syracuse University's advextising club (ADS), began the semester Monday night with a general meeting welcoming new members and outlining plans for the year.
ADS is a studenta' advertising club which allows students to gain professional experience, such as working on advertising accounts in all media and meeting with, professionals. in the advertising community.
The nonprofit club is the SU chapter of the 35,000-member American Advertising Federation (AAF).
It was first organized in the late ' 60 s by Prof. Donald Vance, formerly of the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications, and was once known as Alpha Delta Sigma, a national honorary.
In 1973. Alpha Delta Sigma merged with AAF to form the campus division. It enables "students to have more contact with professionals in the advertising field." according to Laura Gushin, faculty adviser to the club.
The main objective of the AAF is to encourage students to enter an advertising career and improve the quality of advertising education.
Alpha Delta Sigma has been reestablished within the AAF college chapter as a scholastic honorary society recognizing outstanding honorary society recognizing outstanding academic achievements among advertising

SU's club is divided into several account groups. Student Association, Division of International Programs Abroad, and Simply Splendid Studio, a clothing store in Fayetteville, are some of the accounts the club will be working on. They will also compete nationally with other college clubs in the AAF.
For the past three years, SU has won the Eastern Regionals of the AAF National Student competition. Last year, the group placed secord nationally with its Rold Gold Pretzels by Frito Lay advertising campaign. This year's competition is sponsored by CocaCola and the product is the soda Sprite.
ADS received honorable mention in the Phillip Morrisadvertising contest last year for its Miller Beer account.

- This year, the advertising club is offering the AAF Job Clearinghouse to graduating seniors. Students submit their resumes to the AAF headquarters in Washington, D.C. where it, along with resumes from seniors across the country will be printed in a book made available to all AAF professionals. "Many students have been able to get jobs through the Job Clearinghouse," Gushin said.

Last year the club initiated a speaker series. Andrea Mayer ADS president said "We hope Andrea Mayer, ADS president, said, We hope o broaden the scope of the seniors with Foote Cone from such advertising agencies as Foote, Cone and Belding, Dancer Fitzgerald as professionals from the Syracuse area."

Diverse styles mark Rundgren album

By Rick Stanley
Todd Rundgren and his Utopian aggregation are back on the streets again with a schizophrenic musical commentary about urban Americe and its valpe system, Oops, Wrong Planet (Bearsiville).
Meanwhile, British producer Allan Parsons has exported his musical interpretation of Isaac Asimov's science-fiction novel, 1, Robot (Arista), asasequel to his tribute to Edgar Allan Poe's works. Tales of Mystery and Imagination.

No one knows what motivates Rundgren and his three Utopian counterparts, Roger Powell, Kasim Sulton and John Wilcox. No two of their allbums sound alike. In their albums sound alike. In Planet," no two of the 12 short Plamet, no two of the 12 short compositions sound alike. The longest song on the album is only four-and-one-half only four-and-one-half unugual for Rundgren, who has been known to compose songs lasting 37 minutes.

Musically, Utopia flip-flops from a progressive rock format to ballads of trial and tribulation. Too many of the songs on this album are eligible for the AM airwaves.

It seems as though the Utopians have jumped aboard Utopians have jumped aboard their mystical, musical pyramid to flee this earthly chaos and assume the role of the Utopians scurry down the road to Armageddon.

There is a conspicuous lack of instrumental prowess - on this Utopia album. Rundgren's guitar becomes meek. The polyphonic syntheaizers, so prevalent in Utopia's earlier works, are rarely heard. The primary musical focus of the album is on the vocals, which are divided equallý among all four group members.
Make no mistake; the $\mathbf{a r}$ rangements and production of "Oops, Wrong Planet" are generally well done. What is irritating about the album is Utopia's insistence that they know where we're all at and that we are all victims of society.

Printed on the album sleeve is the message, "Use your heads, use, your hearts, save yourselves." The Utopians get an A for effort on this album but their attitude merits a $D$ Allan Parsons, like Rundgren, is a quality producer. His music is distinctively British. "I, Robot" is much like its predecessor 'Tales of Mystery and Imagination" in format and sound. It is so much like Tales that the changing movements from song to song are almost predictable. But Parsons has a winning formula and he is stic king with it. i, Robot is the story of the rise of the machine and the decline of man. Parson's musical version of this mechanistic takeover follows in logical order, the creation. the breakdown and the rebirth of the robot Parsons, who engineered Pink Floyd's Dark Side of the Moon, relies on a heavy elec tronic sound. The vocals on "I, Robot" are subdued and infrequent. The movements of each song, connected by special effects which conjure inages of a machinedominated world, fade in and out.
"I, Robot"' is not as vibrant as. Parson's earlier work, making it easier to listen to. An orchestra and choir are employed to highlight the second side of the disc, which is faintly reminiscent of the soundtrack to 2001: A Space Odyssey.

Two faces basketball fans at Manley won't be seeing again are those of Cliff Warwell (left, with ball) and Reggie Powell (32, right). The pair of front court players have decided not to return to SU this fall. Coach Jim Boehoim carnot be too concerned about the losses however, as he still has fast year's mainstays - Bouie. Shackleford. Byrnes and Orr - returning to the front courtiPhotos by Paul Jasienski and Ron Waters.)

Orange basketball still rolling

"It isn't basketball season already, is it?" SU basketball coach Jim Boeheim asked half jokingly.

No, it isn't basketball season yet. The football season is not even half completed. But just because there are no games to be played or practices to be held is no reason to think Boeheim and his staff have not been busy.

We recruited two guards, which is probably Last year's starters, Jim Williams and Larry Kelley are gone, leaving a question mark in the added two good guards in freshmen Ed Moss and Marty Headd
"Moss is an excellent ballhandler and passer," Boeheim said. "We'll uee him at the point-guard spot. Headd is more of a shooting ype guard." In addition, Ross Kindel and Ha Cohen return from last seaon's NCAA tour nament team and are expected to add ex perience in the backcourt.
Although the forecourt, (four returning lettermen) is the Orange strong spot, Boeheim and assistants Fick Pitino and Bernie Fine rec ruited two more front-line players to help fill the hole left by the departure of Hegigie Powell and Cliff Warwell.
Both Powell and Warwell transferred. "Cliff Warwell left Syracuse because he felt he didn' play as a freshman, which he didn't," Boeheim aid. "Reggie Powell left for academic reasons. He simply felt he could do better elsewhere."

Their place will be taken by two freshmen '11" Dan Schayes and 6'6" Chris Jerebko.
The four returning front-liners should be household names by now, at least in Syracuse Roosevelt Bouie, Marty Byrnes, Dale Shac-kleford and Louis Otr all return from last year. Between now and the first practice, Boeheim won't worry too much about his line-up. His major concerns are the Manley Field House renovations and student enthusiasm, or lack of enthusiasm, for his team.
"Student support seems to be dropping off," Boeheim said. "We always draw well for the good teams, but we need the student who cornes game in and game out."
This year, students will be even more easily heard by the Orange hoopsters. The renovations of Manley places the student rooting section directly behind the SU bench

The renovations at Manley may prove to be a bigger worry than studerit support
I'm concerned that the field house won't be ready for us to practice on Oct. 15 ," he said. "That could hurt us somewhat. We'll have to practice in the men's or women's gym. But in the long run, the renovations will put, more people in the stands, which will help us.'
Capacity at the "neew" Manley will be 9,600 people, the largest on-campusifacility in the East.
The Syracuse schedule is the greatest reason to practice as much as possible. The road slate includes games at Pitt, Rutgers, West Virginia, St. John's and Niagara. The home schedule in cludes the First Annual Carrier Clasaic, December $2 \cdot 3$ at Manley. (featuring Michigan State, Khode Island and LeMoyne). Sit. Bonnventure, Connecticut Fordham, LaSalle and Boston College, among others, will invade and Bostone Boim hopes to be a noisy, student-filled Manley.
If that happens, Jim Boeheim's only worry will be winning basketball games. What could be simpler?

Maloney's not the man

"I think he's one hell of a coach. I'll be really pissed off if Frank goes.
-Syracuse quarterback Bill Hurley
"If this university lets him go, it will be the biggest injustice ever. He'll be a scapegoat, that's all he'll be.
-Syracuse defensive back Larry King

Sports fans are not a patient lot.
They want action ... now. They want excitement immediately. They want wins .... with no further delay. Unfortunately, as of yet, the Syracuse University football team has not been able to satisfy that desire in Syracuse fans. The fans say they waited long enough for SU to rebuild its team and they aren't happy with the way things are moving. Consequently the fans want heads to roll.

And the head they want the most is on Frank Maloney's shoulders.

People in Syracuse, be they narrow-minded editors of newspapers, tunnel-visioned students or bottle-hurling fans, feel Maloney is the major reason that Syracuse doesn't win football games

Such logic is a function of ignorance.
Frank Maloney has indeed become the scapegoat for the Syracuse football program's snail-like return to excellence and that is very, very unfair. Maloney has become the center of attacks; both physical (as in the caise of bottle throwing "fans" after the N.C. State game) and personal (one Rochester writer misquoted him so badly that it almost seemed the writer had a malicious intent). Yet Maloney remains low-key and for the most part unperturbed. Perhaps Maloney is able to act in that manner because he knows he is doing the best job he can.

Spealing Frank

Laury King would agree on that point.
"I mean, what else can he do? We've been mentally prepared to play every game. We've known what we had to prepared the field with us;-that's our job. He has done physically everything he can do," King said.

Frank Maloney is the life's blood of the Syracuse football team. Without him they would be lost. They play for Frank Maloney. They run for Frank Maloney. They tackle for Maioney. They run for Frank Maloney him:
Right now, and this is vitally important to underatanding the situation, the players on the Syracuse team feel like they area college team without a campus. And they've got good reason to feel that way.

The team gets no real support from the fans in Syracuse. They don't get the real financial support from the school that they need. The fans here are chronically fickle. For example, they still boo Bill Hurley, perhaps one of the best option quarterbacks in the East. because he played poorly in his first appearance before them ... two years ago. Even last week, when he rushed for more than 100 yands and almost single-handedly won the game for the Orange, he was booed. Right now there is a sickness in the Archbold football audience. The situation became so bad last year he SU Athletic Department was seriously thinking of having the team play some of their home games in New York City. The team has lost as much respect for the fans as the fans have lost confidence in the team. It's a tragic situation.

Frank Facts

Frank Maioney is a good football conch. He proved that last week when, after losing to the N.C. State Woifpack, he rallied his squad todefeat the Washington Huskies, an even better team How soon people forget that it was the same Frank Maloney that brought the Orangemen closer then any team in college football last year to defeating the national champion Pittsburgh Panthers. Yet people still want him out.
It's ludicrous, but one Syracuse sports writer (Arnie Burdick, Syracuse HeraldJournal sports editor) even went 80 far as to blame Maloney's woes in part on the fact that he doesn't mingle with the Syracuse "in"' crowd. What does that have to do with anything? What do we want here at Syracuse? A football coach or a social butterfly?

As students we should be able to empathize with Maloney's : aituation. He is a, shy man basically withdrawn. That's part of the man's personality. Yet many think he is bucking the system because he acant rai elbows and clink glasses-with the alumni elite at cocktai partiea Maloney, and this is a very real situation, migh lose his job just because a lot of people don't know him That aeems insane. The only people that Maloney has to really know and understand are his football staff and players. That's what his job is.
In retrospect, the problem with the football tasm is nof Frank Maloney. The problem here is-commitment: Com mitment from the studemts. Commitment from the loce fans, and commitment from the noivecrity,

- Frank Malonoy believes in SU foctball His playere betiove in him.

It'0 time we all atarted believing in them aspin.

Transition proceeds on schedule for ESF  By Brince Tallerman

A year-and-arhalf fiter the Board of Truatees of the New York State College of Environmental Science and Forestry (ESF) approved a controversial move to make ESF a two-year, upperdivision achool, "everythingis proceeding right on achedule," according to Rolla W. Cochran, assistant to the president.

Cochran said there in "no discrarmible difference, in student morale or in Esis relation whip whith Syracuse Univeraity as a result of ESF"a planned trandition frow fornyear to a junior and amior level inatitmation.

Although 75 per cent of ESF stadentes oppowed the trannition in a referendum Intet year, the budgetary circumstances surrounding BSF and its, mother institution, the State Uriversity of Now Yorle made. "arguments for the move crucially compelifing, "according to Esif Presifemt Bdward Paluner.

Cochran challenged the validity of the referendium ataying that "most of the stadents did not vote" Voter tar nopat art, in tiset, 51 per ennt

Another problem, according to the school's monthly newaletter, ESF '77, was that New, York State was delinquent in payinte, for SU -courses "because of policy queations, regarding ESFB future deaigh.
Cochran wain apparently referring to SUNY's disapproval of ESF's lower divition students taking + loyelervel couraes at SU.

1 think the Burean of the Budget. SUNY Central and maybe New York's legislative stafi were concerned at why SSF was brying so much instruction from a private institation, when SUNY is "already providing the money and faculty for these coursers." Cochran said. "I'm only surmising this," he added.

ESF is now receiving more favorable treatment from SUNY - three of eight lost facnity poaitions have bean restored and funding is on an apewing for the first time in three years. "Mhis semm to be due to the transitional move," Cochran maid.

Cochran explained that forestry atudents will gtill take the same amount of SU credit hours, sithough they-will talce upper-level instead of lower-level comprien.
One corteideration of the board in nating the decision to phase-out ESF's reahman and oophomore programs Was the pasaible erosion of the four. year academic experienice," according to Pahmer. Although Palmer dismissed has concery sayint that ESF*situdent body was largely comprised of transfer students anyway, queationing of some fonestry etudents indicated the concern 18 far from buried.

The transition isn't a good thing, said Bob Maimony, a junior. "By the end of their second year, students won't even know who their classmates are.
Steve Litwhiler, a senior, apeculated that students in a two-year program "don't get to maeet as many people." He also and transfers "are less active" than lowerdivieion students.

Another concern is the deterioration of academic quality, a trend some fores try students feel is implicit in the rec ruitment of community college graduates inatead of high schoo seniors.

As far as I know, our student government is still one of the most powerful and effective in the country. Through our student activity fee, allocated each year by SA. we support over 35 studen organizations. These organizations provide many quality aervices that few wniversities can match.

In addition, I believe there is student representation on every policy-making committee at this university.

Pedestrians

To the editor
For the past few years l-have witnegsed on more than one oc casion the near destriction of a student by an automobile. Thecauge was in the unhealthy and reckless manner that the pedestrian had taken in attempting to cross the street. Today it hoppened again, except this time the car wasn't able to stop in time.
in elementary school I recall all too well the crossing guards that vere ptationed zt eacin intersection to aid yourig childrent in crossing. ine meory was that the children were too youns to thice care of themelves, 50 they mast be aided by an adplt. As children grow up they generally learn to talceion more ree ponsibilities for themselves and for pheir friends. One woind not thimis their Iriends. One wouid not think college student would need help from a crossing guard, but from my experience, I would have to say they do need help. Studenta blindly wall out into the gtreet in front of cars, buges and truckes apparently without any concern whatsoever.
Several years acio a student walked out in the midde of the street in front of a car I was driving. I skidded to a stop; fortunately mis sing the atudent, who, inan irritated voice, asked:"Don't you kniow that the pedestrian has the night of way?" I replied, "Yea, but dead ones ton't." and drove away. The pointis that all the rightsin the world do not protect the human body from 3000 prounds of steel plostic and glase pounds of steel, plastic and glass Had the studont who I had almost Had the student who I had almost hit had the comrtesy. to cross at a crosswalk, an intersection, or had even looked around, that incident would never have happened.
Common courtesy - and the law - dictate the pedestrian's right of way over a car. But that doesin't give the pedeatrian the privilegeto abuse that right. If the pedertrian doesn' care about the automobile driver. then he should at least be concerned about his own body. After all, who really has more to lose?

The strength of students' numbers

It is difficult to determine if today's SU students are content or just unconcerned, satisfied or withdrawn. Activism, as it used to be known, is all but dead at SU. No one stages protests (well almost no one) and items which used to be called student demands are now student requests. Few of them are granted.
Still, it would not be wholly correct to say SU students are an inactive bunch. The university sponsors over 30 student funded organizations and an extremely successful intramural program. Students are occasionally involved (sometimes co-opted is a better word) in lower level decision-making roles in the university.
The driving force behind what might be called atudent interests at Syracuse has either been dissipated in university committees where students are heavily outnumbered, spent on more enjoyable activities, or was never there in the first place.

Whether students or their governmental representatives are aware of it, some of the university's policies are detrimental to their edveation and hazardous to their financial health.

One problem students traditionally ignore until it is too late is the university's budget. Student representation on the budget committee, like most SU committees, is insufficient. When the tuition hike is announced in April there is usually a flurry of activity and several letters of protest. Then the whole thing is forgotten.

If anything is to be done about this year's budget, SA representatives must demand greater representation on the university's budget committee and a more open scrutinization of the entire budget drafting process.
Another of the university's abuses in ins quest for cash is a phenomena known'zas "extended housing." The situation has not been as bad this year as last, but earlier this month 175 persons were sleeping, in dorm lounges, or "triples" that were meant to be doubles. The most troubling aspect of extended housing is that the university plans for it. Each year, university plans for it. Each year, knows it will have to find housing for more people than it can fit comfortably. This not only strains the ORL staff, it slows maintenence work, robs some dorms of floor lounges or libraries and is a great inconvenience for the students affected.

Food Service is also big on inconvenience, only its brand ususally costs more. For the sole purpose of taking in more money Food Service forces students who live in dorms to purchase a meal plan. The Commuter Plan, the least expensive of those offered, is not available to dorm dwellers. On its punchcard plans, Food Service refuses to refund unused punches. Admittedly, the student has not gotten a fair deal, but food service officials don't seem ready to do anything about that.

A less obvious, but equally inept process is the-way the university goes about awarding tenure and promotions. Most colleges have one or two students on an eight to 12 member, committee. Information on the quality of a candidate's teaching is haphazardly assembled in some schools and no university guidelines govern the process. A course evaluation catalog would go a long way toward solving some of these problems, but Academic Affairs Vice Chancellor John Prucha has apparently closed his mind on the subject. As a result, teaching is insufficiently evaluated and professors who specialize in teaching are not rewarded as well as those who are strong researchers. This has a negative effect on classroom teaching and education at SU.
The university is also blessed with a Board of Trustees whose purpose is to rubberstamp administrators' decisions and ignore students.
Add to this an unfair policy requiring faculty members to retire at 65 and the agenda for student change at Syracuse University becomes evident. The issues may not be the emotional ones which sparked protests in the 60s but they are vital to our education. If 10 per cent of the student body took an interest in any one of these topics, meaningful change would occur. We have in our numbers the potential to improve the quality of education and student life at Syracuse. Whether we will change the university or ignore it depends greatly on whether we are contented, or just unconcerned.

Undergraduates pay the price

The price of a convenient solution to any problem facing Syracuse Univer. sity is usually paid by its undergraduate students. The undergraduate several sections in English and American fiterature Eurvey courses have been combined, durvey courses have clase sizes from a usual $30-40$ gtudents to about 120 each, is freah. gtudents to about 120 evidence of that fact.

The problem the university faced cropped up last apring, when a small group of graduate teaching assigtante (TAs) in the Englieh department; tired of overwork and empty promises. defied the university and boycotted half their assigned teaching sectionis in protest.
The TAs" coumageons boycott, combined with the fact that the university was clearly abusing the TAs* rights by imposing excessive workloads on them, put the administration in a difficult gituation. So they agreed to abide by a long-standing SU policy and limit TA workioads to 20 hours a week. This is fine. Hut the reault, reversion to the practice of holding large lecture sections, discarded beveral yeara ago for pardemic reasonn, is not fine. We think the university is riading itmelf of one sbuse and exacerbating another, relieving the problems of erncinate students while further burdeningsits andergiraduates.
We wonder if the solution of hiring more TAs ever occurred to anyone besides us.

Granted, the university's cost are rising and its fiseal resources are finite. But tuition spirals, the university talks of grandiose plans to build malls and football stadia, while studenta are crammed into ever more crowded cramme
The problem is summed up in one word. Prioritiea. The university is placing too low a priority on what it seems ing too low a priority on what matter most: maintaining the quality of its academic programs. the quality of its academic programs.

In their boycott last spring, the English TrAs stressed two problems: academic damage to graduate student and to undergraduates. The former has evidently been alleviated. We're has evidenty beenting for SU to do something about the latter.

unch program from getting underway this school year. "There is no guarantee the work can be completed in two weeks," Fasching said. "It all depends on what kind of roadblocks we hit along the way." An estimate of $$ 4,000$, which ncludes labor. a three-unit sink, a hand washing sink and canopies to cover food being served, was given Wednesday for the necessary renovations by the Johnson Restaurant Supply Co.

Fashing said, "Personally, I'm very optimistic we can cut that figure in half?"

Univeraity groups such as Food Service Space and Facilities Systems, Phyaical Plant and General Storesmay be able to supply the labor and parta at cost cheaper than an outside firm, according to Fas ching.
If it is necessary to go off campus for services, bids will have to be taken to obtain the cheapest price, Fasching said.

Next week Fasching, chapel Dean John H. McCombe and Peter M. Baigent director of student affairs will meet to dis cuss funding and alternative actions, according to Fasching.

Funds to pay for the repairs will come from the chapel budget because it subsidizes the Community House.
The lunch program has grown in popularity, attracting over 100 people daily last year.

Deadline

Today is the last day to drop a regular course and receive a full tuition refund. Full-time undergraduates may receive refunds only if they drop below 12 credit hgurs.

The process to drop a course starts at the student's college office and ends at the Central Records Office, 106 Steele Hall.

"Scarecrow" is an unusual film, it strives to please its audience, butinsists on meandering and rambling. so the pleasures of the film become diminished.
The film gives Al Pacino and Gene Hacikman two especially fine roles, tailored for their special talents as actors. But the numerous settings designed to develop the odd contradictory friendship between the two heroes only serve to stall the storyline and confine the two actors. The group is under thr direct control of Anderson. It was he who conceived and developed the direction of Yes. Though the group contains fine musicians like Wakeman and Howe, both must work within Anderson's musical framework to be effective.
Significantly, Wakeman's-solo albums have no control and little originality. Howe's music is inconsistent, some in very good; most of it is awful. Neither artist can give himself the thing he needs: a musical situation where he can explore his virtuoso talent. Anderson can give them this, and it is one reason why Yes can flawlessly play such complicated music.
This concept worked very well in Close to the Edge, released in 1972. Anderson abstractly explores emotional and metaphysical change with his lyrics. "Close to the Edge" represents a coming together of the Yes concept.
Conceptral-music is very much Anderson's style, and it was carried on to "Tales of Topographic Oceans.' It is lyrically based on the Four Part Shastric Scriptures Anderson read in Paramhansa Yoganada's "Autobiography of a Yogi." It is Anderson's biggeststretch, his greatest leap, and a resounding flop.
Though it was his most sophisticated and profound work, it was too heavy on the rest of the group. It was especially hard on Wakeman who soon left the group. Though ali make contributions, "Tales" is dominated by Anderson and Steve Howe's guitar. Yes had lost itself, and instead they were pursuing Anderson's ideals with backing from Steve Howe's guitar.

Understandably, the album was unpopular because it wasn't very listenable. Under Anderson's continuing direction the tinuing direction, the group went on to make ReLayer with new keyboard man Patrick Moraz. But the music was not only-grating on their audience and Wrating on their group got sick of it and they divided to record solo albums.
With their latest album, "Going for the One," the group has almost reversed itself. In fact, the alburi is so much like "Close to the Edge," that definite comparisons can be made. There are marked differences, however, the major one being Anderson's control is not as apperent; rather, it seems to be indirect.
He has allowed the other musicians in the band to contribute. The studio atmosphere must have been right for the album contains the most creative arrangements they have done. Wakeman is back with the group, and guitarist Howe has settled for a more harmonious position after dominating "Tales" and the group's live act for years.
The album consists of five songs highlighted by "Turn of the Century" and "Awaken." In both, we have Yes at its absolute musical strength. Each member builds within Anderson's delicate musical and lyrical framework. It is not Howe's guitar, or Wakeman's keyboards, or even Andergon that dominates, but a grand synthesia has been formed.
Although it may not be the ultimate that Anderson seeks, (who could ever perform what Anderson seeks) "Going for the One" is their best "group" album. It effectivly best "group" album. It effectivly reflects each member's creativity. inspiration and optimism. It is a celebration of Yes as a concept, and they work in the close harmony that Anderson's metaphysics prescribes.

Three years ago, when Mahavishnu guitarist John McLaughlin made his entrance on stage with a full symphony orchestra and men in white suits. Ponty arrived in black and dazzled the audience with a sound they had never heard before, electric jazz violin. Staring in to each other's eyes the mister of guitar and the master of violin played spontaneous licks in unison that indicated a music that is mayic.
After training with \%appa and his stint with Mahavishnu Ponty brought out his own band in 1975 with a release called Imaginary Voyace. which featured a beautiful acoustic violin duet and the punchy bass lines of former Mahavishnu player Ralph Armstrong. With two years of road work the band is tight.

Most prescribed drugs aold at student Health Services are brand-name drugs instead of the less expensive generic ones.
Generic drugs are named for their chemical composition, not manufacturers trademarks. Brand name drugs usually have generic equivalents.
Shirley Ludington, pharmacist for Health. Services, said that generic drugs are not always as reliable as brandname drugs. She cited a case in Oklahoma where "they went to a program of generic drugs and found that there was an increased number of heart patienta getting a bad reaction. Generic drugs are quite often over or under potent."
Richard Corrao, pharmacist at Plaza 81 Pharmacy, disagreed. "The federal government took about 90 per cent of the brand names off their Medicaid payment list. and only allow payment on generic dirugs. The only reason generic drugs cost less is that hey don't do the research in developing the drug."
Corrao said his pharmacy carries generic drugs and that, if you buy from as and that, if you buy from a reputable supply house, you ha

Rosalinda Castro, pharmacist for the Upstate Medical Center, agreed that "essentially generic drugs have the same components as brand names." She said generic drugs "wouldn't be approved by the FDA if they weren' $t$ " as effective.

Hot Hurley is harried hurler

By Drew Schwartx A. year ago at this point in the Syracuse football season, starting quarterback Bill Hurley were frustration and inpleasantness. It was frustrating because Hurley knew he wasn't performing up to his capabilities. In the first six games he had completed only geven passes to his team and two to the opposition.

And it was unpleasant because Syracuse football loyaliste did not exactly encourage Hurley's tranaition from being a ram-owiented quarterback in high school to directing the offenge of amajor college team.
"Last year when he stepped out on the field for practice he used to get booed," teammate Larry King said. "The fans were just on him all the time and they never gave him the credit toward the end of the year that he deserved."

Though the situation was discomforting to Hurley, it was also just as bad for head coach Frank Maloney and bis assistants.
"We never doubted that Bill would eventually be successful, " offenaive backfield coach Tom Caughlin said. "It was difificult because he hadn't even taken a snap from center in the fall of his freshman year. The following spring we decided he was the type of quarterback we were looking for and knew he would come through."

The Dye Mard
Althongh most fans did not exhibit this attitude, one backed the coaching staff completely. Athletic Director Maloney's judgroent.
"I supported his decision in this situation and will support all others where personnel are involved." Dye said. "Coach Maloney's choice of Bill as quarterback a- year ago has proven to be an excellent one,"

Indeed it has. In last year's seventh game against Temple Hurley completed 11 of 20 passes for 193 yards and ran for 53. He continued his improvement the following week againat Pitt. Shattering the one-game total offerse record Hurley came very close to Hurney came very close wo almost singlehandediy puil ing off what whould have been football last upset in college football last year.

Hurley's dramatic succesa, however, eamed him only oc casional fan approval. Ifa rapid turnaround is almost as astounding as the ascendance of a previously unknown peanut farmer to the Presiden cy.

He just mapped; put it all together," back-up quarter back Ron Farmeski said. "He more or less took over the offense. He put it into high gear."

Hurley himself believen his improvement as a quarterback did not occur in one game though many fans hold this view.
"It was a lot of hard work," the junior quarterback remembered. "Lititle by litile I began to improve although it wasn't noticeable to many fans. Then in the Temple game everything jelled."

What a rush
Hurley has ahown contimued improvernent since his fratex ceptional game. By the end of last year Maloney called him as good an option quarter back as there is in the coun try." He was the team's lead ing rusher with 716 yarde and had passed for 638 Malone had pasaed for bor to Maloney had good reason to feel this way about his star quarter back.

As for his atatas this year, Hurley is the acknowledged leader of the Syracuse offense. "He is a real competitor," Coughlin said. *He is at his best when the pressure is on." Although Hurley is one of the main talents of the Syracuge offerse he realizes Syracuse offernse, he realizes that the whole is equal to the eum of its partis.
"If other teams key on me then the backs are going to get a lot of yardage because I'll pitch it to them on the option,' he said. "The offensive line playing well in the Washington game enabled us to move the ball."

As far as personal goals are concerned, Hurley is only worried about the team winning. Hed about the team winming He hopes to piay professionai college career but once again college career but once again hell have to make a big ad justment since he realizes it won't be as a quarterback. Don't bet against him making it.

Bill Hurley heads for daylight

SU takes to theroad; The boys face Illinois

The Orangeman have hed to answerg to a lot of people lately the fans, the press, theix coachiss and even themselves. Last Saturday they answered a number of questions against Washington.

But the question this week will be whether the Orangemen really do have some winning blood in their veins, or if last week's win was simply a matter of Christmas coming early to Syracuse this year.

This Saturday's game in Champaign, Ill-will provide agcud opportunity for the Orangemen to answer this question. They face ame Fighting Mmi" of minois University a team of about and run somewhat similar offenges.
Illinois runs out of an I-formation, which is usually geared more toward power than finesse. But the Mini run a finesse I (SU runs a finesse veer), using a lot of options and, like SU, throwing only on special occasions.
Emotions will. Emotions will.
"This week preaents a different challenge to us"," coach Frank Maloney said. "hast week we had something to prove. And we still have a lot more to prove. We're not overly contented. But so many times a team plays great one week and then has a tough time getting up mentally the next week.

"I wast very proud of the team," SU head conch Bill Gioettal said after the reme. "We're just lacking offense. They don't realize that you have to put the ball in the nets Although the final score showed Cornell on top 2-O the Hik kedadded a meaningless corner kick yoal at 4:3:49 after the SU spirit was mmished) the entire Syracuse defense should be commended. While the Orange offente was tak. ing no shots in the first half and only seven in the last 45 minutes of play, the SU defense was holding off a Big Red offense that marched downfield continually throughout the garne. SU goakie Mike Wescott played probably his best game of the season while co-captains Pete Arthur and George Olsen headed or kicked the ball out of the goal area.
But it was the SU offerne that was once again invisible. dohn Springer, a halfback, took the shot which tested Comeirgoalie Rich Mebane but the Cornell netkeeper stopped the drive. The stop helped seal the defeat, the fourth time in five losses that Syracuse has been shut out. On the way home, Goetiel stood on the bus and told his players it wasn't entirely the and toid his players it wasn't entreis the offense's fault. He told the players that the fullbacks and halroacks had to help set up the plays and that they would eventually put everything together.
In the roeanwhile, an SU fullback (a rarely scoring position) is tied for second in team scoring and the Orangemen are probably closing in on the university record for number of times being shut out in a single season.

ABC executive advises journalism job seekers

College mtudents seeking a job in the media should get a well-rounded hberal artseducation and set reasonable goals for themselves, ad vised Elmer'W. Lower, vice-president of cor porate affairs for the American Broadcasting Company.
Lower is a visiting professor this semester at the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Commumications.

Yet to effectively cover today's news, Lower said tatudents need to have a working knowledge of "how government works at different levels along with good Enghish and history courees.

He also encouraged communications students to get a background in economics. "It seerns to me that students I've talked to have shied away from economics, and I don't think they should." Some acience coursen, auch as physics, would be helpful, as well as the basic sciences, he said.

During his 44 years as a newsman Lower has served, at home and abroad, in a variety of positions; incinding a atint with CBS News from 1953-69, foreign correspondent for Life magazine from 1945-51 and Washimgton bureau chief for NBC Newb in the exarly 1900 m .
He whs also president of ABC News for 11 years, a term bracketed by two historic eventas the 1963 aspassanation of John F. Kenmedy and the resignetion of Prexident Fichard M. Athough it was not a news coverage problem, Lower said, he "had to defend our news and con vince people that we Were fair and that Nixion and Aknew were wrong.
As for the immediate future of television newb, Lower contended that the evening network news should be expanded to one hour from its current half-hour format. He said the seven to 10 film stories and 10 to 14 verbal stories that account for the 22 minutes of retwork news each night don't allow the networks to do an adequate job.

As Little as three years ago, Lower was op timistic that a full hour of network news would be presented each night by 1978-79. Today, however, he doubts this change will occur within the next few years because of strong objections raised by hundreds of network-affiliated stations.

Lower flies in from New Yoric City every Friday morning to teach an afternoon course on problems of broadcast journaligm. The class comprised of 18 graduate gttudents and geven undergraduates, spent the Eirst two weeks discussing the network evening news

Tha presidential elections are of par ticular concern to Lower aince he coordinated ABC's coverage of the 1968 and 1972 political conventions, work he described as his "Bpeciality."
One other topic that concerns Lowter is the students knowledge and use of fundamental writing skills. Looking back over previous teaching experiences, including three semesters at Hunter College in New York, Lower said he insists that people write well before they getou of gehool. I can't teach them to wite at this level, but I can rub their noses in theix mis takes.

Lower said he believes the decline in the reading and writing ability of tociays atudent wil not atop antil the schools go back to the basics.
"I learned to write the English language because some old-maid schoolteacher in Kan sap City, Mo. made us go up to the blackboard and wouldn't let us git down until we could diasect a bentence and diagram it

Lance vs. the media

Before the Bert Lance affair fades from political memory there in one point that needs clavification. Many consider that Lance was the target of a press hype, a victim of a "Watergrte backiash" or a witch hunt.

We did it to the Nixon administration, let's prove we can do it to the sood old country boys from Georgin," the preas supposedly whispered among themsel ves as they set out to nail Lance's hide to the wall ower the long newsless summer. Actually, the nation's media not only performed a constitutional duty, they offered Americans a brief, disturbing look at Washington political policy.

The Carter administration Eame into office promising to be above veryone else in ethics and clean living. When the media began to raise serious questions about the check bouncing of Office of Management and Hudget Director Lance, the Senate committee that confirmed the Carter appointee quickiy sounded retreat and reopened the hearings. If it were not for the persistence of the press, the public would atill be living under the illusion that Carter and his bunch were just babes in the woods of Wuahington.

As with any group, certain members of the media probably went too far in their practice. Hut it is better to go too far than not far enough.
The key to the Lance affair was that the Carterites responded like they were in a crisis situation. Withdrawing into a tiphtly-knit Croup of Southern kentlemen, the

One hopes that the Carter ad ministration faces their next crisis with more forthrightness and honesty then they did in the Lance affair. The most disturbing aspect of the Lance affair is not whether the media was too aggressive, but that the Carterites copped out and used the old-atyle politics and stonewalling practices of the past. Those are practices this country should do wractices because I feel (for the firat time in a long time) that I am actanally part of you. I haven't felt it for a long time. Maybe it's because I can see the proverbial light at the end of the tunnel; in eight monthsi'll graduate from here, steppingout of the society which I helped to form, and atepping into a acociety as formleas as an ameba. I'm aure I'll have no trouble getting into the gociety. There's a place for everyone. And if not, then it's not all that difficult to make yoar own place. I can cut it; Im certain I can cut it.

By the way, Tom wants me to send his negrarda. He's not living at the his regarda. He's not Inving ak the house this year, either. I happened to quietly agreed it was a good'idea to quietly agreed it was a good'idea to get out of the house this year. As I was leaving, I thought to myself,it's just not for me anymore. The house was good - the whole frat was good - it certainly lets yoin keep your youth. It drage you back, telling you the youthful activities which you've always enjoyed are destimed to be remembered as the best, the warmest, the most spirited moments of your life. And it's right, except for one thing: they aren't real.

The things that go on inside the house - inside this whole achool aren't real. They aren't real becauae' they ignore the rest of the world, they ignore the rest of the world, they aren't synchronized with the rest of the world I don't want to sound bitter: I realize that that is how it has to be. College is an elaborate play in which the actors should be polished to perfection, the self-confidence should be brimming on the surface.

So how come I don't feal like saying, "Look out world, here I come?" I know my stuff. I expreas myself well. I could get all kinds of jobs - my field is begging for guys ife me. What is wrong with me that I have no desire to go out and grab the world by the tail? That I haveno deaire to go out and do anything?. I suppoae many of mycontemporaries feel the same. I imagine you, Father, felt the same when you were my age. I have a question: When does the feeling surge through you, telling you, showing you the light, the diretion which you must inevitably follow? When will I receive the sign?

Well, I guess I'd better get going. I have some work to do.

The next time I see you will probably he Thanksgiving Maybe by then I'li be saying, "Look out world, here I come" Do you think so?

Mandatory retirement: absurd and wasteful

Suppose there was a policy through which the university systemically rid itself of some of its best teachers. You might call it absurd. The university calls it mandatory retirement.

At age 65 Syracuse University forces all staff members to retire. There are few exceptions and the university gets as much mileage from publicizing those few as it can.

SU and most universities enforce mandatory retirement under the grise of social good. It is good, they argue, to bring "new blood" into teaching. What they do not say is that a tenured professor costs the university more than a young instructor or assistant professor.

While the policy is a blessing for the university's budget makers, it is a detriment to academic quality. Fine teachers, those who really appreciate and cultivate the art of instruction, are few and far between. Anyone with an understanding of their art knows that it matures with age.

If the university is really arguing for new blood in the classroom, they might team an older professor with a younger one. The university's failure to hire new English professors, even in the face of record-size sophornore class and a decreased workload for TAs, dilutes the credibility of its "new blood" argument.
lronically it was just such an argument that prompted the Senate Human Resources Committee to approve an amendment to a pending bill Friday that exempted tenured university professors from the proposed minimum mandatory retirement age of 70 in a pending bill.

The Associated Press says the amendment was offered "on behalf of the academic hierachy." Whether this means the American Association of University Professors (AAUP) was concerned about the strength of their union or University administrators were concermed about the strength of their budget, the debate was obviously not decided on the basis of the two most important issues: quality of education and respect for the merits of individuals.

If education is themain goal of the university, then the university must. adapt its resources to the pursuit of that goal. There are economical ways for Syracuse and other universities to achieve academic excellence. Tomorrow, part two of this editorial will look at practical alternatives to mandatory retirement.

Fiscal fixation

To the editor,
Oine need not ponder long in congidering Profeesor Tussing's letter (DO. Sept. 27) before realizing his is another in the long line of quantitative economic analyses that pervade academia and placue potential guality programs. Why we at Syracuse University persist in blaming all of our problems on money before exploring other possible origina remaina an unanswered question.
The seal problem with Syracuse football does not lie in areas of accounting. It is a human problem. People are too lazy to nake the effort to care about the football program here in the univeraity community. It is paxt of a devastating plague that has apread throughout our country. The American "dream'" has become the American "scheme." We sit on our rears, let others do the work, and our rears, let others do the work, and then try to be around on payday. And if it is a bad payday, we scream for someone's neck. Laziness has become fashionable.
If more people would become involved in helping to support the teamr, if only by providing moral aupport in the stands, then perhaps the inapirational play of the team that played against Washington would appear zoore often. It was an amazing caaching feat for Frank Maloney to instill enough incentive in his players to give the inspired performance they gave, after put ting up with the abuse their "ardent" fans gave them after the North Carolina State game.
Can the fans and supporters bounce back and become the twelfth man on the field for what may be the very last Penn State game at old Ar chbold? If we can wipe out the lethargic sickness that has debilitated the moral support that used to help win ball games (a screaming, involved group of fans can inspire a player to give that extra effort when that player is tired and has almost nothing left to give), the Orangemen may just pull the upset of the year! What better way to say thank you to old Archbold for all of the great games and times!

Letters from our prisons

The world is full of lonely people of all varieties. Perhaps the one single group that suffers universally from the affliction of loneliness is the population of our prisons.
Prisoners who are cut off from their families and unable to move about freely reach out through the only real form of contact with the outside world they have at their disposal. They write letters. Many of them write here and ask us to help them find correspondents, people to write them and ease their loneliness.

We have mentioned aeveral times on this page the large numbers of letters we receive from prisoners. We have offered addresses to interested members of the university community, and we have received a very encouraging response.

Students, faculty or staff who are still interested in writing a prisoner but who have not yet requested an address may send a card or letter to the DO, 1101 E. Adams St. Syracuse, N.Y. 13210 . # Brothers:have co-op system in fraternity

By Brian O'Neill Where else on campun can you get a room. three meals a day and a bunch of parties for only $$ 750$ a semester?
That's the question prospective brothers of the fraternity of Alpha Chi Rho have been asked these past two weeks of fraternity rush. Of the 25 fraternities on campus, itis the only one with a cooperative ongtem.

Alpha Chi Rho first became a cooperative operation in the fall of 1971 , after 66 years of being a conventional fraternity. It was apparently done for no other reason other than "they wanted to try it," according to an alumnus, Jon Golden.
All cooking, cleaning, maintenance - everything at AXP - is done by the 19 Axp - is done by the 19 houge at 131 College Place. While nearly all of them admit there are flaws in the system, the money saved seems to make it worthwhile.
According to Treasurer Sal Branca, the $$ 750$ fee has just risen after three years at $$ 700$. Approximately $$ 210$ is allotted for board, $$ 160$ for rent, and $$ 52.50$ for the social budget. Maintenance and utilities total $$ 145$, dues to the national fraternity office are $$ 38$ (eight dollars for the Spring $$ 144.50$ pays for telephone ser$$ 144-50$ payi for telephone service and other miscellaneous vice and other miscellaneous costs. These figures are not costs. These figures are not and may vary from semester to semester. He often borrows from one budzet to meet ex penses in another area.

Compared to SU housing and other fraternity houses, AXP seems to economize well. The charge for an SU dormitory room Glarge residence hall - single occupancy) is currently $$ 595$. per semester, and the three-menl-a-day Campua Plan costa $$ 478$. The Theta Chi Frateraity, a non co-p house, charges $$ 005$ per semester, allotting $$ 30$ of this to social activities. However, it retains a cook to prepare 10 meals per week, Monday through Friday for the 21 . brothers. On the weekends each brother prepares his own meals.
The AXP house is not at full capacity presently, so seven of capacity prosentiy, so seven of he 19 brothers have single rooms. (It can hold 22 comfortably, said House Manager Davably, said House Manager Dave Bennett.) Bennett said the brothers have almost comthe brothers have almost complete freedom to make changes in their rooma, and that the cost of any- permanent improvernents in the room.
Each of the AXP brothers must perform a coop duty. He. has a choice of being.a steward, a cook or a member of the kitchen cleanup or house cleanup crews.
The two stewards, Bob Doran and Laxry Cromwell, buy the food and other essentiall for the house. They work tiala for the house. They work on a $$ 4,000$ budget.
The food is bought in bulk, Doran explained, and they make a menu from theirinventory. He also looks for sales, and often consults a friend, who is a nutrition major. before he makes a menu.
The treasurer encourages the stewards to save money.
said Doran. He eaid one of the beat ways to do this is to buy a less expersive cut of meat.
"I'll buy a sirloin tip rather than a regular sirioin steak. The difference in taste is not an great as the difference in price."
The meals are prepared by seven cooks, each working three meals per week. The lunches ane prepared by one. person while two cook the dinners. Each brother must prepare his own breakfast, prepare his own breakiast, dinner because the brothers like to take advantage of the beer specials at two local bars, TC's and Hungry Charley's.) TCs and Hungry Charley's.) It Gsually takes two hours to cook a dinner and one hour to prepare a lunch, according to Bennett. Their biggest complaint in past years has been the stewarda* failure to purchase enough supplies.
Though there are a great many complainta et dinner, the quality of the meals is generally good, according to President Howard Bush. There have sometimes been problema in having the meals prepared on time, though nobody can remember a time when a meal was not prepared at all, he added.
There are also seven men on "KP" each man working three meals per week, with one on lunch and two on a dinner. The lunch and two onadinner. The ponsible for keeping the rest of ponsible for keep

Most of the brothers on the cleanup crews spend about four hours per week on their job. As. with the cooks, there were no complaints about it cuttimg into their free time. The brgers problem at AXP has been the absence of aanctions againgt brothers skipping work, according to ex-president. Peter Reilly. Thero are no fines; the men are just expectred to do their joba.
"Pressure from the other brothers seems to be the only way to correct faults in the aystem. Fines are too imper sonal, and they invariably fail," gaid Reilly.
Peer grönp pressure is been in the maky notes that can be found on the brilletin boardis of the house. These are usually humorous, often obscene noten complaining about everything from the lack of parmesan cheese to the smell in the aecond-floor bathroom. They are usually anonymous, or Written onder peseudonymos like "The Mad Complaimer."

Latt year the houge cleanup crew was a favorite target, Bennett said. Because of this good-natured haxassment there was a definite im provement in performance, he added. Deapite its problems, Bumh think the co-op ayatemi is working. "A lot of people have visions of utopia," he said "They don't see the syatemas working unless it works at 100 working unless it works at 100 per cent eniciency. But this is unrealistic.

It builds a sense of unity among the members, and it gives the individual brothers a sense of responsibility: "senior Robert Farington waid. "t also saves us a hell of a lot of money."

The social program is an integral part of life at AXP. There in $$ 1,000$ social budget this Bemeater, and social chair man Fip Namcuno has alrendy thrown two paxties and has eeveral others in the works. Some of the money hat also been used this year to keep beer on tap 24 hours a day.

Even with the relativelyiow rates at AXP, ome of 'reastrier Brancs's big'tent problemps is late payments by the brothers He catually manages to increle the books a bit but last year the anmual AXP formal had to be cancelled due to an absence of fufde.
Branca said there is over 8800 in ouretanding bills due from in outstanding.bils cue brothers This honactive brothers. This has ac cumalated over a period of several years, he said, and the brotherhood can realistically hope to get only about half ofit back.

Again, there is no penalty for not paying the bill on time Secretary ammes Wetherald ex plained that the other brothers usually cover for thode who are unable to get the money in on Entana.
"This is a fraternity, not a business," he Baid:

with a "mixture of clinical interpretation and political change, "a dream of human perception will be realized. Dr. Coles criticized the paychological profession. He spoke of a new theory tha "most people are stuck at a cer tain stage in mora development"" He asked "Who is not so stuck? Well there's Christ, and Gandhi, and no doubt the one who developed the theory."
Coles said, "If you can't listen to the content of your neighbor, ask where you're Breaking away from 24-hour parental supervision is something which many college students happily anticipate. For better or for worse, a family atmosphere is usually left behind with Mom and Dad.

There are places on campus, however, where aspects of home can be found. Some are even complete with parents. One such place is Alpha Gamma Delta at 709 Comstock Ave.
Many sororities still have house mothers, but Alpha Gamma Delta is one of the few at SU which have house parents. Although Dick and Kathy During are in their early 20 as and have only been married for about one year. married for about one year, parents to 23 giris.
House 23 giris.
House managers describe the couple's function more accurately. Their main duty is to see that everything runs smoothly in the house. Hiring smoothly in the house. Hiring and firing maids and and firing maids and houseboys, planming the menu and ordering food are some of their duties. Mr. and Mrs. During are also the official host ing are also the official host and hostess of the sorority and must be present to chaperone all social events.
Enforcing rules is not a primary task. Mrs. During explained that their presence helps to maintain order. Mr. During added that since many of the regulations are devised by the girls, they respect each other's wishes and rarely need to be reminded of any rules.
Both expressed appreciation over the cooperative attitude the girls have toward each other and toward them as house parents. "Them girls govern themselves," said Mr. During. "We don't stay up at night until all the guests have supposedly left and then check supposedyleft and thencheck that. If a problem arises then that. If a problem arises th someone will come to us."
Although first epprehen
Alhough matapprehensive about compramising their girls are very considerate of them. "Our apartment is on the first floor so we're kind of isolated from the girls' quarters. Our door is usually open, but when it's closed we're never bothered.
One of the main reasons that Mr. and Mrs. During became house parents was because they missed a university atmosphere. Working at the house allows them to keep their teaching positions at area Bchools while taking graduate courses toward Master's in education. Mr. During stated that the experience will be helpful to thern when looking for other jobs.

House parents receive free room and board, plus a salary. Mrs. During described the job as "a unique way for a married couple to start out and make money." She added she does not have to cook or wash dishes, as domost wives. "The job's sreat!" exclaimed Mrs. During. "A house as beautiful as this and with maide - we'l never live this nicely again."
Their timespent at the house is very flexible. They are normally there at dinner, but they are not required to be at the house by any set time at night Occasional weekend tripsare permissible pe long as the experutive council chairman and the alumni of the sorority are notifidin advance They bave notined frike and over whenever they like, and may also invite people for dinner with the cirls.

Mrs. During, who had previously been an RA at jpstate Medical Center, en joys her work as a house parent much more than her position in a dorm. 'It's a completely different gituation here. The girls want to be together and are eager to please each other. They. are all very cooperative.
Both Mr. and Mrs. During are pleased with the job, which they have had sizice last semester. He feels that the benefits are numerous and stated, "If we ever left now we have 1,000 friends who would kill to get the job."
Maryam Elhindi, president of the sorority, told of the problems encountered last year, when the house was year, when the house was several months."We were supposed to be going to school. supporting the house, participating in extracurricular activities; it's not set up to be a activities; it's not set up then to doing things like ordering food and planning meals."

Bartenders look out for minors' fake ID

By Alix Mitchell If yon're a 17-yeax-old freshman planning to go out drinking, how do you "prove" you're 18 ?
Unless you have the look of a sophisticated 18 -year-old, it is nilkely that any of the pepular forms of fake ID will eceive cainpus bartenders.
The Orange Cafe, The Varsity and Marshall Wines and Liquors, Ltd. have gigna posted requesting proof of age.
Proof of age is either a picture ID containing date of birth, or a piece of ID with a birth date and a Aeparate pictare ID.
A Syracuse University ID alone will not be accepted.
A mail-order Sheriffs ID, identifying you as a resident of an obscure place, will not do either. If you have a sharp razor blade and a steady hand, an altered IDmight sneak past an inexperienced eye.
If a fake ID fools a bartender, it may not fool an undercover policeman. "lf we accepted someone's ID and an undercover policeman asked for proof and found it invalid, we could be closed down for sood," said Mary Lou Donnely of Marshall Wines and Liquors, ltd.
The person accepting the Ils would be charged with serving a minor and the minor would be charged with misrepresentation.

Depending on the number of minors served and the nurnber of previous offenses, the store's or bar's liquor license can be suspended for one to 30 days.
A survey of campus bars showed none have been charged with serving minors. Last summer the New York State Liquor Authority ismued a warning to liquor-license establishments that minors would be on the campus during the Sumrner Orientation Program. Mark Janov, manager of Hungry Charley's. said this was to insure that they would be aware of the problem.
"If they're obviously young but have what looks like valid ID, you still have the right to refuse them," Bob Kesel, a bartender at the Orange, said. -It's up to each person to make his own decision on what he'll accept."
Kesel added that he has proofed persons between 24 and 26 years old.
"It's embarrasaing, but you have to be careful.'
Mike Palinski, a bartender at Tecumseh Golf Club (TC's), said- TC's does not have a problem with minore. "If I see a new face, I check them out. Most of the people that come here are rekulars. You can tell the yount ones, they look lost.*
I'C's has not been closed down for violations in connection with its liquor license.

Nigerians celebrate independence day

By Frank Scimone

Nigeria's 17th independence day was celebrated at the Commons in Slocum Hall Saturday night.

Speakers at the event emphasized Nigeria's need for educated people to helpedevelop the country, and warned against the temptation of staying in the United States instead of retur ning to Africa where they are needed most.

Sponsored by the Nigerian Students Union the event consisted of a cultural exhibition of Nigerian arts and crafts and a fastion show of traditional Nigerian clothing.

Debo Adejamo, of the Nigerian Stadente Union, said, "I'm not telling those who aren't me tall them that the temperatare tomorrow in syracuse is 40 degrees.
Olaitan. Obenewa, former treasurer of the Nigerian Students Union, who has received hia Ph.D. from Syracuse University, spoke of returning to Africa while at the same time being grateffil to the United States and to SU for providing an education.
"The best thing to do is to thank the U.S., to thank the university, and to say byebye to Syracuse. My fellow Africans and my fellow Nigerians are needed more in Africa than in the U.S. Our education is meeded more to develop AIrica. I'm here to celebrate my National Day here because my plane ticket did not come," here because MeRoberts warns, "If you become obese as a teen-ager, it's very hard to do much about it as an adult."

He feels dieting among students is haphaxard and dangerous. "Even when you lose 100 pounds, it's very easy to gainit back, he aaid. Notmany or the diets students follow are euccessful.

A balanced meal consists of food from the four basic food groups: meat milk and milk products, cereal and grains, fruits and vegetables. Each meal should contain one item from each group:

It is also important that each of the six nutrients be consumed daily. The nutritionist listed the nutrients: water, carbohydrates, fats or lipids, protein, minerals, and vitamins.
Keeping all this in mind, the nutritionist warned that in order "to lose one pound of weight, one must be short 3,500 calories."

Even the most active person should not consume more than 2,000 calories daily.

The solution? "Physical activity is the way to talke off weight. Not crazy, diets. The problem is simple," MeRoberta said. "The individual who is overweight is the one who doesn't 18 overweight is

Lost Peking man fossils fead man on search

By David Okur
Christopher Janus, a Chicago burinessman, has become involved in a search which, if successful. could provide valuable insights into provise vast.

Speaking to about 60 people in the Founders Room of Maxwell Hall last Friday; Janus recounted his fascinatirig story.
Five years ago Janug-was chosen to travel to China as a cultural -observer. While visiting the Peking Man Museum, the Syracuse alumnus was approached by the museum's director. The official informed Janus of the 1926 discovery of remains of some 40 people near Peking. These skeletons, uncovered by Canadian an thropologist Davidson Black, were believed to have come from an unresearched period the evolutionary process.

These bones, described by. Janus as "the most important anthropological find in history "were given to American Marines just before the Japanese invasion of China in 1941.

Peking man was thus stored in footlockers and readied for shipment to the United States. A few days later the Japanese completed the bombing raid on Pearl Harbor. China was overrun and the 181 Marines entrusted with the priceless remains were captured.
Since accepting the plea of the museum director to help locate the skeletons.Janus has ventured halfway around the globe, coauthored a bools on the subject and initiated a $$ 150,000$ reward for information leading to the whereabouts of the lost remains.
Janus travels have taken him from the 86 th floor of the mompire State Building to the nderground vaults of Taiwan All his efforts, however; have failed to unover the fossils.
Janus emphasized his desire to continue his search, stressing the possibility that

Minorities attend law discussion

Minority students were given insight into legal op portunities and the fessibility of applying to law school during "Law Day," held in Maxwell Saturday afternoon, according to Bill Simmons of the Student Afro-American Society (SAS).

Lew Day, Bponsored by SAS and Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity, included presentations by Jamea M. Douglas, Syracuse University College of Law director of admissions. and Lester Mackey, admissions representative from the University of Pennaylvania. Various SU

Workshops to be held

Two two-day workshops focusing on testing and course evaluation for gradiate as sistants (GAs) and teaching assoigtants (TAs) will be held during the next two weeks as part of graduate orientation. The workshops will try to help GAs nnderstand the development and interpretation of testa that could be used in "Syracuse University courses, how to deaign achievement exams how to check reliability and validity and how to use the testing and evaluation aervices at SU.

The Gradnate Student. Organization, the Center for Iristructional'. Developnent and the University Senate Committee on Instruction are sponsoring the workshops.

alumni were also present to answer questions.
Ulysses $J$. Connor, director of student activities, coordinated the discussion, which attracted a turnout of about 45 aturacted a turnout of about 45 seniors.
James Douglas made a presentation concerning the Bakice case now before the Supreme Court. The case involves a medical student who is challenging the minoxity quota admissions policy of the University of California, Davis. Grade paint average and LSAT acores are not the only criteria used in admitting. minority students as is the case for most applicants.
Khristi Duboe said she went to Law Day somewhat confused and insecure about law school possibilities and left feeling encouraged and with a poaitive attitude Bill Simmons of SAS and Derek Taylor of Kappa Alpha Psi are looking forward to sponsoring more events of this nature with other campus organizations, including one to explore other career fields.

several legitimate clues may exist.

He affirmed his belief that the recovery of the remains will aid anthropologists in piecing together an episode of man's past and promote better United States-China relations.
The Chinese feel we have these fossils and have not returmed them and this does nothing for relations," admitted Janus.
"Some Chinese rafer to these fossils as their crown jewels," he said, and they may, if rediscovered and returned to the Chinese, aid in fostering undergtanding between the two nations.

Songwriter Newman sets stories to music

By Bruce Pilato

Somewhere in Loa Angeles there lives a very special man. He doesn't look special, he's just like you and me. A quiet man who tends to ahy away from the public eye, he likes to spend time writing songs or watching foot ball on TV. He's a master tunesmith, a storyteller, a comedian, an historizan, a genius. His name is Randy Newman.

About nine yearamgo, Newman came out of nowhere. People like Dylan, Streisand, Fonstadt, Raitt, Cocker, and Three Dog Night began to notice this Californian songwriter. It wasn't long 0 before Randy Newman became the aongwriters' gongwriter:

For a few years he released a series of critically acelaimed albums that gained him little more than a cult following. That changed in 1974 when he released a concept album about life in the South called Good Old Boys. The diac opened up the world of Newman's songs to a wide, receptive audience. After some touring and a couple of brief TV appearances fincluding guest hosting Satarday Night Live), he returned to reclusion. It has been three years since the release of his last years since the release and people soon started to wonder, what ever happened to Randy? This week the answer came. Newman is still alive and well, and he Newman is stin alive and well, and he has just released the most ambitiousetfort of his career. Entitled Little Criminals, Newman has written and recorded an album filled with classic American songs.

Little Criminals," like most previous Newman albums is pure Americana. His songs are so sensitive to the American way of life and its ideals, one can't help but relate to them. We are all present in them: the corner frocer, the old immigrant who still dreams of life in the old country, the pirl next door. Newman skillfully brings these characterg to life, and they become familiar faces.
Newman gives us a new tale with each lasting melody. In fact, he once described himself as a person who puts short stories to music. Newman is the William Faulkner of contemporary pop music.
"Little Criminals" is Newman's best ulbum yet. He incorporates the essence of his already well-known musical style with a new, fresh rockish base. The results are brilliant.

Alongs with him on this record are

Randy Newman
most of the Eagles, J.D. Souther, members of Pocoand Linda Ronstadt's band, Ry Cooder, and ex-Beatle gidemen Klavs Voorman and Jim Keltner. The musical performances are flawless; the harmony vocals heavenly. As on all Newman discs, the strings, arrangements and production shine throughout.
Newman's songwriting is in top form. He's just as sad, cynical and compassionate as always. This album also features some absurd humor. Included on "Little Criminals" is a song that Newman wrote for the movie version of "Fagtime., Entitled "Sigmund F'reud's Impersonations Of Albert Einstein in America," it features some of Newman's most inspired lyrics: And little boys playing baseball in the rain/America, America/Step aut into the Light/You're the best dream man has ever dreamed/Ard may all your Christmases be white.

Newman will appear tomorrow night at the Civic Center,with Tom Rush. Newram is always fun, and you'll be back in your American homes in time for the late rnovie... and so will flandy.

Frisbee Wars take place on Olympian battleground

By Jon Rabiroff
In the year 1977 in a fair-off dommitory on Mount Olympus there occurred a classic confrontation between good and vin. It came to be known as Frisbee Wars!
Down the hall came the imperial frisibee troopers of the discs of plastic. The good and righteous people of Flint Hall heard theople coming and prepared for the worst.
Despite their small numbers, due to the fact that most of the good and righteous people of Flint were playing softball, they stood in defisnce of the mean, puppy-hating forces of evil. Whe with cat-like quickness struck with cat-like quickness, hurling their deadly diacs at the brave but undermanned Flintites. They put upa valiant fight but gradually were forced to flee from the hall in defeat When the good gid righteous people of Flint returned from their game they were told what had happened and soon discovered all their meal cards had been stolen. Obviously this was an attempt

ENIOR YEAR.

If you are interested in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the NUPOC-Collegiate Program (NUPOC is short for Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate), and if you qualify it can pay you as much as $$ 611$ a month for the remainder of your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you will receive an additional year of advanced technical education, education that would cost thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $$ 3,000$ cash bonus.

It isn't easy. Only one of every six applicants will be selected, and there are fewer than 300 openings. But those who make it find themselves in one of the most elite engineering training programs anywhere. With unequalled hands-on responsibility, a $$ 24,000$ salary in four years, plus travel, medical benefits and education opportunities.

For more details on this program, ask your placement officer when a Navy representative will be on campus, or call the Officer Program Office listed below; or send your résumé to Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203. The NUPOC-Collegiate Program. It can do more than help you finish college; it can lead to an exciting opportunity. OFFICER PROGRAMS OFFICE, NAVY RECRUITING DISTRICT, 315-423-5490

Orange battle past Fighting Illini 30-20

"Big Ten..Big deaL..They got nothing
-Don Wells Syracuse Offensive lineman By Mike McAlary
Champaign, 171 . College football in the Big Ten really is a many-splendored thing. The marching bands not. only march, but they atutter-step and juke about as well...in unison. They seemingly insane acrobats. They have Cadillac ambulances and swing bands on the sidelines but most important of all, the baton twirler doesn't drop her baton.
They have all this, plus, as Illinois did this weekend, more than 50,000 screaming, singing; laughing, crying fans for its home games. Often they are a show within the show.
Syracuse, as a private institution, has little of that Bort of thing. Our baton twirlers drop their batons. We have a criminal element in the stands.
Regardless of the pageantry and the like, Syracuse does have one thing in its favor. Plainly speaking, the offense is a rush.
The Syracuse University Orangemen won their first game on the road since November of 1975 on Saturday. That's right, 1975. In the meantime they had experienced mental and physical trauma in seven cities all the way from Corvaliis, Oregon to Chesnut Hill, Massachusettis. For nearly two years, traveling time for the Orange had meant no vacation.
All that changed this weekend when Frank Maloney returned home to Illinois and the Big Ten to upset the Fighting Illini 30-20.
"This is the most satisfying win I've had on the road," Maloney said. "It feels great to win on the road. It feels especially great to win at home."

The SU coach had good reason to be excited after his team's sometimes methodical, but mostly exciting 30 point performance.
Bill Hurley passed and rushed for almost 200 yards. Art. Monk, the sophomore who had trouble walking during the North Carolina State game, cut, sliced and dashed for 98 yards. Dennis Hartman, Dennis Haxtman, the freshman who proved instromental in last week's $22-20$ win over Washington, fushed for 55 yards on 11 carries. Jim Sessier, the genior shortgreatest grame in his college career. He gained 58 yards of 15 carries.
What all this means, of course, is that the opposition could not be just "Hurley conscious'. Suddenly, the Orange have a backfield that can do the job too.
"I always had confidence in them." Hurley said. "It was just a matter of getting the right-blocks. Hell, this was some of the best blocking I've ever had today."
It was, also, the best game overall yet for the Orange on offense.

From the first beries of downs, when they recovered an Illinois fumble on the 36 and then went in to gcore on a 32 yard touchdown pass to the last, it was obvious that the Orange could penetrate the fightin llini defenge.
Hurley was simply magnificent at times. Playing with a stacked backfield he rolled right, rolled left. Threw long and threw short. There was not even a hitch with the pitch: He even saved an important 50 -yard run for the end of the Eame. Leading 27-20 with just over four minutes to play, Hurley started a dxive that was to put the game out of reach. On the first play he handed off to Monk, who was lucky to get two yards.

No class struggle at SU

When the 1977 football season winds down, so will the careers of Frank Maloney's first recruits.
In his initial recruiting year at Syracuse (1974), Maloney made a lot of promises. One of those was all the team's healthy seniors would go to the team sest coast to play Oregon State in the first game of this season. All 16 healthy first game of this sea Beniors were taken.
'Coach Maloney made a lot of promises, fullback Jim Sassler said, and 'he kept them all, although at times it didn't seem he would.'

Four years ago Maloney. promised the freshmen those who stayed would be champions.

The team won't be national champions. They might not even finish 500 , but Maloney has instilled in them a feeling of championship.
"Coach Maloney stuck with us all the way through," running back Tim Ahern said. "A lot of schools would forget about the older guys and gowith younger kids. He looks out for us.;
Other seniors echo Ahern's feelings. For example, Jawood Carlin hasn't played a down in his career. "He's treated me as good as the starters," Carlin said.
"I respect him," defensive end Marvin Jones said. "Part of this program has helped me develop as a man. We know come hell or high water, the conches are behind us.
"Coach Maloney told us, that if no one else believes in you, 1 do," Sessier added.

Every one of them (the seniors) is an integral part of the team." Maloney said: "They've been a terrificinfluence on the young kids. The attrition rate is very low. Eighteen seniors will finish the season.'
"From a coaching viewpoint, some of the best people you meet in your life, you don't read about in the papers," he said.
The seniors have taken a great interest in the freshmen. During double. sessions, all freshmen were assigned "big brothers," arid most-roomed with their brothers during that period.
This is the most close-knit team since I've been here, Ahern said. "I remember when Coach Maloney took over there was a hostile attitude from some of the seniors, because a lot of them were worried younger guys would take away their jobe."
"But this year the team is very united." Ahern added. "For instance, no team captains were appointed this year." Captains are elected on a game-by-game basis.

It is a very important thing to help the younger guys. College is so much different than high achool. Everyone is unfamiliar with the program," hesaid.
"Our main goal right now is to keep on the Syracuse tradition," Jones said. Ten years from now, when people remember this team, they'll think of the seniors."

Ahern agrees.
"I think people remember you by your senior year," he said.
Perhaps Ahern summed it ip best when he added, "If no one else cares about the team, the team does?

Less dorm crowding

By Marita A. Begley The problems of extended housing, which were a major controversy last year, have virtually vanished this year because less students have been housed in floor lounges, study rooms, guest rooms and because of the elimination of doubles convexted into.triples.
At the start of this year there were 160 people in extended housing in North Campus. Last year there were about 370. according to Cindy Horst, housing coordinator for the Office of Residential Life (ORL). About 250 people last year were in South Campus extended housing.
Horst said that last year every dorm had some form of extended housing. This year only Flint, Day, Shaw, Booth Dellplain, Sadler and Boland Halls had students living in extended housing. Students in Day and Shaw are nolongerina extended housing and Marion is almost clear, Horst said.
David Kohr, associate direc tor of ORL, said, "Right now there is more apace available than there are people in extended housing. All these people could, if they wanted to, move to open space."
Kohr said students "would not be forced," to moveinto the available apace. He said the policy is because "many of them want to stay on the noor they're on or with the roommate they have."
Rick Theriault, Day dorm director, pointed out another side to this problem. "Floor lounges are valuable space and perhaps freshrnen don't realize the value of open space on their floors because they haven't experienced it yet."
hoth Kohr and Horst felt that the situation is totally different this year. The decreased number of students in North Campus extended housing has left ORL with more space to work with.
One important change from last year is that ORL is no longer converting doubles into triples by adding bunk beds. Horst said, "The people that are in extended housing are in guest rooms or lounges which isn't as uncomfortable as a triple where you have people crawling all over each other."
Space at South Campus which previously was converted into extended housing was converted last year into permanent residential rooms.

promote easy solutions to the question.
In an editorial yesterday, we expressed our opposition to the rigid mule of mandatory retirement at age 65 in effect at Syracuse age University. But we recognize that rule exists for some very practical reasons. It keeps the cost of providing instruction down by substituting younger faculty, whose salaries and benefits cost less, for older and higher-paid professors. It keeps the faculty more fluid, i.e. not as highly tenured, thus promoting greater flexibility in hiring professors. It also provides a partial hedge against the sinecure which tenure often provides for incompetent profesaors.

At the same time, however, it wastes some of the university's most valuable human resources and deprives individuals of what we see as a fundamental right to make a meaningful contribution to society through their work, instead of being discarded upon reaching an arbitrarily chosen chronological milestone. On these bases we oppose the policy.

We realize that substituting a policy of allowing faculty members to hold tenure automatically until

Bookstore Policy:

Ending the ripoffs

The present bookstore policy, which has required some to pay twice for their books is inherently unfair. It is an absurd notion that once a book has been purchased, one can be forced to pay for it again. Nevertheless in order to combat the ever-spreading plague of shoplifting, the bookstore has poated ita nitimatum: "If you bring your own books in with you, be prepared to pay for them again.'
The bookstore offers an alternative to this dilexnma they have created for their customers, which unfortunately, is equally absurd. Students can leave their books and other personal property on open shelves, or in unganarad lockers whate they make their purchases inside. This leaves the clientele completely unprotected against the thievery from which the bookstore seeks to shield itself. Books are still stolen; the only difference is they are the property of atudents, notiof the SU Bookstore.
There are many altermatives which the bookstore can conaider to solve this death or voluntary retixement is no solution. It is both unfair to students, in foisting upon them instructors who have become in competent or lazy, as well as fiscally untenable for the university.

How can the university relax the retirement rule, without being forced to retain large numbers of expensive and nolonger competent instructors? We believe the most workable solution is to require instructors who want to continue teaching to come up for second tenure consideration at the normal retirement age of 65 .
This would allow instructors to retire if they so desire, or stay at the university by applying for second tenure. Requiring second temure does have the potential for diluting the academic freedom of professors, if the university abuses it to force out unpopular or outspoken instructors. But the same possibility exists during initial tenure considerations, and tenure is the best system for protecting academic freedom anyone has been able to arrive at thus far.

We do not contend this is the only solution available to the university. Other creative and flexible approaches are worth trying, such as -giving professors who want to retire later than 65 specific term appointments, during which time they could beassigned to work with and assist younger professors who are just starting their teaching careers.

A proposal is currently before the watch . Security guards posted to watch over unattended belongings could protect customers from theft.
More free lockers could be installed, More free lockers could be installed, safety of the articles inside.
Perhaps the best solution yet, and the most ambitious, would be the use of electronic stock control, similar to the syatem employed in Bird library or at various retail establishments. Each item would be electronically coded so that an item could not be carried out that an item could not be carried out When an item was paid for it would be electronically decoded. Not only would electronicanty decoded. Not only would this protect the customer from the dangers of leaving his property dangers of leaving his property it would also provide extremely efficient protection against shoplifting.
The bookstore's present policy

The bookstore's present policy protects its merchandise at the expense of its customers. A workable bolution can be found which will pro Sy Montgomery for The Daily Orange University Senate to empower the Appointments and Promotions Committee of that body to consider certain cases for annual or longer term renewal of contract for profesBors whose retirement would cause the university to "suffer inordinately." We have sorme quarrel with this proposal, notably that it implies extremely stringent standards for this renewal of con tract (presumably more so than original tenure standards). Also, annual renewal of contriacts in our view severly debilitates the concept of protecting academic freedom which tenure entails. Nonetheless, adoption of this proposal would be a welcome step in the right direction.

We believe mandatory retirement is a complex isaue, too much so to lend itself to easy solutions. But the time has come for the university to initiate a genuine effort to find a practical, humane alternative to the rigid retirement rule.

Page 8 October 4. 1977 Tivi Dally Orange Stick women padafie opponents in puddles

By Audrey A. Lipford
Syracuse University is becoming famous for two things of late: going the most number of daya without seeing the sun, and having sports teams that start slow, then turn their fair-weather fans into believers.

While the Orange football team was being reborn, SU's women's field hockey team was going through a metamorphosis of its own. After a $3-0$ loss to William Smith College and having their Sept. 26 game with Colgate postponed because of rain, the Orangewornen returned with back-to-back victpries of a sort against Potsdam and Buffalo State this weekend.
"Generally, the game went well," coach Muriel Smith said of the William Smith loss. "We had a lot of opportunities to acore
Smith also noted that SU may have fared better againg William Smith, one of its stronger opponents, later in the season when the club was more experienced.
The tables were turned Friday afternoon against Potsdam Despite miserable field conditions, this time the shots were hit ting the bull'aeye, and the Orangewomen waded their way to an impressive 3-1 victory.
"We're just happy as clams," said apectator Doris Soloday, who is also director for SU wonnen's athletics.
One of the goals was scored by junior Peggy Coleman on a penalty stroke. (When the goalie of a team stops a shot by rendering the ball inaccessible, the opposing team gets a penalty stroke seven yards from the goal.) In this case. Potsdam's goalie got the ball stuck in her knee pads, allowing SU the shot

Cheering aection
"She always practices those shots," Smith said of Coleman. "We always cheer when she gets a chance to score on them," she Cathy Cohen scored SU's second goal, and Erin Dwyer connected on the third with a perfect drive to the far corner of the goal. It's difficult for the goalie to cover all points of the goal at
The team used the traditional five-man forward line against Potsdam, instead of the newer four-forward strategy which drops the fifth forward back to add defensive strengit to the ralie.
"Ilike to be on the attack," Smith said. "If they (Potsdam) had been pushing us, we would have gone with the four-man front ine.'
Saturday afternoon's constant rain stopped the Orangewomen's match with Buffalo State after 28 minutes of play, but not before they had built a $2-1$ lead Half a game played. . . half a victory?
'There's nothing in the rule book about a game that's stopped for wome reason," coach Smith explained. "So it's (the rame) just hanging.
Peggy Colemian scored both SU goals, oneon another penalty
The team's next game is away against Kirkland Wednesday.

Sloppy performance

The weather matched the SU soccer spirit Saturday in Hamifion as the Orangemen lost their sixth. game of the season in seven tries 7-O. It was also the fifth shutout of the year the haplesstbogtars have suffered. Above, the water fies as Pete Arthur (23) gets wer iook at a serambie for the ball. (Photo by Joan Wart.)

Cross country team stumbles on

By Barry Lambergman tless" suffered anothersetback Saturday in losing to Cornell $17-46$. It appears that the SU 17-46. It appears that is tou young to win consistently and as a result is getting quite restless for another win this season. After winning its first two meete of the season, it has loat three in a row for a $2-3$ lost th record.

"It shows up in noccer, it shows up in football - you just NCA win consistentiy in the NCAAs with just freahmen, coach Andy Jugan said. "But you can't blame it on the freshmen," he continued. "They're going from running three miles in high school to five in college.
"I said before the season that our chances of winning this year compared to last year were slim. We'll be happy with a .500 record this year," he aaid.

Cornell finished onetwothree in the race. Fitzinger (28:09), the winner for the Big Red, was 15 th in the 10,000 Red, was 15 th in the 10,000 meters in the NCAAslast year meters in the NCAAs last year.
Along with Mike Wyckoff (thind), Fitzinger finished in the top 25 in the 1 C 4 As crosscountry competition and around 130 ch out of a field of about 500 runners at the nationals last year.
sut the caliber of this Competition did not give Neil Roaenblad, the freahman jitters as he took fourth for SU with a time of $28: 18$.

Mental drop
"Neil led for most of the race," Jugan said, "until the last mile when he had. perhaps, another mental lapse (as he did in last week's meet (as he did in last Heek's meet against Army). He was very against Army). He was very race because he thought be should have beaten them.
The other top Orange runners were Jerry Josselyn
(2s:54), 10th; Brian Trippany (29:32), 13th; and Mike (29:32), 13th; and M Kohlirenner (30:00), 15th. "The course was alow becauge of the rain." Jugan oaid, but these were excellent times. They correspond very well to the times we ran last year for the first home meet "Trip looked much better considering this was only his second week of training. By next week he should be second man again," he said
But things look like they will get worse before they get better. First of all, Frank Lowry, the only junior on the team, bustained a stress fracture on his right foot during the week and will be out for four to five weeks, which is when the season comes to an end. Second, the JV team took theix elder's lead as they were defeated by the Cornell JV, $15-$ 50 .
And while the Orangemen certainly do not want to look back on the past couple. of weeks, they certainiy will not want to look to the future. This Saturday the Orangemen have their toughest meet of the season at Van Cortlandt Park (in the Bronx) against Manhattan, UMass and Manha
'The guys can't get down on thernselves," Jugan said. "If we lose thrse weeks in a row, a tearn hike Colgate or Rochester, who we face the following week, can come here and upset

Syracuse University crew: a year on the water

By J.T. Brady
June 4, 1977. Formost of the Syracuse student body this was a time of rest and relackation, a time when thoughts of Syracuse and achool had vanished under the influence of the warm surnmer sun and a cold sixpack.
This was also the day of the Intercollegiate Rowing Association (IRA) Championships on Lake Onon daga, and one group of students, the SU crew team, whe still hard at work. The IRA championahipe are the culmination of a long, hard season for the SU oarsmen, a season that stretches from September to June.
"It all starts in the fall," head coach William Sanford aaid, "when we row out on Lake Onondaga, cancentrating mainly on technique. We have an in formal fall season, with two or three races."
In November, the latre freenes cver, and the crow is forced indoors, where a grueling conditioning provests is undertaken tor the next month-and-a-half. The trouble," Sanford said with a smile. we could be in trouble," Sanford asid with a smile.

The team breaks for Christmas, but meets in Florida for training on Jan. 8. "Mhis sives us a good jump," Sanford said, "and the guys pay for it out of their own pockets.
From January to March, the squad's conditioning worklosd is incressed, and in March it's back to the icy waters of Lake Onondaga. When echool gets out in May, the teara is in the thick of its season, and crew members take up residence in the boathouse on Lake Onondags. At this point, the oarsmen have worked their way up to two practice sessions a day on the lake.
What motivates thin team to undergo these long monthe of torturous, demanding trinining? "WVin or faction." Sanford aaid. "Of courne, winning is necm" eary to juetify the workional.

If this is true, then the SU crew team has plenty of justification. The freshmen crew has captured the 1RA title (generally accepted as the national championship) for the last two yeara. The 1977 champions competed during the summer in the prestigiovis Henley Regatta in England, and advanced to the quarterfinals of their division before being eliminated by some very atiff competition.
"They did very well, considering they were the anly freshman boat from the United States," Senford said. While freshman crew has received müch notoriety, the varsity crew has also had conmiderable success. The 1976 crew was indefeated during the regular season and fininhed fourth in the IRAx. The 1977 team challied up, mome impressive regrilar season triumphs, despite in dificult schedric.

   By Mike Christman}The SU Bookstores will not change its policy requiring students to pay for books they already own if they carry them into the store, but will increase efforts to prevent the situation from occuring.
More signs stating this policy will be posted and a full-timé security guard will stand at the entrance to the tex. thoolca division to make sure that customers leave their books and packages at the bodkdrop before-entering the store, according to Diane Straus, store, according torer
These actions were discussed $\dot{y}$ esterday at a meeting between Straus, Peter Baigent, director of student affairs and Eavgent, director of student afiair Scott Gordon, UJB chief justice.
"One of the things we discussed is a full-time person at the entrance who will stop people from bringing packages into the store - which I'm not happy with since I don't like to create this kind of system." Straus said.
What will bedone with students who violate this policy is not yet clear.
According to Gordon, the Office of Student Affairs will recommend to the bookstore that violators be given two options:

They can prove ownership through presentation of a valia sales receipt, or be exonerated through the university judicial system. If option one is used and proof of purchase is ruade, the incident is considered closed. If the individual camnot furnish proof of purchase but is exonerated through purchase but is exonerated through considered closed and the raerchandise returned without charge to the inreturned writhout dividual involved."

Straus said that the bookstore reserves the right to handle each case on an individual basis, regardless of on an imdividu.
Baigent agreed with Straus's position saying, "Mrs. Straus is responsible for the bookstore. I recommend to her, I don't tell her. It's a matter of who in the final analysis has charge of the operation."

Saving Loew's Theatre:

How you can help

Many atudents don't realize it, but:Syracuse has a relatively rich cultural life for a city its gize. A major aymphony orchestra, a beautiful, moderi Civic Center, a fine art museum - the list goes on:
But like so many species of wildifer a part of Syracuse's cultural heritage has hit the endangered ligt Loew's State Theatre on Salina Stireet one of the last of the ornate movie hopises builtin the early part of this tentury, faces imminent demolition.
Loew's is in danger - not dead. $A$ concerted effort is being made by a number of dedicated and concerned individuals in Syracuse to bave the theater. Not merely to preserve a historic and fascinating structure, important as that is; but alao to renovate it and prepare it for a role as a major cultural resource in the community. The organization which is leading the fight to save Loew's sees it as a theater which can be used for movies, concerts and plays requiring more seating that other theaters, such as the Civic Center, can provide.

Inadequate coverage

To the editor,
As students working with the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG), we were appalled at the lack of coverage concerning the release of the Hudson River water quality etudy on Wednesday Sept. 28, 1977. The study had statewide implications pertaining to public health hazarda of drinking water.
Every major radio and television station in the Syracuse area reported this event along with front page coverage by The Herald-

Loew's is a part of Syracuse's cultural legacy, and a part of America's past which is rapidly being lost as the big movie houses of the past disappear one by one. But more than that, it has a great motential for usefulness if SALT can purchase it and renovate it for use.

Loew's is worth saving. With an effort from the whole community, it can be saved.

This Spring you could be working towards your degree while living in LONDON, STRASBOURG, FLORENCE or AMSTERDAM.
Did you know that you can change your place of study without changing your budget? The cost of a semester abroad is comparable to the cost of a semester on campus. Financial aid, in addition to what you already may be receiving is available.
If you have not considered studying abroad because you thought it would be prohibitively expensive, it's time to reconsider! A semester abroad may alter your life, but not your. pocketbook!
For more information and applications come visit us at the D.I.P.A. Office, 335 Comstock Avenue (corner of. E. Adams). Phone 423-3471 or stop by our traveling information booth in HBC Lobby today, tomorrow and Friday from 9:00 a.m. -3.00 p.m.

Rain, mud, good racing and a lot of heavy-duty partying are traditionally the components of the Watkins Glen Grand Prix, which was held was no exception. Therain fell, the mud oozed, the drivers raced and, of course, the fans partied on. When it all was over James Hunt had taken over James funt had taicen the checkered fiag, Niki Lauda had cinched the world title bath and a long, long rest.

You can buy great sounding, strong, dependable 60 -minüte tape for about $$ 3$.
Or you can buy great sounding, strong, dependable 60 -minute AudioMagnetics High Performance tape for under $$ 2$.
What's the difference? About a dollar.
And that's the only difference. Because the truth is, AudioMagnetics High Performance tape is made so well that on most equipment you won't be able to tell any difference between our tape and the more expensive ones. As a matter of fact, if you can tell any difference at all just return the tape to where you bought it and they'll refund your money.
So why pay for a difference you can't ${ }^{-}$ hear when you can buy AudioMagnetics High Performance cassettes or 8 -tracks and save some money. Enough money, as a matter of fact, to pay for half of your next AudioMagnetics High Performance tape.

We guarantee you can't tell the difference. So why pay the differenc-

SA Assembly members told responsibilities at meeting

Ey Marsha Eppolito
A Student Association Assembly nember should be committed first to their comp mittee, second to their constituency and third to the assembly meetings, Assembly Speaker Jordon Dale toid the assembly at its first meeting Monday night.
Dale said the responsibility $t$ represent a constituency "has been overlooked in the past.'

About 100 members attended the first meeting, which was handied as an orientation meeting. According to Dale, the format was an experiment to make the meetings more informal and increase communication

Background information on each committee was explainkd by the vice-presidents. Assembly members are, required to serve. either on the administrative operations, academic affairs, student programs or university/community relations committees.
Rick Margolius, vicepresident for student programs, answered a Daily Oramge editorial about.SA's tangible achievernents.
He cited: 13 instances in which SA has positively affected student life, including its enexgy conservation plan, shuttlebus bervice to Hancock Airport during vacation periods, helping to reduce the price increase of the student athletic activity card, and the sponsorship program, which attempts to enhance studentfaculty interaction outside the classroom.
Margolius also cited SA failures, adding to the assembly members, "This year it's up to you. We need your help."
The next assembly meeting. which is open to the public, is Monday at 7:15 p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium.

$\star$ Storch's dream

Cortinued from poge orve open Oct. 13 and will run'four-and-a-half weeks.
In addition to his duties at Syracuse Stage, Storch teaches one class, Advanced Acting/Directing and overgees the operation of the department.

Arthur Storch brought a lot of professionalism into the department, a quality which had never been there before," said Heidi Van De Carr, a atudent in Storch's class and a senior directing major.

The quality of the training in the drama department has constantly improved, Storch arys. "Syracuse University is one of the few universities in the country to be attached to a professional theater. We-give students the chance to see the best that is happening in their particular field."

But since the job market is tight, the drama departrnent in general. and Storch in particular, are trying to encourage performance majors to work with other aspects of theater. Good technical people and good stage managers are in demand, Storch says.
"When someone comes to me an asks if he should become an actor, I tell him no. An actor actor, I tell him no. An actor be nothing else he could posbe nothing

Pacino is a totally obsessed actor, according to Storch. He directed Pacino in "The Local Stigmatic," where Pacino played a character which required a cockney accent. " ${ }^{\text {aHe }}$ always spoke with that cockney accent in restaurants, in bars, everywhere." Clive Barnes, the New York Times reviewer who is a stickler for accents, said he could have sworn Pacino grew up on the east side of London.

Pacino has not changed much since his performance in "The Local Stigmatic," Storch says. "Actors don't get better. They grow. After a certain point it's the person's innate awareness, sensitivity, willingriess to commit that makes him a good actor."

Winkler, who Storeh directed in "42 Seconds from Broadway," is also obsessed with acting. "When I auditioned Henry, I didn't know him from a hole in the wall, but I know he had something special," Storch says.Storch and Winkler have kept in contact and saw each other this oummer at Universal Studios.
Storch was at Universal Studios discussing a play "Tributes," he will be directing on Broadway in the apring with its author, Bernard Slade Storch hopes to make this book another Broadway success. So far he has cast Jack Lemmon in the play, which will preview in Toronto and Boston before moving to Brondway in June

When you come ripht down to it, Storch has a giraple to it, Storch has a simple philosophy about theater. You should eajoy theater and have a very good time there. If you come to theater because it is cultural, but youre bored as is cultural, but you're bored as hell, someone has failed you."

Indian leaders accuse government of genocide

By Frank Scimone
Native American leaders spoke at Hendrickn Chapel yesterday, accusing the United States government of practicing racism and cultural genocide against the American Indians.

John Mohawk, editor of Alwesasme Notes, a native American publication, told the 35 students gathered in Hendricks Chapel that the press and public are not interested and pubhe are not interested that a whole people in this systernatically exterminated systematically extermin by governmental actions.
by governinental actions. try to get their rights back. they face the same thing that Sacco and Vanzetti went through 50 years ago. It's like what the Indians go through in South America, only very, subtle, through the courts," Mohawk said.
As an example Mohawk cited the massive U.S.

Official leaves SU for HEW

Joseph A. Clore, assistant director of admissions at Syracuse University, will leave his post to take a job in the Office of Civil Rights with the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.
Clore will work as an equal opportunity specialist investigating the hiring practices of federally-funded agencies and discrimination claims made by their employes.
An SU graduate, Clore aaid he is leaving in order to find "more room for advancement."
Clore has been in charge of minority admissions for the last three years and has seen minority enrollment at SUrise from one per cent in 1968 to 11 per cent last year.

Genocide can be cultural as well as phyaical Mohawk said. He spoke of Indianss be ing educated to accept Western cultural values, lifeatyle and religion.
"Nobody has a right to come in and take our land, to tell va what language to speak and what religion to believe in."
Mohawk said the world has become dehumanized and that the first task is to become human acain. "The cultures that aren't destroying all the others, they are the natural ones, the ones that are local where a relation exists between the people and their natural surroundinge. Let's rebuild the natural world and its society-
Answering the queation of how it feels to be an Indian in American society. Mohawk said, "But we"re not in the American society. We are adis-

'Trip' keeps X-country moving

By Dave Lariviere

His teammates and friends know him as Kip
But "trip" is far from what he does when he hits the cross-country trail. Brian Trippany, the reshman sensation of a year ago, is now the sophomore captain of this year's squad.

Trippany was named to the honor after an election by his peers last spring. Originally, he was supposed to share the captain's duties with Chris Carroll, but Carroll did not retarn to school.

1 was surprised when I won. I didn't really expect to be elected but it is quite an honor." Trippany said.

Brian was the top freshman runner last year and more importantly one of the gutsiest runners we had," teammate Jerry Josselyn caid. If we needed a good race out of him, he came through. He ran against all obstacles, worked harder and w, anyone on the team."

Goach Andy Jugan described the role of team captain as "a go-between for the runiners and the coach. If one of the runners has a problem he should talk to Brian before he talks to meConversely, if I am unsatisfied with a runner's attitude for aome reason, I would talk to Brian before I talk to that individual. It's an important role and Brian's doing a fine job," Jugan said.

He's shown good leadership thus far and is very serious about his job. He's been a great steadying influence on the team as a whole. Jugan added.
It has not been an easy year for Trippany though. He injured his achilles tendon last spring and did not rum at all during the summer. His first race this year was the dual meet against Army and Albany State and he lead and have a positive influence on the freshman runnera when you're eo far back in the pack," Trippany said.
"Freshman runners don't really know what to do or what to expect and it"s important to keep a good rapport with them and to makesure they are up for meets and practices." Trippany added. This is especially important this season because four of the top six runmers are freshmen.

Because the team is so young Trippany has set come lofty goals for it in the coming years.
"1'd like to see the team win the ICAA's and qualify to go to the nationala. Ithink when I'ma senior and this present group of freshmen are juniors we will do it," Trippany aaid.

Jugan added. "A captain should be sone of the top runners on the team, but because of Brian's injury he has been unable to establish himself yet."

Trippany, in order to get into shape, is runming four to five miles every day in addition to the regular practice. Jugan still expects great thinge from him in the future.

- Brian is constantly improving. He may be just starting to realize his potential now. He"s What i would call a late bloomer," Jugan said. temacious and hard working, hemay riot realize his full potential until after college."

Ag far as his own goals are comcerned. Trip pany said, "I wotuld like to be good enough to be All-American, specifically in crows country.:"

Trippany also runs winter and spring track, and likes each season for a different reason. *" enjoy spring track a lot because it'seabier and is dividual sport but I enjoy it because I love the outdoors," Trippany said.

His teammates may call him "Txip" but as tenm captain he's far from falling down on the job.

SU lax experience: defensemen adjust

By Alain Fecterau

Each must have thought to hinself, "this stick is weird."
Jumions Bill Udovich, John Desko, and sophomore Roy Siknmons III, all traded their midfielders stick for defemsemene' as they played their first game in a new poaition Sunday. The switch helped the Syracuse University lacrosse team whip Cortland State 20-7.
Learning a new position is never easy, but it appears this trio had a good start.
"It looks like the changes we made really worked out." coach Roy Simmons said after the exhibition match. They are all just learning at this point. But they are such good athletes, by apring they should be real solid."

The threesome combined with SU goalie Jamie Molloy to clear the ball consistently, something Orange teams have experienced trouble with in the past. After Molloy controlled a shot. the SU defenders quickly spread across the field.

We try to create a two-on-one Bituation with two of our defensermen worling on one attackman. If one of our guys sees un opening, he can move it across the center line," anid Roy Sim mons III.
This basic clear worked several times for the Orange against Cortland; who was missing two starting attackmen plus seven other regulars.
"They were hurting today I'm sure," said coach Simmons. "This is not the same team that beat us last year or that we wil face next spring.
While the SU defense was successfully getting the ball out of its own half of the field, Cortland backliners were having less luck. At one point, Syracuse disrupted six consecutive Cortland clearing attempts. Thege thefts led to four Syracuse scores as the Orange built an 11.3 halftime lead.
Senior Tom Abbott tallied seven times for the Orange to lead the team. Greg Cunningham, a transfer frum Johns Hopkins, where he played second midfield, ecored twice, as did-Dale Beagle and Doug Sedgwick.

Coach Simmons had one additional scholarship to award this season upon the graduation of John Engelken. Freshman Robbie McCarthy, the recipient of the scholarship, took a good pass from Tim O'Hara to score his first goal for SU at $3: 19$ of the third period.
One strong Orange midfield combination featured Kevin Donoghue, Cunningham, and tránsfer Dave Waterman. Each scored in the first half. Waterman, a trangplant from Cortland was credited with the winning assist in the 1976 Division if championship game.

From the attack, Tim O'Hara scored twice to supplement the barrage by Abbott

In total, Syracuse scored 20 times and forced Cortland goalies to make 20 more saves. The Orange should continne to score often, providing the guys with the weird sticks can continue to clear the ball.

Student marshals help deter vandalism

By Leslie Cochran The evening had the appearance of any other at the university: it was raining, and six students, each with an orange arm band on his sleeve, ventured out into it to begin work.
They are student marshals, and their work entaila going on rounds in specific districta, mainly checking fire extinguinhers and looking for health hazards and broken windows. They are equipped with radios so they can call in So the Syracuse University Safety and Security office if they observe any "activity, situation or person which Could pose a threat to the

They mostly, however, act as Adeterrent to such activity. If a student is considering angct of student is considering annact of vandaliam, and sees a student marshal in the area, he may change his mind, said trevor Callender , program director.
The main idea behind the system is for the marshals to act as a liaison between the students and the security department. "The name of the game is students working with students," Callender said. Callender maintains, "We're looking out for you, not at you." What concerris the department is the atudents' indifference to their own safety. Student marshal. Hichard Devereaux said, "We mostly contend with students damsar-

"Until it's their stereo that's burning," another marshal interjected.
The program started in 1971 to lessen friction between security and studenta. The atudents were more hostile then to the marshals than they are now. Now, most students are neutral to the idea. They realize they do not need to feel Nei Supraner one of four Neil Supraner, one of four program oupervisors, said.

The blood drive:

fulfilling fantasies

Almost all of us, in our momenta of wildest fantasy, dream of performing sorne heroic act and saving someone's life. Today or tomorrow you can perform an act, perhaps less than heroic, but one which might save a life.
Give blood.
The Syracuse Red Croas is holding its anmual blood drive in the Trophy Room of Archbold Gymnasium today and tomorrow from $10 \mathrm{a} . \mathrm{m}$. to $3: 45 \mathrm{p} . \mathrm{m}$. Anyone between the ages of 17 and 66 who is in good health and weighs at less 110 pounds can contribute blood.
And it's definitely needed. According to Edith Kurnick, community relations specialist for the Red Cross, 320 to 380 pints of blood are needed daily in the Syracuse area The Red Cross must provide that blood but it cennot do 80 without the help of everyone in the com munity, including atudents.
Kurnick said last year the university community made a "very poor contribution." We urge every student with a half hour or so if free time to walk over to Archbold and give blood. Student groups on campus can help by orgamiz ing their members to give (the group which gives the most receives a free kes of beer from Alpha Phi Omega, the ser vice fratermity).

Almost all of un have fantasies of beroism; mont such dreams will never be fulfilled. But each of us can still help save a life.

Chancy crossings

To the editor,
In response to Mark Townsend's letter last Friday, I would like to state that pedestrian carelesences is only part of the cause of car aconly part of the cause of car accidents such as the potentially Thagic one

Contrary
Contrary to Mr. Townsend's belief, students do know how to cross the street, but, with a steady stream of cars on University Place, people have to cross when they can.
Without traffic lights in the area, traffic doesn't stop. Why doesn't the university ask the city to install a light in front of Bird Library, or at least make the (usually) flashing yellow light at the College Place corner a regular traffic light? People do wait at the sidewalk before they cross, and cross at the least hazar dows moment possible.
Maybe students cross streets in heavy traffic, but the traffic can and should be regulated.

SUB policy: a double standard on stealing

The Syracuse University Bookstore's policy on bringing books into the bookstore is one which should induce feelings of anger, because it is as frustrating as it is unjust. The policy, which the bookstore is evidently determined to retain despite the hardships it works upon students, creates a "damned if you do, damned if you don't" situation for its customers.

The bookstore's policy is simply this: customers must leave their belongings outside the store, or be prepared to pay for them again if they do bring them into the store.
This gives the student who has books and other items with him a choice: leave his things on a table orin unlocked lockers, with no security against theft, or take them in and risk being charged for them.

It has been suggested by the Office of Student Affairs that students can prove ownership of items they carry into the store by carrying receipts with them. Student. Affairs also proposed that if the student cannot fur nish proof of ownership, but is exonerated of shoplifting by the Univer sity Judicial Board (UJB), the merchandise should be returned without charge to the student and the incident considered closed.

We respond to the first point by stating a simple fact: nobody carries receipts for everything he owns. It is absurd to ask students to carry a bundle of book receipts in order to patronize SUB.

As for UJB exomeration, we agree that the baokstore should openly pledge to return merchandise without charge to anyone who is charged with violating the bookstore policy and exonerated by UJB. But the thought of requiring students to go through the hassle of a disciplinary hearing to get their own books back from the bookstore is ludicrous. The policy itself is unjust and needs to be changed.

We believe the bookstore has a number of alternatives to the present policy, several of which we suggested in an editorial Tuesday. SUB can provide key lockers for securing students' belongings outside the merchandige areas. It can provide individuels to shelve students' books and issue tickets to students, who can return the tickets and get their belongings back. It can institute an electronic stock control system to distinguish between students' books and bookstore merchandise, as well as almost eliminating shoplifting. It can explore solutions which are fair to the bookstore and its customers.

Despite SUB's high book prices, students provide huge patronage to the bookstore every year. SUB should return the favor with a fair policy to protect itself and its customers from rip-offs.

Aformer member of Weather Report, Mouzon is emerging as one of the finest upright bass players on the jazz scene. Sitting in for the first time with Coryell, Mouzon added vitality and presence to the otherwise fragmented evening.
Opening up the set with an acoustic guitar bolo, Coryell had the audience shouting and rocking in their seats. The Spanish arrangement of a Ray Baretto tune was original and refreshing, with vocals reminiscent of Jimi Hendrix. Coryell then moved over to the pigno and played a ablo which he called rausic for my funeral."

Our money is the basis. Onr opimions should be a factor. We have to decide what we want here at Syracuse As a student body do we want a hali-assed commitment to excellence or are we really committed to the acceleration of atheltics at Syracuse University? That is our decision to make, or at least to be a part in making.

The fact that we are not involved now is our own fault in part. That can be overcome.

The fact that we are not asked for our opinion, or demanded of it, is the tragedy of atheltic policy-making at. Syracuse University.

Pele played the first half for the Cos mes, and after a halftime ceremony mos, and after a halfime ceremony Erazil, finished the game with Santos.

Illustrious past

It was 22 years ago that a skinny 15 -year-old named Edson Arantes do Nascimento played his first professional game for Santos, scoring four gonis.

Two years later, the whole world was marveling at the boy wonder who at age 17 led Brazil to the World Cup championship with six goals in his tearn's last three games. Two of those goals came in the finalagainst Sweden and it was not long before those who watched him that day realized that this youngster from South America was unlike any other player they had ever seen
At one point in the game. Pele, his back to the goal, received ahighpass in the penalty area. Surrounded by Swedish defenders, he cammy caught the ball on his thigh, dropped it to his around and volleyed it into thenet past around and voleyeditinto thenet past the ball having ever touched the ground.

Everyone has to adjust to something new once in a while, and freshman soccer player Tom Case has been findinx that out. He does have the abilities, though, and I'm not going to let zelent sit on the sidelinem. He'll get the playing time he needs.
Case's teammates feel the, sume way.
Brian Feeney, whom Goettel reftrs to as Case's "big brother," said the freahman is a fine, solid player.
"He lacks experience," Feeney oaid, "but more importantly he lacks confidence. 'the team has problems offensively and Tom is getting a lot of the blame. They're expecting him to tske over Paovo'a place and Tom's not ready for that. He's not physical enough, but he'li learm."  supported station, looked vitibly upset when in aw him in Champaign. Ill. last week. He had not had a good fight. Ir fact, he hadn't any Iight at all. He had driven fortwodays to tet to Charnpaign and now he had found out that his hotel was situated 25 miles from the gtadium. That'e along way to dxive to work. He waen't so happy.The three local Chevrolet dealers and their wives, on the other hand, who did fly out with the footbail tearn. free of charge, looked very happy. They were having a nice litale vacation. They deaerved it. or so I'm told, becauge they provide the football coaches with cars. It was awfully nice of the Syracuse student body to pay for it

Last week, after the lilinois game, Les Dye, the SU athietic director, asiced what I meant in my colimme last week by my reference to the university's lack of commitment. He asked for apecifics.

Approximately 10 per cent, specinically $$ 130,243$, of the athletic department's money comen directly from the student body. The rest comaes from revenue genernted by attendance at football, basketball and Lacrosse games. Students make up a considerable part of the paying audience at those eventa. What this means, of covase, is that the athletic department is largely dependent on the students for the financial life of athletics at Syracuse University.
They are dependent uporn us for a commitment. The ques tion that has to be asked is whether we are getting the same commitment from the athletic department in return.

Bill Eppas certainly doesn't think so.
The people from Chevrolet do.
The students ehould have mare say about policies that are soing to affect them directiy. Case in point being the stadium. Has anyone asked the gtudent body if they want a new stadium? Either by referendimm or survey? No, they haven't. And you'd be making a pretty anfa bet if you were to say that our tuition would be affected if the uriversity does decide to build it themoelves.
It in true that the athietic policy board hassatudents on it, but that in itsalf is not, enough inpat for the atudents. More input is needed by the students and the initiative has to be a two-way thing. Students have to take the step and volunteer input. The athletic department has to open up avenues for communication for the atudents. The need a honid be selfevident. The mituation is near the criais point.

Mr. Dye, is certainly aware of this simation. Personally, 1 think he realizes that students are the most importantasaet thia university has. Iknow Joe Gallagher, newly appointed assiatant athietic director for sporta reiations, does Gallagher" job is to help promote and pubicize Syracase Univeristy ifports. it weems to ma that the people who decide who travels with the football team would be better off 6 ill ing the seats on the plane with reporters than car dealers (As it is now only three writers travel)

Ank yourself ths quettion: Who is able to commmaicate the merits of a footbell tesm better, members of the media or car dealers? And it's not at if we don't have a problem with telling people in the Central New York area about the merita of the Syracuse football team. A football team in the news obvicuely draw better recraite - cite the hiring of Mr. Gallagher.

Fight now, the athletic departinent is maling decigions that will have long-terma effects on the athletic program here. In the pant decimions have been made writhout etudent imput. For example, the low of varaity etatus for bageball, men" teanis and golf The Athietic Poticy Boand's com mittee on club sporta ruled that there wram'tenough money of intereat to maintain theer an varaity epports. How are Cornell. Colgate and other school in upstate New York able to field tearas in these sports - not to mention hockey?

The comanitment should be made by the amivertity to find that out. For example, the temmis clubsponsored cournament lagt week that had nearly 100 entries, who paid $$ 3$ apiece to play. The positive interest on the wtudents part is here. The reciproca depertment is not.
Right now our football teann can compete sueceswinlly with the Big Ten (Ilinois) and the Fac8 (Waabington). Our football program cannot.
It's frighteming in terms of the existing program to think of where the football tean would be today without the ponsitive coheraiveness that exists.

TAP grants may change

By Julie Mayne

The prospect for an increase in Tuition Assistance Proggam (TAP) benefits is "still being reviewed but is coming along well," according to Henrick Dullea, special assistant for education to Gov. Hugh Carey. Dullea said that Carey may issue a statement on TAP in the next few weeks.
This summer, Carey pledged he would recommend an increase in TAP benefits in his 1978 budget. He further stated he would recommend this increase be phased in one class each year, and be made retroactive to September 1977, to start with this year's entering freshman class.
Carey was referring to New York State's primary scholarship program. It provides for maximuno awards each year of $$ 1,500$ for undergraduate students attending New York State's

Officials optimistic over new stadium plan

By Jim Naughton
There is guarded optimism about the latest development in Syracuse Univer sity and Onondagra County's efforts to bity and Onondaga a new atadium.
"I arn dring to be delighted about it." oneathiftic policy boird member said of a 50,000 minion plan to builat! a 50,000 seat stadium south of Skytop. The plan is expected ta be submitted to the university Oct. 24 by the Frank Briscoe Co., of East Orange, N.J. The Briscoe firm was general contractor for the New Jersey Meadowlands sports complex which includes Giants Stadium.
"It sounds very exciting," said J. Richard Pooler, Republican fioor leader of the Onondaga County legislature and a member of the county stadium commission. However, Pooler, like other persons commenting on the plans, stressed the importance of "the facts and figures" no one has seen.
Pooler and Edward F. Ryan, a Democrat, are the Tegislature's Democrat, are the fegislature s representatives on the commission, Which has scheduled: its first meeting for next weekc Pooler led a debate opposing creation of the stadium study cormmission. Rysan, however, has supvotes.
Clifford L. Winters Jr:, vice chancellor for administrative operations, and Joseph V.Julian, vicepresident for public affairs, are the university's representatives on the commission. Both are in favor of building a stadium.
However, neither has been willing to endorse the Briscoe plan without a careful review of financial and physical circumstances.
The remainder of the commission is comprised of architect David E. Chase and two representatives of the Metropolitan Deyelopment Association (MDA), to be named today. The MDA has supported past efforts to construct a stadium, but MDA Executive VicePresident Hwin Davis said the representatives will not necessarily be "pro-stadium." "The people we will be selecting are very solid cormmunity people," he said.
Davis said a local bank president was being considered for one of the positions.
Davis joined SU athletic director Lester H. Dye and Winters in stressing the importance of the "economic feasability" of the plan. "It is a strictly economic issue at this point," Davis said. "I'm confident if we can show how the economics go together there'd be a lot of support for it (in the legislature)." he said.

Former MUA Executive Director John Searles said the proposal was the least expensive estimate for a major stadium he knew of, aside from the New England Patriots Stadium in Foxboro, Mass: Searles said that stadium, which is somewhat larger than the 50,000 seat stadium proposed for Skytop, was built for "about $$ 6.5$ million or $$ 7$ million."
Another key factor in the university's support for the stadium is its proximity to campus. "I'm in favor of a stadium close to campur," said kick Margolius, SA vict-resident of Margolius, continued on poge reven

Rey tells how they played softball with a basketbail, bouncing it off home plate; the batters would hear the bounce and adjust their swings accordingly. "Some of the best hitters were totally blind," he says.

Basketball was played with a beeper above the basket, so that players would "hear" where they had to aim their shots. They played soccer with a ball that had bells inside it.

Trustees: no representation, no influence

Once it wras rallying cry of student activists. "We wantrepresentation on the Board of Trusteas,", they would say, and students and administration alike. Would be jolted by the boldness, the awesomeness of the devanand:

Now it's 1977, and student activism is gone. We have our 'represen tation," if you can call it that, on the Board of Trustees. Big deal.
Student representation on the Board of Trustees means next to nothing. for two reasons.
First, there are only two undergraduate students and one graduate student on the board. Not exactly a substantial representation, especially since they don't have voting power. These representatives can bring student concerns before the board, and they have done so very conscientiously. But without voting power they are really second-class members, pale concessions by the university to student demands for a voice in the affairs of the university.
More important than the second-class status of our representatives is the truatees' apparent reluctance to involve itself in the most important and substantive administrative issues of the university. The board is, of course, intended to oversee the administration and not supplantit. But to effectively pexform this task, the trustees must seize some tough isuea students gave their report, the chancellor gave his personal assurance that averything was fine, and the trustees were evidently satisfied. A case in point is the trustees" handling of personal counseling services offered at Syracuse University. Late last spring the undergraduate student consultants to the board prepared a report for the trustees on problems and concerns of students with respect to personal counseling. The minutes of the meeting at which it was presented are revealing-the students gave their report, the chancellor gave his personal assurance that everything was fine, and the trustees were evidently satisfied.

The executive committee of the board is in session this weekend. We suggest two items for its agenda. First, granting real representation for suggest two items for its agenda. First, granting real representation for own role vis-a-vis SU's administration.
Our attitude matches that of our more radical predecessors of the " 608 . We want student represeritation on the Board of Trustees.

Conserving energy, or escaping from family fiascoes

I'm fully supporting Carter's plan to raise the price of gasoline, but not just for the good of the country. I'm hoping it will mean the end to summer camping trips with my family.
Every June my parents, my sister and my dog pile into our camper and start driving for some distant

Tod Porter

corner of North America. One year it was Colorado, the next Nova Scotia and last year it was Califormia. Living with my family in an 18-by-8-foot area is not easy, especially during the long stretch of corn states in the Midwest. I made the mistake of beating my 17-year-old sister at Monopoly once too often on the way back from California. She did not talk to me through all of Kansas. Kansas is a very long atate.
Bringing our dog along adds an extra dimension since we have to worry a other animals we meet.
Once, somewhere in Colorado I think, (the states begin to blur together after a while) our family went horseback riding. My father had forgotten his wallet so he rode away back to our camper, which he tied the horse to. When the dog saw the horse, she started barking. In response, the horse reared up on its hind legs and ran off, taking the back door handle of our camper with it.
But the worst thing about traveling in a camper is that you have to stop at campgrounds. The best and most interesting campgrounds tend to be the most primitive. While camping in a local park outside a small town in Arizona we were awakened early in the morning by the sound of mooing. We found the park also served as grazing area for the local dairy herd. The worse campgrounds are the ones with full hookups, miniature golf, a pool, a gameroom and $2 \%$ - by-15-foot lots. Here you get to meet the middle-aged or elderly couple who decided to "get away from it all" but brought along a kitchen, a small septic tank, a dining room and a television set. They don't really camp, they just instantly settle anywhere.
All this wealth in the wilderness has lead to some pretty strange situations. Once, when we were at a very remote but popular camperound in Colorado, my father hit a plastic water pipe while backing the camper in.

Soon, a huge puddle of water was growing on the sandy dry soil. Disapproving facesturned away from their television sets to stare at the small oasis.

I couldn't help wonderins why these people were sitting out there in the middle of nowhere, how much it had cost to pump the water to the campground, and what I was doing there.
What I was doing there. and I can do without.

TAP: support the increase, oppose  The bad is a cut in benefits to

It is an ancient truism that one must always take the good with the bad. In the. Feld of financial sid, however, tudents should beertremely reluctant to take the badin Gov. Fingh I. Carey's propoesal foi changing the Trition Assistance Plan (TAP), regardless of the good.

independent of their parents are excluded. We do not oppose stringent rules to prevent students from feigning emancipation in order to allow their paremts to escape responsibility for meeting their educational costs. But Carey's proposal will injure genninely emancipated students.
Emancipated students are not a majority or anything approsehing it. But as adults, and as students, they have rights just as dependent atudents do, rights which are deserving of protection.

We urge aupporters of TAP increases to lobby in favor of measures to increase benefits - but we urge them to lobby against cuts for benefits to emancipated students.

Any cut in financial aid opportunities, whether to all students or a smail group, strikes at the moat fundamental of student interests - finding the meang to pay for the cost of education. We oppose placement of an unreasonable burden on students merely because they are independent of their parents.

Shortwave radio provides worldwide entertainment

By Mike Collier
If you always thought that the radio world started at the beginning of AM and died at the end of FM, you'd probably be surprised to know that between those two limits there lies a-piece of the radio spectrum that remains relatively unexplored.
It is in the range of $\mathbf{3 - 3 0}$ megahertz.

Aside from Western propaganda mills such as Radio Free Europe, there are many broadcasters in Europe that offer programming in English that is entertaining and informative. In this respect the British Broadcasting Corporation at 6175 gets the standard, having been long known for its highly objective style of news reporting and its accurate and complete coverage of world events, provided by an army of correspondents stationed all over the globe. Between the hourly newscasts one can hear features of various kinds: scientific, economic, musical; their cultural programming is probably the best in the world, which consigts of anything from serializations of Shakespearean drama to modern British comedy.
From the continent, the most widely listened to stations are Radio Nederland from Holland, Radio Sweden and Radio Moscow, at 9685. Radio award for the dullest programming on the air. Features such ming "What is Communism?" and readings from Lenin's memoirs just don't seem to hit it off with foreign listeners. it off with foreign listeners. On the other hand, if the Nielsen Co. rated international broadcasters, Radio Sweden just might come out on top. They have recently introduced radio's only X-rated comedy program called the "Saturday Show," a more indulgent version of NBC's "Saturday Night." Nobody is immune from the program's satirical attacks - the targets include Sweden's monarchy, religions, foreigners and the government.
In other parts of the world, such as the troubled Middle East and southern African areas, the important role that broadcasting plays in politics can be scen.
The Israel Broadcasting Authority at 9435, can be heard easily in North America, transmitting on irregular frequencies to avoid jamming by other stations. Stations from Egypt, Iran and Syria can also be heard. The Voice of the Palestinian . Revolution's programs are made available through the services of the government radio in Algeria.
Fadio RSA, "The Voice of South Africa," is the most powerful station from Africa. Black nationalist groups from this region send their messages through broadcasters in Tanzania and Zambia.
One might think that sophisticated equipment is needed to receive all these stations. But that is no longer the case, due to the recent introduction into the U.S. market by Panasonic and Sony of two technologically advanced and reasonably priced portable receivers. About the size of an ordinary table radio, they are both capable of receiving any of the previously mentioned stations and without any fancy equipment or antennas. Short-wave sets are priced in the $$ 120$ range Ayan O'Neal and Marise Berenson kiss and make up in Stanley Kubrick's "Garry Lyndon." The film will be shown tonight ax 6 and 10 p.m. in Gifford Auditorium.

Innovative movie succeeds as Kubrick brings past to life

FILM ON CAMPUS: MBarry ford Auditorium, $$ 1.50$.

Hy Brent Marchant Treating every scene as though he was gently carpssing a painter's canvas, film director Stanley Kubrick beautifully recreates a world of the past in his most recent film, "Barry Lyndon." Strikingly different from his earlier fims, such as "2001: A Space Odyssey" and A Clockwork Orange,", this film demonstrates Kubrick's versatility and superb talent as a director. It won four Academy Awards in 1975. Set in the mid-1sth century "Barry Lyndon" is the storty of a young Irishman named Redmond Barry (Kyan O'Neal), who duels with a British army officer, forcing Barry to flee from would-be captors. He hides from the authorities where they would be least likely to look for him - in the British army. gradually advances he is, Burry fighting valiantly in the seven Years ${ }^{\circ}$ War. finally becoming a successful continental gambler and ladies' man. Barry reaches the pinnacle of his success by marrying Lady Lyndon (Marisa Berenson), a young aristocratic English widow. The name Redmond Barry is replaced by Barry Lyndon. Barry hopes the aristocratic name will expedite his acquisition of a land title.

John Alcott's award-winning cinematography uses seversl in novative, unusual techniques. One special camera filter, which creates slight haziness around the edges of the film. Used mainly during the technique emphasizes the aloofness of the aristocratic lifestyle.
An excellent musical score has always been a trademark of Kub rick's films. "Barry Lyndon" is no exception. Although . some of the music does not belong in the mid Isth century it nonetheless works well. Featuring music by Bach Handel, Mozart, Yaisiello, Schubert and Vivaldi. as well as eome traditional lrish folk songs, beonard for his musical achievements.
Based on the novel by William Makepeace Thackeray, screenwriter Kubrick made several changes when adapting it for the film. He added a narrator and changed the character of Lady Lyndon from a somewhat foppish, eccentric English widow into a rather boring. naive character who rarely speaks throughout the film.

The pace of the film is a little slow. yet it never drags. The sheer beauty of the film makes it relaxing to watch. Kubrick has created the cinematic equivalent to curling up with a good novel on a cold autumn day.

The film's one major weak spot is poor acting by the lead characters, a problem generic to all of Kubrick's films except "A Clockwork Orange." O'Neal as Barry Lundon is poorly cast. He looks the part and has a clear delivery, but puta little feeling into his character.

Berenson as Lady Lyñion is rarely given a chance to speak (All the better.) She delivers her lines with the grace and clogged sump pump.

Several outstanding performances are given by supporting characters, however. Leon Vitali is dastardly as Lyndon's vicious step son. Murray Melvin as Rev- Runt Lady Lyndon's private vicar, and Marie Kean as Barry's mother, also give excellent performances-
Despite his problems, Kubrick's combination of fine technical fac tors results in a series of beautifully painted scenes, each one a master piece in its own right Anyone who loves the arts should not miss this one.

Wrote it from that stand point.
Would his writing change if he gained a mass popularity like Dylan? "Hmmm..good question," said Newman, followed by a long pause. "Well, a risk of that exists. If you have a big auccess with one ang or with an album...you might try to doit again. And I don't know how I'd react to it. Now, I would hope that I would ignore that and tay to write as well as i could, but I'm not poaitive that I could do it...because I like to make money: I don't not care about that. It would be something I'd be concerned with; I'd watch mygelf closely. Whether I would or not. I don't know.*
As Newman prepared to go onstage he discussed what overwhelming success meant to him. With a mmile he responded, "A lot more venereal diseage, i guess."

Animals' reunion LP succeeds with old style

Hy Mark Sullivan

The Animals were one of the better bands to come out of the 1960s. Though they didn't receive the notoriety that many lesger talents did, the Animals hey didn't receive the notoriety hat many lesger talents did, the Anman produced two strong albums and several classic top 40 hits. "House of the prociuced two strong albums and several classic top "O hits. "House of the Mising Sun, "We Gotta Get Out of this Place, "Don't Let Me Be Misunderstocd" and "It's My Life" are prime examples of the Animals"
Britigh blues that influenced many Iater artists. The Animals have long Britigh blues that influenced many later artists. The Animals have long been a favorite of Bruce Springsteen, and he often includes an Animala oldie in his liveset. But after their limited success, the Animals scattered in different directions with mixed resulta.
Lead vocalist Eric Burdon had a brief stint with the group War and achieved one hit single with the Eric Burdon Band in 1970, "Spill the Wine." The rest of the band remained out of the limelight and the Animals were oniy a pleasant menory until the release of a reumion album, Before We Were So Rudely Interrupted (United Artists).
The album contains every ingredient that made the Animals so good. Despite the elapse of almost a decade, the band is still capable of generating those simple, powerful melodies with a minimum of sound.
The Animals always relied on the basics, and the bluesy rack arrangements with heavy emphasis on keyboards continue to be she band's driving force.
Bundon is one of the best white blues singers and although his gravelly voice has only minimal range, his phrasing and obligatory growling are as good as ever. Burdion and the Animale sound remarkably like lim Morrison and the Doors on "Fire on the Sun." Burdon's vocals and Alan Price's gospel keyboards also conjure up images of The Doors" Hay Manzarek on "LA. Woman."
The rest of the album, though not spectacular, offers a strong variety of blues and old-fashioned rock "n roll. Much of the credit has to go to Chas Chandler's production effort. His mixing results in a clean, unobtrusive sound that doesn't interfere with the music. Chandler allows the band's main ingredients, Burdon's voice and Price's keyboards, to ahine through with some short, tasteful guitar work by Hilton Valentine. The record's only concession to modern production technique is the addition of strings on "Please Send Me Someone to Love, which comes off nicely.
This is the same kind of record the Animals weremaking more than 10 years ago. Whereas many reunion albuma attempt to offer an updated version of an outdated band, the Animals have continued to do what they have aiways done best. Their mixture of blues and simple yet powerful rock 'n' roll is a welcome change from the chuttered synthesized sound produced by many current hard-rock bands.

The Oratorio Society，the largest choral group on cam－ pus，consists of the Univer－ singers and community people，＂according to Rhonda Fleming，associate professor of voice and director of choral music activities．

The 175 －member group presents major choral／or． chestral works，often with the Syracuse Symphony，she said． This December，the singers and symphony will perform Verdi Requiem in the Civic Center．During the spring Center－During the spring semester they will do an semester they，will do an Cavant－garde＂piece by ＂Apotheosis of this Earth．＂

Flerning was appointed to her position in January after receiving her doctorate in Music Education at Florida State．Because of this，shesaid， she is unfamiliar with the resources at her disposal in Syracuse．She expressed concern for funding of this year＇s tour and said she might solicit financial support from Student Association and other sources，both on and off cam－ pus．

The 50 University Singers receive academic credit for work in their own choir and in the Oratorio Society，unlike members of just the latter．

This group，Fleming said， exemplifies one of her main goals in that one－third of the group are nonmusic majors．＂I watht＂to＂expend the in－ volvenent of the community and nonmusic majors in

SU replaces computer processorSyracuse University＂ B com－ puter department is replacing the main processor of the Deck 10 computer，a ten－year－old KA10，with a KA10 with five times the power of the old one．

According to William Jones director of the computer department，the replacement will aid in computer instruc－ tion and research．

Although the new KA10 costs about $$ 500,000$ ，the department＇s budget will remain approximately the same as last year＇s because the department just finished pay－ ing for the old KA1O this year． Both KA10s are paid for by installments．Jones expects＂a good five years or s0＂with the replacement．

The Choral
The Choral Union，the larger of the groups，is open to the community and all students．With 130 members， the union acceptis singers Without auditions，unlike the University Singers and the Oratorio Society－Students may participate with or without credit．
The union will sing in the Civic Center in December with the Syracuse Symphony．They will do Handel＇s＂The Mes－ siah．＂Fleming said．
The Concert Choir，a group of 45 members，will perform a Christmas program for the high schools in the area，she high schools in the area，she presents folk songs under the direction of graduateassistant Diane Tammi．
Fleming observed that although SU has a small music school with such a large university，there probably are fertile fields＂which are un－ discovered in terms of singing talent．

The Syracuse University Oratorio Society is the largest choral group on campus．The society． which has 175 members and consists of the 50 University Singers and other singers from both on and off campus，plans to accompany the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra to the Syracuse Civic Center and．in April，to Carnegie Hall in New York City．

By Joel Stashenko  It alrnost defies belief.

Eapecially after an rundefeated regular season in 1976 ard a close Ione to Houston in the Cotton Bowl Especially after all those preseason polla which picked Maryland as the top teara in the East.

The Terrapins come into tomorrow's game against Syracuse withal-3record. But is that the Maryland Terrapins?
"Their record's a shocker," SU football coach Frank Maloney sxid. "A lot of polls picked them to go undefeated, and I honestly thought before the season started they'd be the toughest team we'd play all year.'

But tough has turned into timid for Coach Jerry Clairborne's Tercapin squad. They still own a four-game winning streak over SU, however.
"I think their big problem is the offergive line," SU defenaive lineman Bernie Winters said. They lost Eive Winters said. "They lost Eive them are now playing in the ${ }^{\text {pros. }}$ l think they're also dowis because they're losing.' Wintexs said. "They've got a lot of pressure on this week to win, and yet they don't get nothing if they do because everybody will say they ahould beat wo. We've got everything to gain and nothing to lose."

The Maryland maladies fail to give SU any better feelings about the game, however "They're a lot better than their record," Winters said. "We have a hiell of a lot of respect for them."

Eapecially worthy of reapect are the men in the Terrapin backfield. The Maryland attack features no less than two tented quarterbacks - Larry Dick.

Just in passing
"I'm anxious about their pasaing game," Maloney baid. They average 216 yands a game and that is a lot. They game and that is a ot cilley also have those two excellent quarterbacks 8 o if one gets hart the other will step right in."
That's exactly what Manges did last season for Maryland as he took over for his injured

Maryland's Manges

Terrapins to a $10-0$ regular season (including a $42-28$ win over SU at Archbold) This year Dick has completod 30 passes in 48 tries for 499 yards while Manges is 27 for 67 and 366 yards.
"The player on the team who scares me most, though, is Vince Kinney." Maloney said of the $6-3$, 190 -pound wide receiver. "He just frightens me." The fleet Kinney has caught 18 Terrapin passes this season for 316 yards.

In lant season's SU. Maryland gaine Terrapin tailback Steve Atkins ran through the tattered Orange defense for a school record 215 yards. This season, however he has been slowed by a knee injury and has gained only 195.
"He's sort of hobbled right now," Maloney said. "If he returns to form he could be devastating." Atkin's running mate Alvin Maddox is the leading Maryland rusher with 211 yards.
The Terrapin defense is led by All-Atlantic Coast Conference playera Larry Seder (a defenvie guard) and linebacker Brad Carr. Carr leads the team with 67 tackles.

The people Carr will be tachling tomorrow, the SU Orangemen, are Aying high after last week's impressive road victory in Illinois However the nagging problem of ínjuries continue to slowly plack Maloney's crew.
Two more second-line Orangemen, defensive back Pete Prather and lineman Mike Rotunda are both out indefinitely while Glenn Williams is questionable for the game with a pinched nerve in hin neek. Tright end Fick Rosen has also been bothered by a shoulder injury.

Reasonable succeas
"I think the rainin reasona for our auccess are both the offensive line and the young backs," Maloney said. "It takes a lot of heatoff of Hurley when Monk and Hartman are able to come through with 150 yards a game between them."
Through four games for the 2-2 Orancemen Hurley has un for 287 yands in 72 carries. Monk has rushed for just under 200 yards in 46 tries and the sophomore Hartman is 29 Defor Defonsively, SU must contend with the strong Maryland offense with a defense that has done more bending this year than a contortionist.
"Yeah, we bexd," SU defensive back Larry King said, "but we don't break. The big thing with Maryland is we can't let them keep the ball for a long time againat us. We've zot to give it to the offense
Despite the elastrity of the SU defemse (they have given up 402 yaxde a game), Maloney believen the band will eventually break.
${ }^{-N o}$ No, we can't continue to give up 400 yards a game and wize" he spid. . Especially against a Maryland squad that, dempl to its reat BU .
"They're - -niwayk good," King maid. They'x the beat 13 teim in the country. They can broalk out austime I jued hope they don't breale out

Despite a two garme winning straak and a 200 per cent improvernent in their last two games, the SU Orangemen still find themselvait two-touchdown underdogs tomorrow. The "main courte" for Svracuse will be the University of Maryland Terrapins. who are 1-3 on the season. surfering defeata to North Carolina State, Pemn State and Weat Virginia. ## A woman for all courts

By Dave Stern
If a person is raised in Brooklyn, he or she is suppoeed to be able to play basketball.

Syracuse sophomore Betay Gottlieb is no exception. While growing Flatbush," the athletic Gottlieb also learned to play Gottlieb also learned to play tennis. Fortunately for the Syracuge women's tennis team, she has chosen to concentrate on serves and volleys instead of jump shots and free throws.

Last year Gottlieb played on the women's basketball and temais teams. This season she has chosen not to play baskethall so she can concentrate more on tennis.
Her coach, Birgitta Warbach, believen Gottlich must "play as mach as mossible to atay sharp. Onr season is so ahort that she season is so ahort that she must play in practices and cournaments wo be ready, 1 she maid Gottlieb is the No. 1 singles player on a team that plays only 12 matches year. She won 11 of 12 matehes during her freahman beason.

Warbach describes Gottlieb as a "fairly quiet girl with a good diaposition. Every match Betsy plays, she learns more and plays, She is very coachable and ready to work hard. She likes to work on conditionesing," she said.
This season Gottieb has won three of four matches, losing only to atnte champion Ann Arries of Colgate, 6-4, 6-4. The score may be reveraed the next time the two rivals meet "I really want to work hard to beat her," Gottlieb said.
The Brooklyn native is a right-handed player with a hard aerve, a strong forehand and a steady backhand "She has no apparant weaknesans," Warbach said. "She can attack, eerve and volley. Also, she can play a stendy game, which is a good combination."

SA official presents complaints on buses

By Marsha Eppolito
Steve L. Cohen, administrative assistant for campus transportation, was presented Friday with a 200 -signature petition and over 120 complaints about university bus service
Scott Klein, SA vicepresident of university/community relations, presented the petition from 200 students who have classes at the Regent Theater, saying the four North Campus runs are not sufficient to ravel to and from classes.
About 100 complaints dealt specifically with North Campus bus frequency and an additional 20 to 30 complaints dealt with problems such as early and late buses.
Cohen will meet with Centro officials Wedneaday to discuss remedies for the North Campus bus problems. Student Association officials are suggesting between 10 and 20 rums be restored during the day. There are now four runs before 5 pm. on the North Campus noute.

Transportation surveys showed little use of the North Campus service, Klein said. As a result, Manley, Vincent and Winding Ridge services were increased, Slocum Heights service remained the same and North Campus service decreased.

Klein said restoring the North Campus service would not cause changes in other services

Transportation officials are in the process of overhauling campus bus service for next, semester, Klein said. He is "confident" a revised system will be implemented, although nothing is final. Bus runs are expected to serve new routes such as Winding Kidge to Newhouse.

A. 17-year-ald woman was raped near Thornden Park Thursday morning at 12.15 a.m. Syracuse city molicesaid it 12:15 a.m. Syracuse city police said it

According to police, the woramon was According to police, the woman was walking along the 200 block of Ostrom Avenue when the man jumped out from behind sorne bushes. He dragged the woman into the park, raped her and eacaped. The woman was treated for ahock at Upstate Medical Center and released.

The woman clescribed her assailant as black, bout 27,5 feet 8 of medium build, with short hair and a mustache. He was wearing a blue shirt and jeans.

Police believe the rapist may be the same man who has committed six rapes or attempted rapes in the university area since July 2 . However. police said, those rapes were committed while the man was burglarizing apartments. The description does not match the description of the man who committed sexual assaults on Aug. 29 and 30 and Oet. 3.

Police said the last rapeburglary case took place Oct. 2. Some of the streets where the rapes took place include Westcott Street, Lancaster Avenue and Oetrom Avenue.

That man was described as black, 5 feet 10 to 6 feet, from 18 to 28 years old, and having a thin to medium build. Police said the descriptions of the victims were not very precise because the women usually were sleeping then they were attacked.
A police spokesman said the victim of Thursday" assault is "probablya student" because she lives on the 200 block of Ostrom Avenue and also because of her age.

SA officials retain support of Congress...

By Marsha Eppolito

Despite differing opinions on the United Statea National Student As Student Association officials agree Syracuse University should continue to support NSA.

There is "no question, we've got to mo." Rick Margolius, vice-president of student programs, said. Paula Stowell, vicepresident of academic affairs. Vicepresident of academic afrairs. some organization outaide SU." Fich Crowell president gaid "We have a crowponsibility to represent our school responsibility to represent our schoo on a nationallevel. . it is part of the SA commitment.
"NSA does not offer too much for studenta at SU. . but it is important to have a student viewpoint on Capitol Hill," Margolius said. "It is more effec tive for students as a whole," he added.

Margolius said NSA "has drifted away from its goal." Stowell added; "1 wish they'd change their emphasis." SA officiala said NSA has become carried away with internal affairs and issues of international importance not directly affecting college students.
Accordiag to Crowell, "NSA has had its problem." Margolius said it is in "grave financial difficulties." streamiline proposal reorganizing NS A administrative duties was adopted. SA officials said this will "definitely help" the organization and enable it to become more powerful.
NSA and National studerit Lobbying Association (NSL) have disbying Association (NSL) have dis cussed "a merge to survive" which would help NSA become more effective on Capitol Hill.
SA delegates attended workshops. plenary meetings and area caucurea. Crowell felt the "more specific the workshop, the better it was.". He said the workshops "on the whole were fairly good." Margolius said the workshops were not orrganized well and not totally effective." sitowell expressed disappointment in th.
workshops, saying ahe did not learn any real information.

SA officials felt they expanded their knowledge in certain areas as a result of the NSA Congress. Margoling said it was an "exchange of our knowledge for their knowledge." Crowell said he "got a lot out of talking to stadent represen tatives" from cther schools.
However, no-specific program ideas were generated from the conference. There is nothing directly I learned from NSA that I'm going to do, Margolius anid.

Workshops attended by the SU delegates included Building a Fund Raising Program, Pending Legislation and Regulations, Faculty Evaluation, Financial Aid and Establishing Student Co-ops and Services. Each delegate attended the workshop which most closely dealt with his specific role in SA
SA officials said SU is more advanced than many other achools in the servizes it offers to students. Stowell said, "We're already doing a lot of the things that they're (NSA) advocating."

Throughout the conference. everyone knew SU was there and we were active. . we made ourselves known." Crowell said.
At the congress, more than 190 pieces of legislation were submitted by members. Of these, 19 were given priority by the steering committee to be brought to the plenary floor. From the 19 two were submitted by the SU delegation. The two SU proposals dealt with he Equal fights Amendment and establishing a National Peace Academy.
SU . is initiating a Northeast organization to bring other private schools from the Northeast into NSA. The formation of a strong Northeast area would enable Northeast schools to have a more powerful voice in the NSA Congress.
Kathy Spagnoli, NSA representative, said it is "good" to have students conduct the workshops and that the conference thould be moved from year to year. However, Marcoliua said NSA should get "better quality speakers" and the conference should be held in Washington every year. Margolius said "best resource people are located in Washington:" Spagnoli said it is "ridiculous" to have the" congress in Washington and it should be located on different college cam-

Of Lance and logic

To the editor
I am writing in regard to 'IMm Wendel's column (DO,Oct. 3). While I agree with Mr. Wendel's view that most of the media acted properly in the Bert Lance case, I strongly disagree with his rationale for his statements.
Mr. Wendel says the Lance case provided Americans with "a brief, disturbing look at Washington policy." Does he mean thereby to im ply that Lance's actions are typical of all of Waghington? Has he forgotten that Bert Lance was only one of thousands of governmental workers in the capital? Surely the city cannot beas corrupt as he would like us to believe. Furthermore, by what rationale does Wendel think that anyone would believe that Jimmy Carter and his aides are mere "babes in the woods of Washington? Contrary to the writer's implication, it is in writer's implication, it is inconceivable for anyone but an experienced politician to be,elected to the Presidency. Thus it is a myth to assume that the Lance case exposed Carter as

The column also seems to imply some sort of hypocrisy on the part of the Carter Administration because Lance retained Clark Clifford as his lawyer. Whatever Mr. Clifford's political convictions, Mr. Lance hired him because of his ability as a lawyer, not because of his politics. Moreover, one mustremember that Clifford was Lance's personal counsel, thus separate from any

In summary, my point is that to be valid a printed opinion must be Grounded in factual substantiation. totally invalid, as is Mr. Wendel's.

A Case in point

Fo the editor
As a former member of the Syracuse University soccer team and one who is proud to say he played with many of the present team's players, I feel it my right and duty to comment on Patti Orsini'z article on Tom Case
1 have played soccer for many years and on many levels. Yet never in all my experiences have I been witness tosuch a libelous attack on a soccer player or any amateur athlete. What makes it the more vexing is that the most defamatory comments came from Case's coach Bill Goettel.
Tom Case is in his first semester al a very large, very confusing university. At the same timerhe is being depended on to vault successfully from high school competition to the highest level of year-old is burdensome, to say the least. But now to be subject to this most blatant ridicule of his ability to survive on such a level is in comprehensible to me.
What coach Goettel had in mind when relaying these thoughts to Ms. Ursini is also beyond me. Another player noted that Case lacks con fidence. Verbal abuse such as coach Gioettel's seems to be a most queer meshod of restoring this lack.
On a $1-6$ team; I don't see how Case can be pinpointed as Case can be pinpointed as have already undergone mass strangulation. However, this is not strangulation. However, this is not play several times, and no one can play several times, and no one can be set apart for their lack of effort. If coach Goettel believes Case is not putting out what he should, then he ought to take it up with him personally, and not put his disgrun tlement on public display.

SU's priorities: stadia or students?

These are trying times. In recent years college students have been concerned with such unimportant matters as wars and political scandals. Now, gense Once again the chief topic of discussion at Syracuse University-is football.

Ever since the geason began, the strengths and weaknesses of the football team have been closely examined. The strength are the kickers and the positive attitude of the players. The weaknesses are everything else. This results in a team that usually plays far better than it's ever supposed to.

Attitude, however, will not make SU's football team great. Dedicated athletes are not enough. Many people feel SU must recruit the best players and make ministration seems uncertain as to whether it should ollow this course.
It shouldn't.
It has been suggested that SU needs a star running back to bring about a supposed "Golden Age." This star, the reasoning goes, would draw attention to the school and lure better students here. But Tony Dorsett didn't make pitt a kreat educational institution, and nobody has bragged about the scholastic brilliance of football factories like Oklahoma, Alabama and Ohio State. Nearby Cornell, on the other hand, draws excellent students despite having an Ivy league veam of modest abilities.
The university appears ready to build a 50,001 -sent football stadium. (Better yet. Unondaga County may build one for us.) The stadium will probably cost as mere $$ 7$ to $$ 9$ million. Will the county spend that have to pay for the stadionn itself
One must question the wisdom of building a stadium right now. SU does not have a larse endowment. soits Thancial condition is always some what precarious. The administration says it can take out loans to build the stadium and then repay the loans with money the stadium generates. 'This kind of logic led New York City to bankruptcy.
The administration's priorities also appear wo be out of order. Why should SU build a football stadium when, for the same amount of money, it could build at University Union building? A football stadium will be used on six Saturdays during the fall. A UU building will be used all year.
It all comes down to a matter of priorities. The adeministration must in the near future decideon what it refards as important. Will su be an institution concerned with football or with students and academics?

Urbanization of the Hill: the passing of an era

"The business of an American architect is to build something that is fairly presentable and will stand for 30 years." - James Renwick, noted 19th century architect.
The building that once housed Burnett's Pharmacy at the corner of South Crouse Avenue and East Adams Street was neither distinguished nor notable. Which is why it was important. It was part Of what has been Syracuse University for a long, long time, and its demolition is characteristic of what is happening to the Hill.
The urbanization of the university area can be seen on almost every block of the campus. You can see it in the oddly shaped, gravel parking lots that used to be the sites of some of Syracuse's most beautiful wooden structures. You can see it in the ponderous concrete and glass architecture that is replacing the softer edges and more grandiose ornamentation of another era.

The Daily Orange

The university seems to invite the changes with its attitude toward wooden structures. Anyone who has been here more than a who has been here more than a perience of walking down a street where the university owned wooden buildings, and seeing daylight where once there was none.

One university administrator cited an old story of a farmer and an ax in explamation of the universitys attitude. The farmer, he saud, had changed the ax head 10 times and the handle five times.

The farmer thought he had the game ax. But it isn't the same ax, and it isn't the same campus.

It isn't the same South Crouse Avenue that once was lined with wooden houses, with "Main Street America' front porches facing the street. The disappearance of those houses, and the residential picture that faced the campus, brought the hospital district into contact with the university.

Further down South Crouse is the old pharmacy, or rather the gaping hole where the building stood a few days ago. Across from it, is a face of modern urbanization : a massive five-story parking garage, its blank, sheer, concrete wall casting shadows of a setting sun hours early for the people on South Crouse.
The passing of a single decrepit two-story structure may not be something to mourn. The passing of the age it represents is.

Scholars sponsor discussion on drugs, alcohol in America

The place of druget Pend alcohol in American culture was the topic of diacuscion at Saturday cwiture was the topic of ciscuasion at Saturday State American Studies Asociation (NYSASA) in the Founders Room of Maxwell Hall.

The two-and-one-half - hour discussion, moderated by NYSASA Vice-President Daniel Golden, dealt with the cause of drag regulation in America, the effect of the temperance movernent on women's rights, the origin of Alcoholics Anonymous and myths about alcoholism.
According to David Locke, a member of the humanities division of Kirkland College. Laws regulating drug use today are in direct conflict with our knowledge of drugs. He said no new information about the phyaical and mental effects caused by prolonged use of opiates has been uncovered in the last 70 years, and that problems with drug use only oceur when an individual stops using the drag.

Locke named Harry J. Anslinger, the retired head of the Federal Bureau of Narcotics, as the molder of national drug regulation, Anslinger correlated drug use in America with sin. Locke said. In a quote from his 1953 book "The Traffic in Narcotics," Analinger stressed that "marijuana has no therapertic value, and its use is therefore alwayerapeubus abalue, and and a vice."
Another apeaker, linda Bennett, former aupervisor for the N, Yind Sort State Soet wor supervisor for the New York State Social Work Training Program in Alcoholism, contradicted the theory that alcoholism is a diacase. She moral behavior If a an escape from accepted morai behavior. If a man starts a fight when he is drunk, society does not condemn hirn becauae he was not in control of his actions when he started the fight. However, if the same man etarted a fight when he was mober he would be condemned because he was in complete control of his action.
Bennett also said mose aocoholics are hypochondriacs who use alcohol as an escape from peychological and physical pain.
Other speakers were Tom Davis Jr.. chaplain and assistant profestor of religion at Skidmore College, and Barbara Kotundo from the department of English at the State Univeraity of New York at Albany.
NYSASA is the regional chapter of the nationwide organization of the American Studies Association (ASA).

Symphony attracts crowd despite obscure program

The fact that the Civic Center was not empty during last weekend's Syracuse Symphony Concert shows the good faith the people of Syracuse have in their conductor, Christopher Keene.
He selected a program of relatively obscure works, without anything from the standard repertoire as a drawing card. It is not the type of program which usually attracts crowds

Those who managed to overcome their initial misgivings and come to the almost packed concert hall were treated to an enjoyable even ing of music. There were no romantic heavies to contend with, no modern works to try and decipher, just finely crafted music performed by well-disciplined musicians.

This is not to say that the program was in the least frivolous, but while the usual concert leaves one emotionally drained, this concert was refreshing.
The featured soloist was the world-famous harpsichord virtuoso, Igor Kipnis, who harpsichord virtuoso, Igor Mipnis, who performed the Poulenc
Currently Artist in Residence at Fairfield College in Connecticut, Kipnis has had an extensive performing and recording career.
His has made six European tours, performed with the Chicago Symphony, the Pittsburgh Symphony and the New York Philarmonic and made appearances in Canada, South Amerca and Australia.
His recordings include all of the Bach harpsichord concertos, the De Falla harpsichord concerto, with Pierre Boulez, and a two-record set titled The English Harpsichord, featuring music of the 17 th and 18th centuries.
The harpeichord is a percussion instrument, so, as one would expect, thereis much rhythmic interplay between the members of the orchesinterplay between the members of the orches tra. Both Keene and Kipnis attack theinterplay with obvious delight. What Kipnis lacked in volume, he more than made up for with energy, Opening the program was Arensky's "Variations on a Theme" by Tchaikousky. It is not in the classical or neo-classical atyle of the Mozart or Poulenc, but it nevertheless follows the traditional theme and variations form.
In the past, the symphony has had some difficulty with its strings, but in this composition, written entirely for strings, all trace of past problems vanighed. They played with great cohesiveness, each phrase was nicely shaped and all of pizzicatos were together.
Closing the program was the Mozart Serenade No. 9 in D. Major K.320, "Yosthern. It was neverintended to be a "serious" work, but as background to some court function of which we no longer have knowledge. Mozart, however, could not write simple music, and this piece is filled with intellectual delights.
Keene has obvious affection for the works of Mozart. He approaches the work with a sense of the broad outlines. His phrasing has breadth, yet he never loses the fine details. It was a thoroughly enjoyable performance.
Keene should be commended for daring such a challenging program. the orchestra should also be given credit for being able to pull off a program lacking in the usual crowd pleasers.

The board would like stadenta to see that there are continuous attempta to improve heaith services and better meet student needs. Mounts beid.
The board is now almost completely staffed. In addition to Mounts, it consists of Chairman

George Bodine; Barbara MacDermott, assistant professor of nursing; Joseph A. Tatnsko, vice-preaident for buminess management; Dr. Vincent J. Lamprarella, director of Health Services; four oucside practitioners and two students. The local doctort, Murray Groseman Joel Potash, Miriam Swift, and Howara Weinberger, are to ingure the Lisison function of the board. Undergraduate Kathryn Kasperovich has been selected to the committoe and a graduate student is yet to be named.
In fall 1975, the committee was charged with reviewing the Health Center and maling recommendations about services provided, financing, student health insurance coverage, fee gtructure and processes throngh which practices could be reviewed and policies establiehs.
In February 1976 the committee subnittedits report to Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers. One of its recommendations was that a committee or group be formed to function in an adviaory capacity to the director of Student Health capacity
The committee felt this board would function to review medical practices and serve as laison between the university and the medical community at large. The committee gaw a need for the board because of SU's gixe and the lack of a medical achool. Thus, there is a heavy reliance on the outaide medical community.

Program provides enrichment

Hy Deirclre Frynn
Armidst the changes and expetiments at aniversities in the 19608 , professors at Syracuse University did not want highly motivated stadents to be alienated by SU's size. Accordingly, they instituted the University Honorm Hrogram in 1964.
"We feel it's an exciting academic experience that provides for the highiy motivated atudent with a strong interest in acadenices, said T. William Hall, director of the program "We take time with studies, it is an enrichment lind of thing."
The program, which started in the College of Arts and Sciences, was expanded last semester to all colleges except the College of Visual and Performing Arts, the School of Nurving and the School of Education.
"It was a series of different activities that is now a concrete program," Hall said. About 150 students participate Abotut He Honors Program and they usually are in the top 5 per they usurily are in cent of their class.

Students focus on the first two years of general program two years of seneral program requirements while caking pass-fai graded seminars and Many academic departments Many academic departments offer the honors courses, which offer the honors courses, which have traditionally been have tradicionaliy characterized by the last digit " 9 " in the courge number or the word "honors" in the title.
To graduate "with honors" in most majors, students must do a senior thesis. Studenta must maintain a 3.0 grade-point average (GPA) to be in the lower-division honors program, for freshmen and sophomores; upper division which applies to juniors and seniors, requires a 3.2 GPA.
"I hope we can be nore influential in having SU gain a strong academic iparge. We want to do anything we can to infuence students as well as encoaraging faculty student interaction," said Hall.

This year, the program is eponsoring freshman and upper clast seminars, meetings to acquaint atudents with faculty and a sophomore colloquium. There will also be awards for lower division honore at theend of a student's gonors atcheend

Throughout
Throughout its development, Hai said. the Honors Program intenca to remain unique combining a good time, culture and a good Tacation.
The Honors Program alsoincludes lectures, convocations, movies, conferences, seminars and plays, which are open to the entire student body.
The program office is located in 106 Hall of Languages.

SU looks to winter with return of heat

- By John Barrows

Heat in Syracuse University dormitories and classrooms was turned on to 65 degrees Sept. 15, according to Harvey Kaiser, vice-president for facilities administration. The heat had been shut off since April.
Heating problems this year are due to defects in the steam system. The system is checked over the summer before being turned on, Kaiser said, but, "it is not unusual to have a few amall problems, such as a block in a steam line or a breakdown in a purnp. We have no way of knowing ofproblems of this nature within the system until we hear the resident advisers and dorm directors complaints."
Heating problems have all been brought to the attention of the SU Physical Plant, and have been OKL maintenance coordinator is in charge of evaluating the severity of complaints received by his office, and initiating work onders for Physical Plant.
Local authorities set a 65 degree minimum for dormitories and classrooms, Kaiser said. Heating and ronergy, systems for the university are under city regulations except in undergencies, where state or federal emergencies, where state or rederal regulations may override. Last winter's severe cold led to regulation temperatures from thestate Energy Of-fice-
Fuel problemy are not expected this year, Kaiser said. The steam system can change firom natural gas to oil if necessary. Careful attention is being paid to federal developments in natural gas prices, such as the provision for deregulation of natural pas prices, the subject of a filibuster recently before the Senate.

The university has investigated local oil prices and is prepared to stockpile oil prices and is prepared to stockpile gas or make the awitch to oil if neceasary, Kaiser Baid.

Because of the lack of long term storage facilities for oil and syrtem's design, gas stockpiles are prefered, Kaiser said.
SU's heating system is made up of a mainstream distribution system which feeds each individual heating system in all dormitories and classrooms, except electrically heated Bird Library.
Several campus building heating systems are being updated with the help of a $$ 1.6$ million loan from the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development, under the College Housing Loan Program.

Little can be done to prevent temperature variance from lower to higher floors of buildings such as Lawrinson and DellPlain. "This problem is compensated for in the design of the particular bullding's heatmaintenance, he said, relies on students to report any prablems they may have.

Chapin's latest release adds to his trail of tales

By Keith Nichols
The folk-rock minetrel, Harry Chapin, has successfully expanded on his trail of tales with his latest release, Dance Band on the Telarse, Titanic.
This is Chapin's eighth LP. his only double album to date, except for his Gireatest Stories-Live record. Unilke many contemporary doubles, it is not half.filled with junk juat to make it complete. The album has four sides of topnotch material.
Harry Chapin's music emphasizes simplicity. There are no big drum solos, no booming guitar paris, and no synthesizers. His songs feature mostly soft, acoustic guitar without emphasis on bass, electric guitar, percussion and keyboards. The songs are centered around the tonal inflection of his raspy voice.
Chapin's works are not intended for Top 40 use. He has had a few hit singlea, his -greatest success being "Cat in the Crmalle." "Taxi" was another big hit but it never topped the charts because it was too long. His only other aingle wamg "WOLDD," which didn't go far
Many of Chapin's songs on "Dance Band on the Titanic" are lyrically related to every" day kife. In "Country Dreamn" he talks about the life of a real estate araleaman. "I used to hate the city now I'm dwelling in it/ I used to love the country now I'm selling it/ I'm doing well in it that's the hell of it."
The album is a family effort One brother, Stephen. produces, arranges, sings and plays keyboards'on Chapin's latest recording. Another brother, Tom, is featured on acoustic guitar as well as vocals.

Chapin's wife, Sandy coauthors "I Do It For You,Jane," and grandfather Kenneth Burke wrote "One Light in a Dark Valley.: Chapin wrote all of the other tracks on the record.
There Only Was One Choice," the last song on the album, is especially interesting because it can be interpreted as inaryy Chapin's hife story. The lyrics tell of a young boy trying to make if on his own as a songwritex and a chan.

Chapin compares the youngzter's ambitions with those of Pete Seeger, Woody Guthrie nnd Bob Dylan. These artists are often compared with Chapin in that they too are storytellers. The song tells of Chapin's dreanns when he sings to himself: ${ }^{\text {*HATH}}$ you really so naivel You can honestly believel that the countrys getting better/ when all you do is let her alone, Harry - can you really be surprised, when it is there before your eyes/ when you hold the krife that carves herf you live the life that starves her to the bone."
These words express Chapin's desire to cure the world's ills through his music. Hut he realizes that this is not enough.
*Danace Band on the Titanic is the best album that Chapin has released in some time. His last two albums, On the Road to Kingdom Come and Portrait Gallery. did not do financially well. This L.P should put him back on the road to gucceas Approximately half of Chapin's concerts are benefite. many of them for hunger. Tomorrow, he will perform Tonotrow, he wil periorm Loew's Theatre. The concert will be a benefit attermpting to gave this landmark.

Maryland Terrapins start slow, finish fast

By Joel Stashenko COLLEGE PARK, MD.moved stitnly in his eeat on the trip back from Saturday's Maryland game. "Jees," he said quietly, cringing in pain.
even my face hurta.
The entire Syracuse ceam must have felt that way, for the Orange were beaten both on the scoreboard (24-10) and physically on the field by a tough Terrapin equad.
"They just kept coining at us Frank Maloney said. "Once they got un in hole they poured in on us."
And in College Park Saturday it both rained and poured on SU.

The first half, however, was Maryland leaving the with Maryland leaving the wet Byrd Stad 7.3 lead.

A Huriey fumble set up the Terrapin Louchdown when, near the end of the first guarter. Hurley was hit by Guarter. Hurley was hit by and fumbled at the SU 41 .
Captitalizing on a bigy 27 Yard Mark Manges to Vince
Kinney pass play, Maryland scored soon after when Mickey Dudish ran the ball in standing up from the SU one.
Later in thit second quartury
SU slarted a fine drive of its own, arted a fine drive of its covered 77 yards, but un. fortunately, not the Terrapin fortunately. not the Terrapin end zone.
A 27 -yard puss w su tight the drive. which ended when Hurley wis tackled for nos gain on a pivolal third and youil run Jucobs kicked a 20 -yard field sucobs kicked a do-yard field goul (his seventh consecutive) goul (his seventh consecutive) four pointa at halftime.
Other than the score. another positive factor for thi
Orangernen was the injury to Maryland's starting quarterback Manyes. After completing a pass to Kinney in by an Orangeman and was forced to leave the game. 1 arry Dick, the ACC'a second leading passer, replaced him.

Sparving inartnars thought we had a hell of a chance to win it at the half," Maloney said. "Coming in we didn't want to turn the ball over. We wanted to spar back and aomething, happened, and golly, that's what the second half was.
Hut while the sparring proved harmpess to punch a the Terrapins, both offensively and defensively. finally began to take its toll.

Three times the teams exchanged punts in the third quarter. with SUs field worse with each trade. Finally, with $5: 57$ remaining in the quarter. SU's Jim Goodwill punted the ball only 28 yarda and Maryland found itself on the SU 39. This time it took the Terrapins 8 plays to score with Dean Richards running the ball in from the SU five.
The quarter ended with syrucuse behind $14 \cdot 3$, and the threat Maryland cores to come was in the air.
With $3: 12$ gone in the fourth quarter Maryland capped a 35 yard drive with Ed Loncar's 23 -yard field goal to takea 17.3 lead.

The Terrapins put the game out of reach whortiy later when 47-yard line after a punt and scosed four plays late. A great 38 -yard Dick to Kinney pane play set up the score as Steve Atloins ran the ball in from the SU four to increase the lead to $24-3$ Hurley engineered a late face-faving drive for the SU offense an he moved the club to a score in 14 plays. But when Bob A very scored from the one there were $4: 52$ remaining in the game and the only question for the 39,100 on hand was how long Manges would be out "Field poaition hurt us," Maloney said. "But to get good field poaition you have to move the ball, and we weiren't doing that We seemed pinned the whole day."

Far-wighted game When the bull's on the 40 its Wasy to get pryched up, you easy to get payched "pi you you say, only 60 yards to go. But when the ball's on our 10 its hard from there - you need goal.

More than anything it was Maryland's relentlese blity which kept SU of balance the which kept SU off ballance the entire'game.
Whe second half we found we weren'z moving the ball." Maloney aaid. "So we tried to open up and throw, but we never had the fild poaition, and when they had us in the hole they kept blitaing. They blitzed us to death."
Despite the domination of the Maryland offense in the haver stages of the game, SU' defenge, usually proved match for the Terrapins. played well enprially in the third quarter" Maloney maid. I also thought our secondiary layed well the whole game".
Syracuse shumbed the defensive back personnel before the game, returning Larry Kirg to Warriorback and, atarting John Patterson (formerly an offensive player) at safety. Despite the unfamilarity the Deapite the untamilarity the game was sua bear to date 373 total yards - 186 in the up to a cubb that had avernged 215
"We were well prepared." King said. "My switch was easy because I played there the ast two years, John (Pazterson) did a good job. The catchea the guy made agrainat him were good plays, bue John made gome good play himself

Construction to begin on retail-office plaza

By Mike Russo

Construction of a threestory retail and office complex at 701-05 S. Crouse Ave. (the corner of South Crouse and East Adama Street) will begin in about 30 days, according to Guy A. Easter of University Plaza Parternship Corp.

Angelo Gressani Construction Co Inc has been contracted to build University Plaza, Easter said. "We should be getting construction plans and specifications within 10 days," Easter said.
University Plaza will have 6,200 square feet of retail space and 4,000 square feet of office space available for rent, Easter said.
McDonald's Corp. has expressed interest in opening a restaurant in the building, Easter said. "I consider McDonald's a valuable addition to

The construction date for the complex was scheduled for last May but was delayed because of a "partial change of ownership." Easter said.

All problems have been resolved and there ghould be no major delays, Easter said. "There may be a slight delay in acquiring steel for construction, but it will not be a major problem."
Easter said he was optimistic about the success of University Plaza. "Along with student customers there are a large number of hospital workers in the area. This should assure us of a large clientele."

Tenure: time for students to speak up

There are few things as frustrating as a poor course taught by a boring professor. Such a course is a waste of time, a waste of money and worst of all, a mockery of education.

Most students see such courses as inevitabilities, to be dropped, taken pass/fail or just plain suffered through.

In the short run, this is true. In the long run, however, students can do something to at least reduce the number of such courses offered at the university. The process is called tenure.

After six years of university teaching, Syracuse University evaluates a faculty member's perevaluates a faculy membermer that permance will be granted tenure. If the pandidato receives tenure, he or she candidate recenves senure, he or she aity until mandatory retirement at 65.

The tenure evaluation is the student's only chance to sound off -about a faculty member's teaching ability. Unfortunately, the univeraity refuses to support a systematic cffort to solicit etudent opinion on teaching quality. The univeraity needs a course evaluation catalog. buxt that is not the point here.
For now, the tenure prociens preanite the beat opportunity for ctudents to voice their opinions on teaching quality in a manner that is truly effective.
One proposal which could increase the effectiveness of student input is to be presented shortly to the University Senate. The proposal would require the university to release a complete list of all tenure and promotion candidates each Oct. 1: We support this proposal as a constructive means of involving students in the tenure process. In the meantime, The Daily Orange has assembled as complete a list as possible of this year's candidates, which is presented below.
The university's priorities make student innput into the tenure process even more vital. In the past SUCess tended to reward professors with tenure more frequently for strong tenure more frequently for strong research records than for outstan Johs Ceachic; John J. Pruchar decision to refuse tenure to history professor Sandra J Coyner last year is a case in point. Conceding that Coyner was an excellent teacher, Prucha rejected her on the basis of scholarly research.
If faculty members are to be rewarded for their teaching. students must speak up in favor of good teachers and oppose poor ones. Student representatives on tenure committees have a hard job. They need help from other students.
Increased stadent participation in the tenure proceas will probably save few students here from poor courses or teachers. But in the long run, it will strengthen the uni versity as a teaching institution.

Healthy potential

The creation of a Health Services Advisory Board may be among the most important of recent events at Syracuse University, if that board fulfills its potential to be more than just another committee in the morass of SU's administration.

The board is important because it can fill a long-standing need for an independentreview and evaluation group, endorsed by the chancellor, to oversee SU Health Services. Even more significant, a successful health review board could lead to establishment of similar groups to watchdog the entire range of student services.

We hope and expect that the committee will serve to cariefully monitor the operations of health services. We also hope the student members of the committee will act as representatives of student's interests; and as conduits for student questions and complaints. As common as student complaints over the quality of health services are, it has been difficult until now to pinpoint a place where they could be taken and be effectively heard. The student members of the advisory board can provide that place.

We doubt the committee will lack an agenda - there are plenty of health-related issues on campus for

Affirmative action was born out of a very turbulent crisis in America, the pressurizing consciousness of the civil rights era and especially the decade of the 60 s . Had it not been for the pressure of this consciousness, I doubt very seriously whether we would be blessed with this rare "commodity" called affirmative raction. Therefore, with the
it to deal with.
We suggest student perceptions of SU Health Services may be an appropriate topic for consideration. George Bodine, chairperson of the advisory board, said in an interview last July that he is concerned with the extent to which students are discontented which students quality of health services delivered by SU, We think it valuable for the committee to determine how students perceive those services, and how accurate those perceptions are.

The'creation of the chancellor's advisory board is only a first step toward improving the quality of health services at. SU. It is a welcome first step; to be sure, but its success depends on what students, administration and the members themselves do with it.

If students ignore the committee, if they fail to take their complaints and suggestions to it, it will never be ${ }^{-}$able to successfully guard students interests in the field of health services.

Upon the success of this com. mittee may depend support for similar groups in other areas of student interests. That success depends, at least in part, upon us. David Abernethy for The Daily Orange

When purely emotional decisions are made, no matter how noble, they fail to take into consideration the cost of such a decision and its longevity. I am not sure at this point whether the eshave been in order before justice is declared done to blacks and other minorities, but $I$ am convinced that seven to 10 years worth of justice can't possibly compensate for 200 years of possibly compensate

As it relates to the Bakke impasse one of the very strong arguments put forth on his behalf is "equal protection under the law." The flaw in that argument is that the 14 th Amendment argument is that the 14 th Amendment has never really been applied to all Americans. The question then is, how do you correct one wrong without comdo you correct one wrong without committing another wrong, and how do you mitting another wrong, and how do you manifest a change in racist, classist and sexist attitudes if you don't e n some sort of numbers game?
The Bakke impasse raises serious concern until the final outcome says whether this rare commodity, affirmative action, lives or dies. It's really a sad day in America when even in the courts someone must "win"" or "lose." If Bakke wins, who is that a victory for? Not Bakke. Or if Bakke loses, who then is the other victor? Certainly not blacks, Women and minorities.
Maybe we should really look at what is equitable, in isolation from the national bearing the outcome of this case may pose.
I think that what we really want is a victory for America. I think the should be based strictly upon the should be based strictiy upon the merits of that individual case and we should try our best to keep the politics of it out.

Still raising the roof

To the editor,

Once upona time, there was a rock group who defied convention, spat in the face of the bourgeoisie, madea mockery of today's social and political integrity and, to put every place in which they perevery. place in which they perin the face of the bourgeoisie, plays with even more fervor and energy With even more fervor and energy than ever, incorporates an unthan ever, incorporates an unsionalism in all their work, and still raises the roofs wherever they play. They are still the Rolling Stones and, as their new live album proves, they are still the most aggressive force in rock ' $n$ ' roll.
Apparently; all of the frenzy and wild excitement which the Love You Live album generates (and which is no fundamental to the gurvival of rock music, particularly in the wake of all the recent overproduction which threatens to destroy rock as a vital means of expression) has fallen on the deaf ears of Diane Lesniewsla. Question one: Where is the "lameness" which Miss Lesniewski speaks of in her review? (DO, Oct. 7) Surely it is not in the performances on the album. Question two: Since when have the Stones become too old to rock 'n' roll? The vocals of Mick Jagger atill burst forth with an unprecedented display of emotion; he still literally sings his guts out Keith Richard's "power chording" technique is still the strongest and most cohesive in rock.

No, Miss Lesniewski, the Rolling Stones are certainly not too old to rock 'n' rall.

Sally falls in love with Cliff, a young American who has been searching Europe for the proper inspiration for his novel. She and Clifine together in a rooming house run by Fraulein Schneider, an elderly German woman who becomes engaged to a local Jewish grocer, Herr Schultz.
The action surrounding the two couples provides the story line around which the amoral, tacky and sensual atmosphere of ill-fated Berlin and the cabaret is draped.
Both of the couples are eventually parted, Schultz and Schneider through the senseless influence of antiSemitism, and Sally and Cliff through their refusal to see each other as they really are. Heartbroken after he lears of Sally's abortion of their baby, Cliff cetlow, but Sallyreturns to hercabaret.
Embodying all the characteristics of the era is the Master of Ceremonies at the cabaret, whose mischievous, insightful and often lewd actions act as a running comment on the people and setting of the play.
Joel Gray won a Tony Award and an Academy Award for his excellent portrayal of the M.C., a reputation which would possibly intimidate any aspiring young actor.
However, David Morgan, M.C. at the Civic Center's Cabaret, refused to let that stop him from turning out his own delightiful interpretation of the everpresent M.C., wisely using some of reat away and then adding his own personal dimension to the role. Morgan's dancing as well as his singing were extremely enjoyable and effective, as the applause indicated.

Laurence's renditions of the popular "Maybe This Time" and the title song were also well-received, but the latter lacked much of the desperation behind Sally's need to sing it and to prove that life is indeed a cabaret.

\section*{Campus skateboarders take to the streets}

By Richard Amdur
Could it be the exhilarating speed and movement? Or is it the gracefulness and fluidity of the motions?
It's probably these and many other sensations people enjoy while floating down Waverly Place three inches above the pavement on a popular mode of transportation called the skateboard. Skateboarding has been undergoing a healthy rediscovery across the nation for the past year or so, and the Syracuse area is no exception.
The campus is by no means devoid of suitable skateboarding areas. Thornden Park, Waverly Place, Tyler Park across from Manley Field House, walkways near the Hall of Languages and Booth parking garage all provide good surfaces for campus "boarders.
Although there is a city ordinance which limits the use of roller skates, sleds and presumably skateboards to specially designated areas, it is notenforced unless there are blatant forced unless there are blatant problems between skateboarder Skateboarding has its roots in the Hawaiian Islands. When Captain James Cook discovered these islands in 1778, surfing was very popular prizes in contests ranged from pigs to natives' wives.
Following this cue, Englishman James Nerlin invented the roller skate, soon to be followed by the scooter. soon to be followed by the scooter. Finally, in Southern California, the skateboard to roller skate wheels - made tits first appearance in the early 1960s.
Since then it has undergone many changes, with new developments in the technology of the wheels and the "trucks" (which attach the wheels to the board) giving the board more versatility and adding an acrobatic dimension to the sport.
Mattel Toy Co. has put about \($ 3\) million into research on the trucks alone, according to Fred Hickey, who runs a sports shop in Liverpool. Skateboarding is now estimated to be a \($ 300\) million to \($ 500\) million industry.
There are now boards used for either speed or acrobatics, depending on the desire of each boarder. The differencen lie in the assembly and flexibility of the trucks and wheeis. Thus, boarders can exercise many different options when deciding what to do. For instance. junior Peter Lang suffered a bruising high-speed "wipeout" in Thornden Park last year and now plans to experiment with a trick board, generally considered to be a little safer.
Prices of these boards in Syracuse area sport shops and department stores range from \($ 12\) to \($ 85\), with an average board costing about $25. Mattel markets a skateboard costing \($ 115\).
This is by no means a safe sport. Upstate Medical Center and CrouseIrving Memorial Hospital have treated only a few cases of skateboard-related injuries in recent months. But the Consumer Product Safety Commission reported that nearly 72,000 people have been treated in American hospitals in the last year for such injuries, mostly broken bones and concussions.

This potential for serious accidents has led many insurance companies to classify skateboards as dangerous vehicles. This decision has prevented a horseshoeshaped skateboard track from opening in the town of Manlius.

The track is 70 per cent completed, according to Vince Palerino, Manlius Recreation Director, but won't be completed until something is worked out. with the insurance company. He says that things like trampolines and skateboards are "no-no's" to insurance companies, who charke of coverage. Money for this venture would come from town tax money.

There are plans, however, to open an indoor skateboarding park in Cicero, according to Michael Doyle, Manlius recreation supervisor. This would be a commercial venture which could generate revenues for insurance (abou 7 to 15 per cent of the gross recei from charging an admissions fee and from pro shop sales, etc. The park is ready to broblems have to be worked out.

So the skateboarding fever will continue to give people the needed release from everyday tensions and frustrations. As sophomore Elise Brown put it, "I don't like to be earthbound all the time."

In Miron's opinion, the "Son of Sam" title also contributed to the killer's rampage. Although the police coined the nickname, the press capitalized on it and "the name spurred him on. It dignified him with a magical label. He's only a gunman, frivolously going around and shooting people."
Miron is wary of the use of psychologiste to combat terrorists, psychopaths. "Either the psychologista know nothing or they know nothing."
However, Miron advocates the use of psychology to combat crime. "We officers these the law enforcement officers these methods. Many people believe the bolution is lo blow the criminals away. Now they re staring to apply psychological principles to the crimes.
- Miron employed these tactics last Syracusan Leroy Conton to convinced surrender after holding hostages for almost a day and a half. Last May, Miron was recruited by the New York City Police to analyze the numerous letters written by the Son of Sam.
After examining the letters, Miron concluded that the killer would be chubby, average height and not more than 25 years old. The suspect, and is 24 , Miron also said that the killer's. Miron also said that the Berkow mother was dead is fother mother wased and his father is remarried, Miron refuses to speculate on the killer's motives. "There are thousands of people trying to say

Miron says that only through understanding the psychopath can we learn to deal with him. Although many people leel the murderer should be executed, Miron does not believe "that punishing the perpetrator will stop another from committing the same crimes."
In Miron's opinion, "the judicial system is socially administrated revenge." Rather than executing th criminal, "we have to understand what's troubling him. We have to listen. After all, we're all brothers."

\section*{the trial}

For little more than a year, the Son of Sam case provided front page fodder for newspapers and magazines across the country. The Daily News' columnist Jimmy Breslin published a letter he had received from the killer. The New York Post ran otories alluding to Mafia aid in the manhunt.
When David Berkowitz was captured, Newsweek' ran a cover photograph of the suspect with the ed headine, The sick World of Son Sam. "On the network news, ABC played the story for 20 minutes of their normal halft hour format. CBS and NBC gave the story nearly one quarter of their air time. The Daily News, showing a huge photo of Berkowita, sold an extra 350,000 copies.

With this massive media barrage and reporter's fingers prying into every aspect of the suspect's life, many scholars have begun to wonder whether Berkowitz will get a fair trail.

According to Jay B. Wright, ex. cutive director of the New York Fair TUial Free Press Conference and an SU professor, "the publicity could that "it's possible for the suspect to that "it's possible for the suspect to have a fair trial. You only have to ignorant of the crime, they just have to believe they can honestly makeup what it was like living near the Son their minds,"
But Wright believes the excessive coverage of the case could possibly endanger the trial's outcome. "A change of venue (location) would not help in this situation" because of the media's saturation of the country Wright also said the printed confessions may hamper Berkowitz's trial. "The police should not have eleased any information about the \section*{of Sam.' '}

Wright also condemned the "man on the street interviews as one of the most disturbing parts of the werage.
"When a reporter interviews the victim's family, the family is bound to make inflammatory comments. One of the victim's parents, Stacy Moskowitz's mother, called a press conference at the hospital. These alleged confessions, Wright said, would have printed it if I had heard it. Apparently Berkowitz made a lot of incriminating remarks. Even if the police had wanted to, they couldn't have covered it up."

Wright said there were a number of reasons for the intensive miedia coverage of the case. "Maybe The \section*{'The publicity could have been worse. It's possible for the} confession. A police official quoted interviews had no useful journalistic Berkowitz as saying 'You got me.'It

Berkowitz as saying 'You got me.' It would have been better if the quote had not appeared."

Wright said that despite initial precautions, the media ended up referring to Berkowitz as the Son of Sam. "There would be a TV reporter what to say. He was vary carefully beginning by was cautious in the Son of Sam.' After the interviews with Berkowitz's neighbors, he forgot that hehad cenghoors, he said something like, 'And that's

However, Wright sympathized with the problems encountered by reporters assigned to the case. He said that if he had been a reporter at the Moskowitz press conference, "I wouldn't have solicited her for ail interview. But once something's said in a public forum, journalists have an obligation to the reader to tell what's been said."

Although he questions the integrity of publishing Berkowitz's

Wright also. said that the newspapers have a responsibility to their readership. "There was a great deal of fear in the community. There Fas a legitimate purpose aerved by telling the public you've caught him, which results in alleviating the public's fear.
"In hindsight, it was unfortunate. There was a complex set of factors working here," Wright said. As a result, the reader must "separate quality from quantity."
A foreign study program is an exciting and stimulating experience. Syracuse University believes that a program offered within a carefully planned academic framewrork provides the maximum potential forstudents to have a successful living and learning experience. The Syracuse programs represent an accumulation of experience, dating back to 1919, when Syracuse students and faculty members were traveling to Chun-N king, China to organize the Syracuse-in-
 China program. By 1960, the University was conducting four summer programs abroad, one in France for language students, one in England for drama students, an oriental art program in Japan, and a fashiondesign study tour of western Europe. The first full semester of resident study was offered abroad in the fall of 1959 with 30 undergraduates enrolled for study in Florence, Italy. Currently, approximately 700 students live and study abroad each year under the auspices of Syracuse University.
Syracuse University now offers the undergraduate and certain graduate students an option for study' in a foreign country without internupting a normal degree program and without necessarily requiring prior knowledge of a foreign language. Expenses involved in studying abroad are cornparable to the cast of study on the Syracuse campus. Most programs are open to students regardless of their major field of study, and past participants have come from all colleges and schools within the University. Except for the Honors Program in England and the Graduate Fine Arts Program, students from all accredited colleges and universities are eligible.
Programs are offered in cooperation with Syracuse University's College of Arts and Sciences, Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, College for Fiuman Development, School of Social Work, College of Visual and Performing Arts, College of Law, School of Education, SchooI of Architecture, School of Management, and School of Pizblic Communications.

Ballroom dancing class: more fun than it sounds

No. It's Wednesday night at PED 220 - "Elementary PED 220 Dancing-"
Once a week from 7 to 8:30 p.m., students gather in the dance studio at the Women's Building to relax and have fun while learning the foxtrot, chacha, jitterbug, waltz, rumba, polka and tango. They also learn a variety of contemporary disco dances including several versions of the hustle and the walk.
The one-credit course is taught jointly by Walter \(F\). Medicis, of the Walt Medicis Dance Studio in downtown Syracuse, and his cousin, Vincent J. Samar.

Mr. Medicis, director of purchasing for \(\mathrm{SU}_{\text {, }}\) is a member of Dance Masters and Dance Educators of America.
Vincent Samar, a Beta Theta Pi fraternity brother, is a joint degree candidate for a masters degree in public administration and a juris doctorate degree in law. He became involved in the social dance program as, an undergraduate and has taught both the elementary and the advanced classes in ballroom dancing at SU for six semesters.

There has been a revived interest in structured social dancing in the past few years, according to Samar.
"The tenor of the country has become more conservative," he says. "People are returming to traditional forms of institutionalized dance."
If the words "ballroom dancing class" bring back the many painful memories of eighth grade gym class when the most popular girl in the school called you a klutz and your 80-year-old gym teacher looked at you and threw up her hands in despair, relax.
Samar maintains there are no "unteachables."
"Anyone who wants to learn and tries hard will learn," he says.
"The particular step is the least difficult, perhaps the least important, thing to teach. What's more important are internalized notions of beat, balance and timing. We start from there and work up to everything else."
Although the young danice instructor places a lot of emphasis on style because "if you

"The courge is a fun course," says Samar. "Dance provides a chance to meet and interact with people in a large group with an element of privacy between dance partners."
At the beginning of the class there are a lot of nervous dancers holding each other two feet apart with conversation limited to "oops," "sor" ry," and "boy, do I feel dumb." But somewhere along the way someone smiles and says, "Hey, we did that pretty good!" and it starts to be fun.
"Everyone's apprehensive at first," admits Samar, "but once a dancer achieves something, he really starts to enjoy it. The anxiety washes out in the end.'

Why do students give up one night of studying, partying or hanging around to foxtrot, samba, or cha-cha?

Senior Barbara Hasson is planning for the future when she says, "I was tired of always looking clumsy and awkward on the dance floor and I realized that somediay I'll probably need to know how to dance. In fact, I have a formal dinner dance coming up in December."
"I have five left feet and I'm trying to get rid of at least three of them," jokes architecture student Bill McGuire. "If I ever get any pretty, clients I want to be ready."
"It's something I always wanted to do," adds senior Milt Baron, "and it's a great way to meet new friends."

Ron Zimmerman, a junior transfer, recalls an embarassing incident at a wedding with a wry smile. "I didn't know the bridal party had to dance! I never want to look that bad again.'

\section*{A chance to be heard}

Complaining is one of the greatest common denominators of it's done in dorms, dining halls, apartments, classrooms - from one end of campus to another. Students' complaints have many targets (almost as many as there are students) but the system of financial aid at \(S U\) is probably high on the list.

But if students comment on Guancial aid in dorms and dining halls, what effect does it have on the quality of service provided to students?

Almost none.
An opportunity will soon be available, however, for students to voice their comments and complaints in a way that can have real plaints in a way that can havereal Subcommittee on Financial Aid is planning a series of hearings to gather information on student perceptions of and problems with financial aid at SU. The subcommittee will use that information to develop a set of proposals for changing and improving the financial aid system here

All students are welcome to give their opinions and suggestions at the hearings, which will start next Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the SA building, 821 University Ave. According to Rick Margolius, SA vicepresident of student programs, students interested in speaking at the hearings should call 423-2650 in advance.

We completely endorse the concept of holding such hearings. If they work, if they provide usable information andinput, the idea can undoubtedly be adapted to many other areas of student services.
Whether they work, of course, depends on students. Students have definite opinions on the subject of financial aid - but that is of no help to SA or anyone attempting to promote constructive change unless those opinions are voiced. In this instance voicing those views should be very easy, since SA plans to use the information to formulate proposals, but will not release the proposals, but will not release the at the hearings.
You can give your opinions on subjects from course quality to financial aid to dorm food, in dorms and dining halls and apartments, for four years, and never be heard by those who have real influence and power in those areas. At least in the area of financial aid, the SA hearings will give you a chance to really be heard.

\section*{Sun Wars}

The main attraction on the celestial calendar this week is the solar eclipse scheduled to take place at \(5: 14\) p.m. today. However, much to the dismay of Syracuse astronomers, the event may give way to a spectacular celestial battle, according to a news leak from a solar spokesman.
Due to the convergence of forces beyond human comprehension, not only has the sun courageously managed to fight its way through the Syracuse clouds for two days in a row, but it is now planning to appear again taday, in full battle array, for an unprecedented sneak attack on its agelong adversary, the moon, in an attempt to usurp its traditional territory in the evening sky.

\section*{Sy Montgomery}
The theory is that the sun, chased daily from Syracuse skies by enemy rainclouds, will now make a concerted effort to make up for lost time. After years of appearing only at sundown, the sun, if it wins the battle, plans now to remain shining from sunset on, re-previously denied hours of visability This plan, if successful, could have disastrous effects upon Syracuse University. As tourists flock to bask in the rays of the nighttime sun, motels and night (day?) spots threaten to take and night (day?) spots threaten to take over the hallowed halls of higher learning. HL will be replaced by a Ramada ning. HL will be replaced by a Ramada Inn. The Quad will be converted to a Inn. The Quad will be converted to a huge tennis court. Dorms will be huge tennis court. Dorms will be revamped as high-rise luxury revamped as high-rise luxury And even worse, monopolizing the tourist trade as the newly-proclaimed "Land of the Midnight Sun," Syracuse s clearly inviting war with Sweden.
Under threat of such severe, repercussions, we advise admittedly drastic action. The sun must be immediately destroyed. By mobilizing the university's recently acquired fleet of cruise missiles, the sun can be exploded into billions of tiny. less hostile star fragments. This could even result in a rather pleasant effect, as the aoft glow of stardust would replace the harsh glare of sunlight on the almost perpetually snow-covered Syracuse landscape.
But we must act now. We must destroy the sun before it destroys us. If we can recognize it after all these years.

\section*{Parading pride}

We all know about the SU football team. They are 23. They re a team that's not good, not bad, not exciting and not appreciated. They have been attacked on the feld by other teams, in the papers by the press and in the tands by their fans.
They have not asked for much and have not gotten much in return.
But Friday a parade is being held in their honor
The parade offers us an opportunity to show our support of the football team. It also offers the city of Syracuse (an important backer of SU sporta) an opportunity to see how we view our team.
The parade route starts in the area of the 500 block of South Salina Street and proceeds north until it endsat Clinton Square. The route is within easy walking distance of the campus.
If the gtreets of the route are filled only with litter and not with SU students, a conclusion will bedrawn on the part of the city and the guests who will be here for Homecoming Weekend.
For sorme people the conclusion will be a valid one: that SU does not care about ite football team.
Yet for others, the ones who come out to: a usually cold and wet Archbold Stadium for half of the Saturdays of the season, and who listen closely to radio broadcasts of the team's road games for the o
Now's the time for \(S U\) to rise to the oc-

\section*{What 'Bakke' means}

To the editor.
I was more than a little puzzled by Rev. John Jones' article (DO, Oct. 11) on "The Bakke Impasse." From beginning to end he seems to vacillate between, uneasy acceptance of the "need" for affirmative action and half-hearted doubts about the wisdom of "righting" one wrong. with another. I would like to try to ease some of Mr. Jones' confusion by stating the issue in as simple term as possible:
I am white.
If I were to apply to med school tomorrow, 1 would stand less of a chance of being accepted than a black, Puerto Rican or Chicano. I would be at a disadvantage not. because f was less qualified academically than they, not because because my ancestors oppressed their aricestors a hundred years ago (my grandparents were all immigrants), nor even because I was in some way personally responsible for the "oppression" of these races in the present (I have never had the chance to be). I would be at a disadvantage because my skin is white and theirs is not Now, I know that this practice goes by many names, among them "affirmative action" and "reverse discrimination," but I prefer to call it what it is - racial discrimination (there is nothing "reverse" about it), It is, to put it very simply, a quota system based on race, as foul and in sidious as the quota systems used against some of \(m y\) ancestors in Russia. If its aim were merely to give a chance to people growing up in disadvantaged surroundings, it would apply equally to whites grow ing up with similar disadvantages I hope this clears up a few of Rev. Jones' doubts about this "well-intentioned ..: redressing of historical wrongs," but if not, he will just have to fall in with those swelling ranks of befuddled Anericans who, their perceptions clouded by highporceptions chetoric about "social justice" and "historical responsibility, have become unable to distinguish right from wrong.

\section*{Jumping for joy}

To the editor,
As I watched the New York Yankees jumping for joy the other night after having earned the right to play in this year's World Series, I sensed that something wasn't quite right. The cameras alternately focused on the ecstatic Yankees and the heartbroken Kansas City Royals, and the announcers praised the efforts of both teams; it all just rubbed mae the wrong way.

The Yanks and the Los Angeles Dodgers are now given the chance to earn over \($ 20,000\) per man for playing aeven babeball games, while at ing seven baseball games, while at and researchers throughout. the and researchers throughout dime country scraping for every dime thoy can get in order to cure this country.

This seems to symbolize the inequities and priorities of this society.

Many people are constantly shirking long-term responsibilities and problems for short-term diversions and frivolities. Instead of facing the truth about our environment, many people seek to shelter themselves from it (not always a conscious ef fort), and thus possess a limited pic ture of the world around us. Perhaps this helps people "cope" sornewhat better, but in the long run it just comapounds the problem.

However, there is a solution. So that we all don't waste our time here in our academic pursuits, we should greatly expand the university's athletic program at the expense of educational projects. In this way we could all dramatically increase our athletic prowess enough to warrant selection in a major league draft. I mean it. Thaven't jumped for joy in a mean time.

- By Drew McKinney

The sharp increase in the number of rapes and sexual asnumber of rapes and sexual assaulta in the university area has caused the city police University Safety and Security to incresse the Security number of patrolis, a city police spokesman said yesterday.
According to Sgt. William Finney of the Criminal Investigation Division, the city police "definitely, have a stepped-up effort." He would not say how many additional policemen are patrolling the university area or when they are on duty.

Finney said he believed the same man is involved in six sodomy cases that have occurred near the university since Aug. 1, including a case Oct. 2 in which the victim was an SU student.
Although descriptions of the suspect in each case are similar, Finney refused to say simiar, Finney refused to ayy whether anyone fitting the description has been brought in for questioning because 'it could hurt our efforts to catch him."

Finney recommended that women who have to go out at night find an escort. "This person has only caught girls who

"Doctoral students now spend a considerable amount of time first collecting research data," he said. Reagles said he will seek federal research grants to reduce this extra time.

Reagles succeeds Lawrence Feinberg, who headed the program for 10 years. He resigned to accept a position as associate dean of San Diego State University's graduate school. At the time of his appointment, Reagles announced receipt of a \($ 26,000\) grant from the Rehabilitation Services Administration in Washington, D.C. to host a national conference of rehabilitation program evaluators next spring.

The Syracuse University Rehabilitation Couseling program consists of approximately 50 masters level students, 10 doctoral students and 35 students in the new undergraduate Rehabilitation Services Program.

\section*{Irish infusion could save Orange football}

By Greg Luckenbangh. On Sept. 1, 1977 the Syracume University Athletic Department signed Joe Gallagher to a contract under the title of."Assistant Athletic Director for Sports Relations," a newly created position.

Gallagher's position in volves a number of thinge.
"I'm here to expand the present image of the Syracuse Univergity Athletic Program," Gailagher said. He intends to do this through "promotions, fund raising and special projects which are especially linked with the broadcast media.
\({ }^{4} I\) hope to expand the present Syracuse football radio network to more than it's present six atations," he said. Gallagher's chief job will be "to get sponsors who will support this idea.
This promotional fever also applies to the SU basketball program.

I hope to have several of the away basketball games season the ECAC, which Gallagher once produced programs for. "plans to programs for, plans to televise an unprecedented three SU basketball games."
Gallagher also hopes to upgrade the football prograrm, continue the basketball and nonrevenue (soccer, hockey, etc-) programs, as well as expand the up-and-coming women's athletics."
He appears to be well-suited for the job. Gallagher has produced many programs for various associations and networks including the NCAA, ECAC, NBC, CBS and ABC. He also ran his awn independert prodomation and broadcast consulting 5 min for a number of yenrs.
Gallasher had a number of ideas on the proposed stadium ideas on the for Syracuse.

The parpose of a new otadium would be to draw more crowds," he said. "This would result because the fans would enjoy thernselves more in a new biaditum.
"For one, it would be readily. accesaible, and it would offer other advantages such as a more modernized stadium and the opportunity to have tailgating parties. If the fans enjoy themselves the first time, they'll conve back for more," hergaid.

The fact the fans would come in larger numbers is evidenced in Foxborough (Mass.) where the (New England) Patriots play. They couldn't fill Boston College's stadium, but with the addition of a new stadium they get 50 or 60,000 a game," Gallagher. said.
"Also, the football program would benefit from a new stadium in the fact that the new facilities and langecrowds would tend to attract the blue chip athletes which Syracuse has lacked in recent years," Gallagher continued Before SU gets the new stadium however, Gallagher has many promotional ideas for archaic Archbold. Some of these include an "jncreage in the entertsimment valie (the man that the SU Athletics Department desperately needs, especially in its football program. His new and exciting ideas may pump some badly needed ifeinto a struggling-to survive Syracuse University football squad.

\section*{Orange laxmen stick Geneseo;}

By Alan Fecteau
The Syracuse University lacrosse team continued its autumn march Friday, demolishing outclassed Geneseo State I9-6. The Orange got rolling on a score by Dave Waterman at0:17 and never looked back.
Junior attackman Tim O'Hara flipped in two goals and assisted on five otherfirsthalf tallies as Syracuse mounted a 14-2 edge at intermission.

O'Hara, feeding accurate passes from behind the cage, located geveral SU middies cutting through the center. He handed out assists on goals by midfielders Kevin Donoghue, Doug Cunningham and Doug Sedgewick. O'Hara also spotted crease attack Robbie McCarthy for two easy scores While O'Hara exhibited generosity on the offensive side of the field, the SU defense enjoyed another evening clearing the ball effectively.

Our clear is very adaptable to any type of defensive ride, said SU assistant coach Jay Gallagher. Most successful clears were in the first half when the quick feet and sic curate passing of junior John Desko and coalie Jami Molloy ruled the SU half of the field.

With their field under water Cortland State was unable to host the Orange in a scheduled game Sunday. The rainout gave Simmons an opportunity to reflect on the fall season \(s\) o far.
"This season has really given us a chance to evaluate our freshmen, Simmons said "We are able to find which kids really want to play, and which will be unable to continue in the program."

Apparently, there are enough freshmen who have the needed dexire and ability.

One example is Pat Reef, a freshman defenseman from nearby Cicero High School. Lacking notoriety at Cicero, Reef seemed destined for an engineering school in Indiana. "We turned his head toward Syracuse," Sinnmons said, "and we"re real glad we have him. I'd say he's our fourth or fifth defenseman right now."

The autumn season also gives Simmons a chance to look at another recruit, midfielder Tom Donoghue. Brother of \(S U\) middie Donoghtie, he was a high school All-American at West Genesce High. Simmons said the youngter Danaghue is very the younger Danagnue is very Strongy and perforned well as the state finals last spring.
The fall season also gives Simmons a look at the chanown. The fall gives mea chance to look at kids I would have never known about," Simmons said of the walk-ons who try out for the team.
One such example is freshman middie George Spence. Last year's MVP at Friends School, a private institution in Baltimore, Spence is presently playing third midfield.
Although an occasional unknown may ahow up, Sim mons still must depend on his low-key recruiting program to get his players. "Our rec ruiting is fairly low profile," he said. "Which is natural, since we are a low-revenue-produc ing sport, unlike football and basketball and handle \(a\) smaller budget."
With new coach Gallagher, a Long Island native from Garden City, it is possible Syiracuse could da more re cruiting in the L.I. area. *We cruiting in the L.I. area. But I believe the kids uphere are every bitas good as those on the island. think Tom Donoghue showed that in the state toumament down there.'
Simmons will get another chance to examine his new and returning players tonight against Oswego State. Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Coyne Stadium.

He concluded the Srat half of the show with "A Better Place to He," a song about Watertown.

Throughout the second half of the production Chapin got people from the crowd to come up on stage to help him. It made the audience forget aboat the lack of a backup group.

Chapin gave Brian Barlaam, the young man who won the "Siave Loew's" lyric eontest, a chance to perform his winning piece as well as another Belection.. Harlaam did a commendable job. Chapin's performance ended with the audience doing split harmony on "All My Life's a Cincle."

The Kent State University student government will receive \($ 50\) from the Syracuse University Student Association to help defray legal costs of an unsuccessful attempt to block construction of a gymnasium on that campus.
The May Fourth Coalition protested a Kent State Board of Truatee's decigion to build a near the site where four students were killed during a May 4, 1970 antiwar protest
Bysuspending the by-laws at Monday night's mecting. the nasembly was able to take the money from the contingency fund without going through the finance board
The SA resolution commends the May Fourth Coalition for its effort to stop construction of the athletic facility.

In other assembly business, Rick Margolius, vicepresident of atudent programs, said SA is seeking student comment'on SU's financial aid system.
Margolius outlined the financial aid hearings his committee will conduct. The hearings will be taped but students" names will not be released. The committee will evaluate the hearings and make recommendations. The first hearing is Oct 19 at 7:30 p.m. at the SA building, 821 University Ave.

The assembly defeated a resolution proposed by Rich Crowell, SA president, endorsing a bill before Congreas to change the mandatory retirement age from 65 to 70 .

Crowell's resolution opposed a recent amenduent exempting teachers from the mandatory retirement bill. Another resolution about the Student Association Information Service was tabled because assembly members werenot prepared to discuss it.

According to a resolution proposed by Hich Crowell, SAIS would be "an information service providing vital data for use in student advocacy.
SAIS would provide student leaders, student organizations and campus publications with data concerning univeraity issues and a resource center for the cross-filing of information. It would form the nucleus of communications between SA branches and maintain a telephone hotline for the campus community.

\section*{Fear is no protection \\ The Syracuse Women's Information Center is not helping local women} protect themselves from rape. The lack of action on the part of the center is due to a lack of interest on the part of local women, said Liz Cool, a staff member at the Information Center.

Sinee Aug. 1, six sodomy cases have occurred near the university; one involving an SU student.

Are local women unconcerned that six rapes have occurred in three months? Why is it then that many of them are terrified to walk down the gtreet alone?

The only thing local women seem willing to do about rape is be frightened. The fact that expressed interest from local women is low is an indication that womensare not informed about what-they can do to prevent rape Instead of backing away from the problem, the Information Center should be more aggressive. Publicity of its programs should be increased so that Syracuse and local women may be made more aware of rape.

The success of the Women's Information Center's programs cannot be measured by the number of peopie who attend meetings or workshops. If the center's effortis help just one woman avoid the trauma of rape, they should consider themselves successful.
Syracuse University women should be more cautious when they are out alone.

Women should take advantage of the student marshal escort service provided by SU Safety and Security. If a female needs an escort, she can get one by calling 423-2224.

Dormatories and area councils should also be encouraged to provide escort sevice.

Sgt. William Finney of the Syracuse City Police Criminal Investigation Division recommends women carry whistles or something which would attract assistance in case of attack.
Fear cannot combat rape, but being informed may help.

\section*{Quotas}

To the editor
Richard Poe's Ietter to the DO (Oct 12) contains several inaccuracies revealing his ignorance of the nature of racial and cultural dis crimination in this country and the nature of affirmative action programs designed to combat such discrimination Specifically, Mr. Poe claims that if he were to apply to medical school, he "would stand less of a chance of being accepted than a black. Puerto Rican or Chicano." This is unture United States citizens of African Native American and Latin American descent are greatly underrepresented in institutions of higher education, be they undergraduate, graduate, medical or law schools. And this is just one indication of past and present discrimination that has resulted in nonwhites having shorter life spans, lower incomes and less educational and professional op.
portinnities than whites. In light of these statistics, it is perverse for any white person to claim, as Mr. Poe claims, that he is "at- a disad vantage" because of his white skin and that he is the victim of racial discrimination.
It is unfortunate that affirmative action programs along with their racial quotas are necessary. But they are necessary because of the racist nature of American society. Quite simply, we live in a racially segregated society that benefits whites at the expense of nonwhites. Racial quotas designed to ameliorate such injustices are not "foul and insidious" as Mr. Poe suggests. It is ironic that Mr. Pioe, who seems unable to distinguish between unjust quotas and quotas designed to combatinjustice, should accuse supporters of affirmative action of being "unable to distinguish right from wrong.

\section*{Affirmative action - without quotas}

There seems to be a widespread belief that the Bakke case, which is being heard by the U.S. Supreme Court today, will decide whether the aftoday, wirmative action program is going to firmative action program is going to live or die. I do inot share this opinion. In fact, I believe that the affirmative In fact, I believe that the afinmative action program can be made to function more effectively without a, function more quota system.

\section*{Guest Comment : \\ Fritz Rohrlich}

The purpose of affirmative action is to overcoms past (and in some cases still preaent discriminntion againgt minorities. It is argued that in the case at hand this can bertbe doneby a quata system which requires acceptance to mpdical chool of lesequalified minority applicants over more phalified white tomales. If ithie philomophy were to provail we would soon han it gaid the blacle doctor it a lawyer is a second-rate lawyer." Clearly we do not want second-rate minority professionals as a consequence of afrirmative action. Nor can we accept the argument (which is racist by itseli) that black doctors will serve the game high quality medical care an the same high quality medical care az

I happen to
I happen to believe that members of minority groups are just as capable as Caucasian males. They only must be given the aame chance. But thatmeans making up for a dibadvantaged background, poorer schools, a less aupportive home environment, which characterize the average black American, native American, HispamoAmerican, etc. It means extra help, extra schooling, and special classes to prepare him or her for those entrance examidations. Remedial programs must bripg them up to the same high standards that have been enjoyed in the pant only by the privileged. That's where we have wo far not provided all that is needed; and that's what is me-quired to malise affirastive action function effectively.
But such support programs are not sufficient to prevent discrimination. Even when the minority candidate does equally well, the white male may still be preferred by the admissions office. That's exactly where affirmative action comes in.
Everyone who has studied applications to colleges or professional plications to colleges or professional schools knows that test scores don't tell the whole story. There are letters of the whole story. There are letterts of reference, personal interviews and a variety of specific personal attributes that are important: leadership, motivation, a will to work hard and to pucceed, etc. The result is that between those who score so highly that they cannot possibly be rejected and those Who score so poorly that they have no chance, there 18 a considerable number of applicants who are about equally well qualified. That's where subjective judgment enters Ifmative action.
It is the role of affirmative action to maximize the minority acceptance in thit Gpexproa. The minority candidate is to be accepted not because he or she has a Spanish surname, is colored, or is poor, but because he or she is equally well gualified.
Such an approach is entirely fair. It cannot be prejudiced by aetting a quota system in advance because that would overestimate or underestimate the number of qualified minority applicants. It would therefore necessarily discriminate in one direction or the other. The objection of reverse discrimination is thus permanently removed. The program has therefore a much better chance of overcoming hidden prejudice.

Thus. one concludes that with suitable remedial programs and no quotas affirmative action can function A. court decision against quotas is therefore in no way deterimental to the affirmativeraction program: it only sets it on the right track.

The Somplete faculty consists of six full time professors, three adjunct professors, some faculty from major art areas and teaching mssistants chosen from graduate art students.
Linda Woodward, a student in this program, explained that every freshman art student goes through the same program of general dresame basic design Eneral drawing basic design, English, art his tory and colloquium. 'Collo quium is a com arts, she said.

Jeff Frank, another freshman art student, praised the program because of its high academic qualification "The art program was ranked fourth or fifth in the nation, he commented. "You have to work hard here to learn art."
Two graduate students. Bing K. Lee and Tracy Gallup who are displaying work in the show, described the challenge they met in being working artists and teachers at the same time.

Other students showing art are: Sid Gaglairdo, Barbara Dennis Julie Bucholz, Larry

Most of the wurk in this show is abstract and includes media such as free hanging textile pieces and a series of designs in acrylic on canvas. There are drawings, some portraiture, and mixed media sculpture including a starting coffin containing a blue electronic corpse, fully wired.
It is altogether an interesting and colorful exhibit, and will be open to the public weekdays, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., through Oct. 31 .

Asking if "the press has passed its bounds," Student Aseociation Aseembly member Rob Inght has requested that Report magazine be discussed at Monday Night's assembly meeting.

the assembly shouild not cen sor theport, but that \({ }^{-4}\) maybe" Report should be asked; to "present a statement of purpose.
"It's not like they're supporting themselves apd they can do whatever they want to," he said.
Lymn said the "real reason" for the move to discuss Report in the assembly was a story on the daily activities of SA of ficials; entitled "Your Student Fee at Waste."
A. Eggers, with a super-imposed safety pin through his nose and chain in his ear. The statement "HE AIN"T NO HUMAN BEING' appeared on the altered photograph.
The cover was connected with a feature by incoming editor Jo Ann Wypijewski on punk rock music.

Acting editor Tracy Lynn said it was "a parody on a poster that was done in London by the Sex Pistols, a punk rock band." The pin and chain, she said, are the ormaments of punk rock.

Eggers was chosen for Report's parody because the Queen of England was used for the Sex Pistols' original poster, Lymn said. "He's a fimurehead. We chose a symbol of the university just like the Sex Pistols chose a symbol of the country."
"Ain't no human being" was a phrase from a Sex Pis tols' song about the Queen. Lynn said. The effort was to "recreate". punk rock.

\section*{New room numbers} aid blind students

By Alix Mitchell
Raised room numbers to aid blind students will be used in the renumbering of rooms in academic buildings, according to Steve Schroeder, resident associate architect of the Office of Space and Facilities.

The use of the raiged numbers is in accordance with the Transition Plan for program accessibility to the program acce

However, campus dormitory rooms are not as accessible to blind students. In fall 1976 . dorm room numbers were changed and replaced with decals.

At the University Senate Open Forum that fall, it was noted that blind students could not determine decal room numbers. A member of the Office of Residential Life (ORL) said the office had been unaware of the problem.
Jean Crawford, ORL assistant director, said that to her knowledge, there was no plan to replace the decal numbers with raised numbers.
Decals are less easily vandalized than raised numbers. Schroeder said: The raised numbers are not as necessary in dorms as they are in academic buildings, because students live in the dorms for nineitiar with their surcoun dings, he said.
The new numbering system was instituted to coordinate numbers. of roorns with floor plans so maintenance people could more easily locate rooms, according to Crawford.
The old system did not match the architectural floor plans which were used as references. A new numbering system was developed with matching floor plans.
This system was applied to all the dormitories. Bob Lamantra, senior project manager of facilities planning, said a new numbering system is being developed for the academic buildinge. He said he could not name a date for completion.

Klein said anyone with com plaints about the bus service should contact SA.
The new bus schedule will be available Monday in the SA building, 821 University Ave: the Office of Safety and Security, basement of Sims Hall; the Information Center, Hall; the Information Center, Holden Observatory; the Regent Mheatre; and posted on bus shelters.

\section*{* Retail complex appeal denied}

The lot now contains 175 parking spaces.

Stathis said construction will probably begin in the spring and that the project will take approximately eight months to complete. An official name has not been chosen for the complex, according to Rooney, who said Stathis "had been fiddling with 'University Hill Bazaar' or," University Village Bazaar."

Rooney said urban renewal acquired the land several years ago "for the intent of establishing it as an adjunct to the existing retail space on Marshall and Crouse." He added that the agency chose the Bazaar Hill Corp. after reviewing schemes of both local and national developers Bazaar Hill chose the site, he said, *because it was available."
Rooney also cited a market and economic feasibility study conducted by a Washington, conducted by a Washington D.C. firm in the early 1979 s. Unich he said revealed the University hill area couid support an additional 60,000 to 0,000 square feet of commercial and retail space."
That study is no longer realistic, according to Alvin Blumberg, owner of Casual Ms. and past president of the businessmen's association. He called Marshall Street "a distressed area.
- Dellas said that the complex may not be as harmful to Marshall Street business as some merchants think.
"Fine food restaurants couldn't hurt Varsity," he said "But we don't feel that there's that rinuch of a need for more business on Marshall Street. We could use a hardware store. But we already have plenty of barbers and food atores.

The maerchants just feel that we're losing, the lot and getting the competition," he said. "It's a double-edge blade."

Stathis said the expects no additional legal challenges. "but I thought they couldn't take the last action and they did." He said that upon receipt of a written report he will contact potential tenants. "There are still working drawings to be done," he added.
"We're just going to have to live with this thing," Dellas said, "and make sure that they build in accordance with the specifications of the Common Council - see to it that they provide the parking."

Villella sprang forth. Dancing with Aragno, they captured the essence of this endearing scene. Villella's expertise was again evident in a latter dance "Apollo," which he performed with Kent.

The Israel troupe showed their true talent in a powerful performance of Gene Hill Sagan's "Sweet Agony." Set to the music of Richie Havens and Jimi Hendrix, the piece depicted the destitute feeling of winter. The dancers communicated man's experience of frenzy and despair in the threepart selection. Costumes of black, violet and hot pink increased the intense mood of the piece.
The 10 -year-old cornpany showed unusual unity in their finale, "Opus 35," where Molly Gordon substituted for Renzet ti, who was injured during an earlier dance.
The Israel Ballet, making their first tour of the United States, goes to Chicago from Syracuse. They will continue performing around the country until the end of November.

Monday night's performance was eponsored by the Syracuse Chapter of Hadasalh in an effort to raise money for the organization's two hospitals in Israel.

\section*{Radical era shapes professor's thinking}

By Bill Domovan As you walk into the office a photo of Joan Baez and Bob Dylan in concert catches your ye. The office is decorated in a imple manner. No glass. framed degrees hang from the wall. The B.A. M.A. and Ph.D. lay unnoticed in the econd drawer of the desk. Paperbacks by Karl Marx, Hermann Hesse and Wallace Hermann Hesse and Wallace Stevens are propped on the crowded bookcase.
The books, the photo and the totally unpretentious atmosphere in the office are all a part of Amanda Porterfield. Somehow she doesn't seem like your average religion instructor. And if there is such a thing as "your average religion instructor, Dr. Amanda Porterfield is not it.
At 30 , Amanda Porterfield is an accomplished scholar and historian. She has seen the mid '60s through the congermid 60 s the of Mount Holyoke College for College for girls, where she received her B.A. in religion in 1969. She experienced the radicalism of the late ' \(60^{\prime} \mathrm{s}\) and early '70's at Columbia University, where she earned her M.A. in 1971.
When alse arrived at Columbia in 1969, the campus was still in the thick of political activism. The Vietnam War was raging and demonstrations: were frequent, "It was a rude awakeming, moving into New York City from Mount Holyoke," Porterfield recalled. "It was like somebody taking the veil from my eyes. I couldn't believe what was happening (in Vietnam), how bad it actually was. I came bad it actually was. I came from a very conservative background (in Bronxville, N. Y, so the Vietriam War and all the radicalness of Columbia were eye opening experiences for me.
"My whole outlook on the world changed. I became cynical. I mean, before Columbia I was idealistic and wanted to make the world a better place to live in and all that. Now, I'm not so sure the world can be a better place."

Aftér receiving her M.A. Porterfield worked for political causes and "read American history" for one year. She then went to Stanford University in 1972 to continue her education There she received her Ph in Thereshe received her Ph.D.in religious studies in 1975 . Later that aame year she was hired as an assistan

Despite being here for only two years, Porterfield has already made a reputation for herself. One of her former students aaid: "She vibrates with a sense of enthusiasm few professors I've encountered have put across. You can tell she's really into her work, when she lectures ahe works herself into a fervor thatis contagious. She also cares abont her student."

\section*{Magazine to solicit works}

Syracuse Review, Syracuse University's literary magazine, is soliciting poetry, art work, photography and fic tion for its fall issue. The deadline is Oct. 31.
Publicity has been "Iate getting off the ground" due to "a sudden turnover" in its staff, according to its editor in chief, Dick Grabman.
"We're having pasters printed,". Grabman said. The publication distributiondate is Dee 4; not April 4 as anaily Orange edvertisment ins. correctly stated.

Porterfield encourages the students to come to her to talk over any problem they might over any problem they might hroom ss "t learning proces where the a ludent and process should get to learn fromer should get to learn from each other. It's a kind of give and take situation.
Although she has a reputation for being a dynamic lecturer and highly approachable, there are some Who don't appreciate her style. Last semester controversy and abuse marred her Religion in American Life class.
"I had some psychologically disturbed people in that class; Porterfield said. "One guy actually came over to my house and said if I didn't raise his grade he was going to kill his roommate - and I felt I might be next.
"Nothing malicious or violent happened during class time, the real crazies did their thing in relationship to me alone. I was threatened with alone, called an aashole wind rape, called an aith le, and had wo phone calls. For two weeks last semester Porterfield. had round the clock protection by the Syracuse city police.
Porterfield was warned that her life might be in danger if she showed up at the final exam. She did show up and caught four students cheating "As far as I was concerned the four students were positively identified as having cheated so they should have gotten an \(F\) in the course" she said.

However, that was not the case. The action came before the University Judicial Board (UJB). "All four students had plans to attend law achool," Porterifeld said. "The UJH was afraid they would press the issue and take the univer sity to court so they instructed me to give all four a passing grade. This fall one of the four enrolled in law school here at SU."
With the entire ugly episode behind her; Porterfield accepts what has happened and tries to put the incident out of her to put the incident out of her mind. She describes it as a fluke." It's not worth being outraged and offended at all the imperfections in the world. Wallace Stevens accept them. Wallace Stevens once said: the imperfection is our paradise. I believe nothing can ever be 'wholly" good; but there is still a paradise quality to life if only you accept the imperfection.'

\section*{Football Homecoming Parade slated for Friday night}

By Mary Ann Falzone
When was the last time you went to a parade?
No, staying in bed to watch June Lockhart host the Rose Bowl Parade does not count.

Well, Friday evening at 6:30 Syracuse University revives this muchmissed tradition as the music begins and the marchers fall in step down South Salina Street in the SU Homecoming Parade.
Representatives from a variety of organizations on campus will take to the streets in a good old-fashioned display of devotion to alma mater and loyal enthusiasm for "the team Participants from Traditions Commission, Sour Citrus Society, SU Marching Band, fraternities, sororities and residence halls will take part in the event.

The parade is the brainstorm of Joe Gallagher. SU's assistant athletic director for sports relations.

Basically, the idea is to drum up enthusiasm for the football team and get people thinking about the university and athletics," said Gallagher. Even though homecoming parades of this kind have failed at \(S U\) in the past, recent campus interest in big-time college football and proposals for a new stadium indicate that students do indeed care about football tradition at su.
Joe Gallagher hopes students will come to downtown Syracuse Friday and show some interest.
"It's time we let the team know that we care if they win or lose," he says.
The \($ U\) athletic department will provide free shuttle buses to the parade that will leave Walnut bark from 5:15 to 6 Friday evening.

The parade will start at the intersec tion of South Salina Sitreet and Adams Street, and will proceed north on Sialina to Clinton Square at Firie Houlevard.
\(\cdots\) Ihe main thing is to get out, root for the school, and have fun," said Gallagher.
"Our goal this year is to have a good parade so maybe people will say. Ihis wars a great idea. Iet's do it again.

\section*{Field hockey}

\section*{Stickwomen down Big Red}

By Audrey H. Lipford The sun had shown its face in Syracuse, and SU's women's field hockey team After an its arrival in style.
After an up and down beginning of postponed games and mud slides, the team has upped its season record to an impressive 4-1, winning its last three games against Kirkland, Colgate and Houghton, respectively. Last Friday's 2-1 win against the Colgate JV, whose varsity squad is number one in New York State, was the most exciting.

It's nice to win especially when you have a good opponent" coach Smith said. Last year, the Orange scored a tie against Colgate and Smith felt they could have won the match had the field conditions been better. The wet, muddy field that day made scoring particularly difficult.
This year, the sky was clear, the field was dry, and SU was ready for a victory. . . and they got it.
Goalie Mary Ann Samenko brought in carnations for each tearn member just before the game, in anticipation of the impending "funeral" of their opponent. Combined with the great weather and field conditions, the brief pregame pep rally was the perfect final touch. Colgate scored once on 15 attempts; Samenko had 14 saves.
Coach Smith noted the defensive team of Becky Heremans, Lesilie Weber.

Betsy Altmeyer, Peggy Coleman and Judy Millerdid a good job against Colgate, and are coming together as a unit. It was rumored that the Colgate-JV squad was a bit "overconfident," to the point of considering their match with the Orange little more than a "scrimmage." Although SU is on its way to a commendable record this year, they still are not among New York's field hockey powerhouses.
"It's natural to be a little overconfident," coach Smith said. "Nobody" likes to lose to a school without a (strong) reputation."
In Tuesday's 2-1 victory against Houghton, SU displayed a vicious attack of 21 shots on goal. Why just two shots?
"The team's working on driving the ball to score from an angle to the side of the strikang circle, rather than going ing circle, rather than going for the center of the goal," Smith said. "This way the goalie is forced to move from side to side, making potential side to side, making potential goals, more difficult to stop." SU's next match is against S. Lawrence today mit the Women's Building. Meanwhile, a comment about the Colgate game posted in the Women's Athletic Office read: "What a "Scrimmage':.

SU women's field hockey player Clair Belser has just released the shot that proved the margin of victory Tuesday as the Orangewomen defeated Houghton College 2-1. After a sluggish start this season the team has come back with three wins in a row. The ield hockey team takes to the Women's Building fisld again today at 4 p. m. A 28-year-old man was arrested Tuesday night after he allegediy attermpted to srape a 21 -yean-old SU student.
Ched- williams of \(n, 429\) Weatmoreland Ave. ploaded innocent Wednesday to chargea of first degree attempted rape and first degree sexual abuse, according to Syracuse city police. He is being held without, bail pending a preliminary hearing next Wednesday.

According to police, the suapect allegedly approached a woman in the 1000 block of Euclid Ave- (between Strong Avenue and Allen. Averne) and offered to escort her home. Police said that when the two reached the 1300 block of Euchid Ave, the suspect allegedly knocked the woman down and punched her geveral times in the stomach.
Police asid the woman remembered a rape-prevention lecture which recommended leading a would-be rapist to a place where police could be contacted. The woman suggested that they go to her apartment. Once there, she offered to get the suspect some wine, but instead notified her roommate, who called police.

A police spokesman said the suapect is not the man who raped a 17 -year-old giri in Thornden Park Oct. 8 or forced another SU Btudent to commit sodomy behind a house on Comstock Ave. Oct. 1. "He doesn't match the physical description given in any sex cases in that area, thespokes. man said.

By Dierdre Flynn and Lisa Kovitz
Two yeara of operation and a new framework have improved Shaw's living/learning center, say some living/learning center, say some residents and administrators, but a lack of funding, apathy among residents and ignorance about the program atill hinder the center.
'There wasn't enough organization or clear image of what to do with the idea of hiving/lear ning. The assumption was, if you put people together who had a higher propensity to learn.: the program would develop itself,' said Jim Newman, a profestior of geography who is factilty master of the program.
Newman said another problem is that some students want to atay in che dormitory because of its convenient location, but do not want to become part of the program.
"I was very excited about the new idea, but now that we have the structure, we don't know how to use it," said Antonia Valakas, a sophomore whin Antonia Salakse, a soph

A reped on freshmen in 1975 prompted thie idea for the center. A committee of faculty and students conducted a study that examined every aspect of freshman life academics, counseling, orientation and housing. From this com prehensive study came the living hearning concept: the idea that whether students could use the corm experience as a learming atmoaphere and still enjoy dorm life.
University committee reports state the concept behind Shaw Hall was devised by the College of Arte and Sciences and the Office of Residential Life (ORL) early in 1975. The committee said the major emphasis of the program was to create an atmosphere of academic as well 1975 community involvement. Since 1975, Shaw Hall has been the laboratory for the experiments.

\section*{Carey: TAPing an issue}

There's one vital aspeot of college life on the minds of almost every student at every college and university, from Harvard to Syracuse to SUNY Oswego.

Bucks. Greenbacks. Or, in slightly more genteel terms, financial aid.
Financial aid is a very important issue to aimost every student on campus And Gov. Hugh L. Carey knows it, too. Witness Carey's demagogic puspioitation of a proposal for a Tuition Assistance Plan (TAP). increase.

Carey delayed his support of the increase for some time before calling for a \($ 300\) hike retroactive to September. Carey says he delayed his support so universities would not increase tuition to soak up the hike, and so that the increase would actually put money in students* pockets.

The furst reason is absurd. Colleges and universities do not make their fiscal plans at the last minute. Syracuse University makes a final decision on tuition changes, if any, by the first week of February, according to Clifford L. Winters, vice chancellor for administrative cording to operations.

Support for a TAP increase in mid-summer could not possibly have led to an increase in tuition this fall, and if colleges raise tuition next fall without adjusting their own financial aid upward (which Winters says SU tries to avoid) Carey is more or less powerless to stop them.
The second reason is equally flimsy. The TAP increase may save students some money in the long run, but it won't give them an effective increase of \($ 300\) in financial aid. A TAP increase will be met with commensurate reductions in students' scholarships, NDSL Ioans, workstudy, etc.

We certainly have nothing against TAP increase - in fact we endorse it, perhaps more vigorously than does the governor. But an earlier endorsement would probably have been more effective than a splashy, midsemestex announcement favoring a retroactive increase.

Financial aid is one of the most crucial issues touching students. Those students should not permit politicians to exploit that issue while offering tardy support for students' interests.

\section*{Letters}

\section*{Who deserves special help?}

To the editor,
Prof. Fritz Rohrlich said in a gueat comment appearing in yesterday's Daily Orange that racial quatas, such as the one at insue in the Allan Bakke case before the Supreme Court, are undesirable because they pecessarily produce discrimination againet one of the groups involved. Instead of a quota system, he said, members of minority kroups should be given remedial programs to make up for " \({ }^{\text {a }}\) a disadvantaged up for a disadvantaged background, poorer achools, a less aupportive home environment, which characterize the average Which characterize the average black American, native.
Hispano-American etc.'

But are the minority groups mentioned above the only peraons in society suffering from inherent inequality? What about the poverty stricken Caucasians in America? Shouldn't they be given as much of an "extra help" as other minority group members who happen to be born into families that are wealthy, emotionally strong, etc.? Will they be allowed into any 'remedial' programe?
The point is, instituting a system of remedial instruction available only to members of minority groups is no lese discriminatory than establishing quotas - a certain number of places available only to minority groups. Although including proups. Aerty-gtricken Caucasians, or excluding wealthy Caucasians, or excluding wealthy minority group members, poses obvious problems of setting firm criteria, it would be necessary to prevent any discrimination Rohrlich's proposal.
As the profeseor says, afnimative action should always be taken to assure that positions in medical school, employment or other op portunitiea are equally available to persons of different races or sexes. But his solution leaves a lot of un. fortunatea out in the cold.

\section*{an editorial note}

A couple of weeks ago we published an editorial headilined "What SA needs: tangible achievement." The essence of our view, as atated in the editorial, is that in order to survive and operate meaningfully, SA must convince studenta that what it does is significant to them.
We inadvertently made that job more difficult in our eritorial Tuesday regarding tenure. In that editorial we endorsed a proposal to be introduced before the University Senate requiring SU to publish a list of all tenure candidatea at the university each Oct. 1 .
Our omission was failing to give credit to Rick Margolius, vice-president of student programs at SA, who developed the proposal and who has worked diligenHy in pushing for greater public awareness of tenure iasues.
We apologize for the omission, and commend Margolius and SA for their work on the tenure issue.

My favorite team, the New York Meta, managed to complete the cycle of cellar to champion to cellar this year while trading awry one of the best pitchers in the history of baseball. The Mets were fan when they were losing in the beginning; but now, it is getting a little redumdant. My allegiance shifted to several different teams after it nowhere
First, I was fascinated by the Chicago Cubs. The surprise team from the Windiy City were leading the National League Eartern Divition for He first time since the Mets beat them out for the divition title in 1969 . By September the Cubs had lost their ace reliever and were traveling in the same direction as the Mets, downward.

\section*{Jim Naughton}

It has become fashionable, a New Yorker columnist recently pointed out, to hate New York. When the lights went out on warm night in July, some people thought New York had gotten what was coming to it. When Abe Bearne was elected mayor four years ago, people thought New York had gotten what was coming to it. When Tom Seaver left Shea Stadium for Cincinnati people thought New York had cinnat people thought New York had geople are waiting for someone to give people are waiting

For the Yankees, in many reapects, epitoraize New York. As there is a part of the city that lives beyond its means there is a small contingent of well-publicized Yankees whose huge salaries seem beyond what is proper in baseball. And as New York struggles with intermal dissension, so the Yankes make sports pages all over the country with tales of dissension between Jackson and Martin and Martin and Munson and Munson and Jackson.
But if the fighting Yankees are New Yorkers, the playing Yankees are New Yorkers too. They aren't the Bronx Bornbers anymore. The Yanks clinched the American League flag on a scratch single from Paul Blair, a gutsy outfielder who ended up in New York because the Baltimare Orioles never gave him a chance to prove he wasn't atill gun-ehy. And while Reggie Jackson's antics may be what New York is about off the field. Mickey Rivers is the man whoplays like a New Yorker. It is the centerfielder's base stealing, clutch hitting (over 400 with men in acoring position), outfield speed and hustle that drives the Yankee attack.
It is an attack that steals, scrapes and sacrifices for runs that used to come on towering homers. It is not a popular attack, but it is one deserving of New York.
And if there is one thing, above all others, that drives people to hate the Yankees, it is their good luck. If one is once wrote, one must be willing to be once wrote, one must be willing the lucky. The Yankees are willing. They are lucky in excess. High-priced aupergtars are not enough to win a championahip. It takes a team work that was present when it had to be and luck that was there when nothing else was. Luck made sure the Yanks two closest rivals played each other out of contention at season s end. Luck made a quick appearance during the top of the ninth in game five in Kansas City, And if the Yankees are to win the World Series, luck will have to be a bit monre prominent than it was in the Bronx Wednesday night.
The 1977 New York Yankees are well paid and free speaking. They are winners who, for the moment, are running in luck. In short, they are hated because thoy are what other m's fana) wiak they could be.

\section*{Series scans ecology careers}

The State University College of Environmental Science and Forestry (ESF) is offering a series of free, noncredit seminars entitled "Careers in Ecology," featuring professional practitioners in several fields of environmental science. The sixpart series began yesterday and is held in 111 Marshall Hall at \(1: 15\) p.m.

According to Kainer H. Brocke, organizer and host of the seminars, "this series is to help young people choose a career field on a realistic basis." Brocke said the professional environmentalists will give the students views of "the excitement and motivation as well as the routine and drudgery" found in these careers. According to Thomas \(O\) Slocum, coordinator of ESF' careers services, the seminars should give students a clear. realistic impression of the environmental field.
The series is sponsored by ESF"s Department of En vironmental and Forest Biology and the Institute of Environmental Program Af fairs as a public service to arèa college atudents and the community at large.

Rock bands may corae and rock bands may go, but The Who, the band that gave us two rock operas and many albums throughout the years, is still together with its the guiding force of The Who, their main songwriter and lead guitarist.
Townahend has recently combined with Ronnie Lane to release Rough Mix (MCA Records), a highly enjoyable album which explores new musical directions.
Townshend and Lane were both associated with the British mod cult of the \(1960^{\prime} \mathrm{s}\). Lane was a founding member of The Small Faces, a pop group which had hits such as "ItMarriot founded Humble Pie. The band became The Faces with the addition of Rod Stewart and Ron Wood, and Lane left the band in 1973.

Both Townshend and Lane are devotees of Meher Baba, a late In dian guru who claimed to be the Messiah. The two men's paths have frequently crossed throughout the years and on this album each has a chance to perform new material. "Rough Mix" also features an occasional solo by mutual friend Eric Clapton on guitar. However, most of the songs on the album are performed by Townshend or Lane.

\section*{Getting kicks from football at Syracuse}

By Drew Schwartz The legendary golden calf is nowhere to be fourid on the Syracube campus. However, head coach Frank Maloney does have at least two pairs of golden feet on the SU football golden - thoase attached to placekicker Dave Jacobs and punter Jim Goodwill.
Jacobs and Goodwill are two of the most important keys in determining how Syracuse determining how "I couldn't agree more wholeheartedly as to the importance of the kicking game," portance of the kicking game," Maloney said. "At least two or three games a year are decided by it."
Because Jacobs and Goodwill have performed so well, their worth to the team is practically immeasurable. "I have unbelievable confidence in Dave. He is the finest in acekicker in the United States, and if I was coaching a professional team he'd be my professional I admire him not only kicker. I admire him not only for his ability, but also for his for his ability, but also f courage," Maloney said.
courage," Maloney sation for Jacobs ism't surprising when one considers the kicker's accomplishments in a Syracuse uniform.
Jacobs started a routine of winning games with lastfreshman year. In his second college game against Iowa, a conege game against minute Jacobs' field goal gave Syracuse the victory. gave Syracuse the victory.
Last year he continued to display his magic foot by connecplay his magic foot by connecting on a 25 -yard attempt ting on a 25 -yard attempt against Tulane with only against Tulane with only And in this year's Washington game, a 31 -yard field goal with 35 seconds to play once again turned what would have been a frustrating defeat into a gratifying victory.

Jacob's ability to stay calm in clutch situations enables him to remain oblivious to the pressure
'The team and coach prepare me for a pressure situation," Jacobs agreed. "This is the most tightly knit team since I've been here and knowing that they really believe in me gives me a tremendous psychological boost."
A third explanation for his astounding success under pressure is the fact that he has had many more opportunities to deliver in a pinch than most kickers.

If you have the chance to win a game once it is rare," Jacobs said. "But there have been five times where I've been presented with the opportunity, which is phenomenal.'
What is more phenomenal is the fact that Jacobs only began kicking footballs when he was 14. Previously, soccer had been his favorite game. "My father gave me a football and asked me to. kick it," Jacobs said. From then on Jacobs said. From then on Jacobs became kick crazy, He would practice with his father would practice with his father every night at a lighted park.
"Even after the lights went out and I had gone home, he would stay on the field and keep practicing field goals," his father Richard recalled.
Dave is atill as dedicated now as he was then. He will often lick 100 to 200 balls a day. And when Jacobs is not kicloing,well, he kicka barefoot in practice, to solve his problemal. It. forces you io the right form, \({ }^{\text {P }}\) he said.
Jacobs whe so interested in ticking when he was youriger that him mother arranged. a two wroek instruction period withigprof Yepruming The time spent with Yepremian in creased Jacob's desire to eventually play professional foot ball.
The other half of the kicking duo, Jim Groodwill, has also been very successful. Curren tly a sophomore, Goodwill became the regular punter in last season's third game. By. the end of the year he averaged 39.3 yards a punt, with his longest being a 66 -yard boot longest being a 66-yard boot against Navy early-seash plagued by an early-season slump, Goodwill rediscovered his touch in the Illinois game.
"Mentally, I felt the blahs until Illinois," Groodwill said: "I was pressing and it was a dreary feeling. But by having a few grod days in practice I found myself.
Both men realize kicking is mainly a mental process, and if they are not kicking well they'll eventually regain their form. They both are teamoriented and are aware the team has great confidence in team has great confidence in enjoy the pressure situations. Like Jacobs, Goodwill knows the confidence of his team helps him perform better. "I know how much it'll hurt the team if I don't perform well," Goodwill said. "I'm worried about that right now more than personal honors. Per-

In the midst of all the problems that have nagged the Su football team, one aspect of the squid has not been affected. forming well satisfies the team and myself."

And just as Jacobs seems to be at his best under pressure, so does Goodwill. "It helps my kick when I'm under pressure," Goodwill said. "When I'm punting deep in our territory I just da it without thinking about it. It more or less comes natural.
It is obvious that Syracuse has two exceptional Kickers who don't allow tense situations in games to have a bad effect on their performance. In fact, describing Jacobs and Goodwill as hav. ing two pairs of golden feet may be underestimating their value to the team.

For Syracues Saturdixy at Archbold Stadium they reprecerat the toughest chinlenge of the season, the best team the Orangemen will play all year. They represent the best in the Eamt. But more than anything they represent trouble for the 23 Orangemen.
"Deapite Fittsburgh being national champions last acason," said Frank Maloney. SU head football coach, "many people still think of Penn State as the Yankees of the East. The polls agree.'
Both the UPI and the AP weedy ratings have Penn State as the 10th best college team in the Penn State as the 10th best college team in the country the highest ranking of any Enstern squad. The critics aso agree that offenmively this Nittany Lion team is one of the best in the nation.
Leading this talented group is quarterback Chuck Fusina, who's completed 65 passes in 111 yardeats this season for 1,024 yards. His 198 yardion in total offense.
Fubina's favorite receivers are flanker Jimmy Cefalo, halfback Mickey Guman and tight end Mickey Shuler. Each has caught 14 Fuaina pasges this year.

Offretting the fine set of Nittany Lion receivers are an even better array of runners. Flanker back Matt Suhey leads the team with 345 yards in 69 carries, while Steve Geise is 59 for 224 yards and Guman has gained 145 yards for 224 yard

All together the Nittany Lions spell balance - 1,159 yardia on the ground, 1,031 yards in the air and 1.132 yards given upion defense.
"They are fourth in the nation againgt the runi" Maloney conitinued. "And you have to xemernber theyive drandy played Kentucky (which beat State 24-20), Mraryland and Houstong thrce mighty good rinning teame.
"There have been four players on defense who've really impreseed me on their kilmas," Maloney eaid. "Brace. Clark and Matt Millen are both sophomores who played linebacker last year, but they moved to tackife this season. They're very aggreasive and recklesh. Bill Banka is a good defensive end and their sufety (Gary), Petercusitie is- an outstanding ball player."
Maloney are basically a run-oriented team," Maloney said. "Saturday it's going to be our strength (running offense) against their strength (defense against the run)."
"Our atrength" didn't look so strong last Saturday in Mayyland as the Orangemen could only gain 125 yards on the ground in 48 tries.
Maloney remains confident about his offensive unit, although he hinted that Bob Avery sive unit, although he hinted that Bob Avery will start at one running back in place of Dennis Will start
"We can't go out there with the idea that we're going to run the ball down their throats even if it ien't Working" Maloney said. "Wellhave to pat it up if that happens.
But aven throwing (or trying to) didn't work last week in College Rark, and tomorrow in Arbetter team.
"The emotion of the kids is high, even higher than last week.," Maloney continued. "These are factora that will let bs compete. But we'llhave to play our best game to win. You havetoplay your day:"
But even once might not be enough for the Orangemen.

\section*{Nittany Lions produce memories of golden years}

Even before the rivalry flowered in the 1950s, when both teams battled annually for Eastern college football supremacy; Syracuse and Pena State engaged in some classic confrontations.

Nittany Lions clashed.

The firat notable controversy erupted after Penn in 1929, deliberately allowing two Syrracuse safeties in the waning minutesin order to run out the clock and prevent SU's offense from touching the ball.

Back then, a team surrendering a gafety would get possegsion of the football on its 20 yard line, so Penn State deliberately moved backwards and downed the ballin its own end zone, surrendering two points but retaining posseq gion.

Safety Catch
The preaent rule, requiring tenmas to punt from their end zome after giving up a safety, was a direct result of the 1929 SU-Penn State game.
Another rule change, making: it mandatory for all substitutes to sign in with game officials, was also rooted rhubarb, this one in the 1956 game.
Joe Szombathy, SU's assistant athletic director and an assistant coach for the Orange during that game, recalled Penn State's illegal insertion of quarterback Milt Plum into the game. When SU conches notified officials of the substitution, it was dienllowed. Penn
State's offense was subsequentiy penalized 15 yards, changing the complexion of a game won by the Orange 13-9.

In 1926, Simmons recalled an SU 26-21 loss to Army at Wert Point that ended in a riot and knocked the entire Orange backfield out of action for the following week's game against Penn State.

Nevertheless, with a scrub backrield that included an end as halfback, SU tamed the Lions 100 for what Simmons described as one of \(\mathrm{SU}^{\prime} \mathrm{s}\) "greateat victories in a hard fought series."
Another "fantastic" SU win over Penn State, according to Szombathy and any other self. respecting Orange booster, was the harrowing \(20-18\) vic tory in 1959, enroute to SU's only national championship.
Szombathy, an Orangetight end from 1950 -52 and co-captain of the ' 52 squad, caught a touchdown pass in 1952 that helped beat Penn State, 25-7.
"The Pena State game was usually the turning point of the "Winning that game made the seagon. The playera would get themselves suped up and enthusiastic.
"Over the yearis, there have been some hard feetings and pecusations of various sorts, but they were mainly to rev up the players for the game. We always hit harder and tackjed hatder against Penn State.'
Since 1970, Penn State has dominated the series, its smallest margin of victory being 12 points during the last

Those who feel the university should not commit itself to football oppose the construction of a stadium. If, however, fore university chooses to continue its not necessarily the Briscoe stadium not necessarily nost be built. longer Archbold Stadium will last. Structural engineers evaluate the stadium every year, according to Melvin C. Mounts, vicepresident for student affairs. But even if Archbold were to remain usuable for three to five more years, a new stadium would still be imperative for continuing the football program.

Archbold has become a burden to SU athietics. Other colleges, according to Mounts, would rather not play in Archbold. Penn State's athletic department has decided not to play in the concrete stadium again, because the gate receipts, even from a sell-out crowd, are insufficient. SU playa Pittsburgh on the road for the second year in a row Saturday because it is moze fanncially attractive for both reams to play in 56,500 -seat Pitt Stadium.

Sororities and fraternitiés today will launch a weeklong promotion of Greek life at Syracuse University.
This year's Greek Week is an experiment attempting to spread out a usually crowded weekend schedule, said Jim Wilson, cochairperson of Greel Weeic.

Wilson explained that the week was intentionally scheduled to follow Hornecoming Weekend to enlist alumni support.
Eeparing for it," wilsonched preparing for it," Wilson said. "The'alumni see this,; and hat's good for relations.'
The week starts with a phon-a-thon today and tomorrow. Alumni will be contacted and usked to contribute to each house's general alumni fund. According to Wilson, the funds are not preassigned, but will be Mounts said other teams, including Hlinois, have expressed interest in continuing their series with the Orange, but not returning to Archbold.

Recruiting problems
Mounts and David H. Every worthwhile high achool football player the university atternpts to recruit knows that attempts to recruit knows that Syracuse has an old stadium, no immediate plans to build a new one. and in a few yeara may not even have a football program at ail, Mounts said.

Plans are underway to change the operating practices of four campus coffeehouses, said Barbara Breen, manager of the Syracuse University Coffee House (SUCH).

The joint effort includes the purchase of beer at wholesale prices, cinculation of entertainment lista and the use of advertising.
At the first meeting. The Mount's SUCH, HrewsterBoland's Two-Below, and Vincent and Shaw coffeehouse managers examined the possibility of buying beer in large quantities, then dividing it up among the partnership. Prices probsbly would not be marked down, Breen said, because all revenues are made at the bar. SUCH, in particalar, would benefit from the agreement since it depends on The Junction snack bar under Graham Dining Hall for its beer supply.

After certain security criteria are met. SUCH will be granted permission to invest in a beer tap system. The Of fice of Residential Life and the Mount Council have mandated that the doors be dated that the doors be replaced with electronic con trols and the windows rein forced with steel mesh screen ing before any money is "set aside for the tap system. "We have a high potential for expansion." Breen said, "and enough student interest, to overcome these obstucles.

Breen also mentioned entertainment. The talent policy this year is twofold. "We want to incorporate student talent and at the same time en courage outsiders," she said.

\section*{Report may lose funds}

A campua-wide referend Hm to determinie whether Report news magazine showd be independent of Strdent Asocciation funding maybe placed on the SA ballot in December.

Parliamentarian. Keith Hutchings aaid Saturday that he will move at next Monday's assembly meeting toward an assembly vote on-whether to hold the referendum
"I would like to see it become independent so we aren't so tempted to cengor what it sayb. The temptation is there because we do control the funds, Hutchings said.

Studente, he baid, are "one atep removed from the temptation to censor," while the assembly might cat funds "out of sheer dislike."
Hutchings said he had not decided whether the "independence" he will call for would force Report to eupport itself entirely on advertising revenues- without stadent fee fanding - or merely bypass the assembly budiget hearings with a periodic referendum to determine how nawch direct student support Report would receive.
The assembly allocation process is bypassed by referendum for The Daily Orange and the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG), guaranteeing each group a fixed allotment from each student's activity fee.

Report, however, hashad to go through SA's annualbudgeting procees having its line-item requests voted on first by the finance board and then by the assembly.
: Hutchings gaid he will research the posaibility of aelf-support for Report and, if the magazine appearz incapable of aelling enough advertisements to continue publication, he will recommend direct atudent funding by referendum.
Report editor Joanne Wypijewski said, "it is not conceivable" that the publication would survive if direct student funding is denied by referendum and the assembly does not allocate funds to Report at next April's budget hearings.
The move for assembly discussion of Report stemmed primarily from objections to its Oct. 10 isane, which contained a primariy from objectiong to its Oct. 10 isatue, which contained a atory on SA officiala entitled "Your Student Fee at Wante" and a Syracuse lost a football game Saturday. The final score was Penn State 31, Syracuse 24. It was the sixth time in a row that the Nittany Lions had defeated SU, the eighth in the last nine and it will simply turn into another score in the "previous scores" column of Penn State-Syracuse football press guides.

Yet it was more than that, much more, and the 27,029 who-were in Archbold Stadium Saturday know that.

It was the first time in recent memory that a crowd at Archbold showed that much emotion and support. And the team responded with a great performance, one which will be remembered for a long time

It was the first time in recent memory that the crowd created the excitement in Archbold that it does in Manley Field House for the Ande basketball games the best Syracuse performance this the best Syracuse performance this

For all the critics of football at SU it was a convincing testimony of how important football is to Syracuse. For much of last week the university was deeply concerned with Saturday's game. That concern exploded into enthusiasm in Archbold. With the one's ears it is difficult to give much credance to the argument that football is not important at Syracuse or that it does not belong at a university.

Football is important at SU, and despite all the critics' ravings and predictions of financial doom, no one can deny that. Over 27,000 people turned out to see the football people turned out to see the football team that is now being pressured from some circles to disband.
If football is dead at SU, the 27,000 people who turned out for Saturday's funeral didn't seem to notice.

once again begrudgingly refunding the money it had taken from the "volunteering" Syracuse student body. We will have to admit that this year NYPIRG had done an excellent job in concealing the refunding process from SU students. We did not find out about the refund until two days. before the deadline for receiving refund requests, and, after having seen the same underhanded practice last year, we had been alertly watching for it again this year. Would NYPIRG endorse such a "voluntary" use of atudent fees if they were used - to support the Republican Party, the Flat Earth Society, or the Civitan Clus of such a funding technique by a public interest organization can only be considered duplicitous and hypocritical.

\section*{An investment in pride}

To the editor,
As a new student at SU-perhaps I'm a bit off base in my beliefs and assumptions, but I really have difficulty understanding some of the rationale behind those who oppose construction of a new stadium. Much of their argument seems to be based on statements such as:
"The stadium would only be used six times a year."
"SU cain't afford a stadium and a competitive sports program.' academics, or least, don't add to them.'
feel the basis for all these Thementis is; at best, precarious. The. idea that a. 50,000 -seat stadium facility would see limited usage does not take into account the recent boom in sports that use fields recent boom in sports that use fields approximately the size of a football gridiron - soccer and lacrosse. Until recently soccer promoters gave away tickets and a lacrosse stick was an unknown item in many areas. Now, of courae, the Cosmos are turning away people and lacrosse is rivaling football in many regions as a high school aport. With a modern facility, it would seem fair to expect both sports to improve in caliber and the stadium to attract considerable crowds for those conside

If SU cannot afford a competitive sports program as a large private college, then how can Boston College, a similar northeastern institution, maintain a football team capable of meeting (and beating) major national powers while also maintaining fine interschool, nor is it a football factory. And how is a smaller college such as Colgate capable of fielding a colleges have found a way. It isn't imponsible.

Rather, I envision more cooperation between all ages, which can only be realized at that time when our generation is educated to the needs, concerns, and wishes of older persons.

We will never reach this point if younger people continue to write, print, articles furthering such derogatory stereotypes of older persons.

William Leberman

Many people have used Oklahoma, Ohio State, And Alabama as examples of what "bigtime" football does to a school. Yet I have never seen Natre Dame, Stanford or UCLA characterized as academic poorhouses. In many ways the pursuit of winning athletics have improved those schools in other fields. I am sure Chancellor Eggers would love to have the endowment kitty Father Bend.
And isn't it ironic that the glory years of Orange football (1956-'66) were the same years as the great expansion that pushed SU to its present posi
If:we do not expend \($ 7\) million to \($ 9\) million on a new stadium we will be forced to either end football, or keep patching up Archbold (probably leading back to option one).
The first option would leave basketball as the lone revenue sport at SU and lead invariably to athletic deficits, and most probably a cut in nonrevenue sports. The second option would involve a constantly increasing sum of money to maintain Archbold in a playable condition. The decrepit stadium would turn off both athletes and spectators, leading to poor performance both on the field and at the gate: The maintenance sum would drive football into a deficit leading to a decline of support for nonrevenue sports of support for nonrevenue sporta football. We would beapoorer school indeed.
SU is a college permeated with apathy. Successful athletics could counter that trend and instill pride in the student body.
Whatever happens could cost a lot money.
Why not invest it in pride?

\section*{An investment in pride}

To the editor,
As a new student at SU-perhaps I'm a bit off base in my beliefs and assumptions, but I really have difficulty understanding some of the rationale behind those who oppose construction of a new stadium. Much of their argument seems to be based on statements such as:
"The stadium would only be used six times a year."

SU can't afford a stadium and a competitive sports program." academics, or least, don't add to them."

I feel the basis for all these statements is, at best, precarious The idea that a 50,000 -seat atadifum facility would see limited usage does not take into account the recent boom in sports that use fields approximately the size of a football gridiron - soccer and lacrosse. Un til recently soccer promoters gave away tickets and a lacrosse stick was ain unknown item in many areas. Now, of course, the Cosmos are turning away people and lacrosse is rivaling football in many regions as a high school aport. With a modern facility, it would seem faix to expect both sports to improve in caliber and the stadium to attract considerable crowds for those conside

If SU cannot afford a competitive eports program as a large private college, then how can Boston College, a similar northeastern institution, maintain a footbal team capable of meeting (and beating) major national powers while also maintaining fine inter collegiate hockey? BC is not a state achool, nor is it a football factory. And how is a smaller collegesuch as Colgate capable of fielding a "aperior gridiron aquad? These two impotesible.

Many people have used Oklahoma, Ohio State, and Alabama as examples of what "bighave never seen Notre Dame, Stanford, or UCLA characterized as academic poorhouses. In many ways the pursuit of winning athletics have improved those schools in other fielda. I am sure Chancellor Eggers would love to have the endowment kitty Father have the endowment kitty Father
Hegburgh has accumblated in South Hesbu Bend.
And isn't it ironic that the glory years of Orange football (1956-66) were the same years as the great ex pangion that pushed SU to its present position in American higher

If we do not expend \($ 7\) million to \($ 9\) million on a new stadium we will be forced to either end football, or keep patching up Archbold (probably eading back to option one).
The first option would leave basketball as the lone revenue sport at SU and lead invariakly to athletic deficits, and most probably a cut in nonrevenue sports. The second op ion would involve a constantly in reasing sum of money to maintain Archbold in a playable condition The decrepit stadium would turn of both athletes and spectators, leading to poor pexformance both on the feld and at the gate: The ball into a deficit leading to e declin of support for nonrevenue sport ond thepr for nonrevenue sports and the eventual abandonment o indeed indeed.

SU is a college permeated with apathy. Successful athletics could counter that trend and instill pride in:the stadent body

\section*{\(\star\) Plan to construct now stadium sparks dobate on football}

Conblumed from poy one and SU's recruiting efforts hampered, proponents of the program argue the time to build a new stadium has come Even Chancellor Melvin A Eggers agrees that if the university does not build a stadium soon the football program will be phased out.

Eggers refuses to comment on the Briscoe plan until it is presented Oct. 24. However, a low bid from a builder as reptable as the Briscoe Co. which served as general con tractor for the Meadowlands Sports Complex in New Jersey and Veterans Stadium in Philadelphia, has cenerated optimism in the SU administration.

Mounts, Bennett and other proponents of the football program argue that if the sport is phased out it will take the rest of the athletic department, except the basketball program, which is self-supporting, along which is

Those who argue againstSU football, such as economics professor Dale Tussing, say the football program actually costs money because SU awards 95 grants-in-aid to its football playera. Football playera also receive firee room and board. The total cost to the university is in the neighborhood of \($ 300,000\). However, Bennett said, counting the football players scholarship as costs is a mis take. It is not as if 95 tuition paying students are being ex cluded because 95 football players get scholarships. Bennett said the university would award that \($ 300,000\) in financial aid whether there was a football program or not.

A question of priorities
The allocation of football scholarships seerns to be a matter of priorities. The issue is whether the univergity should allocate some of its money on the basis of athletic ability or all of it on the basis of scholarship and need.
Those who argue in favor of football claim it is the university's greatest publicity device. sitys greatest publicitydevice. have had tough times recently. gave had toughtimes scecentiy, still flashed on television sets still flashed on television sets and printed in newspapers and magazines across the country. magazines across the country. Footiball is not what a university is for, Bennett said, but it is an attention-getter. If a etudent is attracted to football it may persinade him to give SU a littie more attention than a school without a football Central

Central Michigan University had one of its largest applicant pools in recent history after winning the NCAA Division II college football championship last year. Pittsburgh also had a larger applicant pool following its national charapionship and SU received over 400 applications from the west coast, where it does very little recruiting of any sort, following its 1959 national championship

The SU football program has not produced a champion since 1959 , but Bennett and Monnts say the program still has influence as a publicity has influence as a pubiser.

SU depends upon its alumni for many contributions and many of the most active alumni are members of the Varsity Club or Orange Pack, programs that support SU programs that support If there were no football its boosters say, there would be no Homecoming Weekend and the main attraction of Parents Weekend would also be lost.
Part of SU
Proponents of big time football also argue that football is part of the univeraity. Bennett said it adds to the aense of community at Syracuse. Mounts pointed out that over, 4,000 students are involved in Syracuse's intramural program, over 1,300 use athletic facilities daily and over 1,000 play some varsity or club sport.
Those who argue against football at Syracuse say the university should drop the program because it will never be successful. It has been argued that private universities, with a few notable exceptions, do not produce winning football teams. It hass also ming football teams. It hass also univergity university cut down on its foot ball expenses by electin play Division II football. Bennett said neither suggestion is valid. There aren't a lot of big private universities with winning football teams because there aren't that many big private universities, he and Exciuding NotreoDame and USC, perennial Top Ten teams, private universities have dorre well. Baylor was in the Cotton Bowl in 1976 gnd Stanford has had several recent trips to the Rgpe Bowl. Pittsburgh, a priwate institution with some etate support, won the national championship last year after apending most of the ' 608 and early "70s as a loser.
As for playing Division II football, Bennett and Mounts say it is not financielly pos sible. The same amovint of sible. The same amount of money is spent in Division. In, Bennett said. Division I teams and Division if tesmas both award 95 scholarships, hire the same number of coaches The use similar equipment. The amount of money spent on recruiting is where the disparity between spending in football programs usually occurs. However, top-notch Division II teams often outspend Division I teams in their recruiting efforts.

There is no firrancial ad vantage in playing Divisiori II football, Bennett said, and the crowds: would probably drop off because the caliber of competition would be lower. Benmett said Boston Univer sity has dropped to the ranks of a Division II team and the move has greatly damaged the university's athletic budget.
Three factors

Whether SU ahould support big time football seems to hinge on three questions:
- Does it bring in money?
-Does it attract students?
-Is it something the university should promote?

Whether the program brings in money is contingent upon in money is contingent upon whose definition of financia terms one deals with. In 1971 72 , several members of \(a\) University Senate committee on athletics argued that football actually cost the univer sity money due to the money spent on football players scholarships and room and board. Others countered that financial aid vould awrarded to other students.

Football players earn back some of their scholarship money by drawing fans, who pay for tickets to games. If the university does make money from its football program, some still question the priorities of giving scholarships for athletics rather than academics. This issue typically turns into a debate over whether athletics belong at a university, añd if so, to what degree.

Those who argue against athletic scholarships feel the university should lend or give its money to students who are academically inclined. who argue for athletics say sport is an area of student interest and that athletes provide a service to the community. They also say athletics attracts a larger group of applicants. From this group the univeraity can pick hie best students.
Supporters of big time football also argue that if football is.dropped athletics at SU will be cut to intramurals and basketball. Sorne of those, who oppose football also oppose varsity sports, so this issule is of little consequence for them.

Otherts, however, asy that the athletic priorities of the university conld be restructured to turn a "minor sport," such as wrestling or aoccer, into a revenue-produc ing sport by offering more acholarships, recruiting widely and publicizing matches and games.

With Archbold Stiadium crumbling and new atadium proposals in the woribs, the debate over the merits of foot ball at the university, which bail at heen unresolved since the Univergity Senate Caminittee examined the isgue in \(1971-72\), is certrin to begin argain.

By Steve Saylor
Syracuse University's new black gospel choir serves the black gospel choir serves the deep-rooted religious heritage deep-rooted religious heritage and dispelling stareotype.
The group, known as the Black Celestial Choral Enaemble, was formed in April and appeared publicly for the first time Oct. 9 during services at Hendricks Chapel. The choir also performed yesterday at Syracuse University's firet black church service in Hen: dricks Chapel.
"The time inlong overdue for a black choir on campus," said assiatant director Ervin Allgood, "not just as a means of expression, hithas part of our culture ovrrbeginninge, and as a means of awareness for others.

The 76-menber choir, ac cording to director Seretta McKnight, is fundea indirectly by Student Association through the Stadent AitroAmerican Society"s Black Artist League, and by Student Activities.

The choir's members, threefourths of whom axe women, cenerally put in six hours of rehearisal weekly, with more hours added before perSormances.

Allgood said response to the Oct 9 debut was "beautiful." and that he is still hearing praise a week afterward.
"The impact was so great due to the fact that it's positive, constructive," Mcknight said.
McKnight said there is \(s\) misconception among whites that blacks' positive attitude during church services is more. a desire to "party" than to ex. press religious faith.
"You always fear what you don't know," she said. People don't know the origin of black religion, Allgood baid.
"The black church is old," he said. "ti's been a part of black peoples lives throughout their period here. When they came here the United. States). blacks had to have something to hold onto.

What we grasped onto was religion. We weren't. able to hold onto society, but wecould hold onto a better later life, an afterlife."
The expressions of optimism by black alaves form the basis of black religion, Allgood said. "Our rhythm was our religion..Religion is supposed to be an elated feeling in Christ. Xou're supposed to feel something, not fall asleep in church," he said.

Allgood said he aees religious consciousnesa on an upward trend among black college students now, with many of the legal battles over equility out of the way and black student populations larger than before.
Next on the schedule for the chorus is a concert during Pareints' Weekend on Oct. 29. The group will perform two sets between 2 and 5 p.m. in the Commons, Slocium Hall.

Before Sound Guard \({ }^{\text {s }}\) preservative, every time you played your favorite record, wear was inevitable.

Friction did it.
But now Sound Guard preservative, with its dry lubrication, reduces the friction that wears out your records.

In fact, independent tests prove that Sound Guard preservative used regularly maintains sound fidelity by virtually eliminating record wear. And its built-in, permanent anti-static property resists dust accumulation.

Sound Guard preservative is available by itself or as part of our new Sound Guard \({ }^{\text {TM }}\) Total Record Care System, which includes new Sound Guard \({ }^{\text {m4 }}\) record cleaner. The cleaner developed through extensive research and testing to effectively remove everything from dust particles to oily fingerprints.

All Sound Guard products are available in audio and record outlets.

\section*{Lions chew Orange: but almost choke}

By Joel Stashenko After it was over, after Bill Hurley had gained his last yards and the crowd had stood and applauded the Orangemen for the last time, the score still remained.
In many ways SU had played well enough to win, outpassing the Nittany Lions 329 yards to 160, outgaining them in total offense 443 to 366 , and outplaying them for half the game. Yet the scoreboard bore mute testimony to the fact
Penn State 31, Syracuse 24.
An emotionally drained SU coach Frank Maloney was overcome by the game, the play of his team, and the lack received.
"Such a group of kids..." Maloney said quietly, with tears in his eyes. "They've got oget areward. God, llove that
It appeared almost everyone in the crowd of 27,029 loved the Orangemen as well Saturday SU was again the darlings of Archbold pleading with the receiving it in return. It was an afternoon where an adoring publicand determined athletes ried to combine to defeat the highly regarded, and even more highly disliked, visitors. And it almost worked. Almost. Penn State's Booker Moore ran the opening kickoff 63 yards to the SU 37 . Steve Geise ater for the score. 7-0, Penn A Dave Jacobs field goal narrowed the lead. Penn State again easily drove to a easy nine play drive.. Geise again dove into the SU end zone for the score. Penn State 14. Mike Guman, SU quarterback Bill Hurley started another drive. On the first play of the series, Hurley threw to tight end Rich Rosen for 36 yards. Five plays later the other Orange tight end, Bruce Semall, broke three tackiea and carried two other Nittany Lions into the Penn State end zone to complete a 10 -yard pass play from Hurley. The extra point followed, and SU only trailed 14-10.
But the second period as did the third. PSU outscons, SU 17-0 in the middle two quarters to take a commanding lead.
First came a Chuck Fusina to Bob Bassett pass play for 11 yards. Near the end of the first yards. Near the end of the inst score, a 28 -yard field goal by score, a 28

Then midway through the third quarter: Penn State scored the eventual clinching touchdown when Fusina rolled in from the SU four. With \(5: 42\) to play in the third period, Penn State led 31 to 10 .
But while state was dominating SU in the middle two periods, Hurley was dominating the Nittany Lion defense. In the first half he defense. In the first half he passed for 173 yards, mostly on throws over the middle to tight ends Semall and Kosen. But Hurley's best was yet to come.

That Hurley is a great athlete," P SU assistant coach Jerry Sandusky said. "We got good pressure from the corners on defense that helped contain Hurley somewhat, but he is very tough to defense against because he throws the gprintut pass so well."
After SU held again, Hurley and his offensi ve unit regained the ball on the SU 277 with \(8: 18\) to play. Now began a bizarre, and memorable

No. A flag, back at midfield another holding call, this one against Neil Barton, this one the emotional straw that almost broke SU's back.

Although the Orangemen had the ball twice more, they could come no cioser to scoring. The first drive was stopped in three short plays on the SU 5, and the last was stopped by the clock when Hurley ran from the State \(\mathbf{3 6}\) with time running out. He gained tive, but no more, and State had held on barely, SU had lost barely.

We knew we were going to have to put the ball in the air at least 15 to 17 times," Hurley said. "We kept flooding their secondary with receivers and the safetyman had to cover two men. The one he didn't take we went to.
Hurley went to his receivers 36 times (completins 24) for 329 yards, all SU records. His total offense mark of 384 yards broke the SU quarterback's own total offensive record of 315. and all the seore renained, colader the records and ac colades meant little beside the negative outcome.
State wanted to beat Menn state desperately." Hurley said. 1 can t stand to lose. It s the worst feeling.

\section*{Footballs fly, flags fall in foray}

They just don't want the big teams toget upset. Rich Rosen.

By Mike McAlary
Syracuse quarterback Bill Hurley put more things in the air than Lockheed Saturday.
In an air show like there has never been seen in Archbold Stadium before, Hurley passed long, short, outside and inside for 329 yards. He had accomplished the impossible in a hairaculous fourth quarter comeback with a miraculous fourth quarter comeback with a steady firck of new entry in the air show. The yellow with a new entry inted flying.

The officiating was horseshit." grumbled Orange coach Frank Maloney. "It was like Pittsburgh all over again.

Naturally, I'm disgusted,'" mumbled Hurley of the referee's work. "But what can you do. shit.
The three calls that hurt the Orange, all midway through the fourth quarter, were at least questionable.
After trailing \(31-10\) with five minutes left in the third quarter, Hurley's passing and Bruce Semall's catching prowess brought the Orange to within seven points. Then he started the drive.
From his own 27 Hurley ran on the furst play from scrimmage to the Penn State 38. Archbold Semall.

The ball fell to the ground. . . as didaflag. Archbold grumbled.

It was a chickenshit holding call. They can make that call on every play from ecrimmage:" said offensive lineman Neil Barton.
"It was a lateflag." tight end Rich Roserpgera. "You don't hold agray late, you only-hold fitm if he gets the jump on you.

Two plays later, on a third and 18 situation, Hurley flung the ball 40 yards to Semall. Archbold was delirious. The ball rested on the Penn State seven-yard line. The yellow flag rested on the Penn State 48 -yard line.
James Owen, the umpire who made the holding call on Barton, was firm in his belief of an infraction.

The Syracuse man (Barton) let his man get by him and then he hooked him with hisarm Owen said.
'I wasn't holding him," Barton said. "I didn't need to - I had him blocked. He was ont of the play."

They were just trying to get back at me for the first half. I clipped somebody. Ther refs stole the game from us. They just took it," added the emotional Barton after the game

On the next play Hurley was dumped in the backfield. The aeries came to a close.

The final drive of the game, with less than a minute left, capped a day's frustration. Semall, who made seven spectacular catches, got hit in the chest with a perfectly thrown Huriey pass on the Penn State seven-yard line. He dropped it.
"I think it shocked him. Guys were running in front of hime and all of a sudden it was there. Right there, zrosen said in defense of temall," Semall said. "It hurts. It hurts bad.

Two plays later, Bill Huriey dropped back to pass on the last play of the game. He looked into the endzone but his receivers were covered. Out of desperation he started to xum. Maybe he was thinking : just maybe... but he was tackled five yards from

In the locker room Frank Malonay eried. He eried hard.

Hanlon said age was no barrier for him returning to sehool. "I never stop to think about how old I am," the 48 -year-old politician said.
Although age may be na barriex to Hanlon, the amonnt of time his job as chairperson for the Republican Party requires is a problem.

But in the Bakke vs. University of California case currently being argued in the Supreme currentiy being argued in the Supreme twist.

Newly termed "reverse" disCrimination, the quota followed by the Davis medical school seeks sanctity under the auspieces of affirmative ac tion. Their apecial admissions program sets aside 16 of the 100 available place in the frrat year class for minority groupapplicants and admita those who are filled - whether they meet the requirements, adhered to strictly in selecIn the other 84, or not.

Of course, the program's goal ia not to disadvantage whites, but to expand opportunities for medical education to minorities. Unfortunately, the effect includes both the former and the latter. Minorities are being given a chance at the expense of more highly qualified white students.

If this system is allowed to continue. not only will it propagate racial discrimination (whether termed "reverse" or not) but it will unwittingly promote the very attitude it seeks to eliminate that minorities are inferior to whites. \section*{The Bakke case: redefining 'The Dream'}

The American Dream, Professor James MacGregor Burns wrote recently, is a constant struggle to realize simultaneously liberty and equality. The dream Burns eppeaks of is redefined as the social climate changes. Usually the changes come slowly, as discrete variances in the national attitude. But occasionally one event will hold the country's attention, epitomizing the atruggle to realize both liberty and equality. Such an instance is the Allan Bakke case being argued in the United States Supreme Court.
The Bakice case has embodied not enxinear and betwean a but a struggle within the American Dream.

Allin Bakke symbolizes everything Amarica likes to think it is. He is the self-made-man, the guy who worked his way through college, 8 ot married, raised a family, worked a good job in the field of science and then decided he Whanted more. He wanted to beadoctor While mpporting him wife and family

Allan Bakke went to night school. Bakke was not an "A" student; in fact, only through peraeverance was he a "B+" atudent. But America has never been touted as the land of the talented it is the land of the hard worker, and Allan Bakke had all the credentials But aomething went wrong.
Somewhere along the line, through a long and sometimes violent process. people learned that the syatern that gave Allan Bakke liberty was holding equality out of reach for the nation's poor, blacks and minorities. Brought to consciousinesa in a turbulent decade of social change, these minoxities wanted a piece of the dream. They challenged Allan Bakke and the people like him.
If there is one thing to be learned from this challenge it is that there isn't from this chaliengeit is that thereisnt Somenow, through the fault of no one Somehow, through the fault of no one involved, Allan Bakkes liberty and underprivileged peoples quet for In the pant. America responded by making the dream bigger. We could expand economically, we could find a new frontier. be it in our suburbs, in outer space or in Southesst Asia. But the frontiers are gone now, as is the arrogance that told us we could capture no one seems to know how to give everyone a shot at the dream.

In the past we might have built more medical schools, but med schools already receive enormous government subsidies. Unfortunately, there is no way known to American universitien to base selection ofstudents on merit only while allowing minorities a chance at the education they have been denied. In mome canes thert can be no iustice. The Bakke case is one. No matter how the courts decide there will be a loser. For Bakke, as man whose accomplish por Bacice, as man whose accomplish monts are based in the Puritan ethic, a loas would be a tragedy within the drearm. If the courtahould rule agamat Bakre it would be anying in effect that there is a value more worthy than the individualiem upon which much of American achievement has been based. If Ballice love his cate it would be the dential of an American way of Be the denkinl of an Amer Iife. But he should lome it.

Since the turn of the century the comntry, through the legal system, hat eurbed individand rightefor the eatceaf social jumtice.

If Americans are to realize liberty, they must approach it on a more equal footing. We can no longer ignore or deny the underprivileged

Establishing quotas for the underprivileged is not justice, but it is the best we can do for now.
The statue of justice which adorns the Supreme Court building wears a blindfold. While justice may be blind, she is also unfeeling, for her scales have always been heavily weighted against minorities Deciding the of California would not balance the scales, but it would bring us closer to scales, but it would bring us closer to be harmed to remedy a situation they be harmed to remedy a situation they necessary.

If the court decides to limit liberties it does not mean we might not some day realize liberty for all. But if the court decides againat equality, by overturning use of quotas, the country will never move closer to that goal will never move closer to that goal Foraaking equality would be more than a tragedy in the American Dream thanatragedy in the Annerican Dream sbandonment.

Two brothers, 15 and 10 years old, were arrested by city police Sunday and charged in connection with a burglary at the Women's Building, 820 Comstock Ave.
The two brothers and three other youths allegedly broke into 36 lockers and-two wire baskets in the men's locker room of the Women's Building Eym Sunday atabout 2:15 p.m.
Syracube University Safety and Security Capt. John A. Glavin said an assortment of athletic wearing apparel and toiletries was recovered when the brothers were apprehended.

Entry was apparently made with "a homemade crowbar" - a wooden handle with a claw end - that wos found in the locker room following the theft, Glavin said.
Syracuse Police Lt. William

Reidyr said the juveniles were charged with third-degree burglary and later released into their mother's custody pending a Family Court appearance in about two weeks.
Following their arrest, the youths told police the names of three other boys who were with them but fled when police ar rived. The others, a 16 -year-old and two 14-year-olds, one who was a brother of the arrested suspects, are believed to be in. volved in the burglary, according to police.

Reidy baid additional arrests are expected today in connection with the break-in.
The surpects' names could not be released because of their ages.
Glavin said he did not have a damage estimate for the break in.

Should the legislatare fail to aupport stadium construction, the university will be faced with a loan of at least $1 million and possibly access and sewage costs.
Two options available to the university are a bank loan or a county bond issue. The terms of a bank loan would be deter. mined by bank policy. Clifford L. Winter. Jx., vice chancellor for administrative operations, baid SU has an excellent credit rating because it has managed to balance it budget for the last five yeare.
A county bond isgue might also prove an attractive alternative, because the naniversity would have 30 years to retive the clebt. The university hoped to ohtain a \($ 6\) million to \($ 7\) million bond issue last year before previous etadidm proposals fell through. A bond issue for the Briscoe stadium would be less expenaive, but the means of paying the bond issue would be the same. Stadium revenues, mostly from SU football games, would be the primary bource of fands. Whether the stadium generates enough revenue could have a lot to do with whether the team which plays there generates enough exciternent.
The football team has not been drawing large crowds this year, with the notable ex. ception of Saturday's Penn State ve. SU.content Stadium proponents attribute this to proponents attribute this to Mhey also argue that a new They aw and strengthen SU atadium would etrengthen SU teama by serving as an advantage in recruiting high school taleat. chool talent

However, skeptics reply that even with a neve Btadinm the team might not improve and if it does not improve it may not draw enough fifna. Stadium proponents answer that a team does not have to be a winner to draw fans. Illinois and Wisconsin, neither of which produces notoriously successfal football teams, wfill fill large stadimma. However, there are eximmples to the contrary. Northwestern University in fllinois, a loser since the early '708, is having attendance problems despite a large tadium.
Making comparisone between football programs which may be only superficially may be only nuperdangerous. There are comparigons to Et any point of view. Many factors enter into attendance predicting and as athletic department officiala will confirm, it is a crude will confirm, it is a crude science. Syracube has several factorg which might work in its favor, includias a fairly illustrious football record in the " 50 a and early '60a, the fact that it is the only major college football team in this part of the state and the fact that a new Syracuse radio aports network has recently been formed.
On the other hand, bad weather could be detrinnental. Opponents of the stadium aleo argue that SU football, even in its most successful years, at tracted 40,000 fans only five times. Somt, contend that eentral and upper New York are not fontball conscious areas and point out that even O.J. Simpson has difficulty drawing 40,000 fans to Buffalo Bilis home contests in a stracture which is less than a decade old.

The university can conduct guryeys to ehow how beneficial the staclium could be to acea business. Soil samples have been conducted to mgare fine stadium will reat on a firmicock base and problems with acceas roadia are being discusped with the Connty Stadium Commission headed by architect David Chase.

But if the university is to act on the Briscoe propasal - and Mounte said a decision might be made within two weeks of the Oct. 24 presentation -one of its biggest challenges might be in convincing people that the stadium will pay for itgelf.

If the stadium is to pay for itself, Stif football will have to carry more than its own weight. The univeraity, if it were to take a bond isgue would have 30 yeare to repay a loan of aboat \($ 4\) million or \($ 5\) million. And although stadium rental and parking fees will provide fands, the central question mark in the stadium debate will be the drawing power of SU football.

School spirit is what malkes the com* munity, according to Ben Kruppel, one of the observers at the parade. Kruppel, a Syracuse resident, aaid he thought the parade was a good iden because it combined collegre iffe with the city.
Crowd members had various reasons for enjoying the homecoming procession.
"I liked the Alpha Phi giris," aaid senior David Beck.
Sophomore Dianne -Kelly particularly enjoyed the parade because it represented all campus athletic teams rather than just football.

Participants in the parade seemed to enjoy it as much as the observers. Track team member Pat Merrell said his team had a great time waving and

The major complaint from students about the 15 -minute parade was that it should have been held closer to campus.

\section*{Senate to hear proposal to list tenure candidates}

A proposal requiring the publication of all A proposal requiring the publication of all tenure and promotion candidates will be introduced at today's University Senatemeeting by Rick Margolius. Student A preaident of atudent programs.
- Margolius said there is not enough student input in the tenure process. By publishing tenure candidates' names, students will have a greater opportunity to express opinions on a candidate. Margolius said.
If the proposal is passed, the vice chancellor for academic affairs will annually present the list of tenure candidates to the senate atits October meeting and promotion candidates at the November meeting.
James K. Weeks, chairperson of the committee on appointments and promotions, said the proposal infringes upon the candidates right to privacy. "We invite comment, as a college, but publishing the names is inviting people to take pot shots," he said.
Tenure is a sharanteed appointment for a faculty member until retirement. A faculty member becomes eligible for tenure after six years of university teaching.

The teture process starts in a professor's college. A subcommittee of faculty members within the candidate's college will recommend him to the tenure committee of that college. This committee, consisting of both faculty and students, will vote on the professor's tenure. If approved, the college dean will conaider the appointment. It then goes to the vice chancellor for academic affairs. Finally, the senate must ratify the appointment.
Margolius said the proposal has a "good shot" of being approved "if we get a good turnout of student genators.
A resolution which could permit faculty to continue teaching past the mandatory retirement age of 65 may be acted on by the senate today.
Margolias introduced this resolution last year and he requested it be acted upon by October. Weeks, whose committee is handling th resolution, said "it's very unlikely* it will be brought up today

The purpose of the resolution is to permit faculty members to have the option to continue teaching past 65 based on merit and ability. Margolius said.

The committee on appointments and promotions has not yet finished studying the resolution, according to Weeks.

Aithough the proposal seems pretty straightforward, there are implicationg in it," Weeks said. He said the committee has not decided on the criteria to judge a faculty member's competence. The proposal may be voted on next month. Weeks aaid.

\section*{Commoner speaks at SU on energy crisis}

By Robert Ward Bairy Cormmaner, professor of environmental science at Washington Univeraity in St. Louis, has been presenting his often controversial views on energy; the environment ard related topics for the better part of a decade. Monday night as presented those views to a crowd of about 450 in Hendricks Chapel.
Commoner has written dozens of articles and several books: on the relationship between the energy crisis and other social factors especially the economy and the environment. In his speech here hesharply criticized the Carter Atministration's choice of Athe most environmentally "the most environmentaly damaging Bowarces or eneryy alleviate the crisis, and explained his own preference for solar energy.
"There is no way to resolve the energy crisis without initiating a change to a renewable source," Commoner said. He added that, *The problem with a non-renewable source is not that it's running out; it's that the price is rising exponentially, faster and faster and faster.
As a renewable source, solar energy has the advantages of a relatively stable price and almost limitless use, he said. The 60 -year-old professor said that supplies of uranium, said that supplies of uranium, whichear reactors, would expire nuclear reactors, would expire in 20 to 25 yeargifenough were used to supply most energy needs. Use of the breeder reac tor, which produces its own fuel as it'produces energy, would enable current nuclear fuels supplies to last for 1,500 to 2,000 years, he asid.
President Carter has halted construction of plutonium breeder reactors in favor of thorium, another radioactive element which is thought to be safer than plutonium.
The dangers of nuclear energy were another reason Commoner criticized the Carter plan, although he viewed the dangers from an economic standpoint. The amount of security measures necessary to prevent-any acnecessary tokeover of a nuclear cident or cakeover of a nuclear

\section*{The student consumer: reshaping SU's image}

Last year construction of a union building was the university's top fund raising priority. Since then, construction of a new stadium, renovation of the Hall of Languages and institution of more distinguished professorships (endowed chairs) have knocked the union building from the top spot.

Fund raising has been one problem. A union building is envisioned by potential donors as a place where students will enjoy themselves. Donors, we imagine, have nothing against enjoying one's self,-but most major donors are over 50 and the thought of contributing to a place where students would drink beer and play their funny kind of music and plan immoral adventures is not particularly appealing.

The Hall of Languages and distinguished professorships seem to the donor more what an education should be. Football may be no more essential to the university than a union building, but a football stadium has the capacity to pay for itself through parking and ticket revenues. A union building has no such potential.

Another factor is the university redefinition of its image. Syracuse has become increasingly sports conscious this year. A new sports relations director was hired and a sports radio network formed as the university attempted to create an image of being the collegiate athletic capital of New York. This outlook places emphasis on the stadium because, according to those in favor of the stadium, the entire sports program, save basketball, would be lost if a new stadium is not built saon.
This outlook tends to rub some \section*{members of the university com-} munity the wrong way. This fact is not lost on university decisionmakers who realize something must be done to improve the image of SU's academics. Hence, the distinguished professorships and HL renovation become top priorities as a matter of showing SU's balance.

Competition for students will increase dramatically in the 1980 s because fewer students will be of college age. The university is concentrating on improving its image to assure success in the recruiting sweepstakes that could result.: In accepting the management mentality of marketing the university, Syracuse has accepted the notion that the prospective student is a consumer. The student interest then is something to be carefully gauged and economically met:

At this point Syracuse has singled out sports and academics as attractive areas to be enhanced and publicized. Economics plays a large role in determining these priorities but as the college market becomes more competitive, student interests become more influential. interests become more influential.
It is time for students to decide their priorities. If a football stadium, the Hall of Languages and distinguished professorships strike them as more important than a union building - and an argument can be made for each of these iterns - then so be it.

But if the sudden decrease in concern for the construction of a union building strikes students as a misrepresentation of their interests then they should let the administration know it.

\section*{Refunds: NYPIRG responds}

Tothe editor:
With regard to tho letter printed Monday that is critical of the NYPIRG refund process, we do not feel that the refund process was concealed in any way. We felt that an ad and daily reminders in your paper, regular postering on ce npus, and public service announcements and puble service announcements university community. The fact that anyone would feel strungly otherwise, however. is reason enough tor our office to extend the application deadline to Oct. 21. We will also renew our publicity effort. While we feel that in many ways the Hudgins letter was unfaic and inaccurate, it did make a good point. In past years, refurd checks were Inadequate consideration wasgiven to the fact that unlike most NYPIRG offices, we are not located in a truly contral location. Therefore, we will be mailing out all refund checke this year, as we have in the past.

We would like to emphasize the fact that NYPIRG has never been less than candid or open about our policies, including refunds.
We feel that the availability of a refund is an asset to our organization, that should serve as a organization, that should serve as throughout the state.

\section*{Winter discontent}

To the editor,
The university has long shown its dedication to saving money at the expense of the students' quality of life. The energy crisis is their latest excuse Claiming a need to conserve energy, the university has shut off hot water to laundry facilitiés, lowered the temperatures of its buildings, and installed new shower heads. These programs do little to save energy, but unnecessarily inconvenience the student body. Now, SU threatens to do it again.
Since the beginning of the year, my window has been gitting loosely in its frame, threatening to fall out. Much of the sealer is gone, letting in cold air and water. I followed university procedure and began to put in repair requests with my RA once a week, every week since the beginning of the semester. Now it is. listed as "dangerous" on the repair request forms because the window is ao loose. Yet all the requests have been ignored. In the meantime, other rooms on my hoor have been painted, have. received new onra I went to Bob Mitchell, the Lawrinson dorm director, to see what could be done. He told me he couldn't help me and wouldn't put in a repair request. While I was speaking with hirn, I noticed that he had Who space heaters in his apartment. When I asked him why he had two. he said, "Because it gets cold in here." I told him that because my windows weren't sealed, my room got very cold too. Would he mind sharing a space heater? He wouldn't share one because students aren't allowed to have space heaters.

When I asked what could be done to resolve the situation, he said to keep doing what I have been doing and "eventually physical plant will get to it, but it might not be done this winter because all the windows are going to be replaced this summer.' When I made it clear that I wann't going to put up with this all winter, his reply was, "Goodbye. I don', have any more time to waste on you and he closed the door in my face. If this is typical of administrative attitudes toward student problems, then beware, students, it's going to be a long cold winter.

Campus Crusade denies stereotyped image

By lra Chimeson The name Campus Crussade for Chriat auggeats a group of mid eyed Jesus ireaks hellfire sermone on sin and hellire sermons on sin and Thation.
That's not an accurate mage, according to David Craig, head of the Syracuse University chapter of the gxoup. He believes that the Campu: Crusade reaches tudents in an "intellectually responsible manner." And for Craig. intellectually responsible does not mean stopping and haranguiug students on the etreet.
"Many people think we apend our time on M Street handing out literatume but that's not us," Craig taid.
So if the campus crasaders are not street corner evangelista, who are they and what do they wrant?
That may best be answered by first looking at the origins of the group. Campus Crusade began at UCLA in 1951. It was formed by Bill Bright, a business student who underwent a dramatic religioun experience. Using his bubiness training. Bright formed Crusade chapters on 400 colleges around the world. The international headquarters is a converted health epa in San Bermandino, Calif. From there, Craig wais awmigned to the SU campus oeven yoars ago.
Like Bright Craig was an agnomic during his strident days at the University of Massachusette. "I wata a biology major who became interested in the true origins oflife. Eventually my negearch led me to Jesus Christ""he said
Now as a full-time paid exrploye of Campus Crusade. Craig is responsible for coor dinating the Syracuae program. The movement consiats Inangely of Bible study programs and what Craig calls "dormitory outreaches."

Craig says the Cruaade does not mnintain membership rolls Instead, it relies on a loove movement of people who have varying degrees of commitment. At present, he Baid, there are twalve "highly committed" and 15 less committed students. There are also at least forty meudents who, while not connected with the group. do attend Bible classes at Community House and in dorms.

Exactly how many other atudents are influenced by the Crusade's mesaage is unclear. "We don't monitor the maccess or failure of our program," Craig said. *I know that even if people don't auddenly invite

Crais admaitted that Campus Crusade "bases everything we know on the Bible as the book God has eent down to man."
Craig's mintragt of academic eaching tiyles is echoed by unior Mike Zabel, who leads a Bible study group. "Religion courses tend to teach that-all religions are equal," he said. "In a achool like this (SU) mont professors are not Christisan professors but religion profes* cors, and a personal relationghip with Christ must go beyond purely religious aspects." purely

\section*{Communication:}

By John Rosenberry Better communication could help to improve dormitory maintenance, according to of ficials of the two departments responsible.

Both Thomas Goonan, Residential Life Service Office (RLSO) housekeeping coordinator and John Sala, Physical Plant director atressed the importance of communication to the maintenance process.

A frequently overlooked caune of maintenance delays is complaints that are not forwarded throught the proper cbanaela, according to Goonan. Requegta are often made to Physical Plant which muat be sent to FI SO for approval and then back to Physical Plant for action.

Although their duties are diatinct, RLSO and Phyaical Plant cooperate for full dorm maintenance coverage. RLSO is primarily responsible for housekeeping and Phytical Plant for repairs. In addition, RLSO serves an a clearinghouse for complainta. Any complaint or request relative to dorms is sent to RLSO. which then sends appropriate instructions to Physical Plant:

Center assists victims, witnesses of crimes

By Brian O'Neill
In the American criminal justice sybtem, the victims and witnesses of crimes have often beem treated so just pieces of evidence; used as a means to convict a criminal and then forgotten. In Syracuse, however, the Victim-Witriess Assistance Conter (VWAC) is working to change the situation.
Sponsored by District Attomey Richard A. Hennescy Jr., the federally-funded Jrog the federally-runded program has been working to sueffer any. unnecessary suffer an hardships.
Robert Hamel, services coordinator of the program, said Syracuse has brought together three agencies (the Victim-Witness agencies Asistance Center, the Volunteer Center, Inc, and the Rape Crisis Center) to focus on one target population, crime victims.
Hamel said the VWAC is primarily concerned with vic tims of violent crimes, sexual assaults, crimes against the elderly and burglaries. He goes through the police reports every week and pulls out these cases. They are then referred to the Volunteer Center, which sends letters to the victims homes explaining the services available to them and telling them of possible monetary compensation in cases of injury. They helped 600 victims this way during the past year.
Hamel explained that a letter is used instead of a telephone call since a phone call is "too scary" immediately cafter a person has become a after a person has become a This.
This is the first part of the program's Early. Intervention System. With the aystem, each victim who wants one is provided with a "victim advocate" to be with him at the various stages of the criminal justice system. Hamel said this provides a badly needed continuity that was lacking in the past.

A victim has to see countless uniformed policemen and plain-clothed detectives in a typical felony case. If the case goes to court he has to see as many as four assistant district attorneys as the case moves from arraignment to preliminary examination to the grand jury to the actual trial, said Hamel.

The victim advocate will stay with the victim all the way through his or her criminal justice ordeal if he deaires it. The victim advocate's job, Hamel said, is to get him through the rough spots and see that he gets the services and support he may need.

The VWAC will also keep the victim' posted on the progress of his case. In the past, it often happened that the only way a victim could find ont what happened to the case was to read it in the paper.

All 14 victim advocates are volunteers who have sone through a brief but intensive training period, Hamel said. In three 10-hour-per-day training seasions, the prospective vic tim advocates visit the police department, the district at torney's office and emergency rooms of local hospitals to aee how each works. With this overall instruction on the criminal ingtice nystem, they learn crisis intervention techniques as well, Hamel said
The VVNAC maintains an outreach office in the Public Safey Building, where people Who feel they bave been vic timited can file complainta Moit of them hisve been refecred to thie VWAC by the Syracuse Police Department and are not serious crimes. This office has handled 1,700 complaints in the past year Complaints are reviewed by Complaints are reviewred by they might be indictable. If they are, they are indictredte. to an assistant district attomey who will send the case to the court of proper jurisdiction.

Hamel said the office tries to avoid the criminal iustice avoid the crizaral posible Only one to ten per pent of the complaints actnally so to complantu he actaally go to mediate things like try to quarrels and fiction bevers quarthors in his office Then neighbora in his office. Hhis paves money in court costs and police investigation.
"Some people just come into the office because they're lonely," he aqaid.
The VWAC works on a \($ 160,000\) buder with only two full-time workers Hamel baid co it relies hers, famel said, volunteers. heavily on ita 64 Presently Presently the VWAC is funded by a three-year grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration its second year and now in its second year, and after it runs out the program will have to be picked up by Onondaga County if it is to continue.
Hamel said he is confident the program will continue, as it has the strong backing of Hennessy, Who is "very concerned about victims righta."
Hamel added that he had to be confident, "It's called job security."
Programs across the country may be in bome danger, however. Hamel explained hat the LEAA is under severe Gre by both President Carter and Congress. Hamel said "by both view it as a "bureaucratic mess" and so it may suffer severe cutbacks, estimated by Hamel to be as much as \($ 250\) million
There are 110 victim projects across the country, 56 of which are associated with the National District Attorney's Witness Assistance. The Syracuse canter is one of theme.

The VWAC emergency phone number is 474-7011 and they can be reached 24 hours a day, aeven days a week.

\section*{EARN OVER \({ }^{5} 600\) A MONTH FOR THE REST OF YOUR SENIOR YEAR.}

If you are interested in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the NUPOC-Collegiate Program (NUPOC is short for Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate), and if you qualify it can pay you as much as \($ 611\) a month for the remainder of your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you will receive an additional year of advanced technical education, education that would cost thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a \($ 3,000\) cash bonus.

It isn't easy. Only one of every six applicants will be selected, and there are fewer than 300 openings. But those who make it find themselves in one of the most elite engineering training programs anywhere. With unequalled hands-on responsibility, a \($ 24,000\) salary in four years, plus travel, medical benefits and education opportunities.

For more details on this program, ask your placement officer when a Navy representative will be on campus, or call the Officer Program Office listed below; or send your résumé to Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203. The NUPOC-Collegiate Program. It can do more than help you finish college; it can lead to an exciting opportunity.

\section*{UU seeks increase in stipends}

By Marsha Eppolito
Rob Light, University Union concert coordinator, and Steve Rumin, UU film coordinator, requested a \($ 500\) increase in their \($ 500\) stipends from the Student Association Finance Board Thursday.
The finance boand defeated the request \(4-3\), according to Robert Valeri, SA comptroller and head of the finance board.
Light and Rumin said they plan to present their case before the SA Asgembly Monday night in the hope that the assembly will not accept the finance board's recommendation. The assembly must vote on all finance board recommendations, Valeri said.
Valeri aaid the finance board felt Light and Rumin deserved the increases but the board was afraid of aetting a precedent. According to Valeri, the finance board did not want to start granting an organization a certain amount of money for stipends in the spring and then being requested to increase these qtipends in the fall.
Valeri said if the board granted the request they felt granted the request they felt other organizations would start requesting similar increases. Runin Runin said yesterday that his stipend was cut from \($ 1,300\) to \($ 500\) last year. All stipends were cut at last apring's budget hearings, Valeri said.
According to Runin, the film coordinator's duties have increased this year. The stipends are "so out of proportion," he said. Expanded programming such as summer film service has resulted in a bigger work load, Runin aaid. Groups wishing to show films, but not on a regular basis must now go through UU, he said through UU, he said,
Reasons for Light's request are similar to Runin's. "We have a reason for the increase, Runin said. "I understand the finance board's position but there should be, some way to make a change," he added.
In previous years, UU individuals who wanted increased stipends would receive the money from revenues generated by respective boards. This year the practice was stopped. According to Valeri, SA's policy now is not to allow an increase without the approval of the finance board.
Light said, "If I thought this would happen (thenew policy), I would have fought the cutback last spring." According o Light, the decision was "the finance board's way of passing the buck - sooner or later someone should decide on how stipends should be allocated." Light said, "There is no reason not to give it (the increase) to us. \({ }^{*}\)

By Barry Lambergman
Although Andy Jugan warg at the helm, one could argue that Maxwell Sruart was really the mastermind bebind the SU cross country team's split at Drumlins Country Club Saturday. In fact, they came so close to a double Win you might even say they "missed it by that much."

Whas coach Jugan had up his wleeve was a lan to trick KAOS - er - Colgate and plan to trick KAOS - er - Colgate and devised because SU's top runner, freshran Neil Rosenblad, had injured the interior surface of his tibia bone. So Jugan proceeded to develop a race plan according to his apy manual.

Rosenblad was to go out at a very fast pace With three other SU rumners in order to draw the opposing teams out with him. Playing at the unthinkable hour of 9 a.m., the SU lacrosse them overpowered determined Kutztown State 18-8 Saturday, same againat Penn State.
With many SU players undoubtedly still feeling the effects from Octoberfest the previous night, the Orange started slowly. Fin ally freshman Robbie McCarthy opened the scoring for SU as he cut to the middle, gathered in a pass just outside the crease, and ecored easily at 5:36. Kutztown midifelder Wes Snavely scored his firgt of four at \(11: 25\), but the Orange ran off three straight goals to open a 4-1 lead early in the second period. Syracuse was ahead to stay.
With Kutztown middies bagging on Orange attackmen, SU coaches Roy Simmons and Jay Gallagher began using a "wide two" offensive set-up. "We tried to open up their defense a bit," two offensive set-up. we trimons gaid. They were trying to take away our strength, (Tom) Abbott and (Tim) O'Hara.'

The new offensive set allowed SU middies to locate attackonen cutting to the cage. SU normally would like to do the opposite, with middies taking feeds from attacks behind the met. Latte in the first half, Abbott scored on a pass from mididie Kevin Domoghue, and crease attack. McCarthy acored from middie Doug Sedgwick.

\section*{A dangerous diversion}

Dear Mom,
College is fun. A few weeks ago they were selling beanies to all the freshmen - the chancellor even wore one. Last weekend we went to a big Homecoming Parade downtown. The cheerleaders and athletes were all yelling "Beat Penin State." I'm sending you a button from the game.

A letter home. The year - 1955 ? 1948? 1920? or 1977 ? Tradition is apparently on its way back at Syracuse almoet dangerous about the way the campus has embraced it. It is as though we are nervous actors; unsure of our previous generation. The pep rallies, previous generation. The pep ralies, something to offer at the time, for they fostered a sense of community: An ertenaive survey of American college students during the '50s Bhowed an students during the "50, showed an "gloriously content" in the words of the survey summary.
Coliege was fun in the '50s, but it was alsó diversionâry. By 1964 students began to feel the undercurrent of all that had been ignored a decade before. The free speech movement started at Berkiey. Tom Hayden penned the Port Huron statement and with the escand the Vietaran War, the campuses and the Vietman War, the campuses ing to be scorned and beanies were an artifact of What seemed a more ignorant student generation. The leaders of this student generation also

Ten years after the peak of student activism people no longer knew what the Port Muron statement was and students do not identify the rebellious Tom Hayden with the man whoran for a U.S. Senate seat from Californiar. Unemployment and inflation have created new concerns and the campuses have turned pragmatic as away to meet them. Enrollment in professional schools has soared and students who do study arts and sciences use them as a. stepping stone to law, business or medicine. Civil rights are something for the courts to worry about and student consciousness is so far removed from the '60s that demonstrations seem mythical. The agenda for social justice remains un anished, but today's student, made anxious by an extremely competitive job market, has no time for idealism. ourselven. We comonitments are to to change the ourgelves. We do not seek to changa the system, but rather to hustle for znadvantage within it. Whether we embrace vantage within it. Whether we embrace a professional education or a collegiate us. We look to tradition not because it creates community but because it is diversionary, fun for the moment.
We might think we're far enough away from the '50s to view thoes traditions and even engage in them with huimor., But, in our Bocial conciousness we are closer to the " 50 os than the '60:. We are remaking the mistakes of "The Silent Generation" by ignoring the need for change in our university and in our society.
It is a pragmatic materialism reminiscent of the ' 50 s , but we are more guilty than our counterparts of that tome, for we have the lessons of the'60s to learn from.
1970 duty of college students of the 19708 is to find the balance between the two very different decades which direc ty preceded them

When I came to Syracuase University to do my graduate studies I was absolutely flabbergasted that there is no student union building. Every other college I've ever visited, large or small, public or private, has a cen trialized place for students to meet eat, attend functions and find services. But SU students maynever know the benefits of having a student union building.
Here's some of what's included at other such unions I've visited eateries from short-order to sit-down dining to food service cafeterias, movie theaters, rowdy pubs, ballrooms, bowling alleys, supply stores, check cashing services, ticket services, student offices, computer terminais . . . and on and on. The substitutes wh have scattered here at example, movies are ahown in small example, movies are showningmal and dirty classrooms, and the Student Center, though pleasant, i small and single-minded. small and single-minded. understand students have pressed for a centralized gtudent union building for years and years, but the administration has pleaded "no money.'
But now the administration wants to ahell out 8 million umiversity and public bucks for a new football stadium in the hinterlands. I certainly do not disparage football championship football here at SU championship footbal here at SU ana I fuly support the team. But has a football stadium. Vened only twice a year or so, was good enough for the championship teams of the ' 50 s and 60 . With a bit of renovation it would be good enough for the championship teams of the for the champ
' 80 and and
It's hard to see why SU doesn't join the 20th Century and every other college in the country by constructing a union building for its students. It's hard to believe there will all of a sudden be enough money for a new stadium while there has not been money for a student union building for 107 years. I guess the difference is that only students building.

It's really aimple: SU doean't need a new stadium for we already have a union huilding beeds a student have one. It's justamatter of getting our priorities straight

\section*{Carey and TAP:}
setting the record straight

Students cannot afford to ignore Albany any longer. Gov. Hugh L. Carey's endorsement of a \($ 300\) increase in the maximum Tuition Assistance Program (TAP) award, to be made retroactive to cover freshmen entering school this fall, is one of the best reasons why.
What does TAP mean to SU students? The real significance of TAP becomes obvious when one examines how the number of students for which ability to afford SU.
According to university figures, 34 per cent, or 3,500 SU students, receive TAP. Assume that for those who receive \($ 400\) or more this is the deciding factor enabling them to attend SU. Applying the income distribution figures plying the income distribution figures to attend this school if TAP were unavailable.
From the institutional perspective, SU accepted 8,742 of 10,009 applicants for the 1977-'78 academic year, so these students could easily be replaced without jeopardizing the academic standards of the institution. But for the student who must attend a less expenacademic needs, the loss is not so easily made up.
map was designed precisely to \(^{\text {made }}\) eliminate the economic barriers to eliminate tolle economic bariers to attending college. It was designed with the intention of equalizing the cost of obtaining higher education. For those attend SU, TAP has achieved the purpose all those involved in its creation envisioned. The \($ 300\) increase will enable those freshmen whodepend on TAP to stay, and allow high school geniors considering college in New York State to base their choices on academic considerations
TAP's purpose is to give students freedom of choice. But with that freedom comes responsibility. Students owe it to themselves to become involved in the decision-making process, to offer dernonstrate their commitment to students through their votes.
Carey is receiving a lot of political mileage with his well-published endorsement of the TAP increase - but it's time to set the record straight. Since Carey took office in 1975 he has done nothing but try to cut the TAP program. In 1976 he recommended a 10 per cent across the board cutin TAP. In 1977 he presented five separate TAP cuts which equalled \($ 41\) million. Except for one cut concerning financially independent students adopted this year, students can thank a bipartisan effort in the legislature for preventing what would have been an emasculation of the TAP program.

\section*{Julie Mayne}
It was the Republicans who initiated, fought for and implemented TAP in 1974. It was a Republican senate that unanimously passed a bill and the who offered an amendment to the 1977 Who offered an amendiment to the 1977 Supplemental Budget which would have increased TAP by \($ 300\). Meanwhile Carey atood hard against any TAP hike, allegedly fearing for the economic balance of the state.
The excuse that there are no issues for students. to rally around doesn't work any longer. The issues are there, they're very real and of crucial imaportance to students and to the future of higher education.

The place. where the support really does exist - NYC - is just too far away to get paying cuatomers on Saturdeys.

By Kim Sewand A historical event occurred Oct. 9, \(\cdot 1977\) at Hendricks Chapel. For the first time in the 47 -year history of the chapel; a black clergyman, the Rev. John D. Jones, preached during the worship service.

The 29-year-old minister, preacher for 10 years, now an SU chaplain-at-large, received his position after interviews by a predominantly black commission of administrators, tudents and clergymen. Hendricks Chapel officials were also part of this group.

One of Jones's functions is to minister primarily, but not exclusively, among black

\section*{Shaw begins innovative film, discussion series}

An experimental film program intended to present tudents with a view of society through films notshown in the classioom has begun at Shaw Hall, according to Brian Gorman, Shaw Hall director and the program's advisor.
Sponsored in conjunction with the University Union Cinema Board, the prográm began last night with the film "Doctor Strangelove." The program will end in December. Shaw will also show a series of short films from the Syracuse University Library in conjunction with the Residential Life Advigory Committee. The films will be selected by a committee of nine Shaw residents. The first film, Psychics, Saints and Scientists" will be shown free in the Shaw Lounge Oct. 22 .
According to Gorman, both programs will allow students to participate in a discussion group with faculty members after the film.
The program will "provide \(a\) different type of film experience" both personally and educationally, Gorman said.

\section*{Snack bar gets facelift}

About \($ 66,000\) worth of im provements to Rathskeller, a Syracuse Univergity snack bar located in the basement of Slocum Hall, are near completion, according to Edward Pease, manager of the restaurapt.

Carpeting, tables, chairs and paneling are the latest additions to the interior of Rathskeller. Curtains and a decorative ceiling should beup by the end of the month, Pease reported.

The less obvious im. provements, said Pease, are in the kitchen. New equipment has been installed and the food is made to order. "Last year the food was prepared way ahead of time; this year we are preparing the food as it is ordered," Pease said.
Business increased by 10 per cent since opening and Pease said he thinks it will continue to increase as the weather gets worse.
Rathskeller, staffed by 30 students, is run by SU Food Service.

students and faculty." Periodically engaging in preaching assignments and worship services is another tagk. Bridging the gap between the black Syracuse community and the black academic community is a major goal.
Helping to span the distance between school and community is the Black Celestial Choral Ensemble formed by Jones. While the group will sing during campus services occasionally, Jones wants them to participate in black church services in the area.

For six consecutive Wednesday nights, beginning Oct. 25 , the new chaplain will conduct a workshop on historical and conteraporary perspectives in the black church. The meetings will be held at the Student AfroAmerican Cultural Center, 203 Marshail St.

Jones, SU's first black chaplain-at-large, feels there is a strong sense of the minds and spirits of the black Syracuse academic community. More than ever, inity is in a state of fulfillment.
"The command that Jesus Christ gave to his disciples on Mount Olive, to love your neighbor as yourself, has farreaching implications," said Jones. "It presupposes' that you at least know how to love yourself. We're trying to learn to love ourselves, that's all. It's not up with blacks and down not up with blacks and down hatred syndrome must be overcome.
*i want to raise consciousness on one level and consciousness on one level and sustain it on another level relaing to the needs and America," said Jones "Whites America, said Jones. "Whites must be educated in a pluralistic setting," he added. "The traditions and heritages of both races must be respected. There must be cross-as similation.
Jones is extremely pleased with his reception at Fendricks Chapel, and described it as overwhelming." He plant to hold black worship services once a month. When asked about the frequency of preaching during the morming services, he stated, "For 107 years there was no black chaplain provided for black students. Time will take care of the issue of assimilation into the worship services, as opposed to planning.
"I feel welcomed as well as that what has taken place is a very historic event" pleclared the preacher "It's a shotin the them It's a pocesetter for colleges and pacesetter for colleges and and to meet all needs of the black to needs of the black student population, or any otherethnic group.
the neer chaplains deal with true needs of students who happen to be white," explained

Jones. "I see myself as dealing with blacks who happen to be students."

for Billy Joel ia because he has not progressed. That does not mean this is not a good record. "The Stranger" is a graat rock albura, by most standards. But for those of tw who have cautiously watched Joel grow from his first disc Cold Spring Harbour through Piano Man Streetlife Serenade, and Streethife Serenade, "Tha Stranger" leaves the feeling that he likes where he -is musically and doem't frellike mosical
So what's so bad about that? Nothing, probably. It'a just that without an album that is fresh in its style, Joel doesn't seem to be using his enormous zalent to the fullest. In the past, each album he released gave us a new phase while remaining consistent. with the previous records. ..The Stranger breaks no barriers: it asya what he's already aaid before.
This is not so much a criticiam as it is an observation. There are those who will argue "The Stranger" is indeed a progression. They will claim he's becoming less and less keyboard dominated, which is true his sound has changed but his music hasn't. But, anyway "The stranger" is a weicomed record. No one will deny Joel's rbility to put out a clasey LP. His lyrics never wane in the mediocrity that plague many of today"s rock songs. He has an inoagination that is sharp. It painte his tunes with words and phrases that fit like a glove, and melody lines that almoet fly nway: His performance on the keyboards has always been atumning. and "The Strangar" further exemplifies this.
On a technical note, mention must be piven to tolt drammer liberty DeVitto His drumming is the perfect counterpart to Joel's masterful keyboard playing. DeVitto's performance is both hot and pensitive. Producer Ramone recorded his drums to sound like DeVitto is beating on your chest; they almost come out and bite you. Overall. the album is Jcel's most percussive work to date.
On stage, Billy Joel is a monster-His show easily equals that of Springsteen's, and believeme, that's saying a hell of a lot. Joel will be herein Syracuee on December 9th at the War Memorial.

By Joel Stashenko like Syracuse football. I follow the team, I read every Syracuee HeraldiJournal and Syracuse Fierala-Journal and Post Standard, and I write many of them which appear in The Daily Orange. I was sorry The Daily Orange. I was sorry for the team when they lost to when they beat Waahington when they beat Wanhington and proud when they barely synthetic uniforms from this stadium the University wants to build for them. I like the team; I don't like the stadium.

Syracuse University is apparently ready to go ahead with plans to construct their own stadium for between \($ 7\) million and \($ 9\) million (the proponents of the stadium invariably pick the lower figure) without the help of the city or the county. (as would I)
It would It would welcome with open wallet a welcome with open wallet a county bond issue which county bond issue which would provide most or all of this money for SU, but sinceno this money for SU, butsince no oifer has been forthcoming SU is pressing ahead with its own construction scheme.
1 shudder to think of the ramifications of such a policy. Syracuse University is a private school one which already has extremely high tuition. If a public school undertook this project it could always run to its atate legislature (and through it, the taxpayers) for financial help in case of bad cost estimates. is wrong. for Syracuse's statium, SU has no such body able to give its money up -except students.

Proponents of the etadium imsigt that if ite cost is higher than the eatimate it can get the off the loang through ndded revenueg from the stadium (namely higher ticket prices). Yamely if the attendance is not as Yet if the attendance is not as high as expected (as it might not be since the ticket pricea would probably be more than the \($ 8\) they are now) then it seems the umiveraity has only one more place to turn - the otudents.

Southern misuse (Thisidea of coats overriding estimates is not that unestimates is not that uncommon. A graphicexample is New Orleans
Superdome, whose projected cost was \($ 39\) million. When it was completed in 1975 the final bill ran to \($ 169\) million.)
There is also the seemingly overlooked matter of SU's renovation of the Hall of Languages which is projected at a \($ 4\) million cost. Two largescale construction projects for a private university at the a private university at the famancial trouble.
A vitally important factor in the success of the new stadium is whether the Syracuse football program can fill it, and ball program can fil it, and thus allow Syracuse University to pay forit. I don't think it can.
Much has been made of the psychological effect a new stadium will have on the program - presumably the players will run faster, be stronger, the recruits will flock to Syracuse and the fans will auddenly see how much fun it is to watch Syracuse football since they will get to sit on wooden planks inatead of concrete and pay SU for parking. This is the greatest snow job since last winter.
The Buffalo Bills moved into Rich Stadium a few years ago, a modern, ansily acceasible structure which, Im sure, the Bill' front office hoped would give the team added interest. And for a while it worked. And for a whie it worked, team.

But the team faded, and so did the crowds. Even though the Bills otill have 0.3 . Simpson, one of the top two pro running backs in history, and even though Rich Stadium is indeed a beautifal place, the crowds stay ewny. Last Sunday they drew 27,000 people.

The bottom line
And this, ultimately, is what decides how large crowds in this part of the country will beAnyone will turn out to see a winner, be it the Bills or Boeheim's basketball squad.
But Syracuse football is not a winner. Larry King will be gone by 1979 , DaveJacobs will be gone by 1979 and, most importantly, Bill Hurley will be gone by 1979. On its own right now, the two words Syracuse football, which etand for allits footoali, which stand foralits cannot draw an average of cannot draw an average of 40,000 or \(50,000 \mathrm{iry}\) two years? 40,000 or 50,000 ini two years? Another factorthat has been largely overlooked by the proponents of the stadium is the weather. Each season seems to contain at least one rain-out (so far thisseason SU has had one, the Washington game, which drew only 12,839 people). What would compel 30,000 more people to come ait in a new stadium than do so now for those games in Archbold? What happens if the weather is particularly bad one year and there are three such washouts?

Much has been made of the fact the University of Illinois

Time merches on, and along with it go the great footbell players which a university must depend on to draw crowdis. These Syracuse greats (Floyd Little, left. Coach Ben Schwartizwalder, center, and Jim Nance, right) are now long gone from SU. Part of the risk of SU funding a new atadium seeme to be the fact Svracusa is uncertain it will have great ball players like these in three years to help draw people into the new structure.
drew 52,015 fans to its Oct. 1 game with SU. There, the proponents of the stadium point with wild eyes and trem bling fingers, thereis what wil happen to the Orange footbal program if the new gtadium is built. Yet Illinois has two things going for it SU doesn"t One is the tradition that foot ball has there - the Midwes and South are especially noted for the popularity of the game. Among fane, football on Satur day afternoon is a tradition Secondly, the U. of IHinois has Chicago and its beven million people.

A state school naturally han a strong identification number of its graduates (who are from the state) stay in the state, especially around the high population areas.

Pools of dollang
These pools of alumni, concentrated in the large Midwestern cities, axe the lifeblood of college football in that part of the country. They are the 52,000 at Illinois or the 100,000 at the Univeraity of Michgan. And each college in the Midwest has a large population area (full of graduates) from which to draw. Champaign, Ill. has Chicago 100 miles away; Ann Arbor, Mich. (University of Michigan) hag Detroit 20 miles away; South Bend, Ind. (Notre Dame) has Chicago 30 miles away, and on and on.

\section*{List of bruised Orange continues to grow}

By Craiz Weinstein In the British Navy, they call it "the butcher's bill"battle.
In college football they merely call it the injured list. Injuries are an ever present but sel dom discussed, aspect of college football which happens to every team

Rigid ankles, tautly wrapped elbows and knees, the masses of padding and bloodstained tape that is removed each Saturday, indicates the brutal nature of college football.

According to Syracuse Univeraity trainer Don Lowe, there are more injuries this year than last year. They just seem to run in a cycle. It's an unpredictable thing," he said.
"First it's the shoulders, then the knees," he added. Last year his gesson there are geven." Out for the geason due to nee injuries are linebacker Jim Collins, middle guard Bob Connolly, defensive back DeShawn Hawkins, running back Dave Lasko, defensive tackle Ron Richardson, and offensive guard Mike Rotunda. Defensive back Pete Prather, who injured his knee in a car accident, will be back, according to Lowe. Rotunda, a heavyweight wreatler, was operated on earlier this week. but ahould be ready for wrestling season. Richardison and Collins have redshirted (they will not play, even if able, to maintain a year's eligibility).

Here is the rest of the injury list to date, broken down (no pun intended) by category:

Femur: Brian Ishman, defensive back, out for the season.
Elbow: Dave Rettig, offengive guard, is returning.
Shoulder: Dan Dittmar, wing back, out for the season, Robinson, who has finally returned

And all of this is despite the fact players wrap themselves with yards of tape, like mummien, to prevent injuries.
Injuries juat happen. Lowe said. They have noth. ing to do with coaching techniques, or equipment. It's just bad luck."
According to Dr. Edmund Enos, a formex player who heada the biophysical education department at Concordia University in Montreal, "Injuries in college foothall have hit the epidemic stage. For most injuries the cure is simple: alap on some more tape," he has said.

Students" preference for career programs and the increasing number of specialized schools has led to the slight decline in enrollment in the College of Arts, and Sciences, according to Kenneth P. Goodrich, the college's dean.

Enrollment in Arts and Sciences has declined from 5,122 students in the fall of 1971 to 4,054 students in the fall of 1976 .

Goodrich said that five years ago students with education and social work majors were enrolled in the college for their freshman and sophomore yeara before transferring to their professional school. Now education and social work majors spend four years in their own schools, he asid.
"The profeasional achools are more career oriented and as a result this has led to the slight decrease in Arts and Sciences," Goodrich said.
Within the College of Arts and Sciences, psychology is the most popular major. In 1976, 118 studenta were graduated with peychology majorg, 104 were graduated with majors in biology and 85 graduates were political science majors.
"The popularity of psychology as a major owes to the fact that many high schools are now offering intro courses to psych as a social science requirement. Also, there are fine teachers in the undergraduate paychology program," said Rolif H. Monge, chairperson of the department.
"I chose paychology as a major because I am interested in seeing what makes people tick. I want to see the effects of the family and the environment on the decision-making process," remarked a sophomore.
The most popular dual major combinations within the paychology department were social aciences, with 28 graduates, and biology, graduating 24. "Dual majors with psychology are very populax." Monge said. "It's a relevant decision concerning medical zatiool admission, as in a dual in poychology and biology:
Arts and Sciences/communications is the most popular dual major, graduating 81 students. English and political science were the most common in the Public Communications dual major pregram. Lastyear 560 Arta and Sciences students graduated Consinued on page four

Both of us have taken drastic cuts in atipends. The cinema coordinator has gone from \($ 1,300\) last year to \($ 500\). The concert coordinator received \($ 2,200\) and free tuition two years ago. This is down to \($ 500\) this years ago. This is down to \($ 500\) this year. You'll find these cuts a little year. You'll find these cuts a deeper than in most stipends.

As to the point that the additional money comes out of generated income, this is true, but to say it will encourage corner cutting and profiteering is ridiculous. Cinemas and concerts will entertain almost 80,000 people this year. That means

Mr. Abernethy doubts the workload has doubled, we don't. Cinema has added four new film series this year (Cinema 007 , Skybarn, Shaw and the Summer Series), and will soon be cosponsoring a series with ing geven shows this semester, three years, let alone a single semester. We feel the students receive a lot more for the stipend dollar fromp the Cinema and Concert Boards than they do from other organizations whose officers receive higher stipends.

Believe us, if we had known that the assembly had to take up this issue, instead of us keeping it within spring. This new policy was just sprung on us, and we, thus, have no choice but to ask for the money at this time.

\section*{Burritos lose ima \\ By Norm Meyer}

Although few people realized it, the end of the aummer of 1977 gignalled the end of an era for country rock music. The Flying Burrito Brothers completed their farewell tour of clubs and disbanded. But they have now reformed under a new name and produced a new album, Sterra.

The reason for the lack of publicity and realization of the break-up is simple. The Bur* ritos were never a commercial success. They never had a hit single or album.

So, if the Burritos were not

Gram Parsons and Chris Ethridge formed the Burritos in 1969. Other band members were Sneeky Pete Kleinow, pedal steel guitar; Chris Hillman, rhythm guitar and vocals; and Popeye Phillips on drums.

Vocalist Parsons was the chief songwriter, along with Ethridge, who played bass. The Burritos went through three drummers for their first album, The Gilded Palace of Sin, before Michael Clàrke left Ethridge left the band in late 1969 and was replaced by another Dillard and Clark alumnus, Bernie Eeadon. The Burritos then recorded Burrito Deluxe, a fine followap to a Deiuxe, a fine followup to a good debut album. Both albums were praised by the critics, but radio stations and the public were unimpressed.

This lack of success led to Parsons" leaving the band. In the March 1, 1973 Folling Stone, Parsons gave his explanation of theobjectives and failure of the early Burritos: "I wanted to take the sweetness and the down home feelings of country music and create goose bumps, make a little catharsis, but it was all too frantic Everybody was trying too hard to prove to a lot of closeminded people that we could compete with Merie Haggard."

Parsons and Sneeky Pete, both ex-Byrds, were the heart and soul of the early Burritos. Parsons' vocals and Pete's talking/crying pedal steel complimented each other perfectty. But Parsons left, and although he recorded a couple of good solo alburns, he never achieved the fame hedeserved. He died on Sept. 19, 1973, at 26. His excellent voice and excessive life style made him a legend in his own time.
Although the band was never the same after Parsons left, the Burritos managed to stay around in various forms. The bands recorded five more albums, including the 1976 release, Airborne. Band members came and went (at least 20 musicians made up the seven different lineups). Some of the more notable Burritos and whó they played for before or after their stints with the band are: Hillman (Byrds; Manassas; Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young:
(Byrds, Firefall); Leadon (Linda Ronstadt; Eagles); Fick Roberts (Firefall); Al Perkins (Manassas; Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young): Byron Berline, Joel Scott Hill, Skip Battin (New Riders).

The last version of the Bur ritos never recorded an album. They decided the legacy of the Burritos had gone far enough. After the farewell tour ended this summer, "Sierra" + was born and the Burritos were no more.

Playing the bars and clubs this summer, the Burritos were cooking. In a small bar in Colden, N.Y., near Buffalo Sneeky Pete's pedal steel and Guilbeau's fiddle dominated the show, a tribute to country music in general and the old Burritos in particular.

Burrito fans looking for an extension of the old band in this new one will be disap pointed. Instead of country rock, Sierra is an American pop-rock album. Sneeky Pete's pedal steel licks are limited and in the background, and Guilbeau's energetic fiddle is in the closet. He is the designated rhythm guitar player on the album.
"Sierra" is not a bad record, but it is a shock to hear the but it is a shock to hear the Tower of Power brass section, Tower of Power brass section, strings and Cochran's sometimes scorching guitay instead of the pedal steel and fiddle.
The songwriting is mediocre at best and none of these guys can sing like Parsons, but who can?

Producer Felix Pappalardi does a fine job shoving the lyric hooks and melodies to center stiage, especially on the three best songs, "Gina," "Strange Here in the Night" and "You Give Me Lovin"."But as far as the rest of the album is concerned, it's been done many times before.

Sports and sex preferred by SU television watchers

By Jon Rabiroff
An informal survey was taken recently to find out what Syracuse University students were watching on television. The results showed a preference to shows with Howard Cosell and shows with sexual themes, but not necessexual themes, but sarily in that order.
"Charlie's Angel." captured the honor of being the mostwatched show, the survey found. When asked why he watched, one student said, "I like to look at their, well you. know." Indeed we do.

Another favorite was "Monday Night Football," which many dormitory males appear to make a weekly custom to see. Even nonfootball fans see. watch because they have a watch because they have a

Among female viewers, the family-type shows seem to be moat popular. They include "Eight is Enough," "One Day at a Time" and "Family," The latter apparently is watched to see how many tragedies can hit a family in one year. In the past two years the mother has gone through menopause and considered suicide, the father was almost blinded in a car accident, the oldest daughter was divorced and was the victim of an obscene phonecaller, the son married a girl who later died from cancer, and the youngest daughter was almost raped. This kind of realism is raped. This kind of realism is what makes groups of their TV sets on Tuesday nights-

\section*{courses}

By Mark Sullivan Each year SU adds courses of tis curriculum. This year 107 new courses were approved, ranging from Witchcraft to Chaucer to a music industry class. The proceses involved in setting up a new class is long and sometimes difficult.
The procedure usually begins on the departmental level when a teacher sugrests an idea to the department curiculum committee. A Curriculum Change Form is filed which explaing the class and which explaine its subject matter. It proposes a courge catalog description and any necessary. prerequisites. he form also provides in ormation on new faculty, new equipment, new library resources and estimated expenses of the class.
In the curriculum com. mittee, the proposed course is discoased and any suggestions, improvements and modifications regarding the course are made. A temporary ayllabus is established and boundaries for the teaching of the course are set up.
After the proposalleaves the Curriculam Committee it is pasped on to the College Committee and then to a subcommittee which diecugses the cormat and comtent of the orma
Before the proposal reaches the University Senate, the department committee examines several major factors concerning the "appropriaterness of the cotrse. The committee reviews the objectives - of the course and makes sure the catalog description is accurate and concise.
Also baken into connideration is the new course's relation to other classes offered by the university. A close check is made for aimilarity to other classes and the college makes sure that the department is best suited to each the class. For example a class in psychobiology could be taught by either the biology or psychology department. A ross listing, where a course is assigned both a peychology and biology mame pariogy number, may be in order.

Finally the approved courge proposal is submitted to the University Senate. The senate, composed of facalty, students and administrators, decides on the course's fate. It is either rejected or approved.

Should it be approved, some of the 22 copies of the report are gent to the regittrar's office, the course catalog, the Center for Inetructional Development, and those in chatrge of printing the time schedivie.

Any cisargeg that are approved too late to be listed in the time schedule are listed in the Record just prior to regietration.

"All The President"s Men" is a taut political thriller that apariles and tells the atory bekind one of the century's bigerest news stories.

Fell, everyone knows where. Like "Colombo," the intrigue in "All The President's Men" is not so much the end result as how Woodward and Eermatein get how Unlike "Colombor." however, the movie is totally factual, demonstrating that a flm can be hintorically accurate and still be entertaining- Deapite the presence of glamor boys Dobert Fediord. (Woodivard) and Dostin Hofirman (Bermstein), the firm is realigtic, a quality that can be traced to the stars fine per. formances as well as excellent direcion.
Director Alan d. Paknia ("The Sterile Cuckoo') succersfully captures the tension that gripped everyone assaciated with the Watergate affair from the tearful, Corcor-atricken secretaxiea at the Committee to Re-elect the President (CREEP) to Woodward and Bernastein thernselves.
Faced with alamming doors, hostility, veiled threats, layers of secrecy and akepticism from their editors, Woodward and Bernatein dogeredly pursue the story, interviewing scores of people and sifting through mounds of records. An overhead receding caumera shot of the duo searching through files in the Libirary of Congress effectively illustrates the immenaity of their task.
Woodstein's enomous tasic, and feel. are superbly captured by Paltula's eeris shote of Washingtoy late at night and at dawn. An Woodward strolls acroms a deaolate parking lot at dawn, after a meeting with prized source "Deep Throat" the viewer is struck by how alone and vulnerable the reporters are in their quest David Shire's hannting muaical Bcore enforces this mood.

Redford is perfectly cast as Woodward, the conservativeleaning, dapper and cautious reporter. Hoffrnan is equally suited to the part of Bernstein, the ultraceporter.
It's interesting to watch the friendship develop between this unlikely tearn. Early in the film, Bernstein fights to run a shaky story while Woodward urge more confirmation. Later, the roles are reversed in an argument over another story.

The excellent supporting cast features Jason Robards as Pont editor Ben Bradlee. Hal Holbrook as Deep Throat. Jack Warden as met ropolitan editor Harry Rosenfeld and Martin Balsam as manasing editor Howard Simons. Jame Alexander, as a CREEP bookkeeper, is also good in a amaller nole.
Robards shines in a role that earned him beat aupporting actor in the 1976 Academy Awards. Helends

"All The President's Men" is a film that packs history with a punch. It is an artistic and acting masterpiece about two men bucking incredible odds to expoge the political scandal of the century.
