The debate was over.
On Sunday morning, December 7, the United States was in the war. The long debiate between those calling for neutrality and those asking for a war declaration was aettled by the attack on Pearl Harbor
After that attack, one editorial said, "there was no such thing as a carefree activity" at Syracuae University. Social activities were set aside and students madesmall sacrifices. Women fretted over the loss of hairpins, curlers and permanent wave aolution 'for the doration.
Many faculty members had favored the war, petitioning Roosevelt to declare war on Germany and Italy. The DO responded by polling students' reaction to the move. Only 16.4 percent of the students wanted wair. This compared with the 20 per cent of midwesterners asking for war in a.national midwesterners asking for war in a.national TVy.
The DO ran a series of student suggestions for world peace. They were still running them on December 9, the day the paper carried reactions to the Japanese attack.
Ón campus, an Anti-Fagcist club was organized, but was not recognized by the administration. The year also had its more normal activities: 500 students signed a petition to play cards in the Student Cinion; coeds sought permissioin to wear slacks, and the DO reasoned that mixed cheerlleading would not be in bad taste as the Dean of Women had maintained.
Other traditions got out of hand Chancellor Graham threatened explusion of any students participating in class rivalery pranks. Several Sime Hall freshman had at sophomores during the Holy Cross foot at sophomores during the Holy Cross foot all game.
"In times like these" an advisor anid, freshmen should realize they have mor than ordinary responsibility in being privileged to study at a tniversity."

Approximately 500 University students enrolled in the army enlisted reserve will receive orders to report for active duty starting Saturday, Feb. 27, and continuing through Wednesday, March 3, it was announced yesterday by A: Blair Knapp, armed forces representative for the University, after he had received an official army release from Lt . Col. Elliot N. Baldwin, head of the enlisted reserve within the second service command.
Announcement of the dates duxing which army enlisted reservists within the limits of the second service command would be called to duty was the first such statement made by officials at the command's headquarters in New York city.

Two Weeks to Prepare
The orders will in nearly all cases give the reservists about two weeks between the receipt of orders to report for active duty and the date on which they must report at their respective reception centera, according to Col. Baldwin.
On this basis, members of the army enlisted reserve corpsat Syracuse will beable to qualify for war service class standing grades for the semester, granting them as valid grades in each subject as they would otherwiae receive if they were to continue in college until May, Dean Knapp said.
At present there are 581 Syracuse students in this branch of the armed forces reserves. About 100 of these students are classined as pre-medical, pre-dental, pre-veterinanian, or call until the completion of the current semester.

Some to Be Deferred
The defermeñt is based on the original enligted reserve plan as announced last December. Just how many of the reservisti will be considered deferred will depend upon the inter pretation placed on this clause by army authorities of the seond command

Beginning next Monday, each member of the army enlisted reserve will receive a petition form through the mail from the dean of men's office, which he is to fill out and return at the earliest possible date. These petitions for the purpose of ob taining war service class standing grades will be held by the dean of men pending receipt of induction orders by each reservist.

\section*{Recollections Happy Days in the Age of Anxiety}

\section*{By David H. Bennett}

For former staff members, the occasion of the seventy-fifth anniversary of The Daily Orange will evoke memories of their own years on the paper. For me the earliest recollections are of the prefab behind Yates Castle - long ago demolished to make way for a wing of the medical school - where as a freshman in worked on an earlier anriversary I worked on an ear issue of the DO.
In many ways, those years of the fifites in many ways, thorld. Syracuse was were a ding from a post-war period of emerging from a post-war period of physical disarray. The faculty bemoaned physical craduation of the last of the students on the G.I. Bill, who had brought a unique kind of experience and brought a unique kind of experience and intensity to undergradrained the school's facilities and spawned the temporary facilities and spawned the temporary structures that sprouted everywhere o structures the campus. But, Syracuse was becoming the campus. But, Syacuse was a a true University and no longer a college with a small graduate school in those days. And for many at the school those days. And for many at the opportunities seemed abundant.
Demographers now remind us that it was a small age cohort teaching college then, and, of course, career choices would appear almost unlimited in a growing population and economy, quite a different situation than the one which confronts so many students today For Syracusans as for other American some twenty years ago, there seemed to be good reason for optimism.

Still, the nostalgia merchants of the media who celebrate these years in film and T.V. programs today do disservice to the past. Because for many, of course, these were not mercly "Happy Days". these were not merely "Happy Days", filled with the sureties and certainties of life in a dominate nation and a confident collegiate generation. Before those liberating social developments of the next decade, some would be denied "opportunities", others would pay a very heavy price to achieve them. It was no called the age of anxiety for nothing.
Since those years, the University and the nation have changed in many ways. In the sixties, Syracuse became a stronger university in a nation in which universities had achieved growing influence andamporiance. But, the social upheavais which racked the country made a deep impression here; no one who was part of the University community in 1970 for example will community in 1970, for example, wil forget the great strike and its implications. And yet, many recent undergraduates, caught up in new challenges and confronting a different set of problems, look back in wonder at set of problems, look back in wonder a those times, and doubt if such passionate politics of confrontation

From the fifties to the present represents only a fraction of the history of the University, and a small part of the continuing life of The Daily Orange. But, even this relatively brief period represents a radically changing pambience at Syracuse and in the nation Yet, across those years, there are some continuities and for students who worke at different times on its staff, the DO

\section*{A Time of Upheaval:}

\section*{By Charles Babcock}

If you asked how the Daily Orange covered the news in 1968, one answer mmediately comes to mind.
The president of the American Bar Association came to SU that year and issued a call for "a rebirth of civil obedience." abedience."
The Daily Orange reported this as a call for a rebirth of "civil disobedience." This is not how the DO habitually covered stories (although its critics thought that it was) and in this case. the mistake was of such heroic proportions that it struck me as exemplary.
The war in Vietnam was mounting and all about us we vaguely sensed we were witnessing a decline in common sense and civil authority. Something more rudimentary was going to take their place. What seemed to evolve, to us at least, was a series of fire fights between student radicals and everyone else, from the President of the U.S. to the director of food service.

Whether it was the riot at Columbia University or the demands of black students, the question always forced upon us was where did our loyalties lie? We were reporting the facts, but which body of fact received front page display, follow up coverage and editorial support?

As the war became more cruel, our sympathies shifted more and more to the did, we enlist in the challenge?
Thus it wasn't surprising the good lawyer's appeal fell on deaf ears. Our reporter may have missed the point, but so had he.

Ten years later it is hard to explain how an error comes to represent the emper of the times or how we could be so Ear away from those times today.
Dick Gregory also came to the campuis in 1968 and called America "the filthiest. most insane nation on earth." This was reported without any particular enthusiasm, as 1 recall, but it didn's strike any of us as unusual that e'd make such a statement.
Now we have had a chance to witness the racism of the victorious Vietnamese for their indigenous Chinese. We have hosted a family of "boat" people for 12 days and found no signs of a privileged caste to them; quite the opposite. Yet something prompted them to set sail for a destination they could never reach on their own. I wouldn't be so sure the U.S. had any special claim on mass insanity.
Still, 1968 and 1969 were disorienting years. Martin Luther King was killed in Today students are given the first issue of a daily college paper devoted to their interest and to the growth of Syracuse," the opening editorial read.

The small four page tabloid carried the first cartoon run in a college newspaper. (See page 31). It cost newsents \($ 2.50\) to subscribe for issues appearing Tuesday through Saturday. The paper soon took its first quarters near campus in the "red barr"at at soc Croton Ave. that was part of the Captain Raynor's civil war era estate. Today, Sadlerand

The DO quickly realized one of its objectives with the opening of the Orange Publishing Corporation-one of the first student owned and operated printshops in the country. The company was founded with a capital investment of \($ 1,200\).

During the next two and a half years the publishing corporation kept the \(D O\) out of debt with its other printing jobs. The Orange did so well that in 1908 it bult a permanent two story concrete building opposite the steps of Archbold stadium. (See picture steps of Arch

Unfortunately, the buildings cost of \($ 15,000\) was too much for the young printing company. Mrs. Benjamin Copeland relieved the DO's embarass the financial problems to come. The DO existed on advertising and voluntary student subscription. It used a great deal of space pleading for subscriptions.

By 1912 the DO was several thousand dollars short and only had the support of 700 students out of a total population of 3,000 .

At the end of the 1913 school year the Athletic Governing Board saved the paper from folding (See page 14)The board realized the importance of the school spirit. The DO even provided school spirit. The DO even provided a in HL.

It was a short marriage. Every issue of the paper continued to lose money. Subscription drives repeatedly failed. In 1918 the governing board gave up in 192.
In 1921 the DO dramatically printed its front page obituary and closed its doors. The subscription drive \(h\) its doors. The subscription drive had one week.

The Senior Council and the DO decided to ask students to vote on a regular \($ 2.50\) subscription tax to be levied on all students. It passed by a 7 to 1 majority and the
DO proudly announced that it was safe for posterity.
 It took two world wars to get women in positions of responsibility on the DO.
World War 1 and the great Spanish flu epidernic left women in charge. but, it was not until just prior to editor-in-chief. (See page 38). The editor-in-chief. (See page 38). The women's staff had been abolished int 1933.

Everyone always remembers the excitement surrounding "scoops" and extra edit 1904 when 1904 when Carnegie donation for the library was announced. On January 11. 1937 the DO beat out the downtown papers with its extra on the Lyman fire. Eye witness accounts filled the front page.
Colgate for the firs Orange beat Colgate for the first time in 14 years the DO issued an extra with a press run of 30,000 copies to be mailed to alumni all over the world. "As the goal posts came splintering down, a small staff raced across the street to the Orange Pub. Co. Everything was set but the lead story.
With the end of WWIl thousands of vets swelled enrollment at SU. "Even the DO got a shot in the arm, recalls Bill Edson. It became quite a sheet in those days staffed with writers and editors of a hundred service publications and civilian papers the veterans of Stars and Stripes, the Mid-Pacifican and Yank. (The DO) pasted the Veterans Administration when the almighty checks were late, it told off the city council about the lack of traffic safety measures at Hill int sections, and it brought the Board of Health down on Marshall Street restaurants.

The DO celebrated "so Fabulous Years" in 1953 with the largest DO of that time, a 44 page broadsheet. The DO's broadsheet was wider than the standard New York Times' size.

The year before the DO had burst" upon the national political scene during the 1952 presidential elections during the 1952 prestdential elinating Pogo, the possum prophet to be the 34th President.
Walt Kelley's Pogo was the most Walt Kelley's Pogo was the most flipped his character's mishapen beaver hat into the ring. The paper was caught in the swirl of dust that resulted.

After receiving a "simple 34 letter" from the amazing Mr. Kelly, the DO broke out in a Banner headline on May 1, 1952; "Daily Orange Supports May 1, 1952; "Daily, Orange Supports
Walt Kelly in 5,000 students greeted Wals Kelly in Archbold Stadium. "1go Pogo buttons were everywher staff was unsure about the weat staff was unsure about the weather: Pogo predicted, "possible rainbows.

At the time the DO worked out of a pre-fab, on the Yaters Castle grounds. In 1953 the civil war era castle was ordered demolished by the university to make way for the med school. The DO was forced to move.
The journalism school was a much more informal and smaller school. The students were known as the 'Kastle Kids' and Dean Clark and the publication's board picked the editor-in-chief who ruled over a staff of close to hundred editors and junior editors. Duties were closely linked to class ranking and there were frequent tryouts even for the reporter positions. The paper also had an advisor, who for many years was also the director of Public Relations for the university. During the '50's the DO won AllAmerican ratings - the highest from the Associated Collegiate Press Association. In 1977 the paper received the award as well as being a medalist in the Columbia Journalism Association.
In 1954 the DO was the victim of an elaborate and well executed prank. The Cornell Daily Sun made up a phony DO and distributed it at SU in the place of that day's DO.
Dick Schapp, who now does sports for NBC-TV news in New York. recalled the incident: "It was a very elaborate thing. If we put as much work into that thing as our school work we'd all be Phi Beta Kappa's.

After 24 years, the \(D O\) has yet to repay the Cornell Daily Sun for its generosity.
After the 50 's collegiate iournalism be came more serious. Toward the end of the 60 's the changes in the world outside could no longer be ignored and there was an urgent seriousness with college students. The DO reported it, and, sometimes instigated it. For the first time there was a radical change in how the DO saw ts role on campus.
For years the DO saw itself as something a choreographer of a long dance line; it was important everyone have spirit and no one.be out of line.
From the earliest issues the DO promoted college sings and criticized students when attendance at football rally's was low. Each new building was given great fanfare and citied as evidence that SU was on the way

Sports was the rallying point and it was always on the front page. Only in 1928 with the creation of the sports editor, was it recognized as being something other than news being something other than news
Like a choreographer, the DO attacked anything that would hinder a good pertormance. There were always causes. In the first year, 1903, the DO succeeded in getting library hours extended. In the late 30 's the
DO pleaded with students to care DO pleaded with students to care 50's the campaigned for safe driving and maintaining acadernic freedom during the red scare. Food service, housing and the lack of a Student Union have been petennial topics.
In the late 60's the skirmishes over campus issues, became border wars over issues that were dividing the country. It was an "us and them" mentality. Choreography was out in an era of "do your own thing.
The student strike of the 1969 school year brought it all to a school year brought it all to a

Sam Hemmingway, after being chosen Sam Hemmingway, after being by the board of Publications said by the board of Publications said he wanted to make the radical, but very activist.

In the student strike of that spring when school was shut down the DO became a central actor
As Hemmingway recalled: "We knew we were risking the paper by our strong support of last spring's strike. But we had to be honest we were on strike too. During those two weeks the staff got very close to each other. We printed 10 issues in 11 days, and that meant most of us had to practically live in the DO office 24 hours a day.
As a result of the DO's support the strike, the adrninistration took away the Summer DO and declined to back up the DO when it was sued for libel.
The libel suit had been the last straw. The administ ration refused to defend the paper, despite its obligation to the constitution of the board of publi cations. The administration's nexi move was to elect Larry Kramer editor of the DO. At the same time, the DO countered and elected its own editor, Paula Fabian, through the newly established Student Board of Publications. In a front page editorial the DO called the Kramer a pawn of the central administration who were trying to take over the paper.
"If we have to we'll physically stop the administration from installing a editor the students have not elected. Students pay \($ 45,000\) for the DO. not the administration." Hemmingway said. The student's selection ultimately prevailed when denis selicion board picked Fabian over Kramer. The DO pind the lawyer settled the case out of court.

Whether it was in 1903. or during WWII or the student strikes, the DO has also always sought "to unify the interests of all Syracuse colleges," just as Irving Templeton wrote in the first issue. The interpretations have voal.
That is the way the DO has been for 75 years, since September 15, 1903 when the first issue was delivered on campus. It was the same year the Ford Motor company was founded and the Wright Brothers flew for a few seconds over Kitty Hawk. Planes may be supersonic, an may be the backbone of our economy, but the DO has remained the same: always an organized chacs of energy that produces a daily paper, always coming before classes. To steal some words from Paul Simon. the DO is "still cramy after all these years."

to find a name. And in October 1971 . to find a name. And in October 1971, we started a new newspaper
The Daily Orange.
We could be celebrating the seventh anniversary of the Daily Heisler or the Daily Monday (and Tuesday and Wednesday) or any of a dozen names Barbara Beck and I kicked around-and out-that first weekend before our debut.

The safe answer-comfortably hidden behind memory's alterations-would be that as smart businesspeople, we called the new paper The Daily Orange oo take advantage of all those boxes of stationery. It wasn't that way at all. In what came to be the pattern of leadership at the new DO, whatever \(!\) iiked, Barbara rejected. Whatever Barbara suggested, I ignored. And Jayson Stark, impartial party and super editor, saw merit in either direction. Hed be a terror in a Lite Beer

\section*{commercial.}

Besides, we juniors were starting a newspaper and didn't have time to devote to something as trivial as its name (we put classes in the same category). Finally, we Wanted to keep the good nam of The Daily Orange for its meaning in the community-and among potential the community-and among potential advertisers-while we built a paper within its shell. That's what Syracuse University's leading journalists deserved for putting us in charge.
And here's how that happened:

On the cusp between Aquarius and apathy, somewhere just beyond revolution and before resignation. The Daily tion and before resignation. The Daily Orange belonged to Syracuse University. Each year the paper's operating rash came from university-controlled funds-as they say on ledger sheetsand the university played a role in selecting its editor.
That would never do in 1971 . The Donal jounge was the home of perwhich reporters made the value choices for readers and left little room for both sides of a story. That too would never do in 1971 ,

When students were making value choices left and right. Weekly magazines called Promethean and Dialog also sought publication money from the university and, when the university decided to withdraw its responsibility (and liability) for the Daily Orange from the Student Association. It is not surprising that personality SA-decision to serap the papers and pay for so issues of a five-day, genuine. four-star newspaper for the campus. After that, the new product would have to face a student vote of confidence before it could receive subscription money-$3 per student for the year.
Unable to work together, and perhaps sensing that their struggle to control campus news was coming to an end, senior editors of the three publications told me l'd learn to love Barbara as managing editor and asked us to put out a newspaper
We walked into the office Friday. The first paper was due Tuesday. We had no printing contracts, no reporters, no editors, and a dozen broken typewriters. It's a good thing no one told us we couldn't do it. It's also a good thing we had the help of many writers and editors who cared about the community and recognized how slender a thread holds a newspaper to its readers.
Only parts of that first week stay with ne: Deciding on the graphic appearance of the paper took more time than decidiag on what should go into it. We ran our birth notice on page one, along with the first of many stories from off-campus Syracuse. We called the former publications a "triad." It was a poor choice of headlines.

Larry Kramer and I ran the final pages up East Genesce Street to Manlius Publishing, where George C. Wortley III, our printer, stayed up with us until w got everything right. Then came the first of our \(4 \mathrm{a} . \mathrm{m}\). visits to Abe's Doughnuts, and Abe, with those soda-bottle eycglasses and a sense of SU history, gave us chocolate glazes and coffee on the house.

The next morning, I received my only word of warning, from Henry Sehulte, dean of the journalism school: "You can kiss your Phi beta Kappa key good-bye. The next week, Barbara and I failed a class assignment because we were lateit was supposed to teach us the meaning of deadlines. If we missed a DO deadline of deadlines. If we missed a DO deadline we had to oay for overtime. We professors began asking if we had dropped their courses.
And some things never changed: Bob Herzog covering another football season and making us care. Nervous freshmen coming into the office to learn about writing becoming editors themselves ong after we were gone. Editorial meetings terminated by an attack of gisgles or an attack on policy. The constant effort to get more space for news, more space for features, more space for poetry, more space for blacks indians, graduate students, commuters Republicans, administrators and other minorities. Delivering newspapers in the snow.
It's important to understand the break in the 75 -year-line of Daily Oranges. Created at a time when institutions wer distrusted, the DO put authority in the hands of its workers. At a time of cornmunity organization, DO reporters listened to Syracuse and its university. And whether it is 75 years old or seven, the \(D O\) now renews itself every year as an independent, student-run business. It depends on the continued support of its readers and advertisers. It is subject to the same pressures as any independent newspaper-although the May 8th coalition never staged a sit-in at the New York Times to discover "where the editor's revolutionary head was at." If you close your eyes, it is almost the real world
Maybe we took ourselves more seriously, that first year, than we took the events around us. Campus life, after all was just part of a too-short time for learning. Maybe that's why readers enjoyed the DO that year, and figured it was a bargain at \($ 3\), as we figured out how to make things work by splashing our mistakes on the front page. It was almost the real world.
And yet, the satisfaction of sitting on that second-story porch with my feet on the rail, in my three-piece go-to-citycouncil suit and brown wingtips, sipping a bourbon while I watched Barbara puff ferociously on a cigar to stimulate the was worth all the early-morning doughnuts and missed Phi Beta Kappa keys. If i'm not careful, IU spend the rest of my career trying to find it again.

SAMUEL I. NEWHOUSE and his Communications Center

\section*{22 New Buildings, Chair Endowments, Renovations Planned}

\section*{By BEV LURRIA}

A \($ 15,000,000\) gift to Syracuse University by Samuel I. Newhouse inaugurates an eight-year centennial campaign for \($ 76,250,000\), SU Chancellor William P. Tolley announced today.
1970, the university's centennial year, is target date for completion of the fund-raising program, formally known as the Syracuse Plan.
The \($ 15,000,000\) Newhouse gift, Cbancellor Tolley said, will be for the development of "the world's largest and most advanced study center in mass communications.'
This gift includes \($ 2,000,000\) given by Newhouse in January 1960 for construction of the first building in the Newhouse Com1960 for construction

"Mr. Newhouse's contribution, pl us other advance gifts, has given the university a major start toward its centennial goal," the chancellor noted.
Dr Tolley also said, "While still below the university's projected \($ 144,000,000\) total capital and endowment needs, the \($ 76,250,000 \ldots\) will permit the university to maintan its position as a graduate and an undergraduate institution of high quality."
Of the \($ 76,250,000\) SU hopes to raise by \(1970, $ 54,100,000\) will be for new construction and moderraization and \($ 22,150,000\) for endowment, fellowships and scholarshipis.
In addition to the Newhouse gift, the university has already recieved other contributions toward the centennial program. The SU Parents Association has donated over $120,000 to date for a new student health center and infirmary. While this aum will not be part of the centennial program, the remainder of the \($ 350,000\) pledged by the nssociation will be included in the Plan.

When questioned, the other tenants said that they did not object.

Two months later, the Daily Orange surveyed 188 freshmen. The DO murye found only 12 percent ad. mitted to racial prejudice (24 of 288) and they found no diacrimination on campus.

But discrimination existed. Three weeks after the DO Suree weeks after, Lambda Chi Alpha survey, Lambity withdrew a pledge fraternity withdrew a pledge after learning that the pledge was Jewish. Interfraternity Council President Thomas Kigalli gaid, "You have a right to be prejudiced. Sure you are a bigot, but you're a bigot by choice.

The campus media also began to change. WAER-FM radio station purchased a new 90 -foot broadcasting tower for \($ 10,000\) that in creased their power from -1000 to 3500 watts. After gitting the tower on top of Day Hall, they joined the

The SU campus underwent some major phyaical changes. Huntington:Beard Crouse Hall and Manley Fieldhouse were formerly dedicated in 1962. Bids were taken for the construction of Haven Hall, one of 22 new buildinge SU had on its drawing board.
Some of the 22 new buildings which have yet to be built include a \($ 1.5\) million Center for Behavioral Sciences; a \($ 1.5\) million Maxwell Center for Public Affairs; a School of Architecture costing \($ 1.0\) million; and towards the end of the long list was a \($ 3.0\) milion allotiont union.

\section*{Looking Back at 1964} by Tracy Lynn
The times were as rigid as the girls' A-line skirts which clung tightly to the hips and swung down alightly below the knee. It was a time when morality was as clearly defined as the neat crew cuts that adorned varsity men. brinking was out, completely forbidden on campus, and sexuality was contained in a hint or fragrance, but never in a gesture. Political opinion was as conservative as the dress code, : and it was no surprise when The Daily Orange endorsed a Republican senatorial candidate over the young upstart from Massachusetts, Robert Kennedy. It was a year when S.I. Newhouse, and fifteen million dollars, realized the dream of aspiring young journalists with the first operating year of the new journalism school. Of course there were demonstrations. But unlike the previous year, when students. picketed for racial equality, the protests of 1964 sues, including the length of Christmas vacation. Due to an administrator's error, Monday, Jannary 4, had been slated for classes. Despite the chancellor'a assertion that "this is not an important issue," hundreds of students kept a noisy vigil outside his home. (The noise, by the way, was permissable during the demonstration due to the foresight of the university senate which had repealed an anti-noise ordinance the day before.) The warm and loving parent-child-like relationship between administrators and students was somewhat marred by the sound of 4,000 students booing Chancellor Tolley's statement that students were important at Syracuse University, but not all-important. "In the univer: sity family, hearing is given to alumni, parents, trustees, deans, faculty, and'students," he said.
Despite the protest, the loving atmosphere continued at the university, creating one of the most publicized sex-scandals in campus history. Eight Syracuse students were suspended for violation of the university rules regarding drinking and morality. The students had been drinking in a uni versity cottage during the broadcast of the Boston College football game. Later, after converging down at the Orange, the group returned to campus housing, where one of the group reportedly had sexual relations with a girl. In a Daily Orange editorial September 28,1964 , the editor expressed indignation over expressed lapses of moral character: "Seven of the eight were freshman men. Because of a few seemingly harmiess of a few seemingly harmiess drinks, some may never return to college. Others will go to college. Others will go through school with a black mark on their record. The other mark on their record. The other was a giri. We can commentno further on the tragedy of this seemingly educated human It
It was little wonder that the campus students sublimated normal sexual drives into remzied athletic spirit Syracuse was the training ground for many excellent athletes, including Floyd Little, a three-time All-American running back during: 64 -66 seasong. He led the university to the Sugar Bowl in 1964, to the Sugar Bowl in 1964, deferted by the ISU Bengale. But not by the jut Bengale But not even defeat could stop the Orange pack. \section*{8 SUSPENDED} IN MORALITY CASE ON HILL Alcohol, Sex Involves Seven Men, One Girl

DAVID SOSNA
Eight Syracuse University students have been suspended by university personnel deans in a case involving violations of university rules on drinking and morality, the Daily Orange learned" Friday.

The eight included seven freshman men and one upperclass woman, who were involved in the incident in a university cottage Saturday, Sept. 19.

According to Daily Orange sources, at least three of the men had been drinking in the cottage during the broadcast of the Boston College football game. Following the broadcast, the group met the others and the girl, presumably in the Orange, local S. Crouse avenue bar.
From the bar, the group returned to the cottage, where one of the group reportedly had relations with the girl. Sources claimed the other six were in the room at the time.

The seven men and the girl left soon after, due to pressure from other members of the cottage.

Three of the seven lived in the cottage, while the other four lived in larger university dormitories, according to sources.

\section*{Deans Evade Confirmation}

Dean of Men Jim G. Carleton, speaking to the Daily Orange earlier Friday, said seven freshmen had been suspended in a disciplinary case for "violations of regulations including the rule in regard to the possession and consumption of alcoholic beverages."
Carleton stated that further violations were involved, but would not elaborate.
Carleton at no time indicated that the seven were suspended in the circumstances described above.

Dean of Women Marjorie C. Smith confirmed that one girl had been suspended in a recent case but would not elaborate.

The most gevere penalty issued by the dean of men's office was one indefinite suspension. The minimum penalty was a one-semester suspension. Carleton explained the penalty for each student depended on the degree of involvement in the incident.

Student Court did not have any part in the case, it was revealed by Franklin Richmond, chief justice of the court. Carleton explained that the case was not within the court's jurisdiction.

Richmond explained that the court has no jurisdiction in the cases involving "psychological disturbances as deemed by the dean of men or dean of women, occurences when school is not in session, moral conduct, academic dishonesty and women's curfews."

The suspensions mark one of the most sweeping disciplinary actions in recent years by the university. Student-Court suspended a student for three years in December for numperous violations of university rales. A December for numerous violations of univergity raies. A year previously a student received a two-year suspension for vilations of university and civil codes.

On November 4, 1965 WAFR came out with its first on-theair editorial supporting the policies concerning the Viet nam war. Later that year, 3000 students signed a petition agreeing with WAER's agreeing with WAER conservative calm before the late 60's radical storm. The petition was presented in Waghington, by the DO editor in-chief and other campus leaders.
A DO editorial stating "The war in Vietnam has put increasing pressures on American students either to demonatrate why they should aot be fighting or to join thei line in a mize up country ine in a mixed up country, dle of the road attitude towards dle of the
But the Vietnam war was only beginning to hit high on students' priority list. Allowing undergraduates to have cars on campus, the: posSibility of a co-ed Mount Olympus, a 41 inch snow storm and the activities of a two party student government kept students busy that year.
The Women's Student Government fought with Dean of Women, Marjorie Smith over who should determink curfew hours. Hours wer finally extended to 2 a.m. on Friday and Saturday and mid. night on Sunday for upperclass coeds. It was liberal for SU, but anti-deluvian in the age of mini akirts and go-go girls.
Architecture students were the most vocal in protesting Maversity problems. On "Two-day"' students started a whose stated purpose was to "upgrade the image of architecture."
The students called for the hiring of an assiatant acadernic dean, an effective creation of a modularteaching manual, (abook contrining all the basic information in \(s\) course) and a code of ethics.

Students also complained about food service when 35 students suffered from food students suffered from food poisoning after

Withing 36 hours thestorm, which has alreadybeen labelled the Blizzard of ' 66 , had dumped 41 inches of blowing, drifting enow Syracuse and turned the city into a ghost town
Sunday, only five city buses and a handful of taris and cars were still operating. Streets were clogged with stranded autos and knee-deep drifts. The airport was closed and the Thruway from Albany to the Pennsylvania line was shut down.
The storm, less than 12 hours old, forced Registrar Edwin Smith to cancel Monday's scheduled registration and move it back a day, to begin Tuesday.
Half a dozen buildings and grounds personnel reached campus and labored futily most of the day to clear a small patch at the back entrance' to the Hall of Languages.
At first, as with all disasters, the unrelenting blizzard was a novelty; it was different. People clung together in dorms, talked, watched the snow and listened to the wind howl. Gusts up to 60 m.p.h. swirled chin-deep drifts around campus buildings.

South Crouse Ave., accidentally ploughed once or twice, was the only street in the area suitable for walking. Students that remained for intersession began filtering out of their dorms and pushed slowly toward Marshall Street for their Sunday night meal.
The Red Barn, the Arcade, the Pizza King and Cosmo's served the few that trickled in; they ate in silence.
Sunday night, 100 baggage-laden students were deposited and marooned at the train station in East Syracuse. After several desperate phone calls they slumped into seats and onto the floor.
The snow kept falling and the wind kept howling. City ploughs were ealled in off the streets at midnight. The Department of Public Works said the situation was hopeless.
Radios told University personnel to use pablic transportation if they absolutely had to come to their offices Monday. All University parking lots were closed and drifts had made it inm possible to enter some doorways.
By Monday noon the joke had worn itself to a thin edge. Food was suddenly running short; stiff joints got stiffer; the novelty was transformed into plain inconvenience.
Shaw, Kimmel and Graham dining halls were the only onesto "Ren for Monday lunch and served only meager portions, Rationing," the ladies said.
Vending machines had been emptied the night before.
The Arcade and the Fizza King opened Monday but the Arcade closed at \(1: 30\) p.m. the food having been sold. Students wondered where they would get another meal.
The registrars office announced at 2 p.m. that registration would be postponed again, aetting Wednesday as the hopefil date. Later, after advisories from the weather bureau predicted up to 50 inches, registration was moved up to today.
Students trickled into what had been declared a disaster area. Some walked, others crawled along Route 5 against police orders slaloming among abandoned cars. Tuesday night thestorm that had ravaged the city tapered off and now the tedious process of "the big dig" is under way.

For years they chafed under a system of higher education they felt was inadequate to their needs and irrelevant to the lives they sought to lead. For years, through various groups, they quietly sought redress from an administration which seemed unwilling to break its silence on the full range of their problems.

Friday the black students of Syracuse University broke the silence themselves-
They inarched to the front steps of the Administration Building at 2:30 p.m. carrying a banner that read, "We've got to make it, baby," and reciting a series of chants that expressed the purpose of the demonatration, called to let the university community know that the members of six black student sroups had come together-to confront the administration and seek a meaningful reaponse.

The apokesman informed Dr. Piakor that they wanted a meeting with him and Chancellor William P. Tolley to discuss their problems. They expressed their demand in a press release:

The gross inadequacies of Syracuse University to the needs of its diverse Black student body can no longer be tolerated by said students on this campus. Throughout the history of Syracuse University the concerns of Black atudents Syracuse thime has come for meaningful and teaponsible manner. There are responsible concerns about which dialogue with the Chancellor is urgently needed.

"We have therefore gathered here to request again the meeting with Chancellor Tolley and Vice Chancellor Pissor
After a brief meeting in Dr. Piskor's office, the Vice Chancellor accompanied the six spokesman outside and addressed the assembled demonstrators from the steps of the building.
I express my deep concern about your problema and say hat I want to hear everything you want me to hear, directly and peraonally," Dr. Piskor said.

The noycott of classes is over. Approximately 6000 SU students chose not attend classes yesterday. Dormitory autonorny has been granted. After six hours of deliberation between students and administrators, eight other demands of the Students for a.Better University, were met to the satisfaction of the student leaders.

Also attending the talkswas Dr. Michael O. Sawyer from the Maxwell School, who said, "I'm enormously plessed with the student leaders involved.
the effect of the boycott on the talks, he commented, "It helped dramatize the tured at. Sawyer guest lec tured at three dormitories dur ing the day.
\(\operatorname{Jim}\) G. Carleton attributed the success of the negotiations to "responsible student lesderohip." However when asked about the boycott, he said, "It's impossible to evaluate the success of the boycott. Although many students stayed away from class, the real success of the boycott lies in what they were doing while they were out of class."

II p.m. -The Administration Building was occupied for some 32 hours. The Syracuse Police Department had shown an alarming lack of punctuality thus far. The bust was supposed to corne at 7:30 a.m. yeaterday morning. Phone calls were placed all over campus at 5 a.m. The baricades were manned, and the buildings's 75 occupants braced for the attack. The cops never came.
At 4:05 p.m., a weary and worried Chancellor announced to the Syracuse media that "a temporary restraining order has been obtained with regard to people sitting in th administration building.'
The building had been occupied since 3 p.m. Thursday by students demanding \($ 100,000\) for the Black Panther Defense Fund. Those in the building regarded the demand as non-negotiable. Corbally spoke briefly with students about the demand on Thursday. Speaking yesterday, however, he said that "I don't believe there are such things (as non-negotiable cussed the issue since then."
The Chancellor stated that he thought a majority, rather han the usual minority, was behind the strike. But, he added, "I think outsiders are playing a part, but the strike is not the total product of outside people."
Finally, at 5:15 p.m., The Man arrived. Police Chief Thomas Sardino, accompanied by a representative of the university's law firm, administration, and a police photographer with a videotape camera.
The troupe moved to the tairs in themiddle of the main hallway. There, the lawyer began reading the injunction over a bullhorn. As he spoke the pig photographer panned the crowd. According to lawyers, such photographs can be used as evidence in obtaining Bubpeonas against unidentified sit-ins.
The temporary court order, signed by Dean David Tatham and Vice President John Honey, cited a plaintiffs "Ronald. Ashford, Jeffrey Danna Bein, Louis Schultz and others whose names are unknown, acting individually and in concert," The defen dants are charged with llegally occupying the com puter center and the ad ministration building.
The lawyer reading the injunction said that the university was giving the students a onehour "grace period" in which to clear the building.

People standing immediately around the steps clenched fist ailent cheer. As feelings and desires thinned out towards the rear of the crowd, these salutes were not in evidence.
The background on what he called "the Cambodian thing" was given by Dr. OliverClubb esid He decried Nixan' Asia ex pert. He decried Nixon's "new comar bv military means."

Directly concerning the SU campus strike came word Mon day night that the Maxwell school had called on its individual professors to decide he action to be taken regard ng holding classes. The Max well Graduate Student As-

Hichard Nizon had received the editorial praige of his nebulous, nefarious majority for successful defusing the isViet or atadent unreat and Vietnam protest. The former he handled by vilifying leaders, impuning motives, and unleashing the misdirected energies of his vicepresident charged with keeping the dogs of dissent from snapping at the heels of His Majesty. The latter, from Mobilization to Moratorium, was met with diffident ignoral in a sort of tongue-stuck-out-1-dare-you manner of diplomacy. The strike, the march Saturday, and the very real issues raised Monday by a quiet 4000 people will not allow this double barrelled rumning from problems to continue. If that is all that comea of the Strike, then well be on to something that will change the course of American political thinking for years to come. - May 5, 1970

Vietnam armistice due Saturday, ending longest war in US history

As of noon yesterday, the Vietnam War is over.
In a 10 p.m. televised epeech President Nixon announced, "we today have concluded an agreement to end the war and bring peace with honorin Viet nam and in Southeast Asia."
The formal statement read gimultaneoualy the United States and special advisor Le Duc Tho on behalf of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam.
The cease fire will take effect at 2400 Greenwich Mean Time Jan. 27, 1973. The United States and the Democratic Republic of Vietnam expressed the hope that this agreement Will ensure a stable peace in Vietnam and contribute to the preservation of lasting peace in Indochina and Southeast Asía.

According to Nixon, an internationally supervised cease fire will begin at 7 p.m.

Saturday, Washington time. Within 60 days of that date, all Americans held prisoner of we throughout Indochina will be released. The President added, "there will be the fullest possible accounting for all of those who are missing in action.'
During this same 60 day period, all American forces remaining in South Vietnam Alo withdrawn
According to President Nixon, the settlement "meets the goals and has the full support" of President Thieu and the government of the Republic of South Vietnam. Headded that the United States "will continue to recognize the government of the Republic of Vietnam as the sale legitimate government of South Vietnama."

Saying that "ending the war is only the first step. toward building the peace," Nillon promised to adhere to all of the stipulations of the agreement, and asked that the other parties follow ita terms scrupulously.
Addressing the people of South Vietnam, the President said, "By your courage, by your sacrifice, you have won the precious right to determine your own future. And you have developed the strength to defend that right."
President Nixon also addressed the leaders of North Vietnam, asking them to join him in building "a peace of reconciliation.
He thanked the American people for their "steadfastness in supporting ourinsistence on peace whth honor," eaying that it "has made peace with honor possible.
Referring for the first time to his silence since the October 26 announcement by Dr. Kissinger that "peace is at hand" and the subeequent break down of negotiations and intengive bombing in North Vietnam, Nixon told the public, \({ }^{4}\) I know that you would not have wanted that peace jeopardized. With our searet negotiations at the sensitiv stage they were in during this recent period, for me to have discussed publicly our efforts to aecure peace would not only have violated our understan ding with North Vietnam, but would have seriously harmed and possibly destroyed the chances for peace.
Nixon ended his speech by saying, "Let us consecrate this moment by resolving together to make the peace we have achieved a peace that will last."

"The student today is looking toward professional areas. He is seeking a major that will provide him with a stable career," observed Lester H. Dye, director of admiasions here in 1973.

Dye pointed out the trend Which appears to have begun here in 1973, a movement away from majors in the humanities which had prevailed in the sixties and toward the majors of the seven-tieg-accounting, management, public communications, architecture and the health services.

The Vietnam war and, with it, the draft, had ended by midJamuary 1973, bringing about the decline of student activism on SU and other college campures. With the elimination of a single cause, studentinterest splintered into other areas.

The black movement gained momentum, spurred by a controversy over the fring of the Society director and by a Society director and by a benefit for the cause of African Liberation featuring Stokammed Ali as a speaker. Stokley Carmichael spoke on

Like a nervous cook constantly checking the thermometer in a roasting turkey, everyome was studying any available indicators of student's attitudes in 1974. They wanted to lenow whether there would be "trouble", again, if atudents were conservative or liberal, outapoken or silent.
One survey by the Office of Student Affairs showed that the entering freshman clase that year was less self-asserlive and less expreasive than their predecessors.
Chief Police Thomas Sardino's thoughts agreed with the survey. In a 10 interview Sardino aaid he thought the student body was less militant than their predeceagors. Sardino directed the police during the M Street riot of 1970.
One of the bigeestindicators of the conseirvative trend was the growing. Enrollment in SU's profestional achools. Enrollmant at the S.L. Newhonme School of Pnblic Communication more then tripled batween 1972 and 1974 , jim ping from 307 to 987 students. The ambition to be involved in the bigs issues of the day was fading. The Environmental movement, one of the biggest issues after the Vietrnan War, was almost completely forgotten by 1974. SU's principal ecological organization, SURG (Syracuse Univeraity Recycling Group) shut down due to lack of student indue to lac volvement.
Student interest had shifted to other issues and activities, mainly protesting the drug buets on campus, criticizing the pardon of \(N i x\) on and cheering the basketball team onto the final four in the NCAA play-offa.
Ford's pardon of Nixon in the Fall was the subject of numerous Daily Orange Edirorials which criticized the move. In a speech in Hen drick's Chapel, historian Arthur Schleasinger attacked the pard on by using one of Niron's quotes: Mhe only way to at tack crime in America is to attack the way crime attacic. without pity.
SU's football team was attacked the game way-without pity. There had been much enthusiam as coach Frank Maloney started his first season. After a big win against Oregon State in the season operier, Maloney's promise of a bowl trip geemed possible. But as the fall wore on, enthusiasm wore off and the team finished with a \(2-9\) record.

The big sports atory in 1974 was SU's Cinderella basketball team. After a better-thanaverage seagon, the team made the playoffif and fought their way to the NCAA semifinals. The twam lost to Kentucky in their aemi-nnal bout. But, just malingit to "the final four was in itadf a major accomplishment.
Sports were back, drug usa was off and thore was a more conservative atmosphere on campur. There was nolonger a meed for everyone to worry over the student attitude. There would be no "trouble" nert spaing, or the yenr after that.

In 1975 stadents could find true love through a computer.
They could mourn the loss of Jabberwocky's farned 40 -cent order of french fries, and all they had come to represent.
They could observe the bleak silver anniversary of a fruitless University Union Building drive.
They conld die first and pay later, courtesy of the university's new Deferred Giving Program.
Or they could wander into a sparsely filled auditorium to hear a theretofore unknown southern peanut-farmer and God-fearer discuss his well-laid plans to gain his way into the White House.
The student body remained mute in 1975-76, save for an occasional murmur spawned by such events as the selection of an occupied cottage for a temporary union building and the abrupt firing of a manager whose name was symonymous with Jabherwocky.
Certainly the most resounding event of \(1975-76\) took place on a Monday morning in February '76, when Jabberwockly Manager Eric Onore arrived for work at the student-rum nightclub under Kimmel Dining Hall. Greeting Onore that morning was a dismisgal notice, a charge of "unprofessionalism", a new manager (a refugee from Food Service), a new philosophy from the Office of Student Affairs, and harbinger of administrative interventions to come.
Under Onore, Jab had developed into an immensely popular watering hole, a decrepit basemont dive that was the acene of SU's best music, best socializing and cheapest food. But the new bucks" was quickly implemented, and the era of the 40 cent fries, as it came to be known, had died.

The office of Student Affairs was busy in 1975, not only turning Jab into a buainess, but its staff members collaborated with SA officers James Langel and John Lyons to develop plans for a "mini-union" which eventually evolved into the Student Activity Center. The administration settled on Walnut Cottage as a site for the new center, infuriating the 19 residents of the cottage who were to be ordered to move. So as Lyons and Langel and UU officer jubilantly sung priase to the SAC concept, future SA President James H-Messenger led the protest from Walnut-Cottage that chanted "Mel No! We Won't Go!" The Walnut residents eventually won the chance to remain in their cottage until the end of spring semester '76, and Messenger rode the wave of support into the SA presidency in Decernber '75.
Measenger's national counterpart, a former Georgia governor of whom nobody had heard, James Earl Carter, drew 400 people to Grant Auditorium in November. The adrainistration has made known details of the Firing of Jabberwocky manager Eric Onore, but Onoreand the adminiatration have different interpretations of the facts.
Ulysses J. Connor, director of organizations and programs for the office of student affairs, said Onore's firing was partially due to a \($ 15,000\) debt incurred by Jabberwocky.
Onore, however, says Jab had a deficit of \($ 13,044\) when he became manager at the end of the 1973-74 fiscal year. Onore says Jab has been breaking even since he became manager, except last summer when a \($ 3,000\) to \($ 4,000\) deficit was incurred.

\section*{Chancellor faces student protest \\ By Irwin Fisch}

About 200 student demonstrators confronted Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers in front of the Administration Building yesterday, challenging his concern for student needs and demanding promptaction on them.
The demonstration was planned by the recently formed Physical Action Committee (PAC) to coincide with National Activism Day, slated by the National Student Association.
The demonstration began at 11 a.m. with a short march outaide the Administration Building, after which the demonstrators entered the building and were met on the stairs by the chancellor.
Eggers was handed a list of grievances by Student Association President James H. Messenger. The 62 items in the list included demands for a more candid administration, increased student input into administrative decisions and upgrading of residence facilities.
After addressing several issues briefly inside the Administration building, Eggers agreed to apeak with demonstrators outaide on the balcony. He fielded questions for about an hour and a half, dealing with such issues as the lack of a vice chancellor for student programs, the lack of a student union building, dissatisfaction with financial aids, library hours and overcrowding in residence halle and classrooms.
Eggers told students "the responsibility we (theadministrators) have is to anticipate what your successors want. If we'd built the union building that your predecessors wanted you'd think we made a terrible mistake.'
The demonstrators stressed a need for more contact with Eggers and other administrators.

However, other students reacted more skeptically to the structure, which boasts wall-to-wall carpeting and a \($ 2,000\) couch in the fireplace lounge. "We needed a place to crash and have a beer in a T-Connor has overseen the renovation of former Walnut Cottage. He estimated costs at approximately \($ 210,000\), including scquisition of the building. Nearly \($ 30,000\) of this came from students phone-athons and various other fund-raising activities. Connor said the remaining funds were acquired through deficit spending. "We're spending money we don't have, he said. He explained that the expenditure ing activitio to be made up through future fund-rais ing activities and possibly from any SAC profit.

\section*{Eggers says he won't seek vice chancellor}

By Deborah Hormell Syracuse University Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers said Tuesday that he will not fill the position of vice chancellor for student programs Eggerg and a search committee told Eggers and a bearch committee told The Daily Orange he would ike to assume the post this January if it was reopened.
The pooition has been vacant for two years and Eggers has said repeatedly that the candidate chosen was worth waiting for Eggers only recently confirmed that the candidate selected was H. Minton Francis, deputy assistant secretary of defense at the Pentagon.

Eggers said the post was offered to Francis for more than a year and that after it became clear that he (Francis) could not accept the position within a reasonable length of time," the offer was withdrawn "by mutual agreement."

Francis said in a phone conversation Tuesday that he did not turn down the vice chancellorship

The erratic clamor against administration decisions began the first week of fall semeater \({ }^{76}\), when Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers announced his decision to eliminate the position of vice chancellor for atudent programs which had been vacant for several years.
Arcandidate had been aelected, but Eggersiniaintained that the poasition suddenly, momedied unncessary, therefore neinipont, would remain onfled. A numberger student groups yelled for the Befis orrent of the post-to no avail.

In the moat unified action all year, 41 English Department Teaching Assistants "boycotted" half their assigned sections to protest what they said were too many students, too many work hours and too little pay. The January "77 atrike lasted fortwo weeks, ending when a compromise was hammered in negotiations with the academic affaira administration.
On the other end of the apectrum of effectiveness, October ' 76 witnessed an efrectiveneas, of the administration buildine Ex of the administration building. Ex an inclination to laugh at the an inclination to laugh at the awkwardness of a protest in 1977 nearly 200 students shouted their aplintered opinions at the chancellor. They chanted their views on the lack of the vice chancellorship, the lack of a UU building, Bird Library hours, dormitory overcrowding, the Financial aids office, food service and a host of other concerns:
Students and adininistrators were momentarily brought together as the academic year drew to a close, when Eggers dedicated the long-delayed Student Activitien Canter, Later renamed "the Student Center. The cafing' drinking; recreation and meet ing-facility at the former Walnut Cottage opened to mixed reviews. The prevailing attitude was summed up by one opening-day visitor who remarked:
"We needed a place to crash and have a beer in a T-shirt, and we got a country club." The country club was destined to be underutilized, loose money and draw continued criticism from students.

Broader causes, national in scope but sometimes just, as nebulous, were strewn about in eleventh-hour downtown campaign stops by presidential candidates Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter. Ford predicted a "fourth-quarter" victory, and Carter told a Syracuse rally, "If you help me out in November Fll help you out in January:"

"I feel that the work of student programs is proceeding to my satiofaction," Eggers said.
He added, "Until there is a major section of the university that can demonstrably shown to be inadequately administered, I car't see adding, more administrators to the university."
Eggers said there was" "nothing written in the stars that says there must be auch a position," and noted that the vice-chancellorship of student programs was established only within the last few years.

The chancellor denied that atudents have lost any representation in the ad ministrative branch. He said the vice president of student affairs, Melvin C. Mounts, will \(\overline{l l l}\) the duties of the vicechancellorship and "will report directly to me.
Eggers also said that the current Student Association president, James H. Messenger, "has more ready access H. Messenger," has more readyacess

\section*{Looking Back at 1977}
by Irwin Fisch
The scintillating 60 s met the selfcentered 70 in the 1977 academicyear. Civil disobedience was the watchword, as atudents blockaded the administration building's parking lot with their bodies en masse, "occupied" with their bodies en masse, occupied a another lot for a day, and staged a war at which to direct their protests, war at which to direct their protests, they choose causes a a mockade to forestall the imHence, a blockade to forestall the im-down the prices of the SU Bookstores. dust three problems:

The co-op closed.
Nobody built a union.
The bookstore's prices didn't budge. But there was indisputably a fleeting aura of community where there'd been none before, a aingle-minded cohesion of-a magnitude that hadn't been seen in years. And though it seemed futile. nobody cared.
For those with loftier ideals, there were still causes to take up. Transplanting a battle from other universities, some students turned their attention to the university's stock portfolio, petitioning the board of trustees to divest SU's holdings in corporations doing business in South Africa. Such holdings, it was aaid, signified tacit approval of South Africa's segregationist national policy of apartheid. Balling at divestiture, the board consented to use its influence as a shareholder to promote fair labor practices in South Africa. In doing so, it proved itself a tougher nut to crack than even the administration.
Over another racial issue, students flung a tomahawk at SU tradition, challenging the propriety of SUP longstanding athletic mascot, The Saltine Warrior. The savage, uncivilized Native American figure was said to be a racist slur againat all Native Americans, so the Office of Student Affairs retired the warrior after drawn-out haggling, and opened the floor to suggestions for replacement. Runners-ap included the

The students walked from the co-op to Marshall Street, and then to the Ad. ministration Building, where they chanted and yelled for 45 minutes.
Winters told the crowd, "The univer sity has maintained for a long time coops, and will maintain co-ope as long as there are enough students to occupy hem.
Belge, spokesperson for reaidents. asked Winters what could be done to save Ostrom Coop.
Winters cited two options: one, the Saltine Cracker, but it was finally decided to keep the name "Saltine Warrior" and substitute a new figure for the Native American.

Meanwhile, some of SU's neighbors went on the warpath againat the university. On the Western Front, esidents of low-income housing on Interstate 81 fo Street, just across nterstate 81, fought a plan to place a county steara plant in their midst. The proposed garbage-fueled steam station was to have supplied SU with ateam, and to have incorporated mi SU-owned networix of underground steam vessels. The issue was not resolved, but attenion was turned to other possible sites. And on the Southern Front, nonatudent residents of the Sikytop area tried to tackle a univeraity plan to construct a 50,000 -geat stadium on SU property near a residential region. The \($ 10\) million barebones football facility was to have put ailing, 80-year-old Archbold - one of the nation's first poured-cement stadiums - to reat; but Skytop residenta charged that the noise, traffic and other environmental damages from a stadium in their midst would be intolerable.
The end of the spring semester was marked by a tragedy: A fire at 701 University Ave. rooming house took the lives of four firemen. It was the second wortt fire diaster in Syracuse history: The Eremen had died in a third-floox attic. The fire had started when an unattended candle burned through a Styrofoam holder.
That epring also brought proof that the CIA had monitored atudent activities in the late 60s. The documents released under the Freedom of Information Act included an account of SA President David Ifahin activities since gramamar school. In the article, Ifahin said that several CLA agents had infiltrated student government in the 60s and staked out his apartment
As the summer approached, however, one univeraity project did get underway - the renovation of the Hall of Languages, SU's first building. The historic shell of the campus' centerpiece was to be gingerly emptied of ita squeaky noors, winding traircases, it into a model for either enexity conservation or a research project; the second option, according to Winters, is to "tear it down.
Belge asked the vice chancellor about alleged negligence by the Office of Residential Life in maintaining and repairing Area cottages.

Winters told the crowd, which cheered most of the questions put to him and hooted athis answers. "We are not trying to neglect property that we own, and which is used by our atudents, and which it makes economic sense to continue to own and maintain. We are not trying to cut off our nose to spite our face.

Belge told Winters, "You said that if there was a sufficient gtudent need for a co-op, you would find one. Here's the need (gesturing to the crowd, which then numbered around 300)."
The vice chancollor replied, "I also want to point out to you that it's very easy on a nice, spring summer after noon, after you'vohad students pent up all winter, to get a large crowd out in support of almoat anything."
The students still sat in the driveway. Money was collected, and a keg of beer was tapped. Althongh it got cooler as the afternoon wore on, it seemed that at least a solid core of about 65 people had no intention of eaving-

Winters' at one point said with a smile, "Look at them. They haven't grot any leadership. All they ve got is that pipaquaak Wolnky. I'm gonna drag Sim out by the heela firte.
Syracuse Chief of Police Thomas J. Sardino was called in by administrators to "get the people out of here,' Sardino said. He told the crowd that the people being detained had a lawful right to come through, and that, while the demonatrators had the right to peaceful protest, they did not have the right to block people who wanted to gohome.
Winters returned to the demonstrators, and after negotiations, told Belge that he would provide him with any figures pertaining to the \(\mathrm{Oe}_{-}\) trom closing.

The previous 90 years is largely the work of 75 years of editors and reporters; years of late Syracusans have found waiting for them on the floor every weekday morning.
But, where are they now? Those who edited the stories, kept the paper financially alive, worked late nights at the plant, (first in hot type and then in offset) and renewed the papers creativity every year. And through it all managed to graduate.
We called as many people as we could reach, using phone lists provided by the Alumni office and old DO mastheads.
Our calls brought a mixture of surprise, memories and the start of many stories.
"It was glorious getting dirty at that late hour," one old editor said of 'locking up' the metal type that made up the pages.
A former Business manager from the 60's had a different attitude. "the DO taught me how to hustle people and make a buck.
And, with an attitude fitting of any homecoming weekend, and editor-in-chief from the 1920's said. "I'd like to do it all over again.

Adrift in the mist that surrounded a continent, suspended in the fear that pervaded their hopes, the pilgrims could not see the craggy New England coastline jutting up before them They could not see the harsh landscape or imagine the bitterness of a winter that would claim many of their lives. What they clung to, what guided them through the turmoil of their holy experiment, was an idea, a feeling that this new land they had never seen was an answer, or

As the machinery of progress became more complicated and the implications of growth more critical education became the most important means to the confident individualism merson had essayed. There was a pilgrim spirit in education too. Some religious leaders developed an idea of what a young Methodist should be existed long before a builder erected a emisked of Second Empire France in Central New York Cornfield and called it the Hall of Languages.

Like the pilgrims, their idea would be created and recreated many times. The seminary would be seduced slowly by the world it hoped to guard against until Syracuse would become an unmistakeably American university and like a McGuffy's reader of middle clas thoughts and morals in the twentieth century.
SU's founders envisioned had already begun to die on the East Coast in 1870 when the university was founded. The university's trustees were able to impose some strict rules governing when could meet, when students would attend chapel (daily) and when they could carry liquor on campus (never).
But by the turn of the century, certain sense of pragmatism had set in, a sense that the education business was just that, a business. SU historian W. Freeman Clapin writes that in choosing its third chancellor the trustees decided: "to make no apbe found. And by the right man was

The words captured Day's conservative philosophy and summed up the reason the university's faculty and students had become unhappy with him. The skirmishes Day's philosophy caused at SU were reflective of a larger battle bet ween conservatives and liberals in a time historians would later call the Progressive Era.
When World War 1 brought that era to a close. SU again was ready to follow the call of its national leaders. Chancellor Day welcomed the Air Corps training program to campus and one third of the campus population were eventually drafted effort that found almost

This was the era of salt and hour rushes, the rivalry with Colgate, the first rush of fraternity pride and Syracuse's first football successes.

Faculty members took pay cuts some dances and activities curtailed and the School of Agriculture was closed. A mock ballot on the 1932 election revealed the split in campus and national attitude. When the results were counted at SU, Socialist candidate Norman Thomas had won narrow victory over Herbert Hoover extremes, no matter which direction In the early 1940's, William Pearson Tolley became chancellor. The modern history of SU is largely the history of Tolley's chancellorship.
He was afpointed just before the war and as the country readied for conflict so did the university, Tolley welcomed ROTC and CTD training programs to SU, in fact SU's CTD program
Was the largest in the country.
Military programs such as these kept the campus alive while many of the men and women who would have in school Fore fighting the war
For college students of the late 1970's, the post-war era seems one of the most important times in America's development. Many things we now condidered modern were born in this period Suburbia rose, a new leisure class ormed and our leaders believed briefly hat there was enough of the American pie for everyone. When we found ou here was a hmit to growh and that some people were being systematically excluded from the American dream, the progress of the 50's would be seen as selfish and materialistic by the decade later. SU would experience the pleasantries of. growth and the problens of upheaval.解 was the prosperity and that wonderful feeling that destiny is somehow controlable.
The prosperity is still obvious at SU but so is a sense of apprehension that was also a part of the 50 's.
Russia had the bomb and in 1922 and public vidicuile, as the Chicago Examiner porire

The university reflected this ambivalence. Enrollment was the highest its ever been and some of the campus's major issues were: who should play a the sophomore hop, who would select the homecoming queen. was SU

It was also the golden age of SU foot ball. Jim Brown, Ennie Davis, and Floyd Little were all through SU in rapid succession. There was a national championship in 1959 and in 1960, SU turned down a bowl bid to avoid the reputation of a footbal. actory.
At the same time, there was a fear ust short of Paranoia that if the country wasn't careful someone would ruin the prosperity. The university stole an occasional look over it's shoulder to make sure no subversives were gaining. In 1948 the DO constantly told its readers how pleased it was with the unjversity as an education institution. When a member of the Youth Progressive Party voiced his dissent he was arrested and later suspended. The DO's comment was. "The university is DO's comment was. "The university is more important to us than any ndividual.
That sort of thinking died, but it died slowly. When Americans recall the 1960's they recall it as a decade of upheaval and activism on campus. If we accept that definition, the 60 's did not arrive at SU until 1969. The carnpus seemed blissfully ignorant of the human rights and foreign policy issues that would later create controversy. And when SU students first took notice, they did not take a typical student viewpoint. In 1964 WAER editorialized in favor of the war efforts in Vietnam. When SU students did become involved in what was characterized as a half-hearted effort SU students want to drive to the revolution in their Corvettes," one college guide said. New York state has already agreed to participate in the \($ 26\) million project by giving-SU \($ 15\) million over the next three years.
In unveiling the fund-raising approach Thursday, Eggers said it was important that the university raise the \($ 11\) million before the stadium opens in 1980. Projected maintenance costs for the facility would make. it impractical for SU to try to raise the money on a-long-term basis, hesaid.

Roughly half of the money that SU must raise- \($ 5.425\) million-will come from the sale of 12,000 preferentia beats on the gtadium's lower tier, Julian said.

The sale of 2,500 bench-back Beats betwaen the 40 -yard lines is expected to net \($ 2.6\) million with customers paying \($ 1,000\) each for use of the eeats in the first year. These customers, Julian noted, will be given the option of retaining their seate for the next five yeara and will pay only for season ticket after the \($ 1,000\) donation.

Three thousand seats between the 30 and 40 - yard lines selling at \($ 500\) each in the first year (and at regular season tickets prices after that) will yield prother \($ 1.5\) million.
By selling 3,000 seats

In addition, he said, anybody who buys a seat between the 10 - and 20 -yard lines can requestingtead a beat on the upper tier between the 40-yard lines.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer CandidateCollegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as \($ 650\) a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a \($ 3,000\) cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a \($ 24,000\) salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus on Nov. 8-9, or contact your Navy representative at 315-423-5490 (collect). If you prefer, send your resume to the Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312-B537, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203 , and a Navy representative will contact you directly. \section*{SU seeks a' 79 home}

\section*{By Craid Weingteln}

With the demolition of Archbold Stadium slated to begin Nov. 13 and the new domed stadium not due to be ready officials are currently negotiating for sites to play next season's home schedule.
Five home games are scheduled, and only one, the Penn State game on October 20, has been finalized. According to SU Athe Penn State game will be played in the Meadowlands. That's theonly game that we've confirmed. Hpwever, there's a poswibility of playing another game there"
The problems that the Meadowhands pose are availability and expenses. On the plus side, the Meadowlands holds approximately 76,000 people. "The expenses and capacity will be extremely larger. So, we hope, will be the gate." Crouthamel said.
"Againat Penn State, I don't gee why we can't get 60,000 or more people in there," Crouthamel said. "But, with other opponents, it depends on what type of team we face. We know Perin State's going to have a real good team."
"However, amonget the other home teams on our bchiedule next season, (West Virginia, Washington State, Miami and Boston College) there certainly is no stand-out," he added.
There will be no date changes on next year"s achedule, according to Crouthamel. "The achedule wril stay the same. It's just a matter of wh
In addition, none of the home games will be switched to an opponent's atadium. "It's our home game. We owe our fans and the state some loyalty. Thia state has been very gracious. We want New Yorkera to be able to watch we play," Crouthamel asid. One problem that exists is that of the student athletic activity card for next season. It now ellls for \($ 40\), but according to Crouthamel, "it's going to have to be changed. There are a couple of powsibilities, all of which we are going to ad. dress ourselves to in the next couple of months.'
The firat proposal would take football completely off the activity card, and Bell completely off the activity card, and sell plan will include trandividual games. The optiona. An' elternative propoanl would offer students an activity card with two, three, four, or five games, and would aleo include transportation and meal options.
Thinking ahead to 1980, Crouthamel mentioned the idea of christening the new againat Ohio State, theopening game that year. However, the gameianow scheduled yor Columbus, Ohio.
"The problem you run into with Bchools like Ohio State, USC, Michigan and Notre Dame, is that they're only allowed two national television appearances - per year." Crouthamel observed... yeario Craditionally, Ohio State has two national gampes. One wrould think that 1980 might be in the sams aituation in to get them, although I doubt it very to guch."
Crouthamel noted that unless a national television audience is guaranteed, thereis little chance the Ohio State game will be played in Syracuse.

To face the tortoise came the hare, the outpatient Orangemen, an embattled unit missing five opening day starters to inuries and lacking inspiration without Bill Hurley in the lineup.
But thanks to a "Born again" defense and a "born at last" reserve quarterback, Tim Wilson, the Orangermen raced into the lead five minutra into the game when Wison circled around right end and dashed 20 yardi untouched into the end zone. Syracuse led, 6-0, after Dave Jacobs missed his first extra point in 54 of his career-

That "brealk" initially looked disastrous for the Terrapins when SU setback Art Monk took a Loncar punt on his own 23yard line and galloped straight up the right sideline on a dazzling 77-yard touchdown run.

For Monk, who rushed for 70 yards that did count, the Maryland game repreaented a personal challenge, since he was recruited by Clairborne and almost chose the Terps.
"Sorne of their players told me before the game to keep my head up because they were gonna hurt me," Monk recalled with a amile. "So I was sort of let down when my run was called back"

"I like to pass," said Monk, who later in the fourth quarter completed a 46-yard pass to Brian Ishman that set upa 27 -yard Jacobs field goal. "The ball wasn't wet or slippery; I just plain overthrew him (Jones)."
Monk's overthrow set up a Jacobs field goal attempt from the 12 yard line that Terrapin back Lloyd Burrusa blocked and which left end Joe Muffler scooped up before stumbling 75 yards to the Syracuse 14 yard line.

Four plays later, Jan Carinci carried the ball over from the two to make the score 24-6 and, at last, give the tortoises a com: fortable lead.

Except for Morris' 53-yard run and Monk's pass to Ishman, the tenacious Maryland defense shut down the Syracuse attack the rest of the second half. Syracuse passed infrequentiy, netting only 47 aexial yards in the game, and picked up 181 yards rushing on mostly inside running plays.
Maloney defended his conservative offensive strategy, noting that "we wanted to attack them on the inside, where their previous oponents have had the most success. Let's face it, gentlemen, we didn't do Worge than anyone elae has against Maryland. Nobody moves the ball well againgt Maryland.

Havens began the set with Ha his most recent com postions, "Nobody Left to Crown." The political putdown had him strumming- 80 hard he broke a guitar string. An occupational hazard," he observed jokingly.
The most powerful song of the night; however, was the Quicksilver Messenger Services portest classic, "What About Me." Despite being only the third song in Haven's repertoire, it received a stan ding ovation.

Other highlights were the moving "Tupelo Honey/Just Like a Woman" medily and a long mystical mong-poem sbout astrology.
The crowd. responded with frenzied applause when Havens closed with reme Wooder remembered Woodstock theme.
Havens encouraged the audience to sing with him when he returned to the stage alone for an encore, "You Are So Beautiful."

His intimate rendering of the Joe Cocker song made a cold, rainy night a little bit cold, rainy night a little bit Striner.
Htreetcorner singing was Havens' first involvement with music. He formed his firat group, the McCren Gospe Singers, when he was 14. In 1962, he began playing guitar professionally in Greenwich Village where he also painted portraits and wrote poetry.

His guitar playing, which in volves an unusual style of tuming and picking, gained his citical acclairn. He released several LPs but did not gain

Senate to vote on student-input tenure proposal

After a year and David Bauder the proposed tenure policy has beon drawn of the proposed tenure policy has been drawn up University Senate meeting.
Siveraity Senate meeting.
Student input on the tenure decision has been the major point of contention in the work by the Senate Com Promotions.
Under the proposed policy, "each departnient, school or college will secure evaluations of teaching effectiveness from past or present atudents of the candidate-"
The proposal also says that each academic unit will establish procedures for a systematic collection of the evaluations, which will be used
In aditition tenure committee in its decision.
In addition, student representatives will join tenured and non-tenured faculty members on the committee's evaluation of each professor's teaching and advising abilities.
A faculty member becomes eligible for tenure after he has taught at the university for seven years. If granted tenure, he is virtually guaranteed a job until age 65.
"It's pretty much what we wanted," said Morrie Levine, chairman of the student coalition of the Senate.
Melissa Rose, student member of the appointments and promotions committee, said she was "eatisfied with the way it came out." Her only question concerned how department were going to collect evaluations from past students.

Jim Naughton, SA vice prosident for academic affairs, said "I'm not against the policy, I hope it gets
"It's good that student evaluations are going to be considered, but there are no stipulations about what they have to come up with," he added.
Naughton pointed out that individual departments will be making up the evaluation forms and significant differences in the ap"In might reault.
"In a way it's good that individual departments can tailor evaluations," Naughton gaid, but added, "We're going to have the same sort of inconsistencies we alwaya had."
"The biggest question is - will they-ask tough enough questions? I'd like to see a uni ver-sity-wide policy," he added.
Levine said he felt the evaluations are atill going to be overseen by this committee. "I think they'll make sure it's done effectively," Levine said.
James K. Weeks, chairman of the committee on Senate appointments and promotions, said continued on page two

Undergrad senators form activist-oriented coalition

By David Bander In an effort to have an impact on policy matters in the University Senate, student senators have once again formed a more activistoriented student coalition.

The coalition, made up of 30 undergraduate senators, hopes to better represent stident interestes in the univer sity's governing' body, Morrie Levine, the coalifion's chairnan, said.
The Senate is : one-half faculty, one-fourth administrators and onefourth students.
"The" administration and faculty never agree, Bo students hold a very important swing vote," Levine said.
He said the power of the student coalition will depend on its members. They will be the ones who determine whether the students will have a unified voice in the University senate, Eevine said.
"We have to stick together." he said. "We have to help erch other out."

Until a few years ago, the students in the Senate worked independently of each other and.had ino internal organization.
The first coalition; formed three yrears ago, included 15 graduate student senators and was a tightly structiored organization. But bickering between graduates and undergraduates caused the undergraduates caused the downfall of "This year, we've decidedwe didn't want to get bogged down in formalities. We have an open forurn at our meetings," Levine explained. The students on the active committees tell the rest of the group about the issues to be decided and we discuss it to see if there is a major overriding opinion."

One of the coalition's first decisions was to back two Iranian students whoobjected to plans to give the Empress of Iran an honorary depree.
The College for Human Development's - nomination would have needed Senate ap proval. - It withdrew its nornination before the Senate meeting, evidently because of ths controversy it created.
An idea the coalition hopes to sponsor this year is an open forum for the student body. It would give students a chance to voice opinions on issues at the univergity.
Most of the other coalition plansare sketchy, Levinesaid. All but one of its members are new to the Senate this year.
"Our the Senate this year. "Our main problem is that people don't know what the people don't know what the student coalition is," Levine studen

He added that the problem is further complicated by the fact that many students don't even know what the University Senate is.
"The Senate has more direct power than Student Association over what the students are here for, the academics."

Committee opposes plans for winter use of seaway

By Carolyn Beyreani
The Save tha River Commant itee is opposing a proposed winter navigation program on the St. Lawrence River.
Barry Freed and Arthur Menkel, members of the committee, outlined the organization's reasons for opposition and its plan of action at a press conference held Thurgday at the downtown Syracuae Holiday Inn.
The group-represents more than 400 property owners, business people and scientists from more than 30 communities along the St. Lawrence River. The program, if implemented by the St. Lawrence Seaway Development traffic along a 15 -mile corridor exten ding from Morristown, N.Y., to Cardinal, Ontario. If guccessful, the program will pave the way for 11 month navigation-in the St. Lawrence River and Lake Ontario, as opposed to he current $8 / 1 / 2$ month season.

The project will involve modifying existing ice booms in the demonstration area to provide for a relatively ice-free chanriel. Anchors and reinforcements will be installed Howeyer, Menkel is concerned that the project will necessitate dredging the river bottom.
"We're bucking an idea which can cause irreversible harm," Menkel said. "Toxic chemicals will be brought to the surface and marine life will suffer."
The project may also cause shoreline erosion and damage to docks, acerosion and da

Towards tomorrow's teachers

No academic institution can af ford to ignore student opinion.'
-James Weeks, author of proposed Tenure Guidelines for the Senate Committee on Appointments and Promations.

By the end of the day, some of your teachers may be eyeing you with new respect.

If the new tenure gaidelines are passed by the Senate today, you could be the determining factor in your professors' careers.
The proposal, formulated by James Weels, chairman of the committee on appointments and promotions, entails student evaluation of all tenure candidates by past and present etudents of the instructor in question. These evaluations will be used by the tenure committee in its decision to grant or withhold tenure - the equivalent of deciding whether to fire the teacher or give him a lifetime job at SU.

systematic method of gathering student evaluation of teachers was incorporated into the tenure question. But now, if the proposal is passed, those in the best position to judge the effectiveness of these people will be allowed to do so. Student voices will be solicited and taken seriously.

The proposal will place the im portance of candidates' teaching and advising abilities in proper perspective. Research and service to the university can earn brownie points, but a teacher's primary job is to ingtruct, inspire and stimulate his students.

We encourage the Senate to pass the proposal so more specific, concrete guidelines may be established for each college and school within the university.

With student input finally given meaningful weight in tenure considerations, we may begin to shape a university where teachers may better teach and students may better learn.

King's latest LP changes style, mood

By Larry Grant

From the boogie. woogie rhythm of main street to the Boft echoes of the Sawtooth Mountain canyons, Carole King'e release Welcome. Home makes you want to get up and dance.

Featuring such diverse instrumentation as tamboura, violin, fute, cello, and full horn section, not only does the album move through several moods but it constantly changea rhythm patternis as well. King's lyrics, mostly joyful in nature, reflect a return to health and vitality after the recent death of ber lover/producer Rick Evers. Much of the inspiration in the songs was found at her Idaho ranch, Welcome Home, where she came into contact with a lot of the natural phenomena that appears in her songs: mountain springe, rivers, the balance of the seasons and the electricity of the air.

King's last and least successful album, Fartasy. relied on a rhythm and blves format but on Welcome Home King mixes up the styles and presents a diversity of sounds presents a diversity of sounds that is to more interesting to categ to

Frat house salvageable?

By Rick Bonnell

One of the companies insuring the gutted Kappa Sigma fraternity house has contracted a Liverpool conatruction company to determine if the house can be renovated.
The house at 105 Collge Place, was destroyed by fire Oct. 2 . Fire officials said they suspected the fire was deliberately set.

United State Fidelity and Guarantee, one of the companies insuring the fraternity-owned building, has contracted GraycorConstruction Co., Inc., to look at the building-
"Officially we've been retained to determine the extent of damage and the feasibility of repair, said.
Graycor's findings will determine the amount United States Fidelity will pay Kappa Sigma, which owns the building.
Dudley Bamerick, assistant superintendent at United States Fidelity, said that it appears the house is nalvageable. The cost of renovation should be determined next week.

Noh-violent studies stresses peaceful change  IBy;Andrefi-Abrahams

Theipence movement is not desuchasm:
Thic ariti-war slocrans of the late 1960 arand eariy 70 seem likememories of a bygone era But at Syracure University, the objectives and tactics of those in thie peace movement are beirig: examinet by studenter of the Programa in Non-Violent Conflict, and Change:
Neil. Katz, programs direc tor, said the program's purpose is to "instruct, research and train students in non-violent, creative means to resist or achieve change in a nonviolent, constructive manner. The non-violent studies program began in 1970 after a number of student demonstrations on campus. There are at least 150 aimilar programs in colleges and universities thoughout the country, Katz Baid.
Katz said he thinks SU's program is very unique" because of its focur on nonviolent strategies. Most other programs are primarily outgrowths of international relations programs, he saiid.
Katz and five graduate asKistants teach the PNCC sistants to between 150 and 200 courses to between students a undergraduate students a semester. Eight to 10 or these students are majors or minors in the mainly with historical deal mainly with historical instances where non-violent tactics were successics y used and how these tactics can be and how th John McCullough, a thirdyear graduate mssistant in mimerdiaciplinary social sciences, said that many nomviolent tactics were used before the American Rovolution and that the "founders and colonistis disliked etanding ar Wies." Only the post-World War II "dermands of a world power have forced the present military situation? he observed.
More often, non-violent conflict resolution is used in peacetime. Some examples are labor or hostage negotiations and rape prevention, McCullough said. The course he teaches this memester, PAF 325 , teaches these tactica in a technical and "skill-oriented" way, he said.
It is in these and related areas that the job market is open for studenta of non violent studies. McCullough said that despite the belief that a major in non-violent studies is impractical, there are many jobs open for graduates of inese courses.
Recent graduates of PNCC have gotten jobs in creative Syracuge management in the and in youth community services. Katz said he thinks coma. munity organizations seem to have the most job opportunities for graduates.
The PNCC has suffered from a reputation as a "gut" major. This is partially due to its being a curriculum which ing a curriculum which changes, in part, with each new group of students, ac cording to Cheryl McLeod, a zunior in PNCC and sociology.

Katz also attributed the program's poor reputation to the attitude of many people who initially thought of non-violent studies as something that had to be put up with because of student preasure, and when the pressure subsided, it was something they'd set rid of.
Katz anid he believea PNCC has been legitimized in the eyea of the university at large partly due to the $$ 5,000$ Rockefeller Foundation grant it received in 1975. Katz and the graduate atudents also reaearch and publiah many articles dealing with all espectes of non-violence.
This summer, Katz and eight students researched the Seabrook, N.H., anti-nuclear demonstrations to help people analyze and predict protest ac tivity.
Dave-List, a third-year graduate assistant in inter disciplinary social sciences, said the media tend to perpetuate the stereotypee of a non-violence program. "Newspapers have the notion that non-violent action means that there was a demonstration where no one got hurt," he said.
List was critical of the student protest at SU last spring.
A veteran of the anti-war protests, he thought the bookstore boycott was "fairly well organized," although he though it was "foolish" to demand lockers which had already been granted.
List said the tactice of a sit in to protest the closing ot the Ostrom Co-op "didn't relate" convenienced etadents ind faculty unnea arail the student union rally Hi said honden a betier appr leas. people haven't learned many people haven'

List aaid he thinks the most important issue on the SU campus today in terms of potential student protest is SU'B investments in South Africa. It is important for students to get involved in activities which may not directly affect them, List said.

William M. Harlow, professor emeritus at the State Univeraity of New York College of Environmental Science and Forestry, has done much in his 57 years at the school. Hisinterests have extended beyond his field - denalrology, the study of trees - to such things as motion pictures, time-lapse photography and backpacin̆g.
Although it might seem odd for a professor at the forestry school to be interested in photography, Harlow found it was an aid to bim.
"I always liked to take pictures, period," he said. In teaching I found it invaluable.
Haxlow's interest in photography led to a concern for time-lapee photography. "I wanted this time-lapse thing bo I could see flower buds opening. Plants are not stationary; they are constantly moving.
In 1952, Harlow's intereat expanded to motion pictures. Since that time he has produced 28 short nature films and has nerved as a contributor to Walt Disney's nature'movie "Secrets of Life."
Harlow was one of the first people to be involved in the Eield of time-lapee photography. "The Disney people were looling for momeone who could do these things," he said.
On the advice of a frienc, Harlow suburitted om the advice of a frienc, Rariow he had done to Disney. $A$ some fums he had done to represemtanve called hariow and said they agreed to a contract and did-tome floming for them

He is proud of the filmo he has done. "I never made a film I wasn't interested in or that didn't make a point," he asid.

Many of his films won-awards at the Mrericon Film Festival "I used to pro against Amencan GE,' he said. "I was the producer, director and cameraman ${ }^{-1}$
Films and photography are not Harlow's anily concerins. He has written seven books. Hlis first one, Textbook of Dendrology, which he co wrotewith E.S. Harrar, is a standard texi used in more than 80 colleges. First publinhedin

The: monthly feature magainine is distributed free on campus, It was started Iast year by Eduardo Lopez, its current editor.
Professor Samuel V. Kennedy of the S.I. Newhouse School of Public. Communications eervers as the magavine's adviser.
The magazine receives $$ 5,000$ from Student Association, but Lopez said it costs $$ 2,800$ to put out each issue, and he hopes to publish "gix, possibly seven" issues this year.

Five thousand copies of each issue are prifted, he aaid. The remaining money to print the magarine is raised through advertising.

Although Vantage has an adviser, Lopez and Kennedy agree that Kennedy has no control over the content.

Kennedy said his main function is that of a questioner who wants to know "where they're going, what they think and how they're going to get there."

He said one of his main jobs is to caution againgt libelous statements or anything. that might get the magazine into "legal hot water."
Vantage has 10 staff members but is alwaya looking for contributors. Anyone interested in writing for the magazine should stop in at Vantage's office at 750 Ostrom Ave.

SThRClisf Rrive    ART FICTION PHOTOGRAPHY POETRY

We are proud to announce a new feature this semester: the PORTFOLIO. Two or three pages will be set aside to highlight the work of one artist and one photographer. Submissions must consist of at least 3, but not more than 8 , pieces. The only requirement is that there must be a theme or a subject unifying the group. This is a great opportunity for those of you who work in series (such as those of Duane Michaels or Barbara Nessim) or those who seek to illustrate a theme (such as David Hamilton).

This new feature is in addition to our regular acceptance of individual photos and artwork. In the past, these two departments have never failed to excite our readers so if you have only thought about submitting before, now is the time. Remember, we have no policy as to what style of work we'll accept; it is you who submit who dictate the style.

If you are submitting for individual acceptance, remember there is no limit to how many you may submit or how many can be published. If you're interested in a PORTFOLIO, it must be labelled as such to be considered.

If you have questions please give us a call, or stop by our office. We're only too happy to help you. After all, your work makes or breaks the magazine. Be a part of the new Syracuse Review by submitting before' November 3. There is no greater thrill than seeing your work in print, and the Syracuse Review is the place to be seen. 103 College Place 3-1401.

Orange throwing can only hurt

By Geoff EIobeon

In the end, it hurt mont becaume of Syracuse University's $24-9$ loes to the Univeraity of Maryland last Saturday at Archbold Stadium. The "it" was not Bill Hurley's injury, the Hocked field goal or the offense's inability to move the ball. move the ball.
Rather, "it" was the orange-throwing directed by the stadent : section at the Maryland players when they took the field Satunday afternoon.
There were not just two or three oranges hurled at the opponent as there are at every team that invades Archbold or Manley Fiald House, but there was a barrage of fruit that could have been followed by an Anita Bryant commercial.
It wasn't juat lazily or aimlessly thrown, either. Ron Guidry culd have wished for the velocity and control of the Orange faithful when he beat the Dodgers in the World Series when he beat the Dodgers in the World Series on Friday night.
The orangeincidenit, nodoubt, had as much to do with Saturday's loss as SU's passing game, or lack of it.

Nobody likes to have orange thrown at him. Especially if it's the tenth-ranked football team in the nation.
If Terrapin coach Jerry Claiborne was worried about his undefested team suffering a letdown when it was facing the 1-4 Orangemen, his fears were allevisted after watching the deluge of oranges cascade on his squad. $A 3$ deiuge of oranges cascade on his squad. A year-old could get payched up after that.
One can almost hear Claiborne in the locker room at halftime with his team trailing 6-3:
"Don't you gays remember what-happened when we went out there? You gomma let them get away with that? Now go' out there and hove the orrangees (or zomething like that) down thair throatal"
Only Knute Rockne and the Gipper had a better aetup for a halftime pep tall
How many of thoee half-witited pitchers noticed that when Maryland sisored the clinching (second) touchdown in the thirdiquariter binge, half the Maryland bench turned aind waved fists of defiance at the criowd?
In thia diay and age of "Bosion Sucke" Tahirtes. "Reggie Sucks" chants on national celevision and bottle-throwing directed at referees, the incident at Archbold is only a mirror of what is happening acrosis the country. Fans are malcing sporting events as unruly as a Latin-American soccer Eame.
Unfortonately, these people lack the intelligence or the human pift of sensitivity to understand that a player's livelihood is threatened during an incident like the one on threatened during an inciadent fike the one on Saturday. It only takes one strategically placed object to ruin a caiger.
The only thing they comprehend' is winning losing and profit/loss. They don't want to hear abont the labor pains, they just want to to hear abont
Then look at it this way. The next time you yell a nice, juicy obscenity or throw something at an opponent, don't be suprised if they bent YOX...
I could talk about things like morals and compassion; but they wouldn't underatand.

Cross country loses twice more

By Drew Schwartz

The SU cross country team failed to kick its losing habit last Saturday as it absorbed a double dosage of defeat from Navy and Maryland, lowering its record to 3-6

Coach Andy Jugan wasn't aurprised by the losses and said competing against such cross country powers will eventually reap dividends.
However, Navy and Maryland gained instant profit from the meet as they combined to take the first seven places in the race. Tim Cummins of Navy was the first rumaer to cross the finiah line, and his 24:02 clocking came within five seconds, of the course record at Annapolis.

Charlie Bevier once again had the best day among the Orangemen, completing the race in 24:54. Inexperience once again hurt the sophomore, Jugan said.
Rich Wojtowicz (25:19) was the second SU runner to cross the end line, finishing twelfth. Jugan said the freshman's performance has been a pleasant surprise this season. "He ran the first two miles at the fastert pacehe's ever run ( $9: 47$ ) but faded at theend," he said. Dave Denis ( 17 th) and Jerry Josselyn (19th) were also among the top 20 runners with respective times of 25:39 and 25:47.
Although SU has been outclassed in recent meets by such foes as Navy and Cornell, Jugañ seems to be confident that the next few meets won't be as rough. "We can look forward to getting back on the winning trail because teama like Rochester and Colgate are in an entirely different class than Nayy. We're pretty tired both physically and mentally," he said. A win this Saturday againgt the University of Rochegter and Colgate at Rocheater would probably better habit than the one on which they haverecently been hooked.

SU slips, skids, loses to Army

By Patti Orsini
The SU soccer team slipped, skid and slid to a 2-1 loss to fourth-ranked Army on a wet Coyne Field Friloss to fourt day night.
Army forward Mike Rodemer, high aconer for West Point (6-2), scored the winning, goal with 12 seconds left to play to hand SU (5-4-1) its first loss at home this season.
Syracuse led at the haif, the lone goal coming after only eight minutes of pliy from Gary And derson, who took a pass from left wing Greg Cunningham, wo Anderson- leads SU in goal production, Hisiniz' scored eight goals so far this beason.
After a slow second half start, forward Gary Yerics put the Cadets on the scoreboard, to tie the score. 1-1.
Syracuse missed several scoring opportunities, especially in the second half. We. Wanted to keep possersion of the ball by dribbling up the field unstead of taking long passes, absistant coach Jape Shattuck explained, "but.under these conditions (rain), was impossible.
"The ball waan't moving on the ground So in the second half we had to draw the passea bactr and shoot from the 18 -yard line. We were doing everything right, but we just couldn't score:" he added.
Rodemer's goal, his 13th of the season, was a result of constant pressure applied in the second half. With the clock at 29:48, he brought the ball down the left gide of the goal. The shot crosged in front of goalie Mike Westcott and rolled into the right corner.
"It was an evenly played game," said Army" assistant coach Henniger. "SU is one of the begt teams we've-played all semson, and I think they were up to beat we.'
Syracuse, ranked 15th in the state, will play at Oneonta State Wedneaday at 3 p.m.

Larger enrollment at SU results in budget surplus

Syracuse Uny David Baudex University has a surplus of more because of a larger-than-expected enrollment
This year's eurpius is somewhat higher than normal, said Nahmin Horwitz, chairman of the University Senate Committee on Budget and Fiscal Affairs. A report from his comaittee showed that almost half the surplus was generated from extra tuition.
The university usually has a surplus in the fall because of cautious revenue estimates made in preparing the budget, said Clifford L. Winters Jr., vice chancellor for adminiatrative operations.
The Senate budget committee will recommend at today's Senate meeting that about $\mathbf{$ 9 0 0 , 0 0 0}$ of the surplus go towards a twopercent salary increase for the faculty and most support staff employees.

The two-percent increase in base salary will involve all employees, including graduate as sistants, not covered by collective bargaining agreements. Temporary employees, however nill not get raiges.

I'm glad to see it," said A. Dale Tussing, senator on the budget committee and a leaderin the faculty unionization drive. "But I don't think we would be getting this if it weren't for the attention the faculty merribers of the budget cornmittee gave it last year.'

A motion passed in the Seante last year made the salaries of personnel a high priority item in the event of a budget aurplus.
"It's not the generosity of the administration," Tussing said. "Under these cir curnstances, the raise was difficult to avoid.
The committee will also recommend to the Senate that $$ 293,000$ be allocated for colleges that were most affected by the nise in en. rollment. Of those funde, 80 percent will go for sistants.Approximately $$ 150,000$ of the eurplus wiligo nto a university contingency fund.

The decision on distribution of the surplus was made by the administration and presented to the budget committee, which unanimously approved it.
The Senate is expected to approve the committee's recommendations today, Horwitz aaid, although there may be aome questions raiged about alternative ways of making the salaryincreases.

The long-awaited tenure policy is also likely to be the subject of some debate at the Senate meeting, but most observers expected it to pass.

There could be some discuasion on the floor," said Melissa Rose, student member of the Senate Committee on Appointments and I don't see any reason why it aho policy. 'Bu I don't see any reason why it shouldn't pass. don't think

The Senate Student Coalition unanimously agreed at its Monday meeting to support the policy, because it believes the policy is in the best interests of the student population.

The paragraph requiring atudent evaluation might cause some difficulty, said James $K$. Weeks, chairman of the appointments committee, but he added, "I don't think it will be enough to stop the proposal from being passed."

Uncier the proposal, student input in the granting of tenure would be jncreased. Departments and schools would be required to secure evaluations of teachers effectiveness from past or present students.

Also, student representatives would join tenured faculty members on a college committee's evaluation of each professor's teaching and advising abilities.

Schlenger plans to request about $$ 9,000$ from $S A ' s $ 14,000$ contingency fund within afew weeks.

However, Carl Kleidman, SA comptroller, said the chances of that request being approved are small or none. "That would tap our budget out completely. I don't see the feeling of the assembly chang ing from last year," Kleidman said.
At its April budget meetings, SA decided that UU'TV's low viewership did not warrant allocating the $$ 15,000$ necesallocating the 15,000 necea sary to provide a worthwhice service. The assembly had only $$ 6,400$ to give UUTV Which would have depleted SAs emergency rry so, th assembly cut UUTV from the budget.

Insecticide leakage empties Kimmel Hall

By Bryan Dommelly

Residents of Kimmel Hall were evacuated at about $9 \mathrm{p} . \mathrm{m}$. Monday because of a leak of insecticide fumes from Kimmel Dining Hall and Jabberwocky.
The Syracase fire department was called int to clearithe fumen from the first floor of Kimmel.

Dennis Koehler, director of SU Food Service, said the, exter. manators were making a routine monthly spraying and also spraying for cockroaches. Cockroach spraying is done once every nix months, he added.

James Dummitt, prestident of Arrow Peat Control. Baid the exterminators were nsing phyphrum, a non-tomic, nom-residual chemical fog that eliminates coclroaches.

The fog escaped from the dining hall through a broken window in a door that connects the dorm's first floor and the litchen of the dining hall.

Bruce Helwig, a fixat filoor resident, said be called the fire department becaume be thought it was gmoke from a fire.
I cante out and saw it in the tall and, called the fire department," he said, "It got so thick you conldn't see through it and you couldn't breathe."

He said the fire department opened the windows and doors so the fumes would eacape.
"The people who were famigating didn't even bother to cheek to see if there was a proper geal," Helwis said.

Elaine Blechman, dorm director of Kimmel-Marion, said that a resident advisor pulled the alarm. She maid the fumes amelled toxic but she was told they were not by firemen.
The window that the fumes came through will be cepaired by Phybical Plant, Blechman said.

one by one, bit by" bit. The senses had been working throughout, but not registering.
Sound returned. First absolute quiet, then a low hum..growing. It became the sound of conversation.
Sight returned. What was out of focus became the sharp edges of tables and glasses and silverware.

Touch returned, from nothing to the tingly sensation of cool wind on thin. Smell returned, from nondescript to that of freahly brewed coffee.
The senses may have returned, the heart may have begun to beat regularly again, the stomach may have returned to its proper place, the breath may have re-entered the vacuum, but the emotion was spent.
Spent emotion. First anger. The intensity of anger silenced the senses. But that odd feeling of relief after anger brought them back.

She had told him she had a lover. He couldn't understand why she didn't know, how she couldn't see that he loved her and that her words had hurt him. And relinauished him.
He decided to finish his pastry, and not say anything. She continued to tell him that she would be visiting this out-of-state boyfriend the first opportunity that came along.

He thought it was funny she hadn't noticed his reaction...the way he euddenly atopped reacting, funnier atill was his feeling of relief. True, he was ealous. And a little bitter; he felt he had been led on a bit. But ail in all, the anger didn't take long to subeide. Why get angy ovar comething you have no control over? he thought
But why relie? Hedidlove her, didn't he? He was sure he did. Only the loss of love could stop one's mechanism so.
He felt more than relief. He felt free. Free from possession by another. Free to feel hurt; free to hurt. Free to be selfish. Free to choose whether to care or not.
Relief and freedom, and the initial anger. He thought...if one were able to give love substance...add energy to reak it down...one would have relief freedom and anger, like a chemical reaction.
He remembered Ellie of "Heartbreak House." Her heart had been broken She continued to live. She named the house.
He decided he too would live. So he too could some day name a house.

The vanishing art of citizenship

To the editor:
I feel that one of the very obvious shortcomings of our generation is a lack of citizenship. What is citizenship? According to Webster's Dictionary, it is "the status of being a citizen, and the quality of the citizen's response to membership in a community."

We are all citizens of the same campus community, but why is there such a prominent negative response to this community? Why are people so inconsiderate of the other people on this campua? Take litter ing for example: would you like to be giving a tour to prospectivestudents and have some parents ask you, "Is the campus alyays so dirty?' of "Don't the students here have any pride?" How would you truthfully respond to that?
What it really boils down to is a lack of respect for others. We were raised'in an'era'where one"s major purpose in life was to do their own thing-and to hell with anyone who disagrees with them. Police were called "pigs" and anyone over 30 was out of touch and not worth relating to.

The lack of respect in our generation is reflected in young men parading outside Haven. at 1 a.m. parading outside Faven, at fuck: screaming, Wake up you fucki people carrying on converaations during lectures annoying both those who are there to leain something, who are, there to learn Bomething, and the professor or TA who is tryand the professor or TA who is try-

I think thatitis about time that we stop being so self-centered and develop some community awareness. Let's put meaning back into an obsolete word-citizenship.

More bang for the buck?

What has always attracted me about this university is what they can to with a dollar."
Clifford L. Winters Jr., vice chancellor for administrative operations, made this statement Oct. 2 . His view would probably be disputed by students, most of whom were probably - attracted by visions of Syracuse University"s academic programs.
Nevertheless,-Winters is the one who is right. Once again, the university has a budget surplus - $$ 1.4$ million for 1978-79.
Although this surplus is commendable from a businessman's standpoint, it is not when one looks at it from astudent's view. This surplus was gained becauge of a larger-than-expected emrollment, according to a University Senate report.
This means every student in an overcrowded class and every dorm resident in extended housing helped contribute to the university's healthy financial situation. It also adds to SU's image of a corporation rather than an institution of higher Tearning.
The univergity will probably use this surplus to give faculty members and most support. staff employees a 2 percent pay raise. While the pay raise is needed, one :must remember the conditions under which it was achieved. Faculty members will find themselves in theiromic poition of being paid more because their classrooms are over rowded.
This situation comes at a bad time for the university. Chancellor Melvin A Eggers has said repeatedly this sernester that he is trying to emphasize the academic side of SU and to put less weight on the fiscal concerns that have dominated the thinking of college administrators acrosis the country.
But it seems it's business as usual at SU. Fiscal matters are again the chief concern of the umiversity's ad ministrators. Yes, there is a $$ 1.4$ million surplus, but tuition keeps going up and the academic programs are not any better.
Perhaps the university should see what others say about it. In the 1978-79 edition of "The Insider's Guide to the Colleges," which was compiled by the staff of The Yale Daily News, SU received this unflattering description 'Syracuse's reputation is that of an ex pensiveprivate university, and it tends to take virtually anybody with average grades who can pay the cost you're going to spend four years at Syracuse, bring a . Frisbee. The academic demands on you won't be very great."
Winters claimed SU gets "more bañg for a buck." It certainly has the bucks. but the bang is noticably lacking.

A morose mascot

To the editor:
The guest comment on the back page of the Daily Orange that spoke against the throwing of oranges at football games, for both reasons of safety and psyching up the other team, hit the mark directly and should be congratulated. But at the same time, a word should be said for psyching up our fans and therefore our team.
I'm speaking about the complete lack of activity of the new mascot, the "Warrior" at the Maryland game. He trotted onto the field after the team made its entrance in his single biggest display of physical dexterity of the afternoon.

When the cheerleaders went to the other end of the field, he stayed at his spot near the fence, giving new his spot near the fence, giving new meaning to the term inertia. A couple timea 1 saw him raise his prodded on by students yelling such

There is nothing so unnatural as a writer without a reader. There you are in your room toiling over your manuscript, tightening it here, polishing it there, and for what? if no one reads it. Let's face it, you write to be read. You wouldn't work endlessly on your stary or poem if this were not true.

Come on, admit it. You'd love to be published, wouldn't you? It's only natural. If you didn't, you'd by crazy. After all, another name for an unpublished writer is housewife or garbage-man. A writer is someone in print, not just someone who says "Oh yes. I'm a writer." So come on now, don't be shy. and say it to yourself: I'd love to be published. I'm going to be published.

Well, now that you've firmly decided to have your stories and poems see the light of print, you'll have to find a magazine. And here we are, the Syracuse Review. Can you resist our offer? We wouldn't have taken out this ad' if we didn't want your story, your poem. We exist for you, not for the people on our staff. A staff does not a magazine make: what makes a magazine are the stories and poems in it.

Imagine your story or your poem in a thick, glossy magazine beautifully laid out with stunning illustrations.

Butfirst, you must be published (unless, by chance, you're waiting for posthumous recognition). A nd to be published you must submit your stories and poemis by November 1. There are no restrictions as to subject matter, and anything in length from one page up to 75 pages is allowed.

If you have questions please give us a call, or stop by our office. We're only too happy to help you. After all, your work makes or breaks the magazine. # Transfers get little aid for unique problems

By Mark Sullivan

A trangferrod to Syracuse Univer sity in September 1977 after graduating from a two-year community college and working as an on-the-air engineer at an all-news radio station in Hartford, Conn.

Al was looking forward to returning to school, but he didn't count on the problems he would face as a transfer student.
Although he had accumulated 66 credith at the junior college, only 40 were accepted at Syracuse, forcing Al to repeat courses in his major.
Despite his working experience, Al encountered difficulties when he went to WAER for a job. He was relegated to writing news briefs and made an oc casional on-the-air appearance late at night.

After a year at SU, Al-decided to return to Connecticut. He thought he was being treated unfaurly and wasting his time at SU. "I wouldn't come back to Syracuse if they gava mea free ride, Al said upon leaving.
However, Al is not the only tranafer to encounter problems. Over the last 5 years. Syracuse University has admanafor sfudents a year according to transfer students a year, according to missions "There's always potential for missions. "There's always potential for problems," Smith admits. "because at atudent has to make a mid-stream adjustment."

Transfer students have problems that are unique to them," Tina $K$. Foley, assistant director-for orientation, said. "Transferrs don't need that much information as to what college is like, but they, need information particular to SU," Syracuse University can be a scary place for freshmen, but it can be equally intimidating for transfer students. Like freehmen, transfera must acclimate themselves to new academic and social bituations.
Aside from the academic and social changes, transfer students encounter specific problems, such as a lack of a comprehensive orientation program. Danny Natowaky, a mid-year sophomore transfer from Rocherter, had no orientation prior to attending SU. As a result, he did not receive a tour of the campus and was "totally lost" at registration.
Natowsky is now happy he transferred, but said, "Fhere Bhould bys some sort of structured program;
fomething to bring transfera torether." Trannfer orientation is difficult to orgamize successfully, according to Foley. "In the past, separate orien tation programs were set up for transfers, but were not that wellattended," she said. "It was a "Catch22' situation. Colleges didn't want to see the students because they hadn't received transcripts yet, and students didn't want to come because there hadn't been credit evaluation yet."'

Foley said her idea of an ideal orientation would include credit evaluation and expoaure to the academic programs and living environment. Also, Foley recommends that transfers spend time with upperclassmen in their own program.

This would give them a chance to ask the nitty-gritty questions about the ascial scene and what sort of thinge there are to get involved with.: Foley .
Housing also presents a problem for tranger students. The Office of Residential Life housed more than 700 Students trangfering to SU and the State University of New York College of this ynmental Science and Fores try this year. Requests for housing are processed as they are received and ORL: attempts to accommodate transfers in

Also, ORL has instituted a new system for placing studenta in university housing. "At the last moment, we can't worry about who gets whom," said Jean Crawford, assistant residential life director for North Campus. Crawford also baid an attempt is made to group tranzfers together.

It's good to be with someone who has the same problems you do,"

Tina K. Foley, asaistant director for orientation, help: transfer studentsadjust to the strange college community.
unhappy, at least they can be unhappy together:"

More than 300 transfer students wrere placed in South Campus housing this year, but because of a special program the transition for them became easier. Resident advisers Marie Watkins and Mark Roehm, alongy with past director of South Campus housing Laura Tar cinale, set up a special transfer program at Skybarn this year.
The Skybarn prosram consiated of an orientation to acclimateestudents to university services auch as academic counseling and financiai aid. A mixer was held so transfer-students could meet one another on a social bassis.
"Transfers are a epecial population in themselves, Watking said. They're in a new living situation and a new academic situation and need every bit of help they can get."
Watkins said that like freshmen, transfers often ask, "Where do I so?"

The apecial program at Skybarn attempted to answer that question by telling students where they could go for food, money and academic and emotional support.
"We tried to make them knowledgeable," Watkins said. "We tried to avoid giving them sensory overload, but we wanted it so they could recognize a name or face they could go to in case they needed help."
"There are thinks, that we, take for granted, like buseos acirity and $M$ Street," Watkins continued, "Brat these basic suryival skills are all newh to trainiefers."

More than onethird of South Campus transfer Btaderrts turned out for the orientation programa and riore than onehalf showed up for the mixer
"We're just trying to make things less scary, less threatening," Wathins said "Transfering can be a ahock and we just want to soften the shock.

Services relieve freshmen stress

provides a network of services geared to help them, and all SU studenta, with any kind of problem.
Jane Hyde, coordinator of Student Personnel Services often helps troubled freshmen. The aervice offers "facilitative counseling," she asid. It directs atudents to the appropriate ser vice "so they don't get thwilled around."
About 50 gtudents who "have 100 different needis." come in every week. Part of the job, Hyde seid, is getting ap pointrnents for students with the serices that aid the health center, and the paychiatric aocial worker.
It ${ }^{-}$doesn't have to be a dramatic crisis" for a student to need help, Hyde said but her office does follow up on gtudents who have had such criges as accidents or sttracks, to see if it can beof help. Hyde asid that often when dealing with a student, she reminds hergelf that "this is a person who is hurting and how can we help?"

A

nother helpful service, begun lat year, is the coumselor-in-residence. The geven counselors-in-residence serve all areas of university hourging. Richard Buzz" Strong, counselor-in-residence for Flint and Day halls, gaid he gives short-term counseling to students ander preseure. Students tall out prea sures ranging from career difinculties to drug problems to a death in the family, Strong said. If the strebaful situation cannot be brought under con rol in four to six sessions, counselors refer the atudent to where he can be better served.

Strong said that despite the counseling work they dio, the counselors should not be looked upon as professionalk "Counseling is too good to be reserved for sick people," he said. "Everyone can benefit.
The resident adviser on each floor is probably the Exrat and most avallable person a freshman can go to when he cels pressured or just wants to talk The ftas are in the dorme not only to keep order, but also to give the new student a gense of community, to make him feel at home at SU, Strong said. The counselors-in-residence, along with the RAs, provide a "support system for students," he added.

he new academic environment can also trouble freshmen. A poor grade on a test can be disturbing to a freshman who was used to nothing but success in high school. Falling behind in onesub ect can have a disastrous snowball effect, and before the freshman know some freshmen, the intricacies of

There are six workshops a semester in each area. The student decides which workshops be will attend and after attending one or two of them he nay take an exam. Students who pass exams in all four areas receive one redit.
Jackson said both she and John Radigan, coordinator of ASC, are accessible to students for information on the above services or even for "on hespot conngeling on an informal basia. We like to maintain the per bonal touch." ghe said.

he psychiatric social worker, part of Health Services, Il1 Waverly Ave, offers crisis treatment and short-term therapy, according to Kathleen Goda, ne of three psychiatric social workers. Goda said she does all she can to talk out problems with stadents, but if a student still needs more help after six weeks, she refers hirn to long-term therapy. In the past. Goda suid, the staff tried helping a few people over a long period of time, but now it gives short-term therapy so it can serve more people.
The center treats 15-20 persons a week, mostly underclassmen. Many students have reservations about see ing a psychiatric social worker.
Students do not know what to expect from someone with the title "peychiat ric social worker," and are sometimes worried about confidentiality. Goda anid she understands the apprehenaion, but atressed that files are confidential adding that "no parenta find out"
There are also many off-campus agencies that offer aid to students, such as Alcoholics Anomymous and the Better Business Bureau. Students can find out about these programs through Student Services and Development or he SU. Counseling Resources Fandbool. The handboolic, prepared by Hyde's Student Pernomnel Services, lists 63 on and off-campus services.

NN。 one knows how many SL freshmen will drop out this year; there are no figures on which to base an estimate. Regigtrar Carole Barone aay: her office is just this year beginning to compile dropout statistics.
If the registrar does not know the anticipated drop-out rata, the freshmen who remain will know when they realize that the owererowded dorms are retting emptiex every day
It is not too late for the anonymone SU freshman to get heip. But it is too late for the alresdy depprted fremhmen who might etill be here if they had oniy mown there were 50 many people and services just waiting to be of help.

Some punk influence doee creep into Parellel Lines.' ${ }^{\text {II }}$ Know But I Don't Know" sounds like a tune in the repertoire of many bands currently playing at Max's Kansas City ts flat harmonies and ominous guitars make for quirky sound foreign to mos mellow rock listeners.
"Will Anything Happen" features a guitar riff that would be at home on a Dead Boys album, yet Harry's vocals keep the song from Patening the listener
Perhaps the most impressive song on the album is "Fade Away and Radiate." Ex-King Crimson guitarist Robert Fripp lends some spacy playing to this haunting number and makes it a standout.
Harry is well-liked for her good looks, but she can also sing well. Her voice does tend to get brassy, ${ }^{\text {as in }}$ "One Way Or Another." On the other hand, "Sunday Girl" features Harry's best style - wispy. sweet and sincere.
Despite Harry's domination of the spotlight, Blondie is very much a band. Jimmy Destri's keyboards flavor the music and help to make the band distinctive. Guitarists Frank Infante and Chris Stein work well together, and bassist Nigel Harrison and drummer Clem Burke provide a solid hythm section.
Parallel Lines is an album for people who are genuinely sick of the masic they hear on the radio. The sense of fun and energy between the grooves of this record is contagious and could help people accept new things. Still, the lighthearted approach of this album should not be a surprise to anyone. After all, blondes do have more fun.

"Any money coming from a large agency to be used specifically for edncation or research is a sponisored loan." McIntyre said.

The NDSL, for example, is a sponsored loan because the federal government is considered an agency.
"A restricted loan means the donor gives the money to the university to be used for university loans; it is not federal money," McIntyre added.

The first bill muthorizing a major national loan program began as part of the National Education Act of 1958 gher Education Act of 1958. Since then, the act has been amended in 1965 , 1972 and 1976. In 1972, the name was changed to the National Direct Student Loar

New York was the second state to form a student loan program, according to Patricia Mullins, director of the corporation's loan development program.
"Up until 1965, the state ran the student loan program," she said. "In . 1965, the federal government came in and studied our loan program: Federal legislation was passed and a federal loan program was created (which was modeled after New York's program)," she added.
Although the bulk of the funds that make up the GSL now come from the federal government, some administrative funds come from New York State, Mallins eaid. "Rigit now, I think that most of Congress is for most of the loan programs," he said. "I think that it is safe to assume that Congress won't ever cut out the loan programs without having other avenues open. 1980 gives us a chance for a freah start" he added.
Before a student who borrowed money can graduate, he must meet with a manncial aid officer for an exit interview, during which drrangements are made for paying back the
During the past few years, stories about loan scandals have appeared throughout the United States. About 20 percent of the students who borrow under the NDSL default. This is amigher rate than in the GSL program.
"Unfortunately, some students don't call us when they have problems, and they ignore their bills. If we get no response from them, we assign a collection agency to that student," McIntyre said.
The agency then contacts the student to find out why loan payments haven't been made and to pressure the student into cooperating with the Office of Student Loan Accounting.
McIntyre added, "Quite a few students have to be taken to court. Maybe 10 percent of the loans have to be assigned to a collection agency.
:The Office of Education is responsible for enforcing laws and informing the university on how to administer loans. They wrote uprules, and one of those rules states that we must bring legal action against bring legal action againgt students who default ons," she explained.

Eamon McEneaney From Cornell star to SU coach

By Alan Fectean
Four games before the 1977 collegiate lamosse seasom ended, Cornell's Eamon McDneaney was convinced the Big Red wonld win its second comsecxive NCAA Division title. He also knew it was to be ita last with the help of his aer vices.
"It's hard to imagine that I won't be playing competitive lacroase after May," he said then. "It has-been such a bit part of me for 20 long.

Although Cornell won the titile and McEneaney the Enners Award as the nation's ovistanding lacrosse player ao pro contracta waited for the threetime All-American, as is the norm for collegiate lac rosese players.
Playing with the Central New York entry in the National Club Lacrosse League, the U.Snational team in the recent world tournamen in Great Britain, and coaching with Cornell last apring kep the flashy attack close to his aport, and to his alma mater.

But this year, McEncarcey has moved upstate slightly to SU. But, juat so he would not become too homesick, he brought along the Cornel offensive strategy and is now teaching it to the 10 th-ramked Orangemen at fall practice.

The - offense emphasizes mavement and balanced acoring- It'a more of a team offense,"- McEnesney said. Inistead of having one guy an your big scorer, you tend to get more production from everyone, imclucing guysewho maybe would not have scored *s much in another offense.

Last Year, SU relied heavi on attackmen fom Abbott and Tim O'Hara for ecorimg power When the pair was shut off, so was Syracuse, and now with Abbott's eligibility goine, a team-oriented offense is needed. So far in the ab breviated fall season the aystem has been succesaful as Syracuse can chaimen $11-7$ vic tory over national power Rutgers.

With so much movement in the offense, the team has been running lize a collective John Havlicek to get in shape.
"All right." MeEneaney joked to a panting group of Orangemen after a recent practice, "how many of you hate me now? Everybody raise their hands."
Everybody would have, ex cept they were too tined.
"There's a lot of potential on this team," he said. "Fum damentally we need some work But we're going to the playoffs. Thare's no doubt." "His enthusiasm is contagious," naid SU head coach Roy Simmona Jr. "He aeems to get everyone fured up."
Eamon Wants to vin badly," most SU players seem to aay. "He's froning us into the-turf, but it's all going to be worth it.

Running was a fundamental preached by McEneaney' coach at Cornell, Fichie Moran. "I had the pleasure of being coached by the two beat in lacrosse today, Richie Moran and Bill Rich (McEneaney's high school coach on Long Island) Without a doubt, they have in fluenced me a great deal in the way 1 coach. They stressed motivation and bal movement. Richie is the best motivator in lacrosse today What I like to see in a practice is ahort, hard worthwhile prac tices. As lang as everybody is moving, nobody's walking. then you don't need a long workout.
There is no donbt McEneaney a legs helped him as a player. He was never paymeally imposing and at one hime played at less than 150 pounds. But quick feet earned him 92 goals and 164 assists in three years of varsity olay. He was not eligible dur ing his freshman year becauge of an Ivy League ban on freshman participation.
At Cornell, he became half of the "French Connection" with another three-time All American, Mike French. Hav ing French around helped McEneaney average 3.8 anbists per game in 1975, an NCAA record. He and French traded the Turnbull Award for the nation's outstanding attackman. MeFinenney won it in 1975 and 1977 , while Fronch took the award in 1976.
Such was the dominance of Cornell - a reign finally interrupted by Johms Hoplins in last year'a NCAA title game. And Syracuae will try further to remove the Big Red from its lofty position as the Orange face Cornell this epring for the first time since 1976.
MeEneaney againgt the Big Red? Strance but true. "T'm Red? Strange but true. "I'm looking forwward to it. It should be interesting," he said with a wry smile.
The outgoing and boisterous McEneaney in a lacrosse coach personified. But he does not see his future in the sport. "I'm a writer. Especially a creative writer," he said. He is enrolled as a graduate student at the Newhouse School of Pablic Communications as a mapazine major.
con see mybelf an a conch, unceas they start raining the pay scale awful soon," he said.

- In the meantime, the creative side of the man is put aside each afternoon at practice. "There'a nothing creative about coaching. It's very regimented and disciplined. All you're doing is Etanding and yelling."
At the very lesst, the yelling keeps him-close tonkensort Andondgete the impression be hopes the will be yelling many of the same thinge in Syracuse that he did at Comell

Senate postpones action on tenure proposal

By David Bayder

It's going to be at least a month before a new tenure policy is considered by the University Senate.
A motion to pass the policy was tabled at yesterday's Senate meeting by the Agenda Committee to allow for more discussion.

Judging from the reaction of senators during discussion, it may be more than a month before $a$ policy is finally decided.
"I'm, not happy about the delay," said James K. Weeks, chairman of the Committee on Appointments Promotions, which formulated the policy. "But I guess it was kind of naive to- expect the motion would be passed the first time it was brought up for consideration.
"It's going to be hard to get a document that everyone wil agree on," Weeks added.

Under the proposed policy, "each department, school or college will secure evaluations of teaching from past or present students of the candidate." didion atudent representatives would join representanves would join

"Many of the statementa about ambiguity are correct," Weeks replied. "But I think that in order to satisfy some divergent views, they made them appear as ambiguities. It can be a handy excuse for some people to mask some deeper objections."

There were no objections ex pressed about increasing student input into the tenure process. Some senators baid the policy should givestudents more responsibility by giving them a vote on individual schools' tenure committees. Under the proposed policy, they would not have a vote.
Weeks said his committee will accept comments from all the senators during the next

SA plan to improve relations among faculty, students fa/ters

By Carolyn Beyrau

Student Association's plan for a program to improve communication among faculty. students and the administration is floundering because of lack of interest.

Three weeks ago, SA sent letters to more than 75 administrators and department chairmen asking for their involvement in the prograin. But SA received only two responses, said Bob Farr, SA vice president for university/community relations:
"It amazed me," Farr said. "I was very disillusioned", disillusioned."
The plan calls for faculty members, atudents and adminiatrators to meet in a relaxed setting. Suggestions have included going out to dinner, going for a walk or simply sitting and talking-
"We'd like to see the program get off the ground by next fall," Farr said. "We've encountered gevere obstacles."
The College of Arts and Sciences has a program in which faculty advisers invite new students to dinner or some other form of entertainment, said Peter Stace, Arts and Sciences director of advising.
"The faculty advisers ought to know their students well," Stace said. "One way to ac complish this is to get together with them in situations outside of the office.

SA plans to send letters to freshmen and transfer students asking for their participation. In addition, Farr said he plans to make an appeal at department meetings for faculty and administrators to participate.

Group that helps offenders needs money to expand offices

However, CJAC may soon encounter difficulties in providing its services. Funded by federal; local and private monies, the organization is seeking to "regionalize" the Turning Point program. Currently, the CJAC office in Syracuse serves Onondaga, Cayuga, Cortland, Madison and Oswego counties. Under the regionalization plan CJAC would open branch of fices in these other counties.

To put the plan into effect,

CJAC is seeking county as sistance. CJAC has requested $$ 15,000$ for its budget from Onondaga County. The amount will cover only a frac tion of CJAC's operating corts, but the request is significant for other reasons. Last year, CJAC's budget was $$ 235,000$.
"The county must support ue to show good faith," Moore claimed. "We can't very well ask the state for money if our own county turns us down. The county and-region anid they would favor Continued on pege efforen

Lefters  Washington: a side forgotten

To trie editorr

What disturbs me about Marsha Eppotito's article ("Glowing with ageless gparkle, DO, Oct. 16) was her response toward the innex-city She stated, "Sometrow' I. found it easy to ignore that part of the city [the'ghettos] I tried to pretend that it idint exith Even now when I think aboti Washington, it's the monnments and parks that 1 renember,not the ghetwo.

A thatement of that kind is filled with wiforgivable prejudice, especially when it comes from a government intern. Eppolito must not take offense when I Bay that the citizens of Washimgton would probably like to forget her and those who share her beliefs. We do not need officials in our government who are willing to forget and ignore a large part of society and this nation.
As a government intern, Eppolito should feel ashamed for expresaing such a view. The citizens of this country have no use for government officials who are unconcerned with our inner-cities, especially since they are some of the most troubled areas in our conntiry. Now is the time to aid our inner-cities not ostracize them.
This choice of ignoring the ghettos is the very reason why this past atummer, Washington, D.C. fought for a constitutional amendment that would entitle them to voting Congressional representatives.
I noticed, however, that Eppolito mentioned nothing about this congressional vote. The residents of congressional vote. The resudents of Washington, D.C. are the only citizens in the Continental United States who are not represented in States who are not represented in Congress by voting officials. It seems alarming that after 202 years of independence, there are citizens of this nation who can rightfully claim that thay are victims of "taxation without representation."
I do not ask anyone to love the inner-city of our nation's capital. I only ask that it not become an object of serious insult. For this notion that Washington's inner-city is a place of little worth will only be met with disdain - disdain for both the notion and its bearer.

dent. But there is a limit to fosgil. fuels and that limit is in sight. People should begin to realize that no amount of money can buy something when that something is gone. Asour "cleaner" fuels (natural gas and oil) are uged up, we will be relying more heavily on nuclear and coal-fired power.

Conservation is not the final answer, butitcan go along way. It is your right to use the energy you need, but it's becoming more and more of a crime to waste it.

A maniac's confession

There has been a drastic increase in the number of manias" in our great society over the past few years. Beatlemania, discomania, cleptomania, Lisztomania, marathon mania, pyromania, Tasmania, just to name a few. Whenever aomeone is asked for his or her opinion about one of these maniacal purauits, the response is invariably "I love t" or "I hate it."
To the mania lovers, I asy "more power to you." To" the mania-haters, I say "don't knock maniacs," because you too may someday contract a mania disorder. I can apealc from practical experience on this, because $I$, too, used to put down maniacs. But now, I have had to change my attitude because I suffer from one of the worst mania aftictions known to man.

This mania is so irresistable that $I$ often have trouble getting my schoolwork done. It is a mania so, powerful and captivating that it frequently provokes nnderstand why' I spend so mich time in such a "min understand why I spend somuchtime insuch a mindless pursuit And yet, I love it and I can't do quarterback, and on weekends I go garga over quarterback, and on weeke
My miniacal fascination with pro foothall is an af fliction that has plagued meall my life. Sunday afternoons have come and gone, but invariably I could always be found in front of the tube with my feet propped up and a faithful six-pack at my aide. And I oved every minute of it.
This pigeskin passion is so powerful and all-encompassing that I have often pasaed up opportunities o read textbookg, clean my bedroom and watch reruns of "Star Trek." But the enjoyment that I got out of my weeldy football fixes more than adequately nade up for these lost opportunities.
People have often criticized me for my maniacal obsession with football. "I don't know why you waste your time on that silly game," a former girlfriend once told me. I tried to placate her, but deepdown inside I knew she didn't stand a chance against Curt Gowdy in competing for my affections on Sunday afternoons. I also told her it wasn't nice to make fun of sick people and she shouldn't knock what she hasn't tried. But alas, she developed a mirong immunity to this strange mania affiction and could not bring herself to indulge. Her loss.

From time to time, people have tried to purge me of my illness. Friends and relatives have often tried for cing diversions on me to cure me of this disorder. Some intolerants even went so far as to call me up on the telephone, posing as professors and telling me they were rescheduling midterm exams on the following day. Although these attempted purges were aning day. Athough these attempted purges were annoying at first, I have since grown to realize that people are only trying to help, that these "curea" are peopie are only trying to help, that these "cures" are part of the affiction and that therearesome peopie in this wo chant.

I know I'm not alone, either. There are people all over campus who siffer from this same maniacal disorder. And for those of you who do, stick to your guns.
So, if anybody ever hassles you about your love of football-or for that matter, any other secret pas-sion-just remind him of the old adage that one man's malcontent is another man's mania.

In a univergity of 15,000 gtadents shoved into overcrowded classes, it is easy to feel alienated, depersonalized, lost: Often a teacher is thought of as a faceleas processer of papers, and edministrators are seldom, thought of at all. At least, not an people.
But theyare people, personalities that can have tremendous impact on "a situdent's life. - These are the people who'shape our courses of studjer whar away in their ivory tovere, don't they long to meet the students whose education rests in their hands? Was it not their pasmion for teaching, a desire to share knowledge, that led them to their jobs? Wouldn't they like to come in closer contact with the people to whom they have dedicated their lives?

Apparently not.
Three weeks ago, Student Association sent letters to over 75 administrators and department heads asking for their involvement heads asicing for their involvement person-to-person contact between fresh and students, expecialiy for lunch or visiting one's home were suggested to let students and administrators get to know each other away. from academic pressures.

Only one administrator and one department head were interested enough to respond.
It seems incredible that administrators and department heads are not eager to participate in one of the most enriching poasibilities in a university setting: experiencing other people. Students spend most of their time with other gtudents, and faculty and administrators with other faculty and administrators. But aren"t both groups at the university for each other? A chance to share with one another outside of the classroom or another outside of the chasaroom or office wonld mroadon horizons and education should be doing.
It could be that busy schedules and overstuffed mailboxes have and oversiufed mailozes have ministrators from responding to SA's appeal. However, deapite good intentions, unless some interest is soon expressed; the program could die, leaving students with. a desolate impression: the faculty doesn't care.
We hope this is not true. We would like to believe that faculty and admimistrators do-not want to hide behind podiums and desks. The only way to show this is for administrators and department ministrators and department members who did not receive a personal letter-to write SA and express your interest. We students are eager to meet you.

Problems in scheduling, space result from renovation of HL

By Rich Cahill
Although the renovation of the Hall of Languages has not caused many scheduling problems, the lack of office space has been a difficulty.

Carole Barone, Syracuse University registrar, said the biggest change that the closing of the building caused is that classes are more spread rinaroughout the day. Shesaidit: ischedule the monsible to schedule the majority of classes

The more popular class times are usually those in the middle of the day.
4 HI, currently undergoing a s4 million renovation, is scheduled to reopen next September.
Offices that had been located in HL have been moved to cother buildings on campos., The College of Arts and Sciences offices, the English department, Academic Counseling Service and the Honors Program are now in Archbold Gymnasium.

The foreign languages and literature department and the classics department have moved to HBC.
To help relieve congestion, many English classes have been shifted to the evening. Professor Arthur W. Hoffman, chaixperson of the English department, said nine sections of English 101 are now taught in the evening.' They are held two nights a week beginning at 7:30.
Some upper-level English courses are also being offered in the evening-

Jeannette Macero, assistant professor of English and assistant to the chairperson of the English department, said some of the night courbes may have been necessary because Of the large size of this year's freshman class. There are about 2,950 students in this year's freshman class, an increase from 2,350 in last year's ${ }^{2}{ }^{2} \mathrm{my}$
"We might have had to Btretch ethe day anyway." Macerio siaid However, Barona disagreed. She said nojeinch problems wreat created by a lairy Wremhuar class in 1976 .

Whaiferproblems for students may be minimalic the horinhipe inflictad on, the staffs of the English department and Arts and Sciences offices may be greater.

Hoffrnan said the move to Archbold has resulted in difficult working conditions because of the high noise level and lack of privacy. Also, the gym was very warm in the summer and itis expected to be cold in the winter.
But he downplayed the problem. "We don't want the university to spend huge amounts of money on what are basically temporary quarters," he said.

Only one human phemomenon could bring together weight-watchers and Freihofers, fraternity brothers and day-old mpatloaf, and peanut butter, jelly and mustard in blissful harmony. It's The Munchies.
It's not just an ordinary craving or a natural hunger pang. True munchies occur oniy', while under the infund while your mind may be in a fog and your yody may be numb, your mouth knows just what it wants - anything.
Of course, there are certain old favorites that seem to qualify as universal munchies-fóods chocolate chip cookies, ice cream, doughnuts, English mufrin pizza, and peanut butter and jelly sandwiches (known affectionately as PBJs.) But While some are satisfied with the mundane, others claim "You gotta be original!" and offer-a list of suggested original" and offer-a list of snggested culinary delights that could nill a page of Believe-It-Or-Not. These strange-but-true munchies include raw eggs, fried onion sandwiches, celery with fried onion sand wiches, celery with peanut butter and Fluff, fried bologna, smoked oyster and pineapple pizza and a fraternity favorite called "steel pattie sandwiches" (two cold breaded veal patties with a slice of bread inbetween).
"When you got The Munchies." gaid one student, "anything tastes OK."
Most munchers atick to "room stuff" or "whatever's in the fridge," but will occasionally venture out to conquer new frontiers of gorging, such as Syracuse University Food Service dining halls. "To tell you the truth," a Sadler Hall resident said, that's the only way I can stomach it."
Long-distance munching adventures found students trudging acrose campus to a steak dinner at a friend'a apartment a gourmet munch or across Syracuse to Abes Donuts Supreme or Grandma's Pies. One student recalled a 30 -mile munchout trek in which hie drove a van full of people to $a$ Jack-in-the-Box restaurant at 4 a.m Jack-in-the-Box restaurant at 4 a.m. the van," he said aleeping in the back of munched out and drove back. One of my friends didn't even remember that my atre."

A little imagination can bring fun

Looks good, doesn't it? Wéll, it looks even better if you'restoned.
Delectables such as these are fayored munch-out foods for partakers of the wicked weed.
and games to the world of munchouts. Ome manic munch turned into "Toast Wars," a spontaneous production star ring a group of stoned young men and three trays of unwanted cinnamon toast. A more structured contest is "sausage mining" in which the brothers of one fraternity man thernselves with forks and compete to see who can dig the most sausages out of the cook's leftover lasagna. "It's entertainment and food at the same time," said one brother.

In a further display of the relationship between munching and getting high, several experimental-minded atudents tried new methods of food and drug administration. One recalled trying to eat. a chunk of hashish: "You chew on it; it expands and you get this big clump. in your mouth: -It really tastes 'foul.".

In a similar, more inventive attempt, two munchy young men began by raiding the kitchen and diacovered something new. "We wanted to see what we could have fun with, so we snorted Negtle's Quik," one said, laughing. "We got a chocolate rush."
The time to munch is "whenever the mood hits," according to one student, and this definition knows no limits. One dorm resident remembers mun ching out on hot English mufin pizza with his friends - at 8:30 a.m.

How can this incredibly powerful force transform otherwise sensible, well-fed individuals intoravenous gluttons? Evidently, it's all in'their heads.
"Food tastes sensational,"exclaimed a frequent muncher. Another added, It's great - total indulgence and satisfaction.
One young woman attempted to describe the munching mystique: "It seems hice your stomach enlarises like you can eat everything. Normally, if you ate that much, you'd die!"
Don't laugh. Marvin Druger, head of SU's biology department, said he does not know the biological basis of munching out, but conjectured a possible relationship to certain experiments performed on rats. "The part of the brain controling appetite is called the appostat," Druger explained. "In experiments on rats, scientists have been able to keep the appostat artifically atimulated, and the rata just eat and drink until they die. If marijuana affects the appostat in some way, that could explain why it maikes people want to eat."
Of course, it's doubtful that anyone could die from munching out, but that doesn't mean there are no painful consequences. Although one muncher claims, "There's always room for more," another admits "You eat when you're not hungry and you just feel so . sick."
'Still, munching madness goes on The worst thing is when there'a noth ing in the fridge but butter and wilted "Buad, said a PBJ-and-mustard lover "But there's always Cocoa Crispies."

Here's a suggestion for thoge who seek an escape from the smokeand munch routine: Feed your head and your face at the same time. Add a "pinch" of creativity to your favorite dish with "Cooking With Grass - the first all-new, improved, international grass recipe book."
Diehard smokers may ask, "Why bother?" To this, authors George Vye and Stewart Grossman answer that eating rather than smoking results in "lesis waste and a better head"," an idea so practical and economical, even Mother would be proud.
And although Mother probably wouldn"t keepajar of grass on her spice rack, she would certainly be impressed by the ambitious recipes included in the book. No longer satisfied with the familiar "hash brownies,"' the daring can now indulge in 'Sinful Coulash, Caviar and Egg Dip, and a variety of international dishes to boggle the mind - literally.

Still, one needn't be the Galloping Gourment to enjoy the merits of a marijuana mouthful. Properly prepared, grass can add dash to even the simplest smack. "Cooking With Grass" offers these guidelines:

- Remove all twigs and seeds.
- The average serving is one teaspoon of grass a person, but it varies. plin ${ }^{3}$ the and then adjusting this measurement according to its potency. (This will also give you a head start, so to speak.)
- Heat is necessary to release the head; if the recipe does not call for baking, just put the potin a pan and fry baking, just put the potin apan and
- Schedule your blowout banquet for a weeltend, or for some time when you have noworic to do. It may take a while for the grass it will last for hourts. does, it will last for howre.

Imagine arriving at Oatrom Coop on opening day, all bet to move in. Then you are told the Co-op no longer exiats.
This is what one freshman faces in this year's Goon Show, scheduled for Oct 20. 21, 27 and Nov. 3, 7:30 and 10 p.m. in Crouse Auditorium.
The 19th annual Goon Show consists of various skits and songs that depict the ordeals of freshman life. The show alao parodies life at SU in general. according to "Mama Gron" Anne Chaikowaky.
The cast consists mostly of Goon Squad members. However, the auditions were open to anyome interested.
"The show takes a lot of work," said Chaikowsky. "The people get abeolutely nothing from it, as far as pay or credit.

But you do develop lasting friendships."
While the show's plot changes from year to year, the characters remain basically he same. The show always begins with a freshman on opening day, Chaikowaky said.
The plot idean coincide with matters of current interest on campus. This year's subjects include the bookstore boycott, the HL renovation and the student union demorastration.

- "Some ideas are used again and again," Chaikowaky said, because they are always relevant You can always make fun of Food Service and the Chancellor."
The plota also reflect the changing times. A few years ago, the freshman girl character, Suaie, wanted a career, whila her mother pushed the idea of marriage. Now Mom is the feminist and Susiesimply wants a husband.

Rape prevention class to tegegin

By Paul Franco A course in rape prevention will be offered to full-time Syracuse University students starting Oct 31 .
The free course, offered jointly by the Office of Student Atfairs, the Special Populations Services in the Division of Student Services and the health; recreation and physical education departments, will meet from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Wrestling Building near Manley Field House.

The course is designed to help women prevent rape and to teach karate techniques, gaid Sheryl Silva, coordinator of Special Population Services and the person responsible for the pilot program.
"The operation of the course is three-fold," Silva explained. First, it will teach some selfdefense. Second, it will provide attitude training, and thira, it will discuss ways of (rape) prevention."

Ernest Starr, a fourth-degree black belt, will be the instructor. Starr, who designed the courge primarily for college otudents, has taught rape prevention at Cazenovia prevention at Cazenovia College and for the Manlius Department, Silva said.
Department, Silva said
leted the coure Silva completed the course, Silva said prepared for a rape situation and to understand more about and to prevention.
"Hopefully, they'll be better prepared to handle the situation because they'll have attitude training and self-defense technique,: silvásaid. Silva said enxollment is limited to. 20 people. because, with only one instructior, and two assistants, that is the optimum number of students to undergo the intensive training involved.

She said the sourse is being offered on a trial basis. If student interest is extremely high, she said she hopes the university will offer the course unext aemester as a onecredit next semester as a one-credi gym course in the physica education department.
Students interested., in registering for the course should bring their SU ID cards to Silva in 309 Steele Hall.

Still, Moore maintains that CJAC provide essential ser vices and datarves the money. "The' division of parole needs ns," the said. "Over the last 18 months: we re served 90 people. Without money from the county, 900 people are going to hit the streets without anything."
The county's budget allots money for the sheriffs department for correctional services and jails, but none to CJAC.

County Sheriff John Dillon is among those who feel CJAC deserves financial assistance from the county.
"They help the jails," Dillon said. "The rehabilitation ger* vices they offer can't be measured. I think they deserve it a hell of st lot more than some a hell of ar people who got it;
However: CJAC maintains that by providing -help to offenders and ex-offenders, the group is closer to the root of the problem than prisons.

In addition. CJAC tries to provide for the families of convets, by supplying transporcation for visits and by offering counseling. The time when ing counseling. The inner when returnahorme is a crucial point in any rehabilitation program, according to Moore.
"People get nervous when their husband or brother is coming home from prison," Moore said. "It's not easy. People aren't always there. waiting with open arms."

The people at CJAC are particularly proud of their employment service for released convicts Last year, CJAC placed 202 out of 290 job apAlicante, according to Moore. A follow-up on the job placement program snowed that only five of those 202 did not hold on to their jobs.

In addition to services for prisoners and released cons, CJAC offers a diversion programing for criminal offenders less than 16 years of age. ## Going it alone: Kenny Loggins to appear on Landmark stage

By uefrey Romanow ther seven years an part of he popular Loggins/Messina uo. Kenny Loggins now enoys his own apotlight. The 26-ear-old singer will appear golo at the Landmaris Theatre at 8 tonight.
"It's a little shalcy going out on your own." Logeins said in an interview last spring at his Santa Barbara home. "The in dustry is full of stories of duos that died after splitting up. A verformer can't rest on hil aurels for more than 30 econds. You make an abum, you put it out, you forget about you start the next one.
However, Loggins said he would glady play as a Eriend with any other musicians who asked him. "I don't want to be part of any supergroup. I don's need to be standing in the shadows anymore," he said.
Yet there is no need for Loggins to be in the shadows His first album, Celebrate Me Home has already gone platinum, and he said his newest album, Nightwatch, is better. "Nightwatch is the best work I've done yet," he said. I'm very happy and very excited abont this album.
Loggins has' had little time to rest since the start of his solo carecr. The singer was married ust before he began work on Celebrate Me Home. There was no vacation for the newlyweds $21 / 2$ months after the album was completed.
Loggins wasn't always a nusician. He attended Pasadena City College as a telecommunications major Although he always wanted to perform Lopring enid he was perform, Logrins said he was time learming something to fál back on ifIdidn't'make it as a musician." He left school to audition with band sand "play uveic for anyone who would listen." .
In 1970, Columbia executive Don Ellis introduced Loggine to Jim Messina. Messina hac heard four of Loggins tune which had been recorced by he Nitty Gritty Dirt Band The duo was born with the hit album Sittin' In. Since then Loggins and Messina have roven their talents with seven successful albums, five of them gold.
According to Loggins, the breakup with Messina was no more than a creative decision There was no problem with L&M There was a moment that comes, very eimilar to a love affair, where you realize that you are you, and your mate, partner, lover, whatever, is separate from you," he said. "It was time to go on to other hinge.
Loggins said working with Messina was unforgettable and stimulating. "I feel excited by the new career, and maybe part of that feeling is from past

Morris brightens dark football fortunes  When he first began playing because

By Michael Eisen

It has been a sad season for Syracuse University football fans. They've seen Bill Hurley crack three rits and the Orangenmen lose three home garnes. Last Saturday's crowd at Archbold even saw Dave Jacobs miss an extra point against
But there have been bright spots. The "biggest" sensation has been Joe Morris, the diminutive freshman running back from Ayer, Mass.
He is currently the leading ruaher 394 yarda. He had a high game of 119
ve. Illinois and his 6.4 yards per carry is almost two yards better than Art Monk. In addition, Morris is Syracuse's foremost kick returner with 143 yards on six returns, an average of 23.8 .
Impressive statistics are nothing new to Morris. He was a three-year starter for his high school football and basketball teams as well as the track team's leading sprinter. "I was yard champ-"Morris a aid proudly However, it is football that the freshman enjoys most. Strange as it seems now, hewas an offensive guard

He down'z weer ligendary mumber 44, but freehman Low Morris the bigger guys played halfback:"

Fortunately, Morris eventually found his way to the backfield. In high school he was named all-league three Eimes and in his senior year he won the league scoring championship with 136 points.
With such notable honors, it is no surprise.that Morris was recruited by such schools as Arizona State, Iown and Boston College. "I weighed the and chose SU mainly for academics:" says Morris. "Also, Coach Maloney and Coach Zucharelli impressed me. They said I'd be treated fairly like everyone else and I have been."

Improving with age

Maloney has been equally enthused with his new sensation. "Joe's been really outstanding and he's getting better each weel. When he first got here, he was a normal freshman sort of bewildered. But he's worked hard and improved every phase of his game," said SU's head conch.
Hard work is something Morris must do to overcome his lack of size. Though listed at 5 -foot-9 in the program, he admits to being only 70 pounds on his powerfully built frame;
"Joe's size never botheredus at all," anys SU backfield coach Tom Coughlin. "He's compactly put together andisiaea tough. Joe has run sood speed.'
"It doesn't matter how tall a person is, but how much heart a person has.? Morris said. "I play with my emotions, so it doenn't matter if I'm tall or short.
Despite-such confidence in his abilities, Morris admits to being surprised at his quick success. "I expected to sit this year. What rve donie has been a surprise, bectause I did it so fast," he said. "I thought I'd mainly be a kick returner and mee porme spot action, but that's abous it."
Wo expected Joes to be e very good player." Maloney anid: "It was ob vioue he had a lot of alinitity. We just didn't expect him to develop this quic
One. reason for his rapid advancernent has been his impreasive attitude. "Joe's a very coachable young man." Coughlin said. "He comes from a good family background and he's reapectfoll and disciplined," he added.

Hendricks Chapel to undergo renovations  By John Kelly

Renovations costing almoat $$ 500,000$ are being planned for Hendricies Chapel, said FIendricks Dean John H. McCombe

Fund raising for the planned renovations has already begun Work on the 48 -year-old building is expected to be completed by 1980

The menovation will include structural repairs as well as repaintin' on the inside and outside of the chapel, the purchase of new bews and new lightiag and flooring.
"The-need for the renovition of the chapel is urgent", said MeCombe, who is also assistant chairman of the renovation effort.
Just look around and you will see the bad shape which the chapel is in. The lighting is so bad, you can hardly walk through the chapel in the evening without getting logt. The paint is in hor rible condition and the stairs are very bad also." he said.
So far, about $$ 5,900$ has been raised. The Capital Campaign has received about $$ 5,600$, said Julie Stave, secretary to Robert H. Hull, vice president for development in the office of University Relations McCombe has received an additional $$ 320$ in donations.

Most of the money-an estimated $$ 242,800$ will go toward the renovation of the floors, stairs, walle and ceilings.
An additional $$ 105,000$ will go toward repairing the plumbing, heating and electricity. Another 548,000 will pay for new furnishinga, including some new pews.
E. James Strates, a Syracuse University alumnus and preaident of Strates Shows the national carmival shows, is the chairman of the Hendricks Chapel Renovation Fund.

Strates became interested in the renovation after seeing Hendricks during a recent visit to Syracuse. Strates will visit Syracuse in two weeks to formally announce the renovation plans, Dean McCombe said.
"Everything is very tentative and uncertain at this time," McCombe said. "There are many parts of the chapel that need to Mecombe said. There are many parts of the chapel that need to be renovated and much money to be

SU Board of Graduate Studies decides issues of present year

By John Rosenberry

The Board of Graduate Studies, which formulates graduate school policy, has decided what issues it will study this year.

The board will examine the funding of assistantships and fellowships development of training programs for teaching assistants and the quality of university. research facilitien. Fichard Fallis, associate in research and graduate affairs, said.

Fallis, along with Volker Weiss, acting vice president for research and graduate affairs, 41 faculty members, deans of all the graduate schools and eight graduate stadents make up the memberahip of the board.
The board was establiahed in 1933.
Fallis described it as a quasi-legislative body on policy matters. He and Weise are remponsible for implementing graduate achool policy, Fallis said, but they listen closely to the board's advice.
Weiss considers board decisions binding. Some decisionk, he said, are passed along to the University Senate for action. The Senate must approve changes in courses, programs and school rules.
One of the board's chief functions, Fallissaid, is to provide a forum on policy questions. This is sometimes difficult, he said, because graduate programs are decentralized and departmenta do not communicate extensively with each other.
Ned Harris, president of the Graduate Student Organization and a member of the board, said that while GSO is not officially linked with the board, it is worling with certain board committees, mostly on the issue of assistantship funding and teaching asaistant training.

As a student, probably your biggest single task is information prooessing. You spend more time absorbing, analyzing, and memorizing facts than anything else. And most of that information is in the form of printed words:

Think what you could acoomplish if you had your own personal computer that could digest all your reading almost as fast as you can turn pages. The time and efficiency you'd gain could make a big chainge for the better in your life right now.

Of course, you already have such a device-it's called a brain. But you're probably not using even a tenth of its capacity. Because just as a computer is only as good as its programs, your brain is only as powerful as the way you use it. And when it comes to reading, most of us are still stuck with the painfully slow methods we learned in grade school. Methods that are so inefficient that your brain actually gets bored and distracted between words (which is why you probably find it hard to concentrate when . you're studying).

Evelyn Wood would like you to : spend an hour with us to discover some of the miraculous thinge your brain canido with the proper training In a single,finee, 1hour demonstrationijrou'll find out why most people are such peor readers, and: how our new RD2 course can increase your reading' speed at least $300 \%$, with. better concentration and retention. As part of the bargain, well show you some new reading techniques designed to increase your speed immediately, with good comprehension - after just this one free demonstration.

Evelyn Wood RD2 can open the door to big things for you: better grades, more leisure time, and a whole new positive outlook on studying.

And it will only cosit you an hour of "computer time" to find out how.

7. The first policy to give students a major vaice in tenare decisions could be dying a slow death.
f Formulated by the Committee on Appointments and Pronnotions, the policy presents standardized guidelines for determining tenure decisions-how to decide whether professors phould be frued or guaranteed a job witil age 65. The proposal is revolutionary in that it would make student evaluation of a professor's teaching abilities manwould make atudent evaluation of a professor's teaching abilities mandatory, and place needed emphasis on a professor's role as an academic advisor.
Such a policy is long overdue. And it looks like it will remain that way.
Wednesday, the University Senate postponed voting on the proposal for the second time this semester. And the prospects appear likely that it will be delayed again in November.
"It's goimg to be haud to get a document that everyone will agree on," anid JamesK. Weeks, chairman of the Appointmeats Commaittee. Senators took exception to worde and phrases on almost every page of the 21-page docurnent:

As Valid as some of these criticisms may be, this is not the time they should have been expressed.
When the policy was in its embryonic stages last January and early February, the appointrnents committee solicited opinions. Very few showed up at the tenure hearinge. Committee members simply stared at each other.
Now, eight months later, senators want to submit letters to the committee giving their views. Now the Committee on Academic Freedom, Tenure and Professional Ethics will sitdown with the appointments committee to iron out any differing opinions.

The sudden surge of interestin the proposal has resulted not in aflurry of progress towards passage, but in a deluge of obscure arguments over phrasing and "ambiguities.'
The only major flaw in the policy, which is the denial of atudents' voting rights on college tenure committees, could easily be amended on the Senate floor.
Despite a consensus that student input must be increased, it appears it will be months before a policy is agreed upon.

After spending a year and a half developing the proposal, it's getting frustrating. "You've got to wonder when it's all going to end," said Jim Naughton, Student Anssociation vice president for academic affairs.

The Senate, having passed two resolutions-one which requires candidates names to be made public, the other asking colleges to seek atudent input in the tunure process-is wavering before making a meaningful commitment.

The Senate is on the verge of one of the most important and needed policy revisions in recent years. However, the longer they haggle over words and phrases, the greater the probability that a significant change gewill be reduced to a watered down veraion of an outdated policy:-

Proceeds from the show will be donated to the Foundation for the Advancement of Arts and Association. Syracuse is only Association. Syracuse is only one stop on the nationwide tour that the show is making for the benefit of charity organizations. The show exhibited unore than 200 garments as examples of what the fashionably dressed man or woman will wear this year.
Thia year's theme of "Back to Glamour" signale the end of the casual, no-fuss, easy-tomovein fashions of the 70 s , and the return to the chic, glittery fabhions of the ' 30 s and "40s. It was a time when shoulders were broader, silhouettes slimmer, and accessories were a must, rather than an extra.
Clad in the fashions of famed designers such as Halston, Oacar de la Renta, Ann Kein, Bill Blags, Capucci, Enzo Russo and Antonelli, the long-legged modela appeared on stage individually or in pairs:- twirling to the fastpaced music of a three piece combo. Never missing a beat, they peeled off layers of clothing. untied sashea and scarves and transformed the stage into a scene of non-stop motion and brilliant color.

Shayla Simpaon shillfully delivered a perfectly timed running commentary on the show as the models glided on and off the stage. Her remarisa often drew bursta of laughter from the audience as ahe explained where - the more outlandish where the more outiandish arments could be worn.
Making a comeback on the fashion scene this year are the shoulders to be wom padied shouders, to be worn over shim pants or narrow skirts. Skirts shit high on the thigh," whether in front, back, or on the aide, are now popular, according to Simpeon. The dominant trait is : eophis tication, and basic black is once again making its way into the limelight.

Also gaining popularity are uneven flowing hemlines, long wraps and sashes and soft. layered flounces and ruffles. Accessorics are taking on a dramatic flair with the comebackof delicate veils worn over the eyes, glitter and sparkles worn in the hair, and small hata or decorative or namente perched on top of the head. To carry this look off, hair will be either cut very short or pulled tightly to the back or side of the head in braids or chignons.
Seams and patterns are appearing once again in stoc kings while ankle and t-strap shoes are also being shown again. Gloves and muffs, which for a while have been used only for warmth, are coming back as decorative acces sories.
The military influence on fashions of previous years is now getting a new twiat. Forrafitting satin jumpeuits topped with pert military caps have replaced yesterday's baggy cotton army fatigues. There will be no more hiding in oversized camouflage suits. Tomor row's fashions are being designed to draw attention to the human body - to acceratuate each and every movement it makes.

Fabrics for new fashions are determined by the designers. This year's fabrica mark a return to silk, satin, point d'espirit, lace cashmere, gabardine and velvet, all of which accentuate the body's movernents. The colors chosen are the deep. rich, fall colors of bronze, red and plum.

Today'a designers are purhing yesterday's utilitarian clothes to the back of the closet and bringing out clothes that have been hiding in the attic for decades. Once again, women will dress with flair and make their way "Back ta Glamour." is here!

Abstract

viewer's imagination and feelings with such aweaome power that, by its conclusion, " 1900 " $1900^{\prime \prime}$ is a four-hour epic spanning 45 years of Italian history. The years 1900 to 1945 were full of turmoil in Italy. That realtively short length of time saw two orld wars, economic depression and the rise and fall of fascism. The film hronicles it all with depth and insight. The film centers on the lives of two men Alfredo (Robert DeNiro), the son of an aristocratic plantation owner and Olmo (Gerard Depardieu), the illegitimate son of one of the plantation's peasant workers As boys, the two play together, but as they grow up amidst their country's many cises. Alfredo evolves into the aristocrat and Otmo becomes the socialist.

change. Though it is not a treatise on Marxisun, it makes the class strugele its central theme. As time progresses, oppression of the ruling class becomes greater and unrest grows among the All through the film, the violence of impending class conflict lies just beneath the action. Following the sudden and brutal violence of the opening scenes on Liberation Day, 1945, the film shifte back to 1900 and proceeds with its story. The to 1900 and proceeds with its story. The bewinning and gits waiting tensely for begnning and bits waiti
The suspense is augmented as more and more violence begins to take place on the screen. At first, there is only buggestion. Young Alfredo and his grandfather (Burt Lancaster) play with unloaded rifles, aiming them at various family members. The play soon turns to reality as several animals axe killed and slaughtered. In one emotionaily riveting acene, a peanant, in sulted by Alfredo's father, cats off his own ear

The violence reaches its culmination with two cold-blooded murders and Enally, class wariare under fascint rule.

Bertoluci's direction is exquisite. In the entire four-hours of "1900," there is not one superiluoun scene. The pace is kept up represents a welcome change for the Italian director, whose last film wae the tedious "Last Tango in Paris."

The viaual quality in beautiful, but we don't see pretty pictures. The oweeping shots of the plantation's vast fields are matched with the stark realism of Italian cinematic tradition. No punches are pulled as the camers shows us the dirty stables and filthy living quarters of the olantation workers.

The cast of international actors in superb. Both DeNiro and Depardieu are excellent as aristocrat and peasant respectively. Depardieu, a French film star, plays Olmo as a man who has accepted the teachings of his father that he "will always be a peasant." Butinstead of being humiliated by his social clasa Olmo is proud of it. Depardieu handles his English linea well and is one of the few foreign actors whose voice is not dubbed.
Donald Sutherlend is the most outstanding actor as the perverted, sadistic blackshirt. By appearing 80 demonic Sutherland succeeds in generating mans sive hatred on the part of the audience toward his character.

1900': is an exceptional film. comparable to epics like "Gone With the Wind" and "The Grapes of Wrath." It in expansive in scope, rigorous in plot and detail, and avoids being overly melod ramatic. Every effort should be made to see it.

SUMS, an mateur theatrical and musical group for students, will present tonight its first show of the year, "You're A Good Man,Charlie Erown.

The musical itself needs no introduction. nor do any of the characters from the famous Charles Schultx comicstrip. They're all there-Lucy, Linus, Patty, Schroeder, Snoopy and, of course, good old wishy-washy Charlie Brown. Director John DeMicco has even written in a part for Woodstock. Snoopy's little feathered friend. This has been very sidilfully woven into Clark Geaner's original acript.

Incidents in the show range from Lacy losing her pencil to Charlie Brown trying to meet the little red-haired girl. His unsuccessful attempt at romance was typical of failures he encountered throughout the show.
In a neighborhood baseball game, he dropped the ball thit could have given hie team a win. When Snoopy turned hia back on hirn and a friendly psychiatrist took interest in his money instead of his problems, Charlie Brown knew he was destined to a life of bad luck.
The cast for the show waschosen with care. The director found university atudents who not only danced and sang, but who also had a "baby-faced", quality about them Suering Kozlownki made a perfect Charlie Brown. Fie didn't look exactly like him (who can?), but he did project the spirit of Anthony Dikenzo gave a great performance as Snoopy. He prowled, he aulked, and he flew his World War I Sopwith Camel. "Suppertime," a song and dance number with Woodstock (Nancy Cohen) was one of the most entertaining and endearing in the whole show.
Linus (R.J. Alfredo) and Schroeder (John Gumbinger) played their parts with gusto, while Lucy's (Kim Runda) brashness was well balanced by the soft sillinesa of Patty (Joyce Tudrym).
The performers were given an excellent musical backup by the live music, directed by Kenneth Knox-
The set was designed simply with blocks of various sizes. It not only helped keep the stage uncluttered, but also reflected the stark line drawings of the comic series.

The use of special effects was kept to a minimum. The lighting was basic, but then again, nothing extravagant was necessary. The performance may run into problems because a good deal of the action takee place on the floor. Since Watson Theatre does not slope, people in the back will either have to be tall or strain their necks.

SUMS will present three ahowings of the musical. The Ergt will be tonight at 8 ; two more preformances will take place Saturday night at 7:30 and 10. Tickets are $$ 1.50$ each. For reservations, call 423-1804.

Ronstadt sounds like robou on stale, mechanical alburn o?

By. Marlk Bullivan
Lastnight I dreamt I was out with Lindn Ronstadt. It was an intimate sort of evening: just Linda and me, and of courbe her back-up band. Aftur a typical southern Califormia dinner of pizza with anchovies and cocaine, we were sitting on the couch and Linda began merenading the with some music from her new albuma, Living in the USA.
Halfway into hex mecond aong, I realized that the song: from this album sounded remarkably like aongs from her past albams. I gazed deeply into Linda's eyes, hop ing to inspire her to perform something different, but was met with only a blank stare. It was then I noticed a trace. of amoke coming from Lindar eare "Wow, heavy duty anchovies out west," I thought to myself. But then I realized it wann't the anchovies; Linda Ronstadt was a goddamn robot!!
At that moment my alarm clock went off and I sprang from my bed, atesured the whole scenario was just a dream. I put my copy of Living in the USA on my turntable and after listening for a few minutes, it dawned on me. Maybe Linda Ronstadt is a robot after all.
The material she performa on her new album is stiff, almost mechanical. Though Peter Asher's production and Ronstadt's back-up band, led by guitarist Waddy Wachtel and pianist Don Grolnick, are typically slick, the albumilacks inspiration of any sort.
Ronstadit seems content to plow through songe written by Elvia Costello, Eivis, Presley Warren Zevon and Osca Harren zerstein. rather than offer any new twists of her own to the material.

So smooth. Easy to sip. Delicious! Comforts's unlike anyother liquor. It tastes good just poured over ice. That's why it makes mixed drinks taste much better, too. Sip into something Comfort ${ }^{\text {able. Try it! }}$

The other Elivis song on the album, Presley's "Love Me Tender," is rock ' $n$ ' roll blasphemy. Ronstadt butchers the song by reducing it to an acouatic ditty. Her treatment lacks the soulful conviction of Presley's and sounds hollow and empty in comparinon to The King's vernion.

Vegetarians no longer have to take a back seat to meat eaters at Syracuse Univergity dining halls.
This semester, Food Service started putting vegetarian entrees on the serving lines in all dining halls. Previously, they were available upon request only.

Robert Swivel, assistant director of Food Service, said, "It came about due to the in. creasing, nwareaess to the studenta wanta."

There were so many requeafa for meatlegs menus that we thought it would be best to offer it for both lunch and dinner entrees permanently Swivel anid
Each of the six dining haila on campun werves at least 45 vegetarians, aaid Tina Arnold, Fool Service dietician.
Reasons for becoming a vegetarian vary from the rising price of meat to a disbelief that animals should be killed for food to a feeling that meat is not healthy to eat.
Some vegetarians eat poiltry or fish, but many eat only fruit, vegetables and dairy producta. Strict vegetarians eat only fruit and vegetables.
Arnold aid that although meat is an important source of protein, other foods can be substituted with no mutritional loss.
Arnold asid atudenta are encouraged to auggest ideas for recipea. Ideas will be considered at weekly menu-planning meetings, alhe said.

Dove Hom ark Dad, Hil

- Just wanted to drop you a line before we go away this weekend so you know where we'Il be an
1 don't know, maybe it doenn't make any difference, but we don't even get to fly to Penn State-we have to take buses. At least going to Michigan State we felt like we went first clase-except when we got to the game-but you know all about that and it brimgs back bad memoriea for me.
Well, anyway, Coach Maloney is saying things this week Iike Penn State ia better than Michigan State-a lot better. He said he voted them no. I in the UPI poll and heck, even if they are no. 2 in the country, that's plenty good enough for us.
Read what their coach, Joe Paterno, said about his team. He called it a lot better than it was last year you remember, when it was 11-1. "Oh, yeah," he eaid. "I think it's better. No question in anybody's mind. We have much more depth this year. And we're a lot atronger on defense."
He's not kidding. They've played six games this year and have given up 38 pointa. Heck, we gave up almost that many in the first half at Michigan State. And they'veshut out three of the teams they've played, too.
They got theae two big guys on the line. Bruce Clark and Matt Millen. Both are something like 6-foot 3, 260 or 270-real gorillas-but they sure are good. Coach Maloney says he's gorimas-but they sure are novers. Cosch Maloney says he' They' seen a bet 62 tackies between them, and they area't even They ve got the thackes Lance Mehl, the middie linebacker, has 50 already and Paul Suhey, another linebacker, has 34 . Coach Maloney says that no one gains more than two or three yards a play on the ground againat those guyb. All together they've given up an the country. Heck, our defense gives up that many yards on the country. Heck, our defense On offense that Chuck Fuaina is back at quarterback. Did you see his picture on the cover of "The Sporting News?" He's 132 ady got almont 1,000 yards pasaing and he's made 77 of 132 passes for five touchdowns. Then there's Matt Suhey in Booker Moore's got 342 and Bob Terrey's got 165 and I could Booker Moore's got 342 and Bob Terrey'g got 165 and I could keep going on but it wouldn't do any good. Coach Maloney keep going on but it wouldn't do any good. Coach Maloney says their second-string backield of Moore and Torrey could says their second-string backfield of start for anyone else in the country.
You know, uaually when we play, at least we know Dave Jacobs is a better placekicker than anyone we will come up against, but I'm not even sure about that his week. They got Matt Eahr, who's hit 14 out of 17 field goals this year already and even he leads the country.
Coach Maloney says they can be thrown on, but then he says we've got two problems-they've got a better pass rush this year and we don't have a quarterback who can pass the I that well.
I saw Bill Hurley the other day and he's atill mo sore hecan't do much of anything except wiah he was playing. Tim Wilson will start again for us and I only hope he doesn't get too psyched out by the stadium and Penn State, and plays like he s capable. They just put those new seats in down there and now they expect 77,000 people and I greas that's the largest crowd they've ever had. But you know. I just can't imagine rumning out on the field down there and having 77,000 fana booing us and all of them waving blue and white pompomis when Penn State comes ont. They any it looks just likea eea of blue and the fana are 80 close to the field and they go 80 wild that I hope we don't get psyched out just trepping out on the field Jike a lot of the guys thought they were at Michigan State. I just don't know how we're going to do. Coach Maloney keeps saying things like Penn State is "the deepest personnel team in the country, bar none," and that he thinks they are the best defensive team in the country" and that "this year"s Penn State football team ia the finest team they've had since 've been here, mach superior to last eeason."
And heck, we played our hearts out last season and we still lost and now they tell us that Penn State is a lot better this year. And we don't have Bill Hurley and Bruce Semall is gtill burt, and you know, the worst part is thateven if we had Bill, I don't know if he would make that much difference. Ive seen the films -they're just a great foothall team.
Well, I'll go now. We've got to go see flms again. 1 think we're watching the game where they beat Ohio State 190 Horror filme we all call them. I hope we don't etar in another one this wreikend.

Three men arrested in Watson

By Mike Maypard
Three men were arrested on charges of second-degree criminal treapass by Syracuse University Safety and Security Saturday night in Wataon Hall.
The three men, Aaron Wilaon Jr., 20, of 507 Seymour St.; Gregory Lewis Mexritt. 18, of 400 Oairwood Ave.; and Jeffrey Arnold Ford, 18 , of 238 Midland frey Arnold Ford, 18 , of 2
Ave, are not SU atudents.
Wilgon was later booked on a charge of second-degree robbery after Syracuse City Police discovered a warrant for his arrest on a charge stemming from a 1975 arreat for first-degree robbery.

The arresta took place about $7: 30 \mathrm{p} . \mathrm{m}$ Friday after Watson West residente complained of three men prowling the complaine
According to a report from SU Security Officer Grant Williams, the three men were going door-to-door asking for marijuana. In the report, Watson West resident said the same three men had done the same thing last year.
Although security searched the west wing for the men, no sign of them was found. The sumpects were later found in an east wing hallway
Williams, of the K-9 division, held the men at bay with a police dog until help arrived.

Kathy Manning, Watson Corm director, said the incident happened "in credibly fast. It was nothing really."

Woman to press harassment charge

By Kevin Haynes
A Syracuse University gorority nember has decided to preas charges against a man who she said harassed her outside the zeta ${ }^{\text {PBi }}$ fraternity house, 727 Comstock Ave., on Friday aight.
Katie Miller, a 20 -year-old SU junior and a member of the Alpha Phi sorority, said a man tore her nun costume off her as ahe was walking on Cometock Avenue. She was wearing clothes underneath.
Miller was participating in the "dirty song' contest with fellow Alpha Phi members as part of Greek weekend.

Miller said a car pulled onto the sidewalk and started driving toward her and another member, who had both fallen behind the group. After driving off the sidewalk, two of the car's five male occupants walked toward the two women and started pulling Miller's friend's costume off.
She said the men started tearing off her costume. The costume caught around her neck "so they were pulling me around the neck" and pulling her long the lawn, Miller said.
After breaking loose, Miller asid she ran to the fraternity house. Sgt. An thony Kalanak of SU Safety and Security, said Miller was informed that "the only charge she could preas was for harassment.

I couldn't press charges for assanlt because I didn't have any marks on me," Miller said, adding that the turtleneck she was wearing underneath the costume prevented any burn marks that might have resulted from the choking."
Kalanak said the man involved said "he was only partying and didn't mean to hurt her.
Cou know how these things are,' Kalanak said.

Gelatin flies in Day Hall food fight

A collage of autumn's finest colors sparkled along the early evening's tequila horizon, which stretched below a fading. powder-blue aky.
Suddenly, the skyline was further enriched by blobs of lime and orange gelatin that wobbled gracefully through the air in varying degrees of apeed and direction.
That was the setting Friday evening as Day Hal residents used grandma's favorite dessert as the heavy ar tillery in a "Jell-O fight" sponsored by the dorm"s second and eighth floors

Thirty-six gallons of gelatin, or "about 1,600 handfuls not counting the reusable portions," according to eighth floor resident adviser Chris Kerr, were transported outside the dorm for the slimy showdown among about 40 residents.

Barney Sherman, second-floor RA, said the idea for the gelatin jubilee was first mentioned at an-RA workshop about three weeks ago. Sherman said the RAs wanted to decrease the amount of dorm vandalism by sponsoring ac tivities which would allow students to get "all that pent-up energy out of their systems." That was when Dave Waldman, Sadler Hall dorm director, suggested a gelatin fight.
"I thinkit's neat," Waldman said. He pointed out that the "Animal Honse". ayndrome has reaulted in frequent food fights, inconveniencing students trying to eat, and upset

Loggins shines in solo performance

After more than two hours of solid musical entertainment it was hard to tell who had a better time at the Kenny Loggins concert Thursday night at, Landmark Theatre - the performer or the audience.

Loggins played with an enthusiasm that seemed to captivate the audience throughout the concert.
Opening songs such as "Somebody Knows," had Loggins singing with power backed up by a band that never let him down. During the song, Loggins moved from one side of the atage to the other, pointing and singing to what

Monday morning

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa--The Vigil began at midnight Friday here on the football-mad Penn State campus, nes. tled amidst the rolling cornfields and foliage-trimmed mountains of the Nittany Valley.
Several hundred beer-swilling. Orange-hating State beer-swilling. cluatered around their school mascot, a 13-ton limestone sculpture of the famed Nittany Lion. They were guarding their mascot, their "ghrine" as they called it, masainst the traditional attack from Syracuse atudents trying to dquae it with orange paint.
A half-dozen or so students sat astride the lion's powerfol back, leading the reat of the crowd in boisterous chants of "I of the crowd in boisterous chants of "I asy blue, you say white; I say Joe, you crush'
There was an armed campus security guard equipped with a walkie-talkie and a flashlight that he would periodically ahine into the semi-circular grove of trees ringing the lion. Every now and then the bughes would rustle behind the atatue and the guard would alertly switch on the light and dash into the trees, expecting to uncover a band of hardy Orangemen, with. gallons of orange paint.
"If I was an Orangemen and it was my duty to paint the lion orange, I'd doit, no State student. "Of courae." he added with a smile, "if an Orangeman comes I can't wait to tacide him and beat the hell out of him."
It was that sort of militant talk that made my stomach a bit queasy. Therel was in a crowd at the base of the lion with John Gurovich, the, only other Syracuse student in the aras, and a can of orange apray paint concealed in my hip pocket.
We had come to uphold an SU tradition, the painting of the lion, and to avenge last year'e paint of the Saltine Penn State students had dumped a gallon or two of blue paint over the unguarded warrior on the eve of Penn State's narrow 31-24 victory over the Orangemen.
However, we hadn't counted on the enthusiasm we encountered. The Vigil was an organized campus event, one of several Homecoming Weekend several Homecoming weekend traditions in the Nittany Valley remainiicent of what thinge nmust have been like at Syracuse in the 1950 's, when the football team was king of the Eastern hill and peremially near the top of the national rankings.
At Penn State, there were magnificent fraternity hoats in the well-attended Homecoming Parade. There was a bonfire and pep rally with fireworke on a field so uth of Beaver Stadium. And then there was The Vigil, complete with the campus radio station. WQWK, which bradcast live from beeide the statue all night Friday.
With all the attention it was receiving the statue wouldn't be easy to paint uniess we wanted to get arreated or beaten up or both. In 1966, when the Larry Csonka and Floyd Little Orangemen visited Penn State, two Syracuse studenta spent Saturday in jail after being arrested for fouling the lion after being arrested with orange paint.

Taking advantage of the large crowd to ahield.me, andeaned up against the hon's righteye and casually State student named Walt, who was sitting on the lion's neck and wearing a "No Use Syracuse" button.
As John atook behind me to keep any drunken Etudents from bumping into me, I spent the next 20 minutes or $\pi 0$ discuraing with Walt how great Penn State cusaing with Walt how great Pernn State is and gradually filling b Obligingly, I sniffed the air. don't emmell anything," I replied.

thenk God," Walt said with a simh elief. "My heart stopped there for a minute." So had mine.
Finally, I was natisfied that the eyes were gufficiently coated with paint and begen to wonder how we could set away before anyone noticed. It was then that an intoxicated girl tried to clamber onto the lion's head, and, when she lost her balance and sid off-across the lion' nose and over hia orange-streaked eyea-the students nearby saw what had been done.
Horrified ahouts of. "they got the lion" and mywtified, angry curses swelled through the crowd until just about everybody was aware of what had happened. Rather than run and be caught, John and Ijoined in the litany of orearing against "Those. damned Orangemen.
Additional security guards were sum. moned and one pushed his way through the crowd to the statue.
"I guess I didn't do a very good job of guarding it." Walt said guiltily. "I don't now how they did it," Someone dumped the contents of an Iron City beer can onto the paint to try and wash it off. Another student, uaing his cigarette lighter, tried to burm the paint off. Someone else called for gasoline and one girl desperately suggeated calling a ceramics professor. said to me angrily. Everyone is too drunk or dumb to watch the lion clioesely ru bet 30 to 40 percent of the peaple around the statue are Orangemen."
I agreed with him, and then John a picked our why through the crowid, past he mobile radio station van and the carload of security officers and into the carioad chill Penn State night.

Getting a kick out of the booters

By Mike Stanton

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa.-Joe Moris and Art Monk had pleagant dreams about

Dave Jacobs and Jim Goodwill had nightmares about it.

U head coach Frank Maloney's slumber Saturday night was filled with a mixture of "shoddy and spectacular" adjectives to describe it.
And thanks in large part to it, Joe Patermo and his second-ranked Pena Ptate thany hons can continue to dream about a national championship.
rewas a lacet of looksall ofen overiooked but which had a deciding hand-or foot-in Penn State'e 45-15 win over Syracuse Saturday-the hicking game.
"The kiching game hurt us," Maloney observed. "But it also provided the exciting highlights of the day."
"Exciting," in Penn State language meant a blocked punt early in the second quarter that turned into a lightning-quick touchdown and a 28-9 Nittany Lion lead. More thrills followed late in the same quarter, when defentive tackle and monater Bruce Clarik nearly deflated the football in blocking Jacob's attempt to kick a deaperately-needed a1-yard field soal.
"Those two blocked kicks were very vital plays," Maloney reflected."Without them I feel we wonld have been tied or within a touchdown Ginstead of trailing 31-12) at the half."
Syracuse fans would rather dwell on kicks that made it to their intended deatination and almoat helped tilt the game in SU's favor. Like two Syracuse hickofft early in the second half, when an aggres give Orange special team forced what conld have been two very spocial fumbles.

The first fumble, on the second half? opening kickoff, was forced when SU't Jerry Kilpatrick and Guy Ruff leveled State's. Joel Coles on the 18. A third Orangeman, Bob Arkeilpane, fell on the ball and. a minute-and-a-half later Jacohs kicked a field goal.

Ruff hel ped force a Booker Moore bobble on the ensuing hickoff, but the Nittamy Lonin bavely managed to recover the ball. Another fumble on a kickoff, this one by Mont eary in the socond quartar, quiculy turned from disattroun to miraculous for that crangemen. Moni, who early in the tovehdoartar man with a nifty 57 --4ared touchdown dirive will a nily. bryand fick postion to wivi fonmed the handle on held position, pevver tourad the handle on thial Dociond-quertue lick.

After the ball bounced off Monk's chest on the four, Morris alertly scooped it up at the 13 -yard line and raced 83 yards up the right sidelline, getting up Jacoba' 25-yand field goal.
"It was an instinct play," Morris recalled. "When Art dropped the ball, it froze them for just a second and allowed me to get open. I ran to the sidelines and something told me I wasn't going to beat the man coming towards me.
It was at that point, near the Syracuse 40, that Morris executed a Rudolf Nureyev-like pirouette that -aeveral Penrisylvanians. Paterno included, argued took him out of bounds.

Their kickoff returns became psychological after the first one (by The second one (by Morris) was kind of a fluke.

Aggression against Syracuse kickers paid off for Penn State. Morris' return followed on the heels of a Goodwill punt that State's Mickey Urquhart swatted nearly 32 yards, without a bounce, into the Lion endzone, where Statif's Matt Millen fell on the ball for a $28-9$ lead.
"The punt return call was on," Ux-quhart said. "But I saw that their end wasn't uned to me raghing, since I hadn't all day, so I ourpiged them from the out side.

Coodwill, who had his head down to concentrate on the kick, was unaware of Urquhart's charge until "after I hicked it, I heard that awful double thud.'
*Coach Paterno had been atressing all week that he wanted us to block a punt and a feld goal, just so we would know we could do it," explained Clark, who late in the aecond quarter "leapfrogged" over SU center Andy Gissinger to bloel the field goal. "We just wanted to male conch hap" py.
"Both blocks, especially Clark's, were jugt auperhuman plays,'" Maloney said with a helpleas shrug, "We had an excellent center, an excellent hold, an excellent kick and good protection. You just can't stop somebody from running up your back."
It was the second Iield goal Jacobs has had blocked in as many weeks, yet the senior suatained enough confidence to kick three auccessful ones, the longeat being a 29 yarder, to move into fifth place on the NCAA career list with 46 field goals.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer CandidateCollegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $$ 650$ a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education: This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $$ 3,000$ cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $$ 24,000$ salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus on Nov. 8-9, or contact your Navy representative at 315-423-5490 (collect). If you prefer, send your resume to the Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312-B537, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203, and a Navy representative will contact you directly. The NUPOC-Collegiate Program. It can do more than help youfinish college: it can lead to an exciting career opportunity.

Active in Iocal politice since the early 1960s, Firro, 38, is following in the footsteps of his father, Nicholas Pirro Sr., a former city councilman. Co-owner of Marshall Wines and Liquora Lad. and a family man, Pirro is not eager to center conver aation on himself. Rather, he prefers to focas on political is. sues.
"I grew up in Syracuse and I like to concentrate my ef forts in this area." he said.

Pirro includes Syracube University on his list of commention the status of the university's relationship with the county government and the community.
"Syracuse University is $g$ o ing to have to realize that it must continue to com. municate with the com munity or they're not going to liaten, he said

As one of the twoad vocates of an early univeraity stadium proposal which called for county funds, Pirro regrets that SU has notmain tained a strong relationahip Whin the county governmen and with the local com munity.

Pirro: friendly, dedicated

The stadium issue has been one of the few times during the last tem years that the university has dealt with the county government, Pirro aid "We haven't had that much contact with the university and this caused differ he said.

A lot of the problem," said Pirro, "is that they (univeraity officials) hadn't taken the time over the years to pay attention to the community. Now they've started to reverse this.
"The hoetility from the community," hesaid, "compes from their view that the university is a taker not al giver. I don't think this is quite accurate. They are a ommunity affair.
Several citizens had written letters and telephoned the downtown ofEces of the county legislature and voiced their anger to several legielators including Pirro.
"It was hostility in a soft manner," he explained. "It wann't mo much they they hated Syracuse just couldn't justify that coyy just couldn't justify that county tax money ahoul,
The legislature, howevex, has projected a different view of the university. "A lot of us look at SU as a higher learning institntion which brings lot of money into the community," Pirro added. "The university is a big economic factor. If nothing else, we're reapomable to conaider what would happen if the university wers to close down. beveral

Rice: 'Integrated with the Syracuse area'

By Maxyann Muchoney
When Timothy Rice came to Syracuse University to teach economice 16 yeara ero. he probably had no idea of the vital role he would eventually play in the politics of Onon daga County.
Representing the 18th legislative district, Rice is the majority floor leader of the Onondaga County Legialature. He is the firot Democrat in the history of this conservative county to hold the position. The present Democratic caucus has a conant of 14 members, four more than the Republican саисия.

Grant bill to

This is the final part of aseries about financial aid nationally and at $S U$

By Jacqui Saimon

"You have to be either very rich or very poor to go to college these days.
Sound familiar? It has been a frequent cry from middle-income families in the United States for, a number of years. They claim that they have watched most money available for college financial aid eaten up by low-income families, and have seen richer families pay the tuition bills with no difficulty.
Last year, families with annual incomes between $$ 12,000$ and $$ 49,000$ made upalmost 63 percent of the U.S. population.
But while middle-income families make up the majority of the population in the U.S., a recent study by the American Council on Education has shown thatonly 12 percent of the $$ 7$ billion in federal loans and grants goes to students from families with annual incomes of more than $$ 15,000$.
But last week, Congress took a big step toward easing the so-called middle income squeeze with income Student Asyear of controveray between Aival more thana plans, Congress finally passed MISA, which adis about $$ 15$ billion to federal loin and grants programs in the figcal year 1979 .
Under the new bill, whicht goes into effect in September, college students from families earSeptember, coilege students rom families earbe eligible for some type of grant. And every college gtudent-no matter what his family in come is-will be able to get the federal government to pay the interest on his
But passage of the bill late last Saturday But passage of the bill late last Saturday night also guaranteed the demiee of the tuition adjourned its 95th session without reaching any agreement on the bill's provisions.
A tuition tax credit, first proposed in Congress at about this time last year, would have allowed families with children in college to deduct a.certain amount of money from their taxes every year.
But under MISA, an estimated 1.5 million more college students will receive aome kind of help with their tuition bills from Uncle Sam Most of those students will be from middle-in. come familiea. These are families with income ranging from $$ 12,000$ to $$ 40,000$ many of whom have said they have been getting the ohaft from financial aid programa for years.

aid students

To put it simply, MISA tries to fill in the gap in financial aid by authorizing increased funding to four federal financial aid programs These are: the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant; the Supplemental Opportunity Grant the College Work Study Program and the Guaranteed Student Loan.
The most money in MISA is going toward BEOG, which is a non-repayble grant for college or university studenta. Up until MISA only students who came from families with an nual incomes of about $$ 13,000$ to $$ 14,000$ were eligible for BEOG. The grants ranged from $$ 200$ to $$ 1,600$.
But MiSA hiked the grants to $$ 1,300$ and lowered the "asaessment" rate, the formula used to calculate the eligibility of recipients, so that more middle-income students will qualify.
Under MISA, students from families with annual incomes of up to $$ 40,000$ might be able to receive grants, according to Margaret Dunkle, a spokesperson for the legislation office in the federal office of Health, Education and Welfare.
Although it's hard to predict how much money students from middle-income farnilies wilculecieve because of the way bell calculated, Duncle said she believes it will have such factors as the number of children in the fach factors as the number of chidren in the assets the family has and what kind of expenses it faces.
But under MISA, "A substantial number of kids never before eligible for aid will get several hundred dollars," Dunkle said.

Dunkle said students from families with annual incomes of about $$ 25,000$ will get grants of more than $$ 400$; according to information she has.

This should have a huge impact on Syracuse University, where the average annual income of families of SU students is about $$ 20,000$, said Arthur J. Fritz, director of the SU Finañial Aid office-

Fritz has said he believes the bill will double the number of SU students receiving financial aid "just'like that."
An extra $115 million has also been added to the College Work Study Program, increasing its continued on paga six

Senate adopts interim reso

By David Bauder:
Although the proposed tenure policy may not be acted on for several montha, students can have a say in tenure decisions immediately.
A'resolution adopted at Wednesday's Syracuse University Senate meeting calls upon schools, departments and colleges "to include effective student participation in promotion and tenure procedures, effective immediately."
The resolution was proposed by A. Dale Tussing, a senator on the Budget and Fiscal Affairs Committee.
When I saw that the tenure proposal would get postponed I thought further delays would be pre judicial to this year's decisions," Tussing saifi "If the senate doesn't go on record now in favor of student participation, by the time action is talien on the full policy, the tenure decisions will have gone beyond the department level."
A copy of the resolution will be sent to all deans, directors and department chairpersons at SU.
Tussing said he doesn't know what effect his reaslution will have. "It doesn't mandatestudent participation," he explained, "it asks for it."
Morrie Levine, chairman of the University Senate student coalition said, "I'm not sure how it's going to be taken by the individual schools, but at least we have our foot in the door."
The resolution was passed at the end of the Senate meeting after an hour of discussion on the tenure policy. "Maybe the fact it was considered at 6 p.m. instead of earlier in the meating helped it along;" Tussing admitted.
But a few catches have developed in the rest of the tenure policy, which standardizes the tenure process and seeks to increase student input.
The proposal, which has been in the works for a year and a half, contains "a lot of flaws," Tusaing said. His opinion was echoed by a number of other senators at Wednesday's meeting.
Some student senators, after initially embracing the tenure proposal, have taken a second look and do not like what they see.

lution policy  They view the elimination of student voting on college tenure committees as a step backwards from increasing student input in the temure process.Currently, individual colleges and schools decide whether students can vote.

Under the proposed policy, only tenured faculty will be able to vote on college tenure committees, although students would be guaranteed a seat on every committee.

The committee on Appointments and Promotions excluded non-tenured faculty and students from voting because of a possible conflict of interest, said committee chairmmin James K. Weeks.

Also, because these two groups are trangitory, the committee felt they should not pass decisions on tenure, Weeks aaid.
Student semators did not notice this change until it was brought up at Wednesday's Senate meeting.
"We were so busy worrying about student evaluations, we didn't even notice that change," said continued on pagesix

Stare at the nose on this Mona Lisa. What do you see?

Four tiny dots are visible on her nose. To experi ence an interesting phenomenon, stare hard at the dots for 30 seconds. Then immediately look at the blank square beside the Mona Lisa, and blink both eyes quickly.

What you will see is called an "afterimage". Come to our free Mini-Lesson and we'll show you how this simple capability that everyone possesses can be used to increase reading skills. Not merely reading speed, but the ability to remember what is read. For that, after all is said and done, is what counts.

Do Most Studemts

Read Slowly?

Most students have no idea what their reading ability is. If they are typical. they read about 300 words per minute for one page of a novell. Why is it that students read at virtualiy the same speed, considering how very different they all are?

The cause can be traced back to the First Grade. When we were taught to read, we were asked to read out loud. word-by-word. Later. in the Second Grade, we were asked to stop saying each word out loud. But we never really did. Fact is, you're saying these words right now-not out loud, but to yoursell, one word at a time!

This rieans you read only as fast as you talk about 250 to 300 words per minute. (As if to prove the point, Guiness's Book of World Records lists John F. Kennedy as delivering the fastest speech ever at 327 words per minute).

How Do You Learn To Read Faster? With The Same Comprehension?

At the Mini-Lesson you will find out how the Evelyn Wood course eliminates the habit of read ing only one word at a time. How you can leam to read 3 or 4 words instead of only one. To see how natural this is. look at the dot in the middle of this phrase:
the grass - is green
Thy as you may you can't help but see the other words. With training, you learn to use this natural, but un used potential. You leam to see groups of words simultaneoushy This will double. triple, possibly quadruple your present ability

This concept is diametrically opposed to the old-fashioned speed readingtechnique of picking out key phrases. In the Evelyn Wood course. skimuning is a dirty word!

Is there a positive value in reading faster? Ask the honors student how fast he reads. Chanoes are he doesn't know either. Test him and you may find out he's one of those rare birds who has learned to read faster by accident . . . or more likely by his sheer drive to succeed. That's what Evelyn Wood discovered in 1945.

Dynamic Reading Wassn't

Invented. It Was Discovered. Evelyn Wood was working on her Master's Degree at the University of Utah in 1945. She handed in 'her thesis, and on the spot her professor. Dr C. Lowell Lees, read the paper in armatter of minutes and then discussed it with her in astonishingly great detail. That incident inspired a 14 year Odyssey, during which Mrs. Wood first found 50 people who read at speeds ranging from 1500 words per minute to 6000 words per minute.

Then she found that they shared a number of common characteristics. They read groups of words, complete thoughts sometimes. and not a word at a time. They rarely stopped to re-read a word or a paragraph because they didn't understand it. They finished the material first, went back to re-read, if still necessary. They hardly ever lost their place-a common habit of siowreaders. And finally none of them got bored by their oun slow reading. Instead, they spoke of their reading as though it were fike watching a movie!

Painstakingly, Mrs. Wood taught herself these pinciples and increased her speed dramatically She foo began to experience the excitement of "reading a movie".
In 1959, the first course in Dymarnic Reading was offered to the public. That year, classes were conducted for members of the U.S. Congress. The revolution in reading was on!

Over 1,000,000 Graduates

Why Do So Many Ennoll?

This question was posed to several thousand College freshmen who had just enrolled in the Evelyn Wood course. The answers were varied. but mostly on the same wave lengti: 1) They wanted to neduce their study time: 2) They wanted to feel more confident in class. more in control: and 3) They wanted to leam more: to achieve better grades.
At the end of the course, each student was asked if his goals were met. Over $95 \%$ said yes: The other $5 \%$ received their tuition back (but more of that later ). Look at these statistics. compiled from a list of 43 college carnpus classes where the Evelyn Whod course was taught. i

| No. of times | Increase in |
| :---: | :---: |
| speed increased | comprehension |
| 4.08 | $10.2 \%$ |

Read what the University of llinois'student paper said (Ed Sejud): "If a student avails hirnself of all the facilities by the (Evelyn Wood) Institute and attends all the class sessions, the price boils down to only about $$ 2$ an hour cheaper than any private futoring you 11 ever find. Spread over four years, the course can save thousands of study hours and can probablyaffectaboost in astudent's grade-point average. Assignments which once took days can be accomplished in a matter of hours, leaving much more time for other pursuits. The Institute estimates that it can save average students 350 hours of study time each sernester probably an understatement".

What Happens If I Flop?

If you fall to increase your reading ability at least 3 times, you receive a full tuition refund. No catches, no hassles. We put it in writing:

THIE GUARANTIEE.

Faculty, students:

who's ignoring whom?

Te the editor:
In response to Sy Montgomery's "A visit outside ivory towers" in Friday's D.O., I am wondering how much the students are contributing to the lack of communication between themselves and the faculty and administrators. It continues to puzzle me (since. I attended undergraduate school in 1969-1973) that the students don't seem to see themselves as important fin fact, the most important) members of the univeraity community. We thought so. We did not hesitate to build friendships with the professors and to think of ourgelves as their equals in many ways. We were both helping each other "in those days." From what I hear from undergraduates "these days" they seem to be either disinterested in knowing their professors or afraid to bridge that gap.
In my own experience here at Syracuse as a graduate student, I have found much opportunity to relate on a one-to-one basis with the faculty of the English department. I have been able to call or visit one professor at his office most anytime and engage in conversation beyond the scope of the course I have been taking; one professor had a party at his houge after the semester was over (this was a joint graduate and undergraduate course); in general, I have had good, friendly reaponse from all of the members of the English department that Ihave met. But, I also had to make efforts to meet them halfway and not be afraid to befiriend them. I guess (from what I hear) that this is now called "brown-nosing," a term which- I remember from junior high school, but didn't use after that. Is this what is keeping these folks from getting together?
I really would like to see some reaponses to this in The Daily Orange from undergraduates on this campus, if they're interested.

Ask the chancellor at the Open Forum

Important questions are fermenting regarding this university: what projects are pending, unfolding, stagnating. The why and how of the university's reaisoning are questions that need to be asked; and unlegs they get asked there will be no answers.

The responsibility `for asking these questions rests with students. The University Senate Open Forum is the opportunity to meet this responsibility.
Tomorrow afternoon at 4:15 in Stolkin Auditorium, Physics Building, Chancellor-'Melvin A. Eggers should be confronted with students. Students who pry, per-

The why and how of the university's reasoning are questions that need to be asked; and unless they get asked there will be no answers.
sist, think, dig and stimulate with their questions. If they don't appear, the chancellor can go back to his office confident that all is right and fair with the university, since its students trust him to do their thinking for them.

Come to the open forum. Here are just a few of the questions that need your voice to be asked:

1. Why is the University Senate Committee on appointments and promotions balking on passing the tenure policy to give students a voice in the tenure process?
2. How has an "efficient" security force allowed a rash of robberies, attacks, attempted shootinge, and suspected arson to occur on and near campus this semester?
3. Eggers has promised to place more emphasis on "the academic side" of the university, to get away from its image of a corporation. What does this entail?
4. How are the university's holdings in South Africa being used to change that country's system of apartheid?
5. Will SU take out a loan to help finance construction of a student union building?
6. By how much will tuition increase next year?
7. What is being done to establish

Where's Wolsky?

We eagerly opened our copy of Newsweek magazine the other day and turned to the "Update" section, hoping to find out whatever happened to Arnie Wolsky. Unfortunately, we found nothing.

You may remember Arnie Wolsky. Some of you may voted for him last December. He is the Student Association president.

Last epring Wolsky was playing student'activist, speaking out at the Os trom Coop sit-in, helping to organize a successful rally. for a student union when 500 students turned out in the rain, and leading the then-efiective booleatore boycoth.

But that was last apring and we seid then: "SA has to...keep themomentum going by. Winning specific demands and making the right compromises with the administration. They have to keep the momentam coing by keeping the : goale well-focured and the demonstarations carefully keyed to a bookstore advisory council?

8. Why did the university wait until it had a $$ 1.4$ million budget surples before it gave its faculty a raise? Why wasn't this included in the budget origimally?
9. How does the university expect to meet possible cost overruns, parking needs, and problems of filling the new stadium?
10. What are Eggers' ideas on the SA proposal to promote faculty/student interaction?
11. Whatever happened to the promise to publicize and encourage cooperative living after selling one of the last three remaining co-ops last spring?
12. Why is the University so adamantly opposed to faculty unionization?

These questions can produce more questions - and eventually answers and action. But without you at the open forum tomorrow, Syracuse University, Incorporated can avoid unwanted interference with a smooth, money-making operation.
Sy. Montgomery for the Daify
${ }^{\text {"In }}$ In short, this student government faces a rare challenge: chey have to laces.

With midterms upon us, it is safe to say that Wolsly has not met the challenge. The protests were only raw material for action. Neaderahip was the next step to bring resulta. Without that, the protests are reduced to an outdoor happy hour.

This is Wolsky's biggest fault; he likes to get things going, but he does not follow through. This semester his vice presidents have been doing the Work. Wolsicy has missed amost all of Assembly. Assembly Wolsky has failed to lead and has not even been a good student administrator. He has been invisible to most students this semester.

Next weels will we have to Bcan the Alumni News to find out whatever happened to Armie Wolsky?

Greeks vie for laurels in weekend events

unty Jerry Zremmei The sisters of Kappa Kappa Gamma outchugged the other sar̃orities. Thè brothers of Zeta Psi dropped their pants in front of a huge crowd.

All in all, it was just a "wild and crazy" Greek Weekend, said Lori Gulliver, one of the masters of ceremonies for Saturday's Greek games.

Greek Weekend is an annual event in which the Greek houses on campus hold social events and competitions. Eleven of the- 13 sororities and 21 of the 25 fraternities participated this year.

The brothers of Zeta Psi won the overall competition with 80 pointa. Kappa Kappa Gamma, the high-scoring sorority, took second place with 75 points

Gnished third with 65 points.
The top three finishers each received a trophy and Zeta Pai also won a case of liguor for its firat-place Einish.
Most of the events were held on the Quad. Competition winners were announced Sunday at an awards party at Jabberwocky.
Rick Burton, Sigma Alpha Mu brother and an emcee for the games, said the dirty song contests were one of the highlights of the weekend. Preliminary rounds were held last week, and the finala were held on the steps of Hendricks Chapel on Saturday.

Alpha Gamma Delta won the sorority dirty song contest with tunes such as "Cock Rise, Cock Fall," and Zeta Psi won the fraternity contest with antics such as dropping their pants in mid-song
Kappa Kappa Gamma copped the sorority chugging crown and Sigma Chi outguzaled the other frats. The Ive members of each team had to down a 12 -ounce cup of beer and place it on top of their heads before the other teams finished.

The relay racea, won by Sigma Alpha Mu and Kappa Kappa Gamma, provided a few laughs-and an injury.

Jeff Romanow, a brother at Phi Delta Theta, broke his collarbone when he took a tumble during the third leg of the relay race: Dean Wilson, who was carrying Romanow on his back, lost his balance and fell forward, sending Romanow flying.
In the doughnut-eating contests, six sororities tied, as familiay tyrics, as they mubstituted four-ferter worde during the "dirty song" contaytu.

Brian Fërry's newest release contains skillful, diverse music

By mite Maynard
Brian Ferry is mad as hell and he inn't going to take it anypacie.
Ferry, best known as the singer/gongwriter for the progreasive British rock band Roxy Music, has been trying to get his solo career on track since 1976, the year Roxy broke up, but he has met little success in this endeavor. None of his solo efforta have met with widespread public acclaim, although several have been critical successes.
With the release of his latest album, The Bride Stripped Bare, Ferry serves notice that he is determined to change all that.
The Bride Stripped Bare is a significant departure for Ferry.Generally. his four previous ry. Refreshingly, the listener finds that the guye from Roxy are nowhere to be seen on The Bride Stripped Bare. Instead, Ferry has assembled a fine crew of experienced sessionmen. He has also recruited Linda Ronstadt/Warren Zevon guitarist Waddy Wachtel. These changes have resulted in Ferry's material capturing a different sound, a sound that displays Ferry's vocal talents to the fullest.
Ferry, it would seem, is the kind of artist who would resent being called "just another rock ' n ' roll star." On The Bride Stripped Bare, the emphasis is on rock, but Ferry has also injected elements of blues, jazz, soul, folk and pop. The result is an entirely pleasing album with few shortcomings.

The rock numberg-"Sign of the Times," "Can't Let Go." and "What Goes On" (an old Velvet Underground number)-are typically Ferry. He singe with passionate abandon. Wachtel's wailing guitar in the background makes these numbers meamerizing.

Orange beaten in Boston

By Laxry Comnorm BOSTON - More than 80,000 people inned the thores of the Charies River on a gorgeous day here Sunday to wateh 3,000 of the nations best mowers compete in what in the largest single-lay regratta held, the Head of the Charles. Syracuafe University was well repreaented at the event, sending six boats, four of men and two of women, to compete. Eyem though the men's team are the defending national champions, training has been very informal during the fall. Coach Bill Sanford didn't expect much from his team.
Syracuse placed in the top twenty for only two of the five events entered out of a field of 40.
"The fall isn"t as competitive as the spring is for us," Sanford eaid. "We practice only expect my men to be in great shape.'

The women were also well represented in the regatta, with boats in the women's eight and women's four races. Conch Mark Lyvers, holding the same philosopiny as Sanford, didn't expect to from his team either.
"This is a big regatta," Lyvers anid before the races. "But we have to keep thinge in perspective. Our practices have been very informal also.
We plan on having a good row and hope we finish in the top ten."

The first event Syracuse rowed in was the women's fours Launching a boat that short while, the Orangeworgen finished a respectable twentieth in a freld of 40 .
The next event Syracuse competed in was the championalhip pair sculls. Represenpionalup pair sculls. KepresenJerry Jacobi and Bill Bater. Jerry Jacobi and Bill Bater.
Considering they had only been together a week, and the been together a week, and the fact that the race included gix fact that the race ancluded aix rowers who competed in the U.S. Elite Championshape, their mediocre finish was quite their mediacre Mhe third event of the day in which $S U$ competed was the men"s championship fours. Entering an "A" and a "B" boat, the Orangemen finioked $26 t h$ and $25 t h$ respectively.

By the time the championship fours were scheduled, the temperatare had soared to 80 degrees. Although .SU didn't have a boat entered, Sanford and his brother Paul entered representing the Syracuse Chargerg, a locel athletic orgamization. The brothers finiahed 29th, bat shaved a minute-and-a-half off their time in the race from last year.

Only two events remained for SU and they were the regatta's key ones, the womens eights and the mens championship eights.
The women, who have only been rowing as a varsity team for a year, finished the race strong, ending up in 15 th place.
"They did just what 1 expaid. "They rowed an excellent race."

The mens eight was the last and biggest event of the day. With thelikes of Harvard, Yale and Princeton in the race, the Orangemen realized they had little chance of winning.
The race went well until the midway point, when Syracuse tried to pass the University of Pennsylvania s boat But the boat in front of them. Dartmouth came upon the outaide and SU was pinned between the two boats.
One Syrracube rower broike his oar and by the time the tangled meas had separated, Syracuse had lost precious tirne.
"We ifell apart after that," rower Steve Buergin said.
Even though the eights had a tough time Sanford had mixed resctions.
"It's frustrating as hell for me to see this happen, but I realize we couldn't have done more being so unprepared," Sanford anid.

Business school seeks new home

By Bryan Donnelly
Faced with overcrowded classrooms and scattered of fices, the School of Management is hoping that construction of ita new build ing can be started by 1980 . ing Richard Oliker management school dean, said the buinding will be conatructed on the ridge overiooring Onondaga alley next to Ernestl. White Hal Fund-raising for the new building has not officially buiding tas not doficiang have been received, accordiag to the office of university relations. But Roger H. Hull, vice president for development, has refused to reven the amount of money that has been received so far. Oliker said a new building will bring all the school's claseroome, department offices and faculty offices into one building. The management school now uses space in five different buildings for faculty and department offices. The school also uses classroom space also uses classroom opace in toveral ot buildinga across campus.
Slocum Hall, where management undergraduate and graduate offices are located, does not have enough room to houme all the school': courses. Only one of the school's 10 departments, the army comptrollerahip program, is located in Slocum. Slocum is alao uned by the School of Architecture and the College for Human Development.

Enrollment in the management achool has in* creased 30 percent over the last five years. This year, the achool has an undergraduate enrollment of 1,289 students, which is 11.5 percent of the university's undergraduate enrollment
"Funds for this project will come from corporations and to a certain extent foundations, Han said. They will be solicited on a room-by-room basis.
Fund-raising on a room-byroom bagis means that every lecture soom ar classroom will have a donow who will cover the cort of the room or a percentage of the cost of the building.

Hull said the naming gift for the new building will be $1.S million.

According to Oliker* government funds will not be available for the new building because it will not be a corn. munity resource like the new gtadimm. So money for the neve building will have to come from private donations.
The new School of Management building will house the achool under one coof Oliker waid he anticipates a continced growth in careeroriented programs, Euch at programs in management and communications.
The buildinga that will become vacant when the new building is complete are wooden structures at 107 College Place, 129 College Place and 406 Univeraity Place.

The School of Architecture and the College for Humam Development will probably take up the apace vacated by the managernent school in Slocum, Oliker aaid.
Oliker said the new managemeat building will have room for extra faculty of: hces. Also, if enrollment in the school becomes too large for the new building, the school can uge extra clagsroom space in other campus buildinga, Oliker eaid.
The extra classroom space will probably be available in he renovated Mall of Hanguages and Huntington Hall, he said.

Mr. Wolsky's assertion that "I am zoing to be in my office during office hours" met with snickers from his cormptroller and a vice president. Wolsky, said he is looking for "something big" for the campus to rally around He gounded like a network programer Representative Hallihan played the most entertaining role all night. He asked both Mr. Wolsky and Mr. Kleidman, the comptroller, what they did all summer "since they make $$ 2,000$ for a year-round job" and are "supposed to be on the Hill" (a popular term). Hallahan proved he is ready to move on to bigger roles at PTA meetings as the wken irate taxpayer.
Mr. Kleidman tried to explain he doean't make that much and is not required to be there. Mr. Wolsky took it all in atride by yelling at Mr. Hallihan from across the auditorium. He was out of order, but colorful.
Vice-President Farr then asked "Arnie, cam you please explain Maine?" Judging from the groans of the Assembly this is a tired joke about a time Ar. mie got drunk and said the Martians were app.

To the editor:

Where is Arnie Wolaky?
1 am appearing at the Student Association building located at 821 University Ave. There are also special shows on nights when committees are in session. I also appear at Maxwell Auditorium when there is an Assembly meeting. I also will occasionally appear in - clasis, but that it a rare occurrence.
I did not attend the Assembly orientation meetings because I was celebrating the Jewish New Year ing to meet with. A am nombly members during their committee meetings.
While I have not been highly visible, I have been hard at work. Following the successful strategy of last eemester, Student Association is dealing with the administration on a sound and logical basis. If on atudent concerna are not resolved to atudent concerns are not reson, then the Asembly s asiabiaction, then the fireworks will begin. Currently, we have numerous proposals pen: we have numerous propinistration.

tion of a student umion building. We tion of a student umion building. We hope to be succesaful in achieving these goals.
During the spring semester, the students demonstrated their concern about the state of affairs in the university. We are working on thope concerna!. It is because of the apring that the Chancellor is oeriously considering a loan to facilitate construction of a union building. Because of the co-op sit in, the Office of Residential Life has agreed not to close a student residence without first consulting the residenta and conducting a hearing on the matter. The matter of the bookstore is close to resolution.
A good leader knows when to delegate responsiblity. For the first time, SA has an effective committee structure. Students are deciding structure. Solicy. Assembly people are carrying more responsiblity. This is great, because, as everyone knows, 1 won't be around forever. That's. what the administration relies on.
While I may be graduating (with some degree of luck involved) the administration will still have to deal with students who have grown accustomed to making their powerfelt. This radical will leave office in Fhis radical wil leave office in February

There will be demonstrations, sit-ins, boycotts and general mayhem all over the place. That's what the ad ministration has to look forward to. Unless student concerns are resolved, this place will bejumping resolved, this in'the apping.
SA no longer dependa on one person. The president is just a voice for the stadents. And the next president will-express the same concerns I have. And unless improvements are made, the students will again voice their opinions.

Arnie Wolsky
Arnie Wolsky is Student Association president

Ten minntes were then expended dociding whether or not it was waste of committee time or Assembly time to reword a-resolution. They decided to waste the time of the 100 people assennbled.
It was about some obscuxe amendment to allow people who introdnce a motion to defend their motioti. Due to the poor grammar of the amendment, this was soon construed to mean that "the person introducing the amendment had to make two argumenta, aģainst his owin amendraent." This was as exciting as diagraming sentences with the county legislature.
Meetings would be much faster if such people could be sifted out so they could form their own esoterics or procedures club. They could undertake a study to redesign the Paris Peace table.
After a confused discussion, the Assembly voted to cancel SA's membership in the United States Student Association. Larry Beer, our representative to USSA, was stoic as he led the way to abolish his own position. A few of the Assembly members should follow his lead.
Then there were the vice presidents' reports. From what we gather thereare lot of mestinge poing on and there will be some booklets out soon on these meetinge. The booklets will probably tell us how to organize for more meetings. (This is the key to being an adminiatrator; to be in a meeting or "on another line" or two lines at the same time.)
Vice President Courtney was certainly having the most meetings.

Thome dealing with eecurity and Fotod Sorvice were important. Not to be les out, Vice President Farr mumbled something having committees and made a bad joke about 3.2 beer. Farr apologized for not having a copy of the $$ .1437$ crime bill as requested, but would try to get a copy for the next meeting since "it is thick" and "looks fairly important:"
Someone then told him it was killed in the Honse of Representatives and would have to be reworked. Mr. Farr said he still wanted a copy of the bill. Such persistence is admirable.
Vice President Naughton was the last up. His four resolntions met with unanimous approval. Naughton sounded like a priest giving a benedic tion. After every resolation there.would be a chorus of ayes (inetead of amens.) There was no discussion about these resolutions, aince they only dealt with the minor topics of tenure, Iran and course evaluations.
The most important iasue brought up all evening was misaed by Mr. Wolsky. Naughton said SA ahould start looking into contracts SU has with foreign countries.
When Wolsky reappeared in the side door, he was asked his opinion. "Yea, what the hell," he said without paying much attention. Naughton snapped that the resolution was more importan than the way Wolsky treated it.
Later Wolkky apologized to Naughton. I was out taking a piss, report he gave all evening.

Tussling for tenure

In a flurry of debate and apparent concern over the tenure proposal, the University Senate last Wednesday decided to sit on the proposal, by referring it back to committee-for further study.
Senator after senator rose at the meeting to object to the policy which would seek student opinion about who gets tenure, and standardize the ways of making Co decision. Many promised to submit letters detailing their criticisms to the ommittee on Appointments and Promotions, which is formulating the proposal

The committee held tenure hearings in February. Nobody came. At that time Weeks said, "There's a lack of interest in the tenure process. Nobody gives a

It appears that people still don't care. The committee is still waiting for somebody to step forward and tell it what is wrong-or right-with the proposal.
It is not too late for senators-and non-senators-to submit criticisms to the committee. Weeks has indicated that if support is strong enough, sections of the proposal, such as the one denying students voting power on college tenure comnitiees, can be changed
The time for compromise and change is in these three weeks before the proposal is sent back to the senate floor. During this period, the issues can be most rationally and intelligently discussed.
Give Weeks 'a call at 423-2401, or stop by his office in 362 Ernest I. White Hall Show the Senate that students, at least, give a damn.

Sadtein ifireident Joe Meinerz point out the window he's bewn waitting for phyelcal plant to replace since Sept. 11.

Physical Plant hopes to repair windows before cold weather

Although the Physical Pran claims to claims to be keeping up with the flow of no mt repairs. it admita to being 600 .working hours behind schedule in window repairs in univer-sity-owned buildings.
Joseph Rizso, who schedules maintenance repairs, said window breakage is Physical Plant's' only major problem so far this year. "We're in pretty good shape," Rizzo said. The residential buildings are in good condition."

John E. Sala, director of Physical Flant, said there has been a high rate of window breakage in the dorms, but was unsure of the reasons for the damage.

Besides the audden rush of broken windows. Sala said the process for ordering glass has contributed to the backlog.
"My budget won't allow me to keep a wide inventory of different types of glass," Sala said.
He said Phyaical Plant berves more than 400 buildings, which have different typer of glass. It takes a variety of equipment to manufacture different types of glassand physical plant does. not have all this equipment on hand.
"It would be foolish to keep expensive equipment in stack and only uae it maybe five tumes a year," Sala said.
He eaid he hopes to complete all window repairs before the cold weather arrives and said that physical plant employees may have to work overtime to accomplish this.
Sala said another reason for the delay in window repairs is the priority process through which repairs are scheduled. The procedure is called the "control room system."
When a receptioniat receives a complaint, she sends non-emergency repairs through the control room syatem. Emergencies are given the highest priority and handled as soon as possible.
Sala deacribed an emergency as "anything from a broken pipe leaking excessive water to a building without heat."
In the control room, repair requests are placed into four categories of prionities. Four is the highest priarity and one the lowesit. Although the repairs are then put on a schedule, the schedule is revised daily because of unexpected emergencies, Sala said.

ORL accepts room change requests

SYRACUSE

In the Fall of 1979, Syracuse University, through its Division of International Programs Abroad, will offer undergraduates the opportunity to study in Mexico.
With a population in excess of 45 million people and as one of the U.S.'s two foreign neighbors, certainly the more foreign of the two, Mexico has a unique importance to the U.S. Cultural and racial mixtures are extraordinarily rich. Mexican culture represents an historical panorama of some of mankind's most vexing problems and serious challenges.
The program starts in Guadalajara, the second largest city in Mexico, where intensive language work begins. Learning Spanish in Mexico is more satisfying and more natural as you will hear it all around you-in the market places, at the movies, from your host family, and see it in news papers and on signs everyday.
Other courses in such fields as geography, anthropology, political science, art history, and literature will be introduced in keeping with one particular "theme" for the semester; "Impact of Modernization on Mexico" will be the theme for fall of 1979. Mexico is a rich and varied country, and each subject can be viewed from a historical and modern perspective.

MOUSING
Warm and sumny Guadalajara. Students will live in private homes while in Guadalajara, and while on field trips, stay in hotels or student residences.

Students participating in the program pay regular Syracuse tuition and a program fee of $$ 1000$.

The program fee covers travel from a Southern point to Guadalajara, orientation, field trips, and board and lodging for the semester.
All scholarships and other forms of financial aid valid for use on campus may be applied to the Semester in Mexico. The single exception to this applies to work/study awards which may be used only if granted specifically for the program. Additionally, there are several foreign study grants ranging from $$ 100$ to $$ 300$ which are awarded to students on the basis of need.

Two one-week field trips occur during the semester. One is centered in Oaxaca with stops in Puebla, Zocalo, Tonanzintla, and Cholula, en route to Mexico City. Here is the chance to visit sites of ancient Aztec and other indigenous civilizations. Another field trip is centered around Mexico City, which is one of the world's largest cities, offering enormous resources and exciting possibilities for viewing that mixture of ancient and modern that is unique to Mexico.

To apply simply stop by the Division of International Programs Ahroad office located at 335 Comstock Ave., and pick up an application form. Applications for Fall 1979 should be submitted by March 1, 1979.

said Tuesday.
Alabamb, sand Tuesday.
Walsh, who was American ambassador to Kuwaitin 1969 discusaed the Camp David gummit between President Jimmy Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadatand Israeli Prime Minister Menachern Begin with the Syracuge University Air Force ROTC.
The Mid-East situation hasn't been the same since Sadat visited Jerusalem last November, Walah mid. "But the path from there to peace is very complicated," he added. After giving extensive background on Mid-Eastight. ing since World War I, Walsh gave his impresmions of the three Camp David leaders and the results of the summit.

He said the 13 days and nights spent negotiating at the summit was a remarkable effort by Carter.
Walih called Sadat an actor "and a superb one, he has a creat bense of timing, he's out rageous, he's a gambler and he's gambling for peace now."
He characterized Begin as a very precise "lawyer-type."
"The two (Sadat and Begin) are not destined to get along very well." he added.

Walsh then explained th two peace aereementa reathe during the summit meetings and reactiona from other countries.
Moat countrieg, including the United States, viewed the agreements from an economic standpoint because of the large amount of oil imported from Arab countries, he aaid.

Waleh also Explained that America's role as a key negotiator is explicitly written in the agreemtris. "Americans have to be careful in their negotiations," Walsh said. "It will be a long time until peace comes to the Middle East."

The rhythm is iso lame throughout the song that Rindall Bramblett's Iaid-back sax solo at the close sounds like the charge of the light brigade. The aong, written by Bramblett, guitariat Davis Causey and A. Pearton, berates a gtoic who lets nothing affect him. Bramblett"e aloof singing style is self-incriminating-
Another Eramblett aong, "Electron Cold," guffers from a static arrangement. Once again the rhythm remains in a holding pattern and the melody walks around in circles. Leavell's clavinet playing and Nalls' guitar work almost provide a miracle, but the song dien anyway.
Poor lyxics botch Bramblett's and Causey's "King Grand.": The song features Gorne fine instrumentation, such as' Bramblett's stinging such as Brambletts guitar and Leavell's swirliead guitar and Leavell s gwiri-
ing organ, which rana circles ing organ, which rana cifcies around the melody. However, around the melody. Kiowever, lyrics ruins the song. Triteness lyrics ruins the song. Tind:
and bad rhymes abound:

Lronically, it is the lyrics that enhance Bramblett's only solid contribution to the Bolld contribution to this Could Be the alburn. "This Could Be the Worst" is a pessimistic view of mankind. Bramibiett wonders if man can truly reason with his tupposedly powerful mind when all he sees around him is apathy, He "dreamb of frecdom" from a world where freedom" from a world where people are put in asylums because they have a different vision of life. Bramblett offers no solutiong to the rampanit apathy. but his concera is evident in his most convincing

The beat soncse on the album were penned by Leavell and all fatmre hil trademath - quicir and melodic meongtic piano playing. On A Lotta Colada" Laavell's playing drives along with the rhythm, then relaxes with it and hhen steps into the apotizght while the rhytham section lays back. More than any other this song proves what a good arrangement can do. Leavell never lets the maic get atrakThe rhythm changes, the melody changes and the guitars and aso are used for diversity.
"Yptown Dowatown" includes dymamic inistramentation and optimiatic lyries. Bramblett's soprano eax work soars in the clouds, and Nalls plays the betw wah-wah guitar

Not because it's not worth reading.
You're wasting your time because you could be reading it three to ten times faster than you are right now.

That's right - three to ten times faster. With better concentration; understanding, and recall.

The problem is, most of us haven't learned anything new about reading since we were 10 years old. So we're still stumbling along at a fraction of our real capacity. In fact, most people read so slowly that their brain actually gets bored and distracted between words (no wonder you have trouble concentrating when you read!)
The new Evelyn Wood RD2 reading program.
Over 20 years ago, Evelyn Wood's research with natural speed readers discovered reading techniques that could be learned and used by virtually anyone. Since that pioneering work, over a million people - from students to presidents - have put the Evelyn: Wood method to work for them.

Claíre Belser moves

softly but carries

a potent stifek

By Greg Lackenbaugh Although the game is field Haire phen Claire Belser takes the field, it seems she could just as easily be tating the stage for a ballet. Belser doesn't play to the tune of "Swan I-ale", but when she's playing field hockey, she exhibits all the grace and poise exhibitg all the
As her slight frameglides up and down the field, one is impressed with the coordination of Belaer and the stick. Belser is the ballerina and the Betick is her partner. According to Coach Kathieen Parker, "She has a great stick. The coordination she displays on the field is amazing.
This quality. of brilliant agility is matched only by her 'She's a very team-Epirited person," said Becky Herzona, co-captain of the team. "She plays the game with all-out hustle," Parker Field Field hockey, to the average sports fan, seems like a dull pport. Belser disagrees. "How can it be called boring??" she exclaimed. "It's such a great feeling being involved in a team sport. It gives you a feeling of togeth However, she does admit there are problems with the game. "There are too many whistles and penalities," Belser said with some disgust. "I changed, so that the average fan can watch it with fewer delays. Then we could demonstrate our skills more often.'

Belser's field hockey career began in high school at Potomac, Maryland. There was an emphasis on eports at my high school. But the in really appeal to me", dian't plained. "Peychologically, I'm a much better team player, so 1 chose field hockey.
Belser played high achool and freshman college hockey in Maryland, and later tranaferred to SU. "High school field hockey and play ing field hockey at Towson State College was great. I really got a lot of experience playing down there againg the beat teams in the nation like Maryland," the eaid.
"However, Towson was too close to Baltimore, which is the pita. I also wanted a bigger college. I knew that this was a ince area, 60 I chose SU.
"As far an field hockey programs EO, SUS doesn't she continued. "However. I knew that going to SU would have better long range conse have bet
In defense of SU's program, Belser says, "Every year, we keep getting better freahman The level of our playing hat This ya lot.'
This year's team seems to support Belser's statement "Our tearn is really well balanced this year," Belser said. "We have two freshmen (Debbie Winsor and Eileen Donnellan) who really are going to add to our offensive punch."
Belser feels that new head coach Parker will also be a plus for the rapidly improving SU program. "Mrs. Parker has a great deal of insight into the greate," Belser aid. "The conditioning is much better this year than in the past. At the same time, she makes practices intereating."

Despite being high scorer on last year's team, Belser shuns the label. "Being high scorer is the least thing in my mind. she said. "A balanced team is more important than one with a few stars. It's such a good feeling when there's a play like pase-pass-pass- BOOM-in the cage," she said excitedly.
"Some people thought of her as a ball hog last year because she handled it so much," Heereman said. "Heck, she Heereman said. Heck, she helping the team. No one else helping the teann. No Belser, who admires Chris Evert because "I love people who can do things I can't, like take the pressure of an individualized sport," is majoring in physical education.

Despite the very demanding achedule of being an athlete, Delta Phi Epsilon, Belser managed to carry a 3.0 GPA last year.
As for the future, Belser said, "I'd probably take a high school teaching job anywhere, Nevada wer parenta be in Nevada (her parents recently moved there). I'd also like to moved there). for also like to love-photography, no matter Where I teach, she continued.
displays obvionsly isn't limited to the hocicey playing field. If enthusiasm has anything to do with living a happy life, thenit seems gafe to happylife, then Claire Belser's future will be flled only with joy.

Belser and her fine stick handling were unable to from being defeated 20 yesterday againgt Colgate in day against ioigate in Hamiton. Syracuse, now 4-5, Buffalo at Lancaster Field beginning at 4 .

Colgate again thwarts tennis title hopes  By Rob Harlestion  game together when we made so  Gottlieb closed the set, 6-2. Gottlieb's

Perheps mon surprising than Betiny Gottiab'it lose in the Never York etato cingles finals wes the early-round defient of Betiy Melicovilky (above). Hownuer, Nallocurgioy and herteammate got quilek revernge for their deflent youterdity.

BINGHAMTON-Lady Luck seemed to elude the SU women's tennis team as it finished second in the pionship here last weekend. Colgate won its fourth consecutive team title with 32 points while SU posted $261 / 2$ points to capture the rumner-up spot for the aecond straight year.

Fate struck early for the Orangewomen when ninth-seeded Betsy Malkovalcy dropped her opening round match Saturday to Areta Rakoczy of Cortland, 5-7, 3-6. Rakoczy loat earlier this year to Betsy Gottlieb and appeared to be looking to her match with Malkovaky for revenge. Malkovsly then went on to the consolations wheresthe was eliminatedin the third round on Sundiay. A weak backhand hurt Malkoveky, but the real culprit was her own nervonsness.
"I felt hind of nervous because this was my first singlen match under these conditions. I played doubles last year," she said. "I can't hit smoothy depends on smooth strokes."

SU'色 third-seded doubles team of Nina Dubin and Ellen Feinberg coasted throurch their firat two matChem on Saturilay as well as with their thind-round match on Sunday. However, they were then upeet in the quarter-finals on Sunday by the first donbles team from St. Lawrence, 3-6, 5-7. Neither gici aftered any excuee for the lome.
"We juat played badis:" Feinberg eptid. "It wes hand for tis to get our many errors."
Feinberg and Dubin regained their composure in the comsolations, in which they made it to the finals and beat the eecond doubles team from Colgate, 6-1, 6-3 an Monday. The two finished fifih overall in the doubles competition. Helen Mantgiaris and Joni Aronson, SU's No. 2 doubles and sixth seeded pair, went throngh the first two days of competition with relative ease to the semitinals on Monday where they lost to Skidmore's first doubles team, 7-5, 0-6,3-6. The Orange duo used extensive lobbing to win the first set, but they could not stop the momentum that Shidmore gathered in the second and third sets. After dropping a consolation match later that day, Aronson and Mantgiacis finished fourth for the weekend.

Indications that Betey Gottlieb would regain her singles crown were would regain her singles crown were good going into her finals match against Michele Langdon of St. Lawrence on Monday. Gottieb had not lost a met all weekend and she had not lost aset all weekend and she had more than three games per set. Last week when the two met in St Lawrence, Langdon took advantage of Gottlieb's health to win 6-1, 6-1 This week, Gottlieb's health was perfect. The stage was set for Gottlieb's revenge, or so it semmed.

Gottlieb took control of the first set and jumped to an early 3-1 lead. She ran her opponemt by using well-placed. lob and drop shots. The two exchanged aces in the fifth game before backhand, which looked strong all weekend, began to fail in the siecond set and she soon fell behind, 0-4. Refusing to give up, ahe fought back to a 4-4 tie before losing the set 4-6. Langdon came ont in the shird set firing at Gottlieb's backhand and rolled on to a $6-1$ victory and the singles championship.
Langdon thought the key to her upset was amart tennis. "I had to beat her with my head," she explained Langedon. "With a good player like Betsy you can't sit back and expect her to make many mistakes."
Gottlieb felt differently. *I was hitting the ball too hard," she said. "I had her down several times early in the match, but I just couldn't put her away."
Coach Jessie Dwire felt sönewhai disappointed, but remained optimistic about the rest of the seagon. aI feel morry for the girlis. They played their hearts out, but were the victims of a couple of bad brealis," hesaid. "If of a couple of bad breazs, inesali they remain undefeated in the dual matches, I will 1 in the atate."

Eggers speaks at Open Forum

By Davia Bauder and Walecia Konrad

An unusually large and vocal audience grilled Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers on a variety of issues at yesterday's Univeraity Seniate Open Forum.
Eggers answered questions about faculty unionization, student course evaluations, extended housing, tuition increases and a student union building, among others.
"I want a student union building more than you do, if you can 200 people at the forum.

However, he indicated that he is not in favor of taking out a is noan to finance construction of the student union. "We're going the student union. We regoing to inouire about the possitnity of financing through loans, but I of financing through loans, but don't propose sources of repayment being there," Eggers said.
Eggers -said he prefers the Eggers eaid he preiers the money for the project be raised money for the project be raised from gifs. He added that tuition from gits. He added that tuition money will not be used for a etu" moncy will not be use

Concerning student participation on tenure decisions, Eggers said he is in favor of allowing students to have a voice in the matter, but temure is, in the final analysis, a faculty decision.
He maintained that he thought a student vote on college tenure cormmittees, would not be equal to a faculty vote.
Respondirig to question about course evaluations. Eggers maid student participation is welcomed. However, he said it would be diflicult for the university to come up with a standard evaluation form.
"The kinds of questions that need to be asked can't be fed into a computer. ${ }^{n}$ English Professor John D. Diehl touched off a lengthy debate about the hiring of part-time English instructors by accusing the univeraity of hiring them to save money.
'Isn't part-time help counterproductive to your intentions of raising the academic image of the university?" Diehl asked. "Isn't this bargain basement education?"
Eggers replied that without the part-time help, tuition costs would have to be increased further. "One makes adjustments as well as one can," he said.
When questioned further about the teaching caliber of the part-time help, Eggers said he would defend the quality of instruction in the English department.
Eggers countered charges that SU could not justify a tuition increase because of its $$ 1.4$ million surplus by saying that by the time next year's budget goes into effect, the surplus will be gone.

He explained that this year's surplus came as a result of a enrollment that was larger than expected.
Eggers also said that SU's tuition is lower than most other private institutions in the American Association of Universities. As an example, he cited the tuition costs of several other universities, tuch as Harvard, Yale and Princeton.
An unidentified student responded by shouting, Yoúr get what you paid for?"
Melissa Rose, a student senator, contested Eggers statement that the university is not straining under overenrollment. She cited the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications as one example of an overcrowded school.
"IfI had to do it again I would reduce the size of this year's freshman class by 250 - all in freshman class by 250 - all in

SA wins twice at open forum

By Canolyn Beyrau Student Association seored two victories at yesterday's University Senate Open Forum.
The first win came when Chancellor Melvin A. Egsers reversed a previous decision by agreeing to establish the bookstore advisory board proposed by SA.
In addition. Eggers announced the formation of an academic rewards committee. a plan $\mathrm{SA}^{2}$ has been working=on since last spring.
The advisory board proposal had been rejected a month ago by Joseph A. Tutusko, vice presdent for business management.
But Eggers said yesterday hat the board had been rejected because the need did not seem compelling. But now, he said. "There is an occasion for it and we ought to have it."
Tutusko has said he turned down the proposal because "we don't need a committee for the sake of having a committee. My door is always open."

However, Eggers asaured the forum's participants that there would be an advisory board "in the foreseeable future."

Kathy Courtney, SA vice president for student programa. praised Eggers' action. "This is a step in the right direction that the admimistration is recogniz ing student needs on campus, she said.

SA.han been negotiating for the advisory board since the bookstore boycott last spring.

Under the proposed plan, the boand woulld be made up of three administrators, four undergraduates, one graduate student, two faculty members and a member of the Syracuse business communnity.

Courtney said the purpose of the borand is to establish a continuing dialoge in the hopes of reaolving bookatore problems which became obvious last spring.

Jim Naughton, SA vice president for academic affairs, said the academic rewards committee will develop a way of recognizing academic achievement for faculty and students in teaching or in research.

Eggers told the forum that de tails of the plan will be annoifyced later.

Details of the plan so far are cloudy. Naughton announced at the SA meeting Monday night chat Eggera might announce the plan at the Open Forum, but said he was unable to disclose any more information about the plan until the final details had been worked out.

The Assembly then passed a resolution requiring SA to assume any responsibilitiea delegated to it.

The Brewbter/Boland Han Council will pay half the cost of increasing security in Boland to help prevent further assaults.

About 500 residents of the complex recently sisned a petition asking for increased security in Brewster/ Boland.

As a result of the petition, increased secarity at Boland begran lant night. A secarity gaard is now on duty from midnight to 2 a.m. Sunday through Wedmeaday and from maidmieht to 8 a.mo Thuraday through Saturday.

The increased security came after a meeting Sunday with RSA Director William Brehm, MoCue and dorm residents.
-ktcCue and Kahan said they were satiafied with the additional eecurity, but Kahan aid he could not understand why the RSA office conld only pay half the cost of the increased security.
*They provided more aecurity at no cost last year after an assault," Kahan asid. 'I don't understand why they can't do it this year.
David Kohr, ORL assistant direc tor, said the arrangement sound good. Hie added that more than half the extra personnel are worit-study Etudents. This should save ORL enough money to cover the entire expense of the added security, he said.
"Depending on the amount of savings, we might be able to pick ap the avings, we might ae able to picktrap the whole tab in early December," Kahr whol.
Brehm said utudants conld help alleviate the security probleman. "If atudents cooperated and did not eixn in non-resident SU students, it would alleviate the problem of non-reaident romoning the dorm" he maid.

Operetta entertains, blends talent, music

By THmothy f. Forlbet
Tuesdny might's performance of Sigmond fomberg' operetta, "Ihe Student Prince; at Civic Center's Crouse Hinds Concert Theatre, portraged a delightful romance of a prince and his maiden.

Sponsored by CivicMorming Muricals, the operetta opens with Prince Karl Franz of Karlsberg (Vahsan Khanzadinn) attending the University of Heidelberg.

After settling at the Inn of the Three Golden Apples with his housekeeper, Dr. Engel (Harry Weber), Franz diacovers a feeling of independence being away from home. He lavishes in the friendship of students at the inn, as weil as in a refreshing love affair with the innKepper a daughter, Kathie (Christine Klemperer).

Franz*'s courtahip with Kathie ends, however, when he is called back to Karlsberg, where his grandfather, the king, has taken ill. Much to his dismay, Franz learns at the dismay, Franz learns at the same time that his grand father has pre-arranged for him to marry the extremely stiff and proper woman, Pxincess Margaret (Margaret Chalkex).

The play takes a turn when Frane accepts the fact that he must remain in Karisberg become roler of the land and marry Princess Margaret. At a gala ball to announce, his Detrothal to the Pripceas, Franz's bpirits are dampened when he receives th visit from old friends from Heidelberg. Their rempiniscences of the nniversity leave the operetta on a mostalgic note.

Khancadian gave an outstanding performance as the Prince. The former Syracusan has performed with most of the major opera companies and orchestras in the country. Klemperer's performance wis also brilliant. Her exquisitiely rich voice aeemed to be tailor-made for the role of Kathie.

Extraordinary efforts were displayed throughont the opera. Weber portrayed Dr. Opera. Webex portayed Dr. Engel with warmith and a slight touch of impishness. Chalker, as Frincest Margaret, was hilariously anaigh laced, yet ane also had the

King Midas & midterms

Midterm exams are like the midpoint of a voyage-with nothing but the thin blue edge of the ocenn on the horizon, you can lose sight of your original destination.
Tests become the end goal, not the means toward a goal. The test becomes all, we study for the test, teachers teach for the test. The test, not the knowiedge of for the test. The test, not the knowledge of a subject, becomes what is important. Pressed for time students are forced to ask, "D
In large lecture classes, the most beautiful and fascinating ideas, thoughts and concepts are reduced to a jumble of letters on an IBM computer answer sheet, which are further rediced to a single letter at the end of the semester. We are left. with a handfal of upconnected facts which by themselves are useless.
This has been said more succintly by British journalist Malcolm Muggeridge: "Accumblating knowledge is a form of avarice, and lends itself to another version of the Midas story. This time, of a man so avid for knowledge that everything he touches turns to facts. His faith becomes theology, his love becomes lechery, his wisdom becomes science; pursuing meaning he ignores truth."
The bookkeeping function that mid-terms serve force us to puraue the meaning needed for this weeks test, not "trath." It forcef us to aee in categories and groupe. We miss seeing the whole, how things interrelate, or whe some some would call the pursuit of wisdom.
The easy way out is to become cynical The easy way out is to become cynical and give the system what it wants; so and give the system what it wants; so many answers by this date, so many asmany answers by this date, so many asaignments by that date. And even though aignments by that date. And even though we all are forced to do this to a certain we all are forced to do this to a certain extent, we can't help feeling that the reextent, we can't help feeling that the really important questions cannot be ally important questions cannot be answered on a multiple choice answer sheet or within the covers of a blue book.

And neither can the boundaries of the answer sheet contain our imagination, that feeling of wonder that is quickly laundered out in elementary school. But some do hold on to what is easential. When biologist George Wald received his Nobel Prize he said "A scientist is in a sense a learmed child. There is something of the scientist in every child. Others must outgrow it. Scientists can stay that way all their lives."
Midterms, "the Midag story of facts" can ruin our touch with what is really important.

The spirit of pinstripped Salvation

It's been a week sinco the New York Yankees won their second consecutive World Series and, unlike last year, this accomplishment cannot be marred by feeble excuses of bitter opponents.

In the past, the stock summation was that the Yankees were lucky. The Boston finished a close second to the Yankees in the American League Eastera Division in 1976 and 1977.

Kevin Haynes

The Kansas City Royals were in tears both those seasons when "Yankee luck" twice resulted in the Royals going into the ninth inning of the final game of the AL championship series only to come out losera both times.
Even Hollywood's Los Angeles Dodgers refused to admit that the better team won the 1977 WorId Series.
This year, however, an three teams drooled when they earned another shot at "the best team money can buy" and wound up crying in their collective beers again.
Only the Red Sax degerve sympathy. Injuries ruined Boston's hopes of rumning away with the pennant and contributed to the slow evaporation of the 14 -game lead the team had in July. Although they would later get a day's reprieve, the Red Sox season was crushed when the Yankees swept four games from the Sox in Fenway Park, in what is now known as "the other Boston Massacre," by scores of $15-3,13-2,7-0$ and $7-4$.

Luck was not a factor.
When both teams finished the geason tied for first in the AL Etust, they had to play one game for the division title. It wasn't the World Series, but it should have been.
When Rich Gossage got Carl Yasctremski to pop up for the final out in runs on base, the crowd in Fenway gat runs on base, the crovpd in Fenway sat Btunned. The Red Sox didn icoe, they got beaten. Eonton would have to endure another cold winter knowing the Red Sox Agrein.
Again. In thay championship series, the Royals went down with barely a whimper, proving what Kansas City newspapers and people had admitted before the series even began: the Yankees can peyche-out and outplay the Royals.

Afer winning the first two garnes of the "official" World Series, the Dodger's could taste the championship chamcould taste the championship champagne. Fo urank it.
Yet, the Dodgers again spit out the excuses. After losing three straight games in Yankee Stadium, they said they couldn't wait to get out of New York where the fans were animals and the weather too cold.
So, they returned to sunny and warm Los Angeles where the Dodger fans threw smoke bombs while watching the Yankees win easily, 7-2 in the sixth and final game.

In retrospect, the Yankees accomplishments this season are even grea ter when other factors are considered.

They had to overcome a slow start that was contaminated with limp bats and a gangrene-infested pitching staff that bit the dust early with injuries to highly priced and prized pitchers like Don Gullett and Andy Messersmith. Before making an incredible late season surge, Jim ing an increadible late season surge, Jim Catfish" Hunter mada brief mound ap pearances where he strained his cyes and neck watching his pitches get hit into the orbit of dintant planets. Add to this the firing and rehiring of Manager Billy Martin, Thurman Murison's moaning desire to be traded to Cleveland (Cleveland??7), and the season was a soap opera where both heroes and villains wore pinstripes.

Mennwhile, the New York sporta media ate it up each day and apit it out in the newspapers each morning and on TV each night. They fanned the Reggie Jackoon-E3illy Martin feud from an ember into a blazing inferno, making sure to have pencils in hand whenever the relationship began to crackle.

Maybe it's not a coincidence that the Yankees atarted wirning again when the New York papers went on strike. Both the players and sports-page readers were probably better off without them.

And maybe it was just meant to be. It seems the Yankees were, are probably seems the Yankees were, are probably always will be a team destined for great. always Maris, Mantle, Ford and Berra-the Bronx Bombers of old-have been replaced by Munson, Juckson, Guidry, Nettlea and a team that "nickle-and-dimes" their opponents to death with an onslaught of singles, not home runs.

Like their predecessors, the Yankees of. 1978 have fallen into the favors of the spirit of pinstriped alvation. Their sucspirit of pinstriped faivation. Their success seemas to be precetermined aimost inevitable. One only has to look at the boxscores, to the painful truth to volatile Yankee haters, to prove that they are currently the beac teamin Gachscreation they $y^{2}$ il be in for a bituth of a pennant race.

Perhaps it was Lou Piniella, the Yankee outfielder and hero of World Series Game 4, who put the season in the best perspective.
"Last year, people said the Yankees were lucky and maybe the Dodgers were the better team. Now we've beaten them two years in a row," Finiella said. "The last two years it took us five games to beat Kangas City in the playonf. This year we did it in four.
"Now they"ve got to say we're the best team in baseball because weve proved it."
You see, contrary to popular belief, the Yankees don't play tuaseball with their checkbooks, they play it with their hearts. They are, as Catish Hunter said, " m taim that refuges to be beatern."

By Mary Ann Wood While most students choose to study in the library or in their apertmente or dormitory roome others have found most unusual pots in which to pore over their books.
II used to study in the stoeple of Crouse College," said Will Lape of Shaw Hall. "The only Lape of Shaw Hall. The only problem was you had to member to bring a light.
Another student, unwilling to go to such great lengths for her privacy, foumd that by locking the bathroom door and sinking into a tubful of bubbles, she could read undisturbed for hours.
Others who find the bathroom a bit too confining have found the solitude they need in Thornden and Walnut parks, at the top of the Thousand Steps off Euclid Avenue mand among the gravestones of Oakwood Cemetery. During the colder months, many head inside to empty class-rooms, auditoriums and stairwells.

Not all students are motivated enough to search for the perfect study spot. Some claim they only study when there is nothing bet:ter to do, while sitting on busses, in trains or in laundromats, for example.
"You have to do something," one sociology major said. "You can only watch your clothes spinning around for so long."

Some students claim that while they are able to work just about anywhere, there are certain things which must be congtant and always seem to improve their ability to concenrate.
I alroays have to wear thit old beat-up Aannel shirt, There to have music blasting in the backeround, and most of all I have to have lots of Hawtaitan Punch ${ }^{*}$ a Dellplain resident aid "TX probably Iumis out of achol if it wagn't for Hawaitian school if it wasn't for Hawaiian Having something to drink while slaving over the books seemed to be high on everyone's liat.

"If I have to write a paper I drink a little whiskey, have a few beers and btay up all night," senior Ted Ritnko said. "All of a sutiden the work is no problem anymore, and the ideas just flow."

Another atudent had the sarne idea.
"Istudy best at home when I'm drinking brandy and tea," she said. "I could just study forever that way."
Another student explained that the only way she can possibly get work done is to drag herself out of bed at 3 or 4 a.m., brew up a strong pot of coffee and sit down at the kitchen table while downat the kitchen else in the house is sleeping. This way, she can get her work done and still goout at night So before your next axam, when you've really not in the mood to sit in the litrary heiter a cloud of the smokeand inter to those girls talk about isten to those girls talk about how fat they are, try gomething different. That obscure spot on campus might not be as impractical as you think.

The Chancellor added that SU's commitment to Utica College is to provide funds as long as no other source ia a vailable.

One student asked Ekgers if the univeraity plans on stepping up the secarity force in light of recent shootings, assaults and rapes.

Eggers said he would look into the issue but that "we don't want to carry it out and make the university an armed camp:"
Jim Naughton, SA vice president for academic affairs, asked Egreers what lobbying.efforts the university has made to erase ra" cial discrimination in South Africa. The SU Board of Trustees last year decided not to divest SUs investments in corporations linked to South. Africa.
However, Eggers conld not name any specific lobbying efforts made by the university.
"The companies we have investments in participate in the Sullivan Principles," Eggers said. The principles state that corporations with holdings in South Africa ninould work for racial equity in the country.

In a statement before the question-and-answer session, Eggefs said the university will have a hard time complying with wage and price guidelines set up by President Jimmy Carter on Tuesday.
Carter announced a largely voluntary set of wage and price guidelines that set a limit of 7 percent increases in wages and fringe benefits.

By Myra R. Aronson Joseph Sugarman, the gregarious owner of a well-known mail order company, entertained an enthusiastac audience Tuesday night in Maxwell Auditorium by revealing the secrets of his success.
"The reason $\Gamma$ m successful," Sugarman explained to the audience made up mostly of marketing students, "is that $\Gamma$ ve had more failures than anyone else in this room.
As a replica of one of his many failures, Sugarman handed out "Batman Credit Card." He said he had been left stranded in 1967 with 250,000 of the useless cards after trying unsuccessfully to get the product on the market for several years during the Batman craze in the 1960 s .
But not all of Sugarman's promotion schemes have ended as failures. He now is the owner of his own mail-order company of his own mail-order company sociates National Sales Group.

JS&A publishes a twiceyearly catalogue to advertige ita 50 different gadgets, such as watches, calculators and devices that automatically turn lights and televisions on and off. JS&A has about 50 employees.

The company began when Sugarman, ignoring advice from a skeptical client, took a chance by selling a small $$ 240$ calculator by mail order in 1971 .

Sugarman said he made the company look impressive by running a large advertisement in the southwestern edition of the Wali Street Journal. After he made $$ 20,000$ in 10 days, Sugarman decided to run the ad in magazines.

The phones started ringing; three months and $$ 600,000$ later, his tiny basement office resembled a small bookie operation, Sugarman said.

The company now operates out of an office in Northbrook, Illinois.

Sugarman said that one way to ensure surceess is the "20-80$30^{\prime \prime}$ rule. The rule states that if you eliminate 20 percent of the problems which cause 80 percent of your headaches, you'll make 30 percent more profit.
JS&A is so efficient that Sugarman calls his warehouse a "wind tunnel" because the products, which range from calculators to "miracle fuxz," a device to purify the air by the elimination of negative ions, are usually stacked and bold within six months.
Sugarman said he designs all his own ads. Although he said they are generally wordy, they are always at the top of the advertisement reader ratings. JS&A competes with such companies as Sears, Wards, Penneys and Radio Shack.
Sugarman said he is so successful that students are willing to pay $$ 2,000$ for a 5 -day course. Similar courses run by other groups cost about $$ 500$, Sugar. groups said.

Sugarman listed his five secrets to success. He said the most important rule is to be honest. "To protect yourself you must be honest and try to deal with honest people," he said. He also told his audience members to know their subjects, not to listen to others, not to let ego distort their good business sense and to look at each problem as an opportunity. Finally, he encouraged his audience to look at each failure as a blessing.
Sugarman said, "I have always felt that every failure should go in your back pocket. . all successful people have had failures, and you don't have to be a genius to succeed." Sugarman said his most valuable advice is, "Never give up."

Hamilton, whowe office was created this summer, said students should know by the spring aemester of their junior year what their career choice is.

He divided the task of career planning and job placement into three steps. The first step, during the fresinman and sophomore year, ghould be career exploration. Hamilton suggested investigating various fields of interest.

During his junior year, a student should try to understand the relation between courges and the responsibilities. of a career, Hamilton said.

Terry Flartman, president of the school's advising prograwn, said that since management students do not take managestudents do not take mamage-ment courges in their freshman ment couress in then treshman year, the achool feels the btuyear, the achool feels the students shonld get involved as deons shonld get invible in curriculumboon as passible in curriculumrelated activities.

The student organization presidents spoke about their clubs, activities and memberships. They stressed the extractaricul experience that each club offers, which can be included on rebumaes.

Meyer told the students about the upeoming management pre-registration and the importance of keeping informed about events in the school. She said to watch the bulletin board outside Rnom 107 Slocum, for notices of events.

'Outrageous' rilm depicts lives of courageous social outcasts

FILM ON CAMPUS: OuErageous! Tonight at 7 and 9 , Gifford Auditoriam, $1.50, Film Forrm.

By Steven Titch
"Outrageous?" despite what he title implies, is far from being that, but it is an extremely charming and poignant film from Canada.
Recognizing that two of the most ostracized minorities in modern society are homosexuals and mental patients, "Outrageous!" deals with members from both groups: Robin (Craig Russeli), a gay hairdresser, and Liza (Hollis Mcfaren), a schizophrenic who has escaped from a hospital.
The film tells about their friendahip, and their life together in Toronto, and follows them as theygo to New York to try to make it in the cold ontside world. Robin becomes a female impersonator, Liza wants to be a writer.
It is a witty, touching drama. Robin and Liza have only each other. Since they are misfits in society, they identify with each other.
"You're not normal - you're special," Robin tells Liza. "You've got, a healthy cose of the cravies.'
Ironically, all through the film, the supposed protagonists are doing the most harm. Liza has avisiting nurse who keeps hex doped up on Valinm and other drugs. Liza's mother ceaselessly reminds her how "sick" she is reminds her how sick she is hospital. Liza's psychiatrist is the coldest of all, ignoring her when she pleads, "I want to be strong and alive like everyone olse, 7 and merely advising her to avoid pregnancy.

Writer/director Richard

Beniner has given his chax acters depth and credibility. Though the dialogue is at times very witty, beneath the langhs is the genuine misery of a aocial outcast's life Benner brings this out in several scenes set in gay bars

Benner, however, does not generate aympathy for his characters by having them pity thempelves. On the contrary, the audience begins to admire - and identify sith - Robin and Liza because of the relentless courage with which they meet the world
Russell is magnificent. Robin Fis female impersona tions, which include Carol Channing Bette Davis aro Charbra Streigand Davis and the hich points of his acellent the high point performance.

Directory to come soon

McLaren is equally excellent as Liza. She succeeds in communicating the nervousness, uncertainty and frustration of mental patient. Most of all, she convinces the audience how terrifyingly real Liza's schizophrenic delusions are to her. The acenes in which ahe fights off the imaginary "Bonecrusher" are done so Bonecrusher are done so begins to feel the presence of her hallucination.

On the bench with 2 walk-ons

By Vincent Flymu
When one thinks of football at a major college, one thinks of the great players and the instant celebrities they become. The annals of collere football are full of the Tony Dorsettrs, the Red Granges, the O. J. Simpmons.

The annalie of college football contain atill more raen like Brian Burnell and Kevin O'Hara.

Burnell and O'Hara are senior now completing their fourth year of football at Syracuse.

Neither is listed in the press guide profiles.
Neither has earned a letter for Syracube.

Neither has competed in an intercollegiate game for the Orange.

But, actually, neither should have monde it this far, or so have made it colleges thought Overiooked by recruters, Burnel and OHaxi chose the most dif-team-walking on. What prompted Burnell to attempt to beat the odds was his love of the game.
'I decided 1 wanted to play football in college-wherever went," Burnell said. "I wasn't recruited anywhere, and I was going to Syracuse anyway, so I went out for the team here."

If the expectations of the coaches were low, they were matched by the player. Burnell, a 6 -foot, 205 -pounder had been a two-way starter at Immaculate High School in Danbury, Conn, but expected a far different role at Syracuse.
"I figured I'd do anything I had to do to make the team: play demo running back, receiver, safety, whatever," Burnell said.
The demo, or scout team, is where Burnell and his roommate O'Hara started and will likely end their college football dikely end their college football toys. The scout Lacmate the plays of future opponents and sharpen the stills and timing of the starting team.

It's important for the scout seam to perform well so as to give the starterm adequate preparation." defensive back Coach Dave Zuccarelli said. "Everyone has an important role to play in the program."

Although the necesenty of some. players to scout op ponents in practice cannot be questioned, it is a role with rewards lese visible than elsewhere. The rewards are welf-contained and spiritual.
"Some people don't know what it's like to get beaten up all week and then go back out and do it agsin," Burnell said
For the majority of players the bruises are greater than the glory.
"After a couple of yeare you're eatablished," Zuccarell said.
'There's a point when you're not on the three-deep, when the freshmen are getting ahead of you, that you know you'll aever etart.
Frustration is a natural part of being a bench-warmer. Not making the traveling squad can be one of the little annoyances.
"'It's way more frustrating to sit here and hear the game than to be on the aidelines," Burnell said. "At least if you're there you can feel you're yourre there you can doing innething in endoing soxnething in en However, even the aquad'aleas Holented members possess inlented members ntense team spirit.
Although Burnell atuck with the team hia freshman year, he later had second thoughts. His sophomore year he faced "two-a-days in tall practice for the first time, which he considered "discouraging-for two weeks nothing to think about but football."
Despite finding it *sonfining." Burnell stayed partially because of teammate Tom Pirro, "who really convinced me I wanted to stay."

Brian Burnell

Kevin O'Hara

Since then, Burnell has earmed a football scholarship.
Playing football has ite diaadvantages, like trying to fit wtudies into a buwy fit etudies into bumy schedule. O'Hara, an adver timing degign major in the College of Vipual and Per forming Arts, said, "You'll be given a project that involves 50 man hours of work to complete by a certain date and then you'll have to explain to the professor that you just don't have the 50 hours."

For Burnell, a television radio major, football has meant making a similar sac rifice.
"After four years, I'm a newsman without ex perience." said Burnell, whose work experience consisted of tending bar during the summers in Connecticut and Putnam County, as well as working as a landscaper.
Although Burnell and O'Hara will return homein the same obscurity in which they arrived at Syracuse, they arrived ta syracuse, they appear to have gained deal during their stay.
"I really have to respect

Brian Burnell for coming out and staying out there," Zucarelli said. "He's ghown a lot of maturity while here and he'a helped us in many ways with the younger players. Is you don't geta walkon who"ea starter you like to get gaysilize Brian."
Brian Burnell and Kevin O'Hara may never play for Syracuse. If they do appear. Burnell noted they may be "emotionally jaciked-out of our minds-and half scared to death."
But they are realistic. "If we don't get a chance to play it won't kill us," Burnell said, adding he is aware of the talents of other, better players.
Amid the fruetrations, the fickle fans and the high pressure of major callege athletics. they have won far more important victory.
"I have no bitterness," Burnell reflected. "I enjoyed the chance to get four years to play football. I'm proud to have been part of the SU football program. If I had a cbance, I'd do it all over cbance,

SU can't unload deteriorating apartments

By Gerard Dziuba
Syracuae, University has been trying to sell Vincent Apartments for more than five years, but because. of the poor condition of the buildings, it has had no success.
The 15 thireestory buildings, on Roney and Smith Lames, house about 400 students.
Each of the 15 buildings would cost about $$ 2$ million to completely renovate, said Clifford L. Winters Jr., vice chancellor for administrative operations. The new owner would have to put in entirely new electrical and plumbing systems he said.
Sprinkler systems in the tunnels that connect the buildings would also have to be extended, said It: Niller Butler of the Syracuse Fire Prevention Brareau.
Residents have complained about such problems as holes in the walls, cockroaches, chipped paint and uncontrollable heat, but eay chipped paint had little response to their comthey he

However, the university is under no obligation to renovate the structures, said Robert Gallivan of the Syracuse Division of Robert Galivan of the Rehracilitation.

The buildings were inspected in September and were cited for the lack of wired glass in the fire doors. Since then, the wired glass has been installed, Butler said.
But, after inspecting an apartment at 102 Roney Lane last week, Butler said he will recommend that smoke detectors and fire alarm boxes be installed in the halls of the buildings.
"If and when the ownership does change, the complex will have to be brought up to new fire codes, he said. But, until then, the university effect when they bought Vincent Apartmente." The university does not qualify for government subsidies because of excessive assets, he said.

He said SU is looking for a buyer who will make the buildings into low-cost housing for married students.
Currently, Vincent is made up of about 60 percent undergraduates and 40 percent single and married graduates.
Each student pays $$ 775$ a semester for a onebedroom apartment. A one-bedroom apartment for two persons costs $$ 530$ a semester.

Chancellor to hold conference with-aduministrators, students

By Thomine CoffeytThe Chancellor's Student Leadership Conference will be helid this weekend at the Sagamore Conference Center in the Adirondacks.
About 40 Syracuse Univer sity student leaders and 10 administrators will attend the conference.
Students and ad. ministrators going to the three-day meeting have differing views about what they want accomplished.

I would like administrators to get a student viewpoint for once," said Kathy Courtney, president for student progirame.
SA President Arnie Wolsky said, "'r'd like to see a more definitive idea on what students can get out of (the office of) student affairs. I think they want to teach us how to lead, but I'd like to ahow them what students think."
Chip DeLine, assistant director of student activities, said the basis for the conference is to get student leaders together on something other than a problem or issue.
Both Melvin C. Mounts, vice president for student affairs, tor of gtudent Connor, directhey want a chance to meet student leaders on aninformal basis away from the university. For this reason, the conference is being held in the Adirondacks
However, Bob Farr, SA vice president for university/community relations, said, "We're afraid they're going to get atudents together so students can get buddy-buddy with administrators."

Energy comes to Syracuse, in form of new energy center

By Richard Folkers
Energy came to Syracuse in a new form yesterday with the dedication of the Syracuse Regional Energy Center.
The building at 324 Ostrom Ave. is the former home of the Ostrom Coop.
The chief function of the center, according to Jamea Center, according to James energy commiasioner, will be to distribute energy-related into digtribute energy-related inprovide information on how to provide information on how to to avoid purchaaing bogus to avoid purchasing
Also, the center is to be a model for other energy centers model for other energy centers around the state, Larocca said. The center will serve homeowners, buainesses and homeowne

In his comments at the dedication ceremony, Larocca spoke about his goals for the centar. He said the beriefits of the Enerty Center must be measured "in terms of achievement, not dollars." The overwhelming need, Larocca said, is for information on economic energy conservation techniques, because "conservation is good business.'
Another reason for Larocca's visit to Syracuse was to announce the new State Energy Master Plan. The program, which will be exgcuted over the next ten to Gfteen years, will first analyze where energy bupplies are comng from, how they are priced and how they are used.
The new energy plan constitutes a total restructuring of state energy regulation, according to Larocca. In the past, the state's energy program was based on regulating public utilities. But since two-thirds of the energy used in New York is derived from petroleum, a wider energy program is nended, The nexpl.
The new program will be planned with input from the public and the energy industry and will give the state a method of dealing with energy in all of its ramifications, Larocca said.
Chancellor Melvin A Eggers was also present at the dedication of the energy dedication of the energy center. Egzers baid Syracuse for energy research and ex. for energy research and expressed hope that the new center will provideanew outlet for research and teaching. will be on instruition conser will be on instruction, conservation and learning.
While comments at the dedication focused mainly on community conservation, EgEers later spoke about nergy-saving projects at SU. Most money from the univeraity project will go toward a plan to improve the energy effciency of reaidence halls, Eggers asid. These programs will include replacing windown and roofe and will be Least year, the board of trustees was faced with deciding the morality of having $$ 8$ million of stock in corporations operating in South Africa. It tools the eamy way out. The trustees supported the "Sullivan Primeiples," which say stockholdere use their votes in a company to lobby for change in the company's policy. At the onset of thetrial, Justice Gmabrin warmed Fichards fang to act reapectablo; any ontbursts would force the justice to implement "harsh mesanues.

In the most elocuent speech of the trial, defense attorney Codporgrmpared Firchard's artistic talemts to those of Vincent Van Gogh, Aldoui Huxley, Billie Holiday and F. Scott Fitzgerald.
One of the muisician's main character witnesses was Canandian Erealance writer Jack Batten, who was responsible for initiating one of the few outbursts from the spec tators during the trial. In reference to the success of the Roll ing Stones, Batten described Richarda' contributions.
"A majority of their music comes from his head," Batten raid in a loud voice, pointing to Fichardis. At that remark, the courtroom apectators went into a fremzy, clapping and cheering. In retaliation; the justice slammed his gavel and demanded allence.

After all the evidence was presented, the justice adjoumed the trial until 10 a.m. the following day, when he would announce his verdict. The justice retired to his quarters and Richards casually sauntered out of the courtroom. Several reporters and fams remained behind as the courtronom buzzed with talk of the trial's outcome.

The next day, the courtroom door again opened promptly at 10 a.m. Fichards entered and sat in silence. The justice repeated his warning of the previous day to the spectatorg and then began to announce hix verdict.

Justice Grabum prefaced his verdict with a few opening remarks. Justice Graburn reiterated a wall-researched point raised by defense attorney Cooper in Monday's court sesaion. The Ontario Supreme Court had, in a previous drug case, stated that the two reasions for incarcerating a drug user are: stated that the two reasons for incarcerating a drug user are: to keep the addict from committing a crime and to keep the Richards' drug rehabilitation in May 1977, the musician was no longer an addict, nor had he ever resorted to crime. And at no longer an addict, nor had Justice Graburn gave Richards a oneyear suspended sentence, accompanied by a probation order to be a "agood sentence, accompanied by a probakion order to be a good at the Stevens Psychiatric Clinic in New York City.

Jurtice Graburn then surprised the courtroom with his final provition. During the first six montiat of his probasion, Richardis was ordered to play at a bendft concert for the Canadian National Inatitute for the Blind. With this announcement, the courtroom broke into applause and loud cheers. Justice Graburn banged his gavel and quickly hushed the excited fans and reporters.

As the trial closed, Richards looked back at his admirers for the first time during the two days and raised his fist in a sign of victory.

U.U. Special Events & Syracuse University Greaks Presents "'HALLOWEEN MANIA COSTUME PARTY:

By Jeffres Romanow FAfter exploring and experimenting with rany diverse musical styles ranging from Bjethoven, Bach and Paganini to Zappa and telaughlin, Jean-Lue Ponty has found his fich as one of the top jazz violinists in the world today. Ponty will dimplay his violin talentia in concert Saturday might at 8 at the Landinarls Theatre, 362 S . Salina St.
Ponty grew up in the amall Normandy town of Avranches, where his father gave him a violin at the age of 3. At 5, Ponty had taught himself "Au Clair de la Lune" and at 17 he was playing music from Bach and Beethoven. After he graduated with first prize from the Auguat Paris Conservatory he played for three years with the Lamoureux Orchestra. But now Ponty is known for more than his expertise as a violinist; he has moved from Bach to rock.

Although he first began by playing the violin, Ponty's career in jazz was triggered by his talents on the clarinet. Ponty's father taught him to play the claninet in hopes of getting his son in the military band if Ponty was drafted. Later, Ponty signed up to play clarinet at a jazs, club. One night Ponty found himself without his clarinet, so instead be jammed with his fiddle, on which he had been practicing classics for six hours a day. It was inatant self-digcovery.
In a September 1977 Newsweek interview Ponty said, "At first I didn't take jazz seriously. I did it to get out of my environment of classical music atudies to chase giris and drive sports cars,"

But Ponty scon learned that jazz had a dis cipline as strong as the clanaica. He had looked for yeare trying to find an outlet to puthis ideas about music together. With jamz, Ponty said, he was able to write music that nnally ended acon flict within himself.
Ponty plàyed on Elton John's Honky Chateau album and in 1973 joined up with Frank Zappa and the Mothers Of Invention. "Zappa's sophisticated writing required knowledge of all forms of music," said Ponty in an interview in the February 1977 isaue of Billboard magazine.
After Zappa, Ponty played for John McLaughin's Mahavishnu Orchestra, but soon became "frustrated and mechanical."
Ponty's first solo album, Upan The Wings of Music, released toward the end of his Mahavishnu stint, is comprised of older pieces for which Ponty said he previously had no artistic outiet.

Ponty prefers to call his music jazz-rock. It is an area where Ponty has won Down Beat magazine critics' and readers' poll as top jazz violinist.
Ponty's concerts cover music anywhere from some bluegrass fiddling to his jazz-rock style of music. Ponty enjoys the concert touring and hopes his audience does also. He said in the Billboard interview, "I just want to play for people or else I wouldn't go on the road.

the conference-
During the meeting, students will break upinto five groups. One group will examine the atudent fee and UU funding, while another will look into the proper invoivement of the university in student organizations.
${ }^{*}$ We're hoping to clear up some of the gray areas that have come up about how involved the university should, get pith these organizations," Wolsky said. "The tread over AlBe syears has been for the ami fersity to take control more and more of University Union."
Deline agreed with Wolsky. The question we're going to ask is, What should be the role of the university in student organizations?"
Two other groups will deal with various aspects of the proposed student union building. One will look into which student groups should be given space in the building and what other types of facilities should be there. The other group will discuss how the building should be inanced.
Eggers indicated Wednesday at the University Senate Open Forum that he was opposed to taking out a loan to help finance construction of a stuctent union. 'I don't propose to borrow money without the sources of repayment being there," he said.

Another group will examine ways to improve communication between the ministration. - "an admittedly broad topic," DeLine said.
Other issues brought up at the Senate open forum might also be discussed this weekend, especially when Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers conducts a question-andanswer aession on Friday.

I hope to see some more details on the bookstore advisory council come out of the conference," Courtney said. Eggers said Wednesday that such a council would be established "in the foreseeable future."

Courtney added, "That's one of my expectations - that there's going to be a lot of discussion on the bookstore council."

Ramones seek pop air play on new LP

By David Bauder

Can those kings of sledgehammer rock. he Ramonea, ever join Peter Frampton and the Bee Gees at the top of the singles charts?

It doesn't seem likely. But with the relense of their fourth album, Road to. Ruin, the famones have made an obvious pash to gain mases approval. And the results are aurprising.

Sounds

The first three alburas from the New York punk "family" were filled with twominute bursts of energy. Songs like "Roccaway Beach" and "Cretin HOp", were good for quick shots of adrenalin, if little Ruse. More than hali the songs on koad to Run remain in this mold, but the exceptions signify a change in approach.
Perhaps it was the change in direction of new wave music from punic to a power pop aound that infuenced the Ramones. Whatever the reason, open-minded fans are not likely to be digappointed.

Supplementing Dee Dee Ramome's traditional power chords on a few cuts are auch formign instruments to the group as acoustic and pedal steel guitars.
"Questioningly," a tender song about a chance meeting with an old lover, is the most etriking of the new collection. The pedal steel cuitar adde country flavor to the lyrices:
Quiestioningly her eyes looked at me And then she spoke Aren't you someone $I$ used to know And weren't we lovers a long time ago? One can almost envision hearing the song on a mellow rock entation. Thanks to the on a mellow rock station. Ranics to the Johnny fumone's guitar work, the sons is successful.

Don't Come Close". is another mong that could poasibly pop up on your AM radio. It features an appealing melody and, wonder of wonders for the Ramones, a catchy guitar solo in the ruidde. Along with "Questioningly." "Don't Come Close" has the best chance for getting the Ramones extensive airplay.
For thobe fans fearful that the Ramones are abandoning their roots, they round out most of the album's rexnainder with their powerful brand of rock 'I Wanna Be Sedated" is the beat example. Dee Dee'a incessant giting pounds the strong nock melody into your braira.

The group introducean a new drummer on Road to Rzirk Marky Ramone provides a strong backbeat in his debut.
The reat of the album can become tedious after a few listeninge. The only aaving grace of some of the songs is the Ramones epecial brand of humor. Titles like "Bad Brain" and "Go Mental" Eive the Listener a clue. From "Go Mental:* I've kilted my family
They theight I was an oddity
Life is so beautiful
I am a vegetable
Mental Mifertall
Instead of laughing with them, the audience can't help but laugh at them. After three albums aimilar in approach the Ramones were ready to make a change. But the change was made in auch a gradual way that it ahould not serionaly disturb their present following. Road to Ruir may well be the road to better things for the Ramones.

Now form-witut, turnivg to a more pop mound on lis betert iP.
Entoed to Ruin.

Allen's direction is also superb. He sets the mood for every scene well Argument scenes, for example, are so full of tension the viewer writhes in his seat over the verbal brutality exhibited on the screen.

However, despite the serious nature of the film, it is not without its comic relief. Allen integrates the relief into the film well, knowing the precise moment at

Although this man dips into another ers for his music, he is known by today's music lovers as a master of his art.
Tonight at the Landmark Theatre, Count Basie and his band will lead a journey back to the pre-World War II days of the swing era. Known for his "jump about 40 years in the music business amid the winds of constant change.

Happenings

In the early twenties, Basie learned everything that two of the greatest James P Jof the could teach him about the piano. By 1928, he was combining his style with Walter Page's Blue Devils of Oklahoma City.
A few years later, Basie and Page joined the Bennie Moten Orchestra in Kansas City. It was with Moten's band that Basie's unique sound began to emerge.
After Moten's death in 1935, Basie took over as the band's leader. From then on, the Count Basie Orchestra grew in size, talent and popularity.

Students make infrequent use of new SU bookstore lockers

Putting books under lock and key while shoping hamn't proven popular with Syracuse University students.
The use of 75 new lockers in the SU Bookstore has been infrequent, although it has increased since the beginning of the semester, David Venesky, assistant director of the bookstore, said.
"In September they were barely used," he said. But use has increased in October, he added.
added can usually find five to 10 lockers in use," he said.
The lockers were installed during the summer following negotiations between Student- Association and the bookstore last spring. Installation of the lockers was an issue in the bookstore boycott.

Venesky asid the 15 lockera facing the exiton the bottom floor of thie ntore are used occasionally, but the 30 lockers at the base of the stairwell on the bottom floor are rarely used.
He said the 30 lockers on the main floor are "moderately used." The lockers are operated by inserting a quarter, which is returned when the locker is reopened.
SU student Lisa Burnett said she uses the lockers every time she goes to the bookstore for "valuables and to keep things together."
But another student, Chris Jungers, said he does not use the Iockers because he often does not have a quarter.
Although the main branch of the bookstore has lockers, the Mount Olympus branch store does not. Venesky said the Mount store's customers are usually empty-handed because they come from Graham Dining hall.

SU students get their kicks with foosball

By Dave Gymburch
Pinball machinee no longer rule bars and dorm lobbies as a way for atudente to get rid of their quarters. In the last five years, foosball has grown into a nationally popnlar sport as well as Invented in Europe 30 years ago in an effort to help mentally retarded children improve their hand-eye coordination, foosball, or table soccer, came to America 17 years ago. It was played here initially in the northweatern stater.

However, the game did not immediately become popular in the United States. A group of fans in Portland, Ore., continued to play foosball regularly, and they fnally organized a regional toumament in 1973. Foosball began to appear in other parts of the country soon after that.
Foosball is similar to those tablehockey games we all used to play as ide, but it is more difficult. The members of one 11-man "team" on a fooaball table are controlled by four rode.
Ideally, four persons should play the game. To direct the ball accurately and rapidly toward his opponent's goal, a player must have sharp eyesight and quick wrists.

In the hand-eye coordination that it requires, it reminds me of juggling," Geordy Frei, a sophomore from Suffolt County, Lif., said. "It's not my favorite pastime, but I think it's relaxing to lay.
To make sure he can relax with foosball whenever he wants to, Frei bought a table for his room.
"It was either this or a stereo," Frei said. "And the foosball table was cheaper.'
Frei, with his "home-table advantage," is the best player among the group that plays foosball in his room. However, he normally avoids foosball tables in bars such as the Orange.

There, "holding the table" is a matter of pride. Two players will remain at the table and face any challengers for as long as they are able to win.
"I play because I enjoy it, not to see how long me and another kid can hold the table," Frei said. "Some take it really seriounly. I've seen guys pick up tables and tose them around when they got really ticked."
In the Orange, of course, a little alcohol always contributes to a player's intensity. According to Frei, player s intensity. According to "fosers" quickly sweat out their beers during a game and leave the table soaked with perspiration. Aside from its value for working off teer, foosball requires a lot of akill and practice before a person will no longer embarrass himelf when he plays it.
"I had to play about 10 gamea a day for three months or 80 before I got halfway decent at it" Ron Guglielmo, a unior from Rome, N.Y., Baidi. "First worried about just hitting the ball, but I think the most important thing is lear ning.to control the ball and pasa it well."
The game even has its own terminology of ehots.
"You see what 1 call a 'motion shot' much more now," Guglielmo said That's when you slide the ball armong your three front 'players' until you your three front playe

Push shots and pull shots also "mon "hots and pull shots also are "Basicaly thagro continued theball for a twithe maneuvering 'he ball for a shot with one of your fron phich ers by pulling or pushing the rod

Poobll populaty
Fooaball's popularity at SU con tinues to srow. A carnpus tournament possibly at Gamea-R Us on Marshall Street, seems likely in the near future.

If Geordy. Frei wins euch a tour nament, a lot of foosball farse who live in dorme might shove anjid -their stereos and put foosball tables in their rooms. That way they could strengthen their wrists rather than wreck their cara.

SU booters bomb Bonnies

It was a special Fatin Orsini Wedneaday night for occer player David Glies. In honor of his 21 at birthday, the SU soccer team defeated St. Bonaventure 4-0, and Glies scored his first goal of the season, boosting its record to 6-6-1.
Glies, who usually plays as sweeperback on defense, switched position with center forward Tom Salmon in the last minutes of the game. We decided if we were ahead, we d switchiexplained Glies. "I wanted to play on the line;"

Syracuse was ahead, having dominated the game from the start. After only five minutes of play, halfback Ted Hollenbeck passed the bal to Gary Maister, who took a low shot from the right corner, scoring againgt St . Bonaventure goalie Matt Brown.

Center forward Tom Salmon pressured the Brown Indians' defense all night, carrying the ball dowafield and setting up plays to his winge, Greg Cunningham and Maister.
"Both of them are so fast, they were burning the defense," Salmon Baid. "And the coach told me to take the ball up the middle and shoot as much as I could. I've been down most of the season, but tonight I decided to go out and prove to everyone what I could do."
Maister was able to work the ball into the Bonnie goal area often. On one pass from Salmon, he took the ball in on a one-on-one with Brown. Both fell, but Maister was quick to recover and took the rebound shot on an open soal, which went wide to the right.
The second half was a replay of the first, with most of the game played at the St . Bonaventure soal.
A little less than 10 minuten into the half Hollenbect fred a grounder from 15 yards out which went through Brown's hands, bringing the score to 20 .
Syracuse continued to play an offensive game, as pointback Faisal Ahmed acored the third goal of the game taining a pases from Salmon who dribbled through the Indians defense.
Ahmed'c defensive position didn't stop him from acoring. 'I penetrated their defenap and purhed up to get a goal," he said.

Gies' goal, on an aesint by Maister with 1:20 left in the zame, brought the final acore to 4-0.

County scraps McBride St. site for SU's steam works proposal

The Onondaga County Government has scrapped its three-year-old plan to construct a raw garbage steam plant on South McBride Street near Syracuse Univeraity.
This plant would have supplied the university with ateam.

While ruling out McBride Street as the site of any trash-fueled resource recovery plant, the county government plant powered by fuel pellets ar dust plant powered by fuel peliets or dust. As part of a study that will explore the feasibility of refuse-derived fuel, the county will examine the proposed use of the McBride Strect-Syracuse Univer sity steam plant to burn waste pellets or other kinds of refuse-derived fuel.

Clifford L. Winters Jr., Syracuse University vice chancellor for administrative operations, said the county "could work satisfactorily with the university if economics worked out." Winters stressed that economic feasibility would be a prime congideration in determining whether the university will work with the county on the steam plant.

Joseph Julian, Syracuse University vice president for public affairs, said the county's decision should comesis no surprise to anyone involved with the steam plant plan over the past few years. Julian expressed little hope for the county's plan to examine other steam plant propasals, saying he didn't expect anything new to come out of the study.
At a news conference Friday. Onondaga County Executive John Mulroy, Legislature Chairman Michael $J$. Bragman, Majority Leader Timothy Rice and Minority Leader Nicholas Pirro described the county's plans to solve the solid waste problem as "high priority" and added that they hoped the problem could be solved by next February.
The cou
The county officials outlined five criteria that the ateam plant should meet before it receives legislative ap proval. The officials said the plan should:
-have the effect of conserving energy
-have minimal adverse impact in a residential neighborhood minimize public tax dollar expenditure

- offer reasonable fees for towns and villages that bring their garbage to the county facility.

The Crown: a fable for our times

News item: Tuition will be increased for mext semester. It has risen every year since 1967-68. Between 1967-68 and this year, tuition has risten 93.03 percent from $$ 1,800$ a year to $$ 4,150$. Last year's increase was 6.4 percent and this year's will probably be higher.

This is a fable for our times, as most fables are. It is about a university. A big one, in fact. The administrators of this university were so proud of it, they referred to it as a "Major Eastern University""

Major Eastern University (M. E. U.) was governed by that unique form of government known on earth only to universities. Some textbooks called it "government because I say so," others labeled it "government by secretaries." A university is not a democracy, thank you. The sooner students learn this, the better they get along learn this,
M. E. U. was rather a kingdom. An expensive one at that. The chancellor of this realm, for that is what they called him, every year handed down a decree from his "roundtable," called trusteessome of the most expensive seats in town. (Students could even get bleacher seats to this event.) It has been a time-honored practice since Christ was born and before, to levy Christ was born and before, to levy tares. Every year the chancellor those called students.

And every year, sure as the crops in some parts, this fee was raised: only how much became the ques tion. (It would be decreed 10.23 percent one year, or 9.28 percent another year.) Every year students would groan, but not do much about it mind you, for they loved their moat-protected world at M. E. U. There were nice greens, nice trees, pretty buildings and even classes.

But every year, some students slipped away quietly, ever so quietly. Sometimes the beat quetiy. Sometimes themetimes concerned, but sometimes the most concerned, but always some. Quietly.

This is the odd thing abont M. E. U. and other such kingdonns. On the one hand, the university throws open its gates and says, "Come all and learn at my feet, I shall open new worlds for you, regardless of ciass. The truth you ahall learn.* But for some the gate would close. The truth can only set you free for $$ 4,150$ a year.
All fables, in case you have forgotien, have a moral.

Moral: "Suos Cultores Scientia Coronat," the college seal says: ${ }^{*}$ Knowledge Crowns Those Who Seek Her" In no age, in no kingaiom, has the common person been able to afford a crown.

Musician, crowd go on jazz trip

By Jeffrey Romanow

Jazz violinist Jean-Luc Ponty took his audience on a musical journey of oophisticated, captivating tunes in his concert at Landmark Theatre Saturday night. Starting off the evening with the title song off an older audience in a rhythmic pui ha with swift hypmoticsolos from his electric violin. Ponty went on to play the title song of his newest album, Cosmic Messenger. The song started and ended with the eerie sounds of Alan Zevod on the electric piano and featured Fine violin work by Ponty.
Further into the concert The Turtle To The Sear from his year-old album Enigmatic Ocear. There moments when Ponty stepped moments when Ponty stepped members solo. During these moments Ponty stood off to the side swinginus his bow in a stepped-up circular motion as if he were winding himaself up for his next solo.

Ponty concluded the concert with two of his strongest compositions, "Ethereal Mood" and "Egocentric Molecules." During these numbers, Ponty treated the audience to soothing, almost hypnotic paced music. and exotic, fast Ponty became so involved in Ponty became so invalved in pressions seemed to reflect the pressions seemed to rellect the In "Egocentric Molecules," Ponty played an explosive Ponty played an exploaive number that had the audience awe-struck. In one of his encores Ponty showed that jazz has mhowed that jazz han the hand-clapping, bluegratas piece, "New Country." The audience was up on its feet clapping and cheering during and after the bong.

Near the end of the concert Ponty suid, "Y'm glad we came here to play." And from the enthusiasm generated by the audience throughont the ahow, it was clear the spectators were aiso glad Ponty came to play. Ponty's warm-up Eronp. The Mark Allman Band, evoked similar enthusiasm from the crowd. The one-hour bet provided an excellent blend of3azerrack molos on drum and guitar. A five-minute sax solo was the highlight of the band's performsunce.

Imagine having 1,000 pounds dropped on your back for 40 minutes every Saturday afternoon. Pat Conachan, West Virginia University's offensive center certainly knows the feeling.

On every map of the ball, defersive linemen, lineback, ert and defensive backs stack up in a mesh of bodies orn the field. Conachan gazes from the bottom of the pile to sce his running back scoot down the field for a sizable gain.

Tetting beat up. Getting Gratuck. All in the line of duty, all to enisure that the almighty offense runs amoothly. Today's football beroes aren't the clean-cut Join Wayne types who rescue the wormen and children; they're the ones who allow 2,000 pounds of weight to crash onto their backs, the ones who aurvive the constant panishment and dish it out as well Violence and football. Football and violence. The two terms have become as interchangeable as transistorized radio components. Intimidation, aggression and injury are war terms that, like blitz and bomb and platoon, have become phsorbed into the gridiron vocabulary.
"It's a question of me againgt him, of my life against, his," observed SU sophomore quarterback Doug Smith.
"It seems that there are mone injuries every year," said Syracuse head football conch Frank Maloney. "Surgery is ao common nowadays. It's frightening in a way."

Violence is the key to victory in callege football, and it is executed with deft procinion by playera who are bigger and stronger and faster than those who played the game 10 or 20 years ago.

The inevitable reault is a rapidiy rising and largely runoticed toll of football injuries. By the end of the 1978 football geasor, an eotimatod 70,000 college players at more than 900 chools will axffer nome sort of injury.

Of that national total, the Syracuse University football team has received more than its share of ill medical luck. When Orange quarterback Bill Hurley was stuck in the -ribs by a helmet and shoulder pad only seven plays into what had been tonted as his Heisman season, the spectre of football violence took a giant step into the Syracuse liraelight.
More, but less publicized. football carnage dogged the 1-6 Orangemen in their ensuing half-dozen games. Hurley, who was going to lead SU to a bowl game. instead led a procession of Orangemen to the hospital.
Against Michigan State. defensive end Chris Shaffer's lexs were barreled into by a lineman, on what Shaffer would later describe as "a clean hit," and his left knee ligaments were ripped cleanly away from the musclea.
II felt everything in the knee pop," he recalled. "At hirst, I didn't feel any pain. out and atarted feeling around, and they hit a teader spot."
The ligaments and muscles were grafted back together the next day in a 4-1/2 hour operation, but Shaffer was pronounced out for the pronounced Aunior, Shaffer will sose nearly a season of eligibility and now faces his senior year uncertain that he can recover fully enough to play football again.

Another Orange casualty that day was defensive back Bob Axteilpane, who suffered a concussion, or, in coaching language, "had kis bell rang." The following week, center Steve Spinney and tight end Tim Trapasso both suffered knee injuries during practice and, after surgery, the senior Spinney was declared out for the year.
Linebacker Bob Tate was next in the Orange injured knee parade when he severely aprained his knee against Wreat Virginia. Meanwhile, tight end Bruce Semall badly aprained his ankle, an injury that would force him to miss the Maryland and Penn State games, and midale linebacker Jim Collins, who missed all of the 1977 season with an broken leg, twistod his antile eariy in the first quartar againat. Weat Virginia.

By the time the Maryland ane rolled around on the Orangenen had tostient Orangemen had lost five opening day btarters to State, the season injury tally stood at seven knees, four ankles, three ribs, a couple of concuasions and an assortment of less merious, yet painful, bruises, strains and sprains.
"You're always full of bruises and bumps," said freahman offensive linerman Bob Budzenski, who has received his share of minor lumape in practice alone. "After a while, you're just one big zore. But you get uned to thre"
If you phay college football, you have to learn to play with pain. According to tearn trainer Donald Lowe, each of Su's 98 football players has euffered or will auffer at least one injury during his fouryear college career. From 50 year college career. From 50 to 60 percent of the injuries

the player will mias no more than two or three daya of practice, Lowe eaid. Still, 85 to 90 percent of the 98 players will sustain injuries serious enough to keep them off the practice field for more than two or three days...
During the 1977 seasion, Zowe compined a list of between 400 and 500 instances when he gaw a player for some nort of medical problem: Several were minor, like torn fingernails and head colds, but many others dealt with such problems as blows to the abdomen, lacerated chins and chipped teeth.
According to Maloney, the two most gerious and common football injuries are to the head and neck area and to the knee.
"When I aee a player lying motionless on the field during a game, I figure he's probably not breathing and that he has a sericun head or neck injury that could be a matter of life or death," Lan explained. "At least when he's writhing around, I fige it isn't so serious. But if hfy just lying there, then it's ? scary."

But injuries don't have to occur during a game to be? acary, and, in fact, many football playera get hurt during hitting drille or scrimmages with their own? ceammates.
Spinney, for instance, wall injured during a Coyne Fid practice when a running back the wha blocking for ram into the back of hia leg. And in Augnet 1977, Maloney witneased what he feels is the mort novere footbal injury be has ever: encountered.
Brian Inhman, an SU reciver who was then playing in the defensive ackfield, came charging up o make a tackle during a acrimmage at Coyne and lo his footing. Hit by another player as he fell, Ishman

The knee is susceptible to injury in §ve spots: the cartilages, the ligaments, the muscles around the knee, the kneecap (a bone in front of the joint) and the kineecap endons.
Maloney feels that knees are more prone to injury on artificial surfaces, because the surface is much harder than real grass.

In high achool, SU sophomore defensive tackle Gordy Gronkowski suffered a painful yet common knee cartilage injury, from "my knee constantly hitting the turf in games and practice." that continues to plague him that co today.

No matter what the surface, however, knees can be deliberately destroyed by an opponent playing completely within the legal bounda of football.
"I tell my etudents to imagine picking up a 200 pound $\log$ and throwing it a someone's knee," said John Sciera, head athletic trainer at the State University College at Cortland. "It's inherent in the game"

Maloney agrees with Sciera, and feels that today's faster athletes increase a player's vunerability. "Players are much bigger, tronger and faster than they were 20 years ago." Maloney said. "The collisions are more violent. It's like watching two cars hit headon going 75 miles per hour rather than when they hit at 40. I just stand on the sidelines sometimes and marvel at the collisions."
It is when those magnificeat colliaions assume a motive of intimidation that the game of football most resembles a duel of pure phyaical and peycholozical warfare.

"I just largh at them when they try to intimidate me," Ifurley asid. "You just have to play their psychological game and not let them think they have you scared."

A fter the quarterbacks. the A running backs and pase receivert are the most vulnerable tootbali piayers. fshman may have zecovered from his shattered femir, but every time he goes out for a pass, there is a headhunter waiting to punish him some more.
"Defensive backe try to make you pay for every catch,"Ishman said.
For Syracuae, players like anebacker Willie McCallough roam the field, making the enemy pay.
'Im out to hurt him," MeCullough said of his offensive prey. "It's my job. I can't go in there and give the man flowers. If you hurt aroncone you don't think bbout it during a game, but afterwardis yon feel sorry becanse you hort another human being. That's what football is all about "

Not everyone shares McCullough's conception of what football should be. An NCAA subcommittee invertigating measures to curb injuries recently sent Lowe a questionnaize soliciting his opiniona.
Among the measures under diacussiom are padding the outside of the hard whell belmet to reduce head and aeck injuriet as well as the helmets dangerontil potemain as a battering ram Some reformerre wrold almo hite to mee the facumank nomoved from the helmet, contending that it world alow the game down and thus lessen the impact of collisions.

A third proposal would prohibit blocling below the waist downfield on all plays, inatread of the present rule that applies only to panting gituations.
r'm in favor of any legislation that would help. improve the safety factor," Maloney said.
However, it remains to be seen whether Maloney is in the majority. To the question asking what canses most of hin team's knee injuries. Lowe wrote in the NCAA questionnaire, "the nature of the game." His reasoning holds favor among most SU players, too.
"You can't make any more rales without spoiling the game," Hurley said, slightly annoyed. "I was brought up to hit with the helmet, and if I Was playing defense, Id do化.

Like freshman lineman Mike Navaroli, the chiefrule Syracuse football players follow in regard to injuried is to not think about them. "I have to put the past out of have to put the past out of the way," gaid, Navaroli, whose high echool past inelvdes two dislocated ineludes two dislocated ghoulders, a concassion and a nemithroken ankle. *If I think about getting hurt, I will."
"Before I got hart, I never dreamed I conld get a knee injury," Shaffer aaid.

Perhaps the NCAA's safety propotals are nothing more than topgap meatures. Band-Aids to patch up an incarable dineare. Perhape Fred Hatheld, a Univernity of Wisconsin professor and one of the nation's foremost academic atathoritites on erports violence, has the only real solntion.
${ }^{*}$ I believe epports violence is going to contimue to edcalate for a good long time to come," Hatfield recently predicted. "Nothing thort of a total re-edncation of cernerations of fans and atbleten afice with change it."

EARN OVERs650AMONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIORYEAR.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer CandidateCollegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $$ 650$ a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $$ 3,000$ cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $$ 24,000$ salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus on Nov. 8-9, or contact your Navy representative at 315-423-5490 (collect). If you prefer, send your résume to the Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312-B537, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203, and a Navy representative will contact you directly. ## Carey fights for his political life

By Thomas Coffey

New York's kubernatorial campaign has turned into what Gov. Hugh LL Carey calle "a fight for my political life." Perry B. Duryea, the New York State Assembly minority leader, hopes to be Carey's executioner, Carey is in trouble. The polla have him running anywhere from even with Duryea to 13 percentage pointa behind. Four yeara ago Carey rolled upanimpressi ve majority, becoming New York's first Democratic governor in 16 yeara.

Carey's biggest problern is not Duryea, who has failed to arouse much excitement among the voters. Carey's biggest problem is himself.
D. Carey's been an unreoponsive governor," Richard D. Hanlon, Onondaga County Republican Committee chairman, claimed. "He's left a lot of top positions in state government vacant. He has a problem with aloofness."
"Basically, Carey's biggest problem is his personality," Arthur Rancke, assistant chairman of the Onondaga County Democratic Party, said. "He's a hell of a guy if you can sit down and talk with him, but usually, he's all business and people think he's insensitive."

To combat his negative image, Carey has ealisted the support of David Garth, the media expert who masterminded Edward Koch's auccessful New York City mayoral campaign. Carey's media campaign has stressed his record, emphasizing the $$ 755$ million cut in state business and income tames this year, improvements in the state econoray, cutbacks in government spending and Carey's role in saving New York City from bankruptcy.
"The media campaign in a last-gasp attempt on the part of David Garth to salvage Carey's campaign."

Governor Hugh Carey may have helped his chances for carrying Onondaga County when he signed e bill gutarteeing money for a domed mindium.

Hanlon said. "Carey has an integrity problem because he raised taxes in 1974 after promising not to and because of the way he handled Mario Cuomolast year."
Last year Carey persuaded Cuomo, his long-time friend, to challenge the mayoralty of New York City' Abraham Beame, Carey's political enemy. However Edward Koch defeated both men in the Democatic primary and Carey switched his aupport to Koch Cuomo continued to campaign as a ifiberal Party candidate, but Koch narrowly defeated him.

Apparently Cuomo had no hard feelings. After Lt. Gov. Mary Anne Krupank deaerted Carey in June, saying he was "isolated as a monk," Cuomocameabroad as his running mate.
"I think he's an asset to Carey's campaign," Rancke said. "Mario Cuomo is a fantastic person. I've had an opportunity to talk to Mario on a personal basis and he's never expressed disappointment over the way he's been treated."

Duryea, often described an a silver-haired, millionaire lobsterman from Montauk, Long Island, endured no such melodrama in finding a running mate. After he secured the Republican nomination Without a primary fight, Duryea persuaded Congremaman Bruce Caputo, a Weatchester conser vative, to run for heutenant governor.
Duryea's biggeat problem, according to Rancke, is his record. "He has a voting record of supporting increased taxes," Rancke said. "He also got a lot or money and power behind him. A few people handpicked him to be their candidate.
Hanlon thinks Duryea's record will help himn. "He has long experience in state government," Hanlon said. "That, plus the poor economy of the state."
Both sides are using the state'a economy as an is sue. How good or bad that economy is, and whois reaponsible for its condition, depends on who a talking.
Dury ea has charged that many busineases left New York during Carey's term. Carey and his supporters don't deny that, but they add some qualifiers.
"It depends on what area you're talking about," Rancke said. "Business has been having a grand exodus from New York for a number of years, but it's slowed down during the past two or three years. So you can't say Mr. Duryea lied, but he hasn't been tell ing all the facts.'
The death penalty is another key issue in the race. Carey has come out strongly againstit, an unpopula stance, while Duryea has said he's in favor of it.

The death penalty is a plus for Duryea," Hanlon said. Rancke hedged on the isaue, baying. That's a hard one to read. It depends on how hard the press emphasizes it."
Locally, the two iasues kikely to have an effect on the campaign are Carey's support of a domed stadium at Syracuae University and Special State Prosecutor Peter D. Andireoli's investigation of political corruption in Onondaga County. Most ## Perry Duryea campaigns at the State Fair.

Republicans and a few Democrata view the Andreob probe as Carey's witch-hunt" against the dominant Republican party in Onondaga County.

The stadium has strong local aupport," Handon said, "but I think the Andreoli investigation has more than balanced the stadium issue.
As Rancke said, "Onondaga County is not Democratic stronghold." Carey lost the county by 30,000 votes in 1974, and the Republicans are lookinf to better that this year. I think he'll lose badly in Onondaga County," Hanlon said Duryea is waging a low-key campaign, stressing the issues on which he thinks Carey is vulnerable Caney has responded by conducting a highly visible reelection drive. The reault could be one of the closest gubernatorial elections in decades. As Hanlon put it "The election will probably be decided by a couple of hundred thousand votes, which is very close on a statewide level.'

Abrams and Roth vie for Attorney General post

By Mike Maymard
As attorney general for 21 years, Louis J. Lefkowitz has been an institution in New York State. Running the Department of Law in Albany, the second-largeat legal department in the worla, the at

This year, Leftowitz is retiring. The vigorous, wide-open race to replace him has pitted Republican Michael Roth against Democrat Robert Abrama. The two have widely diverigent backgrounds and abilities.

Roth, 46, from the Wertchester County town of Rye, is the founder of a succearful New York City law firm Rokh's experience in government is limited to $31 / 2$ years as chief of the State Liquor Authority.
Abrams, on the other hand, has had a long career in public service but com. paratively little experience an a practicing lawyer. He has been in politics since 1965, when he was elected Bronx Borough President, a position he holds today. The 40 yeamold Abrams, who hails himself a leader of the retorm Democrats in Now York City, ran in 1974 for attorney general against Leftkowitz and lost by a margin of 435,000 votes.

Abrams' career in politics has lod to charges by Roth that he lacks the legal background to effectively manage the office of attorney general. Roth's own inexperience in government has quieted this issue, however.

Both men have made reform the thrust of their campaigns.

Foch has pledged to update the state's law books, throwing out the "outdated, purposeless and foolinh" laws and regulations on the books. He has gromised to press for the right to prosecute welfare frand cases, which he says cost the state $$ 1$ billion annually. On the question of erime, Roth maye that mandatory minimum sentences must be imposed for all serious crimes and tourgher mesasures mumt be taken agrinst juveniles who commit violent crimes.
Abrame, however, has set bis sighta on the atate's public utilities. He has said he would go to court as attorney general to block "unjustified" rate hikes by the atate's electric, ges and phone companies.

He has also vowed to diminste the practice of "redlining," in which insurance companies deny loana or coverage to people living in innar-city "high risk" areas Abrame han also promiged to restructure the state's Organized Cxime Taak Force.
Abrams is reportedly outspending Roth two-to-one on advertising in the Roth two-to-one on advertising in the campaign. Roth en eampaign is chronically ahort of funde In the end stat mide polle to date ahow thit betterstatewnde polis to date havern Ahrama runing alhead ofloth.

Communication gap hinders SA in program plan

By Carolyn Beyran Several Syracuse University administrators said they want to participate in a sponsorship program to increase communication with students but have not received any information about it.
Some werealso critical of the program and said they see dif froulties with implementing it.
Student Association said it sent letters to more than 75 ad ministrators and department chairmen about a month ago, asking for their involvement asking forme program. But SA received only two responses, said Bob Farr, SA vice president for university com president for uni

"I believe there is a communication problem,' Diamond said. "There's no question in my mind that many administrators are interested in such a program. I don't think the mechaniam is working well."
Farr said he definitely senta letter to Mounts, but admitted hat he didn't send one to Diamond.
"I may have overlooked a few administrators," Farr said.
Newell W. Rossman Jr., vice chancellor and special asgistant to the chancellor, also said he never saw SA's letter. However, he said he aiready students.
"I have about 30 alumni's kids I see about once every five weeks," Rossman said. Hesaid he takes the students, who are children of SU alumni, out to dinner or brings them to his house.
Harry W. Peter III, vice president for admissions and records, said he did not reply to SA's letter because he is also carrying out the program's goals.
"My wife and I have been doing this quietly on our own for some time now" Peter said. "We've had at least a dozen students come to our house some have even spent the night.'
In addition, J. Charles Jennett, civil engineering chairman, said be incorporates the program's concept into his free time.
"I just had 19 students to my house for chile and beer;" he said.
However, Jennett cannot foresee the possibility of meeting with students on a one-toone basis.
"It would be hard for me to pick out one student because of my position, as department chairperson,"' he explained.
Harvey H. Kaiser, vice president for facilities administration, also considers it difficult to entertain students on an individual basis.
My interest in associating with students on a one-to-one basis is limited due to time,".he said.
However, Kaiser said he associates with students through his positions on doctoral and dissertation committees and by holding seminars.

Syracuse University has agreed to implement a check-cashing system - but no one knows where it will be.
A trial period for an emergency check-cashing aervice has been approved by the administration, according to a statement prepared by Student Association Comptroller Garl Kleidman at the Chancellor's Student Leadership Conference this weekend.
"The details and logistics will be worked out by the Office of Student Affairs and implemented, in the early part of the gecond semester," the statement read.
However, Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers denied Monday that the system would be im plemented by the Office of Student Affairs. He gaid he did not know which university department or office would implement the proposal.
"An-arrangement through which students can cash checks on a limited basis to meet emergencies will be worked out by the second semester," Eggers added.
Last semester, instituting a check-cashing system at the main branch of Syracuse University Bookstores was an isaue in the bookstore boycott. However, Eggers said Monday heis unsure if the check-cashing system would be implemented at the bookstore.
Bookstore Director Diann Straus said she was opposed to establishing the check-cashing system at the bookstore. "I'm not excited about it," she said. "We don't have the physical capability to handle it. If there is the demand everyone thinks there is for this kind of service, there might be a line stretching to Marshall Street and back.'
But Kleidman criticized Straus' comments, saying "I don't think she's in any position to say that. When we gave the adminigtration the Continued on pega eight

A relatively new theory, psychohistory extends itself beyond the narrative of history to a closer study of the human elerrient. Building upon a previous theory which stated that the true study of kistory phould be biographical, since men cange history to happen, psychohistory attempts to explore why men do the thinge that cause history to happen. Implicit in this is the use of tome amount of psychoanalytical technique. This is where the controversy ewnerges.
The opponents of peychohistorical research argue that such a theory in speculative at best how can you tell

They further argue that the penchant of the peychohistoriamas to analyze the careers of living historical figures (Presidents Kennedy. Paychohiatoriana contend trat the atudy of peraonality theory, as well an psychoanalytic psychiatry and quanitative methods (the amount of data offered by many psychohistorians to back their hypotheses ie often staggering) is enough to give credibility to their endeavora.
However, paychohistorians will be the first to admit that aince theories on the reasons behind the actions of great men and women make engaging reading, a writer with ittile trairing in paychology and an overactive imagination is the most dangerous challenge to their profesaion.
It is clear that peychohistory has outgrown its initial charges of being "trendy," and is faat approaching respectability. ## SU: supporting racism

South Africa's apartheid system is grotesque and. immoral. It systematically denies that nation's blacks, by far the majority of thation, their human rights.
Syracuse University continues to upport that system.
Last semester, the board of trustees considered getting rid of all of SU's investments in cor porations that do business in South Africa. In the end, the trustees copped out by agreeing to subscribe to the Sullivan Principles, a general statement calling for fai employment practices in South Af rica.

The Sullivan Principles don't go into that specific detail," naid Richard Heiligman, univergity treasurer. A cynical person might then wonder what good they are The Sullivan Principles would appear to be more window dressing, a good public relations device used by a university trying, but failing, to do the right thing.

At last Wednesday's University Senate Open Forum, Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers was wable to name any specific lobbying efforts the university has made to help bring about the realization of the Sullivar: Principles.
One might think that there have

The only course $S U$ can take and till be true to the ideals of the university is to divest. Some might argue that by divesting $S U$ is los ing any chance of possibly bringing about reform in South Africa. However, this argument does not answer the moral question: is it night for SU to profit through its right for SU to profit through its though it is allegedly working for reform?
The Sullivan Principles are not the answer. They are a compromise on an issue that can't be compromised - the morality of maintaining investments in companies with holdings in South Africa. The board of trustees meets on Nov. 3 At that meeting, it should resurrect the issue of divestiture and vote against centinuing $S U$ 's support of institutionalized racism.

"The Man Who Loved Women" has much in ita favor. It is a witty, sophisticated comedy concerning the life and death of Bertrand Morane (Charles Denner), a middle-aged man who loves all types of women. Whether they are young, old, plain or pretty, he simply can't take his eyes off them.
His dresser drawera overflow with photos and letters from affairs; he is infatuated with the voice of the woman who wakes him by phone every morning; and to meet a woman, he will go to such great lengths as tracing her name and address through his automobile insurance company (by way of her license number) and then driving across France to become acquainted.
The intereating part of "The Man Who Loved Women" is the way it treats its theme. The merry skist chaser has been the aubject of many Fyench and Italian sex farces. Had it been made ten years ago, "The Man Who Loved Women" would have undoubtedly joined their ranks.
woun have undoubtedy joined their ranks Howevex, in the sex-liberation-conscious "70s, attitudes in general toward male/female relationships have changed.
relationshipe have changed.
Morane does not "conquer" women lite the characters portrayed by Marcello Mastroianni and Jean-Paul Belmando during the '60s. Women are not sex objects in this film. They love Morane as well. In fact, it would be axgued that Morane's women conquer him. He is virtaally a alave to the desire that every woman ignites in him.
Another important poiñt Truffaut makes in the film is that despite age, the retention of childhood innocence is the key to happiness. Morane is a child at heart, not in the sense of being immature, but in that he is open, sentitive and free. In many of ThuFiaut's previous finms "The 400 Blows," "The Wild Child," and "Srmall Change'), his central characters are children. It is no secret that the French director identines with them.

As Morane, Denner is excellent. The manner in which he plays bis obsession with the ladies is humorous but not sillv.
"The Man Who Loved Women" is a fine film. It is not, nor will it be, a classic, but it is funny, entertaining and will definitely provide warmeth and satigiaction for viewers.

He said he and Eggers dis. cussed the possibility of raising the fee Friday night, but did not reach an agreement.

He doesn't want our money," Kleidman said. "He can't even consider building the union because he can't take out a loan until stadium financing is complete.
Kleidman also opposed the amount of money students would contribute.

If we're going to pay $$ 30$, we might as well pay $$ 50$ and own the building," hesaid. "Even if we pay for half of it, we should get some control over the build ing because then students would be the major donors."
The group had also prosposed that the future union building be governed by a board of directors composed primarily of atudents and chaired by a member of the Office of Student Activities.
But Kleidman, Jim Naughton, SA vice president for academic affairs, and Dale Cohen, SA vice president for administrative operations, argued that this was giving the administration too much control over the building. They also criticized the proposal as being too specific for a build ing that is not even under construction.

Two other groups also made reports. One group dealt with improving communication between the student body and administrators. Their key word was interaction, which rapidly became the most overused word of the conference.
The last group examined the extent of university in volvement in student organizations and came to the conclusion that there wasn't much. However, several members of the group criticized SA for being unres ponsive to other student groups.
A proposal was made to have another conference in two weeks to examine these complaints against SA. This time, the conference would be at the Minnowbrook Conference Center in the Adirondacks. Kleidman said the conference would cost about $$ 2,000$. The proposal will be discussed at the next SA Assembly meeting on Mon day.
In a question-and-answer seasion Friday night, Eggers said the university haa decided not to sell Utica College. He said this decision is final "for six months at least."
Eggers also said a bookstore advisory council will be operat ing next semester.

Students explore woods, water

With fall colors at their peak, many Syracuse University studenta take time from their busy ochedules to enjoy nature, pick apples, visit a pastoral hamlet; go for rides in the country or listen to the roar of a mountain waterfall.
Exploring the countryside is a spur-of-the-moment adventure for some students. Lisa Wesley said she starts driving out of the city with "nothing much in mind." "I go adventuring - I can always find the mind back to Syracuse.
On Route 20 , near Tully, Wesley enjoys viewing herds of beefaios. The beefalos, a genetic cross herds of beefaios. between buffalo and catte
Other students recommended Chittenango Falla State Park on Route 13 between Chittenango and Cazenovia. The park's hiking trails lead to a 167 -foot waterfall. According to the park's superintendent the stream is well-stocked with brown trout and brook trout.
Cazenovia, with its tree-lined streets and majestic old houses, is another place students seek out to "escape from the hassles of school," as one SU atudent put it.
In Cazenovia, the Lorenzo House, a-New York State Historic Site, is open to the public. It is the restored mansion of one of Cazenovia's founding families, the Linckleans.
Another explorer, Jennie Huggler, enjoys visiting the Clark Reservation State Park in Jamesville. "Ex ploring the area is how 1 learn aboutit," Huggler amid.
The apparently "Bunken" lakein the parkintrigued Paula Entin, another Btudent who visited Clark Reservation. In the center of the park is a ravine hundreds of feet deep. One side of the ravine is sloping and wooded; on the other side are cliffs. The lake, which was formed by a glacier, is at the bottom.

The Lake's shore can be reached by a trail down the ravine
Verda Lyons said she drives to South Onondaga, taking the back roads that "look interesting." In South Onondaga the land is hilly and wooded and the houses are far apart, Lyoms said.

While some students opt for spontaneous wanderings, others organize their outings in ad vance. Arnout Foutein said he drives three hours to get to the Keene Valley in the Adirondacks to spend the day hiking.
Yet, nature can be enjoyed in groups too, according to a DellPlain Hall resident. A group of 13 people from the third floor of Dellplain Hall recently went apple picking at the Beal and Skiff Apple Farm in Rafryyette.

Residents of Blackwell Cottage also have picked apples. Blackwell RA Debbie McHarris said, "I had never seen a true apple tree with full-sized apples up close before.'
So, if you ever need to get away from the hectic life of the university, the Central New York countryside provides many interesting and beautiful places to get back to nature.

Orange rise, then fall

What a By Larry Connore
What a differemee a day malces. After easily wiping ont both Buffalo State and Kenka College at home last Friday night, the Syractore Univeraity volleyban team (18-4) faltered Satur day and finished a disappointing third in the Manafield Tonmey.
SU's loss to Grenesed in the semifinals came as a shock to Coach Elaine Goldband.
"I thought we had a chance of winning the tournament," she said, "we had our opportunities in the Geneseo match but we just couldn't win the crucial points."
The way the team played Friday night gave no hint to the problerms it would face Saturday.
On Fridiay, the Orangewomen destroyed Buffalo State $15-5,15-5$, and then bent out a team of non-starters to defeat Xeuks State 15-5, 15-3.

Goldband was pleased with the night's results and especially with the play of the ben-
"They don't get much playing time," she said. "It's good to see them play so well."

Syracuse won the firat game $15-8$ but then things fell apart, as its passing game began to resemble that of the SU football team. Its hovement miopped. Twice, the Orangewomen had match point but covidin't capitalize. Before they knew it, SU had lost the next two games 16 14, 15-7, and another bid to win their first tourarnent of the year:
remesed went on to lowe to Fredonia in the finals while SU defeated Mansfield for third place.
With only two matches left before the district and state toumaments, the Orangewomen still haven't played with the consistency they're capable of. Coldband hopes the incentive of post-geason play and four seniors playing their final matches will be the boost they need to cary them through.

Syracuse freshmen Elaime Morry (15) and her teammates thought they had it alt sot up this past weokend at the Mansfield Volleybyll Toumbiment, but an upet knocked the Orangevornem out of the champlonship.

Cross country 16th in /C4As

By Drew Schwartz Syracuse University'm cross country team placed 16 th in the IC4A Championships held last Saturday in New Yorl City, but Coach Andy Jugan was only "semi-satiafied" by the Orangemen's performance since he had expected $S U$ to ranli higher in the 20 team neld.

Even though we ran well, we conld have placed as high' as 11 th with a little better day," Jugan noted.
"Normally, when you set into a championship meet there's more adrenaline flow ing and the runners get their best times of the year. We ran good times, but they weren't outstanding." Jugan adided.

Jugan attribnted the times to a lack of experience. None of SU's runners had ever competed in a race with ap proximately 150 paxticipants, and Jugan said that the large field spoiled SU's strategy of cetting out to a fast thart.

We were intrimidated by the A pize of the field comprefing and it showed," Jugan said. "It takes experience to avaid intimidation."
The crowded field had an adverse effect on Charlie Bevier, who placed 36 th in the race with a time of $25: 36$. "He had to expend a lot of extria energy because he sprung wide around the turna to a void other runmers," Jugan explained. "He's probably learned that you have to joclicey for position you have to jocikey to in a crowded race.;

The four other SU runnezs who completed the cluttered course were Don Bosardet (26:33) 87th; Jerry Josselyn (26:34) 88th; Dave Denis (26:42) 93rd; and Rich Wo jtowiez (26:46) 96th.
"If each of them would have run 15 seconds faster wre would have placed 11th in the meet," Jugan said.

SU alao competed in the St. John's Invitational meet last Saturday. Mark Stauffer's time of 26 -25 gave him 30 h pohce finish mind Mike (27:00). Jugan said that Stauffer and Kohlbrennermay be among the seven rumners who will represant SU in the NCAA Diatrict II Qablifiers a weel from Saturday at Bethlehem, Pa.

The top six runners that are not nuembers of the top six teames in the districts will qualify for the national cham-pionshipe- Imgan thinks that Bevier has a good hot at competing in the nationals. Bevier is more sdept at running the longer cistance of the qualifiers course and will have the experience of rumming in a chamapionship meet, acrording to Jugan.

The Orangeapen will use Saturdia's meet agrunat the Syracuse Chargers and Track Club (an amateur organization) to prepare for the aistricta. Wenl taliariont key approach in practios this week and look ahead to the dis. trieta," Jugan eaid.

RSAs handle dorm security by checking Btudents meal cards for the colored dots which identify the residenta of each dorm. Non-residents must be accompanied by a dormitory resident and must aign in to enter. RSAs work from midnight to 7 am . in most dorms. Four RSA's are responsible for checking the 16 co-ops and cottages in Area housing.

Becky Sherblom, a Kimmal remident, anid that one might when she was Btudying in the Kimmel Lounge, which is next to the RSA's station, the FSA on duty came in and begran to play pinball.
HHe almost miseed a couple who entered the building," she said. "The only reason he saw them was becauge they were honeat enough to wait in the lobby for him.'
Peter Gallagher, mather Kimmel renident, anid when he returned to the dorm with his brothers early one morning, the RSA did not look at the picture on his meal card and did not ask for his brothers' identification.
William Brehm, RSA supervisor, said atudenta should register compleinta against RSAs with their dorm directors, who in turn will notify the Residential Security Program of the problem. If it is found that an RSA has acted improperly, disciplinary action will be taken, Brehm said.
James E. Margan, director of the Office of Reaidential Life, said some RSAs have been fred this semester for misconduct on the job.
Scott Klein, chairman of the Residential Life Advisory Committee, said that security between 7 and 8 a.m. is a problem in many dorms. RSAAs go off duty at 7 anm. and no one is at the main desks until 8 anm., he

By Collette Gerthicof

Complaints of headaches from atudenta because of noxioas chernieal fumes in the basement of Smith Hall forced the cancellation of tillacreening classes last Thursday.
Instructors and atudents have also complained about the lack of ventilation in the printralking and lithography stadios in the basement of Stoele Hall.
${ }^{*}$ I felt a headache and nausea after working a day in the labs," said Valerie Alford, a senior painting and atudio arts major who uses the Steele and Smith facilitien.
Lou Krueger, a graduate asaistant in Experimental Studios who teaches ailksereening in Smith Hall, said, "Anybody who it in herea fall day will have problems invarisbly,"
The Facilitien Administration office will conduct an investigation of the vontilation syitems in the buildings, ronthlation gyeteins in the buncingse the Experimentity Stution in the College of Visual and Rexfomming Arta. In the meantime classes were regumed Monday and will continue on a day-to-day basis, although produc tion in the atudios will be limited for safety reasons, Orentlicker said.

Krueger aaid Syracuae University uses an inefficient and ontaited system of ventilation in its ailksereen ing ciambes in Smith frall.
Oreatlicker aqid the ventilation problen is complicated because of the number of factors involved, which include the system's design and the chemical aged by the students.
In sillscreening, mineral spirits, which are derived from petroleum, are used to clean the acreena. Inhaling the minernal pirit vapore can cause headaches, according to an article in Print Review Magazine.
The fumes in Smith Hall have also affected atudents in the meartby wood ahop mud experimental remoarch etradio.

However, these classes were not cancelled.

Orentlicker asid the location of the studios in the basements is a problem because there is less air eirculation. An exhaust fan on the ceiling of the Smith Haw studio removes the fumes. Hawever, the vapor are heavier than air and tend to sink to the floor, Krueger said
Crentlicker said Physical Plant has responded promptly to maintemance calls in the past and has replaced burned out motore in the fans. But he said he thinks the solution may require installing a new exhaust system in Smith Hall.
The lack of an adequate ventilation eystem is also a problem in the printmalang and lithography gtudios in the basement of Steele.
"The problem there is more acute, given the nature of the chemicals used," Orentlicker said.
The only ventilation syatem in Steele is a duct that collects acid fumes.
However, Don Cortese, a printmaling professor, baid the duct is not strong enough to absorb the fumes.

Cortese gaid he sent memos to August L. Freundlich, dean of VPA, about the conditions and hazards in the basement of Steele.

Cortese aaid he has also documented the hazards of the chemicals in the inadequately ventilated areas in the annual report of the experimental studios department.

But, he said there has been a "minimal response" to hia complainta.

Gary Anderson

SU's dual sports major

By Dave Gymbureh
Freshman Gary Anderson has given Syracuse University soccer a tremendous lift this season, but next fall he will have to devote more time to a sport that he knew little about until last spring-football.
Anderson, who carre to the United States from South Africa last March, played midfield for the soccer team this season. But at times he has practically had to rush into a phone booth and change uniforms to he could also appear on the sidelines as Dave Jacobs' back-up kicker for the football team.
"He played a soccer game at Coyne Stadium on the morning of the Ulinoia game and then ran up to Archbold after the soccer game so he would be in time for the football kio in fine $U$ foothall Maloney said. "If he becomes Maloney said. "If he becomes the first-string, place kicker next fall, he won't be able to do things like that."

Football is Anderson's primary obligation. He ship to SU, with the agreement she could play soccer when it did not conflict with football. did not conflict with football. play both sports during his four years here" SU soccer coach Bill Boettel said. "Chris Bahr did it successfully at Penn State. It's worked out this fall, because Gary's beem available for our most important games. Frank Maloney has been very cooperakive.
Understandably, Goettel wants Anderson to play soccer as much as he can. Last season, without Anderson, SU's soccer team was SU's soccer team was 3-11. This season, the team is 7-7-1.
As a midfielder, Anderson is expected to direct the ball to attacking forwards so they can score. Yet he has also scored nine goals himself. According to Goettel, Anderson has an outstanding knowledge of the game and takes the opportunity to acore whenever he sees it.

Andereon (18) hat progressed greath wince his days of complete ignoramce about American focthall.
"He"e probably our most valuable "player," Goettel observed. In the next three American candidate. He's excellent at ball control and pascellent."

Anderson learned most of his skills from his father, who was a professional soccer player in Britain.

rugby, he played cricket and surfed.
Anderson played soccer and rugby in South Africa mostly under racially segregated conditions. He noted that in recent years, though, the two mports have become increasingly multiracial.

Soon after Anderson graduated from high school last December, his parents decided to leave South Africa. "My parents disapproved of the government's policies, and of army was drafting kids out of high school to spend two years fighting in the border wars," Anderson recalled. of somebody's life." to take out of somebody's life.'

After he and his family had settled in Downingtown, Pa., about 40 miles from Philadelphia, Anderson began bicking footballe at a school playground. A high school football coach saw his natural skill and advised him to go to the Philadelphia Eagles' training camp at nearby Widener College.
SU assistant football coach Jerry Angelo was alao at that July camp to check on former SU lineman Ken Clarke's progress with the Eagles. Angelo was one of the first people to approach Anderson and explain to him the basics of kicking a football. He also convinced the kicker to attend

American heard how in just kicks Footbal the goes to the sidelines and rests," Anderson said. "For someone who was used to running up and down a soccer field for an entire game, the football kicker's job sounded very good to "me."

I didn't even know what a kicking tee was," continued Anderson. "My approach and kicking motion are very natural. I just run up to the ball and kick it the same way I would a boccer ball."
"Gary has made amazing progress when you consider how long he's been kicking a football," Maloney said. "He's capable of making 50 -yard field goals right now. His biggest problem has been learning the different rules.'
Anderson's strong English accent causes other problems for him when hee raises his football teammates before he football te

"Whenever I break the huddle to kick, they start snickering, because they're waiting for me to say that. son is not as high-strung as most kickers. Soccer teammate George Olsen, agreed Anderson is a low-key individual who feads by example.
"He's a very quiet guy before a game," Olsen said. "But he's the kind of player you can count on. He always seems to be there when you need him.
Anderson will be needed even more next fall, when he will probably replace Jacobs as SU's kicker. In anticipation, Goettel said he may try to schedule next season's more difficult games opponents on dates that don't conflict with the football achedule.
Playing soccer less won't bother him, Anderson said, as long as he is kicking a football regularly. So for this year, though, his only football action this eeason has been against Penn State, when he kicked off into the end zone three time.
Before he succeeds Jacobis next season, however, there is one more adjustment he will have to make. Re has seen snow just once.

Fuchs and Schillo agreed that the plam would produce some favorable resules for both groupa. The groups could share the cost of making Manley ready for shows, Schillo said. Fuchs added that Lastitutional Services can make neceasary purchases and prepare Maniey for events much faster than UU can by itself.
Duda said the time periods which

Institutional Services would control are maninly times when atudents arenot on campus, such as winter and summer

Maintenance requests are reported to the South Campun Housing Office and forwarded through RILSO to Physical Plant, said Robert Spence, RLSO supervisor of meintanance. Requests are generally forwarded writhin one day. and Physical Plant is responsible for scheduling repair work, he said.
Sala said this echeduling is done according to priority guidelines determined by FLSO. Repairm are zcheduled to be done as soon as poosible, he said.
Emergencies are a large part of the reason for the blaclilog, he said.

Graduate students interested in South Carr pus housing also face problems caused by a lack of apace and early housing application deadlines.
Ted Along, assistant director of Winding Ridge for RISO, said about 40 or 50 graduate housing units were lowt this year because Skytop Hall II was closed to graduates. That hall now houses transfer tudents.

Trustees reps reply

To the editor:
We were amazed to diacover the editorial "The Trustees: heard but not seen," in yesterday's DO.
For the past year, we have sat on the board of trustees and its executive committee. During thin time, we have found the board's operation to be almoat completely the opposite of the way it is portrayed.

First, the author goes back to 1972 and cites quotes by David If Patrick Gable which describe the not wish to havemoreinput into the not wish to have more input into the decision-making process." We don't decision-making process. We don that was the situation in 1972 , but we do know thatit's not the 1972, but we do know that it s not the case today. At every full board meetcase today. At every fuil board meetmeeting as much time as the student representatives request is set aside for student concerns. A perfect exfor sle is the Ostrom Co-op situation ample is the Ostrom Co-op situation last spring. At the March meeting of trustees, administrators and student repreaentatives spent 45 minutes debating the problem. Mel Eggers and Cliff Winters really do Eggers and Cliff Winters really do have to answer to the board on the have to answer to the board on the complaints students bring before "yes"; people.
Going further, Mansfield claims that the trustees are "quietly shuttled into town" to hold their meetings in an atmosphere he implies is almost Nixonesque in secrecy, shut off from all negative or uncomfortable viewpoints. He implies they want minimum participation from outsiders. We have found the trustees, both inopen and responsive to student input. After all, it was the board, under the guidance of trustee DeWitt C. LeFevre, that proposed students participate in its deliberations. And it was the board, last March, that increased the number of students attending executive committee meetings from one to two. Also, last

A successful board of trustees requires two things. First is the ability to have private discussions. Let'a face it, some matters are not meant for the zront patge of the DO. Second is the need for open and free communications between the board and the various groups within the Mansfield has a good idea in his Mansioid has a good idea in his suggestion that students write to trustees and that a roundtable be the student representatives attempt the student representatives attempt problems, they can't cover all the problems, they can't cover all the tion. So students should write their trugtees - they may enlighten them in an important way. Further, at in an important way. Further, at will auggest Mansfield's roundtable Will auggest Mansfie Finally, we resent being labeled "cardbosird student representatives." Such ridiculous accusations should not be made without being backed up with facts. Without being backed up with facta. While we may not have agreed with all student griper, we have all student gripes, we have nevertheless presented them to the

in the Adirondacks

The bus lumbered down the dirt road, weaving and bobbing. Suddenly it stopped. Ahead was a wooden bridge that was obviously too small to support its weight.
What to do? We were in the middle of nowhere. Chip DeLine took matters into his own hands. "I'm going out to see what's around," he announced. We allgrew wary. Some suspected this was a plot to kill us off. They't leave me here as a hostage."
"I don't know, Tina," Carl Kleidman replied. "They might be willing to sacrifice you.'
Eventually DeLine retrined safely and we got out and trudged across the bridge. And there we were, at rustic Adirondacks.
The Chancellor's Student Leaderahip Conference was supposed to be concerned with themore pressing issues facing the university. I began to have my doubts when I saw the guest list It seemed as though a couple of zillion people from fraternities and sororities were there, as well as the entire SA ex-

Things got off to a roaring start when the bar opened shortly after we arrived. The bar was definitely the most impressive part of the weekend. Mel Mounts (who says we're getting to be drinking buddies with administrators?) informed me that the conference cost $$ 3,500$. I wonder how much went for alcohol, of which, needless to say, mass quantities were conswmed. So were mass quantities of marijuana. By the second night the most serious problem confronting the conference was drugs-not enough of them.
The parties lasted well into the morning, which posed a problem because Saturday was supposed to be the main day of the conference. A bunch of "wor king groups" were supposed to get together to identify problems and solve them. SA President Arnie Wolsky did the smart thing by staying in bed until late afternoon to get rid of his hangover.
Saturday was a dirag, however. The group I was in had this wonderful topic the university's involvement in student organizations. Unfortunately, noboby had anything to say except Jim Naughton, Who said too much. All was quiet until the middle of the afternoon when Greg Rolle, SAS external affairs chairperson, said, "Our problem isn't with the administration, "it's with SA" This opened the

Forestry school schedules vote on whether to join association

By Chuck Obuchowski
A student referendum in the State University of New York College of Environmental Science and Foreatry will be held in the apring to determine whether ESF would join the Student Asaociation of the State University.
The decision to hold the referendum was made at Monday's meeting of the ESF Student Council.
ESF is the only SUNY branch that has never been an SASU member, said Larry Mullin. legislative director of SASU.
Debate about whether to join the association dominated Monday's council meeting.
At the meeting, Mullin said the association's goals include decreased tuition and greater gtudent rights. To achieve these goals, SASU lobbies in the state Legislature and helps students obtain representation on various college boards, Mullin said.
However, geveral council members eaid they thought ESF can handle its own problems and does not need SASU as its lobbying group.

Other members said that most ESF students are politically apathetic and would not support an SASU committee on campus.
Camille Eenk, student council president, suggested that the annual membership costhas been a deterrent to ESF's membership in SASU The ESF activity fee would be raised about 85 cente a student - to $$ 20.85$ - if the college oined SASU.
In other action, Jeanne Debons, student representative to the ESF board of trusteea, summarized ESF President Edward E. Palmer's annual report and statement if tewardship.
This statement lists the president's ac complishments and his future goals. Paimer is being reviewed this year by SUNY Chancellor Clifton R. Wharton and the SUNY Board of Trustees. In accordance with the state univeraity's regulations, the president's performance is reviewed every five years.
After a lengthy discuasion, the council gave Junior Class Chairman Keith Nyitray a vote of confidence. Nyitray, who was recently placed on diaciplinary probation, chose not to resign his post although the administration assumed he would leave it.
Most Student Council members hgreed that Myitray's work with the council is valuable and should not be affected by his probation.
The council also unanimously approved Dec. 4 as the date for this semester's ESF Open Forum. The forum will deal with the college's transition to upper-division status.

Poverty in academia's shadow  By Ariane Sains  and Public Information for Onondaga

In a taxicab on South Salina Street, the man behind the wheel sits and masturbates. A few blocks down, school children spill out of a school bus, laughing and shouting, the bright sunlight shining on their faces.
South Salina Street is a part of Syracuse the university propaganda doesn't talk about. It is a part of the city few students see, the 15 th legislative ward, located at the foot of "The Hill."
The 15 th ward is primarily a residential community - large, old homes on tree-lined streets. It is only upon closer examination that the boarded or broken windows, sagging roofs and peeling paint, rotting stairs and abandoned houses become visible among homes with well-tended yards and swept sidewalks.
The city of Syracuse has followed a pattern that has plagued cities across the country: affluent whites move out, poor blacks and the elderly stay, business leaves and the community deteriorates. The 15 th ward is a textbook example.

Part of a massive urban renewal program in Syracuse during the 50 s , the 15 th wrd was swept from Adams and Marshall Streets, SU's backyard, into a corner of the city on the far side of Interstate 81.
Jesse lived in a house on Adams Street in 1956. When urban renewal came in -buttressed by the university he was bulldozed out.
He went home to Georgia for a while, but eventually drifted back to Syracuse and the 15 th ward.

You have to bring the emotions outside," he said.
A few dancers moved back to the floor and linked arms and eyes for a slow jazz piece. It was as if they were spilling out emotions to one another through sense of touch.
"It's important to be very giving," Rafael Rodriguez said, as he watched the movements of his fellow dancers.
"We're not relating to each other only in speech. We're relating to each other in body. We're very close," he said, as he glanced around the room where people sat laughing softly, eating oranges and practicing steps from their positions on the floor. One man, dressed in a T-shirt and thick brown tights, made faces at the girl sitting next to him on a piano bench. She burst out laughing but covered her mouth when she saw the couples practicing in the center of the room.

The room was large, warm and white, with mirrors on one wall and three hanging ivys draping the windows of another.

Rafael drew his knees to his chest and rested his head on his knees. "You become aware of so many things," he said wowly, "I deliberating each word. "I come across new things all the time." Rafael remembered that as a child he had been told by his mother

Connection with New York City's budgetary crisis of 1975. Goldin is New York City Comptroller.
Goldin, on the other hand, seems to be offering more specific proposals in his platform. He stresses:
- Developing a systern of "performance audits" for the state's municipalities.
- Instituting a "modified accrual accounting system" to define and clarify the state's financial obligations.

Hiring
private, independent auditing firms to investigate and report on the activities of the state's fiscal staffe activities.

- Rebutting Regan's charges with an attack on Pegan for "his failure to cope with the money problems of Erie County:"
The two candidates are running in what is probably the most cut-throat race in the gtate. Although most campaigns involve verbal paigns involve verbal didate, few comments seem to didace, suriace so publically and frequently as in the race between Goldin and Regan.
"I think there has been a clear obscuring of New York City's deficit' by Goldin, Regan said earlier this month.
"New Yorkers want the truth," Regan said. "What has happened is the classic example of cutting essential services.

Defending his role as New York City Comptroller, Goldin claims that he was one of the first to warn of the impending crisis, but that nobody would listen to him.

A 1976 audit of Erie County, conducted by State Comptroller Arthur Levitt, shows huge deficits in the Erie County budget while Regan held public office. The audit was ordered by Governor Hugh Carey because a $$ 3.2$ million deficit surfaced in Erie County in 1975, and the 1976 deficit was expected to be between $$ 15$ million and $$ 17$ million. The audit said Erie County's budget "was adopted on hope rather than reality,"

Regan reaponded by claiming, "We dug our way out. We are surviving We are doing we are aurviving. We are doing Well." He added that special help from the state or federal government was not needed to help bail out Erie County, unlike New Yoric City. Another prominent iasue of Goldin's involyement in thes on Goldin's involvement in the controversial $$ 200$ million bus shelter contract. The inves tigation, conducted by the FBI, the reportedly concerned with the losa of the franchise to build bus stop shelters in New York City by Bus-Top Inc. after an unfavorable audit by Goldin's office.
Regan says heis "making as much of it as possible," ques tioning Goldin's actions in volving such touchy issues. Goldin is accusing Regan of "McCarthyite tactica" in bringing up the investigation while also atating that his op ponent is attempting "a smear effort that is going to backfire as dirty campaign tricks often do backfire.
Public sentiment seems to indicate that the "tricks" on the part of both candidates have backfired. The personal slurs in the race for state comptroller are apparently being observed as such - simply mudslinging.
Five days remain for the electorate to gift through the muck: through Goldin's "per formance audits" and modified accrual accounting system;" through Regan's ideas for a decrease in state ideas for a decrease in state reach a conclusion for the Nov. 7 election.

* Poverty in SU's shadow

Paul Patulski, a teacher at the Martin Luther King Elementary School in the I5th ward, agreed SU could provide guidance to children in the community.
"Maybe it's a littIe early for them to be thinking about college," he said, "but the university could offer a program that talks about different kinds of careers. It wouldn't be too early to start that"
Children are less hostile then adults toward SU, but they are equally aware of its presence.
"Yeah, I go up there, up around Marshall Street" one 8 -year-old said. "I like it. It's prettier up there than it is down here."

He and his friends frequent Games-R-Us. They say they have never been to a play or concert at the university.
Amelia, a third-grader at King, has thought about going to college, Maybe not SU, she said, maybe a university "back home" in North Carolina.
But the lack of scholarship and cultural programs provided by the university is ecliped by a more concrete problem: "SU students are pushing blacks out," according to Wood.

A landlard can charge four students who are aplitting the rant more to live in one house than he can charge one family," Wood araid.

Unemployment is another problem in the 15 th ward.
Many of the blacks in the city came from the south, where agriculture was a way of life. Lack of urban skills equals unemployment.

"Can't get no job, can't eat. What you gonna do if you go downtown and the man says he won't hire you? Can't eat what you don't have."

Andreoli's probe:   Carey's indictment at the polls?

   Carey's indictment at the polls?}

By Joe Meces

Deputy County Comptroller Richard G. Sheeran was found guilty Sept. 20 of officia misconduct and 24 counts of giving notice in a public building that political fond-raising ticketa were for sale. But not a trace of gloom could be found among Sheeran's Republican could be fo
However, on the same day, Sheeran was found innocent of extortion and bribery, and the jury could not reach a verdict on a conspiracy charge. But the man who haid indicted Sheeran on those charges, Special State Prosecutor Peter Andreoli, was not disappointed; instead, he felt indicated.
While the Sheeran trial lasted five days, Andreoli, in a sense, has been on trial from the moment he was appointed by Gov. High Carey in December, 1976 to investigate charges of political corruption in Onondaga County.
County Republicans and the Syracuse newapapers have chastised Andreoli, claiming his investigation is a "political witchhunt" ordered by Carey because Onondaga County voters aupported Maicolm Wilson over Carey in he 1974 gubernatorial election.
So when the Sheeran verdict was announced, Andreoli chose to ignore the Sheeran's acquittal on the more serious felony charges, and focused on the guilty verdict on the official misconduct charge. "That's something you have to pat in context with the rest of the counts," Andreoli said. 'I think it's significant." "I think the matters at trial in volved the rights of the public - that is very serious."

However, county Republicans chose to dwell on the charges of which Sheeran was acquitted. It's a total victory," said Anthony Aloi, Sheeran's co-defense counsel. Soma Republicans noted that Sheeran had to be found guilty of the 24 migdemeanor counts because he admitted selling the fund-raising tickets in a 1894 statute prohibiting he was unaware of the 94 statute prohibitang it
So the two sides battled it out, and both won, a ogistic curiosity in this two-year probe that has had its share of curious moments. But the Sheeran trial was just the beginning. This year's election reaults could have a major effect on how the Andreoli probe will continue, or whether it will continue at all.
While campaigning in Onondaga County, Republican gubernatorial candidate Perry Duryea has used the Andreoli probe as a political bludgeon on Carey. He hae reiterated county Republican complaints that the probe is revengeoriented. He told voters the probe wab begun "because you made a mistake in 1974. The mistake was that you cast too many votes on the Republican line."

County Republicans hope the voters make the same mistake this year. They have made An dreoli's investigation a rallying point in this year's elections. County executive John Mulroy. one of 15 other local or county officials indicted by the Andreoli grand jury, said he is "going to ask 82,000 Republicans in this county, along with a lot of other Democrats," to vote Republican and send a mesaage to Carey and to "some of the other mischief makers around here." Mulroy said he believes the community has had enough of Andreoli and it intends to aend Carey that message.
Carey has vehemently defended the Andreoli investigation against Republican griper that the majority of the counts brought against the 16 indictees are misdemeanors, picayune charges based on an arcane statute.
Furthermore, Republicans claim that Democrats - even thosetrū̄̄ning Caney's own fund raiaing - engage in the same practices for which county Republicans have been indicted. Carey challenged anyone who knows of political wrongdoing among Democrats to "put pop or shut up," and added, "We don't blink at up or shut up.' and added, We don't blink at misdemeanor iling you bink at misdermeanors, you are teling every young criminal you can."

The Syracuse newspapers, The Post-Standard and The Herald-Journal, think Caney's concern for yourg criminals is somewhat less than noble. They have rum scathing editoriala against Andreoli's probe. They have acted as the mouthpiece of county Republicans, echoing claima that the cost of the probe is excessive and charging that Carey and Andreoli are engaging in partisan politics and that Andreol has intimidated witnesses and manipulated the grand jury in order to get the indictments he wants. The Poat-Standard has editorialixed that the probe has produced "spit-on-theaidewalk" charges, and recently there was even sniping at Andreok from a Herald-Journal sports columnist. If one believes newspapers can strongly influence public opinion, then the editorial railing of the Syracuse newspapers may have an effect on this year's elections.
But the Syracuse newspapers may not have Andreoli to anipe at much longer. On October 24, Auditor Stephen Vislosky, the aecond of the 16 indictees to go to trial, was acquitted on all seven counts of soliciting and accepting political contributions in a public building. This verdict, coupled with the earlier Sheeran decision, has stirred rumors that Andreol would seek a change of venue - moving the trials of the other 14 defendants out of the county - because adverse publicity has made a fair trial impossible in Omondaga County.
But nobody really knows when Andreoli will leave Onondaga County. He will not confirm the rumors of a change of venue, but said he was evaluating everything that has taken place in recent months, adding "Things change. I have to make decisions based on all the facts." Andreoli has vowed not to leave "until my job is complete," and he has strong support from Carey, who said he would be "obstructing jusCice"' if he removed Andreoli. But with the indictments of such Onondaga County bigwigs as Mulroy and state Sen. Martin Auer ( $\mathbf{R}$-49th Mist.) many wonder how markh more complete Andreoli's probe can be.
Andreolis probe can be. Mulroy believes they will, Carey may regret not "obstructing justice" while he had the chance. But if the election results are favorable to Carey, he may feel his actions have been justified, and Andreoli may remain the ba Both Andreoli and Carey are on trial, and in the end it may be the voters who decide what the verdict will be:

Republicans charge that Peter Andreoli's investigation is a costly "political witchhunt " while Democrate maintain it is essemtialt uncover even the slightest governmental misdealinga.

Craftsman

His pottery speala with the abandon of a child's fingerpainting, in joyful epota and trailh of plaze. On clower ipoks and train of ghaze. On closer inspection, one finds his work s subthe forms, the gentle mixtures of color. The orange crates that cut a large oval in the center of Syracuse Mall's Village Square.
Square. Finel Price took over as Village Square's potter last summer. He and his wife Maraia, who established a stained-glass shop there a year ago, feel they have come into their own as craftsmen. They were almost ready to return to Califormia when the chance to set up shop arrived. Now they have not only been able to shuck theirodd jobs to become craftamen, but Price has fulfilled his life'e goal to be a potter.
But success was not easy. Problems during the early going made business difficult.
In his first three months, Price's pottery glazes "bombed," tince he was forced to use an electric instead of a gas kiln. The traditional glaces for gas kins peeled off when tiredin an electric one, color welding onto color, leaving patches of bare pottiery. Price studied on his own at night, painstakingly learning how to formulate new glazes acceptable to the electric kiln. The colors he devised range from a grainy oatmeal-colored claze to pinks golds deep browns and blues. Price's favorite colors he agid, are cooper oreen and cobalt blue.
One limitation the potter encountera is glazing his stoneware during Village Square b business hours, because the cin must be turned off at night. That leaves Price one day a week - Fridays long enoue to mare during the malls long enough to glaze during the mall's extended hours.

The kiln requires five hours to heat up to its firgt thousand degreses, then another five hours to reach the correct melting temperature for the glaze. After that, the heat is turned off and the glazes harden. In the summer, Price said, his pots take a couple of daye to cool. If the pottery cools too fast, it will crack, and if it is beated too fast, ateam from the clay will cause it to explode.
"I have to work pretty hard to Ell the kiln every week." Price eaid. "I could probably do more if 1 could afford more clay or fire more often." The necessity of glazing only once a week meana his customers must wait a bit for special ordera.

Marcia and Michael Price talked about the problems and rewards of being craftsmen in a society based on mass production. They sounded the craftamen's univergal credo: the difference between good quality and bad quality
'There is a difference, and a lot of people don't know it and don't appreciate it," Marcia said. People have come to the shop and insisted that stained-glass lamps and jewelry boxes sare made of plastic not glass.
"You have to try to keep your quality high, and to keep competitive," she continued. "You have to constantly be sensitive to what people are looking for." Their customers are mostly young couples and madar-aged women, ine said. They
The potter feels it's beconaing more difficult to be a craftsman in America today. He said the public thinka original work is "way overpriced. You can go to K-Mart and buy a cereal bowl for 75 cents." His cost $$ 5$.
"I always thought everyone would know what a potter's wheel is - it's 5,000 years old, herexclaimed. His wife gaid that despite this kind of ignorance, the public's appreciation for craftsmanship is growing. But "no matter how expensive energy gets, it'Il never be more expensive than your time," she added. Their time is what makes craftsmen's goods 80 costly.
The pure challenge and love of craftsmanship drew the Prices into their careera, which began at the California College of Arteamd Craftsin Oakland. Calif, where they met Thei wages.
"It's definitely not the money" that diaws them. Price maid. Pay is "not much better than whon we were on a mimipaurp-wrace job."
"There's almost no way to make money in crafta. It's the time involved," hio wife said. She estimated that they his wife said. She estimated that they work 60 to 70 hours a week. "But we're work 60 to 70 hours happy," she added.
Working with clay is "like a thought you're expressing, a feeling," Price said. He described the work with glass an a more defined process, an exact method. He likea pottery better becange creating it is "more free-style. With Marcia doing atained glase, we can work as a team.
Her career as an artianan ia "something you can't do without," Marcia said. Even when she was working as a cashier in a drug store, she would gpend her free hours practicing her craft.

"I can't see ever having a boss again." Price said. He derives a full measure of enjoyment from his life as a potter. He makes bowls, dishes, jars, pots, mugs and decanters of all sizes, but Price said he like bowls the best because he doesn't have to pinch the clay or push it in to form a neck.
"The form is made most naturally," he said, adding that bowls are also the best-selling items.
"I like the way clay is really soft and then you fire it and it gets rock hard," the potter said. He is intrigued that he can leave a fingerprint or any impression in the clay, and it will become permanent.

I love the spontaneity you can get with clay," he said. Every time Price opens the kiln and sees all his finished pots. "it's like Chriatman.'

SU hopes to avoid 'pitts' against Panthers

By Joel Stashenko A Pitt visit.
Pitt hits . $\ldots$ has spirit and grit ... it outwits . . . and then profits. Fitt.i. nolonger "it"....but it is atill worthy of plaudits. Cavenaugh of Dorsett and Cavanaugh and Holloway and Jury are over, but the Pitt Panthers (5-2) still are dangerous, still ranked (19th by the Associated Press) and still heavily favored to beat Syracuse University.

Pitt...shit.
"Pitt's defense is improved over last year," said SU coach Frank Maloney. "Up front on offense its blocking is also better than it was last year."
Now 1-6, Syracuse's chances for even a mediocre season appear less than, well, mediocre. Next Saturday SU gets to play Navy (now 11 th ranked in the country), and it then closes its season on the road against Boston College and Miami, (Fla.). The Orangemen have become a breather on everyone else's schedule.
Especially Pitt's.
The Panthers festure two players who are being touted as the best in their positions in the country.
First of these is Gordon Jones, the receiver who seems to be in his seventh or eighth year at Pitt though actually a senior. Against SU he has been a medical student, methodically dissecting the Orange defensive secondary every time the two teams meet. "Gordon Jones, we feel, is the best, split receiver in the country." Maloney said. Last season, in Pittsburgh's come from-behind 28-21 win over SU, Jones caught a 45-yard pass with 1:04 to play to eet up Pitt's winning touchdown. This season Jones has caught 33 pasises for 496 yards, caught he has only scored two touchdowns.

"Gordon's play is the mame as last season (when he had nine touchdowns) but we are just not getting a connection on the big plays," said Pitt Coach Jackie Sherrill.
The Pitt quarterback this season is sophomore Rick Torcano, who led Pitt to three wins last season when Matt Cavanaugh was injured. Torcano has gained 978 yards passing this season on 80 completions in 166 attempts. The balanced Pitt offense features three fine runners Fred Jacobs ( 440 yards, bix touchdowns), Rooster Jones (289 yards) and Larty Sims (226 yards).

They are obviously an excellent, all-around football team," Maloney said.
The defensive star of Pitt is defensive end Hugh Green, a 6 -foot-2, 215 -pound sophomore.
"Hugh Green is an outstanding football player," Maloney added. "He is the best defensive end we will face this year and he's been their top player on defense this season." Middle guard Dave Logan and linebacker Al Chesley also add strength to a Pitt defense which held Florida State (28-0 winner over SU) to three points earlier in the season.
Speaking of three, Bill Hurley's cracked ribe are still hurting and so is Syracuse. Tim Wilson, who has been steadily, though slowly, improving as his replacement, will again start for the Orangemen.
Last week's layoff has helped SU linebacker Bob Tate recover from his injury while

Tom Seibert will also be back Tight end Bruce Semall, however, is still nursing his ankle injury suffered against West play.
"Syracuse does a lot of things on offense that confuse you and make you stay uplate at night studying films," Sherrill said.
SU's offemse has given Pitt more problems in the past two seasons than any other team except Penn State. Fitt just managed to hold on last year and two seasons ago the national-champions-to-be beat Syracuse 23-13, helped by two controversial fourth-quarter calls of We've been ablo to do a lot of new things against them, had a lot of success audibling (a play called at the last moment by the quarterback) into passes at the line of scrim-mage-" mage- of course this year our situation is different;" statement made by Maloney but in the minds of everyone We should try to thry against theae guys but we'z had trouble throwing the foot ball. We should audible
But Maloney's voice itself becomes barely audible, which is how Tim Wilson has been at the line of gcrimmage, having much trouble with automatics.
Maybe a large Parent'e Weekend crowd is whal Syracuse needs to produce huge emotional effort which has come up with the last two times SU has faced the Pan thers. But more likely Syracuse needs Bill Hurley and a game against Colgate more.
But this week it's Pitt.
Forfeit? Forfeit?

With the score 2-0, the Orangemen continued to dominate as left wing Cunningham headed a cornerkick from halfback Ted Hollenback into the goal with less than 20 minutes remaining in the first half. The goal was the first Syracuse had scored this season on a cornerkick. For Cunningham, a senior, it was also his final SU goal.
John Springer, another senior, later drilled a shot past goalie Thompen, but it was nullified by an offsides penalty.
The second half had less seoring and more fighting, with many foulg and more fightin

Ithaca averted a shutout with a goal by wing Panal Rosedw. The ball blasted by SU gonhe Eugene Leonardo to give Ithaca ite only goal.

Springer added another goal for SU with less than 15 minutes remaining in the game. He lined with ball past goalie Jim Sweeney from 20 yards out to close out the scoring.
After the scoring was completed, the fighting began. SU Wing Gary Maister was involved in an altercation that eventually caused him to receive a red card. The fight cleared both benches and the game was halted for five minutes. No Ithace players were thrown out of the game, although they hadincited the fight.

Next season, SU will play an ECAC schedule, according to Goettal. This will increase SU's chances of playing in postseason competition.
"The team is strong enough to compete successfully in the suicide schedole we have now." Goettel naid.
"So, realicing out weak spots, it'a on to recruiting," he added. "Next yrear'e team shonld be even better."

Part-time faculty grows into controversial issue

By Andrea Abrahams
The number of part-time instructors at Syracuse University has incressed by 50 from last year. About 20 of that increase is in the English department.
According to Joan Carpenter, SU personnel director, 414 out of 1,233 faculty members are part-time, as compared with 364 of 1,204 last year. These figures do not include department

SU seeks bids on stadium demolition

By Mike Maynard

Clifford $L$ Winters, vice chancellor for administrative operations, will present a progress report regarding contracts for the demolition of Archbold Stadium and the building of a $$ 26$ illion domed facility at today's Board of Trustees meeting.
Archbold is scheduled to be torn down in less than two weeks.
Plans for the new stadium are "clicking right along," Winters said yesterday. "I'm pleased."
Syracuse University will begin advertising for a demolition contractor today, Winters said. It will probablybe tendays to two weeks before any companies submit bids on the contract, he SIded.
SU will then chooge the lowest bid, and demolition work on Arinbold would start immediately afterward.
Demolition of the 71-year-old structure, to begin Nov. 13, will proceed in two phases, Winters said. The side facing Illick Hall and the campus of the State University College of Enironmental Science and Forestry will be torn down first.
That way, Winters noted, the phyaics labs in the half of Archbold facing Heroy Geology Laboratory and Steele Hall can be held through the fall semeater.

Demolition of the Heroy bide will start in January.
An unspecified amount of radionctive material - which, Winters hastened to add, posed no threat-is stored in Archbold. A team from the Atomic Energy Conamission will move the radioactive material to another location, he said. ROTC facilities are also housed in Archbold.
There should be no problems tearing down Archbold, Winters said, noting that there are no plans to use explosives. Instead, a wrecking ball should suffice, he said.
Negotiations between SU and the state's Urban Development Corp., the body that will administer $$ 15$ million in atate funds for the project over three years, still have not been finalized, Winters said. No funds for the stadium will come from the state until a contract is agreed upon by repregentatives of the UDC and SU. A contract with UDC cannot be signed until SU decides on the frm it wants as construction manager, the supervisor of the project. After UDC approves the firm for construction manager and the terms of the contract between SU and the firm, statemoney will begin coming in, he said
Winters declined to name the firm that SU is leaning toward for construction manager. To name the firm before arrangements between it and the university are completed could jeopardize the agreement, he said. He would say only that the firm that now has the inside track has worked in a similar eapacity on the Omni complex in Atlanta
SU has hired the architectural firm of Finch-Heery-Heuber to design the stadium facility, Winters aaid. The firm is highly reputed in the field of stadium deaign, he said. Among the structures it has designed are Riverfront Stadium in Cincinnati and Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh.

- Architects for Finch-Heery-Heuber are working on detailed drawings of the stadium. Winters said.
Without the drawings, SU cannot move ahead on a contract for construction manager. More important, without the drawings,

A letter home on Parent's Weekend

Dear Mom and Dad
Hi, what's up? Too bad you can't be here for my freahman Parents' Weekend, bat I understand that you both can't get off work to get up here. Quite a bit has been happening up here that won't wait till Thankegiving, bo consider this a credit on the phone bill.
My freshman English TA isn't all that igood; sometimes I wish I could see the professor for a whole class. With so many students in the class, the TA just doesn't have time for us all. One of the issues on campus concerns the professors. That's the tenure issue. The students are supposed to evaluate profs to get a say in who gets tenure.
This is okay but, how is a freshman supposed to know who a good prof is if we never see any? And even thoughit's my major, I can't even take a mowagement course for another year. good profs are in my school?
Classes are fimally becoming less crowded now that students know what they want to take. The situation is improving. I guess.

My room is finally getting straightened out now that our third roommate left. Having three people live in the double does not make for good in the double does not make for good out. I wonder if the third guy ever took a bath I wonderir continue this when I get back from dinner. Wonder what well have tonight? Last night's apaghetti, fish from lunch, or maybe good old-

Everyone here seems to complain about everything, but they do little when it comes time to atand up. I gueas they realize the administration seems to hold most of the cards. The president of Student Association said this eppring the protegta are going to start up again. Should prove to be an interesting semester.

One thing I wish the students could get together on is the trash around campus. SU is one of the few campuses I know of that has two large greems right on the campus the Quad and Walnut Paric. The Quad is not all that dirty, but the park ia absolutely filthy. Trash is all over the place. Somebody ought to have some pride for this place. Nobody semms to care.
Studenta seem to majoy deatroying lota of property, I can understand the occagional window, bat at a party we were broken That'a ridiculous.

I hope Syracure can beat Fitt on Saturday. Ithint Inl go to the grame if I can get a ticket. Did you know that to get a ticket to the game, we have to pick up a ticket on the previous Wednesday or Thuraday? That does not beem too clever. They give out as many student tickets as the students ask for. Why don't they just check athletic cards and IDs at the door? They punch the cards when you go to get the tickets anyway; why not just cut out the middle inconvenience? They'll probably say that lines would form then and studenta would complain.
That is one thing they never tell you about in the brochures: the lines. There are lines everywhere for everything: food, registration bookstore, to get $s$ phone, advising. I even had to stand in line to take a shower onemorming. This school is an exercise in patience.

SASto hold celebration for solfidáríty

By Martiyn Marks The Student AfroAmerican Society will celebrate Black Solidarity Day on Monday with fims and workahops.

Black Solidarity Day ia a national celebration "for black people to come together and refiect on their heritage," said Keith Daisley, SAS administrative affaira chairperson.
SAS will hold workehopa all day Monday at 203 Marshall St. Daisley invited students to come and talk about what Slack students are Monday evening, SAS will present two films in the Brockway Events Proom at 7 p.m.: "Black History: Lost, Stolen, or Strayed," which concerms black awareness. and "Martin Luther King Jr."
The group will also show "The Autobiography of Miss Jane Pitman" and "Martin Luther King: Man of Peace," Wednesday at 7 p.m. in Maxwell Auditoriurn. All filma are well
Daisley said SAS sent a letter to Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers asking that black students "be excused from any work, tests and res. ponsibilities of that day and that professora try to ac commodate students with any work they miss."
In response, Eggers has requested that facuity members allow atudents to make up any work they may miss if they observe the day.
Marian A. Borst, the chancellor'g secretary, said the policy is voluntary, but the chancellor will monitor the gituation. "You don't tell faculty members what the can or can't do," she said.

After making hits for everyone else, Fuller and Kaz have one for themselves.

Eric Kaz wrote "Love Has No Pride", "Sorrow Lives Here" and other classic songs recorded by Linda Ronstadt, Rita Coolidge and Bonnie Raitt. Craig Fuller was the key force behind the success of Pure Prairie League, and penned their hit "Amie:"

Both combined to found American Flyer, whose two albums gained enthusiastic support among music-lovers everywhere.

And now they've joined forces once againonly this time, it's Craig Fuller and Eric Kaz up front, in charge, and soon to be on top.

'Equus' portrays insanity

By Rachel Finkel

Exploring the complex relationship between patient and psychiatrist will be the aim of Salt City Center's production of "Equus." The show will be presented tonight at $8: 15$ at the Salt City Playhouse. about a disturbed 17 -year-old. Alian Strang (Peter Hall), who systematically blinds six horses. He seeks help from psychiatrist Martin Dysart (Rick Hirschoff. who is equally troubled with doubta about his marriage and profession.

Stage

Dysart's main challenge is to find the reasons behind Strang's madness. The paychiatrist must not only win the boy's confidence but sustain his interest as well. To try to uncover reasons behind his patient's actions, Dyast investigates the by's family.
In his attempt to atrengthen rapport with his patient, Dysart employs an effective therapeutic gimmick: an agreement between patient and psychiatrist that the boy will answer questions truthfully if Dysart will do the same
Other important characters in the play are Strang's parents, Dora and Frank Strang (Liz Keill and Bill Molesky), and Hester, a magistrate with whom Strang has an affair (Dynell Leigh Chambers). Other members in the cast are Jill Mason, a stable worker (Diane Gaytrex) and stable owner Frank Dalton (Frank Kelly). The horses areplayed by Maurice Bullard. John Pennigi. Richard Livingeton. Hal Travis and Bryant Hewitt, who also por trays another character in the play. To enhance the dramaa of the play, and the set and lighting designs the playhouse will be reatructured to form a full-round theater. The abstract horae masks, a par icular asset to the production. have been designed by local sculptor Geoff Barber. Performances of "Equus" will ran for the next two weekends. By Kevin Haynes
As tragic as it is true, Elton John's most recent album, A Single Man, is a double disaster. Not only has his quality back-up band been replaced by barely adequate. nonentities, but the new material is as shallow as a 10 -cent novel.
Those in the habit of buying his records before listening to them were uaually rewarded with some of this decade's finest music.

Sounds

A Single Man, however, is about as exciting as a cold oatmeal eand wich
Part of this lapse is attributable to drummer Steve Holley and guitarist Tim Renwick failing to reproduce the force generated by the now non-existent Elton John Band. Guitarists Davey Johnstone (who plays and sings on one song), and Calebe Quaye, aseist Kenny Passarelli, drummer Roger Pope and additional keyboardist James Newton Howard are sorely missed.
On past records. percussionist Ray Cooper ornamented the overall sound, thus adding variety and dimension. In A Single Man, however, Cooper is asked to support and liven a sound that can't gurve otherwise.

The backing vocals on two of the cuts are performed by the South Audley Street. Girls Choir and the Watford Footbal Club, the English soccer team that John owns. Together these guys and gals sound more like barroom sing-a-long than a chorus.

The production and most of the bass playing is handled by Clive Franks, but the gound on the album is oo clean it's sterile. Just about every track is as predictable as it is dull. Gus Dudgeon, the producer of every other EJ album, will probably, gag on Franks' production, which makes a bad album worge.

There are a few bright spots on A Sinzle dragged under again by the bulk of bad lyrics that dominate.

For example, the piano playing has never been mare impressive and diverse.

John Crocker's smooth and sensitive sax solo in "Shooting Star" overcomea the soft vocal performance by John, which is too starry-eyed and distant to be taken seriously.

It would be nice to say that A Single Man will take some getting used to. Only, it'd take getting used to like terminal cancer or blood-rot. Or both. The only iustice is that this album can be put out of its misery. Use it as a frisbee, or adiscus or as home plate in a high-gcoring softball game.

pounded by the fact that, between songs, almost everything that lead ainger Ian Anderson said was word for word off the band's latest album, Bursting Out.

Anderson laboriously pranced around the stage, twirled his nute, and rolled his eyes as if each move had been choreographed and performed thousands of times before.
Perhaps the most disappointing aspect of the concert was its length. After less than an hour and a half, the crowd headed for the exits and the band was off to continue its tour.
After opening with the same songe as on the first side of Bursting Out, "No Lullaby" and "Sweet Dream," Tuli went on to play such eatablished hits as "Thick As A Brick." "Songs From The Wood" and "My God." They eventually concluded with an energetic rendition of "Cross-eyed Mary," after which the band members meandered off the stage. The crowd for what they knew would be two encores - "Aqualung" and "Locomotive Breath.

Backing up Anderson on drums was Bar riemore Barlow who, throughout the concert was inspiring - eapecially during his fiveminutesolo. David Palmer on organ and Martin Barre playing electric guitar were both mediocre at best. Anthony Williams did a credible job of filling in for John Glascock, the band's usual bass player who, according to Anderson, is recovering from open heart surgery.
The best thing about the show was the antic performance of piano and organ player John Evan. Dresaed in what Anderson called "hia ice cream suit," Evan rolled his tongue, grimaced twitched, and moved across the stage between measures of songs like a zombie in a grand display of inaanity.
As a lead into "Too Old To Rock n*Roll, Too Young To Die," Anderson denied the song was "of an autobiographical nature." However, after seeing Tull, one has to wonder if the band is not joining the ranks of Bob Dylan and The Rolling Stones, as a group that has seen its best days and is now on the way out.
The show opened with another British rock group. Uriah Heep, which gave a surprisingly explosive and hard-driving performance and brought the crowd to ita feet to call for an encore. However, the crowd came to see Jethro Tall. And at the close of the concert, when Anderson lofted four giant balloons into the crowd, they were burst just like everyone's hopes of aeeing what could have been a tremendous concert.

Miller is also using taxes as an issue. He claims the major antumbling block in the state'a economy is the burdened tax structure and contends that taxes are too exacting on individuals as well as buainesees.

A farewell to Archbold

One hundred years from now, after the bulldozers have taken Archbold Stadium away and the domed stadium is an ancient away and the domed stadum is an ancient campus landmark, maybe someone will decide to open the time capsule th buried beneath the dome in 1978 .

They will find a piece of Archbold concrete inside, and some other items of significance to the history of football at Syracuse University:

Perbaps there will be an inscription telling of the first football game ever played at $S U$ on Nov. 23, 1889. A cold rain fell, the field was swampy and the players were muddied and bloodied as Rochester University soundly defeated Syracuse, 36-0
Along with the concrete will likely be anaccount of SU football's rise from the ashes of those primitive, early years, a rise symbolized by the opening in 1907 of a marvelous new stadium that would bear the name of the man who built it-JJohn Dustin Archbold, chairman of the board for Standard Oil Co.

Archbold Stadium, an early American symbol of college football might and power, was the dawn of an era in SU football.

Across its turf in the next 70 years would trample SU's All-Americans, its bowl game players, its archrival Colgate, national cham pions, a Heisman Trophy winner, a legendary coach, its winners, its losers.
Next week, after the Orangemen and Navy have battled Archbold's final battle, after the final cheers and boos have faded away, after the time capsule has been loaded and sealed, an era will end.
SU's first football colors were pink and blue, the colors of the dawn. Today, it is orange, the color of the aunset.

At such a crossroads, maybe it is appropriate to look back to the dawn, to reminisce about the highlights of the past, before trudging into the dusk and into the dawn of tomorrow that lies beyond.

From rags to riches with Roy Simmons

A hobo quarterback

succeeds at Syracuse

He rode in from Chicago in 921 on the roof of a speeding train, and when the "Hobo Quarterback" hopped off in Syraciuse; he was here to istay. Unlike the pampered rec uits who now travel in plush jeta, Roy Simmons had to rely on his talent as a stowaway before he could display is football ability.
"I was a young punk then," the 77 -year-old Simmons said It didn't bother me."
Everything, in fact, was a bit different when Simmons arrived at SU during the "Roarng '20s."
"The campus was entirely different than it is now," Simmons said. "There was less buildings, and a student body of about 5,000. You got to know just about everyone in the school. There weren't as many things to do, so we devoied moset of our time to campus

Simmons devoted most of his time, three years to be exact, to establishing the Orange as one of the nation's top teams. The squad rolled to a 22 43 record during the in this Quarterback's" reign in this period of SU football royaity. Simmons rise to greatnes at SU followed a period of em barrassment inmons was Chicago from the University bouncedicago during his freshman year when heartaick at his old high school's seemingly hopeless situation in an important game, he illegally entered the contest as a ringer" and salvaged a tie.
The Chicago newspapers uncovered the violation and, Simmons recalls, "made meinto a Paul Bunyan." The publicity ironically worked to Simmons' advantage, attracting suitors for his talents from nearly every collège in the country Simmons hopped the "Hobo Express" to Syracuse.
"I didn't know a hell of a lot about the football program, but I read a lot about Syracuse because of its crew teams at the Poughkeepsie Regatta," Sim nons said. "Ed Mackenzie, a ormer manager, came to talk with me in Chicago, and he painted a pretty picture of the place.'
Simmons found the football picture'at SU to his liking After apending a year on the freshman team in 1921, he quickly won the quarterback ob for the 1922 campaign. The eam notched a 6-1-2 record, in cluding a $9-6$ win over powerful Nebraska and a 0-0 tie with Penn State in the first game of the series at New York City's legendary Polo Grounds.
"We were one of the firat teams with a cross-country schedule," Simmons said. "Most schools' confined their schedules to the immediate area. We played everyone in the East that was anybody, and then we played teams like Nebraska, Alabama and Southern Cal."
SU was aweaome in compiling an 8-1 mariz during the 923 season. "That was the second-beat team SU ever had, next to the unbeaten 1969 mans said. "We Wer unbeaten, untied and hadn't had our goal line crossed until the eighth game of the season againat our archrivala, Colgate. And wouldn't you knowit, they went out and beat us (16-17).
"Sports was the big thing on campur; we didn't have discotheques and honky-tonks to go to," Simmons said.
They did, however, have enforced segregation at football games. "The whole student body turned out," Simmons aaid. "Of coure, the girls couldn't sit with the boys. The girls sat in the covered axea near where the press box is now, and the boys sat accoss the field on the other side.'
The seating arrangement was not the only thing that was different at Archbold. The teams battled with leather helmets and pads rather than plastic. The field had no hash. marks, often causing strange field position near the gidelines, and was even mudgider, Simmons gaid, than today's end-of-the season quagmire.
As the shrewd quarterback of SU's single-wing offense, Simmons was not exactly a Bill Hurley. Simmons was primarily a devastating blocking back and, like his teammates, went both ways as a feared defensive performer. That meant 60 minutes of bruising playing-time in every game of his SU career except the last, when he suffered a concusaion.
College football in the 1920 s was also characterized by dirty tricks that would have made Richard Nixon green with envy. The Orange widened the field one year to give Olympic sprinter Chet Bowman more room on end sweeps. Simmons recalled how a different strategy was employed to stop a great kicker from Maryland.
"My freshman year, Maryland had a great punter named Brewer. He beat us the year before by pinning us back in our own teritory with his punts. Well, our coach, Chick Meehan, underinflated all the balls before the game - they ranged from soft to mush. Brewer had a terrible day and we won. After the game, their coach shook his head and said it was the worst he'd ever seen Brewer kick. not . knowing about the balls."
"They way the referees are today, and with all the different balls they use, you couldn't get away with that," couln't get away wi

Simmons became so attached to SU and the Syracuse community that he kept thejob until 1970. A man of many ambitionst Simmons alsocoached the SU lacrosse and boxing teams to numerous succeasinu seasons. He became involved with both aports in his y years as a student.
Being from Chicago, I never heard of lacrosse until I came here," Simmons said. "I was walking through campus one day as a freahman, when noticed these two guys with ong sticks that hadnets on the end. Well, I thought they were crab nets and Isaked the guys where there was good crabbing around here. They had no idea whit I was talking about.

Simmons quickly fell in love with the sport, and started playing lacrosse rather than prisingly the spring. No putstongy, immonst also Later as coach he guided a Jim Brown-powered team to an undefeated season and what many considered the national championship. Simmons' son, Roy Jr., currently coaches the laxmen, and Roy III plays for the team.
Some of Summons most vivid memories are still "Once, football, however. McBride as freshmen, Simmons called the toughest guy I ever knew") and I had the job of lining the field with a diluted lime solution. By the Colgate game, the field was such ooze, the lines wouldn't stay. Jack put the bag of lime over his shoulder, I made a cone out of cardboard, and we made lines two or three inches deep. By the time the game started, the field was steaming -we're lucky no one was blinded.'
Simmons, who now lives in Cazenovia, still attends every home game.
"I'm so happy we're getting a new stadium,"' Simmons said, but he added wistfully But when I look down over Archbold, there's not a spot on that field I don't have a memory of, be it good or bad Tve seen 50 years of great foot ball there - I hate to gee it go."
Simmons gave his all during those 50 years, and received something in return.
"My greatest experience as coach was th aam It the boys, the kids. It kept me young. Hardy a day goes by when I don't hear from my old boys. I see them aucceeding in ife - it's a hell of a thrill."
Probably nothing would Probably nothing would ceturn of SU foore than the return of SU football to the glory years of the '200. But if he playere needed for such a revival do arrive, you can be sure they won't be clinging to the top of an onrushing train has already found his home.

SU, Colgate scalp one another in series

In 1949, the Colgate Univeraity band boarded buses so they could go to Archbold Stadium. They were aupposed to play their inatruments at ine Syracuase IIniversity conteat.
The unsxezapecting band members did not know the busea had been rented by SU atuderits who had bribed the drivers. The Colgate band was driven to Thornden Park, where a horde of SU students waited with acissors and razors. What followed was the greatest masa scealping since Custer's Last band had bis head shaved It Colgate band had mis head shaved. "It was extremely intense," said Joe Sxombath $Y$, executive director of the Orange Pzek and an SU football player from 1950-52. "It carried over from the earlier daysa, the games of the "30a and 40s. There were shavings of heads you know. People were taken from one campus to the other to get their heads shave.
"It was an lot of fun," Szombathy concluded.
Roy Simpmons, a football player in the early 208 and a fixture as a coach for many Syears afterward, also has fond mennories of the SUColgate

The series became a fixture, an anWeekend with tradition of Colgate pranks and enh its bonfires, scalpings. highlights of the bechool year at Syracuse. Of course, not everything was all in fun: in 1906, the stands collapsed during the game, killing one person and injuring more than 100 .
With the construction of Archbold Stadium in 1907, the permanent site of the game was moved to SU, "Thegane was always played in Syracuse because we had the larger field," Szombathy said.
Despite the proverbial home-field advantage, Colgate began to dominate the seriea. Between 1925 and 1937, SU failed to win, going 011-2. This was the famous Colgate "hoodoo," which coat one coach, Vic Hanson, hia job. In seven yeara as a coach, Hanson was never able to guide his team to a victory in The Big Game. Despite a 33-21-5 coaching record, Hanson was given the boot in 1936 . Of course, a 1-7 record that year didn't help him any.
The "hoodoo" ended in 1938, when SU finall-y triumphed. By this time the rivalry had taken on the aspecta of a holy war, and The Daily Orange epor the the event this way: hirizen ean years pasas in hary today Archbold Stadium gs the Orange Wrarrior of Syramae murdered orange wandiors of eleven, $7-0$."
This victory resulted in what one observer termed "a full-scale riot in downtown Syracuse."
The intensity of the rivalry concinued as students pulled prank after prank. In 1947, the situation grew so gerious that each achool appointed student patrole to guard campur entrances. High-level negotiations ensued, and the result was "The Cazenovia Pact" The use of paint, damage of property and physical violence were outlawed, and administrators from both achools threatened to abolish the conteat if vandalism did not stop.
One of the more interesting pranks took place in 1958. Three SU Btudents rented a plane and dropped orange dye into Taylor Lake, which is near the Colgate campus. Not to be ourtdone, Colgate atindents attermpted to retaliate. They sent a plan on something resembling a kamikaze misarion to drop red paint on Archbold Stadium. But the pilot must have been an SUf fan, because the paint fell on the Colgate side and the carn behind it.

That was pertape the hast hurrah of the SU-Colgate rivalry, In 1959, the DO ran a mock "rah-rah" isgue, proclaimThat year SU won the beare 7l-0, both schools agreed to digcontinute the series In 1961 the last fame we played, and SU won $51-8$ Gdily, the eries ended with Colgate leading 31. series ender with Col Wh

It seerns whenever anyone is asked to recall Ernie Davis, each reacts in the same manner. Each will bow his head, then slowly lift his eyes and look away into space as if he can still aee Davis carrying the ball. After these mental highlights are through, and Davis has scored another touchdown for Syracuse, each can then recall feelings about Davis and his death.
"I received a phone call at3 a.m. from the (Lakeside) hospital (in Cleveland) saying that he had died shortly before that time," remembered Cleveland Brown owner Art Modell. "I remember it very well. I remember thinking he was absolutely the most courageous individual I had ever met."

Davis died on May 18, 1963, a year after he graduated from Syracuse. His disease was initially termed a "blood discase was initially termed a but later diagnosed as leukemia.
Davis' death shocked some, but others suspected for some time that his disease would be fatal.
Before he entered the hospital that May 18, he visited Modell. "He was there for one hour," Modell said. "He told me he had to go to the hospital, but that it was nothing serious and he'd be back out in a couple of days. But, his neck was awollen and we all knew what it meant. I think Ernie did, too. He was coming to say good-bye."
"I asked him now he was feeling," Modell recalled. "All he said was 'I've felt better, but there's nothing to worry about. My throat hurts a little.' He was about. My throat hurts a to go. into the apologe about having to go apologet."
But Davis was not the only Syracuse running back in the office that afternoon. "When he said good-bye to us, we knew that would probably be the last time we'd see him . you know," said Davis' close friend Jim Brown. "The most important thing about Ernie was that at no time did he give the impression he knew what was wrong. He never let on, even then, that he knew."
"Those of us that were close to Ernie could tell something was wrong. Occasionally he would have to put cotton in his nose. But he did it so discreetly, so as not to draw attention to himself,! Brown said.
"He maintained hisstyle at all times. He had a lot of style," he said.

Style.
Near perfect running style made Davis the most prolific runner in Syracuse history. He shattered 10 of Jim Brown's rushing records. But his personal style was so dynamic, it caused one observer at Davis last game for the Orange, the 1962 Liberty Bowl, to remark, "He must smile in his sleep. It's the half-surprised, amused, sleep. It's the half-surprised, amused, secret smile of a man aware that something immensely pleasant was about to happen to him."
"He was a quiet guy, and he never said a helluva lot," recalled Art Baker, one of Davis' earlier running mates at SU and later a member of the Buffalo Bills. "But he knew where he was going."
And for Davis, the most precious destination was professional football. A week after the 15-14 win over Miami in the Liberty Bowl. Davis in perfect the Liberty Bow, Davis in perfect contract with the Cleveland Browns. He paid off the mortgage on his mother's home in Elmira, and then began a lengthy tour of banquets and speaking engagements until graduation day. Despite the tiring schedule, one that could have made others cranky, Davis seemed to enjoy the limelight.

"No, all this (national attention) is no chore to me," he said. "I enjoy it. I know it's only going to happen once."

To obtain the rights to Davis, Cleveland traded a first round draft choice and flashy flanker Bobby Mitchell to Washington. "I had gotten to known Ernie quite well," Mitchell said. Beck ane when I was traded, I bounced back and forth between Cleveland and Washington quite a bit. My home was in Cleveland and all my buddies were still on the Browns.
"I felt the same as most of the rest of the guys. We knew it was inevitable, but it seemed like a great loss and such a great waste, you know."
Despite Davis' death, Mitchell said negating the trade was impossible. "The ironic thing was that it turned out great for me. After I was traded, I was out of the shadow of Jim Brown. No matter what I did in Cleveland, you know, Jim Brown would always top it. So it gave me the chance to domy own thing. # 'Old Ben' builds a legend at SU

Football isn't a pink tea affair. In the end, you have to move people.'-Ben Schwartzwalder

The man is not just an old-time foot ball cosch whose name is ecrawled on the page of a record book stored in the back of some dusty shelf. He is much more than that. The man is, quite simply, an era.
During his reign as head football coach at Syracuse University Floyd "Ben", Sehwartzwalder's name was synonymous with collegiate football excellence. A name mentioned in the aame breath with other coaching legends of his tirme: Partegian, Royal, Bryant Hayes and Wilkinson.
From 1949-1973, Schwartzwalder compiled a record which is, indeed, the stuff of legends. He won 151 games, four Lambert trophies (signifying the Eastern championship), guided the Orange to seven bowl games, coached in 22 consecutive non-losing seasons, oroduced a multitude of All-Americans. a Heisman Trophy winner and the hallowed national championship.
Five years after his retirement, one finds that Schwartzwalder has not changed much. He is atill short, stocky and powerful despite his 70 years. Only his creweut is grayer. He conducted the interview in the living room of his spacious Syracuse horne. Behind his chair is a bookcase that contains such titles as "The Gladiators," "Slot T Football," "Alistair Conke's America

These qualities of power and strength emitted from every Schwartzwalder team at Syracuse. Whether it was contending for a national championship or battling to break even, everyone knew Syracuse would be physical and bruising. It is no accident that his best team, the 1959 National Championship Leam. was dubbed the "Hard Noses. "Football isn't a pink tea affair," Schwartzwalder said. "You can only fake out the other guy somany times. In the end, yon have to move people.
You have to movepeople. It aums up Schwartzwalder's philosophy on practically everything.
He was a wax hero, a man who paracbuted behind enemy lines on $D$ Day. He fought in the Battle of the Bulge, Winning the Silver and Bronze stars, the Citation.
As a company commander in Normandy, he was among 170 men and 13 ofFicers. When it was over, there were 43 men and one officer - Schwartzwalder

War survived. He moved people. Schwartzwalder said, as he shook his head slowly and looked down at the foor "If makes animals out of men." The man is a mirror of the age be dominated, an age of simplicity in moved you. It was an age of the good guys ys, the bad guys. Dillinger vs. the G-men, FDR va. Hitler, the United States Sis. the communista. When is oftizwalder refers to someone, he "I'm a cowboy and Indian man, Schwartzwalder said. "Sometimes I root for the Indians.

Schwartzwalder arrived from Muhlenberg College in Pennsylvania in 1949 to take over a crambling Syracube football program and in three yeara he took it, fittingly, to the Orange Bowl.
Even though Alabama crushed th Orange on that New Year's Day of 1953 61-6, Schwartzwalder feels the game wa the turning point in SU's rise as a national power
'It was a great experience for us because of what Alabama did," Schwartzwalder said. "They scouted even fllmed our practices and it really shook us up. We were neophytes and we learned a lot of things. The big thing is that we were humilated and we had to decide whether to run for cover or make a run for it."
"It was also the last game ol' Ben dian't call the plays," he said with a laugh. Our quarterback muat have they must have run them all back for couchdowns.
Schwartzwalder built his powerhouse from the ground up. "We had a very skimpy basis for recruiting, the highest ever had to work with was $$ 21,000, "$ he recalled. "Boy. it was something. We used to work seven days m Week to recruit. Coaches woald use their own cars in traveling around the country.
The Orange Bowl appearance and the emergence of Jimmy Brown, a 1957 All American who has been called the greatest foothall player who ever lived, put Syracuse over the recruiting hump. "The success to recruiting is to fratget a great one." Schwartzwalder obaerved. "If we don't get Jimmy Brown, we don't get off the ground. A great (running) back brings others and also helps to get linemen.

Jimmy was the main reason Ermi Davis (who went on to win the 1961 Heis man Trophy) came here and Ernie wen to see Floyd Littie to talk about him corm ing here, schwartzwalder recalled "Even then. Notre Dame almost got Schwartzwalder has coached some of the greatest names to pads. His alumni look like All-Pro teams from the ' 50 s and ' 60 s . However the stand outs have to be the four great running backs: Brown, Davis, Litlle and Larry Cbonka. How would he compare them?

"There is no way you can compare Shwartzwalder observed them were all so Ereat. I'd love to have pause the same backneld. After a pause, Guess id have a tough time pic Schquarterback, "he said with a grin. Slained that he rarely showed affection for his players.
"One thing that was too bad about Ben was that he had trouble showing affec tion for his players," said Jim Ridlon, a coach and player unde Schwartzwalder, now a football broad caster for WSYR-AM.
${ }^{4}$ But the truth was that he cared about them deeply. If he found out anything was wrong, he was always on the phone to see how they were and how they were doing," Ridlon said.

The critics must not have asked him about the day Davis died of leukemia in May of 1963 . Schwartizwalder is silent for a moment, shakes his head and says aoftly, "God that was a terrible thing."

Ihad an affection for my players" he aaid, perturbed that anyone wonld think differently. "I would do anything for The relationahip with the players as well as winning was the meaningful part.

We worked awfully hard, but we had un too. we were looge," he said.
Dan Moore, a member of the national championship tanm and now the SU unior vargity soccer coach, remembers hat other side of Schwartzwalder.
"It was after we beat Texas in the Coton Bowl and Ben came up to me after the game and asked me if I had had a good fime out on the town the night before," Moore remembered.

I said 'Ben, I made it home okay, but aomebody stepped on my hands when 1 was going up the staire' Ben really loved hat and laughed hard.
But the era of simplicity became complicated in the late ' 60 s and early ' 70 s as chwartzwalaer's America underwent a drastic transformation. To the World War II paratrooper, it appeared in the form of the Black player strike of 1970 . Ironically, 1970 was one of Schwartzwalder"s Enest moments ag he cook that strife-torn team to a 6-4 season including the last SU victory over Penn State) and came within one game of $a$ nowl bid, the Lambert Trophy and becoming Coach of the Year in the East. "If you lake anybody on this faculty nobody conld have gone through what hat man did and come out ag good. Ridion said.
However the incident labeled chwartzwalder as a man who didn't anderstand the changing world around nim. When he retired in 1973 , he was picured as a man passed by time.
Schwartzwalder doesn't quite look at hase last years like that. In viewing the nodern player, he anid, "The players became more sophisticated, but the good players didn't change. The good players always wanted to Tragically, the 1970 incident tenda to vershadow what. Schwartzwalder vac complished. For 25 years he was a consistent winner in college football, a feat that puts him in select company.
"The most amazing part of. Ben's career was those 22 consecutive non-los ing seasons," saild Duffy Daugherty, ex Vichigan State coach .and Syracuse player.
Schwartzwalder owes the durability to xis war experiences. "The one thing the service helped me to do was sleep," he aid. "After what I went thougin sleep came easier. People may not think that: mportant, but alot of guys just aren' table enough to Eurvive the preasure and duress of having to win. How many guys coach for a long time? You can count them on your Eingers."
Like any big-time college coach Schwartzwalder has had to deal with the notorious alumni. Whenever he came in contact with them, he promalgated two Schwartzwalderian laws.

There were two things alumni couldn't do when they talked to me, Schwartzwalder recalled. "They couldn't grab me by the collar and they couldn't poke their fingers in my chest, he said jabbing his index finger in his chest Schwartzwalder offered some views on the present SU football situation. Getting this new stadium will really help. Now this guy Nel Eggers, he's a good guy, you can mark that down righ there," he said, making a checking motion on the axm of his chair.
"It was terrible about Hiriey. They have to be able to recruit. They, need tha one big gay I was talicing about, and II tell you, this kid Morris (freshman mun ning back Joe) just may be the guy they need.'
They will argue perhapa forever that Ben Schwartzwalder was a priwoner o his own generation, or they will be wary of his time-worn values and they wil criticize him for not hugging and backslapping his players, But while the critics will be lone gone, bis , 2 consecutive mon-losing seasons, the championship will always be etched in gold.

Orangemen feast on foes, glory in 1959

Ben Schwartzwalder's stomach was bound into such a tight, nervous knot that he had trouble eating his break fast.
it was a late November morming in 1959, the day that Schwartzwalder's top-ranked Orangemen would face television in the regular season finale.
Syracuse had to win convincingly to wrap up its firgt-ever national championship. UCLA had a five-game win streak and a halfback named Billy Kitmer. Yet, the SU players were loose and laughing the day of the game. The thuree factors combined were too much for Schwartzwalder or his assistant coaches to handle with brealfast. Suddenly, Syracuse captain and haifback Gerhard Schwedes rapped forcefully on his water glass with a fork, and all of the players and coaches looked up attentively.
"What's the matter with you coaches?" he demanded angrily. "We're going to kick the hell out of UCLA, so why don't you just eat your UCLA, so w

As the team cheered, the coaches relaxed. They ate. And, later that day, they won $36-8$ to clinch the only national football championship Syracuse University has ever won.
${ }^{\text {"Everything just gelled that season,", }}$ recalled Joseph Szombathy, SU's current assigtant athletic director, who was an assistant coach in 1959. "We scored at will, we were hard-hitting and we just overwhelmed them."

After the opening game against Kansas, it was just inconceivable to us that we would lose," recalled Schwedes, who now lives in Fayetteville and Works as a saleaman for alostens and Performance incent beat the Green Bay convinced we cour."
Looking at the impressive statiatics the Orangemen compiled in their 11 victories, it would bedifficult to dispute Schwedes' conviction.
Never had a college football team dominatied the record books as Syracuse did in 1959. The Orangemen, spearheaded by their starting line, the "Sizeable Seven," led the mation in rubhing defense and total defense. Stingy Syracuse surrendered a whopping up an average of 96.2 yards in total offense each game.
While Syracuse pushed its opponents backwards, its fleet-footed backfield, labeled the "Fearsome Foursome," was outgaining the opposition by more than two miles.
Such dominance Was unexpected before the geason began. In fact, the best the Orangernen could do in preseason polls was $20 t h$ from Associated Press.
And, from the looks of thinge in preseasion practice, perhaps the Halfback Garhard Schwedes (16) captained the 1959 national champions and Dave Sarette (23) stepped into the starting quarterback spot after the seszon's first game.

Orangemen didn't even deserve the 20th spot.
"I'll never forget the day in August when we coaches walked off the field and just shook our heads at how miserable we had prackiced: Szomhad jugt run through our firat team Ithe water through a gieve"
The defenee wasn't
The defenae wasn't spectacular on opening day, as Kangas led by ace 21 points against the Orangemen. But the SU offense poured through the Jayhawhs' defenge like, well, like water through a sieve, and Syracuse won 35 throu.

Schwedes started the Kansas game as quarterback, replacing first-stringer begs Thomas, who was out for the replaced by a back injury, but has quarter with SU trailing 15-12.
Sarette, whoge eyesight was so poor chat Schwedes had to tell him Schwartzwalder's aignals from the sidelines, directed three scoring drives, completed nime of 13 passes for 117 yards and a touchdown, and won himself the staxting quarterback position for the season.
Throughout the opening same, Syracuse was hampered by Hadl's booming punts, which constantly pinned the Orange deep in their own erritory.
"I went out that night to a restaurant after we won, and I was in the toilet when a drunk grabbed me and said 'Why did you let them quick-kick you all day?" "Schwartizwalder recalled. "I said, sir, if you don't take your hands off me I'm going to whack you.
That was the kind of enthusiasm that awept the campus throughout the season. Schwedes, who lived in Marion Hall, recalled a student who lived on Mount Olympus and who, for nearly a month; passed himself off as Schwedes so he could receive the hero treatment from other students.
"His impersonation ended when he introduced himself to me as Gerhard Schwedes." Schwedes recalled.
The Orangemen then whipped Maryland $19-0$ and, playing in the Oyster Bowl in Norfolk, Va.; Bteamed a gtrong Navy team, 32-6. After Navy Srombathy recalled, "we just nowballed."

Six games into the season, undefeated and ranked fourth nationally, Syracuse tailed into University Paric, Pa., to face seventh-ranked, also-undefeated Penn State in the battle for Eastern supremacy that became a battle for national supremacy.
The Orangemen entered the fourth quarter with a comfortable $20-6$ lead that, after a kickoff return for a ouchdown and a blocked SU punt, quicky dissolved to an uncomfortable $20-18$ lead. But a Penn State two-point ied the acore attempt that would have Gene Graboaky's goalline tackle. Then, the bruising Orange ground game ran out the last six minutes on the clock to preaerve the win.
"Gene had been at Penn State, but he said the coach, Rip Engle, told his professors to flunis him becsuse he was a lousy football player? Schwartzwalder recalled. After the game, Gene went into their locker room, screaming like a madman at Rip that he was the player Rip had flunked."
The victory propelled Syracuae into the No. 1 gpot on both wire service polls for good, and set upa Cotton Bowl date with the then-gecond-ranised Texas Longhorns.
I remember when the captains went out on the field for the game, they played the Texas song, and guys on their team were crying." recalled SU's All-American tackle, Roger Davis. "I turned to Gerhard and said, "I think we're in for serious trouble.
Fueling Orange apprehension was the health of sophomore Ernie Davis, who was hobbled by a pulled left leg muscle and histed as a doubtful starter. Ironically, however, it was Davis, the game's most valuable player, who lassoed the Longhorns, catching an 87 yard touchdown pass from Schwedes in the games opening minutes to give SU & quick $7-0$ lead.
SU eventually won a bitter struggle, 23-14, but most of the post-game atten tion was focused on alleged biased officiating and an ugly racial flareap that sparked a fight and emptied both benchea.
"The calls those Southern officiale made were awful," Schwartzwalder recalled "It rot so bad that at one recaint I It got so bad hat, at one point, Iheard a referee from Buffalo tell them that "Every time you go-and-aos throw your flag, 171 throw mine." throw your flag, 171 throw mine."
The other controversy involved Syracuse's three black players, who were taunted with racial plurs, spat at and kicked by a vicious Texas defense. andickediona the half, Syracuse lineman John Brown, who had been called a "Gig blackdirty nigger" by 235 called a "big blackdirty nigger" by 235 pound iexas lineman larry Stephens Stephens.
A brawl erupted, and both benches emptied. "I told them at halftime to awallow it and forget it," Schwartzwalder said. "I knew they were just trying to get us mad so we would make mistakes."

But the Orangemen made no mistakes and, in the end, they silenced their critics who claimed that Eastern football was inferior to the same played in the rest of the nation.
Today, the Grantland Rice trophy signifying the nation's best college football team sits in a dusty glass case in Manley Field House, flanked by an assortment of other trophies and honors from the 1959 season.

But, as Schwartzwalder noted of Sarette's play after '59, the Orangemen "never could quite put it all together again.
But for Joseph Szombathy and the other men who were a part of that single, magical season, the memory will at ways linger.
"All of the pieces just fit together perfectly that year," Szombathy recalled. "It was just like living in a fairy tale."

A campus already inflamed by war protests rallied around the cause and Jim Decker, the Syracuse athletic director, sersed the threat of violence for SU's home opener against Kansas on Sept. 26. His fence was built and 200 police were added for security.

But SU's only trouble at the stactium was with Kansas, which whipped the Orangemen.

But after this peak of ten sion, the situation gradually relaxed. The boycotting players were being boycotted themselves.

They were no longer welcomed on the team by their former teammates.
"As far" as I'm concerned, they'll always be separate," Ray White, a tri-captain on the 1970 team said at the time. Today when they showed up suffering from an acute lack of talent. In college football poverty breeds poverty and Syracuse is still on welfare.
"When I got here I was shocked at the facilities more than-anything." said Schwartzwalder's successor, Frank Maloney. "We had no weight room, the locker room was a mess...the facilities are still really not on the level of the teams we play.
"From my study of the situation (the period of the black strike) it seemed that the football program had not gotten support from the administration it should have from 1968-73,"Maloney added. "I call it disinterest."

Archbold will be demolished, and with it will go the fence. Whether the trouble it stood for, the trouble which added to the decline of football at Syracuse in the 1970 s, can be corrected is still a mystery.

sU-owned Utica College faces merger proposals

Utica College students and administrators are worried about losing the independent status of their univergity.
But for now, Utica will maintain its status as a four-year liberal arts college, according to Syracuse Univeraity Chancellor Melvin A. Egrers. Exgers told SU student leaders at a recent conference that SU, owner of Utica The State University of New York has proposed noerging its New York College of Technology with Utica. Under the proposal, the two-year upper-division school, now housed in renovated Utica
But merger negotiations have ceased becauge Gov. Hugh L. Carey may release funds for the building of a technology college campus in downtown Utica.
"The state has been considering the best way to expand the campus for some time now," said Thomas D. Sheldon, president of Utica College. Sheldion said Utica has been negotiating because of concern that an anticipated 25 percent drop in high school graduates in the 1980 and rising inflation would cause unbearable tuition increases.

Plan replaces lost meal grids

By Carolya Beyrau
Students with On-the-Go or Commuter meal plans won't have to go hungry next bemester if they lose their meal card.
Under an agreement worked out with Student Association, Food Service will replace lost grids beginning next semester, said Dennis Koehler, Food Service director.
"We will try the plan on a trial basis spring semester," Koeler said.
Kathy Courtney, SA vice president for student programs, said she thinks the new policy is justified because of the cort of SU meal plans.
Omelhe-Gocoets $$ 360$ and containe 318 paints. Commuter has 195 point for $$ 236$. Breakfast re quires one point, lunch or brunch two points and dinner three pointe.

Food Service will assume that a student who has lost a meal card ate three meals a day before the loss of the grid. Koehler said. The replacement card will have six punches removed for every day the student had the card. Currently, lost grida cannot be replaced. Students accept total responsibility for their cards, Koehler said.
"We're still workin
"We're still working out the details," Koehler said. "We want an agreement that's satigfactory to both sides."
Courtney feela the new policy is a definite advancernent over the old one, although she is not completely satisfied with it

The policy should be retroactive for people who lost their grids this semester, Courtney said. "But at least students won't have the same

Challenger attempts to dig up Hanley's grass roots

By Mark Sullivan
and Irwin Fiseh
Arriving early at an Old Liverpool television studio for a recent campaign debate, Congressman Jim Hanley didn't hrush up on his notes, confirm his itinerary or stare into a makeup room mirror.

Instead, he sat clipping obituaries from the loca condoler, so he to his constituents.
Hanley's condolence cards. Chriatmas greetings, congratulatory notes and mor proved more valuable in his 13 years as a Congressman than the most ingenious campaign schemes.
While it may not be true that he knows balf of hia constituents by their first names, Hanley has garnered more than his share of supporters, if the 32nd Congressional District's voting record is an indication.
A Democraticenigma from a heavily Republican territory, Hanley has nurtured a captive bipartisan vote with his intoxicating, old-style politicking. He is so entrenched in the Grass roots of Central New York that he has often been exempted from having to campaign.
In his years as a political fix ture in Washington, D.C., as well as in Central New York, Hanley has served as chairman of the House Subcommittee on Postal Operations and Services, and as a member of the House Banking Committee and the House Committee on Small Business.
He was house conferee on the Civil Service Reform Bill and designer of the Postal Reform Act of 1978 .
Hanley has been a proponent of energy conservation, and the developmention unexplored, environmentally safe power sources such as wind and solar power. He professes a need for a massive conservation effort by the Arnerican people, and claims to have supported such a drive Act.

SU's annual report shows revenue increase

By David Bauder
and Walecia Konrad
The Syracuse University board of trustees was given some good news at this weekend's semiannual board meeting.
They were presented with the 1978 annual report, which announced that the "university is its best financial position in the last decade.
For the gixth consecutive year, SU recorded a balanced budget and expecta to continue to balance it in the future.

The fact that the debtis decreaning indicates the university is "moving in the right direc tion," said Clifford IL Winters Jr. vice chancellor for administrative operations.
The annual report also included a report from Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers on the general state of the university. The chancelior reported the university was making "steady progress in all areas.
Eggers outlined his plan for relocating all academic programs in permanant structures by the mid 1980s. The major features of the plan inManagement and permanent facilities for Management and permanent facilities for programs Continental Can building on Erie the Coulevard.
Eggers listed building a univeraity center, a contimuing education conference center and a stadium as urgent priorities for the onniveraity.
At their moeting, the truestees also formally approved plans for a domed stadium on the site of Archbold Stadium.
The board passed a reaclution authorizing Egrers and deaignated vice chancellorst to "execute and disiver contracts and other comemitments binding upon the university" to complete the $$ 26$ millign project.

The reaolution also authorized the university to contract with the Urban Development Corp., which will administer $$ 15$ million in state funds.

Eggers said $$ 1$ milion in gifts has already been received toward the $$ 11$ million the university must raise for the stadiuma.

Forsaken: Trustee representation

> To the edicor:
> Allow me to admit how foolish I Was in maling hasty judgemente about the board of trustees, the administratiors and student represen. tatives. When I read Itm Finton's and Joel Lazar's letter (Do.O. Nov 2), I was humbled. Imagine-all 45 minutes debating on the Ostrol 45 minutes debating on the Ostrom Congidering that concerned students conk aeversl hat concerned took several months in preparing for an organized protest > tirely atuthorw of chat letter are en tirely correct- the trustees are not a bunch of "yes", people." They are a bunch of "no" people. Case in point-me cloging of Oetrom, regar dless of a unanimous resident protest.

> Flinton and Lazar are right. "Some matters are not meant for the front page of the DO. But matters that concern the student body, the breadwinners of this institution. mind you, belong somewhere between the theets of the Daily Orange. Without proper pablication, it may be too late to take any necessary action.

And who are these "various students" whom Finton and Lazar consaited on isauee that should be presented to the board? A guy in the Frange on a Friday night? A stoned Frisbee player on the Quad?

The board appears tabe merely going through the motions of allowing students to sit in on meetings. Jupt because students are "allowed" to attend and partici pate doesn't mean their input gets fed into the administrative machine, Perhaps their input goes in one adbecauge the is nothing in other because there is nothing in between to block it.

Granting Amnesty

In the Soviet Union, the death penalty is freely imposed for "crime againgt the state." These inclucle "economic crimea" auch as stealing materiala from state-owned factories and writing or distributing anti-Communist literature. An average of 30 ex ecutions are recorded in the public press each year.
In South Africa, almost all the population lives in sorme form of deten tion. Blacks have no civil rights. The attorney general can and does order detention under torture of people suspected of political crimes: dissent against a aystem of apartheid.
In Iran, 100,000 political prisoners are tortured im the Shah's prisons. Prisoners are beaten with sticks and ciabs, nails and teeth are pulled ont, their famalies are raped, beaten and billed in front of their eyes.
The list goes on and on: Argentima. the Phillipines, Chile, Czechoslovakia, Uganda, Nicaragua, Pakistan. In over 100 countries, well over half a million prisoners are being punished, often tortured, because of their race, religion ardipolitical beliefs.
But there is something we can do to stop it.
Amnesty International, the 1977 Nabel Peace Prize winning organization, has effected the release of handreds of such prisoners through written and telegrammed appenla to governments that violate human rights. Such pressure has also vastly improved the situations of people still in prison: torture stopped, visits allowed, medical treatrnent given, death sentences commuted.

Organizing the academic communtity of SU towards these critically important goals is the purpose of three Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity brothers. They are trying to establish a chapter of Amnesty International at SU Tonight. it is requesting an allocation of $$ 750$ from $$ A \cdot s$ contingency fund of $$ 15,000$.

The bulk of their allocation, $$ 500$, is necessary to obtain a lifetime charter from Amnesty International. USA. This momey would be apent to research prisoners' whereabouts and conditions, and to publish these findings with recommended action to AI chapters across the nation. The remaining $$ 250$ would be spent by the $S U$ chapter on Urgent Action telegrams, stamps, pens and paper.
SA has 80 far voiced no objection to these requesta. Especially since there is no other organization like AI at the university or the city itself, SA's support is essential in bringing our talents and convictions to the 'most meaningful use; saving, protection and bettering human lives.

Academic excellence: a full-time occupation

Part-time faculty member: "One with whom the university has not contracted for total professional output."
-John J. Prucha, vice chancellor for academic affairs

The number of part-time faculty members at SU has been increased by 50 since last year. Why? To save money.

Saving money to hold down skyrocking tuition costs is an admirable goal. But not at the expense of academic excellence. This surge in parttime inatructors, however, cannot help but have that effect.

No matter how talented a part-tixne teacher, nomatter how effective his teaching methods may be, these skills are still only available to the student on a part-time basis. Studente who may need extra help, and students who wish to discuss an interesting topic further often cannot do so with a part-time professor-because most of the time, they can't be there to just talk to.

About 20 people in the part-time help increase have been thrust upon the English department, probably the most critical department in the university, especially for freshmen. All but four of the part-time English instructors this year teach freshmen English. Since understanding of the English language is the fundamental basis for any further study in the university, this is the worst place to compromise on quality. English professor John Diehl said at the Uni versity Senate Open Forum that this excessive hiring of part-timers is "diluting the quality of the department."

Not only are students being exploited; so are the part-time faculty themselves. Many such instructors carry as full a courseload as full-time faculty, but are paid far less money. They are not eligible for tenure or other benefits for which full-time faculty are eligi ble. "They are worse off financially than TAs' Diehl said.
But instead of teaching assistants, who are at least on campus most of the time, the university chose to hire part-time instructors. According to Arthur W. Hoffman, English department chairman, the English department would be irresponsible to train a large number of addition TAs "when there is no job market for them after they are trained." If there is no job market for them, what caused all the part-timers to suddenly appear on campus?
This is not to say that part-time instructors cannot be valuable assets to the university. Hoffman said that at least nine part-time English instructors have been hired exclusively as tutors for students who need additional help. Prucha mentioned that part-time instructors can be hired as "adjunct professors," specialists in the community who are hired by as adjunct professors, specialists in the community who are hired by and expertige in their field.
However, the bulk of the increase in part-time teachers are the result of money saving moves, not a thoughtful effort at expansion. But if anything is to be spared in SU's cost-cutting crusade-even if we sacrifice a stadium, a renovation, or even a union building-let it be the academic quality of the university, of which only the best teachers are a part.

article was published in the Buffalo Evening News that is, as far as I am Evening News that is, as far as I am concerned, "the straw that has broken the camel's back." This article stated that a $$ 15.3$ million bill that provides fuat a $$ 15.3$ milion bill that provides funds for a domed stadium for Syracuse University passed the Senate and Assembly and that you were exand Assembly and that yoy were expected to sign the bill foon. I was present at the Empire Games Opening Ceremonies in Syracuse, August 17, 1978, when you stated that you weregoing to support this legislation.

You have promised the construction of Phase I (only a feld house) of our facility at least three times. Obviously, you were sincere when apeaking with the Syracuse area constítuency, a fact that I cannot say has been the case at SUNY Buffalo. Your rationale, as stated at the Empire Games, for supporting the legislation for Syracuse University's dome cut deeply into my pride and dignity, when you stated that you were supporting the $$ 15.3$ million legislation

"because Syracuse University is the only major college athletic program in New York State." Ag far as I am concerned, this is the case because the legislators of the State of New York, inclnding yourself, want it this way. We were, until 1970, a major college athletic program. That year we were forced to drop our football programe because of the lack of firm and adequate funding. We cried for help, as a State Institution, and were givena deat ear by all concerned. We were told that we just couldn't be "major league." This was just not important to the State of New York. That year our freshman football team defeated the Syracuse team by 30 points, and went undefeated. Now a few years latex, Syracase University, a private school. has cried ont that they too cannot be "major league," because their stadium is inadequate. Only this time the State immediately comes to their aid. The cry seems absurd to me. Archbold Stadium, as it presently stands, is the fnest collegiate footban hadium in New York State. The stadium hat w melf use been cond and there are $n 0$ half of it is functional and there a.
Ideally, you should have ataged th Empire Games at a SUNY facility This would have been much cheaper for the taxpayer. I brought thia matter up to an Empire Games Official and was told that yes there had been though about it, but that there wan no SUNY unit with facilities adequate enough to host anything like the Empire Games Upon giving the subject more thought, I had to agree. This, to me, is a and ad mission and a matter for concern. Surely a great inetitution anch as the State University of New York should have at least one facility capable of hosting 5,000 a thletes. Well, to date, we do not. One was supposed to have been constructed at the University at Buffalo, the largeat of the State Univeraity Centers.

We are missing out on millions of dollars worth of free publicity for our State and State Univeraity, by not having a visible athletic program in such states as Michigan, California, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Texas get from their state supported athletic programs, when their teams appear on national T.V. We have all aeen haiftime programs showcasing the academic accompliahmenta and sesearch at their state supported institutions
The thing that I am most disturbed about is the lack of adequate facilitiea at SUNY Buffalo for physical education, recreation and intramural activities. There is not a day that goes by in which I don't have to tell studenta that they cannot use the facibition for recreation purposes because they munt recreation purposes because they must be used for classes or athletics Many or centers, tennis and racketball clube in centers, tennis and racketball clube in order to satisfy their himeas and recreational needs. I feel our students They know that the quality of life for They know that the quaity of life for them, on campus, is not what it should be and they have become very hoetile of late. They are fired of waiting late. They are tired of waitiag.

Students plan to form human rights group

About 20 Syracuse University stadents met Thurs day night to do something about human-righta nolations.
Led by Lamba Chi Alpha brothers Andy Burns Tim Farrell and Arne Komar, the studenta are in the nidst of forming a campus chapter of Amnesty Inter national, the 1977 Nobel Peace Prize winning human ights organization.
Tonight they plan to ask the Student Association Assembly for the $$ 750$ needed to atart the campus hapter.
in their funding request to SA. Burns and Komar describe AI as "an independent, impartial organization which works through the motrilization of world public opinion to affect the release of Prisoners of Conscience. The prisoners are people imprisoned anywhere for their beliefs, color, anguage, ethnic origin or religion.
AI works mainly by sending letters and telegrams to governments, prisoners and their families, Burns aid.
The proposed SU chapter needs $$ 500$ to become a chartered lifelong AI member and $$ 250$ for supplies. The $$ 500$ fee supports research on prisoners, Burns said.
Burns said he has met with SA's Finance Board and it had no objections to the $$ 750$ request. If approved by the assembly, the money would come from SA's $$ 15,000$ contingency fund.

Kevin McCarthy, co-chairman of the Graduate Student Organization finance committee also attended the meeting and said GSO might contribute a small amount of money.
Burns and Komar told the group there are at least 500,000 "Prisoners of Conscience" in more than 100 countries. To qualify as a Primoner of Conscience, the prisoner must never have used or advocated violence.
Since AI began in 1961, it has publicized the plight of more than 16,000 political prisoners. Of these, more than 10,600 have subsequently been released from custody.
AI sends research teams to prisoners' trials around the world and publishes as many as 21 detailed studies on the situation each year. The group testifies before the U.S. Congreas and other groups and compiles a list of prisoners who have not used violence. These prisoners are then eligible for "adoption." by its. worldwide network of more than 170,000 volunteers.
Burns explained the importance of writing letters to oppressive governments. "If you have two prisoners, one known and one unknown, the government will go a lot harder on the unknown,"he said.
An SU chapter of AI would take two types of action. Burns and Komar said. In "Urgent Action" appeals, members would immediately send messages to governmants about prisoners AI feelf ave in "Emergency situations." These casees ustally involve prisoners who are being tortared, face the death penalty, have "disappeared" or are in immediate need of medical care.
The United States is not free of ite own Prisoners of Conscience. After Andrew Young's controversial statement in July that there are "hundreds, maybe even thousands of people i would call political even thousands of people $I$ would call political Prisoners in Cons. ians, Ai relea

The list includes eight of the original "Wilmington Ten." who were convicted in 1972 of arson and conspiring to aspanit guards during racial violence. Also listed is Lee Otia Johnson, a left-wing black ac tivist sentenced to 17 years in jail for stealing a Burns set and $17 worth of mea Burna, Komar and Farrell said they have the aupport of the SU NonViolent Studies department and the Syracuse Peace Council. They plan to celebrate the 30 th anniversary of the human-righta charter on Dec. 10 with a program on campua. Dec. 10 with a program on campua.
At the organizational meeting, the group formed steering, recruitment and publicity committees, as well as a "December 10 " committee to plan activities for the campus program.

Until it gets SA funding, the group will function without charter, Burns said.

Iranian warns US against intervention By Carl Johnson

The American public has astake in what is happening in Iran, said Bahram Atai, national field secretary of the Committee for Artistic and Intellectual Freedom in Iran.
Atai spoke before a group of about 80 people Friday night in Maxwell Auditorium.
"Vietnam should be alive in the minds of many, many Annericans," Atai said. He drew a parallel between the U.S. intervention in the Viet Nam war and its involvement in Iran.

He warned that if the United States intervenes in Iran, the "youth of America," would be fighting in the country.
On Sept. 8, the Shah of Iran imposed martial law in 12 cities. Atai said it was an attempt to head off protesta from the Iranian people.
In his speech, Atai criticized the U.S. news media's coverage of the situation in Iran and warned that U.S. involvement in Iran could turn into another Vietnam.

Atai claimed the American mass media described the demonstrations as the work of "crazed Moglem leaders," and the media are trying to change the public's view of what is happening in Iran in order to justify U.S. policy, which is favorable to lran.
He said the United States has political and economic interests in Iran. He claimed that part of this is because Iran shares a border with the Soviet Union and the United Statea fears a "domino theory" effect if a communist government takes control of Iran.

Atai also said SAVAK, the Iranian secret police organization. is equipped and trained by the Central Intelligence Agency. He said the Iranian army is also trained and equipped by the United States, claiming there are more U.S. military advisers in Iran now than there were during the escalation of the Vietnam War. the Irai, whose committee wants to mobilize American support for announced to the people. As a result, he said, the army fired into crowds on the streets and "attacked without reserve the unarmed populace."
"I do not have any personal grudges against the Shah, although I hate him very much." Atai said.
Atri said the Shah representa a social system which has not even tried to meet the demandis of the Iranian people.
Atai also criticized the Shah's treatment of women, saying that there are 4,000 women in Iranian prisons and that 700 were killed on Sept. 8 when martial law was imposed.
The media's "hypocrisy behind portraying the Shah as a liberator is truly disgusting." he said, claiming that Iranian women are still legally considered retarded.

The Ultimate Frisbee CIub, forinstance, is in its third year at SU. Its 30 members jog to stay in shape, practice in the cold of winter and jump rope at 2 in the morning.
According to Strassberg, Frisbee players have to be in the best physical condition because Ultimate is a vigorous sport. The players are constantly rumning from goal to goal during a game, making the sport, in Strassberg's opinion, even more vigorous than soccer.

It was because of a lack of a full starting ineup that the club lost its most recent match to Columbia, Strassberg said. A lot of players didn't go because they had too much studying to do. This hurt the chances of winning because the first string tired early in the match.

According to Strassberg, the team's strength is defense. "What we lack is Tewere really ready to play," Maloney coach Jackie Sherrill said that his team "had come ont very tight and was emotionally down at halftime.

Maloney explained that his team's failure to appear on the field before the game started helped Syracuse mentally. "We practiced down at the field-house field (Coyne Field) before the game becauae we didn't want the players thinking about Pitt and being awed at all by them. That was the theme of the practices this week. We also wanted to hide our new plays 'and formations.

The Orangemen's new formations bewildered Pitt for most of the game. "The majox reason we went with aome new wrinkes was to try to take wison out of the offense since he had a pulled hameftr ing that has been bothering him. The I for back less in the offense," Maloney continued.
"Also, we felt we had to use some trickery against a team as good as Pitt." Maloney said. We gambled a lot but we just weren't going to take a conservative approach to this game.'
SU's gambling continued to pay off in the third quarter. On a key third-down play, Wilson rolled to his right and completed a 41 -yard pass play to Tony Sidor Six plays later. Mandeville scored his second touchdown from two yards out to increase the lead to 17-7.
Thereafter, Syarcuse couldn't penetrate the Pitt defense as Sherrill and his assistants apparently made some adjustments. And the Panther receivers suddenly began holding on to paasea that they had previously dropped.
After exchanging punts, Trocano connected with Gordon Jones for a 14 yard gain. It was the first and last reception of the game for Jones. Trocano then completed two pasaes to tight end Steve Gaustad, who was open in the middle, for 32 yards.

We made some critical defensive errors, and most of them were in the second vantage of these errors an he dashed five yards aromnd left end and scored with 1:19 gone in the fourth quarter. Pittsburgh's two-point converaion attempt aucceeded as Trocano flipped the ball to Jacobs just before he was tackled. An untouched Jacobs scored on the same play as Trocano' ${ }^{\prime}$ touchdown run to make the score 17-15.
SU then failed to capitalize on a fumble caused by Mike Zunic and recovered by Ken Kollar. Monk's second halfback op tion pass intended for Mike Jones was intercepted by Mike Balzex
A penalty on the interception advanced the ball to SU's 49 -yard line. On a key fourth-down play in the same possession, Trocano gained the first down on a quarterback sneak. "The quarterback keep hurt us a lot," Maloney said.
Trocano displayed more running ekills as he ran with the ball for three of the next six plays for 13 yards. This set up Schubert's game winning field goal." We made thema earn what they got," said SU' mammoth SU had one last opportunity, but was hit with a delay of the game penalty when the proceedinga on the field resembled a Chinese fire drill. "There was confugion on who wat supposed to be in and who wasn't, Wilson explained.
Maloney attributed the confusion to inexperience. 'The timeouts problem was due to young personnel who weren't lining up in the right positions. The problem didn't turn out to be critical, though nyway," Maloney said.
But the loss was critically painful to people hike Morris, who had played their challenger is Peter DelGiorno. Facing what may be his toughest re-election drive in years, Hanley has stepped up his campaign.The main thrust of DelGiorno's candidacy is his support for the Kemp-Roth tax-cut bill. This proposal would eut tax rates 33 percent over a threeyear period.

"Inflation presses people into a higher income bracket," DelGiorno said. "If sowneone gets a 10 -percent raise, it could result in a 16 -percent tax increase," he explained. "People shouldr't be financially injured just to keeping pace with inflation.
Also, DelGiorno chargeg that Hanley has been inconsistent on the tax-cut measure. According to DelGiorno, Hanley voted against Kemp-Roth six times, but upported the Nunn Amendment, a Senate bill calling for a 33 -percent reduction in tar rates over a period:
DelGiorno views Hamley as unwilling to change his politimalideas "Hanley'g been in Congress for 14 years and he's still talking Great Society," DeGiorno said.
Consequently, the 37 -year. old DelGiorno feels that by presenting himself as a youthful alternative to Henley, he may be able to upset the incumbent on Election Day-

Eggers ensures student union

By Carolyn Beyrau
Chancellor Melvin A Eggers made a formal commitment at the Student Center on Saturday to build a student union building as soon an the $$ 26$ million stadium is completed.
"You can assume a formal commitment has been made," Eggers told about 100 students and their parents." I assure you it will be done."
Student Association sponsored the event to give parents a chance to find out what they can do to help the otudent union project, SA pergident Arnie Wolaky said.
However, Eggers told the group the university cannot group the university cannot center until stadium funding is center unti
"A domed stadium makes financers nervous," he said. "We can't borrow money for a university center now.
Plans have been drawn up for the proposed "university center" and a site has been selected at the corner of University Avenue and University Place. The project will cost about $$ 7.5$ million.

We're learning a lot about funding through the stadium project, Eggers said. "By the time the university center comes around well really know how to do it.
Wolsky said he was also optimistic about the union building's prospects.
'Involving parents is something that's never been done before," he said. "When we start building a student center we're already going to have all these parents behind us."
Last week, Eggers threatened not to attend the event because he objected to SA's posters telling students to "bring your parents to the Student Center and let them bitch" about the student union building-
However, SA removed the posters "out of respect for the Chancellor," Wolsky said last week.
Along with cheese and crackers, SA provided a sheet with information about the union building asking the parents to "be part of the effort to make a dream come tritie."
Although no direct request for money were made, a few parents thought the money for the building would come partly from them.
"I thought I'd come hear what the chancellor had to say about the student union since I'll probably have to help pay for it," one parent said.

However, many came to the meeting to show support for the building's construction.
"I want to know why the decision to build one has been deferred so long." another parent said. "I think you need a student center."

As Eggers was mingling with the crowd, a woman said, "I have a kid here and he deserves a student union!"

Jordan Dale, Student Association Assembly speaker, said he will reaign his position at tonight's Assemblymeeting because he wants to rum for SA president.
SA will hold presidential elections within the first 10 days of December, naid Dale Conen, SA vice president for aciministrative operations. A final date has not been set Cohen asaid.
Dale said, "I don't want to use my speaker position to run for president. By virtue of my office, I would lasve opportunities other candidates wouldn't have." He cited, for example, the publicity he receives as speaker.
According to the SA constitution, the tarian becomes the speaker if the office-is vacated, Cohen said.
SA parliamentarian Mark Collins said he will accept the position of Assembly speaker if Dale resigns.
"There's no doubt about it," Collins said.

Feat followed the solos with "Old Folks Boogies," on which they were aided by Micherel Wheeler, guitarist for the opening band, Kaz-Fuller. The three guitarists traded licks in a digplay that put the prententions "guitan armies" of banda like the Outlaws to shame.
The band closed the set with "Dixie Chicken," carried along by George's stage presence between long insturmental breaks. George ignited the crowd by ainging just a single line to one of his songs. He also briefly played the harmonica and initiated an impromptu dance step by the group further proof that they were truly en joying themaelves.

The crowd boogiee

The first encore was joined by John David Call, pedal ateel guitarist for Kaz-Fuller, formerly with Pure Prairie League. His playing accentuated the down-home feeling , of "Willin'," George's masterpiece. George, deapite a sore throat ( I'li try and croak my way through"), sang well, his hoarsenes only enhamcing the beauty of the song "Willin"" was interrapted by "Don' Bogart That Joint," then gave way to "Feats Don't Fail Me Now." The crowd was on ite feet and didn't bit down again.

When the encore ended, the stage lights were turned on, but the chargedup crowd would have none of that. The demanded another song and were rewarded with the Little Feat anthem "Tripe Face Boogie," The bank rocked while ita fana boogied their smeakera away.
It was a fantastic concert and everyone-band included- had a helluva lot of fun. And that's what rock and roll is all about.

Eric Kaz and Craig Fuller opened the show with a 40 -minute set of gently rocking love songs. Highliphts of their performance were Fuller's expressive vocals, the playing of Call and Wheeler and giest appearances by members of a band called Little Feat.

Liza live!

Entertainer Liza Minalli gave a superb heart-warming performance of song-and-dance routines Friday night at the Onondaga County War Memorial. Minell charmed the audience with songs that ranged from "Shine on Horvegt Moon" to Judy Garland's "Come In From the Rain." The highlight of the concert was Minnelli's rendition of "Cabarat." Drested in garter belts and high boota. Minnelli sang. danced and acted out several routines from the show.

EARN OVERs650AMONTH RICHT THROUGH YOUR SENIORYEAR.

If you're a junior or a senior majoring in math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer CandidateCollegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as $$ 650$ a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll receive an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost you thousands in a civilian school, but in the Nayy, we pay you. And at the end of the year of training, you'll receive a $$ 3,000$ cash bonus.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have qualified for an elite engineering training program. With unequaled hands-on responsibility, a $24,000 salary in four years, and gilt-edged qualifications for jobs in private industry should you decide to leave the Navy later. (But we don't think you'll want to.)

Ask your placement'officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus on Nov. 8-9, or contact your Navy representative at 315-423-5490 (collect). If you prefer, send your resume to the Navy Nuclear Officer Program, Code 312-B537, 4015 Wilson Blvd., Arlington, Va. 22203, and a Navy representative will contact you directly. The NUPOC-Collegiate Program. It can do more than help you finish college: it can lead to an exciting career opportunity.

Sun greets Mom and Dad  "I don't know what you mean when you talk  alma mater and his daugher Caroline, a about the rotten Syracuse weather-I come up in September, November and May and it's alwaye beautiful!"

"Mom-Dad, takeme out to eat; I need to have some kind of real, easily identifiable food.."
"Let me drive, please...it's been months since Ive been behind the wheel."
The sounds of students and their parents rang through the bright, clear, fall dayn this weekend as they exchanged happy greetings introduced friends and family and hurried around campus.
The Syracuse University Bookstore was mobbed as people scouted for SU paraphernalia.
Many people took advantage of the variety of activities going on. Watson Theatre was jammed wich jazz enthusiasts enjoying the sound of the SU Jazz Enaemble. Othere went to see what one parent calied the play in the cag tle," or the Goon Show in Crouse College.
Saturdays game with Pitt was not the un contested landslide that was expected. And the effort put out by the Orangemen was fueled by the staunch support of the more than 26,000 fans.
Joel Banker, 1949 SU alumni, was visiting his freshman.
As he atood on the sidelines of the game munching a hot dog and watinhesg the team lose, he said, "This is just the way I remember the sames when I was here. Of course, there's been some great teams since then.
Mr. and Mrs. Jim Rendein said they came from Tulsa, Okla, to see their son. However, he was at home studying for a physics exam oo he would be able to go out to dimner that night.
After the football game, the Student Center was packed. The wine and cheese was gone by the time Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers arrived to chat with parents.
Later that evening, Archbold jumped to the sounds of the SU Jazz Enwemble- The Iarge crowd danced and drank and was entertained by Henny Youngman.
However, not all parents and students atayed glued together the entire weekend. There were those who weren't too happy to see Mom and Dad on their turf.
One student strolled by Heradricks Chapel on the way to the game Saturday, telling those on the chapel steps, "If anybody sees two old people wandering around, they are my parents. Tell them I'm at the game.'

Voters go to polls to decide elections  By Mark Sullivan

Onondaga County reaidents and voters around New York state will go to the polls today to decide several statewide and local raciea:
If the race for governor, a Gannett-Newaday poll released over theiweokend showed Governor Hugh Carey leading Republican challenger Perry Duryea, state assembly minority leader, by nīig percentage points. Earlier polls had shown Carey trailing Diñyea, but Carey stepped up his campaign and now seems on the verge of being reelected.
Should Duryea lose, it would be the firat time in 17 years he has not held an elected government position:
Fin other statewide races, the Democrats are faring well. Harrison J. Goldin is leading Republican Edward V. Regan in the state comptroller race and Robert Abrams is running far ahead of Republican opponent Michael Roth for Louis Lefkowitz's vacated attorney general's post.

Interest group gives refunds

By Jexry Zrameli
Two hundred and forty-two students will receive refunds froments will receive refunds contribution to Byracuse Univeraity's chapter of the Univergity s chapter of the New York Public Interest Research Group.
But the $$ 726$ in refunded money will not affect the sroup's budget, said Joe Salvo, one of NYPIRG's regional onordinators.
The refunded money will not affect the NYPIRG's budget tecause the group anticipated the number of refunds.
"We always have a sense of our financial base," Salvo said. He added that the number of refunds is about the Nyme as in past years.

Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers will give out about 12 awards in April recognizing academic achieveinent at Syracuse University, said Jim Naughton, Student Association vice president for academic affairs.
"We want to recognize the achievement, not the persón," Naughton said.
Faculty and students are eligible for the citations. The selection of winners will be based on outstanding academic merit in teaching or reaearch.
A committee of four faculty members, two undergraduates and one graduate student will choose the award recipients.

Eggers will choose the committee members from a list com piled by Naughton, Ned Harria, Graduate Student Organization president, and John J. Prucha, vice chancellor for academic af fairs, Naughton said. Each member will serve a one-year term.

The awards committee will accept nominations from the entire SU campus. Outstanding recommendations will be researched by committee members. Final decisions will require a two-thirds vote of committee members, Naughton aaid.

Around the world, more people tune in reruns of Borianza tham any other show.

In Syracuse, "Bowling for Dollars" is number one in the ratings.

Banality reigns.
If the world is to be destroyed, it will not. be from nuclear attack, an energy shortage, a new ice age or killer bees. It will be from banality. More than any other ideology, banality is the biggest threat to democracy. America is not alone; there is just more freedom and encouragement to be banal here - it is more profitable.

Here banality is respected and rewarded. The chairman of American Telecommunications, $\mathbf{H}$. Marcheschi, recently saluted the freedom to pursue the lowest common denominator: "A few years ago, AT\&T showed its products in a Moscow exhibition, and the Associated Press wired cow exhibition, and the Associated Press wired back a picture of a beautiful little Rusbian girl with long black pigtails, holding one of our Mickey Mouse telephones. Her countemance was that of indescribable joy," the chairman said.
"On.seeing the picture, it occurred to me that the Mickey Mouse telephone could never exist in Russia or in any other country that is not free. As trite as it may seem to some, the opportunity to manufacture a Mickey Mouse telephone and the opportunity to own one, and thereby paradoxically achieve social good, may very well be the essence of what America is really all well be the essence of what $A$ about," the chairman said.
Freedom to be banal. It is a frightening Election tray message thitia great revolution and struggle for free thought has been reduced to a lump of plastic with two black ears and a dial tone.
Few recognize the enshrinement of mediocrity, and the loss of quality for expediency. When Alexander Solzhenitsyn criticized America at Harvard's commencement, he was labeled a "bewildered foreigner." Almost every newspaper columnist stood up to defend the ticky-tacky carnival that is America But George F. Will supported Solzhenitsyn. He recognized the flaw in our political tradition that says everyone should be free to pursue their own interests:-
"Modern politics emphasizes the sameness, not the diversity of people," Will wrote. "It seeks to found stable societies on the lowest, commonest, strongest passion; self interest that is tamed by being turned to economic pursuits.
"In such societies, law does not point people towards elevated lives," he continued. "The law's only purpose is to organize and encourage a taming materialism," he wrote.
"Such a society asks and receives little selfrestraint and civic spirit, and produces what Solzhenitsyn calls 'An atmosphere of moral mediocrity' paralyzing man's noblest impulses," Wiil wrote-

The atmosphere of moral mediocrity impinges upon us, more than it ever has in any other civilization.
The American citizen, as Fortune magazinè once noted, lives in a state of siege from dawn until bedtime: "Nearly everything he sees, hears, touches, tastes, and smells is an attempt to sell him something . . to break through his protective-ahell the advertisers must continuálly -hock, tease, tickle, or irritate him, or wear hiris down by the drip-drip-drip or Chinese water torture method of endless repetition. Advertising is the handwriting on the wall, the sign in the sky, the bush that burns brightly every night."
If business was elevated to a religion in the 20 , then advertising is America's current ' 20 s , then advertising is America's current secuiar relgion. It is a philosophy that could be And every night, prime time, it is pushing forth on its latest frontier: "Feminine Deodorants." It won't be long before we are treated to diagrams, models and comparison tests as with every other product. Soon women will be stopped in supermarkets for television testimonials. With proper repetition, what was private will shortily be public and profitable.
Banality has not only engulfed our culture but our landscape as well. We have "regional banality." Fast-food franchises spread across the horizon, making one part of the country similar to another. Regional differences are being reduced to the difference between the plaster-of-paris Alamo design of a Taco Bell and pheimitation colonial of the ice cream stand, gas station, post office or bank. And always present in each of them is the cute lilting of muzak, leveling any song to whining and plucking strings. It is a disordered landscape we are familiar with. "This is the kind of city that the aesthetics of economics makes; a tawdry, formless limbo of hamburger joints, discount stores, parking lots, matchbox houses, cheap office buildings, automobie salesrooms, jaring signs and disruptive highway spaghetti. It is the environment of expediency, wrote Ada Louige Huxtable, architecture critic for The New York Times.
That could be a description of East Genease Street, Jerich o Turnpike on Long Island, or the suburbs of Los Angeles. One part of America looks like another. Always just ahead is the expected; over the horizon waits a Holiday Inn that looks and smells exactly like the last one the traveler left hundreds of miles behind. A bewildering Deja Vu: banality.
Foreign shores do not hold much hope. Many travelers have returned from Paris or Tokyo after seeing the MacDonald's there. The very reason they went there is reduced by a form of regional banality. "If you want to see what the world will look like-one day, look at America today," one traveler once remarked.
In the pursuit of profit, banality sells, and the only way to sell more is to be more banal and to cultivate mediocrity. This encourages the downward competitive spiral called The Law of Continuing Bottorns. To produce the most banal product becomes an unattainable goal. So product becomes an unattanable

You may walk out of a movie theater one night and say, "That was the worst fim I've ever seen." But, withina month at least, you will be walking out of another theater, realizing that you found something even worse. The best comes along now and then, but the worst is always to come.
So it won't be long before we see commercials for a recently created frozen food product: frozen MacDonald's. So you save the fuss and bother of going out to a fast-food restaurant.
On the commercial; a restall boy will look up from his plate across the dinner table to his mother. "That was so good, ma, it tastes just like real fast food.":
But, was fast food ever real?

Although his dynamic qualities are axhibited in his active role at Uaiveraity Senate Open Forumb and as the leader of the faculty anionization effort, the unassuming professor of economics takes a modest view of himself. Tussing denied that he is the driving force behind unionization. "It"s not myself alone," he said, noting that a broad interest in the movement is necessary. He movement is necessary. He added that he was chosen as chapter president because "I had to take my turn.
His interest in SUgoes back 20 years to when he was a graduate student of economics at SU. He received his undergraduate degree from San Francisco State College. After receiving his graduate degree from SU, he went on to teach at Washington State University. He began teaching at SU in 1966 and has been inolved in AAUP ever since-Even if there wereno AAUP, Tusaing observed, "I probably, would still be making waves."

Tussing calls himbelf an ac tivist by nature. He has a definite feeling toward the utndent apathy which seems to be prevalent-on today's cam. puses and commented, "I'm morry about it.
He said he thinks apathyis a sign of "a decline in social orientation," and said that it in probably partly becauge of a alack in the economy Students are campeting for jobs by pursuing mostly vocational programs, Tussing said.
A drastic change in the climate of universities from the late 1960 s and early 70 s in evident, he said.
Campuses were "a bat tleground for change then." he maid. He noted that through military research and programs, the Vietnam war was produced by the universities.
Tussing said he believes there is less military research and leas abuse of university programs by the Central Intelligence Agency today than there was in the 1960 s . "I hope that's true, but there's also a lot less activism," he said, adding that colleges have "taken one atep back toward the ivory towera."

Tusaing said he believes the solution to apathy is just a question of getting the right is sue that combines the needs of of selfy with a certain amount of belf-intereat. "No one's entirely altruistic.'
When atudent activism made national news and stimulated social reform, Tussing was fighting for students rights.

In the late 1960 s and early 70s, students tended to be volnerable to oniveraity discipline for their radical actiona, he axid. He worked to reduce reprimands and dioCipline against activist atudents whose educations and careers were at atake because of their actions and beliefa.

The whole country ower sratitude to the studenta of those changing times, Tuasing said, and he thought it was his role to help those students when they were in trouble.
Although those who attend University Senate meetings know Tussing for his candid commente on tenure policy, Tuasing is best known for his efforts to unionize the S faculty.
He said one reason he is pushing for unionization is because it wodid increase the role faculty members would play in formulating university policy.
He said he-thinke that Chancellor Melvin A. Eggera; John J. Prucha, vice chancellor for academic affairs; and Clifford L. Winters Jr., vice chancellor for ad"ainistrative operrations, uase "gecretive behavior" to control the decision-making process. This process works to "the exclusion not only of the faculty but alao of academic deans," he said.
Tussing said that the three administrators "have a fear of faculty, a distrust of faculty.it's something that I semse." He said the three may believe that if faculty members were given more of a role in univer sity policy, the faculty would

Secretary organizes staff unionization fight  By Troy Corley  officials. They can't promise

At first glance, Nancy Klein looks quiet and reserved. She smiles a warm but mhy greetngediate sense that she's one person on campus not about to be intimidated.
Klein, a secretary for Syracuse University's sociology department, is leading the fight for supporit staff
Klein is résponsible for coordinating the union organizational meetings. Held during Klein's non-working hours, the meetings are usuahy off campus because ol she said.
"I've heard it's been tried before on this campus, but it's never gone this far. I've been told that people were too afratd to talk about unions on this campus. At least we've got some people willing to come out in the open," Klein said.

Klein, 26, is married and has no children: Before coming to SU two years ago, bhe worked as a secretary at North weatern University in Evanston, Il., for two years.

The pay wan low as it is at most universities, but not as low as it is here. Pecple were actually happy with their jobs there," she recalled.
Klein said ahe initiated a drive for unionization at SU in response to what ahe believer to be a lack of concern for the support staff.

Accorting to Klein, a former secretary wrote a letter to the Daily Orange in February 1978, voicing her concern that asnow warning had been issupport etaff' had not been allowed to leave.
"The administration said it wouldn't gnow and eventually it didn't," Klein said. "The administration made a big jolke becretaries were penalized for secretaries were penalized for Drummond explained- the organization of the service agency as a "dichotomy." The Human Services division includes counseling programs day care programa, and programs which provide for transient people with no place to gotabilitation Program involves the rehabilitation of men with drug-related problems.

Among the benefits offered by the Human Services. division are the Friendship Hovise, a home for emotionally disturbed adolescent girls, several day care centers for chilaren of varied age groups, an -emergency home for tative Service Prompron tative Service Program. in whikers go to homel and in workers go to homes and involve parents in keeping keeping their children out of keeping their children out of Dr Drummond also described plans for a home forrunaways. The Balvation Army fias received government funding to provide a place for some of the 40,000 runaways in New York state. The eight-bed home, which is scheduled to open in April, will provide a warm, comfortable atmosphere for runaways to get their heads together and reevaluate their values," Drummond said. The home will have a staff of psychologists and sociological social workers to help the runaways, he added. In addition, the organization sponsors a camp, for "hard-core city children," he said. Located 15 miles from Watertown, the camp has a population of about 85 children for oneweek periods during the course of seven weeks. The camp offers a reprieve for parents and gives the children an opportrunity to interact with trained professionals in a safe, experimental setting; Drummond said.
The Human Servicea division receives funding from sovernment contracts, the United Way and internal income.

The Adult Rehabilitation Program, however, is self-sup-porting- Drumond said that there are 60 men with alcoholor drug-related problems currently living at the rehabilitation center on State Street. The men collect, sort, repair and distribute furniture, clothing and books to one of the five Salvation Army atores in the Syracuse area. Profits from the reale of the items are "plowed back into the service" to provide the men with food, housing, medical care and treatment.

The ultimate aim of the program is to put the men back into the mainstream of society without furtier help from the program." Drummond said.
Salvation Army stores are very popular with Syracuse University students, Drummond said. One store employee said she noticed a lot of students in the stores right before Halloween. However, the vintage clothing at moderate prices has wide appeal throughout the year.

The stores' furniture is even more popular. Sophomore Dan McGanty and his roommates decorated their Watson suite with a couch and chair in matching maroon velour, which different stores.

Faculty mulls union

By Carl Johnson
The Faculty Assembly, the governing body of the Syracuse University chapter of the American Association of University Professors, will begin consideration today of a proposal to unionize full-time SU faculty members.
Dale Tusing, SU-AAUP president, said it will probably take two meetings to reach a decision on the proposal.
Tussing aaid three considerations are before the Assembly The first is the platform itself," he said. The second con sideration, the main issue, is "whether we're going to go ahead" with the move toward a faculty union. He Baid the third consideration is whether to distribute cards among faculty members giving them the option of naming AAUP as their bargaining agent.
At least 30 percent of the faculty must aign the cards before the National Labor Relations Board can set up unionization elections, but Tussing said he wants "a clear majority" before elections would be held.
The unionization move would include all full-time faculty except department heads and College of Law faculty members. NLRB has classified department chairmen as ad. ministrative personnel, while the law school's faculty votad fast year to act as its own bargaining unit.
Tussing said the move toward unionization is to gain more decision-making powers for the faculty. He aaid the SU administration has become "centralized and authoritarian," noting that the faculty had no participation in long-range planning, such as formination of the university bndget.
Tugaing alto expects higher and more evenly distributed salaries fhould the faculty members umionize.
The faculty attemptsd unioniring in 1973 . Although 51 percent of the factity toned the anthoristation cards, the 1 ys year wait betvereer the qigning and the votinis resulted in defeat Insming said. fis

A Step Forward

After the teacher reviewed the syllabus, one 'student was introduced as having an "announcement." He stood up and faced the auditorium filled with over 200 strangers. "I havea problem with my eyes," he said. "I need people to come and read for me
The handicapped are subjected to the most cruel. and the least publicized, forms ofdiscrimination. In coping with the problems posed by being blind, deat or crippled, they face enormous attitudinal and architectural barriers.
From having to announce their dianbilities to strangers on the first day of class, to staire that block buildings offimits to people in wheelchairs, the handicapped are robbed of their righis to live as independent individuals. Even well-intentioned drives too often focus on the handicapped as objects of pity intstead of people who need nomore pity intstead of people whoneednomore than what every one else takes for granted: to get in and out of buildings and facilities, to be free to seek knowledge unimpeded and to be reapected as people.
The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 was one attempt to open up many institutions to handicapped people. The law stated that all institutions receiving federal funds must be accessible to the handicapped. It was not unil 1977 that this law was given the impetus of a deadline: by 1980 , all buildings in such institutions must have completed the necessary rennovations.
Though the law was born of people who cared, it has not been followed up by people who work. There are no provisions anywhere in the law stating that renovations must be checked by federal inspectors. In addition, since ederal inspectors: In addion, ybuy the origill jaw was "clarifications" periodically cgaxd than alarify the problema cone ather than clayify the problems confronting the institations in their enovation projects.
At $S U$, many of the same problems plague attempts to eliminate barriers for the handieapped. An aura of mmbiguity shronds atternpta to solye these problems. Becanoe of the Right to Privacy Act, SUU cannot ask a student on any form whether or not he or ahe is handicapped. Unlese the tudent volunteers the information, there ure no records of his handicap and no list of names available for other han dicapped students if they wish to talk with someone with a similar problem If lists of blind students wereavailable sighted students could call one number and volunteer their reading services instead of answering numerous want ads and in-class appeals.
In fact, there is no office or organization in the university which deals solely with the special situations of the handicapped. Nor is there an orientation program geared toward orientation program geared toward helping handicapped students
Presently, Jane Myde, coordinator of Student Pergonnel Service handle the counseling the counseling needs of handicapped students. Her office is located in Steele Hall. Three fights of stairs separate her from the students who seek her help. Though Alpha Phi Omega re quested that an elevator be installed to transport disabled atudents to the office, only the shaft has been built, and is now filled with boxes, a chair and a coat rack.
Some renovations, as a result of HEW's legislation, have been completed at SUl and other projects are in the works. Doorways and bathrooms are being widened to accommodate wheelchairs, ramps are being installed and some light switches and telephones are being lowered. But caring mast be manifested in forms other than concrete. An organization ahould be formed to help handicapped atudents share their problems and suggestions; an orientation program should be establiahed for handicapped aboula et SU. dependable aervice atudent at SU, dependable services phoulicized that momerisabied publicired so be tadead how hmadicapped atudeat be ured and hacicapped studeat know where to sind them. Too lons have the handicapped baen forced to demand rights to which they are enstitled. It whould be everyone's concern that buman beinge surefree to leara and live in sbe academic enviromment with rímity and ease.

Who äre the handicapped today? Why everyone in some wayIt could be jealousy or pride Orprejudice or greed we hide: These are some handicaps we wear In our hearts or minds somewhere; We are accepted where we go. But what about those who are blind, Or halt, or deaf, should they not find An open door that smys, "Come in'"
And folds to cheer them on to win? Acceptance or approval mayBe all the help they need today. In us they put their faith and trust Can we be less than fair and just? Can we be less than fair and just?

THE LAWS: Disabled

By Magaly Olivero
A long-hidden minority is slowly forming into the nation's civil rights movement of the 70 .
This time the protesters are the 35 to 40 This time the protesters are the are physically handicapped. Their demands are simple: equal job opportunities, access to buildings, the chance to go to the schools of their choice and the right to live as independent individuals.

Exciting things are going on now," said Douglas-Biklen, director of the Center on Human Policy at Syracuse University. "People are beginning to realize that handicapped people have special needs. People are finally responding."

Federally funded institutions have until June 3, 1980, to meet federal stanfiled by Dec 3,1977 .
Syracuae Uniyersity's transition plan is intended to promote "the students and employees; to provide a barrier-free physical environment of representative diverse settings for a consistent, dependable level of support activities.
Yet the vagueness of the new laws and the cost of meeting federal standards prevent many universities from chitectural and attitudinal barriers. Many institutions are nót sure what 'The handicapped students are pleased about the changes but they were expecting it. They are aware of their rights.'

Response has come in the form of federal legislation: The Rehabilitation Act of 1973 prohibited federal agencies and contractors from discriminating against the handicapped and mandated affirmative action plans for their dated affirmative action plans for hiring and promotion.
Recently in the limelight is Section
504 of the Rehabilitation Act, man504 of the Rehabilitation Act, mandating opportunities for handicapped persons to participate in programs receiving federal support.
Although Section 504 was approved in 1973, the Department of Health. Education and Welfare has only recenimplement the legislation.
On April 28, 1977, HEW secretary Joseph Califano Jr. gigned into law a regulation requiring recipients of HEW funds to make employment and services accessible for the handicapped or face the loss of federal funds.
Biklen' views the law as "tools for social change and enforcement." In addition to being an incentive for organizations to become more conscious, of the needs of the handicapped, the law reinsorce in "People have something to back them up now the said. They know the law behind them."
is expected of them and $\cdot \cdots$ federal government is providing little help.
For. instance, once the transition plans were completed and sent to Washington, D.C., it was discovered that no official office had been designated to review the plans, said Steven Schroeder, SU coordinator for barrier-free design. Others have complained that no federal inspection will follow the June 1980 deadline. Institutions will only be inspected if a complaint is filed.

As the discrepancies increase, so do the revisions issued by HEW.
"HEW is still issuing clarifications," Schroeder said. "It is just making the process even more complicated. Things have to be defined better."

Hairy Peter, SU vice president for admissions and records, agrees with Schroeder. "Legialation was not adequately conceived or well thought out."
While federal agencies and lawyers While federal agencies and hawyers institutional heads are counting dollars Though elementary and secondary schools will get federal aid under a separate law that will mainstream handicapped students into public classrooms, no such aid will be available to higher education.
HEW estimates the cost of applying the new federal guidelines at about $$ 24$ billion by Sept. 1, 1978. Other estimates go as high as $$ 10$ billion.

The university is using funds from the general operations budget to pay for modifications. In 1976, the projected cost of the SU transition plan Peter presently estimates the cost at $$ 300,000$, not including the cost of making the renovated Hall of Languages barrier free.
"Although no government aid is yet forthcoming," explained Peter, "we are going ahead with our plans in the hope that there will be some movement on the part."
'Exciting things are going on now.
People are finally responding'

Amid the confusion of dollars and definitione SU has been able to conyext some of its propoped plans into reality. A. thent renovated to include a wide bathroom and lowered light switches. The entriances and bathrooms at The Andrew C- Carnegie Library have been widened and a ramp ha added to one of the entrances.
The renovated Hall of Languages is expected "to thave the best hanasaid Peter, "but it is not mandated by Section 504. To my understanding the intention to install the elevator is ntil yet available."

The university installed a lowered telephone in the lobby of Steele Hall in place of the elevator. Inrtead of being eble to enter thi office which in meant call the oflice from the loblby and wait motil a representative comee dowa to atterad them.

THE UNTVERSITY:

Coordinator assists handicapped

Jane Kyarcia Meermans
Jane K Myde's third floors office in Steele Hall can not be reached by elevator. Hyde is the coordinator of Student Personnel Services and directs handicapped services for Syracuse University.
How do students in wheelchairs and other mobility-impaired individuals reach her?
Presently, a campus phone hangs approximately four feet from the floor inmediately inside the ramp to the main entrance. A list of names and phone numbers of Steele Hall personnel hangs next to the phone.
Any mobility-impaired student or parent may telephone persone they wish to see. In some cases, Hyde goes to atudent residences.
"Except for the architectural inaccessibility, which is found on any campus more than 100 years old-and we are constantly modifying-I think Syracuse does very well," Hyde said. She attributed the success to a cooperative spirit among offices.

Jane Hyde. coondinator of student pevine sonnal servicess, helps disabled students edjust to the campus environment.

Hyde maintained that SU has had an individual to assist handicapped atudents "back to the early Fifties, at least."
Today, SU, like other colleges and universities acroas the nation, is adapting facilities in accordance with Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973.
According to Section 504, a school has three years to make changes and must have handicapped representatives on committees diacuasing those changes.
Hyde has worked with handicapped students at SU since 1967. She stressed, however, that her position is not restricted to disabled students.

'We're here to help'

"I serve in general to meet the needs of any student," she said. "We act as a clearing house for the student to put him in touch with other offices. We do facilitative counseling, not therapeutic'
She refers individuals to the health center for emotional or paychological counseling and works closely with the health center when necesasary.
Results of Hyde's efforts for handicapped students include a tape recorder repair service for blind students by the audio-visual department. Also, because of her efforts, mobility-impaired students can make arrangements with the Commons in Slocum Hall to use a meal card at lunchtime to avoid trips back to a dorm cafeteria. Hyde has also worked with Physical Plant to establish special par king lots and clear sidewalks in snowy weather.
Her work with the Office of Residential life reaulted in apartment renovation at Skytop apartments and in dorms. Adjustments included oversized doors and grab bars in individual bathroom stalls.
Yet when asked how many disabled students there are at SU, she shrugged and said, "I don't know.

Syracuse is prohibited to ask whether a student is handicapped before admission, as it would appear discriminatory and could deter students.
"If a student is mobility limited, it's desirable to mention this on the housing application," Hyde said. If a student does not mention a disability, Hyde will work to reassign him should problems occur once he is at SU.

There is no special oriontätion program for disabled students at SU, but according to Tina K. Foley, Information Center director, "we've never had any request by a handicapped student to participate in orientation.
Foley added, "We'll always make special arrangernents though, for either students or their parents to put them on the first floor of a dorm or take care of special transportation through other students or Security,
Both Foley and Hyde cited the New York state-gponsored Commission for the Visually Handicapped mobility training program is conducted on SU's campus, but it is open to any visually-impaired. college-bound student from New York
The program operates in conjunction with Upatate Medical College. Participating students live in dorms, take one college course, become acquainted with registration and cafeteria procedures and undergo mobility training.
"If a student has special needs, it's even moreimportant to check out buildings and the climate as well as academics," Hyde said.
She also noted that the Speech and Hearing clinic, vocational counseling and zcademic counseling are available to all students on campus.
Of special interest.to the handicappedis a services handbook acheduled to appear within a month. The handbook will include maps, accessibility charts and descriptions, and off-campus agency listings from child care to wheelchair repair
One way Hyde maintains'contact with disabled students is through a newsletter. She distributes the letter whenaver she feels there is a need, or when she receives information from the city of Syracuse or students:-

She said that handicapped students are more outspoken now than previously, and added that there has-been an upsurge in handicapped students attending college. dicapped than the national average of college students overall? she asid.

Assistance may be available through Hyde, but several boxes, chairs, a fan, and coat rack presently occupy the proposed elevator shaft on the third floor in Steele Hall.
One wonders when the storeroom will be cleared and an elevator installed for the mobility-impaived students who want to reach that assistance.

Concentrafion and determination as he reads aloud from his reader.

The integration process has been a learning process for all, Beyer explained. "I was pleasantly surprised when the sixth grade class initiated contact with the autistic children. One of our school bullies turned out to be as gentle as a lamb. It was a good learning experience for the typical student."
The learning continues. Advocates of mainstreaming dream of the day that wheelchairs, Braille textbooks and audio equipment will be in every classroom. But the hope of acceptance is more important. ## THE STUDENTS: Group needs members

By Marcia Meermans
Last fall, Syracuase University students Jay Leventhal and Jeff Crawford tried to establish an organization for disabled students. Membership was never consistent, usually sevien or eight individuals were involved.
This fall, Crawford is somewhere in Califormia and the organization consists of three or four members.
' 'It's not really together. It's not a group," said Leventhal, who is blind.
"It's really frustrating because we've got lota of good ideas, but because of the right of privacy we can't get names of disabled students," he continued.
The organization is designed to serve people with an types of disabilities. Leventhal said that persons recently involved included an individual in a wheelchair, blind students, deaf studenta and a student with an artificial leg. He suggested that persons with learning disabilities, diabetes and epilepsy and should consider the organization because they are legally classified as disabled, too.
"It's partly a social organization to meet others and talk about the problems of a handicap and how it affects you academically," Leventhal said.
"We want to help new students adjust and-to help them pick courses if needed," he said.
Leventhal would like the group to ee tablish an information conter for disabled students but said it needs a location or an office. He could not sugerest a location, and said one would have to be worked out with the administration.
"We can't ask the administration for help until we show there are enough interested students," hè exid.

Although the sroup does not have a faculty adviser, Jane K Hyde, coordinator of atudent personnel aervices and handicapped aervices at Syracuse University, tries to assist the organization. In the past, she has included notices of the organization's meetings in a newsletter distributed to handicapped students at SU.

Despite past failures, Jay Leventhal stil feals an orgonization for disabled students can materialize.
""To some it's a job- some readers get to be friends and some friends get to be readers." he added. "It probably takea tne twice as long to do my work," he said.
Tape recordinge of textbooks can be ordered, but delivery takes six to eight weeks. "Tapes are hard to get. You don't know when profs are going to switch know wher " he said.
Overall, Leventhal is satisfied with Over, Leventhal is satisfied with SU academically, geographically.
'I want to get this started but I can't do it myself'

Hyde can send letters only to students who have made her aware of their disabilities. The university is prohibited to ask whether an individual is disabled; thus, the newaletter and disabled student organization information reaches limited number of students.
"There are a couple hundred (disabled students) tr quote Mrs. Hyde," Leventhal students) tr quote Mrs. Hyde, Leventhal said. "Yet nobody responded to the said. "Yet:
"I want to get this started, but can't do it myself," he said. "I don't have time to go around and survey, but I would like to hear from people. I would like their opinions why or why not they want or don't want a group," he said.
Leventhal spent a semester at Queens College in New York City where there were approximately 150 members in an organization for disabled students.
One difference between Queens College and Syracuse University is the registration process, he said. "At Queen, it's easy, it's computerized. Here you have to play run around the gym and go to four buildinga. I can't do that myself," he said. Leventhal does not resent it when ask for help depending on his mood.
"I like to be helped across the street," he said, otherwise/he must listen to the movement of the cars
Readers are another form of assistance. He hires people through the work-atudy program to read his textbooke to him
"I have one or two readers each night and sometimes znother in the afternoon. get money from the state to pay readers, but it'a hard to pay people minimum wage and not run out of moneg by the and of the semestex," Leventhal eaid.
"This campus isn't very accessible. Hall of Languages used to be a main reference point. Now you have to go all the way sround," Leventhal said
"DellPlain is the only dorm accessible to wheelchair students, and I think very few university buildings have ramps - Huntington Beard Crouse, Newhouse and the library," he said.
Leventhal, a 20 -year-old jupior, majors in paychology, but enjoys radio work, too. He was in charge of a radio station at a camp last summer and has doneshows on CAmple
"I like. radio because nobody can tell who you are. You're just another voice in the night," he concluded.

Syracuse whips  Cibona

By. Mike Stanton
Roosevelt Bonie palled on his inirt. rubbed some chapatick on his lipa, and lashed a wide, satisfied yrin.

II ranlly enjoyed myself out. there tonight," he said, sounding mone like someñe who had spent the evening dancing than the center- who had helped SU thrash Cibona of Yugoslavia, 121-57.
Bouie, thet famous center with the auperb defense and the phantom offense, hustled the visiting Yugoslavians for 15 points, 13 in the first half when the game was really won.
Six other Orangemen scored in double figures, while a stunning SU backcourt quartet combined for 68 points. Meanwhile, a tenacious Syracuse defense characterized by Eddie Moss geven steals, took control of a seven steals, took control of a aloppy first half by both teams to give the Orangemen an ingurmo Leading the acoring parade for the Orangemen in the first half was the surprising Maris Cubit, the junior trangfer from the Univeraity of Vermont who was supposed to lead SU in nothing more than most minutes on the bench.

Instead, Cubit played like a madman, diving wildly after loose balls and scoring 10 of his 13 points in the first half, including six consecutive points before halftime.

In the mecond half, it appeared the Yugoalavians had already departed for the negt stop on their 11-game American tour-Morgantown W. Va. Through the first. 11 minutes of the second half, BU outscored Cibona 37-8.
The stait of the half looked like a rerun of the first half as Marty Headd, who led all scorers with 16 pointa, atole the ball and shot in thefirst points of the second half.
Headd was assisted by SU's other starting guard, junior Hal Cohen, who scored 12 points on six-for-eight shoot ing and dished out five assists as well.
"I feel much more confudent than last year," Cohen observed. "I've gotten moreexperience and I feel more like a leader in the backcourt now lhat Robs (Kindel) is gone""
If Cohen is the leader, he has a fine.cast of followers in the backcourt.

We shot well outside, and that was the key," SU coach Jim Boeheim noted. "If all of our guards play like they did tonight, they will all play Rotating them keeps, them fresh and enthusiastic."
"I think the biggest surprise was Cubit," Boeheim said "Last year he never showed anything in practice, but this year he has, and that's why he played 80 much ( 16 minutes). Another pleagant surprise for Boeheim was the play of SU's three freshmen recruits in their collegiate debuta: Guard Ron Payton acored 15 pointar highlighted by a two frited dunit and somae dazzling inside moves, and alao impressed Boeheim with his ex cellent passing. Guard-turnedforward Rick Harmon, replacing thé injured Lonis Orr, passed for seven assists and grabbed eight rebounds, second only to starting corward Danny Schayea, nine rebounds, and forward Ed Gooding also moved well inside.

 The center in football is always one of the first players to be taken for granted. Buried among a wall of marnawaits orders from the hero, more commonly known as the quarterback.Even more obscure is the center who can snap the ball on the important extra pointa and potential game-winning field goals.

Spinney's superb execution and speed on his snaps have not gone totally unnoticed however.
${ }^{4}$ Look for theson of former Baltimore Colt All-Pro Art Spinney, named Steve to be draifted by the pros," a Baltimore sportswriter wrote in The Sporting News. "Currently a senior at Syracuse, Spinney has superb ac: anapping, a need for many teams."
But that chance of a profession tryout took a detour in practice the fourth week of this season as Spinney went down with one of football's most common injuries, torn ligaments and cartilage in the knee.
"You always hope that it won't happen, but you have to prepare youself for getting hurt," the softspoken Spinney said. "Surgery is associated with football."
Recruited originally aś a linebacker, Spinney saw little playing time as a freshman. But after the sizth game of the seasom, Spinney took over the mapping duties from center Bill Vavari.

New responsibilities were placed on Spinney during his sophomore year; as he started at linebacker and called the defennive signala.

UUTV to seek funds from SA

The University Union TV measage wheel has been running 24 hours a day since Oct. 3, but the station has not yet acquired funds for regular programing.
Hal Schlenger, UUTV general manager, said the possibility of regaining Student Association funding for the student-rurcable television station is on the agenda for the Nov. 20 SA meeting. UUTV funding was cut from the SA budget last April.
At the meeting, UU will present SA with five or six budget proposals In-an attemp $p^{*}$ to show what services can be provided Sehlenger said a possible source of UUTV funding is advertising: "We've-never advertised because we haven't had a definite viewership,", he baid. Because it is a non-profit organization, UGTV representatives are looking into the legalities of advertising before pursuing it as a source of funding. UUTV has a deficit of about $$ 200$, Schlenger said. Most of it is The bills were paid by UU but must be paid back if UUTV funding is acquired. If not, UU will absorb the deficit, Schlenger said.

UU will continue to lend money to UUTV for small purchases Fuchs said. The money comes from UU's contingency fund.
Plans are being made to seek donations from local merchants to keep UUTV from disbanding. To prepare for possible funding, Schlenger said, UUTV representatives are "seeing what we can do with each additional dollar.'
UU has invited several SA representatives to visit UUTV'a facilities next Wednesday afternoon to give them a first-hand view of what is being proposed, Fuchs said.
However, the message wheel will run for the rest of the semester regardless of whether or not UUTV receives funding, Schlenger gaid. The wheel provides the dining halls lunch and dinner menus, the next day's weather, upcoming campus events, sports scores, campus movie listings and public-service an nouncements.
The messages are updated twice a day and are accompanied by music from WAER-FM, Schlenger said. He added that UUTV's visual and audio quality has improved this year because of cable repairs. these improvements, along with the possible purchase gehare eteady viowiership heisaid.
Kel Aheady viewter Advisory Council is conducẗing a student poll to determine whether students want new televisions in the dorms. Schlenger asid the poll is not based on studentinterest in UUTV and therefore is completely separate from SA funding considerations.

GSO may end group funding  organizations to help them find alternate

A resolution to eliminate funding for specialinterest groups will be proposed at tonight's Graduate Student Organization Senate meeting, GSO President Ned Harris said. The meeting will be at $7: 30$ p.m. in Maxwell Auditorium
The Executive and Finance committers are introducing the regolution because the current funding set-up is unequal, Harris said.
Students in the four special-interest groups funded by GSO are derivina double benefits because they get back their student fee through their departmental allocation and through the special-interest group, he said.
Tha fowr crganizations now funded are Hillel, the Women's Center, the Gay Students As sociation and the International Students Organization.

Sance it is imposeible for GSO to furid every special-interest group on campus, Harris said, it has decided to eliminate all such funding.
sources of funding, he added.

Patricia Burak, ISO counselor, said "We are trying very hard to arrive at some equitable solution negotiated with GiSO which would include ISO in GSO's funding-because it serves a broader base of interest tham other groups.

Even if the resolution to eliminate funding is passed, no money would be taken away from any organization, because it has already been allocated, Harris esid. Instead, the resolution would declare these groups ineligible for future funding, he said.
Hillel, the Women's Center and the Gay Studenta Association each get $$ 100$, while ISO gets $$ 1,750$.
Harris said all four groups were allocated $$ 100$ during last year's Finance Committee budget hearings, but ait the Senate budget hearing the international students convinced the ing the international students c

Letters  Part-time profs

Tve heard and read a lot of negative commentary lately about part-time instructors undermining the academic integrity of Syracuse University. The most recent was Monday's DO editorial "Academic excellence: a full-time occupation." Personally, I am unable to understand what an instructor'memployment status has to do with his or her teaching ability.
In my case, three of my six classes are taught by part-time instructors. They are all excellent - energetic. sympathetic and enlightening. I might add, since English department part-timers seern to be coming under the most fire, that my English instructor is the finest I've had - here or at the college I went to before. In addition, this instructor schedules adequate time for ont-ofclass consultation and, in fact, encourages us to drop by his office.
Full-time profesaors and instruc cors teach my other three classes. My assessment of them, unfortunately, is less positive. One of them is fantastic, and another is adequate, but the third is terrible. Ihis instructor's disinterest in the atudents, monotone lectures and arrogant attitude have turned an interesting class into dullaville
I wonder if most of the people who oppose part-time instructors are the TAs, assistant professors and untenured professors hoping to get that elusive free ride and pot of gold and of the rainbow - ter
The attitudes and abilities of the part-time instructors I've come in contact with are beyond reproach As does that car-rental company, they try harder.

Iran in Intertwine: charges

To the editor:
The International Student Association Executive Board, which aponsors Intertwine magazine trongly resents Deam Marge's charges that Inturtwine's editor in a liar.
However, when he goes as far as to imply that Frank Scimone, the Intertwine editor, never interviewed him and actually fabricated quotes, we can only laugh.
It seems ridiculous that a dean must resort to such maneuvers in order to remove himself from an uncomfortable situation.
Marge said the quotes saying the alternative to the shah's rule is "having the country taken over by the mullahs" and "women going back to wearing veils," were excerpts from a Time magazinearticle. Scimone never questioned him on this alleged excerpt, nor has there ever been such an excerpt printed in Time magazine.

We believe it is unfortunate that Dean Marge got into "hot water" by expressing his personal opinion. Because of the current situation in Iran, the timeliness of his comments subjected him to the wrath of some Iranian studente

However, the dean should have the integrity to uphold his convictions instead of denying them and resorting to false accusations if not outright lies.

Striving for bad grammar

Syracuse University has a proud heritage of horrible architectura choices. It took one of the best aites in Central New York and dumped ight stories of bricks on it - Day Hyntan eirht-story brick wall faces the best view in the area They took a proper-looking Slocum Hall and tore the front steps off so that three-story-tall columns rest on two doors. They never put Slocum Hall in brochures.

It is a case of bad grammar Grarmmar gives us the rules to put sentences together properly; it is a logic that applies areas other than language. It applies to the campus: a specially designed environment or learning what has to go ógether in a certain way.
On opposite sides or the Quad there are two such forms of bad srammar.

The Hall of Languages, as it is being remodeled, has floors that meet midway at the windows. Not only is this bad architectural grammer, it will be dishonest. The Record, in one of its standard three picture layouts on the latest facet of the destruction, tells us "the overlapping of the windows with the new floors won't be obvious because tinted glass windows will disguise where the floors arehigher than the windowsills." The im portant thing, we are told week after week, is that the new HL will be 20 percent more efficient. It will be an efficient lie, a Victorian candy wrapper around a homogenized interior.
Across the Quad is another form of architectural dishonesty. The administration is walling up the Physics Building. The open patio was the only redeeming feature of its pillbox architecture. The vista it provided tied the Quad to the gym and that side of campus. It also was a good mingling area and an easy path to the Mount and to the forestry quad. But it is being walled up to create more windowless, closet sized classrooms, to make way for the offices that had to be moved out of the stadium

It is bad grammar, like floors meeting windows in the middle and cinderblock walls, it is an improper construction. It goes against the logic of the building.

These two construction projects are a preview of the next two projects. The stadium and the student union building will intensify the bigness of the campus, changing the grammar of how the campus goes together. The domed stadium will likely be the most visible building from anywhere on the "hill." At sunset the giant white pillow-like dome will cast its shadow over the Quad.

The union building's current plans are just a big, gaudy shell to huddle the bookstore and Food Ser vice together. There is little meeting space, little of the living room that the campus needs. It-has not been well thought out. The character of the campus will change when Winchell Hall is torn down to make way for the union. It is the last vestige of the 19 th-century Main Street feeling University Place used to have

In the next five or six years the campus will continue to evolve towards a more corporate and impersonal university. When we return for Homecoming Weekend in 10 years, the change will be as striking to us as it was for the alumnus who returned to find HBC on the Quad. "The serenity of the Quad has been destroyed by the World War II disaster of HBC," the alumnus said, and then summed up his feelings after other visits: HBC makes as much ar chitectural sense as Sadler Hall early hospital." He then cited the "imponderable effect of Bird Lib rary" and pleaded, "Please stop this defacing of the once-scenic and pleasant campus.

"We shape our buildings and thereafter they shape us," is Winston Churchill's familiar quote. The campus of the 1980 s will be a bigger, less personal, more corporate environment and the shape of education cannot go untouched.

Constant conference

Bureaucratic thinking is common to Syracuse University's administration, but when it inters down to Student Association, one must try to call a halt to it.
The most recent example of SA's bureaucratic thinking occurred at Monday night's Assembly meeting. The Assembly passed a resolution allocat ing $$ 1,000$ for a student leaders munication problems with other campus organizations.
What do you do when you have a problem? Hold a conference. Only a conference can adequately deal with a problem, the bureaverat would aay. Forget about trying to examine it on a day-to-day basia.

A conference costing $$ 1,000$ is not the solution to SA's problem, especially since SA's contingency fund is very low. Conferences are notorious for be ing long on rhetoric and short on solutions. There is no guarantee that it would get anything accomplished.
Instead of literally heading for the hills to discuss its problems, SA should take time out and assess them on a regular basis. If there is a problem in dealing with studen organizations-and many atudent organizations feel there is-SA should seek its input every day, not attend a conference over the weekend, drink a lot and then forget everything that was is scussed.

Byanilse Grogan Although residents of arder thit. the fromplained that the fire-preven torraystam in the cottage is inadequate, frials disagree.
Resident. Adviser Jennife Beatty said that the cottage which houses 27 residents, does not have an effective fire
But Harold E. Boyle, Syracuse University safety administrator said that although the cottage does not have a fire-warning syatem, it has a sprinkler system, which activates a bell when there is a fire.

The cottage received a certificate of compliance from, the Syracuse Fire Department on May 8. The certificate is issued to buildinge that pass the city's fire codes.

Boyle said the law does not require buildings that are equipped with sprinkler systems and inhabited by less than 50 persons to have fire alarms.

He also said that the cottage should have fire extinguishers on each floor. Boyle said the extinguishers were present when. the cottage was inspected in September or Oetober.

Only-Brian Wilson and thë Beach Boye can progress by regressing Mith their latest Boys have abendioned their Boys have abandoned their, attempts at new styles. and have reverted to their simple, melodic sound that brought the mid-sixties.

Although M.I.U. might not match the commercial success of the 1976 release 15 Big Ones, it will certainly outsell the 1977 . disgrace, The Beach Boys Love You, Artistically, M.IU. is a few steps above both these shallow releases.
Unlike 15 Big Ones, which was overloaded with material written by other artists, M.I.U. is almost completely written and produced by members of the Beach Boys.
Although there are two covered recordicigy; the other miaterial resembles vintage material resembles Beach Boy ballads.
MiLIU. gets off to a slow start. The first three cuts on side one all have weaknesses. Surprisingly, the opening Rhythm, is about a swinger at a disco. Although the cut is very lively, it is sung at such a high pitch that it might even drive Leo Sayer out of the room. Leo Sayer out of the Excellent vocal harmony is not enourgh to save "Come Go With Me," which is the weaker of the two covers.: Thinge go from bad to worse as that song is followed by "Hey Little Tomboy," perhaps the most pitiful song on the album.
Although the melody and a solid bacicground mixture of oohs and ahhs, tambourine and gleigh bells rtake it a nice tune, just the title reveals the yrics are going to be as deep and interesting as the description of the car engine in "409." And in fact they are: "I'm Borna teach you to ki, iss/ You're gonna feeljust like thi-i-is." Brian Wilson tosses salt on the wounds as he attempte to sing portions of the song- Wilson has not realized that his voice is shot, and rankes as one of the worst in the musie induistry.
Just when it seemis that the album is no more than frisbee material; M.I.U. breales into "Kona Coast", a semi-surfing song thint lavde Hawaii in the classic Beach Boymannerand is easily the best cut on the album.
After a pleasarit inWinson and brother Cerlon the keyboard, Mire twang aingsi It's been my secret pasaion to try it/In Cap tain Cook fashion I cou't Capit/ I warman sperd my winters on the Fonia conent my winters on the Konig coutt of Havoaii

"Kona Coast" combines the elements of perfect harmony, crackling Hawaiian guitar and a simple yet lively concept that places it in the same class as any ballad the Beach Boys have ever produced, including "Surfin" U.S.A;", "Surfin" Safan," or "Don't Worry Baby." The final proof that this song was not tossed together, like other Beach Boys songsin recent history, is the nostalgic manner in which the song ends. The song trails with the words and melody of the 1963 record "Hawaii" in a manner that can chill the spine of any Beach Boy devotee.
"Pnother excellent tune is rain whose title is its only weakness. This cut features a pounding piano, a moving beat and a touch of soul. As they have done ao often in the past, the Beach Boys have created a twist to the background vocals. The repitition of "pitter-patter" throughout the chorus is different, interesting and entertaining.

There are a few pleasant mellow cuts on M.I.U., in cluding "Winds of Change," "Belles of Paris" (violins, bells and Mike Love speaking French with a Hawthorne Cal. accent) and "Sweet Surnday Kind of Love."

The other cover and the first single from the album is Buddy Holly's "Peggy Sue." Carl Wilson's guitar leads the jumpy number that seemsto be moving in slow motion. Com pared to the original version or the Beach Boys' stage version the studio cut is a boring uninspired interpretation.
Certain songs on M.I.U. can be paralleled with cuts from the past few albums. These stale indications demonstrate that there is nothing leffin the musical mind of Brian Wilson. The better songs on M.I.U. prove that Wilson does not have to dig any deeper into the sands and surfs of his creativity than he did when he first ahowed the industry that a simple mesaage, with a pleasant melody and creative harmony, ia all that is needed to produce fine music.

In "late September, a piece of America's, past returned to magazine racks acroas the coluntry.

The nrat isaue of the new Life magazine marked the end of a six-year interest publication. For , general interest publication. For many, the rebirth of nostalgia, as the magazine aura of nostagia, as the magazine photographs-the familiar, flam photographo-the a good percentage of the people in the United States were brought up with Life in their homes," said Fred Demarest, chairman of the photography department at the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications. "It was a part of life. The nostalgic feeling certainly helped the first issue."
Juat as the times have changed. however, so has Life. Probably the most apparent difference is in the price per copy: $$ 1.50$ now, compared to 50 cents in 1972.
Another change is in the magazine' $B$ circulation. Life had a monstrous 8.5 million readers at its peak in 1969, and this' led to its downfall. High postal rates were a crippling factor, since mail subscribers made upalarge percentage of the readers. A full-page color advertisement in the magazine cost more than a prime-time minute on television, driving advertisers toward the larger TV audience or to less expensive but more effective specialized publications.
Publisher Charles A. Whittingham has promised not to let the new Life fall into the same gituation. A maximum circulation of 2 million is planned, and a full-page color ad will cost only onefourth as much as it did in 1969. Life's press :run for the first issue reached only 700,000 , leaving copies of the publication scarce.

Tagree with the people who say. we'll neven: Bee , the large, general interest maginginge wie did have, like Saturday Evening Postand Life,' said John Mitchell, chairman of the newspaper department at Newhouse. "I don't department at Newhouse. I don't aiming at, but if they can limit their circulation, they should be able to attract the advertisers.
"The general interest magazines interest in them, but because therewas no money- in them," Demarest said.
"The fact that Life continued with" there was always a market for it.
"Advertisers now see that it's not just important to see a product through'TV. There's a whole market that the advertisers had been missing." Demarest said. "You have a different philosophy of advertising in print. The current Life has a 10 t of quality ads."
Not only are the ads in the new Life eye-catching, the whole issue is at-tractive-a bit too attractive to suit Demarest's tastes.
"The first issue was splashy-it had to be to attract attention," Demarest said. "It lacks the depth of Life in its heyday.
will can't say this is what the new Life will be," he added. "It'a not a news magazine. They're not doing hard, spot news - you'can't do that with a monthly."
As a monthly publication rather than its old weekly, status, Life's focus may have changed. Just how long Life will remain a monthly is questionable, however, since another old magazine dinosaur, Look, will be dredged up as a weekly in January.

Demarest feels the competition between the two old rivals might force Life into a bi-weekly format.
"It needs to be a bi-weekly to fill the need for a photo-print publication," Demarest said. "I'd like to see more of the in-depth essays they used to run."
Newhouse magazine professor John Keats would like to see more of the old Life style, too. During his 25 -year career as a freelance writer, Keats has written for more than 40 national magazines, including the old Life.
"As a freelancer, I'm delighted Life's back-it's part of my market," Keats said. "I hope they pay as much as they did before. did before.
Keats said the old Life often featured research articles on social issues. "A good part of it was on top of the news," he explained."It was in the public air-"
Keats recalled an article he did on college dropouts in the 1960's. 'The research took three months out of my life, but Life made it worth your while., he said. "They paid me a very good wage, several thousand dollars."
The freelance market suffered considerably. Keats said, with the disappearane of Life and the other big.

general interest magazines. He estimated the demise of these publications cost him potential yearly earnings of as much as $$ 25,000$.

Whether freelancers will be able to count on Life and Look as a permanent market remains to be seen, but Demarest feels that their combined revival now may not be a coincidence.

The fact that Life and Look are emerging at the same time shows that likeones made studies and ahead with it," Demarest said.
Demarest feels Life's main competition will come from Look, not magazines such as People and Us that have cropped up during Life's absence.
"People reading those don't want any depth, just gossip," Demarest said. "You can read them at the checkout counter without even buying them. There's no parallel with Life."

There hasn't been ageneral interest publication of the Life/Look type since they folded," Demarest added.
After a six-year absence from the market, the revival of general interest magazines has truly brought the public back to Life.

Slick package, disco describe revived Life  By Howard Mansfield  It lacks the immediacy that its good photojournalism used to provide in

In a classic Doonesbury comic, Skip, a returned POW, is adjusting to the changes in the country. "Where's the latest issue of Life?". Skip asks. He stoically takes the news of its folding. "Oh, well, I'll watch Ed Sullivan," he says.
Skip would atill miss Life magazine if he saw the first two issues. The word that is next to this month's flag best deacribes the new Life: "Disco." Life magazine is a slick pacicage that features "beautiful people" stories

The first issue of life lacked a lead story. After a five-year absence, Life seems to have nothing to say to us, Its first two iasues have offered us atories about clothes designer Halston, disco, Mickey Mouse and a few international sicries that were reminiscent of the old Estife.

If Life seems to mise the target, it is because it is aiming at a new target. Life is aiming at a more bducated and urbane middleclass andience than it uned to, according to Charles Rubens uned to, according to Charies R , the advertising sales director.

The new Life is like the Halston it reported in its first issue: "Now 46 . Halston appears to have left Evanaville far behind. Like his Pexingese, Lindo, he zoes around in bavic black and all traces of back home twang have left his voice." Life, too, bias loat the midweatern twang, that made it an important part of American culture.
covering wars, revolutions or the birth of life. The issues now are mostly filled with pretty pictures, nōt ones that really report anything. The layout on the Shah of Iran's "Royal Retreat" in the first issue shows these flaws. No more than half a paragraph is given to discussing the problems of that country, which is today under martial law. Instead we read more about his great Dane, Beno, and the thorde of beautiful, bronzed guests" who "splash in the warm water and loll all day on the sun decks." In ita focus on this story, Life is politically myopic.
The most annoying aspect of thenew magazine is that advertising inter rupts the stories throughout. There is no gense of pacing in the magazine; ads and features zeem to have fallen together. An ad for J&B whiskey faces the niew Pope, and a two-pagespread of enormous, garish, red lipsupstages the articles near it. As one reader wrote: arlease send nue a scoreacard to help me distinguish between the copy and the commercials,"
If you miss Life maganine, you are better off trolling the shelves in the library for back iasuen. One reader summed up the problem: "Can't you give us a littio of that docomentary flavor that made us feel wre were right in the middle of the action?
Disco and Mickey Mouse: Is this all thernin to Lifo in America in the 1970 as?

Marshall St. meals offer dining variety

By John Ruxicka
When cooking in the dorm becomes tiring and the cafeterias are serving vunspineapple casserole for dinner, the best meal may be found in the Marshall Street-South Crouse, or the Westontt Street, area. The opening of several new eating establishments is allowing students to chooae foods that range from seafood to balade.
Sutter's Mill. located in the alley just off South Crouse Avenue, made its debut sevien weeks ago. According to manager Dom Pagano, business has been excellent, most of it is coming from atudenta during the evening hours. Waiting lines to get in are commion. especially on weekends. Sutter's Mill features a relaxed atmosphere, an excellent sound system, and a cafe-style menu. The fare includes soups, burgers with ten different toppings, and a variety of sandwiches, salads and seafood.
Opening within two weeks on South Crouse will be Faegan's Limited, owned by Ted and John Dellas who also own Vareity Pizza. According to John Dellas it will provide "that touch of class that Syracuse University students deamye." Faegan's will try to provide a New York City atmosphere, something which is currently lacking in the Marhall Street area. Their mentu will feature salada, homeriade soups, quiches and mpecial sandwiches.
Conatruction is just beginning on a new McDomald's complex, to be buit on Adams Street, accoss from the Univerity branch of the Marine Midland Bank. The complex will contain a two-story Nill contain a two-story cienal shops and stores. The several shops and stores. ## German 'new wave' film has nothing but suspense FILM ON CAMPUS: "The American Friend, Film Forum. In German and English, with subtitles.

By Steven Titch

Wim Wenders' "The American Friend" is a suspenseful film that deals with the alientation and isolation of individuals in modern society While the film excells as a thriller, it falls short of effectively conveying its theme
The film is about a loner named Ripley (Dennis Hopper), who, by his own confession, does nothing but "make money and travel a lot." Ripley, who is marginally connected with the Mafia, is visited by a friend who wants him to cill an American gangster. Ripley turns down the offer, but suggests to his friend that he ap proach Jonathan Zimmerman (Bruno Ganz), a oniddle-class picture-frame maker, who Ripley has just met. Ripley suggests him because Zimmerman is suffering from a terminal blood disease and may want the money for his family
Shortly thereafter, Zimmerman is contacted and decides to commit the murder, plus a second one for the Mafia.
Although it may sound grotesque, the murder scenes are the highlights of the film. Wenders uses Hitchcockian devices such as high-angle shots and fast-cutting sequences to build up suspense, but adds variations of his own, preventing direct imitation of the master's style.
The first murder occurs in a Paris subway station. Zimmerman, however, bungles the attempt to shoot his victim on a crowded station platform and panics. He chases his victim through the underground passageways of the subway system before sloppily killing his victim on an escalator in another station.
The second murder is even more high-strung, taking place on a speeding train and full of Unfortanately, the film's minpense is its only aset. Development of characters, per formances and themes are sorely lacking.

Ripley, the most important character, is left vague and often misunderstood. The viewer never finds out what motivations fuel his never finds out what motivations fuel his isolation and his secretive actions. Hopper's performance is uneven, further adding to the cloudiness of this character. Many other Characters in the film befall the same fate. Only Zimmerman is allowed to develop. Ganz is very convincing as the moral man turned killer. In both murder sequences. Ganz looks scared as aell.
In addition to its other problems, the film's alienation theme does not come across because the director relied heavily on Ripley's characterization to express it. But because of Ripley's poor character development, the theme becomes lost and the film itself often becomes muddled to the point where the viewer doesn't know what is going on.
"The American Friend" is typical of a socalled "new wave" of German films, which for the past few years has been highly overrated and unnecessarily hyped. The German new wave which deals with the loss of the in divudal's identity in a highly technological divudal's identity in a highly technological society, has much potential, but until now- as demonstrated by The American Friend
One should hesitate, nonetheless, before disregarding the film as an art form. Wenders deals with a significant issue, but fails to make his point. His ideas, as well as his film style, show promise; his ability to create suspense is indicative of this. With more work, Wenders may eventually move into his own mode of filmmaking. But for now, as evidenced by "The American Friend," it is obvious Wenders and the new wave still have a long way to go.

UJB reports drop in number of cases

By Tony Gallote
Thenumber of caises brought before the University Judicial Board has dropped about 50 pording to Sean Byrne, chief justice. UJBhandled approximately hree to five cases a week last year. To date, the board is hanweek.
None of the 12 UJB justices None of the 12 UJB justices had any explanation for the decreased number of cases.
UJB, which meets every Tuesciay night, reviews all disciplinary cases involving undergraduates. UJB's decisions or "sanctions" are final unless overturned by the Office of Student Affairs.

However, only one decision has been overturned by student affairs in the past eight years, and then only at the request of the justices, Byrne said.

Byrme said UJB is "often thought of as a disciplinary committee because of the way we operate. But we are not. UJB is an institution of learning to the students who get themselves in trouble."
UJB also is a "watchdog" of the Student Association, acting as a 日afeguard against misconduct by SA members.
In rendering decisions, In rendering decisions, board members try to be objective, Byrne said. One justice stated, "we try to keep a low stated, "we try to keep a low profile on campus, to stay profile on campus, to stay ive.

UJB comprises 10 justices, two alternate juatices, an associate chief justice and a chief justice, chosen by a Justice Selection Committee.
A justice can be removed from bis position only if he misses more than three hearings without excuse, or if he breaks a university regulation and is unanimously voted out of UJB.

Big Bucks' invofived

Gambling for fun, profit at SU

AUI h now is that horaes don't bet on people. They ivauld if they knew how much forn it is.

By Craig Welnatein

Gambling is a part of most peoplea' lives, ineluding atudents at Syracuse Univerrity. Thereis a good chance the barber who cut your hair when you were a kid was a bookie. And remember that time your mother put down a buck and guessed the weight of your hairdresser's baby?

John X, an SU eenior, started running a footbail pool in high school. He and three other studenta would get the shedts and mimeograph them.'
When John came to SU, he thought his boolie days were over. Littje did he know they were juat beginning.

It atarted my freshman year," John recalled. "One of my friends did the sheets at a fraternity on cairpus. He asked me if I wanted to do it in the dorm, and I accepted."
During his Eophomore year, John found "the connection."

My roommate was betting big through a gtudent" John azid. "From him I found ont who his bookie was.
So junior year, John figured he could make some "biz bucks." He asked the bookie if he could work for him, and the bookie accepted. However, John made very little money in the beginning, because "In were very unorganized."
In the beginning I had to sure I knew the people. I had to make sure they wrere sports fans. All of my customers have good bucks.
"People don't bet to tie, or to break even," he added. "If they are losers, they tay losers."
Now l'm a corporation," John gaid. "It's defnitely bis. I get the lines early in the week, mottly on Fridays. I call all of my customers (10 to 15) and give them the spread. They're all friends. I don't take bets from atrangers.'
John doesn't feel remorse about taking money from his friends. " 1 'm not forcing them to do it" he noted. it's juat a aervice. Th s ice the kids who sell pants. I sell gambling."
John said he has taken bets on every Syracume game. "As a rule, people don't bet college," he said. There are too many intangibles involved. For example, on Homecoming Weekend there'z no way you can bet againat a home teami.
As for basketball, John said people always seem to take Syracuse with the points at home, and bet againgt SU when the Orangemen play on the road.

John's bookie gets all his points from the New York Daily News.
On Sunday, the bookic puts a $$ 200$ limit on each team to cover himaself from loaing a large sum of money. There are no limits on Mondaynight garnes, though, because it'a not a big betting night.
John receives a 10 percent commission for every bet he takes. On the average, he will earn between $$ 30$ and $$ 50$ dollars per week, although he has made as much as $$ 80$. "On Sunday mornings, the phone doenn't stop ringing from 11 p.m. until 3 p.m.," John said.
"A bookie, cannot lose," John you (A bithe odds are bet againat back $$ 10$, based on a 4.45 -percent commisoion which wras ficed ghen the point tystem was introdiced). In addition; for eivery, seven betithe boolite wina, you win foe ittilleat the carino. Yoa might beat thern for $100, but they 41 ret you eventially."

Most local police vievo ienforcement of gambling laws-asprac tically impossible. One reáon for the poor resulta is that most people view gambling as a "vichimless crime" and rarely report it to police.
John Zriebec, head of SU aecurity, said, "We hiven"t had any complaints concerning tambling on campus. There have been no incidents or reportas."
"I don't think the Syracuase police care about what I do," John zaid "II they wanted to, they could nall people up here left and right, including me. I'm mare if I got cainght I could pay my way out of it?

Joe $X$., a junior, rums a sheet with three other studenta. For $$ 1$, a bettor is given the choice of betting on anywhera from four to 10 collegeand professional football games, and can win between $$ 10$ and $$ 150$.

John and Joe differ in that Joe is a bookie, while John is a runer for a bookie. Despite Joe's independence, he makes far less money than John.
"On a good week, four of us will split $$ 50$," Joe said. "For what I get out ofit, which is not a lot of bucks, I pass them out for the hell of it.
"There are at least two other glieets going around, and I know for a-fact that they"xe pulling in a lot more money than we are," Joe said. "It just goes to akow that the money in there iniw yegr were not that into it Next year wefre planning an setting more organined."

Collins excels as SU middle man

By Drew Sclawartz

He is the immovable object on a defenge againat which opponents have noved the ball an avernge of 403 yards a game. Fival conches respect him more as each week panaen. We wanted to run inside, but we conldn't get the middie linebacker out of the way, asid Pittaburgh coach Jackie Sherril of his team's first-half offensive miseries in last Saturday's game.
Sherill was referring to. middle linebacker Jim Collins. The public address announcers at Syracuse foothall games during the 1978 season have no trouble remembering his name. If they momentarily forget, they are reminded the following play when Collins is about to drag down another ball car-

"He is a sure tackler who has achieved consistent grades this achieved consistent. grades this season," defensive coordimator Dennis Fitzgerald said. "He continues to get better every weel."
Neither fans nor coaches predicted atardom for Collins at the beginning of this season. "We expected him to be pretty good, but not angood as he has performed because of the year'slayoff he had," head coach Franir Maloney. saich.
A preseason knee injury ended Collins's season last year before it had a chance to begin. His leg was in a cast ror four weeks. Whon the cast Was removed, Colins began lifting weights to strengthen the knee for spring practice.
"I went out in pade during the middle the seargon and practiced in order to of the ecason and practiced in orier to Laet winter, Collime mande sure bif reoovery firm the injury world be complate. I worked really hard to be in better finape and ptronger thain other fros, Coltine berind.
"He performed very well in the spring and seemed to get better with practice," Fitzgerald said.

Maloney said hard work has enabled Collina to become one of the beat linebackera in the East "Jim" "a biggeat problem when he came here wai his lack of wize," Maloney explained. "During the off-year he built himself up." Since the fall of 1977, Collins has gained 20 pounds and increased his bench press from 355 to 400 pounds.
Collins and the middle limebacker position, which he has played since his midget football days, seem to be a physical dimensions ( $6^{\prime} 2^{\prime \prime}, 2231 \mathrm{lbs}$.) for the position in terms of height, weight and speed," Fitzegerald described.
The list of sissets Collins has for the position he plays includes other items as well. "He has good work habita and competes well." Fitzgerald continued. "He's a hard gny who doesn't give an extra yard.
"He has very good instincts to find the football and has very good quickness," Maloney added.
Leadership in another function of the middle linebacker ponition, and Collina prefers leading by example.
"I'm not a real rah-rah type", Colling gaid. "I just go out there and do my job and hope to get the team fired up with a big play.'
"He doean't get really eacited out theren he doesn' lead by the way Collins, whom teammater and coaches describe as quiet becomes more withdrawn as the week progrenaea and gametime approaches, Kinley added.
"He gete quieter ias it get closer to gametime and thinks about more stuff by himnalf," Kinley said of his roommate "Hie goes into more of a ahell. During the grame, he lote locie. but Keope control out there."
Colline sidmite he is a difinerent peerion on the field, "Yow juet havatrogo cravy out there", Colline said. "I tate Qut may fruetratione on the firid.

Colinins spends his free time during keeping in with his teammates. "I do alot of weightlifting, spending a couple of hours in the weightroom each day, Collins said.
As far as personal goals-axe concerned, Collins only wants to conconcerned, Covins to improv can always imtinue to improve. You can always improve everything by working hard. I don't have any personal goals except game by the time I graduate," Colline said.

As Syracuse University embarks opp a new construction spurt, the wooden buildings on campus face an uncertain future-
During the past 10 years, about 40 houses have been vacated by the university, aaid Harvey H. Kaiser, vice president for facilities administration.
Many of the buildings were torn down and are now parking lota or sites of new buildings. Some were sold and are being used as Greek houses. For example, rows of Victorian buildings used to line South Crouse Avenue, now the site of the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications. Wooden buildings also used to be clustered on College Place, East Adams Street and Comstock Avenue.
Kaiser said the number of wooden buildings have decreased in an effort to eliminate unsound structures and the use of temporary locations for university offices.
-The main reason for vacating the buildings "is to reduce the number of temporary facilities to as few as possible by locating university activities in permanent buildings," Kaiser said.
Currently, the area bounded by East Adams Street, Ostrom Avenue and the main campus contains more than 50 wooden Avenue and the main campus contains more than 50 wooden buildings, said, John Saia, Phybical Plant superintendent. He said, however, that it is hard to keep track of the number of wooden buildinge which are uni

University-owned wooden structures are used as temporary locations for a variety of university needs, Kaiser said. They are locations for a variety of university needs, Kaiser said. They are used as student housing, such as cottages and co-ops, and as offices for academic offices and organizations
When the new School of Management building is finished, the wooden buildings the achool currently uses at 406 University Ave. and at 107 and 129 College Place will be evacuated, Kaiser said. These buildings now are being used by the school primarily as offices for its faculty and graduate assistants.
University officials hope that construction of the new management building will be started by 1980 , but no completion date has been set.
The houses on College Place were described as being in "fairly good shape," by a secretary in the management school, but the building on University Avenue is "pretty bad," she said. "The building needs a new roof."
Kaiser said that replacement of the roof has "been deferred, but is being repaired as necessary
About five more wooden buildings, which currently house student organizations such as Student Association, will be left Vacant when the new student union building is constructed. Kaiser termed these buildings as being in "marginal condition," and said that no specific decision has been made about their future use.

The university would also like to reduce the number of wooden buildings used as housing, since some of these buildings are not housing as many peoples as they could be.

If a building is capable of holding 30 people and is maintainea and only 10 people sign up for it, the maintenance is atill the same," he said. "In cases such as this, possibly a decision is reached that it is no longer desired by the (student) community." He also said some of the buildings have become structurally un

Banality: in the eye of the beholder

To the editor:
Banality is not the name of the game in America today; the banality is in the eyes of the beholder. The old cliche holds true even more in this case: you see what you're looking for!

When I drive home at night, north out of this striking and busy city, I see a beautiful lake that is finally becoming less polluted because becoming cared ensough to impress upon other people and institutions the other people and institutions the need to improve and 1 drive by, a State Fairgrounds where zome would probably find the where zome woulit probabiy Ind the height of banality. Instead, I see a place where "everyman" and his family can attend top-fight concerts, extensive boat and RV shows, and other sports and enshows, and other sports and enriching events at minimal cost with riching events at minimal cont with maximum freedom and personal pleasure.
As I drive further north. I drive past rolling fields and wide vistas unmarked by billboards. This is because people cared enough about what they and others see while driv. ing in, and living in, this country to take down and keep away these affronts to the human eye.
You excoriate TV for mindless commercials. As I drive home, I listen to a fine local FM station, with few commercials, and those fairly tasteful. In the evening, at home, ifI aee nothing on TV that interests or challenges me, I don't sit like a mindless vegetable, waiting to be entertained. I turn off the TV, put on a record, and listen to Chet Atkins, the Alpert infuse my soul with music
My eyes are clear and bright, looking for good things in this country and its people. Your eyes are looking for the tawdry, unlovely things. I see these too, and give them little notice. You see them, and they fill your life. Poor yoult

A union building is important

To the editor:
In reaponise to Wednesday's column A Union - No Cure-all, is correct-a a student union building on the campus of Syracuas University would neither be the new messiah nor a reincarnation of God. Certainly. Tom Moczydlowski is correct whea he statea that this building would not clear up all of the problems that this campus is beseiged by.
We do not believe that this building will make everyone on this campus lifelong pals. We do, however, believe that it will aid in providing unity to an otherwise decentralized campus. This building will have space for many of the student organizationa on campus, thus facilitating the exchange of information and ideas that is ob viously very lacking an of this moment Many of these - organizations are now bitching This problern could be significantly cleared up if major student organizations are given the opportumity to frequently and freely (excuse the word choice) "interact."

Certainly, the presence of this ouilding will not eliminate the noige in Bird Library. However, it should nemoys a mienificant amount of it for people will not have to socialize. for pople thin the haverialize in the library - they in have a much better facility, a union building, in Which to socialize, and run theil mouthal The preaence of this buil vite students who are making noise to either shut up, or proceed next door where the building is planned to be located.
A union building will also provide for 10 percent of this campus whom are now sufficiently ignored - the commuting students. The union building will house commuter lockers, so these studenta will not have to struggle around campus with a load of books all day, and will include as well many lounges in which these gtudents, as well as off. campus students, can 'hang out". between classes.
Finally, as Moczydlowski notes, the union building would provide for the entertainment of the massea. It will house a very large auditorivin (we're purhing for at least 2,500 seats) where movies and concerta can be held. There will be bars, as noted previously, a record store, and game rooms. The masses will thum be paciffed and, hopefally, happy-:
The presence of the union building can facilitate the nolving of Bome of the more blatant problems - communication, the lack of unity, noise in the library - to a greater extent It will provide many services that are needed, it will provide some ant of centralization to this dreadfully decentralizad campus, and will even decentralizod campus, and will even allow for the emjoyment of various iongs ofentertainment withouthav monow to find them.

The play takes place in Edinburgh, Scotland; in the 1930s, when the idealistic Miss Brodie (Ellen Beck) is, as-she repeatedly insists, in her prime $A$ hopeless romantic in a world of realists, her sole mission is to instill a sense of dedication to the ideals of beanty, truth and honor into her pupils.
Much to the consternation of the sternfaced administrator, Miss Makay (Linda Dupre), Miss Brodie skims over traditional academic; subject and puts her heart and soul into molding the girla to: fit into a group of the socially elite, and inte bringing the arts to life ;before their eyes.
The girls, blinded by her passionate lectures, offer little resistancens Miss Brodie feverishly pushes them towntd the goals she arbitrarily sets for them. Atone point she remarls, "Give me an impressionable girl, and she is mine for life:* Miss Brodie assumes the roles of her heroes Mussolini, Hitfer; and Franco whom 'she admires becanse they are men of action with a caurse.
Miss Brodie's only cause is the improvement of her girls. Because her own life is ra failure, she attempts to relive it more succesafuly through her proteges The man she lovès, art teachen Teddy. ## Kansas LP borders on mediocrity

By Brent Marchant

Ever since the release of Peter Frampton's highly successful Frampton Comes Alive in 1976, the music industry has sporadically bombarded the pubiric With a slew of double live LPs. Every year in quality as much as the Columbian dope in quality as much as the Columbiandope harvests. And this year is no exception. In recent months, record companies have released a variety of double live LPB, ranging from the excellence of Jethro Thin Lizzy's Live and Dangerous. Between these two extremes has fallen a large crop of mediocre live albums including David Bowie's Stage and more sas, Two for the Show - a lackluster album that features a few highlights and a'wealth of hollow, packaged material. Kansas. Which first sprang to public attention with its hit single, "Carry On Wayward Son, has always maintained a high level of quality. on its five previous studio LPs. The studio albums have studio L.Ps. The studio albums have always. been full of dynamics, largely because of the group s constantiy changing melodies, full-bodied sound, excellent, balanced musicianship and imaginative usen of instrumentation And throughout-these studio LPs, Kansas hasalways had these studio LPs, Kansas has always had the live album, these assets have been lost or distorted.

Packäged sound
The biggeat problem with the album is the sorely lacking dynamic quality of the music. The synthesizers and the violin dominate the music, resulting in a sound that is hollow, superficial and spineless. The other major problem with the album is that the group has such a firm command of the material that the songs often sound packaged, with. few innovations. What little experimentation there is in themusic is quite good; however such innovative techniques are few and far between.
One of the album's good points is that it grows progressively stronger from the first side to the last side. Side 1 gets offto a tired start with a packaged version of the title cut from Kanisa's second LP, Song for America. This cut accurately. reflects the dominance of the synthesizers and violin. The doldrums persiston Side I with pat renditions of two tracks from the group's studio LP. Point of Know Return, in the forms of the title cut and "Paradox." The first side closes strongly with a cut from the Masque LP, "Icarus - Borne on Wings of Steel," which more accurately reflects the group's full-bodied sound.

More of the anme

The second side opens as aluggishly as the first, with a packaged version of "Portrait (He Knew)" from Point of Know Return. A smookh, innovative guitar transition leads directly into "Carry On Wayward Son," the single that propelled Kaysard into the limelight. But the overall performance of this song is disappointing, lacking the heavy, pulsating backbone that made the etudio version of this song so successful. Like the first side, Side 2 of "Journey from Mariabronn" from the group's first LP, Kansas. Like "Icarus," this cut demonstrates the full capabilities of the group, by featuring the band's fullbodied sound and fine musicianship.

Falling flat
Side 3, probably the strongest side of the four, starts off well with an excellent version of the group's hit single "Dust in the Wind." This cut is highlighted by the expressive vocals of lead singer Steve Walsh and a creative violin soloby Robby Steinhardt. An acoustic guitar solo on the tail end of the cut leads directly into the beautiful iong "Lonely-Wind,' from the group's first L.P. After such a fine start however, Kansas falla flat on an uncontrolled version of "Mysteries and Mayhem," a mediocre excerpt from "Lamplight Symphony" and a subdued ren dition of "The Wall."
The final side opens with another cut reflective of Kansas's full-blown sound 'Closet Chroaicles"' from Point of Know Return. The group has full control over this song, but unike the other cuts, it never sounds upackaged. The side closes with a creative, 11 -minute version of $L e f$. toverture's "Magnum Opus." An eerie, im pressionistic violin solo provides a syitable opening to the cut, which, more than any other track on the album, shows a willingness to experiment by all the members of the band.

Mixed bag

The quality of the musicianship varies greatly on the album. Vocalist Walsh is at his best, singing with much expression and power. Violinist Steinhardt is also excellent, but his performance seems to dominate the music more than it ahould. Keyboard player Kerry Livgren also plays a disproportionately large role in the music to the detriment of the group' overall performance, because his synthesizers often sound tin-plated and artificial. The other-musicians, bassis Dave Hope, drummer Phil Ehart and guitarist Rich Williams areovershadowed by the other musicians of the group.
Further adding to the album's packaged sound is the downplay of the live setting Crowd reactions and stage an nouncements are kept to a minimum to the proint where the live setting seems to disappear almost entirely.
It's unfortunate that a group of Kansas' - caliber has released such a lamelive L.P. Deapite its few high points, the true talents of the muricians never, come through as much as they should. The saddest consequence of this release is thet it has taken one of today's most talented musical groups and relegated it unmercifully to the ranks of mediocrity.

Neighborhood residents fifo complaints about students ,  Members of Sthem Piperato  by poople wedon't know and theremponeto wot

Members of the Southeast University Neighborhood Association have complained to police that students living in the ClarendonLivingston Street area off Ostrom Avenue are parking illegally, keeping unleashed dogs and violating noise ordinances.
In turn, some of the students in the area have accused the association of harassment.
Sy̆racuse City Police said it received five complaints about too much noise from residents of the aren in September:
Students in the area have received summonses that say they are violating a city noise ordinance. The ordinance, passed by the Syracuse Common Council in August, 1977. nays noise chould not be heard more than 50 feet from its source. After an "oral warning," from police, violators are subject to a $$ 25$ fine for their first offense and a $$ 50$ fine for their second.
The residents of 211 Clarendion. St., which houses eight students, received a complaint from SEUNA through the police on Oct. 27. The complaint cited excessive noise, speeding vehicles and parking problems.

Dave Stern, a resident of the house, called the complaints "ridiculous" and said he is outraged that he does not know exactly who made the complaint. It was signed by SEUNA President Gloria Keim, who lives on Ostrom Avenue.
According to police, the name of the person making a complaint does not have to be making.

Diane Kyllonen, an SU ktudent who lives at 707 Livingston St. said her house has received complaints about Frisbee throwing in front of her residence. But a Clarendon resident called it "playing basketball and football in the street." The resident, who refused to be identified, said the area is an "A-1 residential neighborhoud and there are laws," and that the entire,block belongs to the neighborhood association.

Early registration stärts for management courses

By Bryan Donnelly

Although pre-registration starts Monday for School of Management students, some management students will be' closed out of courses in the spring because they missed pre-regis? tration.
"Only 82 to 85 percent of the students pre-register," said Rưth' Christy Funk, director of systems and coordinator of programis: for the School of Management.
or the Schol of Manamagement. School of Management pre-registration is for students who are currently enrolled.in the school. Preregistration is not opento non-management students who want to take managenfent courses as electives.
Funk said that occasionally students who don't pre-resistér can't get into a course they need in order to graduate ind, as'a result, apend the first few weeks of the next semester adding and dropping courses to get the classes they want.
Pre-registration enables the management school to determine what courses need additional sections and in what courges extrat sections can be taken away, Funk said.
Preregistration will be from Monday, Nov 13 to Friday, Nov. 17. There are different days and times to pre-register depenfinig on the student's year of study and the first letter of his lastirimest Freshmen and sophomores should see their advisers befort pre-registering. Undergraduates may pick up their DOS dardis their DOS cards and information in Room 101 Slocuim.

SA's lobbying intensifies as tenure decision nears

By David Bander

Student Association is lobbying intensely to pass its tenure proposal, which would grant pass its tenure infoposal, which tenure decisions, a Wednesday's University Senate meeting
The proposal would require course evaluations for tenure Eandidates and would make students make students voting me
If passed, it would be "SA's biggest single ac complishment this year," said Jim Naughton SA vice president for academic affairs. SA representatives have been talking to members of the University Senate all weik in an effort to gain support for the proposal, Naughton sizid.
In addition, SA is encouraging students to attend the Senate meeting. ©If I stand up with 60 students behind me they'll know we're serious, ${ }^{\text {? }}$ Naughton said.
"I would support the SA proposal," said Senate committee situdying tenure policy. "It's important to get the ball rolling."
A policy that would standardize the tenure process has been under consideration by the University Senate for $I 1 / 4$ years. Student involvement in the process has been one of the major points of contention.

Weeks said the committee has changed its mind on the issue of student voting on college tenure committees. Originally, it wanted students to be non-voting members.
"On reflection, we discovered there were no strong feelings on the cornmittee against students having a vote," Weeks said.
A letter he received last week from 14 college deans indicates further support for many of the points in the Senate's proposal. particularly those concerning student course evaluations, Weeks said.
However, the deans urged the Senate to "move with extreme caution" on the tenure proposal, he added.

Students try to aid teacher's tenure bid

By David Bauder
A group of Syracuse University students has banded together to aid a teacher they think may be getting short-changed in a tenure decision.
Students in Christine Boot's Dutch 101 class wrote a letter in support of their teacher to The Daily Orange last week and gave a short presentation on Friday to a department committee considering Boot's tenure qualifications.
"From what I've heard, their presentation impressed the factilty." Boot said. "Though I really can't say for sure, it probably made a change in the opinion of some people.*
Boot expressed confidencé about her chances to gain tenure. "With this kind of backing, there should not be any trouble," she said.
Committee chairperson Louis Roberts said his committee has already made its decision on a recommendation, but declined to elaborate.

A positive tenure decision virtually guarantees a teacher a job until retirement, while a negative decision would result in the instructor's dismissal.

Michael Herr
The butbonal betselfer that bold out printing after printing in hardcover, DISPATCHES powerfully captures the years war correspondent Michael Herr apent under fire with the frontline troops in Vietnam. Herr's concern is with the fighting troops, not the theorists, politicians or generals. When the "issues" of the war are discussed, it is by the men and in their own terms.-This is their story, told in a staccato progression of vignettes that bare each man's whole experience of war in a few words or a single gesture.

Reorienting Orientation

Over half the freshman class could not attend Summer Orientation this sumamer.

Over half of the new people on catapus were not able to meet the faculty tour the campus, meet fellow freshmen and learn their way around before be ing chrost into a totally new en vironment that they would have to live in for four years.
Even though 16 different orientation sessions were held this summer, so many freshmen held summer jobs they found it imposaible to attend. The $$ 48$ fee, plus the coat and time for transportation, may have also kept freshmen from enjoying a beneficial preview of what SU has to offer.
Most other universities offer similax orientation programs, with one exception: they hold their sessions in the fall. Student Association has proposed that SU follow suit, offering such a session the weekend before school normally opens to supplement the summer orientation program currently offered. A fall orientation program would allow freshmen to get Bettied in theis new environment before the onslaught of hassles sach as registration, advising and course selection. Mos freshmen who wanted to take ad varitage of the program could do so without interfering with their summer work responaibilities.

The 16 separate orientation sessions during the summer are costly both to the atudent and to the university, Staff members who come up for the seasions are paid $$ 50$ for haif a day to sit in offices in case students want to come in and talk. If the fall orientation programi were added, it conld perhaps take the place of some of the more costly separate summer sessions.

Every freshman is curious, if not nervous, about what his new home will be give A iall orientation program would give everyone she chance to find out

Camp David summit: selling out the Palestinians

The Camp David summit after 13 days produced nothing but a sellout result-which can never be accepted by the Palestinian people and THE Palestine Liberation Organization.
The accord Sadat and Begin reached by collusion was wigned at the expense of the Paleatinian people. Five years of Paleatinian self-rule of the occupied ter ritories means the legalization of the protracted oc cupation. This means continued torture, oppression, collective punishment, etc. execated gapinat our people. Nothing in mentioned about the Paleatinians living in the refugee camps of the Diaspora, in Lebanon, Syria and Jordan. As for the PLO, it was totally excluded at the Camp David summit. So were the Syrians and the matter of the occupied Golan Heights,
On the Egyptian level, Sadat achieved slim reaults. isreali troops will remain for at least three years in Sinsi, but as for the Israeli settlementa there, they apparently will remain for a longer period. Begin can be happy because he was able to extract new concesWions from Sadat, and hia plans were totally adopted. War, violence, death and degtruction have become a fact of life in the Arab-Iaracli conflict, no matter how abhorrent and rexrettable. It is imperative, therefore, that a juat and lanting peace must deal with the roots of conllict in order to end war with all its mhwman manifestations. A just and iathing peace ruust, therefore, be bsused on the reality, not the mayths, of this conflict. It must stem from our come prehending the facta and dealing with the given reality.

Pence mast thus be baged on the assumption that both the Iaraeli and Palestinian people murthave full and equal rights in the land of Palestine. The two peoplea must live as human beings nnder laws that Cuarantee them equality and freedom, Thus Jews, Chriwtian and Mumphon, Oriental Jews and Europenn Jewn, dark-allinned Araba and white Jewriah eettlera muint have oqual rights.
The deatiny of the land, its palitical and socioanomonic ingtitantion and its futwre must be dotere-

Faelis have usurped control of the land and are decia ing its future unilaterally. Paltestiniansarenot arga ing that they will regain control and deny the Ifraelis their cights or exclude them from the future of Pales tine. They have called for a peace where all Jews could remain and participate in shaping the future of Palegtine as partners and equals. Thus the dispossessed, exiled and oppressed Palestinians
The Paleatinian people must regain their palitical, civil and human rights and live as equale in their own occripation must be free. This freedom and return will not be at the expence of the Iaraelig. The Palentinian leadership have propoeed partnership with the Fews, an equal abaring of the land. The concept of a secular, democratic etate in Palestime where Jewas, Christians and Murlims can co-exist with equal plex, prolonged complict. Same have argued agmingt this concept becaume it seemed impractical and uncealistic. yet very few can argue against the principle itaelf. Moreover, this solution is much better than continued conflict, war and suffering. Other more realigtic aolutions, tuch as dividing the country in two, are not based on real coeziatence and true equality and thus wotild not doubt lead to future confifet and war.
Ina lasting peace, the Isreali people must have full and equal rights. They must live ms a free people, never subjected to occupation as is happening to the Palestinians today. As human beings, they must en joy total security and must flourish as a people with a unique culture and heritage. Because of their traged $y$, Pal estinians are sensitive to the long suffering of the Jewish people. This is why they have included them in the future peace of Paleatine. That in why Arafat gtated in his U.N. 日peech: "When we speak of our common hopes for the Palestine of tomorrow we include in our perspective all Jews now living in Palestine who chose to live with us there in peace and without descrimination."
Recently the Paleatine Liberation Organization (PLO), in a move toward reconciliation, has accepted the establishment of its authority on a part of Palestine, the Weat Bank and Gaza, in an attempt to give the Palestinians there some form of freedom and human dignity. This otep must not, however, be taken out of context. Paleatine is a whole and the Palestinians belong to all of Palestime. This homeland, like other homelands, could not be divided, morally, historically, economically and politrically. That is why in the short run the concept of secular, democratic humanist Btate where Jews, Christians and Muslims can coexiat in peace and equality is the moat durable and lasting solution.
The problem is not geographic but political. In ideology and practice, Zionism, Bre aparthied nind slavery, has justi巨ied and institutionalized dist crimination and oppreasion. It is based on the desial of the human and national righta of the Palestiniana. Thus for real peace to come to Palestine, Wionism an a raciat ideology and ingtitntioni munt coane to an end, and in its place must flourish a humaniath pluralistic occiety baged on equality and tolerance.

Orange iron guardrails were twisted into pretzel-like shapes. A portion of the press box window, near which a New Xork Times reporter had ast the previons afternoon, was a jagged, broken hole. A tiny, halfempty bottie of whimkey lay on a concrete step.

It wan a diverre, emotional and rowdy group thit came to pay this shattered concrete ahell a final tribute Saturday, a season-recora crowd of 26,429 in all.

They came with hacksaws and hammers, memories añd tears, laughter and cheers. They came for a final look at an old friend, to be a part of history and then to take a part of the goalposta or end zone sod or scoreboard or wooden bleachers as well.

Everyone was there to say farewell to the stadiun, from 83-year-old Vernon Beers, who Baw Archbold'a first game and broke into tears at the last one, to the maintenance men who coated the goalposts with Food Service shortening to the bearded, drunken sttident who atil managed to clamber onto a goalpost and who. when informed of the bhortening. laughed and said, "They should have tried something else."
There were the sedate and nostalgic recollections of Floyd Litule and Ben Schwartzwalder as well as the mad celebration by throngs of students, who trampled the chain-link fence ringing the field and had to be held at bayby policernen on horses.

Before the game, at an elegant Drumiling Country Club brunch, Beers remembered the Saturday of Sept. 25, remenbered Sye Saturday of Shen Syracuse whipped Hobart 28-0 in Archbold'e first game.

It wasn't scheduled to start until today. but the destruction of Archbold Stadium got an enthusiastic head start Saturday afternoon.

Before halftime had ended, the student eection looked like a carpenter's workshop as some well-equipped spectators began methodically sawing away sections of someone else's bleacher seats for a sentimental souvenir.

In fact, the 71-year-old cement saucer was stripped of the essentials-goal posts, scoreboard, sod and surrounding cyclone fence-legs than half an hour after the game and Archbold's final chapter had been completed.

For the more than 26,000 fans who attended the final farewell, the only thing awceter than the Orangemen's 20 17 victory over Navy was a taste of Archbold's history: its status as the oldest college stadium in the country; the house of the 1959 national champions; the home field of SU's legenalary backs: Jimmy Brown, Ernie Davis, Floyd Littie and Larry Csonka

The smiling faces leaving "crumbling old Archbold" for the last time, looked over their shoulders for a final glimpse while clutching tightly to whatever piece of wood, glimpse while ciutching tighty to whatever piece of wood, stone or earth had previously been part of the stadium. They were taking more than a souvenir, they were taking a piece of history.

Freshman English official defends part-time teachers

By Andrea Abrahuma  Recent allegationa that part-time instructor

 in the Syracuse University English departmen are of lesser quality than full-time professor are largely nnfounded, aaid Randall Brune director of the fremhman English programBrune said partuine instructors are bette qualified to teach freshman English than are moat full-time profesaors.
Brune said the part-time faculty receive apecial training in teaching composition, which is the main emphasis of fresihman English Full-time professors are primarily literary scholars, he said.
Brune's comments were in reply to English professor John Diehl, who said the university i huring too many part-time instructors. Diehl charged that the hiring was a "way of diluting the quality of the department," because many part-time instructore do not have the backgrounds of full-time faculty members.
However, Diehl said yesterday he thinks most part-time instructors are qualified to become full-time faculty at SU, and the quality of the courses will go up if they are.
Diehl explained he originally meant that part-time instructors who teach freshman English are qualified to teach the subject, but that many madergraduate-level courges are weal because 50 percent of all 200 -level comrse and above are not taught by full-time facuity.

There are 32 full-time and 53 part-tine faculty: members in the English department. Only four of the part-time inatructors don't teach Brume said the reason so many parthime inatructors were hired is that SU does not have the money to hire all the part-time ingtructora full-time.

Fe said he disagreed with Diehl's charge that SU is prowiding $\mathbf{a}$ "bargain-bagement education" and pointed out that most univer. sities hire part-time instructors

Brune said noore full-time positions should be added to the Engliah department, which is "pitifally understaffed." Professors conld be hired with a "terminable commitment." which means the university would have no obligation to rehire the professors after their contracts expire, Brune anid.

Arthur W. Hoffman, chairman of the Engliah department, said the department is asking for 10 neve full-time members for the $1979-80$ academic year, three or four of which will replace departing faculty members.

Newhouse to limit enrollment

Crowded classes and overloaded facilities for television majors have forced Syracuse University to himit enrollment at the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications starting next year.
However, no mpecific restrictions on the size of futurer fershpupa clagsea_have been decided. Thomas Cumminge, directar of the Office of Admiasions, said. John J. Prucha, vice chancellor for academicaffairs, is waiting for a repurt from Newhouse that wil propose guidelineston the number of students the school Enesent facilities and staif. 696 in 1971 to 1,253 this fall. The 166 -percentincrease has caused problems in scheduling classes and the use of television studios, said Newhouse Dean Henry F. Schulte.

Higher enrollment figures have increased the number of sections for required communications courses such as Newswriting 205: In addition, the total number of televiaion majors last fall sccounted for almost 30 percent of Newhouse stadents.
The fixed-amount of television studios has caused crowded classes and waiting lists for students in the television-radio sequence.
"You can increase the aize of the faculty and budget, but there is only a certain amount of television studio space," Schulte said. He added that the administration has been cooperative in giving Newhouse more money to hire more faculty:

But further budget increages for Newhouse seem unlikely

Newhouse has achieved a xutatively greater percentage of the total resources of the univeraity than other colleges," Pxucha said. "The practical limit to greater resources is twition and Newhouse will have to live within its curreat Schantte funding.
Schulte said he would like to reduce the number of studenta in the school by about 100 , a 6-percent cutback.
He said this can be accomplished by settiag limits on the number of atudents in each field of study and by asking future students to indicate their probable major. "If we knew how many atudents we had to accommodate in each diviaion, we could allocate resources and expenditares more efficiently Schulte taid.
To help stem the How of transfers into Newhouse, the academic requirements for entry will be raised in May. A transfer student will need a 3.25 grade point average in public-con munications courses and an overall 3.25

Like Humpty-Dumpty, a professor up for tenure is in a precarious situation. Ha must find the delicate balance between teaching and research. Student course evaluations can even out that balance.

Making teaching count

"She"s one of the most phenomenal teachers I've had at this university," said a member of Professor Christine Boot's Dutch 101 class. "Her love of teaching is apparentin everything she does."
Last Fridey, the rest of Boot's class showed up at the meeting of the departmient committee considering her qualifications for tenure to express the qualifications for tenure to express their same positive attitude. After their presentation to the committee, Boot should not be any trouble (in gaining should not tenure.)"
But wh
But what if the students hadn't showed up? Many felt that personality conflicts between Boot and members of the language department would have been the deciding factor in her tenur decision, resulting in her dismissal.
Tenure decisions should not rest on the social graces of a teacher at faculty teas. Tenure committees have a res ponsibility to consider and weigh heavily a tenure candidate's teaching abilities - and to find out how well they teach. you have to ask the students.
At tomorrow's University Senate meeting, Student Association will present a proposal that would uarantee student opinion would not be ignored in tenure decisions. The proposal would make mandatory and effective immediately solicitation of effective immediately solicitation of student evaluations of tenure candidates, and give students a vote on didates, and give students a vote on committees.
Like the students who came to sup port Professor Boot at the tenure meeting, student support is vital to pas sing this proposal. Show up at the meet ing tomorrow at 4:15 in Stolkin Auditorium, Room 101 in the Physic: Building. By supporting SA's proposal you will be standing up for every valuable teacher you have ever had. ## Discussing divestiture

It's an important issue-in many cases, it's the issue-on college campuses around the country. Marches and protests have been staged in support of it, and the whole issue has raised the question of the proper role the university has in society.
"It" is divestiture of stock in companies that do business in South Africa. To show their opposition to the apartheid system in that country, several universities have given up their stock in companies that still have holdings in South Africa. Last spring, the Syracuse University board of trustees decided not to divest SU's 38 million holdinge in these companies. Instead. it commromised on theissue by subscribing to the Sullivan Principles, which ast all. companies doing business there to press for fair emoloyment practices. At best, this is a weak cesture of opposition to apartheid, and at worst, it is a cheap trick by which the university can keep its investraents in South Africa and still inaintain a veneer of morality died. Tonight at 8 in Hestricle nas not died. Tonight at 8 in Hendricks Chapel. moral and financial problems of divesting will be debated. The Student AfroAmerican Society is sponsoring the open forum. Many of the people on the panel have dealt with this topic before and were involved in the original decision not to divest.
Tonight is your chance to be heard on this issue. Should the university profit, however indirectly, from a system that denies millions of people their human rights? Go to the open forum, listen, and be heard. Thomas Coffey for The Daily

Eureka! Course evaluations work

To the editor:
During the past 10 years, the department of electrical and computer engineering has conducted student evaluations of all our undergraduate and graduate courbeg.
Our evaluations were initiated about 10 years ago in reaponse to student request. There were some doubts initially, but during the years the evaluations have become accepted by our faculty as the major objective meagure of teaching per formance.

Many of the initial fears have proved to be groundless. For instance, professors who are deman ding and hard graders are not necessarily rated poorly. In fact, some of our most demanding professors regularly receive top ratings. Apparently, the students are more discerning then one had expected.

Faculty members have much to gain from such an evaluation; namely a thorough rather than ing performance.
Teaching evaluations can serve two purposes: (1) to evaluate the teaching performance, and (2) to provide guidance for the instructor seeking to improve his teaching. A relatively simple form is sufficient for the former; a more cormplex form for the former; amorecomplex as that of the Center for Inch as that of the Center for desirable for the latter. It is interesdesirable for the latter. It is interesting to note that(1) our forms, (2) the Touchstone forms, and (3) CID forms all yield an average rating slightly lower than four (on a fiveslightly lower than four (on a fivecourses, despite significant differences in the formis. Apparently the apecific questiona asked are not crucial; one is basically measuring the students' overall response to the courge. Our forms are relatively simple. Professors are evaluated on four basic questions; three additional questions are included for instructor guidance.
Student reaponsea for a given course often vary considerably. In addition, a given professor's average ratinge may vary considerably from course to course. There is a consistent, significant difference between undergraduate and graduate rating; the latter are higher. As a result, the data on ratings must be used with care. It may be necessary to consider a number of course ratings before a consistent pattern emerges. Individual comments by students need to be treated with great care. I feel that they should be used not for evaluation, but only for guidance. Since there is considerable variation in student response, there is little point in adding students to promotion and tenure committees solely for the purpose of providing information on teaching. Students can, of course, help to provide incan, of course, help to proviae bis their presence on such committees.

Adjunct faculty add depth

To the editor:
I have been amazed at the current flap about adjunct faculty.
Certainly our department recognizes the value of continuity and stability provided by full-time faculty, but it also recognizes the vitality, relevance and excitement provided by a continuously changing body of adjunct faculty: outstanding professionals in their fields who love what they're doing and want to share some of the realities and some of the excitement of their careers with students.

We couldn't get most of those adjuncts to teach full-time. They're much too well paid to take the financial cuts teaching in our field requires. They're doing our atudents a avor (but enjoying it) to come here once $a$ week and share theix knowledge and enthusiasm. Our ull-time faculty all have profes aional backgrounds, but we miss the day-to-day contact with clients and peers that some misinformed people call the rat race." Our constant ex posure to our adjunct faculty keeps 18 stimulated and current, too, in a way that reading the profesgional ournals can't.

Fully 20 percent of our classes are taught by adjunct faculty, and most of those are upper-division courses. Without those adjuncts our program would lose a great deal of the vitality which has made it one of the finest in the country. Certainly it's easier for a student to modify his values to fit those of a single faculty member but the breadth and depth of outimulation brought by exposure to a wide variety of professional opinions quickly disabuses a opinions quickiy disabuses a formenlas one and only one solution formula: one and only one solution the lind of exposure from adinncts the kind of exposure form adunct ours get, it causes them to think. ## Iranian student, teacher question shah's policies

By Beat Fromeh

A Syrncuae University Iranian atudent and an Iranian faculty member gave their views on the political situation in Iran at yeaterday's Monday Munchies in Hendxicka Chapel.
John H. McCombe, dean of Hendricks Chapel, asked that the faculty member's request to remain unidentified be honored to protect him from reprisal by the Iranian Secret Police.
Sirous Raatgar and the Iranian faculty member, who called himself Babak, gave their views of historical and current events in Iran and answered questions from about 15 people.
Babak said that during Shah Mohammed Rexa Pahlavits rule in Iran the counPahiavis ruie iniranthecoun-

Red Cross continues philosophy of support  Editor's Note: This is the second part in a three-part series about service organizations "in Syracuse and Onondaga County.

By Naushad Mehta

During the Civil War, schoolteacher Clara Barton plunged into a massive campaign to aid Boldiers, lugging bandages, needles and boldiers, medicine to injur unselfish schoolteacher went on to form the Anselish schooiteacher went on to form the American Red Cross, under the premise that moral and physical support are vital to a person's health and well-being. Now, nearly a century later, the Red Cross still practices the same philosophy.
As one of the largest service organizations in America, the Red Cross offers a variety of programs ranging from disaster relief and counseling for war verterans to parenthood preparation courses and blood-donation drives.
The organization is made up of "people ser. ving people," as stated in a Red Cross annual service report. The organization aims to help "the most people in crisis in the least amount of time."
The Syracuse and Onondaga County Chapter at 636 S . Warren St.-the third chapter established in this country-is one of 31,000 chapters nationwide. It is funded almost solely by the United Way of Central New York, a nonprofit volunteer organization.
The iocal chapter is also divisional headquarters for Central New York, servicing 21 chapters in 15 counties, according to Betty Sherman, staff director Community Relations for the Syracuise and Onondaga County Red Cross chapter.
Of Red Cross's seven community services, the program most familiar to Syracuse University students is its blood-donation drive, which supplies blood and plasma to 44 hospitals in 15 counties. Red Cross staff member Diane Steinbach said there have-been four major blood donation drives this year, in which 915 units of blood have been collected.
Campus groups, as well as city and county residents, have played a major role in the blood drives. Steinbach said the Alpha Phi Omega drives.
"It gives, you a good feeling to know that you're helping someone, even if you dor't know Who it is," blood donor Ronald Steinback said. "It doesn't cost you anything but time." Steinthe need to donate blood. "It doesn't hurt," he the nee Another vital service provided by the Red Cross is its 24-hour disaster-relief service.
"An immediate reaction to crisis is a characteristic of the organization, according to Sherman. "We try to do things right now." Sherman explained that the organization constantly receives calls for help in dealing with all kinds of tragedies.
The disaster "action team" deals with largescale disasters, such as floods and blizzarads. Last year, the Red Cross action team supplied blizzard victims with cots and blankets, as well as transportation for stranded motorists and food deliveries to isolated outlying communities.
In addition to assiating victims of largescale disasters, the Red Cross also assists victims of smaller tragedies, such as fires, by providing food, clothing and shelter to the homeless.
To-prevent and cope with crises, the Red Cross also provides courses in first aid and parental preparation and various forms of counseling to the families of soldiers and veterans. This year, the local chapter has extended its counseling services to veterans who have spent time in the Onondaga County Correctional Facility in Jamesville.
The majority of the services offered by the Red Cross are provided by almost 5,000 local volunteers, according to Chapter Chairman Richard Troendle. Troendle added that volunteers are the key to the success of the organization.
By 1981, the American Red Cross will have been through 100 years of blizzards, floods and crises of every kind. Although it has grown into a vast, highly specialized organization, the group's original purpose has remained the same.

* Pollution study

Oitsco Lonsinued from page ont in sometimes purchasen water from Lake Ontario, Salvo said.
Several parts of the Niagara system studied laist week appeared to be severely polluted.

Other polluted areas included the outlet into the Niagara River from the portions of Two-Mile Creek, a tribuitarv ofthe Niamara River.
In:addition to the Niagara River and its tributaries, NYPLRG also sampled the $102 n d$ St landfill in Niagara Falls, near the Love Canal area where 200 residents were forced to move in August because of toxin contamination.

Toxic chemicals were buried beneath the Love Canal site by Hooker Chemical, and the toxins have been seeping to the surface in recent years. When it was discovered that the rate defects had increased sharply defects had increased sharply in the area, residents were asked to move

Today, the Love Canal area seems like a ghost town. The residents have aill moved out, and the windows in the houses are boarded.
Salvo'said the Love Canal incident is probably not an isolated-case, but instead is symptomatic of a total regulatory failure." One of the purposes of NYPIRG's present studies is to expose other possible problem areas, he added. The problem of toxin control in New York is "totally out of control," Salvo said. Last year, the Department of Environmental Conservation sent a survey to 5,500 industries in the state, asking them if they produced toxic wastes.
Four-thousand industries replied, and half of these denied producing toxic wastes. Of the 2,000 that admitted to producing: chemical toxins, the DEC selected the 85 worst cases in the atate. This year, the DEC has tested 35 of these companies for toxic discharges.
If-NYPIRG's reports documenthigh levels of toxins, Salvo said he expects a Iarge number of denunciations and denials from government officials and the preas, because people don'tlike to hear about these kinds of things.'

NYPIRG has taken about 60 samples. from the Niagara River area so far, and plans to talce about 40 more before writing its report, Salvo said.

NYPIRC. will publish its report in January and plans to publish a follow-up report that will propose "aome sane planning for the future contret of toxic compounds." Salvo said.
"Water is a God-given resource and it's got to be protected for future generations," he said.

A/teracts provides cheap, safe ride home

By Whil Davis
"How are you getting home this vagation? ${ }^{\circ}$
"I don't know. r think riu take a bus."
Aleeracte -Ride Service, 821 Univeraity Ave., helps students to get home by matching riders and drivers with common destinations.
"The' idea is' to provide a secure matching syatem for riders and drivers, Baid Sarah Siwek, director of Alteracts.
Ride Service was organized in 1972 after Karen Levy, an SU atudent, disappeared and was later found dead after she took a cide she found by advertising on bulletin boards around campus. Alpha Phi Omega, the service fraternity, began Fide Service and began fide Service and Alteracts took three years ago.
The main problem Ride Service faces is a lack of drivers. From Oct. 30 to Nov. 6, 112 riders were matched with drivers, but another 80 riders were not. Drivers tend to wait until the last minute to sign up. according to Sivelk.
To help correct this problem. Ride Service held a campaign Nov. 1 and 2 to get more drivers. The number of drivers increased a little, Siwek said.
To sign up for Ride Service, a student has to go to the Alteracts office and show his ID card. He then signs a maater sheet which lists his deatination and fills out a waiver exempting Syracuse University from responsibility in case of an accident.
As drivers sign up, they are matched to their riders. Drivers are given the names of riders and are supposed to contact them. This process can work the other way around if the driver signs up first, Siwek said.
Ride Service is funded by allocations Alteracts receives from Student Absociation, Graduate Student Or Residential Life and the Office of Student Activities.

ORL to institute changes in coffeehouse operation

By Panil Franco
Mismanagement and poor handling of some offeehoutes and anack bars in campun dorme forced the Office of Reaidential life to reorganize operations this year.
The primary focu of the reorganization is to have individual snack bars and coffeebouses become self-mentifient, said Richard Theriault coordinator of the coffeehouses and anack bers.
He said he wants all the snack bars and coffeehouses to cover their own expenses and costs and to "reinveat the surplus into the coffeehouse, snack bar or the building."
ORL operates coffeehouses or snacl bars on the Mount and in Brewnter/Boland, DellPlain and Watmon halls it plans to open one in Shaw in the near future.
The reorganization plan includes drafting a charter that lays down specific guidelines for the coffeehoures and anack bars, Theriault aid. ORL will also monitor the business of the snack bars and will maintain closer comnunications
The reorganization is in response to poor busineas performances in the past. Theriault aid.
"Several snack bars were operated at a loss in the past year or two," Theriault said. "In the past, ORL has had to pay off the debe.
For example, Dellplain's Snack Shack ac cumnlated debta of more than $$ 1,000$ by the end of last year. Theriault said.
The charter, which has been approved in casence by ORL providea guidelines on managerment and operation of the smack bars, Theriault said. It also specifies where any extra money will go and bpelis out ORL's role.
The charter specifies that extra money will be put back into the dorme to be spent on physical improvements, new equipment, programming. new furnishings in the buildings and reduction of anackbar pricen.
The charter also specinies that ORI own all space the coffeehouses and mack bars take up. pays utilities and pays professional staff. ORL also has ultimate responsibility and final say in any decision concerning snack bars and cofferhouses.
However. Therisult said this does not mesn ORL controls the individual operations of each snacik bar or coffechouse.
The charter also sets up an emengency fund for each coffeerhouse and snack bar. In the past, some snack bars have had to close down because they could not pay for repairs when a major breakdown occurred. Theriault said. The amount of the fund varies from $$ 150$ to $$ 400$.
For example, the Wataon snack bar has not opened yet this year because its refrigeration unit broke down during the summer and there was no money to fxx it
Theriault said he hopes the reorganizxtion plans will increase aervice to the students and place ORL and himaelf in a strictly adviaory capacity.

We eventually want minimal intervention with the bnack bars and coffeehouses on campus," he said.

Reorganized Day Hall Council increases resident involvement

By Debbi Sherman
When the Syracuse University Bookstore gave away a free televiaion set to the firat person to bring in $$ 5,000$ in bookstore receipta, it was Day Hall that won.
Working as a team. Day residents seen to be doing more this year than in the past.
Rick Theriault, Day director, said the increased involvement is because of a new sybtem used by dorm council members. The council now consista of floor represenLatives and any interested reaidentas Previously, the council was made up only of Hoor rebresentatives.
Naomi Halperin, dorm council president, said this "open involvernent", approach has permitted the council to expand its committese and to form three new committees. Halperin is one of five people responaible for formaing the open-involvement attitude. Halperin. Eliot Lurier, Kris Van Alstyne, Peter Katee and Judy Lscovitz got together on Labor Day and decided that in order to make their dorm council work, they would have to get more residents involved. Bet "They are the brain children' of our dorm council," Therisult said.
Theriault said be feels that because of the council's new approach, stadents are given a better opportunity to get involved. It ahow that there vare reaponsiblestudents on the are reaponsibleatudents on the Day Hall Council that really do care about the place they live in," he added.

Until two years ago a joint Fhint Hall and Day Hall Coun cil existed along with each dorm's individual council. Halperin said the joint council was discontinued because of different interesta in the two dorms. She attributed thia to the high percentage of freabmen in Flint and the larger number of upper clasamen in Day.
Halperin said the feels the Day Hall Council has maintained contact with the Flint Council and it will be involved in many upcoming activitiea ouch as a Halloween party which has proven successful in past years.

Council members meet on Sunday nighta to discuss new business, planned sctivities and any questions dorm residente may have.

SU places second in tourney

By Larry Connors
The'Syracuse University women's volleyball team fell one game short of winning the New York state championships over the weekend, losing to CortlandState in the firials.
The Orangewomen, who entered the 16 team tournament third-seeded, couldn't overcome Cortland State's tremendous height advantage, losing 11-15, 15-11, 155.
"They were so much bigger than us," Coach Elaine Goldband said. "In the last two games they stuffed us almost every time we tried to spike the ball."
Syracuse lost its opening match of the tournament to Hofstra, 6-15, 15-9, 15-12. "We played the first game well," Goldband noted. "But as was typical of us all season, we let up for the next two games."

The upset loss left the Orangewomen needing to win their next two matches to qualify for the quarterfinals. SU s next opponent was an erratic Cornell team that Syracuse had beaten earlier in the season. As was expected, SU again won easily, 15 9, 15-7.

Goldband didn't have to tell her team how important the next match was. SU was to face Queens College for a berth in the quarterfinals. What was expected to be a close match was instead one of the Orangewomen's easiest tournament victories, 15-9, 15-8.

The quartierfinals found Syracuse pitted against Colgate, a team SU had beaten twice earlier in the season. After losing the Crbt game 15-11, Syracuse again defeated Colgate winning the next two games 15-4, 15-10
Following the Colgate victory; SU's Colette Johndrow jumped into the air in jubilation but landed in-pain', spraining her ankle. The injury left the team without her for the reat of the tournament.
In the semifinals, led by substitute Nancy Pugh, the Orangewomen avenged a regular-season loss to Geneseo, winning 15-8. 15-8.

In the finals, the only obstacle standing between Syracuse and the state championship was Cortland, a team the Orangewomen defeated in ia grueling, fivegame match that opened the regular fivergame smatch that opened the reg Red season. Since then, however, the ined Dragons outstanding play had earne
In a rerun of its first encounter, Syracuse won the first game $15-11$ before the Red Dragons began blocking SU's most effective weapon, the spike, to win the final two games, 15-11, 15-5, as well as the state crown.

The Orangewomen may get the revenge they beek this weekend at the regionar tournament at Indiana University, Pa-. which both Syracuse and Cortland State have qualified for.

If a good crowd had been present at the All-University Intramural Football Championship game, it would have seen something uncommon to football fans at Syracuse University.
Pass completions.
While the varsity struggles to gain yardage through the air, Dirty Dozen quarterback Jim Gwinn found the friendly skies the easiest way to a $26-0$ shatout of Living Center division champs Day 8 .
The Hookway field was in good bhape last Tuesday as sophomore Clayton Harding hauled in three touchdown passes from Gwinn. The stubpasses from Gwinn. The stubthwarted all offensive drives that Day 8 could muster during the cold, drizuly and long afterthe col Day 8 advanced to the finals by defeating heavily-favored Kimmel 3, 16-8. Dirty Dozen had to beat an always-tough Varsity Pizza squad, 14-8, to become the Independent division champion. Led by division champion. Led by team managers Larry Marcus and Craig Nelson, Dirty Dozen the Fraternity division, Zeta Psi; which had defeated Phi Delta Theta, 6-2.
Down by 20-14, the Dirty Dozen came back to beat Zeta Psi 32-20 and advanced to the finals. As the final game proved, the Dirty Dozen's strength was its defense. Led by.Bob Palueci, who intercepted eight passes during the season, the defense posted its fifth shutout.
In other intramural action, EdGunn of Watson 2E won the Fraternity/Living Center crose-country; zace at the 1.8mile Tecuimseh Golf Course layout. Gunn's time of: 9 minutes and 57 seconds was 13 seconds better than that of Mike Gallagher of Watson 4W However, since Watson 2Edid not-field a complete team Gallagher was awarded first place in the Living Center division of the race.
Mike Greges of Kappa Phi Delta, who finished third diviaion Pai the Fraternity division. Psi Upsilon placed its Give runners higher up than aecond-place Kappa Phi Delta to win the tearn titie. Lawringon 12 aqueaked out a narrow team victory over Sadler 4 by a acore of 48-50. Watson $4 W$ ran a tight third with 52 points.
In the Independent's race, Steve Auburn of YA Finders ran a $9: 31$ to take first place. Larry Nafie, Jim Swaney and Bruce Fredrikson placed 2, 3; 4 for the $40+U p$ team to lead them to the Independent and All-Univeraity cham pionships. Even thougb pionships. Even then were able to run in the race, only Margie Gratzer chose to compete.
In tabletennis competition, the Hoing Kong Recreation Club's A team won cons vincingly over the YA Einders to take the title. ## Mills outstanding Gene Mills, SU's two-time All-American wrestler, was named the "Most Outatanding Wrestler" in this past weekend's Colgate Invitational tournament.

The tournament attracted 305 wrestlers from colleges and athletic clubs in New York state.
Milis won the 129 -pound weight class with a 7-4 decision over Ed Tyrell of Buffalo in the finals. Other- Syracuse winners were Tim Catalfo (153 pounds) and Tom Harvey (170).

Syracuse will be in action nezt weekend in the Rhode Island Invitational against Kentucky, Springfield and hoat Rhode Ialand.

Tenure gets Senate vote

Decision time has arrived for Student Association's tenure regolution.
The proposal, which would requive course evaluations for tenure candidates and make students voting members of individual college tenure com mittees, will be voted on at today's University Senate meeting.
Its chances for passage remain unclear, said jim Naughton, SA vice president for academic affairs.
"T'mi really nervous about it," Naughton said; "I think we're going to win, but I really can't say for sure"
The second section of SA's two-point propoaal, dealing with courae evaluationa, appears to have the most support.
Fourtex deans of Syracuse University's schools and colleges went a letter to the Senate Committee on Appointments and Promotions, which is formuleting the tenure proposal, recommending that the Senate pase a motion requiring course evaluation pasd a
"Idon't think the second half of the SA proposal is going to -have much trouble," said Craig $W$ Christensen, dean of the College of Law. "I'minfavor of it It'the same thing we've been doing in the College of Law for years
However, debate is likely on the first part of the SA propossal, which requires student voting on tehure committees.
The deans" letter skirted that issus, urging the Senate to proceed with "extreme caution," on "adopting a set of tenure guidelines that would fundamentaly alter the existing scheme by removing the prinicpal locus of deciaion on tenure recummendations from the faculties and deans of the schooly and colleges."
The dean's letter warl not epecikic on the matuer of axuthing a madit. yote on tenure committees bectuse theire was not unanimity on it," Christensen said.

Some of the SU schools and colleges now have students on their tenure committees as votiny members. Both the Senate and the SA proposal would make atudent voting mandatory.
"I think the deans who already have students voting in their schools are in favor of keeping it," Christensen said. "But schools that don't have students voting are probably in favor of keeping students voting are prob things the way they are."

Union effort faces competition  \section*{By Carl Johnsion}

Leadert of the attempt to unionize the supportstaff at Syracuse University have accused a branch of the AFLCIO of trying to muscle in on their efforts.

A support thaff steering commitiee has been working with the Technical Offce and Professionals division of the United Auto Workers im an tittempt to uniomize the SU support stafi.

But Nancy Klein, a steexing committer member said Biranch of the AFL-CIO has distributed collec ive bargaining atuthorization cards to all uypport ataff. The cards authorize the union to act as burwaining agent for the aignier. If 30 percent of the fuculty siga the cards, the National Labor Relations Buard may set up union elections.
The Service Employees-International Union of the AFL-CIOhas been mailing the authorization cards te teaff members at their offices and homes, Klein waid.

The cards, if signed, would authorize the AFL-CIO union as the bargaining agent for the suppurt staff.
SEIU currently representss employees from Food Service, Physical Plant and the libraries.
Ann Godvin, anfother member of the steering committee that is working with the UAW, said she had no idea what prompted SEIU to diatribute the cards.
"We"re terribly concerned that people will get intu a union they know nothing about" she said. Gudwin said the UAW has not passed out authorization cards "because people are not ready for that yet" Marshall Lloyd Blake, director of organizing for Local 200 of the SEMU, anid his organization dis tributed the cards after the realization that "there is ann element that wants to be represented by our union.'

Hesaid he thinks the employees at $S U$ would be in a stronger position if they all belonged to the same union.
"Successes in colleges in the U.S. have cume where the entire staff has been organized wall-to-wall." Blake said.

Blake added that a number of the support staff has simned SEIU's cards, but he refused to reveal the exact number.
He said SEIU offered to work with the steering com-

Part-time teaching: full-time responsibility

I have been waiting patiently for some of my freshmen abudente to come to my defenue as a parttime instructorin the freahman English department. However, mont of them are too involved in writing and reviging weeldy essays, which imptls meto take a few moments from my weekly essay reading, tutorial duties and courae preparation to illuminate the recent controversy concerning the hiring of parttime staff, as it pertains to freshman English, at Syracuse University.
I find it incredible that no one han yet addremsed the most germane iagues: does the freshman Englinh program (English 101-102) at SU. fulfill its mission. and is the course well-tanght? Since Hall of

Martha S. Hiestand

Languages is being renovated and I therefore cannut shout my ernphatic "yes" answers from a fourth-floor window, let me contend in writing that freshmup English at Syracuse is a uniquely designed. well-udministered and well-taught course.
Anyone even glancing through the omnipresent English 101-102 Student Manual seew the lugieal design of the course, the aelfpaced and pasa/nonpass features, the availability of supplemental tutoring, and the program's total dedication to the writing. What a reader of the Student Manual does not bee, however, is the concomitant requirement for tmall classes: English 101-102 classes taught by graduate teaching assiatants are limited to fifteen students; thome tanght by part-time instructors are Limited to twenty stadents.
A limited administrative slaif miraculously implements this program, one that reaches the majority of the freshman class (this year approximately 2700 students), and also affects the quality of the instruc* tion by developing extenaive curziculum materials, by wapervising the instruction and the instructors, and by recruiting and selecting a stafi of about 70 TAa and PTI (part-time instructors).

To further ensure that freshman English is welltaught, all new inatructors attend a summer workshop, maike ase of the ingtructors* manimals and other guides that have been developed for the course and participate in ongoing paper-marking workshops.
Obviously, then, my view of the program and the staff contradicts many of the statements or fina plications conveyed in the recent Daily Orange ar ticies and editorials. In my view. "part-time" instruc* tors are part-time in name only. They carry full-time teaching loads and schedule open office hours for each section they teach. I maintain that English department inatructors are in fact more ackiessible than are many professors. (Perhaps this conclusion is tinged somewhat by my own experience as a student when many of my professors emulaved Major Major in "Catch-22," who, as you recall, didn"t want anyont to come to eee him unlesse he was out.)

Further, PMIs are thankfully not obligated to coinduct research, to publish or perish (although muny instructors do write because they want tol or to sit on faculty committees. PIIa may therefore forus their energies on teaching freshman English. A freshman learning to write does not require a PhD-trained professor as his instructor, one who is likely to have a fixation on John Donne's meditations or Shation on John Donne's meditations or Shakegpeares comedic vision. The tudutht needs someone who will help him achieve competency in thinking and writing logically, in organizing a paragraph or in untangling his symtax.

My conclusion that PTIS are the best choice porssible for teaching freshman English does not anwwer other alient issues raisud during the debate. The questions of what is adequate compensation for filling an inordinately-demanding position well or whether SU is golely trying to save money netd to be resolved. ## SU's 'Dome': an election year porkbarrel

The following is an editorial from The Spectrum, the Studert newspaper at Spectilm, the Sudert newspaper at 1978.

Among the thinga that we could say about our wretched Governor Hugh Carey is that he just doesn't give up. Weeks after alapping our faces with an $$ 18$ million gift to SUNY Stony Brook for a new dental school while the financially strapped dental center here risks the loss of accreditation, Carey has signed perhaps his most heinous misappropriation to date, $$ 15.3$ million for a domed stadium at - of all places for Syracuse University. Well, will blunders never cease?

While Sypacuse officials, coincidentally call their school $S U$, they aurely aren't clever enough to convince

etters  Support the tenure proposal

To the editor:

At today'a Univeraity Senate meeting. a subject of great importance to the university community will be discussed and munity will be discussed and hopefully voted on. The concept of student involvement in the tenure process is one of areat concern both faculty and studerts alike. At the Senate meeting of Oct. 11, the Committee on Appointments and Promotions presented its proposal for tenure guidelines. Speaker after speaker pointed out examples of ambiguities and inconsistencies. It was clearly unacceptable to the representatives in Stolkin Auditorium.
There has been no indication that he proponal has been reworked Because of the broad nature of the proposal, its fate in the Senate is uncertain. For that reason and because we felt mandatory studen involvement in the tenure process was an iasue to be dealt with this semester. Jim Naughton and ${ }^{-1}$ decided a separate document, one dealing solely with student in volvement in the tenure process might be better received. With th help of several faculty members and some intercsted deans, we wrote the following proposal which will be presented at the Senate meeting:
Be it resolved that

1. Graduntes and undergraduales from within the school or college membert on the achool or college tenure-granting committee.

- 2. Each cepartment, school or college will secure evaluations of teaching effectiveness of the candidate effective immediately and each academic unit shall establish procedures for the systematic collec tion of such evaluations. These evaluations will be used by the tenure committee in its decision.

Student support is vital to passing this proposal. Speak to your teachera. Tell them you want to help in the tenure process. There are many ways to improve teaching per formance and thus improve the institution: gelfevaluation, peer evaluation and, of course, student evaluation. Students see their professors from a different viewpoint. but because that viewpoint is different, it is no less important.
Supporting the tenure proposal may not have the glamour of the bookstore boycott or the union build ing protest, but it is no leas im portant. A lot of people have worked hard to get the proposal as far as it has gone. Give them your support Show up at $4: 15$ today in Stolkin Auditorium in the Phyaics Building and lend your support

PLO propagandiats are faced with a dilemma they cannot resolve: on the one hand, they cannot openly say that their aim is to liquidate or expel the is raelia; on the other hand, they wish Palestine to be an Arab state (Arab state. No. 23). The PLO is therefore neither a party nor a partner to negrotations. Its philooophy and deeda cannot lead either to peace or to recon ciliation, but areprescriptions for strife Habayeb's rhetoric concerning

Fioniam amounts to a 1984-style attempt to rewfite history, it is a perversion of historical and contem porary fact which seeks to undermine arael's right to exist. It is designed to prepare the ideological ground for os tracizing, enfeebling, and ultimately destroying the group identity of Jews Assuming that Habayeb remarks about Zionism stem from honest ignorance, I feel compelled to introduce him to the subject:
When the jews. exiled from their land in the 7th century B.C., sat by the rivers of Babylon and wept. prayed and sought ways to go home, that was Zioniam.
When they rose up. David after David against Goliath after Goliath, to defy invader after invader, that was Zionism. When they volunteered from Palestine and the world over to establish Jewish azmies that fought on the side of the allies in World War I, that was Zionism. When they formed the Jewish Brigade in World War II to Fight Hitler while Arab leaders supported the Nazis, that was Zionism. When Jews went to the gas chambers with the name of Jerusalem on their lips, that was Zionism.

Concerned about human righte, Habayeb? Take a look at yourown bac Kyard! Inner Secrets/Santana (Columibin)

For. years, pulaating Latin rhythme have characterized the music of guitariat Dovadip Carlos Santaria. However, on the master's latest LP. Iriner Secrets, Santana has deviated Secrets, Santanahas deviated from his traditional musical formats and experimented with different sounds, with excellent reaults.

Diversity is the key to the success of Inner Secrets. Many of the cuts have a distinct of the cuts have a distinct hardrock, flavor, featuring driving guitars and perdriving guntars and percussion. but without Santana's traditional Latin rhythms. Songesuch as "Open Invitation" and "Wham!" effectively illuatrate this change.

Other cuts on Iraner Secrets have a rather mellow, laidback sound, again devoid of any Latin connotations, as on the cut, "Stormy."

Despite the diversity of these cuts, Santana has not abani doned his musical heritage entirely. On "Move On" and "Spaniah Rose" the Latin element still peraiats; but is coned down and. used to entance, rather than dominate, the music
All.in all, Inner Secreta has to be one of Santana's best efforta. This album ham thown that the master of Latin rock can also do different thing. with music-and do them well.

Tormato/Yes (Atlantic)

A lack of direction, poor musicianship and nonsensical sound effects plague Tormato, the latest and worst effort to date by the Britith progreative rock group, Yes.
To begin with, moat of the songs are totally pointless. The music goes offon tangents and the main musical themes become mudidled behind sound ecome cauddied berindsound breathleas singing of vocaligt oreathess singing of vocalist Jon Anderson, as on the cuts Release"
Release.
In addition to the poor quality of the muaic, the mosicianship hak never been worse. Rich Wakeman's soaring synthesizers, Chris Alan We droning - bass and Alan White's drumming are at their all-time worst. The only redeeming quality is that they tend to get loat in themusic. Of all the musicians, only guitarist Steve Howe stand out.
After the realease of their atrong comback L.P. Going for the One in 1977, Yes seems to have slipped back into the doldrums once again. If the band is to survive am acreative musical force, itis obvious that it must take some time to sit down and sort things out and start all over again.

Stage/David Bowie (RCA)

Several years ago. David Bowie proved he was one of the music induatry's firiest live performers with the release of his first double live L.P, David Live. Since that time, Bowie" music has hit the skids, and with the release of his second double liye L.P in four years Stage, Edwie hus shown that his live performances have hit the skids as well.
Simply stated, Stage is boring. The entire album Iacks life as. Bowie drones out multitude of monotonous from bia wotest studio row an Hatest Exterid Now and Reroes. Extended versions of boring instrumen tals, such as "Warszawa" and speed of Life," vare characteristic of the LP's
The album featares a few good cuts, such as the title cut from the Station to StatioritiP "TVC 15*" "Ziggy Starduat" and the title cut from Heroes, but these tracks are not enough to save the album from the depths of monotony.

There $h$ an been some speculation $n^{-\quad}$ hat- Bowie released this album to try and reyive his angring carber. Howewow if Bowiorielenses zith more albums like litipart thite tired efforts, it's obviotis Bowie's career does not' have much of a fature.

Mission helps alcoholics cope, aids the poor, underprivileged

Editor's note This is the last of c fhreepart serien about servire organizations in Syracuse and Onondaga County.

By Cara Schmid
It all started 88 years ago in a Washincton street basemetuary for onequarter million Syracuse area residents.
The Syracuse Rescue Mission, 120 Gifford St. is funded by the county Department of Mental. Health, the United Way, the Sheltered Workshop and contributions. Is services include treatment for alcotolics family counseling alconolica, famely cince al oops.
Since alcoholismis the third argest health problem in the United States, the mission has expanded its alcohol-related facilities according to Clarence Jordan. executive irector.
The newest innovation is Operation Bigfoot, initiated two summers ago to reduce the number of street alcoholics.
In connection with the Syracuse Police Department, mission workers combed the streets, and transported alcoholics to their facilities.
Downtown merchants believe Operation Bigfoot has cleaned up the area. Many cleaned up the area. Many want the surnmer program to continue.
In addition to Operation Bigfoot, the mission offers an extended sobering-up program and ARS (Alcohol Rehabilitation Service).
The sobering-up service is a lo-day program equipped to handle ten. maliem and fous comalequitho ratio of male'to tomale patients ha a to.one, yorclan said.
ARS is a 40-day residence program. It is designed for whase problemate aicoholice whose problems interfere with their jobs. Many ARS clients are in the midale-income rackets, Jordan said.
Besides the new services, the mission utilizes existing services, such as Operation Outreach and AIDA (Aid Incentive to the Debilitated Alcoholic).
Outreach's van, operated by trained medics, transports intoxicated mey asid women to the mission. This 24 -hour service is the first of its kind in the state.

Contrary to what sorne people believe, the mission is not medically equipped.
"The trend we are seeing is that we are getting peychiatric patients we are mot equipped for," he added.
The Misaion is geared to hande-minor cuta and abYokions, said Bob Cagry, personnel coordination, but other medical problams should be referred to hompitale.
A spacial program wise designed for homelese and tinumient alooholice. Con hinual coungeling and support are vital to the maccess of the program.

Street Family Services Center. This center primarily serves blacks with one-parent families who have police or educational problems, Jordan said.
Families can also benefit from the food service program if they are involved with the residential, work therapy or transient programs. Approximately 300 meals are served daily between 7:30 a.m. and 8 p.m., Caggy said.

Spiritual services also are an integral part of the program. The mission is non. denominational, althoughitis affiliated with the Intermationsil Union of Gospel Minsions:
The mission also assists the handicapped, some of whom operate the Sheltered Workshop
The workshop operates six retail thrift ships in Syracuse, repairs and reconditions clothing. furniture, appliances and other donated items. More than 100 drop boxes are located in the city.
Since the construction of its new facilities a year ago, the mission has not planned any bew programs. According to fordon, the staff will concenrate on strengthening present aervices.

Rugby  A sport for hearty souls

Rugby players always seem to talk about the heartiness of their species, of the joys of padless body contact and communing with mud.

Their sport is one auppended in time in the 19th century when there were no helmets and shoulder pads and when football and rugby were. the same thing. One day, however, an inventive apirit picked up a ball in rugby and threw a forward pass - foothall was born, and rugby stayed where it was in the scrums and in the mud and without the padding, thanik yout

At Syracuse University the tradition is carried on by the SU rugby team. which weekly meets the mud and itsopponents with an oversized ball. The Eame is more intixnate than its American colssin, and at times small with your breath by dring an opponent With your breath by drinking Tobasco sauce beforehand can make all the Norence.
No full scholarships or pro carew await the winners-or the losers-in the aport: just a trip to the pub where they again show the heartiness of their species.

Where is it now, the glory and the dream?

When they robbed John Fitzerald Kennedy of his life on that ounny November Friday 15 years ago, they also nobbed the preaent.collegeaged generation.

memories begin with images of a motorcade and a wave of the hand that suddenly melt into a grotesque blur of termor

We cannot remember his profile of youth and vigor and his courage of Cuba and civil rights. All we posgess are fuzzy memories of dazed parenta, shocked teachers and confused, childhood minds.

Our winde cannot atretch back to that glorious day in January when he took power, wooing the nation and the world with his vacant " $r$ " $s$ " and refreshing mixture of new and old ideals that formed from his frozen breath.

All there is left for us to grasp is a dark and rainy Saturday, a flagdraped coffin resting on a black cafleteque and an honor guard atanding atiffly and silently for what seemed an eternity.
We can't recall the witty press confereances, the Hyanmis sailing vacations or the incongruous image of the vigorous young man relaxing in a rocking chair.

Our memories will only give us a aunny Sunday with a restless black horse named Black Jack and the hatunting sounds of the grinding of the caisson"s whels on Penneylvania Avenue.

We can't remember his wife's breath-taking beauty and grace at the Inaugural Ball or her continental atyle as she charmed DeGaulle in Paris.

The first memories of our lives convey only her blood-aplatiered pink suit and vacant-eyed horror; pink suit and vacant-eyed horror; memories of her black dress with the memories of her black dress with the veil firttering in the brecze that revealed the brave head ahe held revealed the brave head ghe held highas she followed him to his final resting place.

Our mindis cannot let us recall the electricity he sent through the inaugural crowd when he asked the nation to ask not what their country could do for them, but to ask what they could do for it; nor of the hysterical throng in Berlin when he told them he was one of them; nor of the weeping and cheering crowd in Ireland when he told them he was coming back in the apring.

All we see "in the dark back ward and abyas of time" is a brisk autumn Monday. A Monday of dead leaves Monday. A Monday of dead leaves and limbs. A Monday of muined drums, "Hail to the Chief' and a little boy's salute. A Monday of dead tle boy's salute. A hopes and dreams.
Wopes and can't remmember the triumphs of the missiles, of the fires successes in space or the Peace Corps. Our memories begin only with the images of the green grass of Arlington, a foldied flag and an eternal flame.
We can't recall how young he made us feel, how he gave ug confidence and compasaion or how he got the country moving again. Those are only cold words written on distant and unfeeling pages.
No matter how much the his torians tell us of that fabled time called "Camelot" and nomatier how they will judge it, it will always be a tragedy of this generation that we almost, but not quite, got to know him.

Theatreplans 1920's fanfare on fiftiath year

Spotlights will sweep the aliee, antique automobiles will line South Salina Street, and they 17 roll out the red carpets when the Laindmaric Theatre celebratesits 50 th anniversary Nov. 25.
A re-creation of the Gateby days, complete with veudeville acts, old newareels, sing alongs and a speakeasy party - will conclude the theatre's 1920 a month.

The program, a benefit for the theatre's restoration fund is to include performances by comedian Henny Youngman, recording atar Alan Jones and fan dancer Sally Rand.

Built in the heyday of great stage acts, the theater's for tuness gradually declined between Worla War II and the early 70s. By 1975, Lowe's, the original home of the theater was to be demolished and replaced by a shopping complex Concerned cisizens, volunteers, theater en chusiasts and architecture devotees combined to perform what the theater staff calls a modern-day miracle. They saved Lowe's, which is now in the National Register of Hiatoric Places.
Tickets for the anniversary event are $$ 10.50, $ 9.50$ and 88.50 and are available at the Landrmark Theatre box office. 362 S. Salina St., or by mail.

The next DO will be Nov. 29.

As a 15 -minute documentary on disco dancing, "Saturday Night Fever" would have had potential. However, as a full-length movie it farils to do anything except provolee one quemtion in the mind of the viewer. Why?
Why was thiis movie made? "Saturday Night Fever" is worse than bad-it is pointleas.

ing to break out of his environment. Producer Robert Stigwood and hin gang took this trite idea which has only been filmed several million times before, and made a movie around it. The result is somewhat like Chinese Water Torture, numbing at firgt but eventually enough to drive you out of your mind.
With a plot so poar, one might huge success, inspiring postera and albums and making a household word of John Revolting-er Travolta, that is. That's right, the star of this movie is

Erasing last season's bad memories

By Joel Stashenko

The season that started with the greatest promise of any in the greatest promise of anyin one of the greatest disappointments. greatest disap An almost inexplicable foss to Western Kentucky in the Mideast Regional Tournamerit Mfieast Regonal Tournament Orange season. However. an earlier one-point lose to St Eanier one-point loss to 3 , of the ECAC Upstate Regional Playofis was in many ways a more damaging upset.
"The way we finiahed up the season was a major disaippointment," SU head coach Boeheim said. "It left a sour caste. It should be interesting to see the reaction."
Last year was a grand experiment for Syracuse, which was forced by necessity to invent starting lineup averaging 6 foot- 6 in height. Dale Shackleford found himself at guard much of the tme alignment while SU played only one trueguard, the now-graduated Ross Kindel.
It was successful for most of the year, but in the closegames at the end of the season Syracuse was without a grard who corid take the final shot in a close same.

This season Syracuse will revert to a more traditional height line-up with Roonevelt Bouie, Lowis Orr and Dale Shackleford in the front court and any two of four more ex. pexienced and smaller guards. in the back corirt.
"We wili play two guards," said Syracuse head coach.Jinn Boeheim. "This year the guarde will be guarda. Dale grill be back at forward."
The guards could be the key. The four leading backcourt men are 6 -foot junior Hal Cohen, 6-foot-2 senior Mark Cuhit, and a pair of 6 -foot-2 sophomores, Eddie Moss and Marty freadd.
"Each guard has a different strength, Boeheim naid. "Eddie Moss is more of a derenbive guard who passes well. Marty and Mara Cubit are more all around players."
While the graard situation is unsettlel the story at forward is equally noncertain. Syracuge must find a way to make up for the loss of Marty Byrmes Gow a promising rookis with the Ahomix Suns) and his 16.7 points per game scoring average.
Most thought SU had the answer in Louis Orr, but Orx has injured his knee and it is unknown whether he will be able to play soon. The prestare then switchea to Danny Schayes, the 6-foot-il sophomore who is a good outgide shooter having hit on a team high 56 percent of his shots as a treshman.

Roosevelt Boule returns as center, but without the point production of Bymes, and Orr questionable, the 6-foat-11 junior center will have to take more than a passing interentin the offenge. Switching back to the forward spot, will be Shacnleford, the malti-talented senior.
*Dale Shackleford is one tough dude," said SU"s new as. sistant coach Brendan Malone. "I wouldn't be scared to have him go against any player in the conntry, 1 . go against a gorilla.
A gorilla won't have to be faced, but furgers and Kentacky will. MaybeSU's bitgest opponent will be iteale.
"We are better offensively this year, not quite as good defensively:" Boeheim gaid. whe shooting is better, but the speodif not as sood as is' been. We have-question. marle."

But thanks to three factors, the 100 atmonphere that won Manley national notoxiety-and still scares stconger teams away-has dissipated.
Finst, the student section known as the Koa was officially disbanded in 1975. Then, Manley was retovated before lapt season, with its geating increased from 8,200 to 9,500 and ita wooden benches replaced by individual plastic seats.
Another pormible explanation for the decline in rowdiness is the fact that SU keepm on winning, a habit that bxeeds complacency within Manley aind helps it become a morecivilized place to playa banketball game.
"Let's face it," Boeheim said. "À crowd docan't scare the better teams away, If couches think they can win here, they won't care if they get hit by a brick outhover is St. John's Lou Carnesecca, whoae Redmen will face the Orangemen Feb. 17 in Manley.

Two years ago, when St. John's was last in Manley, Camesecca was pelted by orange slices and, enroute to the locker room for halftime, hit flush in the face by a ghower of peanuta
"The fans up there are very provincial, and they should be;" Carnesseca said. "There's nothing wrong when you cheer and scream and yell, but you have to be carefur that the crowa doesn't atart throwing things and yelling personal insuits.
job to should be the administration's job to enture that viaiting teams are given their due reapect," he continued. somal and starts yelling things abont sonal and starts yelling things abont lineage and heritage and geneology, you could start a riot."

Carnesecca added, however, that he has not been to the civilized, remodeled Manley, and emphasized that SU' ascendancy as a national basketball power rather than an oppressive home court is the chief reason the Orangemen are so difficult to beat in Manley.
"Who beat the Dodgers?" Carnesecca asked. "The Yamkees or the fans? The crowd doesn't play, the players do."
Boeheirn agreed with Carnesecca, pointing out that jugt mbout every national basketball power is prac tically impregnable on its home court.
However, deapite what Boeheim and Carnesecca aay, the fact remains that SU in Manleyhas become synonymoun with smakes in a pit.

Much of the notoriety can be traced to the rise of the Zoo in the early '70a. which paralleied. SU's ascent to the edite ranios of college basketball.
Igmited by fiery former canch Roy Danforth, who left for: Thlame in 1976 Zoo membera won fame for such antic: as monning a Manhatern player by atriting him in the head with an arange, and ewiping some Rutgem warm-up jackets, chociant down a Scarlet knight trainer in the procema.

One of the eariber, drametic victorien that helped propal the Orange into the national rpotlisht occurred in 1973 when Syracuea npeats highly regarded St. Wohm's tam 80-70 before a then unheard-of cxowd of 9,521 fanatics.
"You mow with the size of that crowd and the noiee they mande, we had chilla going on-court and playinct recalled Mile Lee, wiro pizizad guaxd for that sU equad.

teammates. "Rich is an excellent paseer and ballhandler," Boekeim described.
"He sees the court very well and has a very good feel for the Kame." Malone added.
Malone is also impressed with Harmion's versatility and his progress in learning defenses. "He can play either point guard, forward or the gecond guard," Malone aaid. "He is more advanced on defense than the other two at this point."

SThe most difficult part of Payton's jump to college basketball has been learning to play tougher defense. "I'm starting to get used to playing really hard-nosed defense." Payton said.
The man whom Boeheim labels "as good an athlete as we've ever recruited" is apparently progressing well:-
"You can see the improvement every day," Malone observed. "He's capable of be ing a very good defensive Player."
Ed Gooding, a-6-foot-7, $185-1$ pound forward. is the tallest of the three freshmen. Comparing Grooding to starting forward Lowis Orr seems inevitable. The coaches rexard Gooding as a very good outside shooter, which is Orr's primary forte. Last winter, Gooding averaged 25 points per game for Xavier High School.
The slim freshman from New York City admite the transition to the college game has been difficult.
Defense has been the toughest part of the adjuatment for Gooding. "He has to work on strengthening his legs so he can play more legs so he can play more naid.
The third-year coach is pleased with the progress of pleased with the prosresa his highly touted freshmen group. ${ }^{\text {There was tremendous }}$ group. There was tremendous, competition for all three," Boeheim recalled. "We have one of the top five recruiting classes in the East and are among the top 30 in the country.:
The talented crop of experienced Orangemen should prevent any of the trio from earning starting positions.. "Our program is hopefully strong enough that we won't have to start any freshmen." Boeheim zaid.
However, Malone said since Syracuse will use a full-court pressure defense and a fastbreak offense all three freshmen can make big contributions. "The intensity on defense is going to show, and we're going to have to shuffle people in and out." Malone explained.

- Boeheim agreed that everybody will see playing time, but said the freshmen will be brought along slowly. "As each of them improve, they "ll see more and more playing time," Boeheim said. "How much dependa on their progress."
How much they develop could help the Orangemen take major strides along the NCAA championship road.

Orange schedule aims for NCAA bid

By Brad Bierman

As inevitable as the opening of another- SU baskethall season are complaints thatSU plays a weak and unattractive schedule, filled with the likes of Whittier College, Cornell, Colgate and LeMoyne.
However, closer scrutiny of SU's 1978-79 schedule revesis that the Orangemen do things no differently than other perenially tournament-biund teams.

The regular season is designed for a team to play thi top competition in their see. top competation in their sen, before the tournaments," SU head coach Jim Boeheing said. 'I definitely feel that vith teame like Rutgers, $S t$. John's and Connecticut on our John's and Connecticut on our shedule, we will be well-tested schedule, we will be well-tested

Borkeim is also content with this year's home achedule.
'This year's home schedule ia by far the most attractivawe have had," Boeheim said. "We have sotten the best poasible teams we can, with the best possibility of pleasing our fande"
"It'i a matter of principle:" -mandrut coach Maxk Meaplory: said. "You can have a really tough achedule and maybe win 17 or 18 games and not go to a tournament, or have an easier schedule and win 20 to 22 games and go to the NCAA."
A major problem in bringing better schoola from the East and to her aechions of the country to Syracuge is that many schoole already belong to a conference of bome sort and don't really need gamea againat teamb, of ithe Orangemen's caliber.

Ono mach neutral court game will feature the Orangemen in action at Madison Square Garden against South Carolina in Eebruary, and there are several other road games that will provide SU with stern tests.
"Road games are always tough." Boeheim said. "The Kentucky Invitational boasts three trong teams ind Illinois, Texas As.M and Kentucky, while our own Carrier Classic should be a good tournament with Iona, Utah State and bur Girst-ronad opponent. Western Michigan."

There is a continued effort to make the bome schedule more inviting in the future. Boeheim said there has been a beries of talks with both Detroit and the University of Nevada-Lae Vesas for homeand-home series beginning next season:
"We"ve started to assenble the talenf here to g'ainreapect from other top tawnos," Malone from other top tanns, Malone playinip thege terme and to playing these teamap and to onild wo our repatation. We want to reach the Einal four,-0r ven win a national cham pionshap."

Shack assumes leading role

By.J.T. Brady

Dale Shackleford has played many parts during hie performance on the Manley stage - centex, forward, guard and has drawn rave reviewn in each.
Now, as he enters his fourth year as a player in Coach Jim Boeheim's "A fnally been called upon to play leading man captain.
"Dale is one of the best all-around players we've had aince I've been here," Boeheirn said. "The big changethis year ts that as captain, he's showing great leaddrahip qualities."
"Shack," however, discounts the effect his leading role will have in relation to his supporting cast
"It doesn'taffect my game," heasid. "I just feel that if I do well, the rest of the guys will do well. If I work hard, so will the reat of the guys."
Shackleford has always spiced his performances with his own nair and atage presence - whether it be boastfully taunting a hapless opponent or knischieviously sneaking into the viaitors foul-line huddle. This, too, Shack says will not change.
"I'II do the same things I've always done," he promised. "Captain is just a title."
Shack is primarily a"team" player, as his team-leading mark of 84 assists last year indicates. The 6 -fooll 6 senior is never one to spurn the opportunity for a virtuoso performance, however. Last year agsinst Canisius, Shack broke ahead of the field, loped gracefully toward the basket, and as che eager Manley patrons rose to their reet heelec trined the throng
"When you do something like that, the crowd reacts," Shackleford asid. "It tyets crowd reacta, and you want to get more and more like that."

This year, the."Shack-show" is being watched by more than just SU fans. "He's the experienced player." Boeheim asid. "When you only have one senior who has played a lot, the nest of the guys all look to him."
Among Shackleford's mont ardent observers are the team's freahmen. "I talk to most of them." he said. "I bell them about the coach's aystem. Coach Boeheim has his own style of play he likes to employ. Coming right from high achool, it takea a lot of adjustment to college ball.
Iike any good performer, Shackleford also drawz a barge audience of critictotherwise known as National Basket ball Association scouts
"I defixitely believe he'll be drafted," Boeheim said. "He's a good passer, great defensive player. His shooting has to continue to improve, though, that's his only weakness.
"If I get drafted, I'II definitely take ad. vantage of the chance," Shackleford said. 'However, if I don't get drafted, I won't worry about pursuing a career in basketball.
A Speech-Communications major. Shackleford said he would like to be ax insurance salesman if a professional basketball career foes not materialize. Before he considers performing in the "big-tirne," however, Shack mus concentrate on-the final act of his SU career.

Right now I'm just looking for a good year and a winning season," he said. "We still have a lot to improve. The offenseis going to be there, we just have to work on the defense."
As the second-highest scorer (14.0) on last year's 22-6 troupe, Shackleford performed in many onesided Mariey comedies, only to see the season end comedies, only to see the season en to Western Kentucky.
"This year we're not thinking ahead, we're taking one game at a time, no matter if weire playing Kentucky. Colgate ar Cornell," he said. "Western Kentucky was a prime example of looking ahead. Nobody had ever heard of hem, we took them too lightly, and we rot bumped ofir Shackleford recalled meeting a player on the Polish national team who had been drafted by the New Orleans yazz of the NBA but had to decline the offer. "He couldn't speak English, so he didn't understand the money aystem here," Shack explained.

Ironically. the Jazz tops the list of NBA teams Stackleford would like to play for.

The New Orleans area is nice," saida smiling Shackleford. "And the weather is nice, too" he added, an important con sideration for a person raised in Utica and educated at Syracuse.
When Shackleford is not "on-stage" at Manley or at hia skytop apartment with his dog Bernie, he can often be found "晾ializing" at the Orange.
"Off the court. I'm-looking to have a good time - I enjoy anything involving people," he said.- -I go to the Orange a lot, and I have a lot of friende hat go there Shack said he also has many friends from Utica who travel to SU to watch his Manley performances. Those friends in clude his parents.
"I had the opportunity to visit about 100 schools after high achool," Shae kfeford recalled. "But I wanted to play somewhere close to home. where my parents could watch me play Ialso
Now, three years and 1072 pointa lateir. Shackleford is a large part of that siyle, which is charzeterized by success. Only one part of the plot. remains to be revealed - thatis, whetherthes curtain will once again be drawry too swiftlyon the show, or will instead remain open until the leadirg man finally gets his lady - an NCAA championship.

Confidence. Jim Boeheim kept repeating that word. Confidence. Dale Shackleford used it. Confidence: It was the first word that came to Hal Cohen's mind Confidence. Roosevelt Bouie himself kept saying it.
Confidence is the word everyone is using to describe Roosevelt Bouie at the middle point of his college basketball career at. Syracuse- Although it has taken two seasons, it abpeari that the 6 foot-11 center from Kendesil is ready to take chiarge and become a key factor in the Syracuse offense.
Bouie has been working on bis moves and shooting mince the end of last beaison, when he averaged 10.5 points per game.

Orr: Whateve hapenened to o ouls?

By Michael Eisen

Two years ago, Louis OTr was a clasaic "pleeper." Unknown and unheraided when he arrived on campus, the Cin cinnati native proved to beas, major aur. prise as a freshman in SU'隽 $26-4$ meason. Last year many SU fans thought the sophomore Louis OTr was also a gieeper. The feeling was that instead of arriving at the arena ready toplay, Orr had taken at wrong turn and ended up in slumberland.

After leading the team's acorera in three of the first four games, Orr appeared to slack off. In the remaining 24 Games he was one of the top two acorers only seven times. Orr wat charged with being incomaititent and many felt his frosh season had been
"Louis didn't play as well as a lot of people expected him to play - and they were expecting quite a lot after his freshman year, saidSU head coach Jim Boeheim. "But that doesn't mean he didn't play well. He did, In fact, Louis played extremely well:*
Ort averaged 12.8 points and 7.7 rebounds per garne last year. both of which exceeded his freshman totals. In addition, he made 51.9 of his field goal attempts, the second straight year he connected on more than half.
"I think I improved last year," Orr gaid. "I zot more confidence in my game, became more knowledgeable and inn. proved my defensive rebounding."
He accomplished all this under some very difficult circumstances.

- Orr's father died just prior to last season, which Boeheim says "had a very ceaponaticaffect on Louis ag it would on any young man.

The senson was also tough for Ory from a atrategic atandpoint. Many times SU played Marty Byrnes and DaleShackleford at forward together, thereby decreasing Orr's playing time.
"We felt at times we could do different things with a different combinationsuch as preas," said ansistant coach Bernie Fine. "But that talkes nothing away from Lovis. We felt he had an excellent year."
The praise from both coachem is astiofying, but Orr feels hestill has a lot of improving to do. Hespent half of this past summer lifting weights, both to improve his upper body strength and increase his weight As a reatil, the G-foot 9 junior, formerly known as the only student who could hide behind a lightpole, has increaned his weight from 165 to 185 pound
In addition, Orr played basketball imost every day. "Louis always works haxd," Boeheim said. "'This summer he concentrated on getting atronger, whichwill improve his all-around game. He's ahown a lot of improvernent in pre-
Unfortunately, the junioir also injured himself in those same drills. On October 26th Orr twisted his right knee in practice. The result was damaged cartilage Which has produced fiuid on the knee. Later. Orr aggravated the knee, and it now appears he will not be able wo prac ce al fil speed ancil next week.
The injury puts a question mark at the end of one of the key atatements for the 1978 season. Will it be the Louie and Bouie Show once more?
Bocheim has said Orr and center Roosevelt Bouie must start to dominatea game more. "They are upperclasamen and must play accordingly," anid the orth.
Orr grees. "We have to take over the leadership on the court, and become more aggressive in our all-around play," he said.
Both Boeheim and Fine believe Ort can play pro basketball when his collegiate days bre over. While patare of the possibility, the forward is not obaesmed with it.
'It would be something good for fulfilling a personal dream." he admitted. But it's not my number one aspiration. I out Ill still be heit if I got the chan don't:"

If the NBA never beckons, Orr has other avenues to turn to. He recently switched his major to permonnel and industrial relations and has a career in management in mind. "I want to be the owner of my own busimese - maybe a sporting goods atore, " he says.
A career can be dealt with in the future. For the preseat, SUI fans would be happy to see Louis Ort play basketball as well an they think he did two years ago and as well as he really did last year.

Midway through the seconat half of Syracuse's'game againit Ciboma of Yugoslavia at Manley Field House the Orangemen led by 45 points Hal. Cohen, Syracuse's dependable junior guard, led another fast break downcourt, but at the lagt moment whipped a behind-the-back pass which fiew out of bounds.
" 1 knew, I didn't have to look over there," said Cohen of the Syracuse bench, wherea fate warse thar line drills awaited him-the wrath of Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim.
"Let's go Halt" boomed the angry voice as Boeheim glared in disgust. "For crying out loud. . . Let's go!"
"Turnovers still upset him the most," Cohen said. "They make him the maddest"

Boehein's temper has not been tried all that often in his three years at Syracuae. His teams have oniy lost 10 times.
"He is an intelligent coach," said assistant coach Berrie Fine. Fine has been with Boeheim since 1963 when Boeheim made the Boeheim rince 1963 when Boeheim made the SU team as a walk-on and Fine was the team'a manager. "He has become calmer in his two seasons here. I think a new coach has a hyper as the time has gone by.;

The string is now up to eight.
"I made a rather quick tranaition to head coach here," Boeheim said. "We signed Roonevelt Bouie immediately and that made it Rooacvelt Bouie immediately and easy, It could have been hardercoach, but with two players like Louis Orr and Roosevelt all we had to do wat a fairly competent coaching job." Boeheim added.

Dan Doyle is a junior college transfer who came to Syrackse and accomplished the nerr mrinossible-he made the SU basketball ceam Davis, are the first to mate the team in 17 years, since Boeheim himself.
"Coach Boeh eim has been really fair to me," Doyle said. "He's told me that the harder I work in practice the morè I'u play. He's been wery fair.
Boeheim has seen basketball as both a coach and player. As a guard he teamed with Dave Bing on what then was (1965-66) the highest scoring team in NCAA history, averaging 99 points a game. As a coach he believes in the same philosophy of fast break and man-to-man defense.
"Flexibility is the key to basketball." Boeheim said. "You want to run on the basketball court, but you want to rum under control. If you don't have the ehot you have to try and eet mp one Flexibility in the key to life, too.
"Id Hito to think of myself an a manart pinyer" Boeheim continued. "I wann't F good one tal ent-wise, but Fd like to think $\bar{I}$ made up for it."
For Boeheim, the best way to gain inculligence on the court is at practice.
"I believe he's a perfoctionivt "' Cohen said. "It all starte in practices. Practice is really a game to us.
"He makea the players work hard, especially in practice," said now aasiatant coach Brendan Maione.

"I like it here," Boeheim said. "I feel comfortable here. The people have been good at SU and the fans have been good. We have a good program, it inn't a great pirosram but it's a good one.

The NIT and NCAA bannera which form a crescent around the roof of Manley signify that SU does indeed have if good program.
"When I get out of here," Boeheim bas said, "I want those things to go all around the place."
Right now it seems unlikely Boeheim will be deprived of another banner this season. He thas the university; the community and the team behind him, and if he remains a winner they will stay solidly there.
"It seems the entire city is crazy about SU basketball." Malone aaid.

The leader of the craze is Jim Boeheim.

Malone hits the 'big time' as new Syracuse assistant coach

By Greg Luckenbaugh

When Rick Pitino left Syracuse University last apring to become head basketball coach at Boston University. there was a scramble for the vacant assistan't coach position. The victor was Yale's assistant coach, Brendan Malone, "Yale's program was totally antiquated," Malone said. "Neither Yale nor Fordham (Malome was an babistant coach at Fordham in 1976-77) wanted to make a commitment to making basketball a big-time program.
"Of courte there were ponitive reasons for me coming to SU," Malone added. "SU has'the bent program in the East and it's obviously the big time."
Malone enjoyed his great successes at Power Memorial Academy in New York City. ## Greyhound $R_{x}$. The cure for college blahs.

It's a feeling that slowly descends upon you. The exams, the pop tests, the required reading, the hours at the library, the thesis they won't go away.

But you can. This weekend, take off, say hello to your friends, see the sights, have a great time. You'll arrive with money in your pocket because your Greyhound trip doesn't take that much out of it.

If you're feeling tired, depressed and exhausted, grab a Greyhound and split. It's a sure cure for the blahs.

Last year. SU lost to St Bonaventure in the opening round of the ECAC Upstate Southem tournament, yet stin made it to the NCAA tournament via and at-large berth. Despite the possible negative implications, the-SU coaching etaff is confident the Orangemen will make it to the NCAA tournament this year.
However, Syracuse
However, Syracuse"s coaches would like to see the automatic ECAC berin returned, and the ECAC is attempting to convince the NCAA to restore it.
The NCAA eliminated the ECAC's guaranteed berths in an effort to have a stronger touramment field. In pasi seasons, ECAC teams have displayed a tendency to lose in the first round while strong teams like Detroit were excluded from the tournament Should the nutomptiontent bid not be reatored, SU aissistant coach Mark Meadors envisions the possibility of Syracuse joining in a new Eastern Baskethall conference. The- conference would include such Eastern powers as St.John's, Ruigers and Providence and-aim to increase the preatige of Eantern basketiball in the eyes of the NCAA.

Referendum to seek input on $3 fee raise, divestiture

By Walecia Konrad

 A referendum to raise the student fee $$ 3$ and anothar asking the univermity community's opinion on South African divestiture will be on the Student Association election ballot Dec. 6 .If 5 percent of the studianta approve the student fee incresso, next year' mtudent fee will bermised from $$ 41.75$ to $$ 44.75$.
The increase would add $$ 35,000$ to SA's $$ 411,000$ budget. SA allocates this money to btudent group and organizations.
"Inflation is eroding the stable progreas of campus organizationa," SA comptroller Carl Kleidman asid "The increace will allow for growth in theoe organixations."
The other referendum will ask Should SU divest itself of stock in corporations with holdinge in South Africa?
"The ides of the referendum is to get the university community to come out on this issue," zaid Jim Naughton, SA- vice president for acadernic affairs. "It will give us a chance to say what we think.'

Graduate utudents, faculty, adminietrators and other SU pertonnal will be eligible to vote on the South Africa refarendum because South Africa refarendum because the undergraduate election ballot.

Joel Lazar, elections commisaion chairpersoni, and several assembly members argued that a separate ballot would caupe too much confution and extra work at the polling places. However, the Azpembly voted in favor of a separate ballol.
In other action, the SA Assembly allocated $$ 8,000$ to University Union TV from its $$ 20,000$ contingency fund. This will allow UUIV to schedule nine to 12 programing hours a week of original programing from 9 p-rn. to 12 midnight.

Lazar announced the candidates running for SA president snd comptroller. Running for preaident are Jordon Dale, Frank Slazer, Kurt Schwartz and Jerry Jacobi. Comptroller candidates are Dale Cohen, Morrie Levine, and, David Cleary.

Vote for Divestiture

The iasue of divastiture refusana to go awhy. But now it has received a new impetus

The debate about whether or zinot Syracuse University ahould get jeid of its holdings in corporations elbent do business in South Africa luas been going on since spring. In the course of this debate, however, nobody has ever done the olb vious-ask the university" collonmunity what it thinks should be done.
That has now changed.
At its meeting Monday night, the Student Association Assembly pasised a proposal that put the pollowing referendum up for a vote: 'Should SU divest itaelf of atock in companies with holdings in Sourtion companies with holdings in South Africa?" This referendum will be beld 1 Dec , the same day as the S heid Dec. 6 , the same day as the SA presidential election, but it is open to faculty, braduate atudents, scapport staff, secretaries-even ma-ministrators-as well as to undergraduates.
It is important that anyone worko has any interest at all in the university vote on this issue. For once, the university community is being portant isaue; it is being asked to make a stand.

Supporters of divestiture claim that the university, by not divesting, is tacitiy supporting South Africa's oppressive system of apartheid. Opponenta say that diveatiture won't accomplish a thing and that SU should use its stock to presa for positive changes in South Africa. The board of trustees decided in May to subscribe to the Sullivan Principles, which calls for just auch action.

The question: the board of trustees ducked, however, is an important one: Should the university work for change in South Africa bat still profit from its hoidine the country? The truateea' action was comparable to a prostitute tryung to remain a virgin.

Only by supporting divestiture can we make a moral statement that holds true to the ideal of a university and not a corporation. On Dec. 6 we will have that chance-to influence the university, to change its policy and support divestiture.

By Jeociafealmon While Eyrecued Univernity is bapling in the proopect of a now mtaciom an onraced University of Buffalo in claino ing that it has boen left out in the cold:
About 1,500 Univerrity of Buffalo students contronted Gov. Hugh亡. Carey on Nov. 3, dermanding to trnow why their new campus is: only half finished.
Waving aigns that read "Buy books, not domes," and "SU's dome is UB's doom," the students wanted to know how SU. a private institution, managed to get $$ 15$ million in state funds for its new stadium. At the same time. they isaid the University of Buffalo has been waiting 10 years for the state to finish its new Amheret campus.
However, organizers of the protest and uxaiveraity officials said their main complaint is not over the money for SU's new stadium, but with Carey for his "absandonment" of construction of the university's new campus.
The Univeraity of Buffalo, with an enrollment of 25,000 , is the largeat of the State University of New York's 64 schools. Formerly a private uni veraity. it merged with the SUNY system in 1962 .
Since 1968, construction of a $$ 650$-million campus in Amherst - a northern enburb of Buffalo - has been staggering along plagued by meriken, ing along plagrued by minizea, ohutdowns rad lack of money. The now campais ia lewe than haif finiahed and lacke a permavent gymnasium or any larx courpui fir aver cons the campuif will over be completerid is in doubt:
finctionable half nonfunctionable, half-fininhed SUMpur said Kari Schwartz, SUNY Buffalo Student As sociation preaident and one of the orgranizery of the Now. 3 protest.
Students are forced to shutle betwean the main campas, in the northeantiorn comer of Buffalos the Amherat campus, about three miles awayt and a ented campuin in Ridgo Lea, a hort distance from the main campun.
And several academic departments, particularly the School of Deatistry and the clinical .- peychology department, are in danger of losing their accreditation because of overcrowded equipmenat.But otudienta have been momt directiy wficted by the lack of cymnasium facilitiea.

Clark kall gym, on the main campus, was built in 1932 and is desiened for a campre of 3,000 etrudente. And the sym on the Amhernt campun is a five-year-old indated air building that han no ewimming pool and a himited amount of other facilities.
So-the frustrated students descended Nov. 3 on a groundbrearing ceremony on the SUNY Buffalo main campus that Carey was attending. The ceremony was meant to herald the startof construction of Buffalo's $$ 440$ million light-rsil transit gystem.
But Carey had to retreat without touching a shovel after students shouted him down" with chante of "half done, how come?'' and "bullshit, bullahit"
Jay Rosen, an organizer of the protest and editor in chief of the student newspaper, The Spectrum, said while the demonstration focused on why stadium, the real issue wew that the state had "abandoned" SUNY Buffalo. ${ }^{\text {stan }}$ "There's a real feeling amonk SUNY echools that the state is funding the private institutions at the expense of public education," Rosen said.
"Even without the Syracuae thing. we frow that we've been mistreated," he added. The $$ 15$ miltion for SU' atadium just added 'insult to injury.
SUNY Bratialo Preaident Robert La Ketter agrees the uttdents have sood reason to de angry.
Their frustrations are real and I certainly, did not dil. courage them froma bringing them to the attention of the sovernors" Ketter waid
He pointed out the money that weat to SU wan not Buffan away" from SUNY Buffalo. The money SU recerved came from Urban Development Corporation funds, not from money slinted for higher education, he said Sofar, about $$ 350$ million in buildings have been constructed on the Amherst campus. The school : wres allocated another $$ 48$ million this summer for Give new buildingre, one of which is a new fiela house.

But the real reason is that he just likes to win: And he did plenty of that this past. season in a pair of Budweiser-sponsored, Bob Sharp-prepared Datsunं race cars.

Fifteen races: Twelve wins! On the pole eight times! Three track records!

And in the SCCA National Championships at Road Atlanta, he took a second place in his C-Production Datsun $280-\mathrm{Z} \ldots$. and a third in the B-Sedan category with his Datsun 200-SX.

SU women's basketball hopes to stand tall

Although Marthie Mogish (52) had a tremendous froshman year. improved ream betance on this semeot's squad could orco her into leap pleying time.

Most college basketball players who set seven team recorda In their freahman year would be livid if they thought they would not-play as much the next seanon, but not Martha Mogiah of the Syracuse University women's basketball team. Mogish of the Syracuse University women's baskatball team. As a freshranan centerout of Syracuse'a BichopLudden High School, Mogish averaged à team-record 21 points and 12 rebounds, and also set new season márks for total points, field soals, free throws, reboumds, and field goml percentage:
However, Mogish will probably share a lot of playing time this season with 6 -foot-1 junior Vicki Smith, who miased last season for personal reasons.
Rather than pout, though, Mogish thinics competing with Smith will only benefit her.
"It's the bent thing for me. It" the first time P'vehind to work hard on my game in practice," Mogiah said "Vicki'm made me concentrate more on boxing out and playing defence.
"We're both learning," ahe continued. "I've taught her some of the fakes I wse to drive to the basket, and her tough defense hat made.me work on my own fakes when I'm closer to the basket."
New coach Barbara Jacobs has changed the teamn's offensive and defensive styles. but Mogish does not mind that switch either.
Mogish admits that all the attention ghe received last seanon put her undet a lot of preasure. She hopes that Jacobs more team-oriented approach this season will focus mome welldeserved attention on her teammates.
"I would prefer that people didn't single out one player all year, but would pay attention to the top individuall in each game, Mogish aaid. "My situation is aimilar to koobevert moure B after his freah

Although much a combination often dierupts many teams, Coach Barbara Jacobe think the Orancowomen, 15-7 isat beason, should be even better thin year.
"The player personnel could be the strongest since the program begam here in 1971," Jacobs asid. "However. I won't know for wure how well all my "hanges have worked until the season startes.'

Jacobs: changes reflect ber conching philosophy at Hartwicic College where whe cosched the women's basketball team for seven years and compiled a wrinning record at the Division III level each season.
After playing montly a 2-1-2 zone defenme last year under former coach Muriel Smith, the different defenses this aesson. Jacobs said the team will play a lot more man-to-man defense.
Offensively, the Orangewomen will still wely on the fast-break, but Jacobs said they will play a more disciplined game than last reason.
In one of her more significant changes, Jacobs plans to have 6-foot-2 sophomore center Martha Mogish play a low post and atay to the basket than ghe did last season.

Although Mogish set team records in scoring and rebounding as a freshman, she may not gtart this meason. Jacobs said 6 -foot-1 jumior Vicki Smith, who sat out last season for personal reasong, has been giving Mogish all whe sonal reasona, has been

"They"re different typee of players, "Jacobs gaid. "Martha is a better shooter and more consistent defensively. Vicki is a better jumper, a better rebounder and shes quicier. mey might be used pretty equally depending on the

In the bacicourt, iunior comap taix Theresa Quilly set team recordin last year for asaista and etealo. The other Erand and co captain, senior Iman Al-Bahar, is "a real team leatler," aaid Jacobs.
Sophomore Sue Scholl, a G-foot Btarting forward last wesson, is a strong robounder and againd will see a lot of action. Lant year's oriek team's best boor forwara Eileen Smitn, i.
Inize last season, the aparisplow off the be again should be 5-foots junior Pat McFachem a slick, famboyant playet who can boomet the Orangewomen's fagt break if it bogs down. McEachern can play either guard or forward, as can. Bophomore Maryanne Martin and as can. sophomore Sume Bennett.

Tharee other forwards have varied alills. Iunior Gerri Byrd is deceptivelly quick and a fine jumper. Sophomore Kathy Butler's atrength is rebounding. while junior Bramefer Dawn Benson is a fine outside ghooter for a forward.

Freshman Jill Friedman completes the squad. Her excellent two-handed set shot could be quite ugeful against tough zone defenges.
The Orangewomen open their aeason Fxiday in the Tip-Off Classic in Utica. LeMoyne. Colgate and Utica College are the other teams in the tournarnent, Jacobs said the Beason's toughest games will be againat Penn State, Cortland, Rocheater and Long Igland Univeraity. ${ }^{\text {and }}$ I want to toughen up the mehedule here within the next two yeara," Jacobe aaid. "That's Withintheneztwoyears, Jacobenaid. Ghat competitiveat the wighest levels of college ball."

Syracuse freshman Joe Morris (47) put two fine gamew topether at the end of the seasion to ghve him 3,000 yards rushing for 1978.

SU's goal: high enrollment and prestige

Editor's Note: Thisis the second in a two-part seriea that examines declining enrollment at Syracuse University and throughout the country.

> By Kim Seward

Will-Syracuse University survive the financial crunch in the 1980 caused by the expected decline in enrollment?
SU administrators and faculty have expressed op timinm that the aniversity will not be severely affected, although the U.S. Census Bureau predictes a 19 percent decline in the number of 18 -yeamolds in the United States during the 1980 s.
Clifford Li Winters Jr., vice chancellor for admimistiative operationa, and he anticipates stable enrollment through 1984, followed by a poasible 1 1/4 percent annual decrease for the remainder of the

Maintaining standards

With the prospect of fewer incoming atudents colleges and wniversities might be tempted to lower admission standards to compensate. However

Winters said this will not be the case at SU
"There is a niche for the kinde of people going to Syracuse." Wintera explained "A certain clientele ai a level which we can intellectually accept in looking for a prestigious private university. We don't solicit, recruit or influence others to come, and this is true of ther institutions of quality."
Profesaor Nahmin Horwitz, chairman of the University Senate Committee on the Budget, said he thinka academic standarda at SU might be lowered but this measure is' "not necemsarily a useful tratery."
"If atandarde drop," Horwitz continued, "we could osestudents we otherwise may have had. The aniver sity mhould make use of its present incressed enollment to raise gtandards of education now.

Vent systems cause continuing problems

By Rob Harleaton Small steps are being taken by Physical Plant to relieve the ventilation problem in Smith and Stecle halls. Becanse of the inadequate systems now in use, many of the art etudents that une these buildinge are complaining of the effects of the chemicals with which they work.
With the coming of winter, classea may have to be susperded on a day-to-day basis since the taderita will no longer be able to open the win dowe as they have beendoing.

Orange rout A&T

By Georr Hobson-
In the continuing taga of "As Maniey Turnes," the Syracuse Univer sity banketball team changed roles and the script. Howevar, it apppied the same familiar ending as the Orangs dereatea Nor Canoima AsT $102-77$ before-8,432 fans at Manley Field House Last night.
Leading the production for the Orangernen was Captain Dale Shackleford in his usual role as the all-round player scoring a tearn high 25 pointa, with 9 rebounds, and 2 steals.
Easing into their new roles as the offensive leaders, juniors Roosevelt Bowie and Hal Cohen hit for 13 and 15 points respectively as the Orange broke pen a tight game with offensive splurges at the end of the first half and beginning of the second. The two pairs left the Aggies (1-1) SU's 31st congecutive victim at Manley.
The Orange resembled a cold battery in January at the outset of the contest as they motored into the lead, but atalled and let the Aggies back into the game at a couple of junctures in the ${ }^{\text {an }}$ We
"We made too many miatakes tonight," said SU Head Coach Jim. Boeheim. "I don't know how we acored 50 paints writh sll the turnovers we made in the first half."
At around the 4 minute mark of the half, with SU leading by only four at $33-29$, the Orange switched to its own defense and began generating the fast break. The result was a $17-10$ binge which put the Orangemen ahead at the half, 50-39.

The rally was sandwiched around two crowd-pleasing fast-break basketa (the last one by Eddie Moss at the buzzer), and highlighted by two Shac cheford baskets inside and two Cohen jumpers from the outside.

The shameful insecurity of Frank Maloney

By Mire Stanton and Joel Stashenko Insecurity.
Among football coachea, it's a feelag that can be as common as wina and losses, especially when the latter are more abundant than the former.

If some Syracuse football fans had their way, the insecurity of Syracuse football coach Frank Maloney would end in his being fired. This year, again, hia losges outnumbered the wins eight to three.

And when measured against the stringent and often unfair yardstick of wins and loween, Frank Maloney's five-year SU career comes up short. He is a loser, plain and aimple. Five years, three losing seacons, an overall record of 20 wins, 35 defeats.
"You'd better bow your head, Maloney." they yell at Archbold after another Orange defeat.
But it isn't that simple, although many of the simple minds in Syracuse would have us believe that Fracik Maloney's fate whould rewt solely on the bottom line, on wins and losses.
These "Maioney is baloney" detractore would rathar dwell on the coach's. past, as they dwell on Syracuee football's glorious history. They woild rather curte peas simiatically about the future pand crucify Maloney an a scapegoat rather than pulling their heads out of the Eround and looking to the future of promiee that liea ahead for Syracuse football, a future rooted in the present, a future whone foun dation was fankioned by Maloney.
Capitalizing on the latest fad to sweep Central Now York, the "Dump Maloney" movemont yeaterday's Syractice Pomt-Standaxd embarked on a emastionatistic eleo tion to see whether Malonay wine a vote of confifiance or necaives a thumbs-down from its readers.
"Maloney: Should He Go? Or Stay?" banner headline read. Beneath it was a mail-in ballot titled "Should Maloney Go?" with one box marked "Yea" and another marked "No."
Maloney's critics aay he has had more than enough time to build a winner here and that he has had enough time to demongtrate that he is incapable of recruiting top-flight athletes. They have maligned his coaching etrategy and criticized bim for being more conibervative at timea than Ronáld Réagan.
But they haveignored thesebhes of a once proud football program that Maloney found amoldering when he came to Syracuse from Nichigwn. where he was a deferaive assietant, in 1974.
They have forgotten the injuries that crippled Maloney's. "78 Orangemen, injuries that included three now very famons cracked ribe and an extraorctinary 10 injwries, injurien that sidelined nine otarterm.

When a Maloney aupporter cited super-quarterback Bill Hurley's injured ribe in the seaton opener ala an excuse for this meason, the conch's critice scoff and aneer that no intelligent coach would build an entire football team-around a aingle player. that no amart coach wrould put all of hise ege in one batsket.
Which is like tolling a chanuffeur to drive a motoncycle and leave the Rolle-Royce in tho garare.

Maloney's critice rave thout the remaricable Jom Morrim, the 1,000 yard freehrann back; about the potemt foot of kicker Dave Jucobs, which is tied for wecond-beet in NCAA hietory; about the verantility of gifted runnur-receivar Art Monls. about the yoang and improving ottenwive hive; bout premitr Ewet zinobacicer Jim Cothins.

Then they, criticize Maloney for failure to recruit top-flight athletes. And Maloney recruited those "non-quality" athletes despite the presence of an antiquated, crumbling concrete atadium and a foot ball program branded as racist by the 1970 strike of eight black players ander former coach Ben Schwartzwalder.
Maloney's critics blasted him when his team was annibilated this year by Michiyan State, 49-21, but isnored him whein his teams upuet ignored him when his teams upart Virginia in 1975, Wamhington in 1977 and Navy this geanon.
They geem to have forgotten the narrow and painful defeats to teame the Orangemen should have been Clown dut by - 27.19 to North Carblina State and 18-17, to Pittsburgh thim year, $31-24$ to Pend Sational chama pion Pitton a bad call nationai charay
In thoee and other anames, the Orangemen may have been out manned but were rarely outcoached. And finally. Maloney's critica criticize from atar. Ibey fail to tee the man who cries after heartbreating lowes or Saturdays, and who is in the office Sunday morning to review game films and prepare tor the next Saturday"s opponent.
They don't see the man who loves his "lids," who went to the horpititi on a Saturday night to watch an opecraction on a playere injured cmoe. who refuged to jeopartite Hurcloy'? futare by semding hime onto the fold with hie crecked nibe padided - even thoough it may havie mesnt is firw more victoriem
Inbecurity. Mnioney may feel ita cting, but perhape in the end it is his critice who are antering from-ite efroctic:

Supreme Court turns away dismissed teacher's case

By Marilyin Marks

The U.S. Sapreme Court on Monday refused to hear an appeal by a black woman who charged she was dimmissed as a part-time charged she whas dime Unsed as a part-ume racial discrimination.
Geraldine Powell, who taught in the School of Architecture, filed a federal court suit becauge she claimed her dismianal in 1973 violated the 1964 Civil Rights Act's Employment Provision. 1964 Civil Rights Act's Employment Provision.
At that time, ohe had taught at SU for two years.
years. claimed the lower courts had held SU to too low a atandard for proof in rebutting her charge.
Powell alao claimed minutes of the architecture school tenure committee in 1973 showed that diacusaion of her case was res phasis on ingtruction of black aesthetics. The phasis on ingtruction of biack aesthetics. The committee voted 8-1 not to renew Powelle con tract to teach at SU.Those who voted againat tract to teach at SU.Those Who voted againate Division of Human Rights, claiming they considered only work-related factors and not Powell's race or sex in their decision.
However, Powell's attorney. James Myerson, said, "Basically, all the committee members talked about in their meeting was race and racerelated matters. None of the other thinga the members retrospectively testified about were made reference to in the minutes of their meeting.
He claimed the university exhibited "very questionable practices" in its decision.
A federal judge dismissed Powell's suit, ruling that she failed to show possible discrimination and even if she had, the univeraity's reasons for dismisaal would adequately rebut it:

- The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals then heard Powell's appeal and fonnd evidence of discrimination. However, it agreed with the lower court that SU had succesgfully rebutco criminatory reason for the employee's rejection."

The university's attorney, Paul M. Samsoucy said, "The way these cases go in court is like a tennis game. First the plaintiff has to provedis crimination, then the defendant must prove legitimate reasons."

A low level of proof is required to prove diecrimination at that first level, Sansoucy asid.

According to Myerson, the tenure committee gave the poor performance of Powell's etudents gave the poor per hermance of dismisal. He called this rationale "unreanonable," and asked, "Are the students doing poor work because she's bad or students doing poor work because they are retards? teaching, and was not givenany "philosophical guidelines," Myerson said.

He claimed the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals did cite a lack of standardized tenure guidelines as "capricious," but not discriminatory. Hesaid he viewed this as aaying that the decision was arbitrary.
"How anyone can say the decision was arbitrary and yet not discriminatory is mindboggling," Myerson added.
Julio San Jose, associate dean of the architecture school, would not comment on the tenure committee's suidelines. However, he said no employment standards are purely objective.
Sansoucy said the case involved the "tricky issue of whether black aesthetics can be the basis of denial of tenure for black persons,"

Greyhound $\mathbf{R}_{\mathbf{X}}$ The cure for college blahs.

It's a feeling that slowly descends upon you. The exams, the pop tests, the required reading, the hours at the library, the thesisthey won't go away.

But you can. This weekend, take off, say hello to your friends, see the sights, have a great time. You'll arrive with money in your pocket because your Greyhound trip doesn't take that much out of it.

If you're feeling tired, depressed and exhausted, grab a Greytiound and split. It's a sure cure for the blahs.

Can we talk of God in today's world?

Today we present the first in a series of Euest coraments on morality, conscience, and ethics in the modern age.
Discussion of ethics and conscience lead to the question of God's existence. Let's go to that bottom line immediately and ank, How can we talk about God ini tooday's world? With difpermeated with dogmatisme of permeated with dogmatisme of Early in the last century, Feurbach advanced a humanism which saw God as ing about God. It is hard to take seriously a projection, an opiate, an illusion.

However, it should be noted at the outset that there are no proofs from atheism that God does not exist: just as from theism there are no proofs that he does. Both atheigm and theism are, in part, "projections.': 'Proofs" of God are not proofe at all. The content of this tamiliar argumentation is useful for one thing only - raising questions. Indeed, God can never he "proved." But belief in God can be verified and justified by reason. Here I follow the thought of the eminent contemporary Roman Catholic theologian of Tubingen, Hans Kung. He reminds us that our belief in God cannot be based on any final appeal to creed, scripture, or rational demonstration. Rather it is only on the basis of a reasonable trust in the primal ground, purpose and spirit of life that we can believe. Pascal declared that "Faith has reasons which reason itself does not know." We can examine our faith (perhaps truat is a better word) and ask what difference does it make whether or not Cod exists. An affirmative answer produces results such as these:

1. One-dimensional man is raised to a higher level of reality.
2. Our yearnings and our strivings are supplied with purpose.
3. Suffering. boredom, and tragedy are seen as not final.
4. A new consciousness with new symbols and new meanings of history. and time. are rendered through tranacendence.
Belief in God appears, thus, more reasonable than nonbelief. Atheism, it would aeem, is juat not reasonable enough.
How, then, are we to think of God? Obviously, he cannot be conceived of within an anthropomorphic world "outside," e.g. extra-mundane reality, Likewise, pantheistic notions are excluded, for God is not the world are excluded for God is not the world and the world is not God. The God we can think of creates, sustains, judges, suipports, and guides; he is in all, throngh all. This woildview permits a God who deals with us in our quegtionis:

Who are we? Why are we? Where are we going? Where do we come from? What is the Source of all? If God exists there is indeed an answer to the totality of life. If we choose to believe that he does. not exiat then this nothingness gives us nothing. No answer. This belief in nothingness, it appears, requi

The question of God today is too important to be left solely to the portant ions. It belongs to each of us The interrelationahips of our political social, scientific, ethical and religious life force us to ask, Where does God come into the picture? To choose a few obvious examples: astrophysics faces the question of the origin and death of the universe; molecular biology deals with the problem of chance; medicine confronts the issues of living and dyings jurisprudence addresses the challenge of justice and human rightsThese matters are before us now. They demand a reply as to what we mean by God.

The question of God today also is reemerging because belief in automatic progress and infallible scientism is be ing shaken. Reactions to the destruction of these recent idols taizes many forms. Most notable are flights toward inwardness, terrorism, revolution, cultic religion and utopian schemes. All of these illustrate a deep human bunger and search for meaning. No, longer do formerly alleged supreme values of a people, nation, race, or inevitable improvement satisfy. They and other such relative constructs are being unmasked for what they are - failed idols.
Our absolute trust can only bein the wranscendent. Such trust is a verifiable and viable way to create our future. Itio from this basis that we can talk about moral man and immoral society. It is within this belief that we can deal with our problems of conscience in the 20th century.

Jukes' LP embody fun of rock 'n' roll

By Mark Sullivan
Before rock'n'roll went big-time and Ben performed in hockey arenas, football atadinma and on prime-fime televiaion, the best locale for hearing good music was the local bar. There, amtid thick cigarette amoke and the smaell of stale beer, one could hear bome of the most inspired, if not the best, music around.
It was rare when a bar band recei ved the opportunity to make a record, but if you could take the atmoephere and intenaity of a Saturday night at a local bar and put it on vinyl, the regult would be album by Southaide Johnny and the Aahbury

Sounds

Jukes. Hearta of Stone, the Jukes' third release and their finest to date, embodies everything good rock'n'roil should. It is loud, rowdy, and most importantly, fun.

The Jukes" musical roots are lodged in. the Jukes make the songs come alive. the rinythm and blues sound of the late " 50 a and early '60s. "Hearts of Stone" is rich in a soulful horm-based sonvid, Bplenrich in a sounum horn-based somrid, zplenof Southside Johnny Lyon.
Lyon, a veterañ of the south New Jersey bar scene, sings in deep, smooth tones and dibplays a flair for delivering the Jukes brand of updated i&e Lyoas crowls the working-class bives on "Got to be a Better Way Home," while the band's five-piece horn section pounds away in the background. But his voice can be tender too, as on the Brace Springeteen comporition that is the abum titie track Springsteen's influence on the album is obvious. He wrote tharee of the record'a nine songs and lent the Jukes drummer Max Weinberg and suitarist "Miami" Steve Van Zandt.

Vun Zandt, however, is the real mastermind behind "Hearts of Stone." Van Zandt wrote six songs, played guitar. sang, arranged and produced the album.

Un theme and lyric, moest of the songs on arrangmenta, energy and enthusiasm of Lead cuitarist Willy Rush nnleashes geveral piercing molos on the album, par theularly on "Botter Way Home" and his licked Anain." Van Zandt aleg the titie track he delivers a blues eolo reminiacent.of Stevie Cropper, while Lyon moans of lost love.

Though the Jukes have improved aince the release of their first alham, 7 Dom't Want to Go Home, "Hearts" is not withoat its clinkers. "Take it Inside," which cloees side one, is a throwaway. The Juke would have been better off replacing it with one of many oldies they perform in concert.

Alao, the five-piece brass pection can be cumbersome and actually slown down songs, as it does on "Next to You.

However, theae flaws cannot detract from the overall cood feeling provided by Fearte of Stone. This album may not contain any hit yingles and it probably won't propel the Julkes to world wide fame. But it demonstrates that some of the fipest music around is played not in hockey rinks, but in honky-toniks. The latest release by the Jukes is like a cold aim-pack put to music.

Outstanding directing

"Coming Home': has many assets to its credit, but the most deciaive factor in its fayor is Ashby's directing.
During the past few years, Ashby. has made his mary in Hollywood as one of the film industry's premier directors through such fims-as "Harold and Maude," "The Last Detail" and "Bound for Glory." outdone all his previous efforts.
Ashby has captured the mood of the late 60s down to the most minute detaile. Everything from Sally's blatant naivete to the biased language used in televised newscasts thchock-full of the "America love it or leave it" nttitude that pervaded almost every facet of life in pre-Watergate America.

Aahby's characterizations are potent, but they do not overpower the viewer. The audience knows where each character

Another asset of the film is the powerful acting. Dern, Fonda and Voight give perhaps the best performances of their careers. All three performers are bound to be leading candidates for Academy Award nominations next spring.'
Other fine performances are turned in by Penelope-Milford as-Vi, Sally's unabashed roommate, and by Robert Carradine as Billy, a suicidal vet confined to the V.A. hospital.
The screenplay by Waldo Salt ("The Day of the Locuist") and Robert C. Jones is one of the finest scripts to have come out of Hollywood in recent years. It is well-paced and features dialogue that is always appropriate and never contrived. In one scene, Luke tells Sally of the frustration he-feels when trying to aocialize- 'I'm still the same person, but people see someone for example, Ashby utes the camera as if it were held by one of the paxticipants in the match. The feeling of motion helps accentuate the excitement of the scene and gives the viewer the feeling of being a part of the game. Ashby uses similar techniques throughout the film, always heightening the mood of each acene.
The musical acore alno helps to set the mood of each scene. Scorer George Brand has chosen muric that perfectly ac companies the activity of each sequence. In one acene, when Sally visits Robert in Hong Kong during his R&sR (rest and recuperation) breal, the embittered zealot curses and yells about the perverse atrocities committed by his men during battle, with the sound of the. Rolling Stones "Sympathy for the Devil" faintly playing in the background.
"Coming Home" is a dynamic film that stands. However, they do not reek of idealism. Luke, for example, is a typical hippie opposed the war, but Ashby does notgo out of his way to put him on a soap ows in Broadway history, turning in 44 performances. Since its Broadway ys, "Dolly" has become a standard oduction for both amateur and profesinal theaters across the country.

The plot, based on Thornton Wilder's 54 hit play "The Matchmaker," centers ound the antics of a middle-aged widow, olly Levi. Through the show she anages to match up every unattached rson while snaring herself a grouchy If-millionaire, Horace Vandergelder.
During the runiof the Broadway producon the show would change to fit the verse styles of the leading ladies who ayed the title role. Carol Channing first skeptical of Channing's ability to ay a conniving middle-aged apinater, ved about the Broadway opening.

"Hello,Dolly!"

Each new actress brought a different background and atyle to the part of Dolly Levi. Among them were Martha Raye, Ginger Rogers, Betty Grable, Pearl Bailey Ginger Rogers, Betty Grable, Pearl Bailey and, believe it or not, Phyllis Diller. Ethel Merman, who was the original choice for Dolly; also asaumed the role for a time.

In the local production, Carol Schmuc kler portrays Dolly. She has appeared in several Salt City productions, including "Fiddler on the Roof," "Applause" and "Little Mary Sunshine."
The director of the show will be writer, däncer and choreographer William Dugan.

As for the Orange, ranked as high aa ninth in some polls, they come into the Clagsic at 2 -0. But more important is the fact they have won 31 consecutive games in Manley Field House.

Under Coach Dick Shilts, the Broncos have entered a rebuilding stage and will most likely put a freshman and three sophomores on the foor against SU.

WMU has a small forward line with a pair of sophomore forwards, 6 -foot 7 Melvin Maxwell and 6-foot-6 Tony Flanory, while 6-foot-8 freshman Mike-Seberger will play center. Guards Todd Dietrich and Kenny Cunningham lend backeourt quickneas.

half- priced drinks.
The majority of the approximately 75 studenta attending the forum seemed to be more intereated in yelling at, rather than listening to the candidates.

However, most major campus isaues were brought up. Presidential candicates Jordan Dale. Jerry Jacohi, Kurt Schwartz and Frank Slazer, and comptroller hopefula David Cleary, Morrie Levine and Dale Cohen faced a continuous onslaught of student demands.
Much of the crowd's assault was directed townrd Jacobi. Undertones of personal attacks abounded, and Jacobi responded with a few of his own. Early in the question: and-answer gession, Jacobi answered one girl's catcalling by standing up and saying, fucling good thing orts tate fuforgaod the it for granted we're suppoaed to be serious."

Most questions at the formm were accusing rather than curious. Candidates defended their platforms instead of sim. ply introducing them. The candiates to deal in apecifice candidates to deal in apecifics.

Support the increase

It's been three years since the student ee at Syracuse University was raised. The cost of living has risen dramatically during those three years, and many Campus groupis have felt the crunch. Soime of the smaller groups on campus have received little or no funding. University Union, the biggest programing body on campus, has also deen adversely affected. It is trying to promote concerts, speakers and films on what is essentially-a fixed budget a a. time when its expenses are in creasiris.
OnWednesday, the same day as the Student Association presidential elec tioni: a referendum to increase the student fee by $$ 3-t o$ - $$ 44.75$-will be held-This referendum should be Assed.increase in the student fee will give SA $$ 35,000$ more a year to allocate at its budget hearings in the spring. This money could fund any number of groups, including UUTV, which did not receive any raoney last yearsimply because there was not enough to go because there was not enough to go ground. It would aliso give UU the opportunity to present more concerts at cheaper prices, and, of course, more speakers.

But UiU would not be the only beneficiary: Many smaller croupa could receive more money. For example, the Outing Club has had a Ereat deal of student interest-but very little money. Smaller, special-interest groups like it could get moremoney and provide better gervice to existing and potential members.

The $$ 3$ increase in the student fee is not unreasonable. It is totally in line with inflation, and with helping student organizations provide more programing and service. In addition, this increase would still keep SU's student fee as one of the lowest in the country-lower, for example, thin the approximately $$ 200$ a year RPI students pay, the $$ 112$ University of Buffalo students fork over, the $$ 60$ a Buffalo students fork over, the $$ 60$ a year required of students at Boston University. The increase we would University. The increase we would have to pay is slight, but the benefits -have to pay is alig

H EA on immoral society

"Arid the radical priest comes to get me released and we'reall an the cower of Newsweek"?年 Paul Simon By Jacque Salmon:
Ope, May morning in 1968, nine people, three wearing priests' collars, walkedinto the draft board office in Catongville, Md.
To the horror of the watchingelerks; the group quicicly emptied the contents of four filling drawers into. wastepaper baskets, carried them outside to the parking lot and set them on fire with homemade napalm.
After saying a short prayer, the nine then sat and calmly awaited: the arrival of the police:
One of those nine anti-war protestors was Daniel Ber rigan, a 47-year-old Jesuit priest from Syracuse.
Although it has been more than 10 years since the day the "Catonaville 9") brought nationwide attention to the anti-war movement, Berrigan has not lost his obsession for correcting social ills.

The Vietnam War may be over and college campuses quiet, but the soft-spoiken, intense priest continues to be active in the movement for reform in the United States.
He will be speaking on "Problerns of Conscience in the 20th Century" at 8 tonight in Hendricks Chapel. His speech is the second in a series on "Moral Man in an Immoral Society," sponsored by Hendirect Chapel.
Berrigan grew vip in Syracuse and taught at LeMoyne College from 1957 to

But is wän't until 1968 that he catapulted into thenational spotlight when he took a trip to Hanoi to obtain the release of three U.S. airmen who had been captured by the North Vietnamese. Daniel Berrigan and his brother Phillip, also a priest, became known as the infamous Berrigan Brothers, the "radical" or "hippie" priests:
The "hippie" priests celebrated masses in parks, led demonstrations and rejected the belief that the Christian church should be a silent bystander to what they viewed as the most evil war in Annerican history. They believed fiercely in the evil of violence and in the necessity of openly breaking the law for the sake of their cause.
"When times are evil, you almost have to program part of your life for jail, in order to live with your conscience," Daniel Berrigan once explained.
Berrigan was convicted of burning draft files in Catomeville and, after evading the FBI for four months, spent 18 months in the Correctional Institute in Danbury, Conn. He was paroled in 1972 .
The author of 22 books, many of them poetry, Berrigan is known to inspire great devotion among his followers and deep dislike among. his enemies.
Some of his former colleagues describe Berrigan con a talented, dedicated, but often frustrating man.

Monsignor Charles Borgognoni of SU's Newman Center, who knew Berrigan when the activist priest taught at LeMoyne remembers Her at Lemoyne, remembers bEerrigan as a very unusual, very gifted, man ...almost a mystic."
And the Rev. William Bosch, a professor at LeMoyme who knows Berrigan, describes him as a "man of great. inter-sity-as a reformer he has to be."
"People react violently one way or the other to him," Bosch said. "He inspires total devotion or total rejection."

Or, as Berrigan himself once observed, "Maybe one way of getting free these days is going to jail.:

Bouie, Ruland plead their case

By Mike Stanton

Bouie v. Ruland, Dec. 2. 1978 - Thia case, though only a praliminary hearing ure to be appealed, firmt entered the locket Saturdiny evening in Syracuae University'a 89-76 win over Iona College in the finala of the Carrier Classic.
It was a basketball blockbuster version of Bakke $u$. Uriversity of California Medical School, or Broun v. Board of Education.

The case was first argued on a court sur ounded by 9,585 very loud, very annoyed and bardiy impartial jurors closeted in Manley Field House. The jurors were annoyed because they felt their client, appellant Roosevelt Bouie, SU starting center, had had his rights infringed by defendiant Jeff Ruland, Iona starting center, when Ruland and his Gaels were picked ahead of Bouie and his Orangemen as the East's Enest baskethall team.
Ruland stated his case first in the clas* sic. Confrontation between two of the East's three best centers. (The third, Rutgers' James Bailey, will have his trial date Jan. 22 when the Scarlet Knights take the atand in Manley.)
The 6-foot-10, 240 -pound Ruland, who ed the nation's freshmen last yearin scor ng (22.3), rebounding (12.8) and field goal percentage (.594), scored 10 of his 21 point against Syracuse in the first 12

SU blows Gaels away

By Joel Stashenko

SI sucks!, SI sucks!" they shouted from the stands at Manley Field House during the finals of the Carrier Classic Saturday. Their. cries weren't a comment on politics (S.I. And the best the Gaels could play was not good enough to beat Syracuse, which got 30 points from the Classic's Most Valuable Player Dale Shackleford to win Utah Stane of The Battle of the 85 to win thereated westen tournament, which could very well be-something like the United Technologies Classic next season.
"I was hind of edgy to play this game," said SU center Roosevelt Bouie, who played Iona center Jeff Ruland to a stand tonight and a good game like this set my tonight and a.

The much-awaited Iona-Syracuse final almost didn't happen as in Friday's first round Michigan 93-71.
The Orangemen had trouble with the Broncos from the beginning, falling leading 48-4 early in the game and only an incredible diaplay of the full court presa in the second half, outscoring the buckling Broncos 27-1 over the first 12 minutes of the half to open up an insurmountable Bedid: Bouio, amodel of conaistenicy during both tournament games, led SU with 19 points.
Iona, a small Jesuit achool in New Rochelle, had more trouble with the Aggies of Utah State. Although ahead the entire game, the Gaela had to weather a win. Ruland scored 25 points to set up his confrontation with Bouie.
"Tomorrow's game will be gravy," Valvano said after Iona's win on Friday. "You have to consider where this program has been and what it means to win an intergectional game for us. We've done what we wanted to do here- were in the what we wanted to do here - we're in the finals. Now I just want to go out and get frals. Now I just want to go out and get drua Valvano's high was continued against Syracuise the next day, at least for the first 12 minutes of the game. His Gaels led 27 20, the biggeat lead an SU opponent has had at Manley since 1976 And ech beat like maybe Sporta Illustrated knew something everyone didn't after all knew thin minutes" Valvano said for the first with a tongue in his cheek, "Up by seven I told the players if they got their pants and left one at a time wie might be able to aneal away. But we couldn't get out fast enough."
He then added more seriously. "Shackleford got into the high post and he (Haibed a lot of problems. He parsed oif to some j's (jump shots) and we had to think of him passing to Bouie.'

Shackleford had been having miserable first half shopting, going 2-for 10 , many By shots well outside his ahooting range. By getting closer to the basket he got back during the last $8 \cdot 55$ of the half tem points ūे Headd. The Orangemen took $2-12$ to make ap the geven-proint deficit and tie the same at $31-31$.
"It's not easy playing here,". Valvano had said Friday, "What you got to do ia stop Syracuse from apurting. They apurt and the crowd goes crazy and then-ite wrorth 10 move points to them."

The whistles actually went evenly for both teams (Syracuse was called for 27 Louis, Orr fouled out with onlyone minute gone in the second half with two quick fouls. SU retreated into a $2-3$ zone to protect the middle against the burly Gaels.

It worked admirably. The Iona front Line of Ruland, Alex Middeton and Dave Brown could combine for only 18 points in the second half and two of the Gaels Ruland and Middleton - fouled out in the process. Iona did manage to draw to within five points at 59-54 with 12.32 to play, but Orrs replacement, Danny thang thept the hitting three crucial jumpers from the foul ${ }^{\text {" }}$ D.

Mo ? D D in ?  Anyone can be a clown, right? All you have to do it

 ron around and act eilly, right? Wrong. Learning to be a clown is no easy task. At least thatie what Idiecovered by attending a clown workshop:Earlier this semester in the Noble Fo

Earlier this semoster in the Noble Room of Hendricics Chapel, about 10 atudents gathered for a weekly participatory workshop in mime and makeup. I joined them for a couple of weeks to see if there was sany Bozo in my blood.
The workshop was taught by Pastor Paul Boach, Lutheran chaplain for Syracuee University. Bosch, who is known as "P. B." in the clown community, is hoping to form a troupe of clowns with whom he can perform at religious functions, children's hospitals. and senior citizen communities.
It was Bosch wha recognized the need for a clown workshop at SU. "I saw there might be a need on campus for some horseplay,' he said.

Bosch, an ampteur actor as well as a clown, attended a school for mimes this past summer. "I am not Barnum and Bailey materiali..not yet anyway. But amateurs can still act like profesgionals," he said.

Bosch loves to teach his craft. However, it's not easy. In teaching, you have to know, as well as be able to communicate your subject," he said.
In the weeks that I attended, his workshops focused on exercises, technique, and makeup. One exercise was mirroring. it iavolved two peoplestanding op posite each other and moving as one. In this way the apprentice learns fluidity of motion, as well as how to work with a partner. The girl with whom I was teamed had trouble with the exercises - she could not stop langhing at me.
Another exercise was in funny waike. Everyone rambled around the room in the stride of his favorite thought I was doing fin waik like Groucho Marx. eing baid that I was doing a great imitation...of a duck.

The class also explored the use of props. We were placed in amall groupm, given a choice of propes and told to put together a little shit. It is from thin bace that Eroach hopen to woris his troupeso they can hamdle themselves in larger presentations.

The group to which I wran ammigned was amart. They had seen how well I had handled mirroring and walling funny, so 1 ended up doing some in: significant act in the background of our skit.
Makeup is what Bosch stressem most. "It is a neverending job. Some clowns take years before they find a face they are happy with," he said. For this reason, every beasion ended will all of the atudenta experimenting with combinations of colors and designs of makeap.
I thought to myself that makeup was the one way I could show up everyone else and prove that I was not totally incompetent. The class gathered around a big banquet table; mirrors were given out, and it was time to go for the gusto. With the ateady hands of a diamond cutter 1 applied the red, then the blue, and finally the white. A look in the mirror told me that I looked more like the former Saltine Warrior than like a clown. Off it caupe. My second attempt did two thinge; it made my face look like a deformed rainbow, and it made me realize that clowning was not for me. The main thing I learned was that there is nothing bigger than a clown'a heart.
"I'm going to ufe my clowning in my worl with Family Community Services as well as the Big Brother Organization," baid Ellen Meyer, one of the participants in the class.

One of the reasons Eileen Fahey participatedin the workshop was 80 she could raise money during the Muscular Dyatrophy Dance Marathon.

However, charity is not the only reason some want to be clowns. According to Bosch, being a clown is "ke therapy for the participant."
"I was alwaye afraid of clowns" said Beverly Rosenthal, another participant. "By becoming one, 1 can beat my fear."

Chowning can also alleviate shyness. "İ am shy but I feel different in the makeup," enid Foeenthal. "It gives you a lot of confidence" when you have stage presence," Meyer added:

hat is apartheid's Apart heich, a govern mental polity of South Africs, practices nearly total racial sepayation and therefore supports the oppresaion of the black majority. A United Nations document on apartheid, prepared by Profeasor Julian $R$. Friedram of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Afrairs, places the system's operational components in four categaries criminiation prejudice and discriminiation
- Racial segregation and aeparation
- Economic exploitation of, natural and human resources
-Legal, administrative and police terror.

How are non-Furopeans restricted by apartheid?

Vaxious acts of South Africa's parliament show blatant discrimimation: Black Africans can not be members of parliament, own land, or work in mines or public works. The Bantu Education Act of 1955 calla for 20 to 25 times more money to berpent on the education of a white child than that of an African. An apprenticeship act closes training opportumitien for Af-

Abstract

"The kind of purity which is sought is not attainable simply by elling atock in those companies with affiliations or subsidiaries in South Africa. There are other linkages. It is not simply earnings on endowments, but also other bources endowments, but also other sources of revenue that are traceable in some degree to companies or individuals With tien of one kind or another to South Africa. The treasurier's officesays that divegtiture would only have a minor effection a corporation because it has already received money from the initinal nale of the stock, and the Duetuations in market value have virtusily no impact on the company. However, boycotts, which affect earnings from sales and servides; would: probably have a strongerimpact on the compang and more likely to influence ite policies.
Is divertiture strictly a financial question?
No. There are strong moral and social considerations in the queation of divestiture. Some say that divestiture of stock in companies with operations in South Africa would be the ultimate protest and would beat show dis protisfaction with the situation in that country. Others argue that once the atock is sold, the investor loses inAuence in corporate policy and that the next owner of the shares may be less concerned or more hesitant to take action to influence corporate activity

Who supports divestiture?
The Student Afro-American Society has::collected 1,200 signatures on petitions. Student Association, The Daily Orange, the law echool senate, the $\operatorname{SU}$ chapter of the National Lawyere Guild the Women's Law Cances, the Black Annerican Law Students Association and membera of the black faculty and professional staff have adopted resolutionciasking SU to sell its atock in corporations which do bueineas. in South Africa.

How conscience became irrelevant

In a New York Times article (Sunday May 1, 1977) regarding profesaors be ing retrained for executive positions in industry, if the, following quotation appearghy pomeone with a Ph.D. in Russian hisfory and literature who had taughtet Yale and Fordham, and is nowirahe executive in a management congoltant firm.
Whit think tophinizia in many *Wrays like belling A sood teacher ik one who can communicate enthusiasm and interest in the sub ject and in essence ell the students by relating it to their special needs. And that is a product."

The thought of one's beloved learning Dostoevely from mind that can invent this statement is , eobering. Another executive, in asprevious incarnation a Ph.D. of English literature and apecialiat in medieval drama, tells us that "It doesn't mätter whether I'm analyzing a literary problem in the Wife of Rath or a marineting problem for, Maidenform. The principles ari- the same.

What is:groing on? It is easy to imagine crindidateé for explanation. The Marint wrives to remind ue of the inexorable advance of commodity fethishiam into the laist frontiers of the moral imagination: The tingriatic analyet hastems to point out the concepfual confusion that dominates these lines. And the paychologist can taste the bitter dregs of aour grapes eaten by failed academicm (although the biographies of theae do not fit easily into much a category). Bnt somehow into nish a category). But somenow, these do not satiafy, cofritive, friends though they be. cogrutivi friencs though they ibe. Something rather more fateful is at stake: the suddon suspicion that a irrelevent ning of sexual derites among profee: sors, or exploitations of doting tudents' youthful energiea. Yes. There are obscene seductions in the halls of academe, but then too there are Abelard and Heloise, and Sartre and Beauvoir. There are shameless plagiariaras of inspiration and devotion, but then koo there are memorials to dead teachers by famous students who testify of relationships between novice and mentor so deep hey would enthrall with myatery any inquisitor with ethics code and lighted match in hand.

Is there a conscience unique to a calling, one that is not the same merely of the good man in general? (I use "man" generically.) Can one be a good man and fail at one's calling as educator, as-healer, as statesman? The question vexes. Aristotle wondered if the excellence of the good citizen is the same or different than that of the morally virtuous man. He felt they were different, but the isgue meemed to bother him a bit. As it should, for our sense of the unity of soul is at stake. Yet those quoted a bove are surely not evil. But there is a failed conscience in their utterance. Doea it make rense to say this?. Or is conscience of calling irrelevant now? Where does one even begin with this tortared and trivialized and propagandized question?
There are good reasons for asouming the irrelevances of conscience today. Ite authority has undergone some major humiliations in recent generations. Four in particular come to minid: the "Copernican" humiliation in which the earth as human world is cast out of the center of the cosmos; the "Darwinian" in which the human world is degraded to a atage in the evolution of the animal; the "sociological" in which conscience losee ite mythical dimensions and tis dograded to-a function of social-order and the "Freuctian" humiliation, in which so much of or: dinary human desire is unmasked an human form.

At-3eret conceptual ruvilioning of gratification? Does it belong to what Nietazche condernned as the history of lave morality? Is conscience presen always to convict us of sin? Or can conacrence create values rather than merely imitate them? (This was Nietszche's question. Of the terma duty and conscience he once wrove . knowledge how moral judgments have in general originated would make us tired of these pathetic words.) In the lace of these posaiburies, here ara chose today who make a fetish out of dramas of conscience, often tearfully in front of television cameras. Of this one can only say, with Edward Engelberg, To cling to irrational and incelenable ideais not for the sake of the ideals but for the anike of the clinging has alwaye been a presentiment of a declining age."

I think there are ways rationally to address such matters, though with congiderable difficulty and only tentaively. But hrst, conscience must be id of its sickly pallor, its connotation of repreasivenesa, fetishistic self-anc ince, and auterity Couscience is a tribunal, butits guideis jurispradence of practice, not traightjacket or guil Conscience as a orm of constioungess; not the algorithms of the engineering mind bat the contradictions and dialectics of means and ends. The forms of conscience are best discerned in narrative; the paradicmatic ztorien of the sacred beginnings of practice. What is the paradigm etory of education in which the conscience of this practice is depicted? It is; I think the story of Weatern man's sacred beginning: gibical Genesis. The founding question of educational practice, the genesis of our consciance and its problems. 1 hnin this. Why did a suprame and amaiserent diaty, knowing what would colow, boun place ha kee of howledge in Eden and fortha Adam to eat or ita fruit? Of this I hope to eay more in m lecture.

Benson brings jazz to Manley: Sea Level adds southern style  By Mark Enilivan  and though he did not porenee Wonder'e range.

Jazz ham come a long way during the past diecado. It used to bo that jayr wan played on becer, froms, and priano by wcracely hipotere who looked an if they had trmbled from the pho hooked ack if thry had tom pagee of jasz hae become modernised and popularized, while it hars kept the qualities that al wray made it a plearurable muane form, euch so improvisation and oxtended inutrumental breats. The muric now referred to at javz often featare The muac now refterred to acicilaz faceta unheard of in the heydey of jazr or 'Bop" music.
Guitariat Georve Benton and the jexz-rock band Sean Level, two prwetitioners of thin modern jezz, appeared at Mianiey Field Honse Sunday night, and while both difplayed standeard jaxr tendancies, the music was more representative of modern jaxz than anything Benson is one of the artiste moat reapionsible for the relindled intereat in jazz. With the release of Breerin " beveral yeare wao, Benaon made jazr acopmible to people who had never litetaned to it before. Bennon's now jexr is an alluncompanaing form that pommeseas tracem of the Hupa, rock and even disco.
Benson and his fivepioce back up band covered fongwritery Ian ging from Georye Ger Bhwin ("I Got Nhythm") to Lwom Romeell ("Lady Blue," "This Masquernde").
It was interesting to hear Benson's music out of the tudio. While hie vocale didn't sound up to par with his recorded work, his gritar-playing was looper and more inspired than on vinyl.
Benimon's voice nemembled Stevie Wonder'n

Beneon aypearod cocnfortable and relaxed ab he sany a variety of meterial. Fio waimble to cover The Driturs' rocky "On Broadray" as trell se the Though the vocal numberis provided the set with a bit of variety, Bencon nnd his band hit their peak whem thoy delved into insurwand haly Hito Joe Feliciano's, "Aftirmation" and Bobly Womack's "Breexin' "
"Breerin" ${ }^{n}$ featured an extended percuation breat and superb moloe by eecond cruitariat Phil Upchureh and keyboardiat Jorge Dalto.
But it was Bemion who was the ettar of the show. He tool numerous zolos, cometimes play: ing furiously, but alwaym producing a rich, full, flowing mound.
The sarce can be said for the opening act, Sea Level. Sesa Level harbeen a band with a musical identity crisia for the part few years, caught betwean purveying a conventional southern rock tound and exploring the perimetern of jaxi rock how ver, wihn recent personne chanice, creative probleme that plarued the band.
Seal Level now features Joe Englizh, formeriy of Winga, on drume and packe a potent onetwo gritar punch with Jimmay Nall and Davia Camasy. Add the keyhoard work of tormer Allanan Brother Cruck Laavell, and the reanitile a full jarz-rock sorind in the manner of Little Feat
Like Benson, Sea Level did not play text-book jazz, but what they played aure was entertaining.

Schayes begins to emerge from shadows

Danny follows father, Bouie

By Geoff Hobson

Dolph Schayea, father of Syracume Univerxity basketball player Dan Schayea and member of batketball's Hall of Fame, leaned back in hil chair at a local restaurant and recalled one of the moat exciting momemts in the game's history.
The acene occured in the eeventh game of the 1965 NBA championship weries between the Boaton Celtica and the team Schnyes couched, the Philadelphia 76 ers . In a game "Hat has aince been remembered as the day "Havlicek Stole The Ball", the Celitics wan the championship ab John Havlicek thwarted a lab-second Philadelphia bid by Cealing an inbonnds pasa and giving the Celtics a hand-wringing 110-109 win.
'It was a great game, a game that wo were losing and came baci preasing." Schayes remembered between bites of a chicken club mandwich. "We had thie ball underneath their basket with-about three seconds left and losing by one.
The table auddenly became the floor of the Boston Garden as Schayes explained what happened next. Two water glasses and and Chet Walker, forward Johnny Kerr Cecame a fork and 7 -foot center Wilk Catsup with a coffee cupp perched on top.
"We wanted Groer to pass the ball to Walker and have Kerr set a pick that Greer could take a jump ahot off of," Schayen said as he maneuvered the symbols in position.
"But Greer threw a lob pass, Havlicek pushed Walker out of the way and grabbed the ball and we lost. If they had called the foul, we would have won because Walker was our best foul shooter," Schayes said.
At 6-foot-8, the 51-year old Schayes in the prototype of the soft-spoken, affable giant His dry sense of humor and amazing recall make a trip down basketball's memory lane as vivid as looking at the championship flags in the rafters of Boston Gardef:

Trivia buff

He can take anyone on in trivia and it's not because he is a trivia nut. It's just that he knows everything." Dan said, shaking his head in admiration. There is a lot to remember as the elder. halmarik of consistency in the NBA with the hallmark of consistency in the NBA with the Syracube Natsonals for 16 years He averaged more than 20 points curing each aeason, Bet a consecutive gameo-played mark nual All-Pro.

When the Nationala moved to Philadelphia, Schayes became the team's coach and aliso perhape the only man in the coach and aiso perhaps the only man in the Gistory of sports to be named Coach of the How did that happen?
"The general manager didn't like me," he asid, deadpan

Schayes also starred on New York University's baskethall team from-1945-48.

Schayes the younger, SU's mophomore forward-center, is in a strange situation for a 6 foot 11 basketball player. He is lurling in the ehadows cant by two bigyer names and facest his father and teammate Roowevelt Bouie.

Dan Schayes came to SU lant year after two consecutive berths on the Onondars County League All-Star team an a center for Jamesville-DeWitt High School. With-his tize and talent, Schayet could have virtally gtarted for moet college tesams in this freahman year.

But not atSU. where Boaie, who alwo in 6 -foot-11, wrat coming nff a meaton in which he was named to the All-Eait Fiookio team.
So, for the first time in hia life, lant meamon

Schayes wat on the bench as Boinie became the team'e dominant big man.
"It was tough going to a grame and knowing you werent going to play, Schayes said I didn't come here to play behind Rosie, I came herre as a forward, not a center. I came to play.
With a vuccessful aummer Eíropean tour, Oreseason injury to atarting forwand LouisOrr and impressive performances against Iona and Yugomlavia, Schayes. Appears. ready to shed Bouie's shadow.-

Fatherly fan

Dan could not poseibly have a more fervent fan than his father, who not only saw him play in every high school game, but almo incurred the wrath of some OCL offrisils and was ejected from a couple of games.
"It's a funny thing about him-he doesn't like referees who make bad calls," Dan aaid with a flash of his father's subtle wit. "In high school, they always pick on the big guys and 1 got celled for stuff just putting up my hande.:
Father and son made it a family affair at the Maccabiah Games in Israel in the summer of 1977. With Dolph as coach and Dan at center, the U.S. basiretball team won the gold medal.
"I think I overcoached there," Schayes said. "We taught them everything we knew and then we wronld go out and play some teams that had five guys who couldn't walk.
"I enioyed it. He's a good Coach," Dan said. "Ididn't have to put pressure onmyself by trying to impress him because he's asen me play in every game, since eighth grade Schayes runs a aummè basketball camp in Lake George and Dan apent his inumers learning baaketball from his father and other carmp visitors. Buthe was not born with a banketball in his mouth.
"I'm no Press Maravich (father of NBA star Pete). I didn't have him out runningdrills when he was inve years old," Schayes - said. "You can turn a kid off doing that.

I didn't encourage it, but I was plèased when he becarse interested because I think playing bafketball is a great way for a kia to grow up. It's a way of hife.
When the time came to decide where Dan would play college ball, "we discussed it, but the decision was Dan's,"Schayes said. "Personally. Syracuse wasn't my firat choice. I didn't think playing behind Bouie for three years would be a growing experience. But I think he'll find a spot in the line-up."
"He's a good team player who has very good frudamentala and is already a better defensive player than I ever was. I would like to eeo hinn go to the basket more; that'in how 1 got half my points," he observed. "But then the offenaive players had the benefit of the doubt, not like today."
Dan, who chose SU because he was impreased with the coaching staff, pridea fimaelf on being a team player, a guy who sete picka and acreens, paeces well and does the thinga that don't creep into a box zcore.

SA elections panel censures Jacobi, Cleary at Open Forum

By Carolyn Beyrau  and Jacquil Salmon

 Student Association presadential candidate Jerry Jacobi and his comptroller running. mate, Dave Cleary were severly censured by the night for illegal campaign activities.for failu and Cleary were cited. for failure to list the date of the election on campaign materials, tearing down othe candidates 'posters, the une of the phrase "Your Student Fee at Work" on campaign materials, and failure to denounce the publication and distribution of "The Free Student Press"' in a reasonable amount of time:
-If any further violations are yroven against Jacobi or Cleary, they will be immediately removed from the ballot or denied election cer tification by the election com mission, according torthe com mission recommendiation.
"The Free Student Press" accused Student Aspociation of ficials and members of The Daily Orange staff of forming a. ight-knit political machine" which makes the DO "inaccessible to the political opinions of major student organizations.

Brian Dillon, author of the. newsletter, said the newsletter which endorsed Jacobi, waspublished as an alternative to the DO's coverage of the open forum at Jab lant week.
"Due ז' its inaccessability and prejudiced editorial staff, The Daily Orange is incapable of objective, unhiased coverage of the candidates or pre-election events," the newsletter said.
Jacobi said he had no prior knowledge of the newsletter and added that Dillon, who is a member of the Phi Gamma Delta Fraternity, is not on his campaign staff
"If this article slandered people. I do diasociate myself from it," Jacobi gaid. "I don't Like the personal attacks.'
Concerning the tearing down of other candidate's campaign postars, Jacobi blamed his friend Kevin Cullen, a former SU Etudent and a mernber of lacobi'e fraternitzs, Delta Upailon.
'I regret Cullen's -involvement and apologize for it," Jacabi asid. "I told him not to tear the posters down."
Thenae of ${ }^{4}$ Your Student Fee at-Work". on campaign material is a misrepresen-tation- of the phrase's meaning, said Carl Kleîdman, SA Comptroller. The phrase "is reserved for the official use of Student Association to been enate events that hav been of the student fee" cording to the commisaion's report.
${ }^{\text {Prepple will assume that we }}$ paid for them or that we're supporting you," Kleidman anid. Neither one is necessarily true."

Jacobi said his posters did not have the election date on them because he was not aware when the posters were printed that dates were required.
However, election commission guidelines were available at the aame time as petitions for candidacy, according to Dale Cohen, SA vice president for administrative operationg
"You can havie thern printed any way you want, but they, ghould xíever have gome up." Joel Lazar election com misaion chairperson told Jacobi at the commission's neeting lastinight Cleary said he had no knowledge of moat of the activities.

Things have come up I'm not even aware of " Cleary said. "I don't want to get ghafted about things I don't know about:"
At the Open Forum at the Student Center last night, South Africa and the student fee allociation process were the main topics of discussion.
Presidential candidates Jordan Dale and Frank Slazer and comptroller candidates Cleary, Morrie Levine and Dale Cohen also reiterated their campaign platforms and urged students to vote in today's elections.

Women's Center aims to develop awareness

By Stacy Schneider ": Women in this society need to be made aware of and Lisa Binney, a worker at the Women's Center.
The center is designed to meet this goal and others through its programs and resources.

One accomplishment of the center, Binney said, is the establishment this year of a selfdefense course. "We had to'so in and demand the course, Binney said. Both Syracuse University and the center now offer self-defense courses.

The Women's Studies program, a part of the center, is backing, Beth Bagnato, another worker at the center, oaid. Its goal is to have in every department courses that focus on women and highlight their achievements, she said.
"Part of the purpose of the Women's Center is to work with Women's Studies," Binney said:
The Women's Center also provides a place for women to go where they can relate to others.
-The center, at 750 Ostrom

Ave., also acts as a referral service. Binney said it offers peer counseling and tells women where to get information on such thinge as planned parenthood.
"The center is a focal point for women's information;" said Elise Nicol, a worker at the center. "The center's library contains about 75 to 100 volumes. It includes novels. biographies and other books by or about women."

The library also has an extensive range of periodicals. Pamphlets dealing with suiv jects such as drugs, birth control and rape are availablé free, Binney aaid. this semester has consisted of speakers, a concert and a mimi company, all performed'by women.
According to Nícol, the turnouts average 150 people. The center hopes to sponsor a intajor concert this spring.
Workshops open to men and women are held during the week from 7:30 to $10 \mathrm{p} . \mathrm{m}$. at the week from 7:30 to 10 p.m. at the center. Ceramics is tanght on Monday mights, auto and self-defense on Wednesday nights. Binney seid from Tive to 15 people atteria each workshop. Yet, with all ith poaitive aspects, the onter Is alsolised with problems One ofitit worst problems is lack of hnowiedge about the ceriter'gedigtence, Binney said.

Part of this is beoabet the center is not wrorling to its center is not working to She capacity, in a lack of ene because there are only thire workers to operarte the chire - Beth Bagnato. Binneýand Nicol are the only work and the center this $y$ workers a the center this semester. All three are on work-study grants.

Binney said the center does not advertise in campus newspapers becauseit does not have enough money, The allocation from Student allocation from Student As sociation.

The centgr has a budget of $$ 2,460$, of which $$ 700$ is for salaries another, $$ 700$ for events and $$ 200$ for the workshops

Another problem is the center's negative reputation, which grew from its formation in 1970. The center was founded by 40 women. who wanded to offer, hes Calling and day-care services. Caling themselves "Sisters, Rising, they had a reputation of being radical.feminist or leébian, Nicol said.
The center's poor location is another problem, Nicol said. She- said she feels this is another reason for the lack of knowledge about the center among the : campus com munity.

In higher oancation aomething called "totaching othict" "values" or freith atterition. It is the latest gcademic crowth induatry and enteracadernice able to command the encraies of philgaphera; theologians, artistn, fowrpalinte - even an occanional eocial scientist, a rare physicist and a not so rare biologist -engineers, technicians and professionals of all sorta. In ohort, practically any local or mational euru who can claim some standing in a profession, an academic discipline or a religious tradition can also find aplace within the industry. And that is not altogether a bad thing. Certainly it is easy to identify half a dozen activities more harmful than paying attention hemoral cimenamions of education Yet even such a booming enterprige will have its ilusions and ita miscanceptions. Practically every educational boom sooner or later has its bust. No one doubte that the problem of moral education in the problem of ctrricultim. But what often not bunnoticed is that the problem will of gomething - something called "ethics". or "values" or "profeanional conduct". And if the problem in not resolved by such additiona, it follows hat it did not arise from their abeence. education in the Americam college is likely to arise not from a gap in the curriculum but from a failure to see the educational, and therefore the moral, point of what is already, in the curriculum, a failure to recognize that there is something to education besides proficiency. There is also profession. No profession is practiced without skill, but neither does any consist merely in the possession of shill. It congista also in having something to 'profess"\% and some conception of service which after all is the point in having ekill.

I suspect that this renewed interest in teaching. ethics and values stems largely from a gnawing suspicion that we nacational enterprise is all about.
educational enterprise is all about.
Suppose we teach budding jo nalists how to market their slilla-but naisats how to market their sainisut of the printed page, the function of comof the printed page, the fragile are the munication or how fragile are the institutions of free speech. We teach them about libel laws but not why they matter - in other words, not the point of the sidi. administration the problems of budgeting and planning, but not that these are the ways we make values concrete and distribute the goodis of the human community. In short, we teach them the skill but not the paint.

Two defensive wars

Two spiritual leaders have spoken over the past fow days to Syracuse avdiences, Father, Daniel Berrigan apoke of disaimamaent; of the tragedy that war has become, Anormalized? Rabbi Meir Kahiane prowched violence as the means to prevent another Holocaust.
The two apeakers both advocated civil disobedience, when necessary to protest the evil in the world and in our society. In 1968, Berrigan and eight other participants stole and burned the draft Files in the draft boand office in Catonrville. Ma. He destroyed the files; he utanted to deatroy the war that was destroying people.
"Are we allowed to break the law to save a life?" Kahane asked his audience Sunday night. He, too, has proven his willingness to break the law for his ideals. He has been imprisoned for the tactics of his organization, the Jewiah Defense-Teague. Their activities have included beatings and bornbings. Kahane wanted to destroy the people. Who were destroying his people.
for oth asw their crusades as a means for hope to resolve conflicting ideals. "JDL violence in New Yorlk meant hope for the Rusgian Jew," Kahanesaid. But Berrigan, choosing gentler weapong, is less optimiatic. "What we can do in the face of monstrous blasphemy is littles, he said. "I hope I can communicate hope, but not optimism.
Perhaps the strongest tie between the two men is their exasperation, their frustration, in the face of indifference, cruelty and prejudice. In their own ways,
As men of God, they both agree that violence is terrible. Neither man, like all of us, has a concrete answer to ending injustice and suffering. But one man feels violence is needed to stop itself. This leaves us with only aadness. itself. This leaves us with only sadness.

Letters  Candidates: look before you leap

To the editior
As current $S A$ Comptroller I would ike to make a few comments on this year's campaign. The main issue being stressed by all the candidates this year is better communication between the SA Comptroller and student groups. This idea origimated at the Student Leaders Conference where several groups complained they got shafted" becaus
Since then, all these candidates have seized upon that issue and recommended bett
I am not going to comment on whether a group received what it feels it deserved. Every organization is entitled to voiceits dissatisfaction and thereby hopefully mobilize the support for the upcoming budget request. However. it is a candidate's responsibility to find out the facts and present them accurately before the student body for whom they seek to represent. Both Dave Cleary and Morrie Levine have made statements that are false.

Instead of learning the intricacies and details of the comptroller's job, Cleary is Atressing "communication." The job of the munication." The job of the how often one egoes to the dorms and floor meetings ass Cleary atates. The job of the comptroller is to know the things that most students don't and thereby effectively propose a budget. Only by knowing what amounts groups have requested, what amount they have received, and how effectively they have apent it, can a comptroller responsibly carry out comptrolle

Thecomptrollex ghouldn't pretend that he has spoken to enough students that- he can accurately repreaent their views. That is why the Agsembly, mot the comptroller, passes the final budget. It's ironic that as Cleatry stresses commumication he has failed to communicate whit imyoar or my ofice to ind out what he meedr to know to be a good comptioller. Cleary haw alno atated that ber $m$ now who he wants for the Finger Board. Howrever for: the: Finarmy Board. However, to decide, mivice the Finance Boandi not supposed to be a hand-picked adequately, represent the entire student body.
Levine, on the other hand, has stressed his dissatisfaction with the current system of allocating money. Levine claims that all Finance Board members received a ballpark figure for which to work. with from the comptroller. Levine is incorreet as other members of the Finance Board did not receive these numbera. These numbers did exiat and were for my own reference. Levine requested these numbers for his own sake. In no way were they to have any bearing on him or any of the Finance Board nembers. It is also established procedure to allocate on a zero-based approach. It is sad Levine, during two years as a Finance Board members, resorts to discussing topics he knows nothing about.
Levine also feels that groups should be audited every two months to make sure they arespending their money properly. If Levine was aware of the current set-up he would know that this information is available on almost a daily basis. The third candidate running for Comptroller is Dale Cohen. He too feels that there needs to be better communication. This not only means that groupe should be better informed but moreimportantly, that the Aseombly should be better informed since they have the final vote. Besides streasing the im portance of an informed Assembly, Cohen has made it his job to learn what the functions and ponsibinities of the job encain. SA derives a sreat deal of its importance and power from ita allocation of the student fee. To put that responsibility in the hands of people who do not comprehend the nature of a job which takes longer than the two wreks between inaucuration and, the beginning of the budgetary. p

Activist priest discusses rights

By John Ixinh
A concern- for represed people everywhere and a deter. mination to lead people awiy from the "innoxpressable evile" of reprostive governments. have typified the beliefs and writing of civil righta activist Father Daniel Berrigan.
Berrigan believes people have been led astray by the overkill tactica, brinkmanship, nuclear liturgies and support of genocide by repreasive govenments. His life hat been devoted to enlightening people about these atrocities.
Berrigan was born in Virginia, Minn. on May 9 . 1921. At. 18, he joined the Society of Jesus, a Roman Catholic order. devoted to universal peace and brotherhood. Following his entranbe'into the Jesuit order, he was ordained a Roman Catholic priest in 1952. From 1957 to 1963, he taught courses on the New Testament-at Syracuse's Le Moyne College. From 1954 to the present, he has published 23 works of poetry and prose, with the most notable works being "Time Without-Number," for which he won the Lamont Prize in 1954, and his more recent effort, "America is Hard to Find" (1972), which is highly critical of American democratic principles. But Berrigan's most revealing and enlightening work was "A Meditation," which he wrotein 1968 just prior to his conviction for the destruction of draft-records in the Catonaville and Baltimore, Md. courthouses. Through this work, he emerged as one of the most profound thinkers of the New Leftists, and one of the more blacklisted "cardburners.in the eqyes of Capitol

Winter rats, usad cars that motorists can buy to save was and tear on their permanent vehicles, have become a popular alternative to plodding through Syracuse slumh.

'Rats' go where no limos dare

By Jon Rabiroff
As the snow season approaches, winter rats once again invade the streets of Syracuse. Neither a rock group nor an animal, the winter ratis merely a type of used car.
Rats are usually bought for low prices. The buyer's only expectation is thit the car will survive the cold and anowy winter. Courtesy Auto Sales on Erie Boulevard specializes in the sale of rata. According to the lot's opper; Jan Maloff. Winter rats are becoming more and more popular because of the high prices of new cars. Especially with the heavy salta used on the streets of Syracuse during the wiriter, people want to save their new cars," Maloff said. Malofi's father, a dentist, keaps his new car in the garage and drives a 65 Chrysler New Yorkerin the snow.
2Y- pirce or rate has increased in recent years from approximately $$ 300$ to $$ 450$. chere axe two things to watch for when pricing a rat: the car's classification and the lot from which the car is bought.
A law recently passed to protect the consumer that requires all non-new cars to be categorized as either"used" or "junk". Used cars must be inspected befare they are allowed on asles lot. On the other hand, reaponaibility for he inspection of junt cars is eft to the buyer within 10 days of the purchase. Maloff pointed out that people shy away from buying junk carn because of what the name im plies and ix turn pass upmany good bargains
Another factor that affects the price of winter rats is the the price of winter rats is the bought Maloff, whöes salee lot bought, Malofif, whomesalesiot consists of litele more than a small office on a plot of gravel, yid he had to sell certain care thinurdieds of dolliars less are paved dealers whose lotis buildinged and have amall "It is like buying

Finally, there is the group who can only afford a car that fits the winter rat description. Students make up a majority of this sect. SU stadents comprise 35 percent of Maloff: businesp.
There are several factors to consider when buying a winter rat. "My criteria for a good winter rat is a car with a good motor and transmission, decent brakes, and fair reliability," Mainff said
The buyer should also be aware that the initial investment is not all the buyer will be paying.
"You should never spend your last cent on a car because there will be extra costs," Maloff said.
Finally, Maloff suggested that the buyer bring someone along who is knowledgeable about cars. "They always cause problems for me," he added jokingly.

For rich and poor alike, the winter rat can be the ideal mode of transportation this winter.

presidential candidate Jerry preside

Joel Lazax, elections commission chairperson, said, The necusations are totally ungubstantiated. I think it's a poor attempt by Jacobi to salvage his campaign."

The statement accused the commission of not counting all the ballots cast for Jacobi and comptroller candidate David Cleary: and demanded that the commisigion ba: brought before the Uniwergity Judicial Board to explain why these events took place.
Lazar responded by saying, "Anybody who'd like to can count the votes.

Most of us speak in glowing terms of selfayf ficiency and all that, but our neighbors and relatives who see us exhausting ourselves planting and cultivand tell us harvesting and preserving can sit energy providing what we could get with a few minutes work at something more "productive" and "efficient". But if we spend our days driving a truck, teaching, selling shoes or insurance, or welding auto bodies, doggone it, it feels good to equat down to milk a goat, to immerse ourselves in the contented clucking of the hens as we gather eggs, or tostrain umused muscles a bit as we toil in the garden. By definition, we're playing.
Most Americans play by apending money for golf clubs, snowmobiles, bowling, or a six-pack in front of probably more healthful.-. andif we handleitright: arobably more healthiul...and if we handeit right, a whale of

Of course our akills will be much more valuable when the price of food reaches its proper and just level, and they might mean aurvivalif worat comes to worst. But, doggone it, we might not live that long. Let's pay more attention to xight now, todeyl -

Yve known this in a subliminal sort of way for years, but it atruck home the other night as I guided the pick-up truck into its parking space next to the silo. I'd spent the day at the office. The sense of peace and well-being as I drove into our- yard was verwhelming.
'After dinnor we went out to dio chores. Anne-maxie headed for the chickens and rabbits. Dave leanedinto the goats, Steve saw to the needs of the cow and I checised the pigs, fed and watered the bucirs, aheep and dry goats, and threw down dry hay for fence and . Tomasina Turkey was perched on her to watch the week-old lambs try to get into their mother's grain, and picked one up to feel the peculiar coarseness of its baby wool.
In the buck barn, Ihad togive Oscar a stern talking to to keep him from spooking Caesar and Daniel away from the grain. The seven cats formed a circle away irom the grain. The saven cats formad a circle sidestep around them as I carried a bale of alfalfa to the Jerpey. I had to laugh when I found the cow acthe Jerbey, I had to langh whem infound the cow actually liciag a tiny lamb that had wanclered away from its mother, who was too busy with the grain to notice the prodigal.
Arine-marie was washing eggs and the boys were straining nailk and skimming cream when I went down to the basement to rub the hams and bacons curing there.
Then it was time to turn the cheeses, and Dave was churning butter while Anne-marie and Steve did the dishes.
After all these years, it's haird for me to imagine what a "normal" life is like. Could I really sit in front of the TV with a can of beer? Would I really enjoy Saturdays more on the golf course than I do when we're grinding wheator baling bread orcleaning the barn? Do I really "work" 18 hours a day?
Maybe my magazine is nothing great or special. but if I can help just a few people realize their potential and enjoy life the way I do, it has to be worth all the trauma involved in publiahing a magazine.
The way I feel about these goingeon dramatizes the way I feel about the value of homesteading. I really don't care much, myself, if homesteading ever oecomes economical, or neceasary. For me, it a the adoy's to ine a vibrant, menth a heap more than all the groceries we collect off the homestead.
Today's farmer growing corn or rajising hogs needs a lot of nlille, but not nearly as many as the agronomist, cheese-maker poultrymen, butcher or agronomist, cheese-maker, poultryman, butcher, or chardman, cook, herbalist, and dozens of others, all in the space of 24 hours. Most people willagree that in today's boring specialized social structure, most intelligent humans aren't sogreat at their specialties, either, if you look at the quality of present-day goods. There's satisfaction, and a lot more diversification.
There's satisfaction, and a lot more diversification.
"Chore" is a dumb word for a homesteader, because most of our chores aren't drudgery at all. Our language doenn't have a word that deacriben what we do for fun. And moreover, what we do for fun is still regarded by many in our culture as harsh, unneces sary, even foolish labor.
This is one of many concepts that is changing in today's culture. Work is only getting paid to do something when you'd really rather be doing someth ing elge. On the homestead, work is play and play is work

Let the rest of the world seek their plastic and neon ransient pleasure. Let the city people gcorn my home cured hams and smoked rabbit and tomatoes won from the eartin by sweat and toil after a normal work week at my desk. I feel I'm more human, moré alive and aware, by marching to the beat of my own drummer, beyond the sidewaiks.

The teachers

*I think of the story, in colonial times, when the barn burned down - the carpenter stopped by - thatis still good in America," eaid Ruth Colvin, who- founded Literacy Volunteers of America in Syracune 17 years ago.

People are willing to help their neighbors: "Ihere are 23 million people who can't read in America. If I can help just one person then I've done a job. It's the thrill of doing it, done a job. It's the thrill of doing it, and if cwo people care.. you can eee and if cwo people care..-you can eee the multiplying effect thusiasm," Colvin gaid.

For literacy volunteers. the multiplying effect has been developed has reached mearly one million people. The Department of Health Education and Welfare and eight African nations have atudied Colvin's methods.

She developed the program by getting mationaliy recognized reading experts to volunteer their time. can't afford these people but I get their heart," ahe says. And that is how the program works Lib with heart Every night, in libraries, schools and homes, a volunteer sits down with a student to work for two hours on the reading. They patiently sound words with the pupil - who may be anyone from a 40 -year-old machinist to an 18 -year-ald high machool dropout.

But whe had a mard time comvinciag people there wa a problam at first. Thiteracy in America is a problem that has been ignored, Colvin aaid. When she wan crettina Colvin said. When she was eetting started in 1960, "Illiteracy swan thought to be in Asia, nothe Unithed States." There were 11,000 functionally illiterate people in Onondaga, County and "people doubted it.
She set out to prove her point. "When I found the problem, I invited people to my house and I preprired a Lalk and some alides," Colvin said. She invited the Kiwanis, Rotary, Board of Education, Church Women United and other groupe; in all, 150 people in her living room. "They all said it's terrible, something must be done. No one said, "Can I help.?'" But Church Wornen Unitied, a group comprising 90 churches offered to aponaor the programif Colvin ran it. "Church Women who?" was my first reaction. She then spent the year giving her presentation to 90 church groupe.
The result in terms of the 23 million illiterates has omly been a mmall dent, but in some people's lives, it has been the turning point.

One of the literacy volunteers recalled what made it a special experiance at an orientation evestion "Our studenta have problema. They may live in a aituation with ten in a family and only three bedrooms," he anid and then paused. "Which bringe me to the story I always tell about Louie."
"Louie invited me to his wedding. I had season ticlets for $8 U$ football, but i put on a ${ }^{\text {mports jaciret over my }}$
"As I walked in I heard aomeome yell my mame from behind. It was Lovie. As wie wrilked into chureh he said, 'Will you be my berst man?'
"It turned out, I was the only one there, beaide the bride's literacy volumiser teacher, who wrat the maid of honar.*

Each change we cause when we reach out to the community begins with the change within ourselves. Our calling ripples outward, affecting others and makes us a complete person by allowing un to express our-special qualities. It is within us, and given the chance that is available daily, we discover part of ourselves.

But we all know this inanately.

And we all look for signs to gather our courage together to admit that one person can make a difference. Then the world is no longer a room, we can come and leave whthout changing. Two of the six, who actually ossed the kegs out the window at about 5 . p.m. Nov. 13, were suspended for one semester from university housing and given five semesters of dis ciplininy probation each by UJB in a closed hearing Tuesday night.
A third student who directed them when "the coast was clear" for the kegs to be thrown was also suspended from univeraity housing for one semester : and- given two semeaters of disciplinary probation, according to Sean Byrne, UJB chief justice.
Because the six students involved in the incident requested a closed hearing. Byme said that their names could not be made public.
A fourth student was placed on five semesters of disciplinary probation and also on residence hall probation for the remainder of his stay in academic houring. Byrne said the studentintended to throw a keg out the window but then handed it to one of thestudents who actually threw it.
A fifth student who witmessed the incident and offered encouragement was officially reprimanded. The 6th stiadent, whose room the kegs were thrown from, was cited for a violation but not given any penalty:
Byrne said UJB based its decision on the danger the kegs posed to inmocent passersby. He added that the six students apologized for their actions, acknowledging they were ignorant, and said that they took precautions to ensure there were no passersby when the kegs were thrown.
If an SU student on disciplinary probation is found guilty by UJB of further misconduct, Byrne said that student must show "substantial reasons why he or she should not be suspended or expelled" from the university. Similarly, residence hall probation requires that a person found guilty of further misconduct within university housing show substantial reason why he or she should not beexpelled from university housing-

Winters

Consinued from pege one mind made up. It is reportedly impoesie to turn him around at this potnt.

Since Wintexs is "generally perceived to bethe moat power: sity." he nsually wing these conf ontetions the diesenting opinion gaid However the politica of confrintation have politics of confrontation have some, unfortunate' side fects.
The rest of the report was generally complimentary Winters was praised for his errectivences in preparing the Physical Plant and the finan cial condition of the university for the 1980s:

Winters has been vice chancellor since 1972 aña has been at the university gince 1956. He oversees all aspects of the university. except for academics and has been primarily responsible for balancing SU's budget for the, past seven years.

Cliff Winters works very hard, perhaps hard enough to be a threat to his health," the report said.
Made recommendations
In the report, the committee made several recommendations to reduce Winter's res-! ponsibilities, saying the vice chancellor now has too much to do.

The repoft auggested that Winters no longer handle Managennent of the Syracuse University Bookstores.
A new position, vice chancellor for institutionai services, which would hándla the bookstore' as well as the current office of Institutional Services, was proposed.

The committee alsoreviewed the function of the chief budget office. Although Winters was praised for his handling of fiscal matters, the report said the vice chancellor for academic affairs might be the better position to handle the task. instead of the vica chancellor for administrative operations.
However, since Winters seems better qualified to handle the budget than Johnt. Prucha, vice chancellor for academic affairs, the coma mittee advised no fup damental change at this time Suggest new position Another alternative would be for the university to create a new assistant yice changellor position that would specialize in the teaching functions of administrative operations. "We. are very.loathfal to suggest an increased expenditure",-sthe report said, "but we think this is a very important issue. $-\cdots$

If this caninot: be iac. complished, the committee advised Winters to "underiro' a transformation of character and take up diplomacy.

The committee concluded its report by atressing that its suggestions have been made with no intent to denigrate Winters. "Our chief concern in this report has been how miay his reputation be raised to the level that we feel he merits."

The report is to be forwarded to the Senaite Agenda"Con: mittee and then to Chancellor: Melvin A-Eggers.

runners no longer lonely

By Marle Mandel

When 62－year－old Arnie Brigge started running more than 30 years ago，he was a rare breed．To him，the oneliness of the long distance wner was no worn－out cliche， but a reality．Briggs was one of only 400 participants in the 1946 Boaton Marathon．That same year he ran in a local race which attracted only 30 runners．
Today the running acene is anything＂but lonely．Ac cording to a recent Gallup poll more than 25 million people are now jogging and cunning． And it is not uncommon for national races to attract thousands of－runners．Last month，the New York Marathon attracted more than 11,000 competitors．
＇Syracuse is no exception to this national trend as racing throughout the yrear．Although most of these races are relatively new，they attract many competitors．Last competitors ran in the Blue Cross／Blue Shield race in downtown．Syracuse．
The popularity of running is perhaps rellected in the tur noutis for the more eatablished races．In 1971,70 runners par hicipated in a 10 －mile race year more than i，000 competed．Also in 1971， 32 racers ran in the First Annual Fulton 10 －mile run．Iast September， 613 competed．

In response to theincreasing popularity of running， Syracuse established two run－ ning clubs，the Syracuse Chargers and the Syracuse Track Club．The Syracuse Chargers，a local amateur athletic organization has nearly 600 members in their running clabs．The club con ducts races，provides practice facilities and advises members through－its monthly newsletter．
The Syracuse Track Club has grown from 20 to over 300 members in $1 / 1 / 2$ years．
If Briggs were Iooking for female running companions， he would not have tolook far to find it Women＇s participation in rumning also seems to be growing．In 1977 ，forinstance， 2，300 women ran in the Bonnie Bell Mini Marathon（a race for women only）in Boston．This year mo
According to Brigge，this trend started in 1967 when Syracuse＇s Kathy Switzer became the first woman to Marathon．Briggs was her Marathon．Briggs was her coach． all women．＂he said．＂They don＇t have to feel guilty

anymore．＂

The running craze is par ticulary reflected in the sports equipment business．Briggs ran moat of his races in cheap tennis sneakers worth about $$ 1.50$ ．Today，in an effort to supply the heavy demand for running shoes，manufacturers have developed better and more expensive equipment．
Many persons have found that not only can anyone run， but they can run cheaply． Unlike other sports，running requires only one piece of equipment．Any pair of sneakers will do．Even if you splurge，a $$ 30$ pair of running shoes costs less than a dime a day if your run every day for a year．When this is contrasted running seema appealing． Local businesses catering to runners－have been in－ creasingly successful．In 1974 Greasingiy succesiful．In 1974 SU football plager，a former Sporting Foot in DeWitt．Four years later he was able to gdd years later he was able to add

Dave Mathewson，assistant manager for Herman＇s Worid of Sport Inc．in the Fayetteville had a＂definite impact on the store．＂Herman＇s now gells over 30 different styles of ahoes，along with other parapheraalia，like head bands，shorts，warm－up suits and night reflectors．
The running trend seems to be a natural by－product of the 70s．Never before have so many persons been eo aware of the need to be physically fit． ＂There seems to bean attitude change，＂Briggs said．＂People are mare interested in their bodies．＂
Nick Wetter，Syracuse University director of campus recreation and coordinator of the Chargers，agrees．＂People have found that running is the best way of improving their cardiovascular systems．＂But ＂once they get into it，they find out that it＇s enjoyable，＂h said．＂It becomes a habit．＂
To the outsider，the thought of pain，sweat，blisters and in－ juries might not seem en－ joyable．But runners in－ variably will admit that they enjoy it for one reason or another．According to Chris Hubbard，editor of the Syracuse Track Clab to explain it to the non－ to expla
For some，running is an in－ dividual activity．It becomea day＇s frustrations．Mans runners are in this category But for many others it has become a group event．For the competitive runner，weekly races help reinforce theix group identity．＂During the week they do their own thing， but during the weekend they do their own thing together． Hubbard said．
Many of today＇s runners started because their friends run．Sue Grant，an SU student who rans two－miles a day，ad－ mits that she started and con inues as a reault of peer pres－ ure．iont even like it that much，＂ahe said．
Running＇s growth has come rom the ranks of the non－ athlete According to Cleary， himbelf a marathoner，＂They have found a non－slilled sport in which anyone can par－ ticipate．＂
Wetter expects the trend to peak in the near future．＂Some other activity will capture the attention of many runners． People who got into it as a fac will move on to another fad．＂ But it seerns unlikely that it will ever return to the lonely days of Arnie Briggs＇prime． Thyere is too large a nucleus of fanatical runners，and too tanatical runaers，and too gtrong of a financial com－ mittment by equipment manufacturters to let it die．Ac cording to Briggs，＂it＇s sen sational the way things have

"Because they missed work mäny claimants actually lost money even though they won theiri claim," said Steve Cary an SU atudent who conducted the research for NYPIRG.

The survey found evening court hours would be more convenient for 79 percent-of those surveyed
The court is currently held only during daytime hours because of fiscal restraints, Cary said.
NYPIRG, a research and advocacy group funded by the student fee, also found that citizens were uninformed about the court. Of those surveyed, 42 percent consulted an attorney before going to court. Small ciaims court claimants are supposed to be able to handle their cases without consulting a lawyer according to Cary.
The NYPIRG atudy suggested that a booklet con taining information about the court should be given to claimants. The group_alao believes information services such as NYPIRG's Small Claims Action Center should be continued:

The center, funded through the Onondaga County Comprehensive Employee Train ing Act and and advises claimanta. CETA is a federally funded program training. provides jobs and
In its study, NYPIRG also found some claimants were unable to collect their claims because they sued using a business commercial name, instead of ita legal name. To correct this, NYPIRG said it supports passage of a bill currently in the New York State Legislature that would allow claimants to sue businesses using its commercial name.

NYPIRG surveyed 105 persons who took cases to the Syracuse City Small Claims Court in 1976. Similar NYPIRG studies were con: ducted in four other cities in the state. More sevare problems appeared in the other cities, Cary said.

Rev. Vernon Lee

By Ecot French
When Rev. Verrion L. Lee became coniference executive Of the Central New Yorl in 1976. he automatically in 1970, hoting member on theSyracuse University Board of Trustees.
Lee's role is an example of the continuing infuence of SU's Methodist heritage. The university requires Methodist representation on the board, and Lee is part of that representation.
Lee has the same responsibilitiea as any other trustee, with no special duties as one of eight Methodist church representatives. Two church reprentives frow each of four regional conferences are four regional conferences are known as organizational known
The 47-year-old Lee is the father of a teanage son and daughter A native of Herlomer, N.Y., Lee now lives in Syracuse.

Lee is candid about his role an a crustepe and and he is not on active participantin theSU community.

Ihis is something less with the etructure of the meeting whentien Trustoes meet mg ocheduly memi-annually as a group. Lee anid even if students had trustecs it might. With significantly increase communication between the two croups. He asid the trustees groups. He said the hrustees tudenta as an extersion of the administration, which would posaibly alionate them. Whey might he frustrated," Lee added.
Lee said he would not favor a roumd-table discusaion between atudehts and trustees watil other alternatives were connidered. He said any such mecting without the admimistration and faculty.

might be divisive inntead of Froductive
Lee said one of his perponal goals is "maintainine the primacy of the stadent in the dividial rather thinn an in modity," Lee also gave his suppoit to a student union building. "I a student umion buldige to oress for the development of hea etudent center and not let that concern drop throush the craciss because of other in volvements of the university,
Lee deacribed the SU cam pus an "dymarnic" in termis of pus an "dynarnic" in termis of faculty and atudent morale as well as in its physica on the upbeat. It's a feeling you get when on campus," hesaid SU is aliso compitted to ex cellence, althoughit it does not cellence, although, it does no achieve it equaily well in an areas, Lee said. But at some about every phase and con tinues to purgue that," he added.
According to Lee, student representatives should not be cranted voting power on the board. Facalty members and administrators do mot have voting representatives on the board either, Lee added.
*A board of trustees should not have voting representatives from the component elements of the institation, but they should certainly have access to it and interaction with it," he said.

Lee said not all the trustee's decisions are nnanimous. However, he said ${ }^{4} A$ great af frmation for the policies and procedures of the administration" exiàts.

Lee said the trustee's role is mainly budgetary. They are also concerned with the developmental plannins of SU's individual colleges.
Ome of SU's strengthis is ita reputation as a school that emiphasizes academics, he said. "I get the impreasion that we attract a high quality of atudeńt at the univeraity," he said.

Whe continuing presence and growing emergence of Hendriclas Chapel as the heart of the campus is a atrength " he added. Lee is on the AdChary Councal of Inendinctat Wither ana comer atuderits in with a nuynber capacity.

'During' his term, Finiton's views matully corresponded to the boaide

Flinton gaid he tried to impresis upon the board that the university should-gometimes be viewed from a non'tinancial viewpoint.

Flinton said the board acted negatively only once to a student resolution. When the board received an SA Assernbly resolution that referred to Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers as a liar, the board refused to acknowledge it. The board said it". was interested only in constructive criticism, Flinton said.
"The board is very responsive to logical arguments but not to emotional outbyrsts," Lazar said.
Among other things, the student representatives have addressed the board on the issues of tuition increase, overthrollment, and the Syracuse University Bookstore boycott. Flinton said the board was responsive to his and Lazar's opinions on the Ostrom Co-op and the bookstore problems even though he thought those issues were not really resolved.
Both Flinton and Lazar said they disagreed with SA's opinions on several issues. "The student representative is not a representative of SA although that is what SA would like him to be," Lazar said.
"I didn't see myself as an SA representative, but as an informed student. giving my opinionis on things that affect me as at strdent." he added.
Wher; the student representatives, opinions differed from SA's, they always presented SA's opinion to the board in addition to their own, Lazar said:-

Flinton said the repreaentative should work like a gatekeeper to filter out important issues and then presentithem to the board in a responsible and convincing manátér Flinton' said he disagreed with SA when Arnie Wolaky, SA president, implied the recent contingency. fund inwaste of money. The aniversity used'ás $$ 1.4$ million budget surplus to "increase faculty salaries and the contingency fund. Flinton said the contingency fund was toio small for the budget and the increases. was necessary and sensible.
"The faculty increase was necessary for the university to keep sood people, which is more important than giving $$ 20$ annually. as Wolsky suggested," Flinton said Lazar said he disagreed with SA on the question of whether the uni veraity shonld divest its stock in companies with South African intereste:

The university shonldexert pressure on the companies and not juat dump the stock as SA suggested," Lazar snid.
"The stock will bebought as soon as the univeraity ifives it up, probably by someone apathetic to the whole problem;" he said. However, he added, the board has yet to exert its full pressure as a.sitockholder.
Although Flinton has disagreed with the chancellor on some issues, hesaid Eggers is a "pretty good" chancellor. "Financially, he knows what he is doing." Flinton said. Eggers recognizes the necessity of balancing financial aspects withstudent demands, he explained.
Lazar added Eggers was always receptive to their opinions.
Finton said because the board hired the chancellor, it assumes whatever he says is knowledgeable and sensible. However, the board also respects student representatives* viewpoints, Flinton anid.
In addition; he said student representatives are informed of all finances and internal difficulties of the university.
Lazar said, "I have learned a great deal about the side of the university most students do not see." He added, "I was pleasantly, surprised to find the board so responsive.
Green said he hopees to address such problems as divesiture and overcrowding. He said he wants to be representative of the entire campus, not just groups such as SA.
Courtney said because she is an SA Fice-president, she can take the issues from the SA aseembly to the board. "Divesciture and the student union are not dead issues and I would like to present them to the board in a different light," Courtney said.
In addition, she would like to improve the image of the board and would like to have them meet the students at an open meeting.

SA Assembly plans contracts review
E. By Gerarci Daiuha

The Student Association Asaembly will forms a committee to review present and Unirersity holds for the education of foreign students. This committee, expected to betin; work early next semester, will be concerned with the educational backgrouth of foreign students and their courses of study at SU.
. Jim Naughton: vice presiclent for academic affairs, said, "The committee will examine the ethical and practical aspects of these contracta"
Naughton added; "We have contracts with countries, but the question is what is the ethical consideration of educating etudents to work for someone like the shah (Shat Mohammed Resa Pahlavi of Iran):"
Naughton attributes the Iranian incident that occurred earlier this semester to giving momentum to the committee's formation.
$\therefore$ "I was never really aware of the situation mntil some framian students approached me and asked for my aupport in voting against the honorary degree for the shah's wife," Naughton baid.

Currently, the College of Human Development has a ith SU to educate 45 Saudi Arabian students in nutrition.

These students pay the normal SU tuition costs, plus added expenses-for transpoxtation and board.
Harold Vaughn, director of the international programa abroad, said SU also has informal agreements with other universities.
Virginia Torrelli, director of the International Student Office, said, "Students come to SU becauae of the technical ability we offer."
Torelli also said the foreign student population is rising at SU. In 1961, less than 400 foreign atadents were on campus, while this year the number has grown to about 1,300 . She attributes this to the increase in the number of foreign undergraduaten.

Jacobs to play in Shrine game

By Marla GanEx
SU placekicker DaveJacobs has been invited to play in the East-West Shrine bowl game in San Francisco on Jan. 6. Jacobs, a senior, is tied for secorad place in the all-time NCAA records for number of career field goais (53). He will represent the East squad.

SU head coach Frank Maloney feels Jacobs ia very deserving of the honor. "Dave is strongly outatandiag," Maloney said. "He has won beveral ganies for us.

Jacobs ahould receive a considerable amount of exposare since the game will be nationally televised. The game will also be heavily scouted, enabling the pro scouts to geta last glanee at the future NFL draftee
This season the scouts will have an eyeful of kickers to con aider, since four outatanding kickers are graduating. In-ad dition to Jacobsare Tony Franklin of Texas A & M. Matt Bahr of Penn Stote and Rumall Eryloben of Texans "All four ahould be drafted," Maloney predicted.

Jacobs was the oaly Orangeman to be choven for a postseason all-star bowl this seamon. Maloney believes that quarterback Bill Hurley would also have been aelected if he had not been injured early in the year.

Commission removes Jacobi from SA ballot

By Carolyn Beyran
Stadent Association presidential candidate Jerry Jacobi was removed last night from the ballot of today's runofr election by the SA elections commiention.
Thin is the frest time in SA history hat P Presidential candidato hns been talkenoirttie ballot:. Jacobi could not be reached for comment.

Althorigh Jacobi is rio longer on the ballot he is still eligible for the presidency as a write-in candidate. said Dale Cohen, SA vice president for adininistrative operations and a comptriller candidate.
The commission's decision to remove Jacobi's name from the-ballot was bacobis on ' $J$ Jacobi's consistent mismepresentations of fact to the required gtat inem humding -in to commission after the deadline and a violent ontburst before the commiseion tonight," according to the cormmission's statement.

Jacobi hiad been "sever̄aly censured" by the commission Tuesday night for. illegal campaign activities." These included failure to denounce the publication and distribution of a newsletter -titled the *Free Student Press"'in a reasonable amount of time.
"Free Student Press," which endoryed Jacobi, accised SA officisils and members of The Daily Oraige etaff of forming a "tight-knit-pofítical machine
Jacobi told the commission Tuesday night that he had no knowledge of the newsletter prior to its distribution. He said he first saw it Sunday when it was delivered to his fraternity, Delta Upailon.
However, Matthew Kane, a WAET reporter, told the commission last night that he saw Brian Dillon, author of the newsietter, kive Jacobi a copy in Sadler Lounge on Friday, Dec. 1 .
${ }^{4}$ I. was having a discussion with Jacobi when Dillon came up and said, 'Here's the newsletter, what do you think of it?'". Kane told the commission. "Jerry said, 'It's a bit strong, but good:"
But Jacobi reaponded that he had not read the newsletter.
"I didn't take it orreadit," hesaid. "I didn't know what it was?

Pressed by members of the commission as to why he did not read the literature, Jacobi picked up a chair, slammed it on the coimmission's conference table and ailid, 4 Forget me. I don't give a shit". He then left the room.
-Jacobi was warned Tiuesday"eight by the commision that-one more violation on hispart would be grounds for his removal from the ballot.
The commission said David Cleary, Jacobi's comptroller running mate, Wras not involved in the matter. It said its findings did not reflect on Cleary. twho was in no way involved or implicated in these activities.
Cleary anid last night he will not withdraw from the race.
"In light of the rules with which the lections commission is set up, I stand by the decision," Cleary said in a statement to the DO.
Presidential candidate Jordan Dale would not comment on the commisaion's decision.

Comptroller candidate Dale Cohen said, "I'm saddened by the decision but I understand the commission's rationale."

Joel Lazar,- elections commission Joirperson, said Jacobi was required chairperson, said Jacobi was required newaletter because of an elections newaletter because of an elections commission rule stating that "all commission rule stating that all candidates must be reepronaible for the legality of their campaign and the actioni of their ataff."

JJacobi demonstrated a lack of responsibility for letting the newsletter come out and not publicly saying he's not a part of it," Lazar aaid. "Hedidn't make an honest effort to make all campaign documenta known and valid."
Defeated candidates in Wednesday's election announced their endorsements for the remaining candidates.

Frank Slazer, defeated presidential candidate, gave his support to Dale and his runming mate Cohen
"I'm endorsing Jordan Dale and Dale Cohen because they are the only candidates qualified to do the job," Slazer said Kurt Schwartz, also defested in the presidential race, endorsed Dale and

Fund drive nets millions for SU

By Bryan Doninelly
More than $$ 100$ million has been raised this year in gifts and pledges, boosting Syracuse University ${ }^{*}$ s capital campaign total to more than $$ 25$ million.
The campaign began in 1976 to raise funds for capital development and to eliminate some of SU's debts.

Roger-Hull, vice president for development, announced yesterday that fund-raising efforts "are right on target," with $$ 25,053,000$-raised as of Dec. 1. He added that the zoal of $$ 35$ million rhould be reached sometime next year.

relations, said one of the problems of raising money for the building, is the lack of a brochure. to solicit donors, which most of the other projects have.

Hull aaid the intereat of donors determines how much money is raised for the various projects.
Most of the remaining categories are reaching their funding goals and several gillion dollars in unrestricted funds have been raised.

Ten of the $$ 11$ million for the renovation of campus buildings has been raised. Of this $$ 3$ million of the $$ 4$ million needed for the renovation of thie Hall of Languages has been pledged. Hull said unrestricted funds coming in now will go for HL'a renovation "because there are bills that have to be paid there."

Another category of funding is for cranting endowed chpirs. The ampont of money raitied in &3 million of the $$ 5$ milipa conl.

Another $$ 6$ million is sought for new academic buildings Four million dollars would go toward construction of a new School of Management building and the remaining money may go toward partial funding of a School of. Education building.
Hull said it is unclear how much money has been raised because some of the funds might be earmarked for other building renovation projects.

Burton Blatt, dean of the education school, said "I'm confident in the next few years there will be a building." The education school is currently education school is currentily housed in Huntington Hall, Which is inadequate for the school B needs.

Another category is $$ 2$ milion for special programs. One million dollars has been raised to pay for the new seating in Maniey Field House Other projects include, the planned renovation of the Pegent Theatre and making brildings mote accemaible to coninued on prop turimen,

Men plead innocent

Seeking defense

To the editor:
Last night I was with a few friends at a local nightapot. At one point n Croup of sive young men from Camillus came in, toik good note of the people who were there, and at closing left. Rather than going home, however, these five young men went to their van, grabbed sticks and stood outaide the bar. Two of the patrons came out and were then beaten up.
This incident is just the latest in a recent series of assults and harassments of gay citizens in Syracuse. The worst aspect of it all is that the police have continued to do nothing about these continuing criminal aseaults.
When a person is attacked on the etreets, we are all beaten and clubbed.
$\stackrel{F}{-}$ would like to ask Mayor Alexañder and Police Chief. Sardino to review this incident and the police response to it. When several eyewitnesses and two bleeding victims plead with the police to enforce the law and have their pleas refused, it is time for all concerned citizens to take action.

What is desire?

To the editor:
If it atartled you to learn that "people approve of their own beha vior and like who they are," you can rest more easily, since Professor Porterfield makes it clear that it's all a'semantic trick. "We desire to behave just as we do, else we would behave differently" "The test of whether I desire $X$ is whether I do $X$, so it is logically impossible for me to do otherthan what I desire itis then no arpriae that "x will and reason serve desire" since degire has been tipulated to be-the only source of the only source of iuman motivation.

Very well, but she must now allow me the desire for rationality (which we formerly, in our concasion, sup posed to be reason), the desare to set atandards of human vixtue and the deaire to overcome the deficiencies of my own character (some of the things we formerly called desire). In return for my redescribing my concerns she must allow me the liberty of redescribing hers as well

Under the dome: student seating freeze-out

The more things change, the more they remain the same. Take, for instance; the seating plan concocted by Syracuse University for the new domed foothall stadium, which was unveiled in The Record yesterday.

The seats will be nicer than Archbold Stadium's cold concrete slabs, and atudents won't have to worry about getting rained on or snowed on during football games.
But in the universitys callous "business as'usual" spirit; the beat seats in the houge will once morego to those persons with the hefty checkbooks, rather than the students whose spirit and enthusiasm should be the cornerstone of, any college football program.
After all, Syracuse is a university and its football teamis primary and its football teamis primary fans should be its students. It was fans should be its students. It was the students, by the way, whomade the firat SU foothall team possible in 1888 by purchasing a football.
But when it comes time in Septernber-1980 for the opening kickoff in the new stadium, students holding athletic activity, cards will End-themselves gitting in a southwest corner of the stadiam that seats 3,778 and lies between the 30 -yardline and the end zone.

If there are more students attending than there are seats, Melvin $C$ Mounts, vice président for student affairs, assures us they will be aceommodated -- by "wrapping" student seating around in to the end zone.

What these-reassurances overlook is that students should not be relegated to the "cheap seats" merely because they are students ratber than individuals willing to pay anywhere from $$ 150$ to $$ 1,000$ for preferred veating between the 30 -yard lines.

According. to Mounta' figures, about 4,400 atudeñts hold athletic activity carcla. Obviously, should more than 3,778 atudenter pick up tickets for a game in the dome, several hundred will wind up sitting in the end zone.

What this' does, in effect, is penatize thone additional students for displaying support for their football-team. Although Archbold student attendance averaged only about 2,400 this past memaon, SU administratoris cannot angue with any credibility that 4,400 stadents will nover phch up sicketw for $a$ single game. Any such argument would be negated by another university contention - that the attractiveness of a dome would significantly increase both student and overall attendance at $S U$ football games.

What the administration seems to beoblivious to is that stadents do have a right to at least some of the domed atadium's beist seats.

Administrators may claim that the expensive donations are necessary to finance the stadium, but is it right that students should have to pay $$ 6,000$ plus a year to attend SU, plus an additional $40 (probably more by 1980) for an athletic activity card, and then still get shoved inito a section near the end zone as if they were merely secondary fans?

We don't think so, but the SU administration's actions indicate that it probably-does feel this way:
If the band of students who bought that first football in 1888 had known how their descendants would be-treated 90 years later. perhaps they would have taken theiri ball away from the administration and gone home.

City department cites fire hazards

By Mitce Grogan Three months have passed since the Syracuse Department of Building and - Property Rehabilitation cited, 47 multiple resideney houstes in the university areams fire hazards.
-However, Department Director Davig Young claims most owners of the buildinga have dome little to correct the hazards.
In September; the department cited the owners of buildings for violations such as the lack of a second exit for upperlevel residents; lack of proper fire retardant materials surrounding hallways and cellar ceilings and inadequate electrical service. The 47 buildings house about 200 university students.
The building owners were given 30 days to make corrections or negotiate a compliance sclinedite suith the city, Young said.
But Young said that so far only six owners have had the violations correctedinnd eight have reached an agreement with the city on a schedule that gives; themo additional time.
Young said 25 owners have made an "insignificant effort to correct the violations."
The Departanent of Build ing and Property, Rehabilitations is in the process of 'ifling Final Orders A's against these 25 owners.
These notify the owner that an insufficient number of repairs have been gade. Young asid the owner is given 10 working days to given 10 working days to make significant correc tions or to work out an acceptabl

The DBPR claims eight properties must be reinspected. "In some cabes there were computer foulups and in other cases only a partial inspection had been done," a DBPR spokesman said.

Young said further DBPR irispections have found 129 additional houses in the university area to be guilty of minor violations. He said these include an inadequate number of electrical outlets and the lack of a gas shut off valve.

University trustee reveals quiet and  optimistic views

Editor's noter This is the last part in a eeries examining the part in:a series examining the Tristees. It iprofiles trustee Royat L'OD'Day

By Walecia Konrad
His bright; red plaid jacket is probably. the loudest thing about Royal O'Day, Syracuse Univeraity truatee and chairman of the board of Marine Midland Bank downtown:

The 1936 SU graduate has a quietibut optimistic outlook toward the campus and his rustee respansibilities. "There's a lot of humanness at SU.'You get a feeling of working together with the community, administrators, faculty- and students.

In his comfortable, cluttered office, O'Day leans back in his chair, half remembering his days at SU and half contemplating, this generation of students. In the background, secretaries balance their secretaries balance heir checkbooks and talk about Christmas vacation.
difference between otudents then and now, O'Day said, "but students are maid, cognizant of the world today cognizant of the surla today, they have a greater desire to o'Day.

Day said he saw the greatest change in students in the late 1960 s and early '70s. "Students in the ' 60 s used to feel trustees were.people with horns on their heads, you know, capitalists, but nothing is further from the trath.

However, O'Day stresses the importance of the trustees' fiscal responsibilities. Trustees are in charge of raising contributions for all capital expenditures, O'Day explained. He said the inability to fund some capital projects needed in the university was SU's major weakness.

O'Day said it is especially difficult to find a donor for a student union building because it is not an educationoriented structure. "We've been pughing for years, but a promise," O'Day day. "I wish I had $$ 3$ million to give for a atudent union building.

The construction of a university union building was O'Day's main priority when he was chairman of the board of trustees from-1970 to 1975, he said.

It is important to coordinate trustees, administrators, faculty and student efforts to effectively run the university, O'Day said.
Yet, there is no official way for the administration, faculty or students to reverse the final trustee decisiond O'Day said the administration seldom proposes : 'gomething that doesn't concur with the trustees views. "Normally the administration will be guided by the thinking of the trustees"
O'Day also streases the importance of a good worling relationship between the wiversity and community. "I like to call it a goodtown and gown relationship," he said. "SU has one of the beit relationships. with the community I've seen? ",

Ammesty International chapter to hold conference

By Myra A. Aronion
Gerkiard Ehatomi ercecutive director of Amneef International USA, will be the main-apeaker at a confexence to be held Sunday by the Syracuse Univergity chapter of AI.
The conference will commemorate the 30th annivensary of the United Nations Declairation of Fuiman Rights, a document Preaident Jimmy Carter recently called "the soul of Amexican foreigri policy:"
Elston'e speech, entitled "Ar'a role in Human Rights," will begin at $3: 45$ p.m. and is one of several speeches, poetry readings, films and workshops to be conducted from 2 to- 6 p.m. in the Maxwell Foundera Roona.
The theme for the ovent, cosponsored by. AfraAmerican Studies and the program for Nonviolent Connlict and Change is "America's Role In Human Rights At Home and Abroad."

AIUSA, which won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977, is a worldwide organization working to release "prisoners of conacience," men and women who have been imprisoned for their beliefs, color, ethnic origin, sex, language or religion.
The SU chapter bejgan less than two months ago and will soon set up an office at 712 Ostrom Ave.
According to Arne Komar, one of the three Lamba Chi Alpha fraternity brothers who started the SU group, the chapter received $$ 750$ from Student Agsociation on Nov. 6
Komar said $$ 500$ will be used to pay dues that will make the group an official charter member of AI. The remaining money will be spent on miscellaneous expenses such as postage, telegrams, movies and peakers.

Being a charter member enibien the chapter to receive releasesent out by the Urgent'Action Networkin London. The network reséarches cases involving "prisoners of conscience" and send each chapter the address of the proper authorities to appeal to oh the victim's behalf, and eppecific sections of the Declaration of Human Rights that can be enforced in each
Through letters, telegrams and phone call, AI works to gain freedom and humane treatment for the prisoners, provided they have not used or advocated violence, Komar said. Since the program began in 1961, " 50 percent of the men whose names appeâred in (AI) letters were released," be added.
Making a prisoner know through repeated letter-writing can lead to his eventual release, Andy Burns, ope of thet Lamba Chis brothers, eaid.
The authority may not even read the letters, but he may froe a prisoner just because he is sick of aeeing hia name day after day," Burns said. "We don't care what his motivations are," headded, just as long as the prisoners are granted. their rights.'
About 40 SUI students attended AI's firat meeting in Oetober. Burns attributed this to a genuine concern for AI's cause.
"Students are very idealistic," Burns said. "They are appalled by torture and violation of human righte."
However, only 30 stadents have become members. Komax pointed out that somie students, although interested in AI, are nnable to donate enough time to the organization.
"Most atudents would rather pay five dollars for the cause than spend the time it takes to write a letter,' he said.

McCombe conducts fundraising for renovation of 'other' dome

By John Irigh
Renovations of Fendricks Chapel will begin on Monday, Angust - 14, 1979 and will be completed by August 1980, suidr-Hendricks Chapel Dean John H. McCombe-McCombe stressed that renovating the chapel is vital to the campus community and said he hopes to see all the pledges in by commencement. So far, $$ 6,000$ have been raised, and McCormbe aaid he hopes to recuive large donations from corporations and alumani gifts.
McCombe also said he hopes to raise an additional $$ 100,000$ supplies and an elevator for the. Community House on Comstock Avenue. Mendriciss Chapel holde various programs throughout the semester at Commonity House.

The renovation, which may cost $$ 395,800$, includes repairs'such as roofs, eaves, stairs and floors. Alsoincluded is an estimated $$ 30,000$ for repairs to the heating and ventilation system and $$ 70,000$ for electrical work.
Another $48,000 is needed to repair the organ, pews, aymnals and to install a seat elevator for the hiandicapped.

If we can get an extra $$ 100,000$," McCombe said, "both the renovation of the chapel and the Community House will be possible."
"A domed stadium is fine." he gaid, "but repairing the chapel's dome really touches all the bases."
McCombe said the four-fold purpose of the 48-year-old chapel makes-it "indispersable" to the carnpus and to the community. It has a tradition of worship and everything from Protes Lantian to zen Buddhist meditation is practiced freely The chaper is important to raise questions of ethical im "Weal he said of people," MicCombe said. "They can exchange ideas, so they will better appreciate each others religious convictions." The Community House is important for this, he eaid, becauge it is m means of periences.

"Up to 1,500 people use the Community House each week," McCombe added, "and everything from gourment cooling to Zen Meditation is done."
"Our Enal purpose is to share wisdom of religious traditions," he said. "Wetry to" help people cross over to other trains of religious thought and return to their religion better McComb
McCombe said the chapel is "truly the heart" of the community in these four respects, and the renovation is "urgent" so this work can carry on with the highlight being. the chapel's Jubilee Celebration in 1980.

Diversity is the key to this LP's success. Gilmour explores a wide range of musical styles including everything from mellow instrumentals like Mihalis. to excited, 'There's No Way Out of Here."
Theres No Way Out of Here." vocals and occasional organ playing are superb. Exced byt back-up support is provided by drummer Willie Wilson, bassist Rick Wills and a team of female vocalists, including Carlena Williams, Debbie Doss and Shirley Roden.
Truly. David Gilmour has put this talented Floyd guitarist in the pink.

2. Aliens/Horslips

After years of playing in grungy Dublin pubs, Horslips, the aspiring young Irish rock band, has stepped out of the shadows and into the spotlights as one of the music industry's best new talents. Nowhere is this more apparent than on Aliens, and band's second domestic release.
Aliens, a loosely-woven concept album, tells the tales of Irish immigrants who come to the new world seeking fame and dure. Their stories are adeptly told still be rather melodic and restrained as well, as on."You're All I Am." "Back Where You Belong" and "I Have Waited So Long:"
Every track on Double Vision is refresh ing - there are no throwaways and no ex cesses of any kind on this album. Foreigner even shows more class than most other current hard-rock bands in their tasteful use of synthesizers and the occasional use of saxophones and other woodwind instruments.
2. Some Giris/The Rolling Stones

Mick Jagger's voice might be alightly "Shattered" nowadays, especially in live performances, but the Rolling Stones are far from being in tatters, if this album is any indication:
Some Girls is lavgely an album about and derived from, the avantegarde world New York City of which both the Jaggers (Mick and Bianca) have become an integral part.
The key ingredient to the success of this um is a return to the forcefpl, rowdy,

One of the main problems musicians had to contend with in- 1978 was competing. with their own pasts. Many of today's top musicians faced heavy preasure from their fans to make their music progress fation short.

Just think of all the superstars who released albums this year. The Rolling Stones issued Some Girls -agood album; "Shattered" is' the best song the Stones have done in many years. However, the music on Some Girls doesn't match such Stones classics as "Btown Sugar" and " Jumping Jack Flash.'
A similar fate befell The Who. Who Are You was a solid effort by one of rock's greateat groups. It Was especially antia fying becauise The Who had not produced a good album in several years. Neverthaleas, when measured against the grouph past eftorts, particularky the classic. Who's Next, The Who came up ohort.

Boaton's new album was eagerty awaited, but rock devotees soon found the wait was not worth it-Not only had Boston, failed to zuprpyo prye, it= etppping through rowdy rockers, such as "The through rowdy rockers, such as "The as "Ghosts" and "Exiles." Aliens features fine musicianship throughout, particularly the efforts of bas sist Barry Devlin, guitarist Johnny Fean and drummer Eamon Carr.

3. Who Are You/The Who

It's truly amazing that The Who can still keep cranking out superb albums after 14 years. The band's - record dous $Y$ nout the years has been a tremen Are Yne, and the group's 1978 entry, of succesias not broken the band sacen' quite match the group's classics. Who's Next and Quadrophenia, Who Are You shows that The Who can still produce excellent rock ' $n$ ' roll and what's more, try new and innovative things with it.
Honorable Mentions:
Some Girls
The Rolling Stones)
Octave
(Themoody Blues)
Wise After the Event
(Anthony Phillips)
don't give a damn," spirit which became the trademark of Stones' early years. 3. But Seriously, Folks. . JJoe Walsh Joe Walsh nas played with several in fluential bands durige career, and is currently the savior of the Eagles. But, when Walsh is not busy with some band or another, he produces fine solo albums, and his 1978 offering, But Seriously Folks..., is no exception.
Highlights of this work include Walsh's, autobiographical cut, "Tife's Been Good," instrumentals "Inner Tube"' and "Theme From Boat Weirdos," and "Tomorrow," a cut which resembles the music of the Eagles.
Walsh's guitar woik is always pleasant and never overdone. Excellent supphever overdone. Excellent back-up support is provided by a fine cast of Vitale, Willie Wing Jay Ferguson, Joe members, Don Felder, Glenn Frey and Don Henley.

Don't Look Back was as stale as two-week-

 old bread.Similar problems also plagued the new releases by Bruce Springsteen and Billy Joel. Darkness on the Edge' of Town proved that Springsteen - has gone nowhere since Born to Run. And Billy Joel's 52nd Street, coming right after the spectacular success of The Stranger, seemed hurried, as if fittle thought had been put into it.
A word must be said about punk rock, if for no other reason than that 1978 saw its virtual demise. For a while (at least six mestore some vitality to punk rock would perhaps force today's leading musicians to rethink their concepts of what music is all about. But punk was too bizarre to Bur vive. And the fact that masses of punker have since sold out to the popsound shows that creativity seems to have been set aside in this age of rock ' $n$ ' roll blandness.
All of which is too bad. There is nothing exciting about roct ' $n$ roll anymore; ithes all become too predictable. A year in which a put-on like Devo can capturie the attention of many people ebowe that sominthing new is needed - and that

Honor group

offers services

By Fran Lepper
A tradition that went by the wayside during the 1960 m my be on the way bacic.

Dan Willett, aasistant dean of the College, of Arts and Seiences, and Jeff Fox, an SU genior,- have started to reactivate acholastic honoraries in the College of Arts and Sciences.
The honoraries, more than half of which became inactive during the 1960 s , are honor societies that bring together interested students who have the same major or minor. These groupis atrive to create mn intellectual atmosphere outside the clasisroom by providing lectures, films and social gatheringa for professors and students, in addition to practical services such as career days, Willett Baid.

Willett baid he would like to see all the honoraries reacLivated by next semester. Fox has already reactivated the Payichology Honorary and has met with representatives.from three other honoraries. Each repreaentative was assigned two or three disciplines to become involved in, with the thope of reactivating all the honoraries, Fox said.

Orrless Orange meet 'Sly' Rams

The cards in the Eastern basketball prestige game will be reshuffled Saturday night at Manley Field House as two undefeated teams with identicalrecords (4-0) clash. Butwhen the Syracuse-Rhode Pbland contest ends, the team with the better hand may not be at the top of the deck in late March.
When Fhode Island loat to Michigan Statelast year in the first Carrier tournament, its play was anything but clasaic. "Our pride was hurt in that game," recalled Rhode Ialand Coach Jack Kraft. Michigan State's Earvin "Magic" Johnaon helped maike Kraft. Michagan State a Earvin Magic Johnson helped make the Ram'a defense invisible as he Ied his team to an easy 92.64 victory.

The Rams' iniured pride and defense healed in time for poatseagon play. They recovered well enough to hold their opponents to less than 65 points 14 times. Well enough to lose by only one point to NCAA finalist Duke in the opening round of the Eastern Regionals. Well enough to be rated 20th in Sports Illustrated's preseason poll.

The man most responsoble for Rhode Island's basketball renaissance is Sylvester "Sly" Williams. Williams' dominance in last year's post-season games enabled him to be named the most valuable player of both the ECAC playoffa and the first round of the NCAA tournargent.
The 6 -foot-7 junior hat redefined the word "valuable" in basketball, leading the Rams in aix offensive and two defensive categories his first two years. He has continued his torrid pace this season, averaging 22.5 points and eight rebounds each game.
"He is their best player, but he isn't alone," Baid Syracuse coach Jim Eoebeim of the potential All-Everything candidate. Williams teams with center IrvChatman and 6-foot.7 forward Jim Wright to form Rhode Island's front court. Chatman; a $6-$ foot-8 senior, has a solid reputation for defense and rebounding. He is currently averaging six rebounds a game.
John Nelson, who Boeheim says "can shoot the ball with anybody," is Rhode Island's other offensive threat. The E-foot-4 senior guard is labeled as the Rams "resident zone buster" in Rhode Island's press guide.
Currently averaging 13 points per garne, Nelson will be joine in the backcourt by either Nick Johnson or Ed Bednarcik.
Kraft is pleased with the play of his starters and bench. "Oūr progress report is right on target," Kraft observed.
The bighly-reapected coach said that Rhode IBland's main strength is its inside game. "They are a strong rebounding team and their big men shoot the ball really well." said Syracuse captain Dale Shackleford.
One of Syracuse's most important big men, Louis Orr, will be sidelined on Saturday night. Orr underwent surgery Tuesday morning to repair a singht carthage tear an his knee Boeheim said Orr's absence will make the game that much tougher for the Orangemen. 'Playing without Louis isn't going to be easy," Boeheim predicted.

"I think the players will have to pull together and reach down for something extra;" Boeheim said. "Louis is our best big outside shooter, and he is also a great rebounder. He had 11 rebounds the first half against lona playing on a bum leg."
"Orr's reboundink will be sorely missed against a team that Boeheim says jelled and had a super Ginish last year.
"We can't afford a letdown this early in the season when every game is very important," Boeheim said. "Rhode Island is yery much a quality team."

The game may have added importance to the Rams, who not only played miserably in Manley last season, but were crushed by the Orangemen 70-47 at the Providence Civic Center two years ago.

Our teama would like to show Syracuse they know how to play banketball," Kraft said. Kraft added that SU'simpressiveatring of 33 consecutive wins at Manley won't intimidate his ballclub.
"It might make the game that much more difficult" Kraft commented, "but any team that you play is beatable. I haven't heard of a team going undefeated forever at home. A loss might come when people least expect it."

Shackleford said that Syracuse isn't emphasizing the importance of what some people are calling a showdown in the East. "It's no big thing to us"'said Carrier's 1978 Most Valuable Player; "We're just going to try and go out and win the ball game. ${ }^{\text {P }}$

A qualified ambulance service

To the editor
This letter is being written to clear. up the gross misconceptions and er rors related in aletter in the Dec. 8 is Bue of the DO, concerning Syracuse Univeraity Ambulance.

Firgt of all, the call in question occurred on the evening of Nov. 28, not the evening of Nov. 27. More importantly, the description of the crew's performance while immobilizing this patient. (with neck and back injuries) was severely misrepresented. The total time spent by the ambuiance at, the scene was 38 minutes. This not only includes 38 minutes. This not only includes the time spent immobilizing the patient but includes the time spent patient but includes the time spent getting equipment, taking information and loading the patient into the ambulance. The patient was correctly immobilized by the use of accepted medical practices with a backboard, sandhags, cervical backboard, sandhage, cervical collar and strape. There were three collar and straps. There were three state licenses in emergency medical technology.

Ms. Jaworgki failed to clearly identify herself as a registered nurse to the crew. She offered her assistance by suggeating a treatment which was inappropriate at the time. She was told, "Thank you, we'll take care of it."'This exchange took place in front of many of her sorority sisters and friends.

The Syracuse University Ambulance does not engage in the practice of allowing people to assist unless they are knowledgeable in the proper emergency-care techniques.
In her last paragraph, Jaworaki stated, "I want to be heiped by a per son who practices emergency medicine as a profession, not as a hobby.". While members of Univer sity Ambulance receive no financia compersation for their efforts, much of the training its members undergo in exactly the same as that required for paid ambulance personnel in New York state. Hundreds of volunteer ambulance squads across the state provide quality emergency care to their districts. Profescare tionalism can be displayed in the actions of any person or group that possesses the knowledge and skills to do its job correctly, whether the persons are paid or.volunteers.

Although the article in the Nov. 29 issuie about University Ambulance did not stress this, facts show that Syracuse University Ambulance handles numerous emergency calls that are more severe than mint knife cuts and alcohol overdoses. In fact, this was the second cervical spineinjury that evening alone.

By writing this letter, it is hoped that we have cleared up any mis conceptions about our organization which the previous correspondence which the previous may have created.

Steven Richards
Seeven Richards is director of operations for. Syracuse University Ambulance, formerly known as MCU.

The aftermath of an unfair fight

In "Death of a Salesman," Willy Loman's brother, Ben, urges one of Willy's sons to play-fight with him. As Willy's sons to play-fight with him. As the boy comes forward, Ben trips him. "Never fight fair with a stranger, boy. way," Ben tells him
It was a linie we remembered over and over-again during the past two weeks of the Student Association election. We Fribeled members of SA and-The Daily Orange, we remembered it. When the Orange, we remembered it. When the elections commission was charged elections cornmission was charged with gross mismanagement, and fraud," wereinembered it when certain ipeople impersonated others to obtain information and we remembered-it when some candidates called others Communists and Marxists.

The SA elections were not a fair fight They were marked by some of the campus in a while. The Jacobi campaign was reminiscerit-of the pranks Ehrlichman and Haldeman practiced in college. Some fratemities and sororities, perhipg feeling underrepresented in SA, raised their complaints.to the order of the ideological differences of world religions. In seeking to mend what they It as a problem, they made it worse. When it no way to run a campaign When it was proved that Jacobi hadapproved the "SStudent. Free Press" newsletter, am unsigned attack on membera of SA and the DO, he was fhorced off the ballot: Some poitrayed him in the fampiline motif of the well intentioned politidan: who soaded from office, as sone-Americans saw Nixon's. resiguation as the product of Ethically, the elections commission had no choice in knocking Jacobi off had no choice in knocking Jacobi off the ballot; practically, the matter the-ballot; practically, the matter should have been left to the voters. But should have been left to the voters. But Tuesday night it "severely censured" Tuesday night it "severely censured" Jacobi, warning' him that one more violation would force him off the ballot.

He was charged with failure to list the He was charged with fainure to list the with the use of "Your student fee at work* on posters, thus implying SA sponsorship; and failing to denounce the "Student Free Press" leaflet. When it came out that Jacobi actually. approved the libelous attack, the commission had to act as it did.

The worst aspect of the election is that many people who gave their time to help the campus, people who cared, were needlessly hurt, insulted and accused. It became that most unfair method of Eighting with a stranger-McCarthyism. Hearsay was enough to indict, association with the wrong people enought ta corvict; and canspiracies and alliances were seen everywhere. It was the work of a vivid imigination.

You're under suspicion," one person was told. "Don't; be maen with me.". It was the kind of guilt by association one high school clique practices on another.

It seemed as if Jacobi and his campaign manager sought to indict everyone. The elections commission, headed by Joel Lazar, patin long hours tracking dotwn and examining all the evidence of violations. Some persons complained that the commission waited until the night before the elec tion to -bring the charges about the posters being incorrectly marked. But they ignore the fact that Jacobi received the some guidelines as the other candidates. The guidelines have gaid for two years that posters must have the election date on them. The have the election date on them. The commission convened that night because the Student Free Press day.

The Daily Orange

The Daily Orange's coverage was called into question. The accusations in the newsletter said the DO was part of a "tightly knit political machine" with SA and a "mouthpiece" of that organization. The accusations seemed to draw some support from those who like to think one amorphous bloh was running their affairs.

Actually, the DO has been critical of Wolsky; one of the slogans used in the attack-"Monday Night Circus"-was from a severe criticism of Wolsky's presidential conduct. The DO.does not dictate to anyone nor are we a "mouthpiece:" it is an exaggeration to think wethave excessiye power or that we are that easily swayed.
Comptroller Carl Kleidman ruminity Comparoller Car Kleidman a, letter on election day; the fault was not in the letter but. in endangering the right to repiy. The well-reasoned letter from someone who knows the position was not intended as an endorsement. It was only the second letter wereceived about the campaign, the first being too print. We corrected ourgelves by printing Comptroller candidate. Cleary's letter the following day before the rumoff election.

In the atmosphere of deceit, no one cameout clean. People were reported to be apeaking against Jacobi at election polling places, according to Lazar. Jacobi was treated harshly at the candidates. forum at Jabberwocky. But, the pupose of that formm was to put under no more pressure than canBarbuara Hass were under in previous yearsi: None of them took it as a conopiracy. just an acknowledgement of different opinions.

As the gituation is now, those who feel unfairly fought against, on either side, will seize on parts of this editorial, side, will seize on parts of this editorial, using the words to their own advang the Words to their own ad vantage. That is the major problem now. Even though the elections are over, there are still two campaigns goover, there are still two campaigns going on; in the eyes of some of the ing on; in the eyes of some of the defeated it is now a campaign of disdefeated ruption.

SA President-elect Jordan Dale and Comptroller-elect Dale Cohen arrived at SA Saturday morning to find a threatening note, a knife in a rotten orange and what appeared to be a dog's ear. The note, made of different letters cut out of newspapers like a ransom note, said, "Your troubles have just begun-the Greek Liberation Army."

But there is an atmosphere of reconciliation. Jordan Dale has made the first item of his agenda, before heeven takes office, to visit and talk with all the Greek houses: And at Monday night's assembly meeting, InterFraternity Council President Bill Hayes aaid they are willing to work with the new SA administration.

There are some who are upset. If Greek houses, or, more correctly, the freek who contend to speak for them, continue this plan of implied harassment, tinue this plan of implied harassment our troubles will have truly begun. Although this was a record 27 percent turnout- $\mathbf{3 , 0 0 0}$ students-there arestill turnout $\mathbf{3 , 0 0 0}$ students-therearestil sho feel SA does not serve them, or that Who feel SA does notserve them, or that student politics are frivolous and fooligh or just the toys of the ambitious.

If the dirty fighting of the election spills over.into the new SA administration, those whodo not care will be reassured in their. attitude, even though it is not right. Those who do care, although xight, will be powerlegs and we will all lose-Greeks, independents, any label you want-all of us will lose to a university administration that already holds too much unquestioned power.
And that will be the most unfair fight of all.

Poet John Behouth views many established poets contemptuoutiv because they, deal with abstracts and fail to took at life realistically.

Poet reaches different audience

By J. T. Brady
John Bahouth has just.returned from his daily eight-mile run. Clad in a grey sweatshirt and oranige sweatpants, he looked poet.
"Fifteen years ago, the idea of the typical poet was songebeatnik in a bar, all smoked out and drugged out, he said with a laugh. all the time-it's in and going to church alithe time-:
Bahouth's activity ontside of the classroom is not the only thing that claseroom in not the only thing. that separates him from the popular notion.

history major.
"A lot of people just assume Y'm an English of pajop," he said. "History provides a great backgrocind for me to research my woik.
Bahouth's works can be found in a collection of poems called - Blue Slis Red Morning,", published in 1976. The volume contains poems dealing with the human condition in a straight forward, accessible $\therefore$ manner. Bahouth's verse, which he considers his "early, work," is comspicuously devoid of obscuremetaphors: Rather, it presents the poet's estiperrients and observations on the problems of the individual in life.
Bahouth said the surface aimplicity of his "blue-collar"? poetry reflects the frustration he has felt in trying to interpret the work of traditionally accepted poets.
accepted poets.
'I think $I$ 'miale to reach a different audience the plumber, the carpenter, the worlingman-the common man, he said. "Some of the poetry your read is so inaccessible, it's bogus. In terms of real-life practicality- a lot of poets are just lost.
Bahouth's lack of enthusiasm for established poets has had interesting results.
"There a lot of irony in" the subject," he said. "I've beeri extremely poor in my academic study of poetry. In fact class." the bottom of just about any The bearded Syyacuse native has hus looked elsewhere for inspiration to hard to really talk about on I was influenced as much by Dyla on I was influenced as much by Dylan as any writer was. I get more influence from The Nev Much of the poetry in "Blue Sky Red Morning" is pessimistic, frequently repeating themes of beipg used and "hipped off"" Bahouth said the tone of his work is probably a reflection of the events that took place in his life at the time he wrote it
"A lot of events. that happened during five years in iny life gave me a new outlook on things-yourmight call it skin-toughening," he said. "My pargnts got divorced, and I suddenly found myself as the father for five kids. stuff a teenage prank. It was humiliating."

At the age of 19, Bahouth took a year off from SU to travel around the country. He said this journey also contributed to his pessimism.
"It reinforced a lot of the negative feelings I had," he said. "And it also shattered a lot of concepts i had about America.'
Bahouth said his period of disillusionment nffected his relationshipe with those around him. "I really lost touch with hirn for a while," said. his roommate "He uI came a different person altogether. perhaps my ferst book was a slightly anjust view of life," Bahouth said. I've-learned since then that you have to accept a lot of things. My next book ill be a lot lighter.'
Bahouth's personal growth and shedding of his paist pessimism represents the actualization of an idea he presents in an early poem. "Frozen Falls" out of one person and into another, just like the water trying to move out we strive to keep flowing-avoiding the suspersion of ice.
A painting of Christ rests over the fireplace in Bahouth's apartment. Bahouth said he is a dedicated Christian, and God plays an important part in his poetry.
"God is defnitely working through me to bring en message," he said. "To to clear the pathway were part of something much greater.
"I believe that every time I pick up a pen; something very myitical happens," he said. "The pen just gtarts moving on the blank sheet of paper and the thought," that's proauced is Bahouth calls poetry "my god-like experience," in that he does not need to put much effort into writing. As a resuit, he can take part in a wide range of other activities. Aside from his involvement with the church, Bahouth was the county coordinator for Gerald Ford's presidential re-election bid in 1976, was involved with the President's Council on Aging and with the New York Public Interest Reaearch Group. He also worked as a Little League coach, job that he called "one of the greatest experiences of my life."

Bahouth,' whose ancestors were Palestinian and Lebancese, said he plans to work for the Paleatinian cause after his graduation.
'It's -hard to be a Palestinian and look at the map and see no Paleatine," he said. 'I experience a little rootlessness. It's not a miatter of Arab rootiessness. It's not a matter of against Jew, it's really just human against Jew, it's really just human rights. I want to work to make people aware of the dilemma the Palestinian people face."
Other than poetry. Bahouth's hobbies include cross-country skiing. bicycling and, of course, ranning.
"Running gives me a chance to meditate and percolate" "he said with a chuckle. "Running is it."
In a genee, running is something Bahouth has been doing all his lifenot necessarily running away from whings, but to new thamga, Having experienced so much in such a short time, laughed when asked if he would ever, laughed whin askedmanent job ver settle down into a permanent job. permanent Little League coach."

Students capture $X$-mas spirit by decorating rooms

By Renee Tursi
The apirit is here Bits of ereen and red, a glitter of tinsel and colored lights signal the approach of Christmas.

Despite the pressure of finals, many Syracuse University atudents have found time to bring a little holiday cheer to their dorm rooms. Aready, winking Santas and blinking lights brighten the campus.

You have to get in the spirit here to get through finals," said junior Roy Gillig, dreased ina
In addition to trying out his Santa suit, Gillig decorated his room in Watson with a lighted tree. He and his roommate plan to have a Christmas party next weekend "'with bottles under the'tree. ${ }^{\text {P }}$ Fraternities and sororities also seem to have special plans for the next two weeks. Well-1it trees in house windows are the first step to formals, Secret Santas and caroling.
The brothers of Delta Tau Delta traditionally invite their little sisters to help decorate their tree. The frater. nity's alumni fund paid for the tree, enabling the brothers to start a Menorah fund.
"Some" of the Jewish': brothers thought we should celebrate Chanukah too." said frat member Tom Mostowy. Charity goes along with the holiday feeling, Delta Gamma sorority, along with: Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, treated local deprived, childrea to a Christmas dinner. Watson residents also organized a party for underprivileged youngsters.

The majority of the students like to celebrate Christaras traditionally. Egg nog, carols and mistletoe are high priorities.

I go for a regular Christrnas," said Bruce Fram, a sophomore living in Watson. His room is fully equipped with a traditional Christmas tree. For stockings from his bar, where he is keeping his "supply. of Christmas spirits."
For Kimmel resident Dennis Barry, the holiday innportance is vacation.

Christmas is bignificant to me weeks," Barry said. However, a shelfin his room does hold a tiny tree decorated with bottle caps.:
'By the time you get home, there's no time to enjoy it" Gilig said. "I miss the decorating at home

Yet for some students, the expec tation of Santa's arrival is treated with all the ceremony of the coming of the Great Pumplin. Entering Kelly Mosher's room in Watson is like entering a shrine to the Christmas spirit.

The soft blinking of the Chriatmas tree lights catches the sparkle of the strands of tinsel. Holly hange from the wall and the familiar strains of a carol float in the air. Mosher and her friends sit on the couch as if in wait.
"If you would like, you can stay and watch "Rudolf the Red-Nosed Reindeer' with us," Mosher said.

New Billy Joel: we liked you just the way you were

By Jerry Zremski
People expect a lot from Billy Joel. His last two albums have been simply brilliant, and it is only natural to er. pect his new, album, 62 nd Street, to be just as good. But, alas, it's not.
62nd Street is an album marked with inconsistencies. The LP has a-number of strone points, but just as many glar ing weatrnesses, It- is occaisionally brilliant more often inane, and on the whole, disappointing.
Joel'e tasteless imitations are 52nd Street's most obviouie problem. In "Un Brother Nicht, Joelt Xrighteous

Fake and ridiculous also describes sume of Joel's Iyrics. Joel is usually a competent (though not impressive) lyricikt but some of the lyrics here are just awful. For example, in "Rosalinda's Eyes," Joel writes, I'd do anything to takeapay her tears/ Because they're Rosalinda's Eyes Lyrics like these are all too oftan foumd in rock music, but no one can be excused for writing them.
Sometimes, Joel seems to rum out of lyrical themes. In fact "Stiletto" is Iyrical themes. In fact, "Stiletto" is musically different; the lyrics make the musically diff.

Juel must be commended for malting 52nd Street an adventurious work. Instead of merely topying his previous albums, this L.P has a new sound. Joel relies more on suitars and electric keyboards than on his trademark piano. No elaborate piano solos are found on the album.
The mualcianship on the album is nawless. Liberty DeVitto's drumming is the dominant force. His spectacular play given Joal the power he has often lacked. Steve Khan's gritar and Doug Stegmeyer's bass are both ciceiting and Richie Cannata's anx playing is often as powerful as that of Clarence Clemons:

Joel's expressive vocals and a brassy arrangement turn this rather simple song into a rock masterpiece. An effervescent tale of an adolescent's night on the town, "HalfA Mile Away" conveys the excitement of being young in a way that would make Bruce Springsteen proud.

Despite these good points, it cannot be said that 52nd Street is up to the level of Eilly Joel's last two LPs; there are just too many wesknesces.

TONIGHT & TOMORROW

Grads find only menial work

By Midey Cla:
A 24 -year-old Byzacuaé University graiduate' with a master's degree in ark education worica as w witress in a small seast town in Maine. She works with an SU engineering graduate who is employed as a dishwasher.
Agrawing number of college graduatea, including SU alumni, are being forced to také jo be which uaually do not requirea college education because they cannot find jobe in theix chosen fields. The U.S. Uepartment of Labor reporte that between 140.000 and 200,000 colliege grad uates will enter clérical males, service and blue collar occupations each year.

These statistics, according $\omega$ college placement officers, illustrate the need for college students to plan their careers. Placement officers bay a student must look at his career interest in relation to his olills
"I would never discourage a atudent from entering a field becaume the market-is tight, said Mary H. Jones, director of SU's Placement Services.
It is not enough to choose a vocation because the job market seems favorable at the moment. A strong growth rate in any field may-be inunteracted by a nood of qualified graduates.
Jones said she believes too miany graduates become discouraged becaube they do not immediately find the jobs they want. "Students cannotexpect to find jobs with CBS immediately after they graduate," ghe said. "They must take jobs that will eventually lead to where they want to be. They have to work their way up through the ranks. That's the nature of the beast.".

Jones said she alao thinks wo many graduates bet hax row sights for thernselven. Students must be willing to move to the jobs. "They must be mobile," Jones said. "Your opportunities are limited if you want to remain in the Syracuse want."
The - labor department predicts there will be an average of 14,000 job openings average in the Syracube ayea A year in the from 1974 to 1985.
-But college graduates who wunt a job in fteir chosep career will have to narrow down their choice: to eertain fields.
Employment in healti care is expected to grow rapidly because of population growth, especially in the number of elderly persons. The health care field will alao receive a buost because labor forecasters prediet that higher. incumes will increase the ubility of most people to pay for adequate medical care. The potential implementation of a national health insurance program is alao viewed as the pussible cause of future growth in the medical profession.

The gireatest number of ponitione are expected to be for regimtered nuraca, physicians. phamaciste and therapista.

Currently, there are. 5,436 medical workers in the Syracuse area. This number is expected to increase 17.2 percent by 1985. Registered nuraes:-will account for 45.2 percant of the increase and apctors are expected to make 4 22.2 pebcent of the increase. Carolyn. B. ## Head shops hit high in paraphernalia sales

By Brent Marchant
It eeems like it was only yesterday," said Rick, a doper of some eight years, as he lit up a joint.
"Back in the days when getting otoned meant fleeing into tho bathroom and staffing wet towels undlerneath the door, we had to go through a lot of hasalea to get what my hifh achool health acience teacher called the implements of destruction." I remember casing out drag stores to find oat which ones were cool about selling rolling papers," hé said, taking another toke.
And for the ultimate in absurdity, there was even one place where I lived where purchases of rolling papers had to be logged in a special register, the same way one, would buy codeine elixir or firearma."
After another toke and a short pause, Rick added, "But times sure pase have, changed.

Today, the process of procuring the "im plementa of deatruction" has been simplified. Gone are the days ofmaling roach clipe from bobby pins and improviaational bongs from cardboard paper towel nolls.
The greater social acceptance of recreational drugs wuch as marijuana and cocaine nationwide has epawned one of America's fagtest crowing businemsees the paraphernalia induetry. Now the process of purchasing paraphernalia has been made as mimple an walking to a neigh borhood head shop or ordering pot products through the masil.

Ilt"a a young induatry, only about ten yeary old,". said Cari Hunt, mational advertising director for Paraphernalia magaxine, the industry's leading trade publication. "It's a buriness with unlimited srowth potential The two in duetries that I hear people are most advised to enter are anything having to do with energy and paraphernalia.

The dimensions of the paraphernalia in dustry are astoundina. Since the opening of the first nationally known head whopin 1967 - Yonder'a Wall in Washington'a fashionable Georgetown diskrict .- the paraphernalia industry has bloasomed into a business that grosesd $$ 1.5$ billion in retail sales last year, according to Hunt He added that several of the nation's larger wholesalera groas between $$ 8$ and Rolling papers have alno been one of the recipients of constant product im provement. Manufacturers have cone to great leagthe to make joints asconvenien and fashionable as posaible. Bome of the more familiar manufacturers of "lent tia sues," as they are sometimes giffiec tifonately known, guch as Zig-Zag, JOB Bambu and Rizla, have been joinedtby a hust of innovators.

One of the first innovations was the duublewidth paper, introdnced meveral years ago by E-Z Wider.
Other novel ideas have followed: colowed tips to make joints look like straigh cigarettes; papera with wires running down the middle to provide the tolter with an instant roach clip when the joint buras down to its remnants; and flavored papera, with scents ranging from banama to licurice. And for fanhion-consciowe tokers there are papers with silver-em $$ 100$ billa.

The paraphernalia boom has also introduced a variety of new producta, acuch as joint-rolling machinea, power hitter: which channel the smoke from joint into steady, amooth hita, and home havh manufacturing kite which compress dope intu fine-grade homemuade haphish.

Last sumner, New York dope smokers faced the prospect of ahut-dewn head hops when the New York atate Senate succespifully passed a propoesd amendment to the atate's. General business law, outlawing the aale of drug related paraphernilia. The proposed legislation was later diamisaed for the year beca uwe the Anambly failed to vote on the meagure before the end of its egialative term.
According to the text of the bill, the proposed law ywould have made it illegsalito sell "any machine, instrument tool, equipment or device to introduce into the body or enhance the effect of any con rolled subatance.
In an interview, with IMe Bnmmer Orange, bill mponsor Sen. Frank I. Padavan (R-Connchaeens) enid he saw the proposed legislation as "a way to fight drug abuse.
However, head shop ownure and other opponents of the bill contended that the lave was a restraint on trade. The varua text of the law did not cleariy outhine what is meant by paraphermalia. Many productis uned for the introduction of conarolled subutances cond almo be used for moking tobaceo.
Also, the section of the bill that dealt with outlawing producta to enhance the effects of controlled subwtances came under-fire. episodes. But that was only the begisodes.

One of the most talked about television shows currently on the air, "Saturday Night Live" relies on its unabashed treatment of risque subjects to keep viewers laughing week after week. Rarely does a show go by that doesn't contain some references to marijuana, whether it's John Belushi hysterically advocating legalization, Chevy Chase requesting samples. for "research." or Laraine Newman and Dan Aykroyd stonily ques-tioning-Alice Cooper on his refusal to party with them.
But what has earned "Saturday Night Live" is loyal following is that it is written not only about drug-lovers, but for drug lovers. In a recent interview with High Times, "Saturday Night's" Newman said the writers of the show keep in mind 80 percent of the people watching the program are high.

Even Hollywood has gotten into the drug craze, with the release of Cheech and Chong's "Up in Smoke." Already and Chong for their drug-oriented comedy known for their drug-oriented comedy their brand of drug humor to the screen, thrilling insiders of the drug scene.

As for those outsiders to drug culture, the movie may have confused some potential viewers with its double-meaning ad pitch, "Don't. go atraight to see this movie." But then anyone who interpreted that as advice to avoid the film probably shouldn't have seen it anyway:-

Paraquat-dusted dope iscare

By Ann Marie McKinnon

It was a classic drug scare and, as often happens, panic was more prevalent than actual scientific data. Much of the furor over paraquat-dusted marijuana simply went up in-smoke.
"It is possible that we were over-reac ting," said Harry Holland, New York repreaentative for the National Organization for the Reformation of Marijuana laws, in reference to the government's spraying of paraquat on marijuana and poppy crops in Mexico.
Gramozone, or paraquat, is a chemical drying agent that is incredibly toxic inits concentrated form. The label bears a skul ple and five dollars to Street Phar macology, P.O. Box 610233, N. Miami, Fla 33161 . The federally funded center will test samples for paraquat content. Results are availablé a week after mailing.

When corresponding with the center, in clude a five-digit. number of your choice instead of a return address. (ise this number to identify yourself when calling for the results. Street Pharmacology's telephone number is 205-446-386i).

NORML originally supported Pharm Chem, a California-based clinic set up to test street drugs, according to Holland The organization, however, was dis

tigations indicate that the horror atories about the herbicide were mostly ex-

Most, if not all, of the chemical is destroyed in burning. One test conducted by the Environmental-Protection Agency concluded that a person could breathe 05 parts per million of paraquat for six hours at a time without damage to the lungs. Only a frequent smoker with suicidal tendencies could manage to exceed this limit.
President Carter has curtailed the government's funding of the spraying of herbicides until a method is devised to warn the consumer that. he is buying treated marijuana. Efforts to color the paraquat with a red dye, which would make it presence easily detectable, have been unsuccessful.
NORML maintains, however, that the consumer needs further protection. "The Mexicans already have the equipment and they like the program," said Holiand. ican government believes its opposition is financed by the illegal drug trade and is only too happy to see the weed and the business die. The Mexicans would probably continue the spraying without U.S. aid and could buy the paraquat from a British firm, Folland said.
The southwestern states felt the pangs of the paraquat panic more sharply because of easy access to the Mexican harvest. Much of the marijuana coming into the northeast is shipped from South America and is therefore unaffected.

There is atill no definite way for the innocent smoker to determine the origins of the dope he buys on the street.
"They'll call anything Columbian these days," said Holland, "because they can charge three times as much." Columbian is enjoying a surge

But worried amokers can quiet any nagging doubts concerning the purity of their supply by sending a one gram sam-credited in the past year because its positive analysies of marijuana for paraquat were found to be invalid at other poison control centers.

Two other reputable centers are Michigan Bio Medical in Flint, Michigan and Schienfeld Laboratories in Albuquerque, New Mexico. Holland added that NORML does not endorse any of the commercial paraquat kits flooding the maxket.

fact or fiction: marijuana's medical effects.

By Ann Marie Mekinnon
Some would have it that increasing marijuana ute is mroducing popalation of paychotic zombies with irreversible brain damage, no motivation, deformed babies, a propengity for crime and an inatiable sprual appetite.

- Such traits are among the ageleas, dubiousily substatiated fears about marijuana use that were dredged up in 1975 by Senator James O. Eastland. The Mississippi Democut sponsored congresuional hearings on the effects of marijuana-smoking, charging that proponents of the atubitance had commandeered the headines for 400 lone And the dominant theme was that the drug was a threat to the individual and to society.
Seeking to allay the fears disinterred by the Eastland hearings. paychologist Norman E. Zinberg wrote in Pbychology Today:
Not one of the findings that demonatrates marijuana's potential for harm has been consintently replicated by other res.
egarded as proved.
"Few of the oldest most publicized findings - those concerried with brain damage, lack of motivation, psychosie - are now supported by any member of the scientific community."
Following are capsule histories of scientific andsociolorical findings in seven areas of purported marijuana effects. Included are the latest words and most widely accepted conclusions to date.

Amotivational Syradrome
The term amotivational symdrome was coined in 1972 to describe the belief that marijuana nse reduces the capacity to think straight and capacity to think atraight and produces a loss of will. It's also been called the "drop out-cop out ayndrome." The research has been a constant geesaw. The National Clearing House

Chromosome Damage  (birth defects)

Reports of the potency and destructiveness of LSD, coupled with the thalidomide crisis in England raised the national fear of drug-induced birth defects, setting the scene for Morton $A$. Stenchever's entry into the public eye.
Coming at the peak of the national chromosome conciousness, Stenchever's report that chramosome breaks caused by marijuana use might result in birth defects received enormous publicity.

chromosome breaks, no one is certain what the breaks mean, and there is no evidence that they rebult in birth defects. Aspirin and caffeine also cause chromosome breaks. And Stenchever's conditions for experimentation were under heavy Eire.
The Canadian Le Dain Commission of 1974 discredited Stenchever's findings, but recrived littie publicity in the U.S.W.W. Nichols countered Stenchever's worlk with a beientifically defnitive study that has not been significantly challenged. Many signif including onedone at Upstate Medical Center, have supported Nichols, but he has received little media coverage.

Brain Damage

The belief that marijuana, causes irrevergible brain damage goes hack to the 1930 s and the oripinal scare stories. An emiment British neurologist, the late A.M.G. Campboll, reported in "Fhe Lancet,* one of the werlar foremost Lancet, one of the worla a foremost Camplell published illustrations of x-rays showing the diamnged braina of 10 young marijuana manoliers. Four had buffered significant head injuries. A fifh had had convalsions suggesting brain damage before he smoked his frat joint.

 that the brain damage was an effect of marijuana and not caused by any of these factors; or by alcohol, which is known to cause brain damage; or by any of a number of other factors. Campbell was generally digcredited.

Robert $G$. Feath reported at the Eas thand Commiasion hearings in 1975 that six rhesus monkeys showed persistent changes in brain-wave patterns after receiving heavy doses over several months. The fact that he administered the equivalent of over 100 joints a day for eeveral months did littie to establish his credibility.
In April of 1973, A.J. Stunkard compared a group of 29 studenks using manijuana regularly for at least three years with a nonusing control group. A wide range of neürological tests ahowed no difference between the two sroups.
Dr The evidence is very clear," writes Dr. Max Fink of the State Univeraity of New York at Stomy Brook, "that. chronic cannabia use does not produce cerebral atrophy.. .. Marijuana does not make holes in tike head."

Syracuse took control of the rieet, its first of the season, from the outset winning the 200 -yard medley relay behind the swimming of Perez, Kim Casale. Wendy Evans and Patsy Klotz. Syracuse finished the meet with 10 first place finishes out of a possible 13 .
Vilbert's records came in the 50 and 100 yard butterfly, in which she broke her own school records (she also qualified for the nationals in the 50 -yard butterfly). She broke Klotz's record in the 100 yard freestyle.
Co-capratri Evans set two records for the Orangewomen.

She broke her own record in the 500 -yard freestyle and broke another of Klotz's records in the 200 yard freestyle. While Perez, the freshman from Caracas, Venezuela, broke teammate Evans' record in the 50 -yard breaststroke in her first dual meet as a collegian.
The Orangewomen can ill afford to rest on their laurels, however, as they must face a tough Penn State squad on the road this Saturday. Although Penn State finished third in last year's Easterns, Syracuse is capable of snatching a victory from the jaws of those Nittany Lions.

Mon sink

By Myra R. Aronson Three records were broken at Saturday's swim meet in Archbold pool, but they weren't broken by Syracuse awimmers. Instead, it was a disappointing afternoon for the Orangemen as they lost to rival Fordham, 48-65.

They were ready for us, but we weren't ready for them," Head Coach Jon Buzzard said afterward.
However, Buzzard was pleased with the performances of Bob Yokota, a junior from Amherst. who contributed to SU's first place in the 400 -yard medley, relay and Nick Nichols, a freshman from Pittsford, who also added points. to the score in several points;
Rick Bolstad and Steve Russell both had outstanding performances in the one- and phree-meter diving evente winning first and igevents, winning first and second places respectively. respectively
Women's swim coach Lou Walker pointed out that the loss will have a positive effect on the team. "It makes the swimmers realize that they're not as good as they think they are without the hard work it takes to be a good team."
The Orangemen will meet Buffalo State tonight at seven o'clock at'Archbold pool.
