\section*{Kittens at heart}

Something happened Wednesday night that should not go unnoticed. Syracuse University basketball rans showed they traly are a class act.

The garae on the floor was meaningless after the first few minutes. The Purple Eagles of Niagara were no match for the Orangemen - at least not without their captain, senior guard Phil Scaffidi.

Scaffidi played only three games this season before cancer forced him off the court. Bille for his operation alone amount to about \($ 100,000\).

Last Saturday, St. Bonaventure students got the ball rolling byraising \($ 1,345\) for the Scaffidi Cancer Fand, and SU students know a good thing when they see it.

More than \($ 5,100\) was collected from the Manley crowd by bag-carrying chearleaders and Sour Sitrus Society dancers to help defray the costs of Scaffidi's recovery.

Included in the total donation Was a \($ 1,000\) contribution from the Hardwood Club, and \($ 100\) and an autographed basketball from the SU team.

The donations came close to matching the amount raised at a gathering in Scaffidi's native Buffalo a few weeks ago.
"It was a great gesture; it shows, what athletics are all about," Niagara coach Dan Raskin asid. "To me, that crowd was composed of some first-class people."
Among those who donated were the spectators who sit in the dreaded sections - R, S and T.
The spectators in these sections are known to wave handkerchiefs, shout obscenities, andinterrupt the national anthem with hissing, cheering and clapping.
They also support the home team at all times. They stand up and cheer when the team is behind, and refuse to sit down untill it is ahead. They chant. "Ernie - Ernie" because they believe in it; they go wild on a Bowie slam dunk or a Shack reverse stuff. And they donate money to an exceptional canse.

No one has any respect for those individusls who throw ice, coft drinks, and pennies onto the court. But disrespect for the opposing team may be only what appears on the surface. If that surface is scratched, what will emerge is an insatiable love of the home team, Results of the Zoo's actions are difficult to measure. They intimidate the opponenta and horrify schoolteachers and parents in Sec

But the Zoo's generosity, along with that of the rest of the crowd Wedneaday night, proved that, as

The lavish production of the original Broadway musical has disappeared, but Salt City Center's "Pippin" is still magic. Excellent casting and strong performances. backed by the show's have maintained the sparkle that might have been lost in transferring a Broadway spectacular to local theater.

Set in the 8th century, the show follows Pippin, ean of King Charles, as he searches for fulfillment in life Convinced he is deatined for greatness, Pippin refues to destined for greatness, Pippin refuses to another - soldier, lover, ruler, domestic only to find that each leaves him feeling empty, frustrated and miserable. Only glory are does Pippin give up his idealitim andfind his true place in life. Itis, as director Jeff Meredith ays, "a simple 'everyman' parable," beauty of evexyday life.

The action however, in far from ordinary. Carrying through the theme of fantasy and illusion, the plot developein a circus-like atmosphere filled with magic and dazzling energy. Pippin's story develops as a kind of play-withiner-play, whe mysterious and dynamic Leading Player serving as master of ceremonies. Player serving as master of ceramonies. Schwartz' lyxics work brilliantly to bring Schwartz' lyxics work briliantly to bring Gamboyent opening, "Magic To Do," to the finale, when an enlightened Pippin singe of his disillusionment with "magic shows and miracles."

Meredith'a direction, while not innovative, ia cortainly resourceful, making the most of a small stage and apparently limited budret. Devimes such as a black. light, a Shakespearean inclined stage, and fart-paced, active staging help capture the carnivel mood of the shove. But it is the talents of the lead performers that is the talents of the lead performers that Mont notable is Bill Brown ae the leading Playex, mrole created on Broathrax by Ben Vereen. Brown is stunning as he sprints around the stage with an agility that ' while posing no threat to the anmazing Vereen, is always provocative and exciting. Each apoken line and gesture captures the Leading Player's many-faceted character - alternately mischievous, theatrical, sympathetic and evil. His voice magic routines, taken from his own experience as a magician, add a personal touch to the role.

Equally well-cast is Syracuse University student Ken Cazan as the downtrodden Pippin. Looking suitably shany and pathetc, Cazan emozes just the right amount of boyish aincerity and makes the most of such beautiful zongs as "Corner of the Sky" and "With Your" and he remains believable and lovable throughout the show.

Leading lady Deborah Fetters, a becond-year music theater major at SU, trayal -the young widow Catherine. Although she looks a bit too young to be the widowed mother of a young boy, her energetic acting and powerful voice carry her through the role. Hans Klint as Charles and Lenore Lee as his wife, Faspowerful, and Lee a perfect sugarconted poxprit.

The troupe of 10 scantily clad Players lacks animation at times, its members performing their motions with mechanical disinterest. Given the chance to simg, however, the troupe is a knockout, producing an overwhelmingly full sound in perfect harmony. The talents of the Playera are particularly evident in the well-rehearsed "Morning Glow" and the Costumes for "Pippin," designed by Daniel T. Boileau, range from Catherine's uninspired pink frock to skillful and imaginative creations for Fastrada and Pippiningrandmother, Berthe. Musical accompaniment, under the direction of Bobby Hamilton, is always pleasant and never drowns out the performers. The tempo of several ballads is a little too fast,

\section*{SU Chaplain Bosch leaves for new post}

By Rugsell I. Kletthe In the past twenty years, our nation experiencedighamovements, Vietnam and Watergate. God Himaelf was declared dead in 1963, but a man of Goa remained at it all.
Rev. Paui Boach, Lutheran chaplain at SU since 1960, was a witness, and at times a participant, to each of these events. When he left SU Wedneaday for his new congregation in Amherst, Mass, he left an institution quite different from the one he firgt knew-
"I've seen a lot of changes," Bosch said. "The attitudes of the nation, and therefore the whole mood of the university. is the, most significant change."
"When I firgt came here, the Russians had just launched their Sputnik," the smiling but intense minister said. "The whole mood was that we had to beat the Rusaians, so it almost became a patriotic duty to go to college."
The problem was people expected too much from education, Bosch continued. College wras viewed as a cure-

But with the assassination of John F: Kennedy, Bosch beliovem disillusioned. The attitude toward education, as well as other values, experienced, a 180 degree turnaround." Instead of being glamorous and patriotic, "colleges became the place where your bon or daughter turned into a hippie."
The chaplain, looling much younger than his 49 years, recalled his own experiences in civil rights and antiwar demonstrations. "It was a scary thing," he said. "We went downtown to watch a civil rights demonstration when Bob Ayers (SU Episcopal chaplain) was the first white to join the demonstration. I was the next to follow."
"I later learned the FBI was keeping a file on me," he said with a laugh.

Boach's office was tucked in a corner of the Noble Room in Hendrick's Chapel. The midmorning buzz of the People's Place coffee and doughnuts crowd entered through his open door. On the off-white stucco wall hung an oil painting he did himself.
Bosch characterized the '60s and early \({ }^{3} 70 \mathrm{~s}\) as a time when almost all institutions broke down, especially the church. "At the end of the' 50 s ," he said "we had a regular attendance of 600 to 800 people, in the Protestant aervice." Approximately 80 persons heard ago.
\({ }^{\text {ago. }}{ }^{\text {Fraternities and sororities }}\) started dying out too," he said. "Almost anything with an institutional tint suffered, and I thought that was wrong because we cannot live without because we ca

Bosch gave this as a reason for integrating humanities courneas in terhnical frald, fpr riculumb. If this is not possible, then " \(a\) religious service or retreat gives us the opportunity to feel what we should, get from a humanities course," he said.
Bosch himself changed during the upheavals of the last decade. "In 1960," he said "I thought I had a pretty clear idea of what was written in the (biblical) law. I thought homosexuality was a terrible thing, and bex before marriage a terrible thing, and sex outside of marriage a terrible thing."
I must admit," he continued, "I still have some misgivings about some of these things; morals and ethics have such along history in the church and elsewhere, you cannot just fly in the face of them."

Bookshelves in his home and office stand empty, mute testimony to his departure. Two decades of a rich and full life at Syracuse University are crammed into cardboard boxes. Bosch's wife Kathy and daughters Anna and Sarah left with him in the family stationwagon.

Now that heis gone, Boach is remembered in the hearts of the students he knew. His Sunday morning services were attended regularly by SU alumni as well as students. Lonnie Finnie, a junior and member of the Hendrick's Chapel Choir said, "When I was a freshman, Paul Boach was the first person to come up and welcome me to SU."
Bosch was an avid supporter of the choir, and was involved in several dramatic productions and organizations, including a peremnial workshop cluding a per

\section*{By Glen Udime}

If only Snperman could neverne time for the SU women's haskethall team.
Wednesday night, the Orangewomen showed Niagara Univeraity who the anperior basketball team is by crushing the Exaglea 66-46. The Orange avenged a same played last woek in which Niagara staged a come-fromNiagara staged a come-from49 and atifle SU's poat-beason plans.
"Last time we only maintained intenaity for ten Tainutes of the game," said SU's leading acorer, Sue Scholl. "Buton Wedneadiay, we were atable throughout."

Scholl was probably the moet etable. The aphomore forward scored 22 points (10-15 shooting), grabbed eight rebounds, had three steals and blocked two bhots. Minthin Mogish and Vicki Smith combined at center to score 15 pointe, grab mine rebounds. and block five shots. Pat McEachern added 16 points.
On the strength of her per. formance, along with an injury to Mogish, Smith earned a starting role for the season's finale on Tuesday againat Colgate, according to Head Coach Barbara Jacobe.
Although the victory was immensely antisfying to SU it was also frustrating. A performance like Wedneaday's last week would have secured the Orange a berth to the prestigious Now York State Aomociation of intercollegiate Athietica for Women tournament.
The Orange till have a alight chance to receive a bid to the Eantern Regional playoffa. the equivalent to the men's ECAC playoff.
By beating Colgate in their next game, the Orangewomen would join the men's team by ying their record for most vic tories in a aeason.

The list of names continues, then suddenly stopssymbol of the anonymity of the player called "walk-on."But this walk-on is different; even without "walk-on."But this walk-on is different; even without Boyle.
Like other walk-ons, Boyle receives no athletic scholarship from the university. When SU plays on the road, Boyle and counterpart Ken Davis atay in Syracuse. And when warmup jackets are passed out no one bothers to attach "Boyle" to the back.

But Danny Boyle has one advantage other walkons and even BomeSU atarters don't fully enjoy - the all-out support of the Manley Zoo, which has adopted the junior guard as one of its own.

The chances of Boyle playing inn a game that is even fairly-close are nil. But when SU has built up a 40 point lead over one of the patsies on its schedule, the Zoo begins its chant "BOY-ULL, BOY-ULL, BOY-

Danny Boyle walks through the Manley Field House locker room. About a dozen men, mostly athletes and equipment managers, stand nearby. Boyle, greets them all with a handshake and asks, "How's it going buddy?" Boyle asks an equipment man to open the basketball locker room.
"Sure," the man says. "Anything for you, Danny."
Boyle walks onto the court as even the townspeople get caught up in the ovation. Boyle's eyes' shift nervously and seem unfocised. He tugs at his shorts,

Boyle speaks slowly, often pausing to search for the right word, then suddenly spouts forth words at a rapid-firé pace. At an times, he exudes nervous energy. He explains that he left Miami because of a coaching change, and came to \(S U\) for a summer seagion:
"I didn't know what I was going to do," he says. "Then, Frank Maloney called me up one day and asked me and my father to come in for an interview."
According to Boyle, Maloney told him that because he was a tranafer, he would have to sit out a year recere-playing for -SU. In the meantime, Boyle player Dale Sharn an old friend, Orange baskethail him at Manley after practice before going out that night. Boyle remembers he was shooting baskets with former SU player Kevin James while waiting for Shack when SU coach Jim Boeheim noticed his performance.
"Two nights later, Shack called me again," Boyle recalls. "He said Coach Boeheirr wanted to see me in his office. Coach Boeheim asked me, 'How'd youlike to play basketball?' Right then, I made my decision to go with basketball.

\section*{The rights of an oppressed minority}

The irony in the words of noted birth control advocate Bill: Baird must have struck at least siome of the students.listening to himi speak. last week in Prof. Sol Gơrdon's human sexuality class.

Here was a man who will go before the U.S. Supreme Court on Feb. 27 for the second time to defend abortion-and yet he spoke on the rights of minors and the freedom of children.
Baird vs. Belloti challenges a Massachusetts law requiring womsachuseler 18 to have the written wornen under 18 to have the written jugge in order to get an abortion.
But the main concerr of the case is not the morality of abortion. The case concerns who happen to be under 18 .
"By laying out the money to care for them," Baird' said, "parents have, in effect, purchased their children." His statement is not as absurd as it may appear.

Children are jailed for acta which would not even be labeled misdemeanors if the "criminals" were otder than 18 . A child who runs away from a bad home is taken into custody; the parent who deserts his family gets a slap on the wrist and a demand for back alimony.

Too often we hear of a child being placed in an institution; even a mental hospital, because his parents decided raising a child was too much of an inconvenience. Or maybe the kid was just too hard to handle.
"We've tried everything," the distraught mother cries to the judge. But the boy is totally uncontrollable.
No matter. Lock him up; forget it. Bang the gavel and court is over. But always, as this is the United States of America and all people are free, remember that it's for the kid's own good. Warehouse the child-he'll appreciate it one day.

Then the child wakes one morning, and wonder of wonders, he is 18 years old. He has rights. He has responsibility. He is a full-fledged, 100 percent person in the eyes of the law. But in many cases, it's 18 years too late.

"The young are made to feel they're owned by society," Beird said. "You can love children, you can raise them, but can't own them." Unfortunately, too many parents think they can.

Those of us who have loving, understanding parents could easily dismiss the whole issue of children fighting for their rights an totally ludicrous. But these are the ones who have always been loved and treated as whole people, not unwanted burdens or pieces of property.

A 15-year-old who has been beaten by her mother, or raped by her father knows better.
'I'm not arguing for or against abortion. I'm arguing for freedom," Baird said. No, the issue in Baird's case is not abortion. But there will surely be people whose every thought about Baird's airn will be colored by that one terrible word-ABORTION. Or in their minds, murder. The slaughter of in-nocents who can't yet utter a word of defense.

The irony is that both Baird and the people who attack him most are defending the same thing-the rights of children who can't defend themselves.

We cannot comment here on the morality of abortion. It is a ques" tion concerned with both scientific and religious principles. Who can say definitively at exactly what moment human life begins, or When halting the growth of that life becomes murder? Or who can confront the moral problems of bringing unwanted children into the world? It is a deeply personal, probing question.

Regardless of the moral issuesinvolved, the law is faulty when a 17 . year-old is forced to have a baby because of her parents' beliefs.
"At 17, to have a baby or be treated for venereal disease, a woman doesn't need her parents' permission," Baird said. "But to have an abortion she does." He noted that teenagers may be the noted that teenagers may be the most disenfranchised kroup of people in the country, with no voting or economic power.
And yet many continue to aee Baird's case strictly in terms of the evile of abortion. Baird, who rans two birth control clinics, has been called the "devil" and "the sexual perverter of our youth" in newspaper editorials. He is sadly pessimistic about his case, since he believes the only people who have shown interest have been some Roman Catholics who oppose it.

A few days after Baird made these staternents, his Long Island birth control clinic was firebombed and damaged extensively. The young man charged with the bornbing walked into the building and told the two dozen patients in the waiting room to "stay where you are; this place is going up."

Again, the irony of the situation. The man who wanted to harm these women picketed with a "right to life" group.

As university students, we are young enough to clearly remember childhood and adolescence. We can also envision, or perhaps we have already experienced, the responsibilities of parenting. We, more than anyone, should realize that everyone in the United States is entitled to civil rights.

Even a 17-year-old pregnant girl who's not quite ready to be a mother.

\section*{Supporting an elitist system}

Traditionally, the right to higher education has been selectively administered as a privilege. Access to higher education is regulated to a great degree by standardized testing. Not only are these testa significant in ad. misaions decisions, but they are also important in financial aid and other decisions.

excludes them from certain carears. The New York Public Interest Fessearch Group Inc. and other educational, consumer and atudent groups, have identified some major flaws in the mtandardized testing system. Among these problems is the lack of corporate responsibility. Educational Testing Services, the beat known and largest of the corporrations, for example, is a mon-profit, nonregulated corporation. EIS contends that it is regulated by the schools it services, the College Exam and the Law School Admissions Council.
But more often than not, these boards act only as a rubber stamp for what ETS does. In addition, many of the seats on these councils are filled with past and or present ETS staff members. ETS performs its own internal gtudies on test validity, predictability and cultural/ecomomic bias. They are not required to make any of this data public, and, like any corporation perpetuated by the pursatit of profits, the informanion they do disclose is self-supporting.

into the tests themselven. A prospective test taker recaivea little complete in formation about the services he/she has purchased. Since the sample questions on the test bulletins are usually in a simplified form, etudents enter the test with a false sense of confidence. ETS is also known to lose some test Bcores and incorrectly grade others.
But the negligence lies mostly in the area of what the tests measure. Standardized teats were denigned to measure "innaté aptitude." Two findings run contrary to this. First, a recent Federal Trade Commission study revealed that coaching courses can raise an SAT score between 50 and 100 points. Second, 60 percent of perBons taking the SAT more than once do considerably better on the second teat.
Obviouely, familiarity with the test format and situation, and practice are important contributers to high teat scores. These tests do not measure motivation, creativity or ethics. The Truth-in Testing bill, sponsored by Senator Kenneth LaValle in the State Senate and Assemblyman Mark Siegal in the State Assembly, would try to correct the some of the problems with educational teating.
This bill has four provisions. First, it would call for test questions and 30 days after the test date. Studies have shown thin cost to be minimal. Second, more detailed information about the test would be sent to the test taker before the test date, telling what the test measures, how the scores will be used, etc.
Third, all studies and data done by teat corporations would be made public. And finally, increased confidentiality of students \({ }^{\circ}\) personal information would be attained by requiring cor porations to send scores and in students specify. But the absence of Marne Dubs, director of the ocean resources department of Kennecott Copper Corp. left no one to speak for the interesta of businesamen.

SU treasurer defends divestiture position

By David Paike
Students of the Committee to Stop Apartheid met ith the treanurer of Syracuse Univerwity last Thura day to discuss the university's etockholdings in South Africa.
Spealing Thuraday at "Here I Stand," a weeily discussion heldin the Hendricks Chapel Noble Room, measurer William O'Brien defended the noniveraity's position not to sell its stock holdinge in companies do ing business in South Africa.
"We are all in agreoment against apartheid," said Heiligman. "The isaue is how to deal with the problem."
"Why divestiture?" Heiligman asked. "SU doesn't hold stock in any companies in Sonth Africa, only those with subeidiaries there.

Apartheid is the policy of the South African complete racial separation and denies blacks many human rights:

Some people at SU feel the university should sell ita interests in companies doing business in South Afinterests in companies doing businesa the racist gica to avorid economical.
"Our job," O'Brien said," is to invest money and maximize the return. Should we divest, this would eliminate investment in six major ind ustries, such as petroleum, and office equipment."
Speaking for the Committee to Stop Apartheid, Joseph Clapper said that etudents could not attack the economics of the situation. We haven We can deal only with the moral issues," he said.
Because the Sullivan Principles, a set of rules to insure fair employment and living standards for blacks, are illegral in South Africa, Clapper labelled them "lip service."
"Since the principles are useless, if the companies want to remain in South Africa, we shouldn't be involved with these companien."
Clapper asid his committee was concerned with rajior corporations such as IBM, Exxon, Mobil and Citibank.
However. Heiligman said that SU's divestiture of stocikholdings would have lithe, if any, impacton cor porationim. "Someone else would just buy the stock. The sale would have no effect on a company like IBM," he said.
Divestiture would have an effect on SU's financial situation. Heiligman said. A "fairly subetantial" smount of income comes from corporate donations.
SU's South African holdings involve \($ 6.9\) million worth of atocks, while Harvard and Princeton hold a reported \($ 150\) million and \($ 18\) million respectively.

When a stuctent asked if the stocks could be used ras a layer to influence the companies, Heiligman replied that SU'e policy has always been against apmatheid. "Obviously, the majority of stockholdera have not voted against apartheid, or the companies would Heiligman advocated a boycott of companies with anbsidiaries in South Africa. Heiliscinan said the divestiture would have no impact, while a boycot would directly' effect the profits of the company. "If a boycott started to effect the value of the stock, I would then sell the stock."
"To get people like Jimmy Carter's attention, there is no better way than a nationwide boycott. If individuals want to make the committment, they can," he added.
Gordon Metz, a native of Johanneaburg, South Afica, who has been in exile since June, was also present at the discussion. He is a nember of the Committee to Stop Apartheid.

South Africa is a country where 18 million blacks are xuled by four million whites, he reported. Blacks muat pay for thair education, whale whites attend free. It is illegal for a black to supervise a white, he said.
"If the foreign companies don't pull out," said Metz. there is no chance for change." The increased revenue from these companies helps aupport the Metz buggested that the university conduct research and make a public statement on the a presa conference announcing the donor for the new atadium, it got wide coverage. Why not investigate his problem with students?"

Heiligman said that this sounded reasonable, but was not sure if there is s staff available for aiuch apro ject. Clapper promised to provide the staff.

Syracuse University students will have an opportunity to become better informed on safety precautions and housing rignts thus week. Three programa will be presented by the Residential Security Advisory Committee during its first Security Awareneas Week, according to Brian Dillion, RSAC member.
The first program will be held Monday at 8:00 p.m. in the Brewnter-Boland lounge. Safety Administrator Harold E. Boyle and Captain John A. Glavin from SU Safety and Security will show a short film and conduct an open forum on the topica of security and fire precautions.
On Tuesday, the program will move to Flint Hall lounge for a 7:30 p.m. discuasion on student legal rights and housing contracts. Representatives from Student Legal Services and the Office of Residence Services will be the speakers.
The final presentation will be in kimmels main lounge at \(7: 00\) p.m. Two brief films on rape will be shown. followed by a talk by detective Jerry Solon of the Onondaga County Sheriffs Dept.
In addition to these prozirams, a keg of beer will be awarded to the safest major dorm on campus.
Student marshals will make random visite to the dorms and fill out a checkligt about the dorm's safety. Also, residential security advisers will count the number of students entering dorms after midnight withont proper identification.

The final check will be a nelfevaluation submitted by dorm dinectors to make certain the dorm mnaintained high security standarde during the hveday period.

Dillon said the one week campus security concentration will definitely continue next year. However, because of limited manpower this year's program will not be as developed as it will bein future yeara, he said.

But a journey from the world of SU LeMoyne's version of the the land of light years, indicative of the diaparity between the two programs. Regardless of the gap, however, the 23-2 Orangemen (a win gives them their winningest season ever) will face the \(13-8\) Dolphins in SU's regular season fnale tonight at8:15in the downtown War Mernorial.
The War Memorial. which later this week hosts the Monte Carlo Intermational Circus, plays host to a matchup that bhould proveas exciting as elephant drop pings. Nevertheless, Le Moyme Coach Tom Cooney said there is substantial com wo teams pories that began only last year when prompted by Carrier Corp the Dolphing were included in the first Carrier Classic.
Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim said the greement at the time also called for the schoois to play a home-and-home series as well an for leMoyne to return to the Carier Classic, where they were 90.62 losers, next year.
No matter how much community interest lies behind tonight's game, however, it is unlikely that a cross-town ivairy reminiscent of New York's Giants against Brooklyn's Dodgers will ever develop. Amy rivalry between the two Syracuse schools would more likely resemble New York's Knicks against Brooklyn's YMCA.
"I have absolutely no idea how to stop Syracuse," observed Cooney, who perhaps hasn't considered firebombing Season's leags arduous road the site of the eason's least arduous road game.

LeMoyne's leading scorer (and 18th in Diviaion II) laat year with a 21.6 average, Grey is scoring 23.4 points per game this season and is a talented player with speed, outside shot.
He is also a superb rebounder for his size, hauling down 11.9 a game this season, but as the heart of LeMoyne' team is a teribly overworiced organ. As the tearn's only significant rebounder Grey takes a "terrible beating" every game, Cooney said, yet, like a Timex, keeps on ticking.
"He has the ability and, with the opportunity, could make it in the pros," observed Cooney, whose assessment of Grey's NBA chances is shared by Boeheim. Who said, "he is a very talented, major college player

The record books will say Saturday night's Syracuae-Colgate game was the final Manley Field House appearance of one of Syracuse University's greatest basketball stars. But for Dale Shac kleford, it was just another game.

Ill really miss all the people here," Shackleford said the day before the Colgate garme. "But as far as this year goes, Im atill thinking of playing more bagketball.'
So Saturday was juat another game for him. There was nothing unusual or ceremonial about his arrival at Manley. It was the same as it always has been the "Hat four years-late.
re ready hofore anybort one here, but he'll be ready before anybody else." said teammate Danny Schsyee.
He arrived at 7:23, late even for him, and with a few waves and hellos, he stalked to uniform equipment room to pick up his years.
He pulled on his uniform in two minutes (including his now famous T-ghirt under the orange " \(33^{\prime \prime}\) ) and, just like the last four years, went to get taped in the training room. Nothing fancy or ceremonial.
While trainer Don Lowe taped his left ankle, Shacicleford said something to almost everyone who wandered through the room. In between the running conver sation with Lowe, he traded meeding remarks with football players with a amile and nod. There was nothing special or ceremonial about it-this was just another game.
The taping session was finished at \(7: 34\) and Shackleford, thinking he was late for a team meeting aet at 7:25, jogged to the squad room, followed by a ballboy car rying his socics and sneakers. But just like on time and shacikieford was the fir atart ready-
He then went through the pregame layup arill for the last time umder the Manley Dome. It was the regular atuff. frat sorme straight layups, and then layupa off a weave. There was nothing special or ceremonial about it.

And then he played his last Man game and except for two thunder seconch-half ovations, there whs noth special or outatanding about it If Colgate game was a microcosm of career. He scored 13 points, had rebounds, made three assists and thr steals. Nothing special or fancy.

SU wrestlers place sïxth
The SU wrestling team finished a disappointing sixth in the Eastern Intencollegiate Wrestling Association championships this weekend in Princeton, N. J., deapite a third-straight Eastern title for All-Americon Gene Mills.

Mills again won the 118 -pound title with a \(7-2\) decision over Lehigh's Steve Bastianelli, despite wrestling with an injured knee that prompted the SU coaches to urge the junior to skip the match.

Mills' win was not enough to put the Orange ( \(711 / 2\) points) within reach of Lehigh, which won the meet with \(1181 / 2\) points. Wilkes finished second at \(1041 / 2\), followed by Navy ( \(91^{1 / 4}\) ) Temple (78), and Yale ( \(713 / 4\) ).

Freshman Mark DeMeo surprised the field at 134-pounds with a third-place finish and joined Mills as the only Orangemen to qualify for the Nationals in Iowa. Swimmers finish second
The SU women's awim team finished second in the New York State Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Swimming and Diving Championships this weekend at Archbold Gym's Orange Pool.

The Orange won 10 of the meet's 18 eventa, but their 385 -point tearn total was not enoagh to dethrone defending state champion Mahattanville, which won the weet with 497 points.
Orange All-Americans Robin Butlez and Liz Vilbert combined for beven of SU'a wins. Butler won the 500 -yard freestyle, 200 -yard individual medley, 100 -yard butterfly and 200 -yard freestyle, while Vilbert took the 50 yard backstroke, 100 -yard backatroke and 50 -yard butterfly.
Trackmen break tape first
The SU track team ran ita record to \(10-5\) Saturday by defeating four teams in a pentagonal meet at St. Lawrence.
SU won 10 of 17 eventa in rolling up \(117 / 2\) pointa. Queens College finished a distant second with 63 points, followed by St. Lawrence ( \(36^{1 / 2}\) ), Rochester ( 30 ) and SUNYBinghamiton (18).
Sprinker Joe Morris led the Orange with wins in the 400 -meter ran ( 51.9 ) and the 60 yard dash ( 6.2 , a Fieldhouse record). Highjumper Doug O'Brien tied a fieldhouse mark with a leap of \(6^{\prime} 8^{\prime \prime}\).
Romeo ends SU love affair
The SU gymmantics team made coach Paul Romeo's home finale a happy one with a 198.60-191.80 win over Farmingdale Satarday at Arehbold Gym. Romeo closes out his long conching reign with the Orange Saturday when SU travels to Springfeld.

chanked, DeCrow's eyes lit up. As a first year law student, she was the firmt woman to run for the mayor of Syracuse. "It was the mopt bignificant point in my life" DeCrow said.
The liberal party asked ber to run on its ticket in 1969 . "I really expected to win." she anid. But after her defeat, the continued her law educntion.
DeCrow's issues were consumer and environmental protection. She also spole out for decriminalization of marijuana, which was a radical stand at the time. "Police should apprehend criminais. not pot smokers, Decrow said.

Rumning for mayor was a really wonderfun experience." ghe said. She was never able to talk well in front of people, but while campaigning she had to speak to audiences three to four times a day. "I went from utter panic on stage to joying it." she added.

Hundreds of books line the shelves around her living room. She wrote two of them herself.

One is titled "The Young Women's Guide to Liberation," (1971). It is a feminist book aimed at high achool students, DeCrow exid. The other book, "Sexist Justice" (1974) is used for many college courses.
In addition to earning money through royalties, DeCrow lectures at colleges and still practices law. DeCrow, who graduated from the I.D. College of Law at Syracuse University, deals primarily with sex discrimination cases.
Through her lectures, DeC row finds enormous regional differences in attitudes about sex roles. For example in Tex sex rolesas shehad is not Bomething evi, Whereas favor of equal sex rights. "Catifornia is way ahead of the rest of the country." DeC row noted.
In addition to her other activities, DeCrow is atill active in NOW as a member of the ateering committee for the Syracuse chapter.
Before her involvement in NOW DeCrow held many odd jobs. She graduated from Nor: thwestern University with a bachelor's degree in journalism. She was also newa editor of the Daily Northweatern.
DeCrow has been married twice and usea the last name of hey second hushand. "Last names do not have much significance to me." she said. A passage from one of De Crow's books reads. "I thought about changing back to my maiden name but whose name is that, it is my father's name. I thought about using may mother's maiden name, but that is really her father's name Women have no last name" On the practical side, DeCrow is the name the is recognized by.
DeCrow's life may seem hectic, but as she relaxed in an easy chair, she said. "My life is nicer then anyone's I know." "I don't do anything I don't want to do. Imake good money and I set my own schedule," ohe added.
DeCrow believes women's largest problems result from the difficulty in changing traditional conditioning. "Women have not been con" ditioned to think of thembelves as equals."

Women's biggest, problem is a human problem." DeCrow aaid. "They have not achieved irmmortality."

Phato by Patty DiSalwo Former Nationel Organkadion of Women President Karen Decrow still finds time to enioy ife, despite her hectic chedule. An SU graduate, she practicen law, wnd lectures to college student:

\section*{Debaters qualify for state meet}

By Cara Schmid
If Abraham Lincoln and Frederick Douglas were still Frederick Douglas were stil alive, they woula be impressed by the eloquence of Syracuse
Recently the team qualified for the state championshipsat St. John's University, March 9 and 10. The College of Visual and Performing Arts voted to allocate funds for the event.
Prior to the championships, the union will hold a public debating demonstration Wednesday in Newhouse I, Room A-2, at 6:30 p.m.
Debate Union captain Henry Manayan's goals are to Henry Manayan the top fiveat the state place in the top five at the state Championshipsand obeat the United States Military Academy at West Point, which Academy at West Point, which SU has not done in the past SU has not
The team's most recent victory was at the Tenth Annual Intercollegiate Forensics Tournament at Ithaca College February 9 and 10 , where they defeated Cornell and Suffolk. Manayan was recognized as the outstanding individual debater, while Anne Graham placed sixth among the 22 debaters participating.

Scott Taitel took third place among the il teams competing, and Graham and competing, and Graham and Jeffrey Herman placed fourth. All four team members will compete

According to Manayan, "SU is nearing the pinnacle of the reconstruction of its debating team."

Two decades ago \(S U\) was a leading debate power in the East and competed with auch top-notch achoole as Northwestern and Brown.
Manayan, better known to his teammates as "Hurricane" (he debates at the rate of 300 to 400 words per minute) claims the SU team is building up its repertoire.
Within the last two years the team has received bids for the state and region VIII championships. SU had not received invitations to such prestigious tournaments for at lesst five years, said Manayan.
The region VIII championshipa and the team's regular season tournaments are very competitive because SU clashes against such powers as Harvard, Boston, MIT, University of Rhode Mir, University of Rhode \section*{Anti-dome groups go to court today}

By Arnette Licitra
Oral argumenta by gronpa proteating the constraction of the domed stadium on the Syracuse University campus市ill be preaented in New York State Supreme Court this morning.
The Homeowners Mobilized for Environmental Safety, the Southeant Univeraity Neighborhood Association and 41 local residenth petition againist the Urban Development Corporation, the Onondaga County Planning Board and the City Planning Commission early this month.
The petition asks for an environanertua impact atag and the impact of the new atadium on the area. Because SU's contract with the UDC guarantees the etate agency will give university has been trought into the suit, said Joseph \(V\). Julian, SU vice president for public affaira.
The residents plan to reguest the public hearinge without seeking an in junction to hat the construction of the stadium, according to Richard Schechter, Lawyer for the residents.
However, Schechter, gaid the residents have "an option" to ank the court to stop any construction this apr. ing if traffic plans and environmental impact atradies have not been made.
Julian protested to the local residents that halting construction now would involve the breaking of contracts, but the residents refused to call off the suit.

This is a pretrial hearing and the judge will listen to the oral argumeats of both sides. He can either decide the residents don't have a case, issue a temporary injunction halting construction on the stadium or defer judgment to a later date.

Chomting has become an accepted practice at Syracuse University as well as other institutions in the country, even at the United Statea Air Force Academy, as a former student there told The Daily Orange two weeks ago.

Business has illustrated thia fallacy. In axth grade; we learned that the robber barons, those pioneers of capitalism - the Andrew Carnegies, and Cornelius Vanderbiltes- prowed that self amelioration often comes from the destruction of others. Vanderbilt onca wrote a letter to a business colleague who had atternpted to move in on hia wealth. The letter read, "I will not sue you, for the legal process takes too longt I will ruin you." And he did.

Perhaps students are all Vander bilts, here at school not to become a part of the intellectual realm, but to learn to "beat the system."

By cheating, and beating the syrstem within the limits of an educational inctitation, atudents have learned how to advance thempelves through the use of athers, preparing themaelves for the proverbial outside world. This too is education in a perverted oence Beca a aniversity accepts the fact that cheating will occur, the studenta that can do it bert are perhaps more prepared for aociety than those of us who would rather take an \(F\).

For some students, cheating has becone an integral part of their achooling just like the saldier who has hardened his senses to death, clueating is justified in their minds and eventually not considered wrong at all.

Other students who approach ehenting with and indifferent attitude allow it to flounish. But when directly threatened or even harmed by thoee who do cheat, indifference is turned into angex and sometimes revenge.
"I'd love to get a doctor who cheated in medical school," a law atudent friend once told we, "Cause if he makes a mis:- take on me, In sus the panta off him." take on me, l'll sue the pants off him."
Vanderbilt would have been proud.

\section*{Letters}

\section*{Shabby treatment}

To the editor:
At the present there are two groaps at Syracuse "University, factilty and support staff, seriously considering maionixation. One might observe that the two groups happen to be at opposite ends of both the preatige and pay acale.
It now seems that they are also perceived to be at opposite ends of the human dignity scale.
While the faculty engages in important and worthwhile debate regarding the mexit and consequences of umionixinit the personaxel office has been busily attempting to ebort circuit the efforts of the support staff to discuss unionizing. And they have been abetted in this activity by the deans (Bave one) throughout the nriversity.
Iñshort, on Feb 13, the personnel ofince sent a personal letter to all support staff members reoninding them of their clear legal rights not to aign the anion carde, warning them of the problems of anions and telling them in a phrase, BE YOUROWN PERSON." "What are the underlying assumptions that lead the perfonnel office and the deane to "protect" their support ataff from coercion from ontaide union organizers or their peers? How wowld the faculty react to the same kind of a letter?

While this sort of a letter does not violate National Labor Relations Board regrulations, one can only shudder at the low exteem in which the aupport staff must be held when they are treated in euch a patronizing manner.
On the other hand, perhapes the support staff does not need to be reminded to "be their own persons," if, in fact, they endured such shabby treatment from the administration and personnel offices until now.

By Tim King
One of the longent surviving and most highly respectec rock bands in the world returns to the Landmais Theater tonight - The Kinks.
Ray Davies (guitar, lead vocals), Dave Daviea, Gead guitar), Andy Pyle (bass), Mick Avory (drums) and Jobn Gosling (keyboards) are the selfproclained misits of rock and roll. They ming about tranavesroll. They, vagrangs, alcoholics and anyone who appears to bealitanyone who appears to be alittle out of step with the rest of society. They poke fun at the important, such as hair styles and starvation diets.
For over a decade and a half, The Kinks have blithely ignored or ridiculed the chang ing trends in rock music. Many fads have come and gone during those years, but The Kinks have never lost their perspective and have endured because of it.
The Kinks arrived on the American music scene during the British music invasion of 1904- Their sound was characterized by driving guitars and vocals that vijere guitars and vocals that were weren't out of key. They weren't pretty, but they, could rock ' ' roll. \section*{SU pinned, but Mills wins Eastern title}

PRINCETON David Okun had wreatled more than 200 matches on four raats over the better part of two days, the SU matmen concluded their season with a disappointing eix-place finish in the Eastern Championships. - A surprisingly etrong performance by Mark DeMeo and a typically atrong one by Gene Mills were not enough to offset injuries, poor officiating and just plain bad wrestling.
DeMeo, a freahman who had his ups and downs this season, dismantled Temple's Steve Cifonelli 15-3 in the semi-finals of the 134 -pound class. The Cifonelli had pinned DeMeo because Cifonelli had pinned DeMeo in \(1: 27\) seconds in a dual meet earlier this beason.
ling chosing a cloae match to defending champion Erian Brown of Franklin and Marshall, DeMeo proved his earier prin was no fluke by outpointing Clace.

The third-place finish insures DeMeo of a trip to the National Championships that will be held at Iowa State on March 8, 9 and 10.
Of course SU's Gene Mills refured to settle for anything less than first place. the knee, Mills was nearly pinned by Army's freshman Mark Palzer in the semi-finals. However, he recovered well, using six near falls to good advantage and piling up third-period points to win 27-10.
Already assured of a becond-place Ginish, Mills was urged by doctors to Lehigh's Steve Bastianelli and rest for the nationala.
he response was typical Mills.
I want to win my third Eastern Championship, not finish second." period, in which Mills, much to th period, in which Mills, much to the and Brian Schmidt, was warned for stalling, he took control. Wrestling from the top position, he drove Bastianelli face down into the mat, aunkin his patented half-Nelson and began to ride him on his back. As the recond period ended, Mills was awarded a near fall, good for three points, and 3:00 riding time.

Playing the percentages, Bastianelli began the third period by letting Mills egcape. The Lehigh wrestler hoped to pick up points by wrestling Mills from a standing position, where-he is supposedy less enecive. is that has worked well in the past. This time, however, it backined. Mille wrapped his arms firmly around Bastianelli and tripped him to the mat. The takedown made the score 6-0. Bastianelli managed a two point reveraal as the match ended but Milla had one point riding time, a \(7-2\) victory and his third straight Eastern Intercollegiate Wrestling Association title.
Other SU grapplers were not so fortunate Senior 150 -pounder Roir Grubaugh, wrestling in his last vartity ing and was beaten \(8-7\) by Brian Surar

Despite fipped ligaments below the knee. SU wrestlear Gene Mills (right) won his third straight-118-pound Eastern title in the Eastern championshipt in Princeton, Py Glon Stubbe weekend. Mills outpointed Lehigh's Steve Bastienelli (left) 7-2 in the cham Stove Bastioneli

\section*{Syracuse may Franco}

Syracuse may have won the battles but they lost the war.
Manhattenville College won the New York state women's swimming and diving championships for the third consecutive year last weekend at Archbold Pool.
With 19 swimmers competing, Manhatenville's awesome depth Manhattenville's awesome depth; overshadowed the top performances of the Orangewomen. SU finished second with-385 points, while Manhattenville scored Lawrence finished third, fourth and Lawrence finished fifth, respectively.
However, the Syracuse awimmers did stand out throughout the meet as the Orangewomen won 10 of 18 swimming events.
Junior Robin Butler led the SU attack with four first-place finishes and one second-place finish. She won the 500 -yard freestyle, 100 -yard butterfy. 200 -yard medley and the 200 -yard freestyle. qualified for the national swimming and diving championships held in March at Pittsburgh.
Butler also recorded the third-best time in the nation this year in the 200 -yard freestyle. She has already qualified nationally for seven individual events and one relay.
SU coach Lou Walker called her performance "just incredible."
Liz Vilbert, Wendy Evans, Patsy Klotz and Dacyl Perez also swam well for SU.
Vilbert woin the 50 - and 100 -yard backstroke in national qualifying times., She also captured first place in the 50 -yard butterfly and second in the 100 -yard butterily.

Klotz placed second in three events (50-, 100 , and 200 -yard freestyle) and finished fourth in the 500 yard freestyle.
of Rutgers. After winning his opening round of the consolations, Grubaugh, his leg hurting, was forced to withdraw hia leg hurting, was forced to withdy Tim Catalfo was another SU wreetler who was down more than up. After los ing \(7-3\) ini the 142 -pound quarter-finals to Lehigh's Dennis Reed and pinning Alex-Montgomery of Harvard in the first round of the comsolations, Catalfo wan aoundly defeated, 8-2, by Gene Nighman of Cornell.
"T'm getting ar raw dèal," Catalio said"'The team has no one to wreatle 142 pounds so they rely on me to make weight. I weigh 180 pounds in the off. season and it's too much weight to lose. No way I'm going through this again next year.
"Catalfo and Grubaugh were disap pointmenta," Carlin admitted. "Tim just didn't wrestle well and Ron was not able to come back: He's no Gene Milla."
SU heavyweight Mike Rotunda also had his troubles. Seeded second, and trying to improve on last year's third. place finish, Big Mike was pinned in the semifinals by Jay Craddock of Columbia.
Rotunda was ao upset after getting pinned that he flung his headgear onto an adjacent mat where another match was in progress. The officials quickly took away the first of two-team point they deducted from SU's score throughout the tournament for unsportsmanlike conduct.

Despite all the disappointment of finishing sixth (four places in back of last year) four Syracuse wrestlorz performed well emongh to place fifth. Joe Chester (158), Steve Rosa (19es and thetunda lost: won more matisappointed in the results, Carlin saial. But we are a young team with only one serior. We'll be back next year,"

For Mills and DeMeo the season is not over quite yet.

Evans, senior membep and co-captain of the team. placed fourth in the 100-yard breastatroke, second in the 50 -yard breaststroke and fifth in the 100 -yard freestyle.

Perez, a freshman, finished firat in the 50 yard breastititoke, qualifying for the nationals. The former Venezuelan Olympian alao came in second in the 200 -yburd individual medies and the 100-yard breaststroke.

Walker has improved the SU swimming program, but Manhattenville Coach John Colling has also done an amazing job.
Collins has built a winning tradition at Manhattenville.

Although Collins was pleased with hia victory, he's worried about With hid victory, he'
Syracuse next year- of talent," he said. "Lou Wotker has done a great said. Lou Waker has done a great next year."

\section*{Tourney-bound Orange dunk Dolphins}

Coach Tom Cooney's wife was Coach Tom Cooneys wife was presented with a dozen roses last night at the Onondaga County War Memorial before her husband coached War Memorial before her husband coached Lemoyne College in its last "home" game before Lemoyne Colleg

Cooney's Dolphins, however, acted more like roses in providing Syracuse with a thorny opposition for a while before wilting badly in a \(92-60\) pogition

The victory was the \(24 t \mathrm{~h}\) of the year for the Orange against two losses, and ties the all-time SU victory mark. While the Orange take their imp pressive record and national ranking to Rochester in the ECAC Upstate playoff game against St. Bonaventure, the Division II Dolphins close out their season the sarne night against Cortland State.

Yet for one night the Dolphins (now 14-9) had their shot at their "big-time" rivals. The partially full War Memorial provided the gtage for the bizarre match-up, as the polished, tall and talented Orangemen met the small, underdog LeMoyne tean, who in their plain, white uniforms looked more like a CYO squad.

The Orange started out about as impressively as yesterdny's aolar eclipee, as LeMoyne made up for its lack of height with a spread offense that gave the quicker Dolphing several back-door baskets: Trailing 6-2, 8-3 and then 10-9 with 14:30 left in the first half, the Orange realized that before claiming Number One status in the country, or in the East, they would first have to prove they were the beat team in Syracuse.
"It was tough - in fact, it was a little too tough for a while" baid SU coach Jim Boeheim. "They had an advantage with their stall game, with five guys that size, against the five we've got go we just trapped. We would have been in gevere trouble if trapped. We would have been in gevere trouble not for getting a lot out of the half court trap."

The trap, along with an aggressive full-court press, rattled the Dolphins and sent the Orange on a \(22-8\) tear. In the middle of the string, which put the Orange in front \(31-18\), SU center Roosevelt Bouie laid in a shot for the 1000 th point of his Syracuse career.
The Dolphine, however, were not ready to get blown out. The early harrasment of the Orange had been accomplished largely without centerforward Gene Grey who started off ahooting a horrendous \(0-7\). However, the 6 -foot-4 leapermade up for it quickly, as he scored 14 atraight Dolphin points before sitting down with his third foul with 2:17 left in the half. The Orange led 45-34 at the half.

In the second half, the Orange seemed to finally realize that the tallest LeMoyne starter was 6 -foot 5 Tom Fletcher. SU's Bouie and Danny Schayes (both 6-foot-11) cornbined with 6-foot-8 forward Lonis Orr to batter the Dolphins on the boards ( 61 37 rebounding advantage) and helped the Orange to the expected rout. Orr led the Orange with 17 points and 12 rebounds, followed by Bouie ( 16 points)and Schayes (12).
Grey, despite playing most of the second half with four fouls, finished with 28 points and 14 rebounds, but despite his effort, the Dolphins will have to settle for gecond-best in Syracuse for now.

\section*{Judge reserves decision on dome construction suit}

By Annette Heitra
Oral arguments in state Supreme Court resterday about the Carrier Bome at Syracuse Iniversity brought a reacrved decision from Judge Edward F. McLaughlin.

The judgegave the local reaiderts' lawyer one week to submit a legal brief before the decides whether or not to dismiss their petition to stop construction of the stadinma
The residents want envirommental studies and plans to be drawn up before work-on the aew staditurn begins.
The lawyer for Homeowners Mobilized for Environmental Safety, Richard A. Schechter, questioned the decision that the stadium be exermpt from environmental law.
The Urban Development Corp., the City Planning Commisaion, and the County Planning Board made the decission.
Schechter called the ciecision a "concerted course of conduct to circumpent and evade the parpose and menning of SEQUR (State Environmental Quality Regulation) laws."
John A. Beach, the lawyer for UDC, said he egented Schechter's agsertion.
"Ihe petitioners haven't shown that any more paperwork will help, or that any aspect of he enviromment has been overlooked," Beach ssid. He accused the residents of "endlews jargon," adding that "they come not to plan this moject, but to bury it."
Schechter demanded a "hearing or mignificant public input" on UDC's decision that the gtadium will have an "insignificant" the open meetings law." Schechter also said
Schechter siso said UDC misrepresented

Heclaimed that aince the new domed stadium will house conventions and cultural evente in addition to football garnes, it has a different purpose than Archbold had. The new stadium will compare in aize to the Houston Astrodome, he added.
But Beach argued later that the proposal for the new, stadium is "in substantial conformance" with the district zoning plan, and that the capacity crowds at the stadium will still be mostly for football.
"Apparently they (the petitioners) are anying that a stadium isn't a Btadinm if you pat a roof on it or wse it more, "Beach aaid.

Judge Mclaughlin etopped Schechter repeatedly to question him and to urge brevity in his argunent. The judge also asked if public hearings are mandatory by law during the decision-making process of UWC.
Schechter roplied that the stadivm iscue is great enough to require public diacussion. He went on to hold UDC responsible for violating both old and new SEQUR laws.
Saying that the new atadium fulfils the criteria requiring an environmemtal impact atatement, Seherhter demanded that this Btudy be done before the stadium's constraction.

\section*{Low funds threaten Community House}

\section*{By David Mesaing}

Community House, a branch of Hendricks Chapel, may lose its funding next year.
At a discussion that took place there Friday, Hendricka Chapel Dean John M. McCombe said that he has "mixed ernotions" about the fate of the house. Comamunity House is a plece where members of the Syracuse University community with different-religious beliefs and cultural baclitroundis can communicate with each other, according to ite director, Jean Baum.

McCombe said the asale of Community House may be necesaary in order to cope with the chapel't budgetary problem. Hendricka Chapel has not balanced its budget in the last three yeara.
"However," McCombe said, "this place is not lost."
McCombe taid Hendricins Chapel has a projected budget of \($ 165,000\) for next year. Howrever, he added that endowments will not cover expenses.
Hendricks Chapel is funded through endownets, whieh are privete donations to the university, rather than by general university income such as tuition.
"On the bottom line we'll be \($ 20,000\) short," McCombe eaid.
Lave year Commanity House had an operating budget of approximately \($ 21,000\).
McCombe said that he wrote to Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers about the chapel's release of Community House and hopes to have a reply from the chancellor within a week.
So far, at leabt two fraternitien have expressed an interest in taking over Community FIouse.

\section*{Bobbling a noble chance \\ Corporations, many people feel, \\ responded to questions. Holm} are as inflexible, uncontrollable, and unreachable as the huge towers they are usually located in.

Carrier Corp. unfortunately, proves to be no exception.
It has handled the Errie Davis controversy about as well as Jackie Smith handled Roger Staubach's perfect pass in the end zone during the last Super Bowl - It has bobbled it badly.

Carrier has made a commendable gesture in donating \($ 2.75\) million for the domed stadium - a much needed boost in raising Syracuse University's share of the costs of the \($ 26.85\) million stadium.

But Carrier could have had the decency to appear as though it were concerned with student wishes to name the stadium after Davis.

Instead, Melvin C. Holm, president of Carrier, met with Student Association representatives for only 15 minutes last for a constructive discussion.

But an hour with him would not have helped, because Holm "was inflexible and evasive," said Jordan Dale, SA president. "Hehardly would not compromise," Dale said. While Carrier feels it is unfairly caught in the middle of the dispute between students and the univer sity, its handling of the situation is also to blame. Instead of being the benevolent friend of the university, Carrier appears to be the ingenCarrier appears to be the ingensitive corporate giant because of its refusal to rationally discuss the issues.
Carrier's absolute refusal to compromise on naming the stadium leaves students with only the hope of honoring Davis in some other way.

The most appropriate tribute would be a post-season bowl game to be played in the honor of Davis. An annual event of a bowl game's magnitude would keep the memory of SU's greatest rumning back alive and would add to the prestige of the university and the community. And, just as importantly, the game's proceeds would go to research, leukemia, the disease that claimed Davia' life:
The problems of bringing a bowl game to Syracuse will be difficult, but notinsurmountable. It will take a lot of persuading to convince the National Collegiate Athletic Association to add yet another postseason bowl game to an already crowded lineup.

But the uniqueness and humanitarian appeal of the Ernie Davis Bowl should merit its approval by the NCAA.

The university, which already has formed a committee in conjunction with community member: to land a bowl game in Syracuse should throw its weight behind SA's proposal to have an Ernie Davis bowl game.

In addition, other alternatives exist, such as an Ernie Davis Memorial Heisman Trophy room and the Ernie Davis Mernoria Field. While these alternatives do have merit, we strongly feel the bowl game would be the most fitting tribute to a man who gave so much to his university.

Although Carrier has not seen fit to honor Davis, strong support for an Ernie Davis bowl game can bran Ernie Davis bowl game can brwhom Carrier has coldly ignored.

Hendricks Field is that spacious expanse of green carpet nestled between Sadler and Lawrinson. The scene there on a spring or fall day is nothing less parties, and suabathing are but a few of the numerous activities that take place on this field, the only recreational space that the residents of Sadler and Lawrinson have.

To the people who were forced to atand outside Maxwell in the snow yesterday, or interrupted from their work in Newhouse I the day before, the present rash of bomb scares as Syracuse University is anything but funny. Students with an 11:40 a.m. Tuesday/Thursday class in Maxwell, for example, have missed at least part of that class for its last three sessions.

Financially, three missed classes amount to a loss of about \($ 44\). That's a lot of money to pay for standing in the slush.

And the financial loss is minor compared to the loss suffered in academics - a loss that can never be replaced. When chunks of time are torn from a class, obviously some material will be given only cursory attention, if any attention at all.

That this knowledge is being lost sor such a stupid reason makes the

"Even with all the people I love around me, I'm lonely and confused. I hurt inside, yet I can't tell anyone. You'd all be so disappointed in me," she wrote in a letter.
Bonnie was one of 5,000 young people who take their own lives each year. Statistics bhow that about 40,000 other youths attempt suicide but fail. These last five Years, have hit epidemic proportions, according to Glenna K. Lindley, otaff trainer for the Suicide Prevention Center of St. Joseph's Hospital. Problems with-interpersonal, family and sexual relationships, academics, competition and peer pressure, drugs and alcohol, and even the students ages can lead to stress and self-destructive behaviorif help is not found, said Student Affairs Coordinator Jane Hyde "The very fact that a student is in college and going

SU offers three sources of help for easing the pressures of college life. The Office of Student Affairs directs students through the red tape of finding solutions for all kinds of problems, while seven Counselors-in-Residence in dormitories work with Residence Services' Crisis Intervention Program.
The Health Center also has a 24-haur counseling gerThe Health Center also hasa 24-haur counseling ser-gix little things, and it's no overall calamity.".

Hyde said people are more likely to be depressed during certain times of the semester and on certain days of the week. "We see more people on Mondays and Fridays throughout the year. Fridays are bad if you have no plans for the weekend and everyone elae does. On Mondays, people come in after fighting over the weekend with a spouse or boytriend or girlfiend.
"To a degree, holidays have the same pattern," Hyde continued. "The dread of facing a bad family situation, sad memories, or missing friends can make around holiday vacations and exam periods, especially right after Thankggiving, "when students think, 'Oh my god-finals?' It's the same pattern for the spring-right around spring break. Spring is also the season for suicides-everything looks hopeful, and you're still down."
Residence Services Associate Dizector David Kohr agreed. "Counselors-in-Residence find many reality smong students at midterme and Thanksgiving," he said. "But, the pressures of mid terms and finals are more direct. For freshmen, it's also the first time they go home for an extended period of time, 80 many of them get depressed.'

SU's conn Combating depression depression and suicide among students, considering its current stadent population stuproxim, considerin 11,000 undergraduatea and 4,000 graduate students. "The Health Center Counseling Service sees between 50 and 80 students permonth, for about two visits each," said Susan Feit SU Health Center administrator. "About six students are depressed enough to leave school each year.
school of 180 counseling contacts during the 1977-78 school year, only 16 were potentially suicidal," said

About 40,000 young people attempt to take their own lives each yeer. Most wornen who attempt suicide will uss passive methods, tuch as swallowing sleeping pills or slashing their wrists.
Kohr. who recalls only four suicides in the SU com munity in the past seven years. But Hydenoted that these figures "are only the tip of the iceberg."

We can conjecture there's a lot more," Hyde said. -Some are seen as accidents and some are covered up and since a different office handles each one, nobody keeps a tally. But what about all those deaths with unknown causer?"
However, Hyde said that compared to many studies, SU's record is fairly good. A 1971 study of college students in "Suicide: Preven-tion-Intervention-Postvention" by Earl A Grollman showed the following: Out of every 10,000 students, 1,000 will become psychologically troubled at college. Out of these \(1,000,300\) to 400 will be at college. Out of these \(1,000,300\) to 400 will be depressed enough for it to impair their efficiency; 100 depressed enough for it to impair their efficiency; 100 to 200 will become depresped, apathetic and to 200 will become depressed, apathetic and family conflicts; 15 to 25 will be put in mental hospitals; five to 20 will attempt auicide; and one to three will succeed.
Three times as many women as men will attempt suicide, but three times as many men as women will actually complete the act, according to Lindler. Females, usually crying out for love and attention, take pills or slit their wrists. These are slow methods, so women can often be rescued.
"I took the pills and called my boyfriend," aaid Kathie, a twenty-year-old English major who attempted suicide last fall. "I sat on the floor getting drowsier and drowsier thinking, 'I really don't want to die.:" Her boyfriend rushed her to a local hospital where her stomach was pumped.
"I just couldn't cope with what was happening in why life. Like a lot of people my age, I wasn't aure of wanted was someone to realize what I was going through."
Kathie smiled, twisting the pear-shaped diamond engagement ring on her finger. "I'm going to be all right," ahe added.
Men, however, will almost always resort to more violent methods, such as shooting thernselves orjumping off a building.

Warning eigrials
Although the methods of suicide differ among men and women, the warning sigms surface in similar ways.

No threat of suicide, even common expressions such as "I wish I were dead," or "I'll kill myself ning sishould be ignored, Lindley asid. Other wser personal appciude prolonged inaminia, neglect of sion and thpearance, lose of appetite, severe depre. oll Following a long period of depression, the person high," Iindiley seid tronergetic. has decided to end his misery. In a aense, he's relieved."
When Jean, a nineteen-yeax-old psychology major decided to take her life, the had a party.
"I was thrilled that there was a solution to my problems in sight. I never saw death as the ultimate reault of my act," ohe admitted.
A cloae friend of Jean's persuaded her to seek help at the Health Center. According to Feit, the Health Center approaches the stadent with a four-gtep program.
-NThe first interview is called the intake, when we find out what they want out of counseling." Step two is 'evaluation of problems. We find out what's bother ing them, and how they feel we can take care of it "Most problems are alleviated in two or three visits," Feit continued. "Those who aren't helped as quickly are referred to hospitals or private psychiat rista for secondary care. The Student Health fee pays for all services except referrals to outside sources.

The next part of the Counseling Service plan deals with the Crisis Intervention Program. "If someone calls at any time, 24 hours a day, they'll get help," cails at any time, 24 hours a day, they night nurges Fers here if aomeone wants to talk. For emergencies are here if someone wants to talk. For emergencies, record of getting crisis victims to see someone within record of getring crisis victims to see 24 to 48 hours following the crisis."
A crisis can be caused by aeveral things-a death or loss of loved one, a drug overdose, a suicide attempt, or violent, irrational behavior-according to Pat Mckenna, Counselor-in-Residence for Shaw, Watson and Dellplain dormitories. "A crisis occurs when a person's usual coping, mechanisms fail and his emergency ones do too," explaiend McKenna. "It's a sense of panic.?
There are seven dorm counselors, and at least one is on duty at all times. In an emergency, they can be reached by telepager.
"The first things to do is to assess the nature of the crisis, what the client's needs and capabilities are, and how sexious the crisis is to the person, upon ar iving at the scene," said Mckenna. "Obviously, fail ing a geometry quiz isn't as bad as failing your law boards."

\section*{Knowing the case}

The counselor's first step is to see if anyone else is involved and to isolate the client so they can diacuss the situation without outside influences. After finding out the student's medical and psychiatric his. tory, MeKenna said a counselor can take one of three altermatives.
"Depending on the situation, \(I\) can let the student run through how to solve the problem on his own, or I can offer my support and advise him on how to solve it. Or I take complete control, as in a drug overdose," said McKenna.
"After a crisis, we try to build a relationship with the student," McKemna gaid. "We give a list of different therapists and say, Call them and check back with me.' If the student says no, we can see him once more, but that's it. It's not that I want to end the talks, but we're limited to six visits.
If a student is "really scared" about seeing a therapist, McKenna will offer to go with him. "We try not to leave them out in the cold, but to teach them to do things for themselves at the same time," he said. "It's no good to be dependent."
McKenna stressed the need for counselors to be available to the students at all times and to offer them support and a listening ear. "It's necesaary to talk things out " hessid s"You have to allow the student to get to know and trust you."
In a letter to The Daily Orange, student John Springer echoed McKenna's thonghts. Commenting Springer echoed Mckenna's the Nov. 1977 suicide of his friend \(S U\) soccer on the Nov. 1977 suicide of his friend, SU soccer player Ernest in Wood, Springer, said, Great numbers of us are too concerned with ourselves and forget that we are capable of helping others in times troubled, but it neans so much."

\section*{It's tourney time for SU}

By I.T. Brady
Eighteen wins in a row, 45 straight wins at Manley Field house and six straight NCAA appearances - all these are streaks people proudly mention when talking about the Syracuse University basketball team.
But there is another atreak that's not often talked about, and when it is, no one connected with the Orange is proud. For all of SU's regular-geason euccess, coach Jim Boeheim's team has lost three consecutive post-season playoff games.
In fact, the Orange have been upset in three straight post-geason games, losing an NCAA Mideast regional game to then unheralded North Carolina-Charlotte in 1977 , and dropNorth Carolina-Chariotte in 1977 , and dropping two straight to underdog St. Bonaventure ping two straight to underdog s. Bonaventure called the Hilltoppera from Western Kentucky (NCAA firat round) last year.
While no one wants to talk about that more dubious streak, the memory wil be there It will hang there Bomaventure in Rochester. it woky hirag the Ware Memowhere in the warme, mbiquitous genae of deja vu.
True, the \(19-7\) Bonnies should be decided underdoge against the \(24-2\) Orange, ranked fifth nationally in the UPI poll and sixth in the AP. And true, St. Bonaventure lost at home to SU, 74-69, earlier this year in Reilly Center, a pit that makes the Manley Zoo look tame. Yet this championship, and no one expected the Bonnies to win last year either.
"St Bonaventure is a good, noild basketball team, capable of beating any team in the country on a given night," Boeheisin said. "If you don't believe that, you're not an intelligent person."
St. Bonaventure center Tim Waterman obviously believed just that when, after the loss to SU earlier this aeason, he said, "I told Bouie and Shack that I'd see them in March.'
Even though tonight's game will be played in February, Waterman can \({ }^{\circ} \mathrm{D}\) to the head of Boeheim'a clasa. The Eonnies' other Atarting scholar-athletes include forwardo Earl Belcher and Delrnar Harrod, SBU's leading bcorers at 21.3 and 18.5 points per game reppectively, and guards Nick Urzetta ( 14.3 ) and Jim Elenz (4.2).

The biggest difference between this year's SU oquad and last year's team has been an element of compoaure, an ability to win tough games outside of Manley (SBU, Temple, South Carolina). Maybe this year Harrod will not have a chance to sink a jump shot over the oeconds. Maybe the Orange won't have totravel seconds. Maybe the Orange wont have to tra to Tennessee to lose to Western Kentucky.

Most importantly, maybe SU will be able to end their unmentionable streak and start another one they can be proud of.
COURT GESTURES - SU guard Hal Cohen didn't dress for the LeMoyne game because of a bruised calf, but after the game he asid he would be resdy for tonight's contest. . . Orange fifth place ranking is the highest since the 1975 club made it to the Final Four.

Syracuse Univergity Athletic Director Jake Crouthamel has named Walter Dodge the new head coach of the SU gymanautics team.

Dodge will replace Paul Romeo, who will finish his 32-year coaching career this Saturday when the Orangeraen travel to Springfield, Mass.
Ironically, Dodge captained two of Fonnea's teams in the Iate 1950 s and early 1960 a. He won three gymanastic letters as an all-around performer and won the outstanding gymnait award twice.
Dodge received his B.A. from Syracuse in 1961, where he also won three track letters as a pole vaul ter and high jumper. Dodge received his master's degree from SU in 1968.

and Debby Waldman
The naming and building of the Car－ ier Dome occupied the minds of many student and faculty members ques－ tioning Chancellor MeIvin A．Eggers at yestexday＇s University Senate Open Forum．

A large audience also confronted Egigers in the once－a－semaester forum tended housing，Hendricks Field and the recent rash of bomb acares．

Eggers said the Carrier Corp．would not have given a \($ 2.75\) million donation to the building of the stadium if it hadn＇t been asaured after it．
Some students questioned whether the Carrier donation was really a gift or if it was simply a method of advertising for the corporation．
＂There was a presumption of some benefit to the organization，＂Eggers said．＂There are very few gifts that said＇t involve some benefit to the giver．＇
Eggers pointed out that many buildings in this and other universities have been named after major donors．

I never made it a secret that the way to finance this was too look for a major donor，＂he said．
＂It inn＇t as if you need to be em－ barassed by being associated with A few stud）．
A few students questioned whether the late SU football star Ernie Davis will be memorialized in the new stadium．
＂Who has meant more to the football program at SU，the Carrier Corp．orEr－ nie Davis？＂＇asked one student．

I don＇t think it says that anyone who doesn＇t vote for his（Ernie Davis＇） name on the gtadium is automatically

＂First you have to build the staidium， before you can think about naming it，＂，
Eggers continued．＂The first thing＇I wanted to do was make sure we had it planned，brilt and funded．
＂It would not have been a memorial to Ernie Davis if we had not built the stadium and discontinued inter－ collegiate football＂he said．
Eggers said various ways to memorialize Emie Davis in the new stadium are being considered．

Money -or the lack of it may lead to the death of a \(59-y e a r-o l d\) program.

Community House, 711 Comstock Ave., is used for events ranging from TGIF parties to religious meetings. It is in serious danger of closing down because Hendricks Chapel, which owns Community House, is having budgetary problems.

It would be a tragedy if Community House permanently closed, its doors. The need for it is there-more than 2, It ifeoplities weekly. If anique facility that provides: the op! facility that provides tifferent portunity for people of dinterent.
But the money for it is not there, at least not from Hendricks.; We are in a belt-tightening time," said Hendricks Dean John H. H.
McCombe. The chapel, which is funded through private donations fo the university, is about \($ 20,000\) to the university, is about \($ 20\), in debt \($ 165,000\) budget in the last three years, because of inflation, maintenance problems and the three new ministeries for blacks,

Nevertheless, Community Howse should not become extinct simply because Hendricks does not have the money. The cost of running it,

The respornsibility for saving Community House lies with the students. Not much help can be expected from the administration becauge it would lose Bundy funds, state grants based on the number of degrees SU awards, if it budgets money for religious activities. And the administration also has its eye on converting Community House into a new home for Delta Upsilon fraternity.

Relocating some of the Community House functions, as Clifford L. Winters Jr., vice chancellor for administrative operations has suggested, is no solution. The move will kill some of jts social functions, such as the daily luncheons, thus destroying the main pripose of the program-to bring a wide variety of faitha under one roof in a relaxed atmosphere.

But gtrong student interest can axve Community House. The house can becopre: otudent-run. It can be kept open with funds from Student Association, the Graduate Student Organization and organizations that frequently use it.
Community House can be saved in its present location with enough student support.

Throughout its existence, the program has survived numerous depressions. It should be able to ride out this storm also.

However, Feight believe the nhows reflect a renewed intereat in Greek life. "I was suprised to see them on TV" she said, "because 1 did not realize fraternities and sororities were coming back so atringly:

A long standing criticiom of the Greek symtem is that it encourages con formity and deprives members of their individualiann. Phil Mriano never joined a fraternity because, "You have to sive your attertion to everything else and not to yourself. Once you join a frat you lope your individuality.
Delta Phi Eppilon member -Pam Tyrer denies that allegration. "Wo have so many different linala of peciple livimg in the houmia. IFS yountureroitg to lome your indindiuilitty, you'li do it in the dorm or with any croup of friends. Everyorse hore is allowed to be themenelves "

Although statistics are not available. Dick Dady, InterFraternity Council president, believes this year's rush was extremely successful. Zeta Pei, whose pledge class usually averages around eight, tool in 10 new niembers; while Fhi Delta Theta had the campus with with 21 pledges Dady attributel the appeal to students settling down; while Foley soes it as "reflective of the times. People are crettiag back to the traditional types of thinge and middleof tho-road attitudes. I don't thint anything can cornpare with the total experience of Greek life."
\(\therefore\) Fratamitien and sororitien are coming back to life on college campusen everywhere. But mont fratarnition and sororitios wee the univernity as vers eupportive of their iffestyle. Pam Tyyor views a strong Greek syytem as "a selling point for the univertity," while Dick Dady believes "there is a good working relationship" botween the administration and the Greeks.
The administration playe a watchdog role in the case of hazing, the extreme indistion rites of fraternimes. While hauing on the SU campus, although not in the traditional sense. Fledgen are often forced to endure extended periods of phyaical labor with minimal aleep, and the pledges themomelves often engineer pledge pranks" to get revenge on their future prankere.
Dady indicatea that hazing is against university regulations. "A good majority try to comply with thone policy to get involved with the internal poicy to get involved with the intermal affairs of the

The university realizea "hazing is outlawed nationaly," asid Tina Foley. "We try to keep an eye on that kind of activity. I don't believe that it goes on here-defining hazing as something degrading or harmfal to the individual. Fraternitiea don't kidnap brothers and leave them 15 miles away blindfolded."
But Phi Delta Theta's fall pledge prank was reminiscent of the type of activity Tina Foley does not thinkgoes on at S.U.
Accortling to Nevin Hofing. the 21 fall pledgree Lidnapped the "Top Bond" (the brother who has been a member of the fraternity and longest.) They drove him Jout to Owwego County Airpart, where they had a chartered plane wait ing to talie him to Nantucict Island. One pledge accompanied the hidmapped brother on his flight, and told his captive that they were "just going to fly him around New York for while." When they pot to Nantucket, the pledge chained hie future brother to an airport fence and stripped him of all identification and money except a bent Canadian dime. He then returned to Syrucuan on the chartered plane. It took the "Top Bond" over 30 hour to get brack to campur.
Still, most pledge pranku are tame is mature. Lact year the Zeta Pai pledgex utoile an of the shoelsces in the houte tiod tharm torether, and frome them into a molid block of ice. There is alao componito and ailverwire stealing.

juw. Davies and The Kinks held what resembfer Soricert at the Landmark Theatre Tuesday night But it was more than a concert. It was a lesson in frustration.
The frustration started when the opening aet - a pseudo-rock group called TKO - decided to show up. This remarkably unitalented band played itsiset with one pye on the exit and the other on the audience, (to make sure they were still there and weren't throwing anything).

After mercifully ending their half-hour set, the band members left to a mixture of booa and Linsults for their performance, and cheers that the torture had ended. The evening was young, thowever, and there was more frustration to come.

For a while though, it would have to wait. When The Kinks took the stage at 10 p.mp. the crowd yelped and howled like 2,500 recently escaped inmates from an isolation ward.
The set opened with a slightly off-key butenergetic version of "Sleepwalker", and was followed with a brilliant and moving rendition followed with a Brife on the Road."
After "Life on the Road" the band awung into a cover version of a Buddy Holly pumber only to fatop after a few bars and shift gears with a gtop after a few bars and shift gears with a lengthy and greatly appreciat
The Kinks older songs were what the audience seemed to appreciate most. "Well Respected Man" and "Sunny Afternoon" received thunderous ovations. And "You Really Got Me" had the crowd on its feet.
The highlight of the show was "Alcohol." the story of a succesaful businessman who turns to the bottle and ends up on skid now. The song featured Davies guzzling beer from a bottle and emptying the remainder in the general direction of the front row. Ironically, it was the patrons who had been searched for botties before entering the auditorium. Somebody, however, forgot to search the band.
A rollicking version of "All Day and All of the Night" had the audience on its feet and ready for more rock ' \(n\) ' roll. A aurprising and disappointing, annowncement of "good might, Syracuse" followed, however, and the beat the audience could hope for was a few extended encores.
There was, however, only one encore, consisting of two old and not very well-received tunea.
The Kinks then left the stage for the last tirae. while the audience cheered desperately and in vain for another encore, despite the raising of the houselights.
Ray Davies, Dave Davies, Mick Avory. Gordon Edwards and Andy Pyle put on a good show. But the inconsiderate way they walked out on the audience overshadowed the many positive aspects of the performance. This left much of the audience frustrated and angry. with no intention of spending \($ 7.50\) to see The Kinks again.

He said his main education came from working at the paper.

Under Elfins' direction, Newsweek's Washington burean helped the magazine win six journaliem awneds for stories and photographs produced during the Watergate affair.
Orie of Newsweel's main concerns, Elfin said, is to avoid having the asme cover as other weelly nevpemacizaines, particularly Time.

On a big newrs week, the event dictates what the cover will be, he said. "The chaice for the cover is foughtr relentiesaly up until the last posible day.; Elfin told the approximately 27 people attending that the Press has to be careful to avoid being manipulated. He used as an example the week when both Newsweek and Time had a cover story on rock star Bruce Springeteen.
Once Newsweek interviewed him for the story Springsteen's manager called up Time and cold them Newsweek had a jump on them, he explained. The ploy worked and both magazines had to deal with one of their bigge \(\begin{gathered}\text { embarransmenta of }\end{gathered}\) the decade, the said.

\section*{While the Syr Dave Lariviere}

Hink Che Syracuase University wreathing team is thinking about its diseppointing sixth place finish in the Eastern championshipa this past weekend during the off-season, it can alao look forward to next season when transfer Mark Lacovelli will be eligible to wrestie. Based on his record, Jacovelli promises to be a pleasant addition to next year's squad.
Because Iacovelli tranaferred in the middle of this year, he is not eligible to compete until 1980. The Arizona State trantefer has impressive credential \({ }^{2}\). Breaking into a tough Arizona State lineup, Iacovelli posted a \(7-3\) record, alternating between the 126. and 134-pound weight classes. According to Iacovelif, his performances surprised the Arizona Staie coaches.
a crock of shit couldin't make the tearn which was a crock of shit," lacovelli said. Iacovelli has sufficient reason to be confident. At Ithaca High School he had a record of 136-1-1. He also won the New York state championship in his weight class in three seanons and fnished third once.
Fellow teammates and coaches praise lacovelli's abilities. 'He's a quality wrestier, no question about it," SU Coach Ed Carlin said. "He has all the natural ability, good balance and great strength."
Gene Mills, three-time 118 -pound Eastern champion, feels Lacovelli has a chance to be an All.

American next year. "He's good," Mills said. "He iterally beata the hell out of me in practice."
Iacovelli's presence becomes even more important considering that Mills will not compete next season. "I'm redshirting next year to train for the (1980) Olympics," Mills said.
lacovelli describes himself as a defensive wres.: aler. "I try to make the other guy make mistakes." lacovelli said Carlin, in describing lacovelli's style, said, "He's not unique in his tactics. He's good at what he does."

Being closer to home was one of Iacovelli's main reasons he transferred to SU. "I wanted my parenta to be able to see me wrestie, "Iacovelli said. lacovelli also prnised the quality of SU's coaches and wrestlers.
When lacovelli announced his plank to transfer last fall, many achools expressed interest in him. Caxilin said UCLA was gery interested in Iacovelli. "In fact they were still trying ta recruit him when he was in our gym," Carlin ald.
Carlin found out Lacovelli was interested in coming to SU when Ircovelli's high school coach contacted him last November. His coach told Carlin Iacovelli was interested in SU and asked Carlin if he was interested in having him. Carlin, who had recruited hacovelli the year before, asidhe whas and explained SU's tranafer procediures.

Carlin expressing his interest in the school. Carlin Chen contactedin Arizona State's athletic director and aoon after Iacovelii became an Orangeman. Because of Iacovelli's quiet and reserved nature, Carlin does not anticipate any problems. He ceems to fit in very whell" Cartin said. "But he's still got to get ubed to our system."
Mills agreed with Carlin. "He's a good gay. He gets along with everyone really well," Milla said. Although not wrestling competitively, Iacovelli is working hard to get in shape. 'I haven't wreatied in a month and a half so I am a little out of shape," Iacovelli said. He plans to wreatle in a couple of New Yoric Athletic Club tournaments in the spring, but is happy at the moment. "I'd rather be wreutling, but in a way it's good to be a redshirt. There's not as much pressure," Incovelli said.
Iacovelli will probably wreatle at 126 poands nert season, according to Cariin. His goal is to win the Nationals and be part of a top-tive team. "I think with Mills back in 1981 we'll have a good shot at it," Iacovelli said
With Iacovelli and Milla on the mame team in 1981 the future looks bright for the SU wrestling Meamils, who won his third consecutive Eastern crown Iast weok at the Ensterns in Princeton, N.J. and freshman Mart Demeo ( 134 pounds) will tra vel to lowa for theNCAA toumanent on March 8,9 and 10 .

side of idea I have is to make either the Jab or Drumlins into more of a night club type of place and have certain acts, like the hypnotigt, perform," Greene said.
Greene, who has been involved with the UU concert Boand for the past year, also hopes to discuss ways in which students, will be able to take advantage of the new domed stadium. He hopes to work closely with Thomns Benzel managing director of the Carrier Dome.
Greene also said he plans to develop the performing afts board, apecial events board and UUTV into stronger boards.
"Concert board, film board and speaker's board are all very strong. We hope to make the other three just as strong this year.
"My job is to make thinge run smoothly and let the boarde do their job. If they need me I'm ready to help," be added.
Larry Schulsinger, returning as external chairperson, hopes to improve UV's summer program.
Hery few people are aware that we work during the summer just as we do during the rest of the year." he maid. Behulginger would like to see UUs enmmer funds increaged by Student Absociation.

Schulsinger would also Hze' to see the per forming arts and special events boardis improve. The possibilities for great things to happen on thesie, boards is tremendous. It's really wide open.
Schulainger axid expangion of the bigger bosirds should be limited "At this point, what We are looking for is a refinement of the process that we have. There is really only so far that we can expand. We have 120 people already on concert board."
Schulbinger feels that "lant year was really the bert we've had so far. Our efficiency has improved 100 percent, but we always have room to mprove."

Fuchs aaid the biggest success UU has had this pant year was "getting UUTV back into ac ion, getting them their fonds.
In the past year Fucha felt that apeaker's board and special events board made the moat headway.
However, "there is a lot of work that must be done on some of the boards, especially per forming arta," he added.

Fuchs said be would definitely be internal chairperson again if he had the chance.
"tws been a challenge. I know from this ex perience that I can run a businews and work well in managernent. It's really worth it."

Greene and Schulainger were selected by a conamittee including Fuchs, Graduate Student Organizabion and SA reps and two roembers at large from UU.

\section*{Fighting the Draft}
"A terrible beauty is born," William Butler Yeate said of the 1916 Easter Rebellion in Ireland. That paradox describes the protests against the Vietnam Wax in the 1960 s and early 1970 s . For all the horrors and atrocities of war, there was a cextain beauty in people joining together to reaist it refusine to go to Vietnam Fighting the draft.

Ten years later, we find oursel ves in a posigion to fight the draft again. A number of bills to re-onact thedxaft are before Congresa. Some would require 17 to 26 year-olds to register. Other bills expected to be introduced next week would bring -back the draft itself.

One bill introduced last week seeks a middle ground between those who want only a registration those who whant ony a registrat
It wrould require all 17 -year-olds including women to register for a draft lotiery. Upon turning 18, men and women would choose between four options. The first option requires the draftee to serve two years active duty. He would also receive 36 months of free education or job training. Under the second option, the draftee would serve six months of active duty and \(51 / 3\) years of ready reserve.
The third option allows for one year of volunteer work in national service organizations like the Bervice organizations like the frace Corps and a person can takea chance with the lottery. People taking part in the lottery will be eligible to be drafted until age 24 . If drafted, the draftee must serve two years in the armed services, with 18 months of free educational benefits.
The bill, which has 11 sponsors has been referred to the house com: mittee on armed services. It is not known when the bill will come up for vote. If it is pasged, the bill will take effect in six months, although people between the ages of 21 and 24 would not have to register.
"There is growing entiment in Congress that the volunteer Army is just not working, "said Michelle Farrar, press secretary for Fep. Farrar, press secretary for Fep. Paul McClosicey (I
The bill's gponsors see theix National Youth Service Bill as a way to remedy the less-than-ready, all-volunteer Army. They feel the draft is necessary to provide the country with a better qualified country with a better quanined faghting savings.

Congreas' reasoning has some merit. Top-quality people haven't exactly been flocking to sign up for the armed services. However, it is questionable whether the National Youth Service Bill will correct the deficienciea without a great lous of individual liberty.

Would any sane person chooae active duty ovex one year of volunteer work in a national eervice organization? Obviously, the recruiting needs of the armed services will etill go unmet.
Unfortunately, to fill those recriting needs, the government would have to rely heavily on the fourth option-the lottery.
But such a lottery is just plain wrong. Putting aside the larger moral implications for now, it is a crime to tear people away from their educations, jobs and families to serve in the armed forces. Needless to say, such a move would totally disrupt a person's life.

So the options the bill offers are really no options at all. One loses all the way around. Regardless of what option is chosen, forcing people to learn to kill is repugnant to our consciences.

Except for the few ingtances when the mation's security 'has truly been threatened, the draft has always been hated and viewed as umaecessary. And the idea of a pencetime draft is unbelievable and morally repulsive.

A poster that was popolar a few yeara back questioned what woiuld happen "if they gave a war and nobody came." The possibnitity exists that if the draftis brought back a lot of people wonld refure to go.

With the 1980 elections looming closer and closer, reinstituting the draft would be a dangerous rnove for the Washington establishiment.

Hopefully, Congreas can beconvinced to reject the variona bills now and in the near future. Write now and in the near fature. Write your congresman, let him know how you feel about the draft.

Your voice can make a difference.

Most of us can recall angry people protesting the Vietnam War. Univeraity students squarely confronting the National Guard, a Buddhist monk sitting calmly in Saigon's Market Square as he burns to death. Terrible, bratal scenes juxtaposed with peaceful demonatrations in our memories ten yemis later.
But fighting the draft did not originate with Vietnam. World War I saw about 4,000 conacientious objectors; 20,873 men were granted non-combatant status by their local boards. In 1923 , political objectors formed the War Registers League. They were oined by religious, feminist, socialist, and labor groups in their opposition to war. During the 1920 s , these groupa held theatrical demonstrations in the streets.

\section*{A short history of the draft}

In the '30a, college studenta all over America signed the Orford Pladge. "We pledge not to support the government of the United States in any war it may conduct." the etudents promised. And to etrengthen their poirat, 60,000 studenta from around the nation went on "gtrike againat war," on April 12, 1935.
Eut by 1939, the anti-war movement had all but dispolved, as American par ticipation in World War II seemed both necessary and inevitable. Most Americans, including many who had signed the Oxford Fledge juat a few yeara before, began to believe that America"s security depended on its military power.
Stil1, 52,000 men were clasaified by he covernment as conscientious objectors; 6,086 went to prison.

Throughout the 1950 end 1960 en, pacifiats continued to hold Anti-mar demonstrations. In 1961 , the Committee for Nonviolent Action, for example, gent 11 pacifiet on a "San Franciaco to Moscow Walk for Peace." They demonstrated peacefully in Moscow's Red Square.
When the United States bombed North Vietinam in February, 1965 people demonatrated all over the counmy. During 1965. three Americanas publicly set theraselves on fire in mrotent. All three died.
Draft card-burnings became a popular way for pacifiate to demongtrate their refusal so fight. In 1966, with a demomstration for every occasion, the anti-war movement became increasingly visible to the American 'public One group, The Resistance, called for young men to return their draft cards to the government on one day. About 1,500 men did at first, and more followed Thousards of people marched at the Pentagon in October. 1967 , and finding the building blocked by soldiens, sat down for a teach-in that lasted two down for a teach-in that ingtea two demonstrators; many were beaten by
T. marahals

The pacifist movement reached its peak in August, 1968 at the Democratic National Convention in Chicaro. Bitter feelings towarais the war and the government could no loager be con tained, and the violence was televised nationally. More than 500,000 people protested in Washington on Nov. 15 , 1969 for the bigeret anti-war demonetration in U.S. history.

In the sarly 1970w, pacifiste raided selective service offices and deatroyed about a million draft files.

One pacinist book theorized that never before had resistance to war been so widespread, committed and effective as ageinst U.S. involvement in Southeast Asia. Men and women, in and out of uniform and numbering in the tens of thousands, took risics and intercupted the routirie of their lives to ayy no to war.
And now it is 1979, Chima has invaded Vietnam, Russian troops are amasied at the Chinese border, and the U.S. is still afraid, of the Communists aning over the world.

Open For Hf andesdays Open. Forum had hopes of getting concrete answers from Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers from Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers on osit cextainly disappointed.
most certainly ciged and danced acound the questions from the itart. The event became a comedy of theatrics, as participants phrased and rephrased their ques"phobs in hopes of catching Eggers offiguard. However, none of their fréthoda worked.
The Committee to Stop AparGheid was most effective at malking施elf heard. With its nembers gixead throughout Stolkin Apditorium, the committee chancellor about the university's refusial to divest itself of stock in companies operating in Sonth Africa

This atrategy, however, did not make the group any more successful at getting answers from felt -no obligation to respond to their questions, or many others, in more than a buperficial way.
Egyers disclaimed responsibility for the Custom meal plan, on which little or no student input was soaght. He denied the validity of arguments for divestiture. He refused to see the problems generated by turning Hendricks Field into a heayy-machinery storage lot. And he deciined to be Specific as to how, or even if, Ernie Davis would be memorialized in the Carrier Dome.
By far, the beat questions vere those that dealt with intangibles. "Does morality take a back seat to the dollar?" asked one student to the scattered applause of the audience. No answer from Eggers was necessary, for the point was made-many students are beginning to feel that way. The questions surrounding divestiture and a Davis memorial were just variations on the question of sity.

The chancellor's dollars and cents mentality as exemplified at the Open Forum has made Syracuse University a top-flight business. Its budget has balanced for the last seven years, and the physical plant has been in a constant state of expansion.

This mentality is fine for an air. conditioning company or an oil refinery, but it seems Eggers has lost touch with the product his company sells-education.
In that business, there is more way of administering the university," Eggers said.
Everything is a product at SU, and we are told that's OK because that's the way it in in the "real world." Even our gifte are tainted-they become mere purchases, like Carrier Corp.'s purchase of the stadium's name for advertising and publicity.

When someone brought up that point at the forum, Eggers defended Carrier's purchase gift. "There are very few gifts that don't involve some benefit to the giver," he said. Otherwige, where would the pront lie?
With this mentality, SU encourager the "real world" concept in educstion. No cloistered halls of higher learning here. SU has robber barons, such as dining services; and red tape manufacturers, such as the bursars office. We might as well learn to deal with them here, or so the theory goes.
In this environment there is no need for the chancellor to be a moral leader. He is a highly trained accountant and public relations man. Things are done in the best interest of the business rather than the students. Sornetimes the two overlap; sometimes they don't.

When the interests of the business and those of the students do not overlap, the business aide wins because it is more "realistic."
And when the stadents cry out against this attitude, no one hears because no one is really listening All the Open Forums in the world will not change this attitude until they become meaningful, two-sided discussions instead of question and non-answer sessions.

"Gimme Bhelter educates studento on the potential pitfalls of apartment living." said Sarnh Siwel. director of Alteracta and coauzhor of the handbook.
Ginuse Shelter also offers common bense advice on subletting, extermination of peatn, temaint's insurance, and obtaining utility, water and phone eervices. It can be obtained free of charge from the Alterscts ofrice, Student Legal Services, the Graduate Stuant Office.
"Mowt of the landlorts aregood people providing decent housing at reasonable prices," she continued. "But there are a fow bad egtse that have caused a lot of misery to student-tenants." \title{
Dance Marathon won't have wet T-shirt contest this year

\section*{By Linda Trefz}

There will not be a wet T-shirt contest in this year'e Muscular Dystrophy Dance Marathon.
"Thie wet T-shirt contest has had too many hasales in the past'and was more trouble than it was worth, eince it didn't raise that much money," said Flip Mancuso, marathon coordinator...

Jay Sanderson, marathon concert programmer, added "there are a lot of other unique things that are potentially more advantageous."

The theme of this year's marathon, to be held on April 7-8 at Manley Field House, is "The Magical Mystery Marathon."

Sanderson said the marathon will intertwine rock ' n ' roll, disco, Saturday Night Live and Star Wara into marathon activities.

Sanderson said he is looking for national personalities and a band with a national reputation to appear at the Marathon, to bring it a lot of aftention. Bands will play one hour sets and activities are planned to last 45 minutes.

Some of the activities scheduled so far include a "Star Wars look-alike contest" set for Fxiday night, and a "Saturday Night Live look-alike contest" on Saturday.
The winners will receive prizes and raise money for the'dance couple that sponsors them.

Friday hight will emphasize rock music and Saturday, Manley will be billed as the "largest disco in the world," because of its potential to hold 7000 people.
Every 15 minates, organizations sponsoring couples will try to fill up the car or phone booth.

On another side will be a "Wheel of Fortune" with an auctioneer and prizes. There will also be an area known as "Casino Games" with blackjack and roulette.
Several "mania eventa" are planned to have their preliminaries before the marathon. One campuswide event will be a juggling contest, to be judged on originality and creativity.
Instead of a "donut munch," this year a "bubblegum blowing contest" is planned for Friday. The preliminaries will also be held the week before, and the winning points will go toward prizes.

There will be an "administrative authority slave auction" on Saturday, where the buyer can make his alave perform previously negotiated activities for one hour.
The preliminaxies of an "anything-goes tricycle race"t will begin two weeks before the marathon, with teams racing around the Quad on tricycles. The finals will be held Saturday on tric
Anyone who has any ideas for other activities is encouraged to contact Jay Sanderson at the Greek Council Marathon Ofrice, 821 Univertity (upstairs from Spectrum) or call \(\times 3690\).

\section*{Bonnies buried}

\section*{SU aims for seventh}

By J.T. Brady
As the fans shuffled eagerly through the slunh outside the War Memorial, a dark brick building acrosa the streat juts up ominously into the Rochester night. Bold, white letters stand out in contrant with the black background, and proclaim a cold message "Caskets."
Inside the arena, the atmosphere ia charged with life, aflare with equal parts of Orange hanices and the brown parb of St Bonaventure rooters. Yet this is a more subtle graveyard Syracuse and the Bonnies are locked in their traditional death match, in the their traditional death match, in the same buiding where heot into the NCAA-playoff grave one foot ing ast year
This year, it is a bormergain backcourt that pumps life into the Orange. The Bonnies, physically over watched to begin with, hear their final death knell when center Tim Waterman picks up his fourth and fifth fouls. SU's reserve center, Dan Schayes, throws the laat dirt on the SBC grave with a string of foul shots in the closing minutes.
At least for now, the Bonnies are dead. They have died about as easily as Bela Logosi in an old Dracula movie, a team that always seems to lie waiting innocuously in Olean, and then nevitably strikes straight at SU's jugular.
But this year, the combination of SU's zonebusting guards and an asgressive Roosevelt Bowie has acted as a sufficient talisman to ward off their would-be assasaina. This year, the Orange locker room is alive with Orange locker room is alive with Bonnier and handshalke, while the Bonnies are left walk throagh the mpty morguenk hall of the arena and out into the night. Perhaps they ake time to glance at the casket factory or cross the street and ponder the NIT while watching the moonlight dance n the Genesee River.
But first, SBU coach Jim Satalin must lean against a wall and give the autopsy. And as familiar as the Syracuse-St. Bonaventure rivalry has become, eventually Satalin is asked about an outsider, a stranger, but a team that \(S U\) will come to know well in the upcoming days - the ECAC Southern division champion, Georgetown.

They're big like \(S U\)," said Satalin, whoae team lost to the Hoyas, 71-59, early this season. "They've got the big kid, the seven-footer ( \(6^{\prime \prime} 11^{\prime \prime}\) center) Tom Scates. He's as big as Eouie, but not as good. Shelton (forward Craig) is a big kid (64', 210 pounds) about Shack's sixe. Overall, they ohould match up pretty well.
Just how well Georgetown and SU match up will become apparent tomon row at 2 p.m., when the Orange travel to the Univeraity of Maryland's Cole Field House to face the 16 tiz ranked Hoyas in the ECAC UpatateSouthern championship game (WSYRTV, Channel 3). Georgetown defeated Old Dominion. \(73-52\), to capture the Southern title Wednesday.

The Washington, D.C., school may have auffered a serious loss in winming. however, since Scates injured his knee and was forced to leave the game. His and was forced to leave the game. His in doubt yeaterday.

There is no doubt, however, the Hoyas, with or without Scates, wil provide a challenge for SU's big fron line. The explosive Shelton is joined a forward by captain Steve Martin, a 6 '4 senior forward, who played against ODU despite partially separated shoulder.
"It's going to be a good game because they're both big inside," said St. Bonaventure forward Delmar Har rod. The key thing is, has Su ever played a team of that bize and buik? their size," said SU coach Jim Boeheim. 'Ions, Rhode Iland, Ken tucky, mlinois... We've played a lot of big teams."

But while Satalin and the St Bonaventure players talked about Georgetown's size, SU Assistant Coach Brendan Malone said SU's wor ries lie in areas other than the Warhington monuments.
"We'll match up pretty well inside, Georgetown's atrength is their guards," Malone said. "They're quick they can penetrate - We're going to have aur hands full."

Both guards, junior John Duren and freshman Eric Floyd, are \(6^{\circ} 3^{\prime \prime}\), but if SU gtarters Hal Cohen and Marty Headd come up short, defenaive apecialist Eddie Moss is ready.

Yeah, I want to play Ceorgetown*" Moss said before SU's Southern division opponent had been announced. 'They've been doing too much talking - it'll be a real good game.'
Tomorrow the Orange get a chance to talk back and answer the question on everyone's mind - not "what's a Hoya?" but rather: "Is there life beyond Rochester?"

While Jim Boeheim's Syracuse Orangemen continue to climb the national tournament ladder and receive undivided attention, coach Barbara Jacobs' Orangewomen quietly finished their most muccessful bayiketball season in history.
SU closed out ita season Tuesday night with a \(71-60\) win at Colgate. Sue Scholl and Vieki Smith led the Orange with 20 points and 19 rebounds and 25 points and 11 rebounds, respectively, as SU raised its record to 15-3.
But deapite the necord, Syracuse just misated being selected for two postaseason tournaments.
"The girls were very disappointed they did not get into any postseagon they did not getintoany portseagon

And the 15-3 record was not good enough to lure consintent fan support. Although the Orange drew a arge crowd for its showdown with Pena State midway through the ceason, the women's awerage draw I 9,000 -peat Manley Field Momea was about 200 .

Yet the record wras a fine achievement, conmidering it was accomplished by a team that does not receive full scholarahipa, but only five full-trition stipends. Jacobs said full scholarships are a manjor factor in the drive for natiomal prominence.

The Orangewomen have vawtly improved their schedule for the 1979 80 beason, an they will play eight nationally-ranked teanas. This year they played only one - Pean State.

Not only will SU' be looking forward to a better schedivie next season, but alao anothey solid year in the wondoss colvinn as the teann's nucleus returns.

What is \($ 1\) worth to you?
Whatever it's wotth to 'you, $1 of your money is worth a great deal to The Daily Orange. The DO is asking for a \($ 1\) increase in the portion of the student fee which the paper receives, from \($ 4\) a student to \($ 5\). That dollar will mean the difference between a high quality product for our readers and an adcrammed paper in aerious finaincial trouble.

We would prefer to continue improving our quality and increasing the number of stories in the paper without incurring higher costs. But the facts of econornic life are not so kind.

The cost of publishing the paper is spiraling upward. If you've bought a dozen egge or a six-pack of beer or paid a utility bill lately, you don't need a lecture on inflation, and we won't deliver one.

But consider some of the increases the DO will have to face next academic year: Printing costs up 13 percent, salary costs (mainly covering student labor at low pay up 28.9 percent, and payroll taxes up 39 percent.
Most of these hikes are beyond our control: Sharp increases in Social Security payroll taxes, the minimum wage, the employer's share of work-study wages and the costs paid by our suppliers, which they pass on to us.
We have made efforts to cope with these increasing costs short of going to the students for more money. Inflation has increased 2530 percent in the last three years but the DO has not asked for an increase from students in that time period, relying instead on request for a \($ 3\) increase for the rest of the student fee, which now stands at \($ 41.75\). A similar referendum was narrowly defeated in December, indicating considerable division on the issue.

The fee increase is needed to keep the same services we now enjoy. University Union programming, for example, provides inexpensive movies and speakers. SU Musical Stage's showing of "Promises, Promises" played to full houses. Alteracts provides apartment-finding and ditto services. Few students can say they do not use any- services provided from the student fee.
SA also plans a comprehensive teacher evaluation guide for this fall; costs are estimated at \($ 10,000\).

To keep all these services, provide the teacher evaluation guide, and keep pace with inflation running at an 11 percent annual rate, money is needed

Nobody likes payinghigher bills, whether they're for rent or tuition or food or anything else. In most cases, we have no choice; that makes the fee hikes all the greater.

Still, before they vote, students should understand the choice clearly: by voting no, they'll be paying less and buying fewer services. We hope and expect that students would rather pay a small amount more and preserve both the quality of their daily newspaper and the diversity of the student services which they fund.

Editor's note: Saraswati Raju is an Indian graduate student in thegeology department. She arrived in the United States last summer. The following is an excerpt from a paper she wrote desexcerpt from a paper she wrove des cribing her impressions of Syracuse.
There is much talk about culture shock upon arriving in a new environment. One would probably expect it to be more intensive for a girl like me from the Orient, coming out of her ahell for the first-time and entering arculture entirely different from her own.

But surprisingly enough; Ihad practically no such problems. For the first few days, I was just devoid of feelings. I wanted to weep, I wanted to feel - but my mind would simply refuse. At times I went through ruthless introspection.

\section*{Guest comment: \\ Saraswati Raju}

All my boasting of being attached to my home, my people, and my country seemed to be baseless.
I am struck by the easy comradeship between people here, especially between the administrative class and the working class. They feel no class berrier. Because the average American respects work and is quita willing to do almost every manual job himself, he never looks down on someone doing the so-called "lower" jobs. What I appreciate most about Americans is their attitude towards public servants. In India it is rare that one hears someone thanking a gateman or a postman or a waiter in a hotel. For this our class structure may be held responisible. In Americs; the attitude is very friendly. People are generous.
Here there is great atreas upon infor me to and privacy; It is difficult for me to understand. When I got a private room here, it was a dreadful thought for me to stay alone in the room. But I must say that after staying there for a while, I have started to relish the privacy to some extent.
Compared to other cultures, Americans seem warm and open with new acquaintances. They are always ready to help. Friendships are usually casual here. The mobility of American ife sets the pattern of change and of meeting. new people. In India, fiendships are both more intimate and delicate. It is not uncommon to see two very good friends breaking up on seemingly small iasties.
The American houses are beautiful. Almost every house keeps some green plants; every office has them. I am struck by the homey touch of the of fices. In India it is not a common practice to keep plants inside the house. It may be because in most parts of America, the climate deprives people of enjoying the greenery outside. The houses in India are not built with central heating and are drafty and difficult to warm in the winter. Only the well-to-do can afford central heating. The temperatures soar in the summer, and it is next to impossible to maintain greenery inside a house. It is different for America.

I am really surprised to know that it is not aafe to move alone in the atreets when it is dark. I am given the understanding that even during the daytime it's not nafe to move about alone. I don't think we have this problem in India to anch an extent.
It is only a ahort time that I have been here, and I have come in contact with only a manall section of the American population: But I am eure that when I return to India, I will have many interesting things to tell- and many rememberances of warmth and friendiliness from Americans who do not hesitate to open their hearts and homes to me.

\section*{Modern-day ghost town: the story of the Love Canal}

\section*{By Carl Johnson}

Cheap single-ply plywood seals doorways and win dows on anonymous wood-frame houses, A green chain-link fence surrounds the neighborhood around the 99th Street School. Hereand thereareamesigna of life as the last of the residents prepare toleave thei homes. When all the people have gone, the gatea of the fence will be locked and the Love Canal will be forgotten.

The residents of this Niagara Falls neighborhood have been evacuated from their homes during the past six months. It was discovered in August that hiv ing in the area, which was used as a dumping site for toxic chemicals more than 25 years ago, presented a serious health hazard. The chemicals dumped here include the most dangerous toxins known to man.
The Love Canal was planned in the early 1900 a for use as an alternate waterway for industries along the Niagara River, but the project was scrapped. From 1937 to 1953, the Hooker Chemicals and Plastics Corp., a subsidiary of Occidental Petroleum, used the area for the dumping of waste chemicals, including one known as 2,4,5-T. This organic toxin was used for clearing foliage along rights-of-way for power lines and other limited defoliation projects, and also to clear thousands of acres of jungle in the Vietnam War.
While much of the waste was encased in metal barrels, a good deal was dumped, raw, into the ground. During that 16-year period, Hooker dumped nillions of pounds of hazardous wastes into the Love Canal site.

In 1953 , the Niagara Falls achool board bought the site for the construction of the 99 th Street School. The rest of the area was sold to a developer and used for ract housing
During the next two decades, the 2,4,5-T, which had been buried in the top six to eight feet of soil, decom posed into its decay product, dioxin, classified as the strongest toxin on earth. The metal drums holding much of the waste deteriorated undergroumd and eaked their dangerous contents.

\section*{Tragedy begins}

There were occasional odor complainte during the '60s, but unusually heavy rainfall during 1971-72 caused the chemicals to seep outward from the original limited dumping site. In 1978 , area residents complained of strong odors, headaches and illness. Farnily pets lost their hair or died, and cellar seepage carried noxious chemical odora. In August 1978, it was disclosed that Hooker had used the area as a dumpsite, and state and federal governments began evacuation of the 235 families in the neickborlaood
All homes in the immediate area, mong 97th and \(99 t h\) streets from Colvin Averue to Frontur Avenue, have been purchaped by the state. Only three families remain in the once-large neighborhood; nome have moved to other parts of the city; other have left the state in hope of avoiding another mucin tragedy.

An NBC Reports investigation estimated that there are more than 800 chemical dumpaites in the country with the same potential danger as the Love Canal. Because of the Niagara River, Weatern New York has a heavy concemtration of chemical industries, and dumpsites like the Love Canal are atill being discovered. Hooker has at least three more dumptiteg in the Niagara area.

In a 15 -mile stretch, the Niagara Fiver receives discharge from 80 industries and six municipal reatment plants, yet it still serves as a major water supply for the community.

\section*{Clean-up}

So far, the state has paid relocation costs of \($ 10\) milion. The New York Public Interest Research Group is lobbying to get New Yorik state to sue Hooker n order to recover at least part of the money.
In addition, the federal government has paid \($ 4\) million for a ditch to drain off the chemicals at the site. The toxins are being rerouted through the city's municipal sewage treatment plant, which removes up to 95 percent of the hazardous chemicala. The remaining 5 . percent goes directly into the Niagara River.

Despite the cleanup, chemicals are seeping farther and farther from the Love Canal dumpsite. Pregnant women and children are being evacuated from their homes as far as three blocks from the dumpsite. There are occasional complaints of odor even farther from the canal.

All of the damage has not yet been revealed. Diox in's carcinogenic effects will not be known for the next five to 15 years. Future miscarriages or birno defects cannot yet be seen. Emotional trauma canno be measured.

Friday, NYPIRG indicated that the Power Authority of the State of New York has used 2,4,5-T to clear brugh along a 155 -mile power line right-of-way, creating the pozential for a Love Canal situation in four counties north of Syracuse. The Love Canal may be locied in Niagara, but similar bituations are opening across the country.

\section*{Problems still plague}

Newnpapers from monthe past overliow in the mailboxes of resictents who fled the Love Canal. Soon Afterward. New York Stite Department of Trameportation boarsied up the evacuated houtes to guard against vandaliarn.

Arlene Luciano taikes a moment to step outaide and eaioy the unseasonably warm February breeze. She*s been relaxing, doing a little cleaning and spending her Saturday like any middle in. come hougewife living in a close knit regidential neighborhood. Yet Mrs. Luciano takes a quick look neighbornood. Xet Mrs. Luciano taketaquick look around and returns to her house with a slight rown. Again she is reminded of the unusuai events that have upset homes of her neighbors.

Mrs. Luciano, her hubband and her 24 year-old daughter, are one of the three families who have not moved from Niagara Falls' 97 th and \(99 t h\) streets, the Love Canal chemical dump site.
Their home is surrounded by rows of wooden boards blocking the windows and doors of the 235 small, but once comfortable homes. A \($ 60,000\) green wire fence and a chemical stench envelope the area. Discarded soda bottles and an aban doned teddy bear lie on the street once crowded with children and pets.

A sigri reading "emergency evacuation pick up" is Love Canal's welcome mat.

97th and 99th atreets are built on top of the un finished Love Canal, used by Hooker Chemical and Plastica Corp. as a chemical wante dump aite.

In August, most of the Lucianos'97th and 99th street neighbora began to move out after the area was determined dangerous and the New York State Department of tranaportation parchased the homes.

Area residents reported suffering from a high rate of birth diefects, miscarriages, respiratory. liver and skin problema, dizzinems and matuea, ac cording to Dr. James M. Wynne of the Niagara Falls community Mealth Department.

The canal contains 350 to 400 toxic compounds, according to the State Health Department, including 11 known or suspected carcinogens. This does not include byproducts that may result from the chemicals being mixed together since. 1953. Even if some chemicals aren't considered dangerous alone, their reaction with other chemicale can cause them to become carcinogens, according to Joe Salvo, regional coordinator the New York Public Intereat Reaearch group Included in this chemical witches brew is the compound \(2,4,5, T\) of which Dioxin, one of the most toxic chemicals known to man, is a component. \(2,4,5, T\) is a key ingredient of "Agent Orange," the poison used to defoliate jungle areas during the Vietnam War. Salvo said Vietnam vets are still experiencing health problems from exposure to the chemical.

The State Health Department has discovered an increased miscarriage and birth defect rate among Love Canal residents. Investigators agree pregrant women exposed to the canal's chemicals double the riak of miscarriage.

Despite the 11 carcinogens in the canal, the State Health Department has not found a statisically significant increase in cancer among the residents. Howrever, Salvo explained there is a 15 to 40 year latency period for cancer. Residents have only been in direct contact with the chemicalsin the last 5 to 8 years.

Dr-iSamuel Epatein of the National Cancer Dr-"Samael Epatein of the National Cancer Rebearch Ingtitate waid on a recent NBC Reports speon that there are an entmated 32,00 chemica dumpeites mationwide, and ov of ham hame haver, New Gally as dangerous as the Love Ganai Riowevex, CovKork Public Interest Research Group Regrenal Cortive. In Onondags County, there are 142 identified inndfill dumapaites. Some of theseseme treed or have beerruged to dump indurtrial waste, including toxic chemicals. However, there are virtually no chemicals, However, there are virtually no sure they pose no danger to the environment.
in New York state, regulations on toxic chemical dumping were firet enacted in 1977. Before them, laws regulating general waste disposal covered solid chemical waste and no laws covered hiquid chemical waste.

In August 1977, chemical dumping was regulated by requiring engineering studies, soil analysio and monitoring of chemical dumpsites. But there are no regulations on what chemicals can be dumped. No blanket rules are made because each site is con sidered individually, according to Neil M. Gingold Fegional Attorney for the state Department of Environmental Conservation.
No further regulations are currenty being conmidered, Gingold maid Enforcement of atmping regulations is the regponsilility of the DEC, he said. Civil suits can be brought againat chemical polluters whose dumping has caused damage. It would be possible for the DEC to bring suit against the dumpers but a clans action suit brought by individuals who had been injured would be more likely to ancceed, he anid.

There are no specific laws making chemical polluters responaible for damage they may cause. Gingold aaid. Damage payments would be determined by a court.

\section*{Federal inaction}

At the federal level, even fewer regulations exiat. The U.S. Environmental Protection Ageney is conducting heariage on proposals.to ingtitute a national hazardous waste regulatory program. The Remoarce Conservation and Hecovery Act of 1976 mandates that the EPA institute these regulationa, but they pave not yet been enacted. The EPA has identified at least 125 potentially dangerous chernicals, which may be affected by future regulationa.
On Thurgday, the EPA banned the use of the hericide 2,4,5-T. EPA Deputy Director Barbara Blum said it was banned because studies showed a dramatic increase in the number of miscarriages arnong wrozaen in Oregon after the forest surrounaing their community was sprayed with \(2,4,5-\mathrm{T}\). The ban covers the une of \(2,4,5 \mathrm{~T}\), but not its disposal.
A component of \(2,4,5-T\) im the highly tomic mbetance dioxin. The herbicide has been umed north of Syracuse for brash clearing by the Pover Anthority of the State of Nev Yort Large quantities of dibxin were aiso found in the Love Capal area of Niagara Falls.

Monitoring necessary
In addition to legal regulation, effective monitoring programs are needed to enswre that chemical dumps pose no eavixonmental hazarda.

Monitoring entaile checking seepage from the dumpite for chertical contamination and keepring complete recond on what hab been dumped.

A ptudy Feleased last month by the Onondaga County Health Department ounlined the need for monitoring a number of county landfill areas where toxcesubatamices may trave been dumped. The health department is trying to get funda allocated to conduct a monitozing program, said Peter Guala, director of the department's division of environmental sanitation. The county does not have the laboratory; preherusive monitoring prograxa, Guala added.

An effective monitoring program would bedifficult to adminieter, according to environmental engineer J. Charles Jennett, Chairman of the Syracher Univeraity civill engineering department.

One problem, Jennett asid, is locating potentially dangerous dumpeites. Until recently, he said, many companies kept no records on what they dumped even though they were dumping legmily. A aecond problem is that a complete monitoring program would be expensive, he said.
Safe dumping practices and effective regulation and monitoring have not been employed becauese of the monetary codth involved, Salvo maid. "Costs are the bottom line."
There has been a strong lobbying effort by induatry againat the proposed EPA regulations because of high conta to the industry. Mhe cost factor is txanslated into a battle over regulationa," Salvo taid.

The cost of ineffective regulation is being overiooked, Salvo said. "Nobody looke into the costs of inlegally run hasardouswrate dumps," he said. The Love Canal will probably cost the taxpayers \($ 30\) million, he added.
"Getting effective regulation will place the cost -and the responsibility - on the industries, where it should lie," he said.

Fow regulations regarding the diepotal of potentially dangerous chemicels now exilt, and the tragedy that oceurred in the Love Carial area may occur in hunctreds of other places acrose the country.

Syracuse lost a postacason playoff game for the fourth time in its last five tries Satuxday in a 66-58 defeat at the hands of 16 th-raniced Georgetown Saturday at the Univerzity of Maryland's Cole Field House.
The Orange's agressive rebounding and deferise got them in foul trouble, and by the time the upset was completed, SU big men Roosevelt-Bouie and Dan Schayes had joined forward Louis Orrion the SU bench with five personal fouls.
Syractse started out with a shaky \(30-28\) Eirsthalf lead, but the shooting of Greorgetown guand. John Duren, the toarmament's Most Valuable Player, booted the 5th ranked Orange (25-3) ont of contention for the ECAC Upstate-Southern cham:pionship.

The loss of the fall front line to fonle left SU with a lineup that included frewhman Fich Harmon (64) and Captain Dale Shackleford (66) as SU'a tallegt playera. The scene was reminiscent of Shackieford's freshman year, in whincin the small SU team, under coach Foy Daniorth, earned the nickname "Roy"s Runts." The Orange hope to stand taller nert Saturday when they face Connec ticut-inimen MCA mecond round game at the Providence Civic Cerater.

Crouse's last ertended outburst of violence occurred in 1903, during which it ate 18 atindenta At that time, the ad. ministration quietly ignored the Killer College because it was only devouring students who were out past the 11 p.m. curfew. However, fear that it might attack again prompted the construction of Archbold Stadium, which kept close watch over Crouse for nearly 75 years.

By Jack Mehov
Vandals who destroyed a amall sukkah outsidesyracuse University's Hendricks Chapel last sernester, returned Saturday night to make amends by converting the entire chapel into a massive sukkah.
John Zebra, director of SU Safety and Security, said two officers baw "about 3,000" people running acroas the quad with former pieces of Hendricks, including wooden plantrs; steel girders and chunks of concrete.
"My, guys were kind of confused"" Zebra said. "I mean, with Archbold Stadinm being torn down, the Hall of Languages being rebuilt and the Physics Buildiag nprouting porta-potzie Iaba on ite patio, I gangs they Sigured the whale campurs was being redecorated."
Upon seeing the-sudden change in the chapel's appearance, Rabbit Miton E Flephant said he believed it was "not nearly as horrible as what ithose irreverant criminala did to our little ank krh."

Sure, It's a shame what they've done to Hendricks," the rabbit said, "but all the administration has to do is get Carrier to fix it and then Carriex to fix it and then yename it Iine New and Improved Carrer Chapel at who's ronna pay for the

"These fine, hard-working young people who picked apart our beloved, but crumbling chapel with their bare hands in one night deserve some credit," MeBrush maid. "They must also be taking incredibly powerful druge. What arn bition!'
No campus organizations claimed responsibility for the incident, althongh Zebra euggested it may have been a fraternity prank.

The famous air conditioner magnates generously donated \($ 275\) million to the construc tion of the SU atadium.
Since then the fever has reached epidemic proportiona. One of the moat notable casea took place in Cinncinatti. Ohio where officials from Froctor and Gamble Corporation donated \($ 2\) million along with eight million bars of Ivory Soap to the University of Cinncinatti.

That amount is expected to go up to abont \($ 35\) million next year, he amid.
One factor in the probable increase is the Middle Ir come Student Assistance Act, which raises the ceil ing on the amount of money a family may earn and still be eligible for a Basic Educational Opportunity Grant from \($ 15,000\) to \($ 25,000\) peryear for more than one student in college.

The higheat BEOG awarda student can receive wrill rige to \($ 1,800\) from \($ 1,600\) this gear. Firitiz said.
FWhile it geerni atmitents meys get more money next year, the \(1980-81\) year is in donbt.
In his bradget tor fiscal year 1980 Carter proposed elininating Social Security benefits to all incoming college otudemts, cutting BEOG by \($ 144\) million and the National Direct Student Loan progranifrom \($ 220\) million to \($ 90\) million.

Currently undergraduates between the ages of 18 and 22 recei ve Social Secturity benefits if one or more parents are decensed, disabled or retired. Coveraze stope at 18 if the child does not attend college.
Under Carter's proposal, no one older than 18 would receive these supplementary beriefita. Students currently receiving benefits would probabiy continue to do so, however, said Joseph Holgado, field representative for the Syracuae district office of the Social Security Administration.
Carter is proposing these cuts in Social Security benefits because he believes many of these benefits are duplicated, and cutting some of them will save money and still aerve atudents.
However, in many cases, Social Security benefita go back to students' families, and may be their only means of support, Fritz asid.
Fritz said it is highly unlikely that Carter'a proposals will pass unchallenged through Congress because the Ennancial aid programs have much Congressional support.
Rep. Shirley Chisholm (D-N.Y.) said last month while at SU that it is unlikely any of Carter's cuts in social programs will pags unchallenged.
Fritz agid SU alao hopea to receive summer workstudy grants for students, which it has not gotten for several years.

\section*{Pilferage costs strike dining halls}

Thievery Costs Senneth Guggenheim vices armery costs Syracuse University Dining Services "something in the neighborhood of \($ 12,000\) to $15,000 a year,"'according to Robert Swivel, assistant director of dining services
The stenling of silverware, glassware and dishes is a constant problem for dining halls. The coat of the theftis ia passed on to students by increased meal card prices, Swivel said.
Swivel thinks students ateal dining hall property because "they have a genvine need for it."
So many studentw have refrigerators on campue that they need tablewnare to go along with the food."If a atudent buye yogurt, heneeds angoon for it," Swivel said.
However, the theft of food, particularly fruit, is more coutly to dining services than non-food items. According to dining service policy, only one piece of fruit or an ice cream cone per meal may be taken from dining hall.
If a person takes more than his share, it is at the expense of everyone. "It's just a cont we are not ready to cover," Swivel said.
Meal card checkers, atationed at dining hall entrances, are instructed to stop people leaving with more than their shave of food. They inform the person of dining service policy and ask them to return whatever is over the limit.
If the person ignores the checker, his meal card may be confiscated the next time the checker seed him. Dining services discusses the incident with the person to let him know "where we're coming from," Swivel said.
Dining servicea may then charge a "service fee," which is naually \($ 25\), or refer the person to the office of student affairs.
Swivel said he "likea to think checkers always stop people (from taking too much out) but, realistically. they don't always do so.
The theft of nom-food products is greatest at the beginning of the school year, when students take property for their rooms or apartments, and in the "Hhefirst mowfall is tongi on trays," Swivel said.

In an effort to recover gome of the stolen property, the Office of Residential Services left collection boxes in residence halla throughout the university last year, Swivel said it met with minimal uuccess, as only \(10 \%\) of the losses were recovered.
Boxes will be lef oat again at the end of this semester, Swivel anid. He added that dining service property "may be returned anytime."

\section*{Chess master plays 52 exhibition games}

By Andrea Abrahams
International Master chess player Bernard Zuckerman played 52 games of chess against SU students, Syxacuse area reaidents and many children in a simultaneous exhibition Sunday at the Hotel Syracuse.
Zuckerman, a New York City resident, lost only five games and drew three in the \(41 / 2\) hours he played.

One person who beat Zucker man was Chris Bradshaw, an SU senior majoring in economics. Bradahaw said he was pleased to beat him, but not entirely aurprised
"I beat a player of hia caliber once in regular (one-on-one) competition, but inally competition, but I usually ose, Bradshaw anid.
Zuckerman moved froin table to table in silence, except for the sound of moving chess pieces and an occasional admonition to his opponent to move faster.
The opponents were remar kably diversified, ranging from elementary achool children as young an eigh years old to senior citizens.
Many families played side by side, and along with everyone else, checked their neaghbors boards to offer all, they wieces of adivice. After beat only one person.
One group playing was the Ball family. Joseph Ball and hin children, Becky, 10, and Steve, 9 , have been playing fo 5 yearb. Ball, a teacher in th East Syracuse-Minoa school systern, has established chess in elementary schools there and hopes to do so in all of Onondaga County.
The childiren agreed that chess is both fun and interes ting.
"Sometimes it geta to be fruetrating if I can't get my moves right," Becky azid. "I'm going to keep playing, though, and try to be as good as him (Zuckerman)," Both Becky and her fathe lasted nearly 30 znoves before uccumbing to timt pressures and Zuckerman's artistry Many of the others did as well or better.
However, Zuckerman said the games would have finisheo a lot sooner if people had resigned when they were a piece down and knew they would lose instead of prolonging the games.
ng do games. exhibitions) for the fun of it, to make s living and for the travel," Zuckerman anid.
Bill SchmelxIe, an, SU student in chemical engineer ing who resigned after 30 moves, said he went to the ei hibition to have fag and to learn

In chess you really don't earn if the person you play ian't as good as your. I learmed a lot there."

Dumpsites: a continuing tragedy

They're locking up the Love Canal.
The last three remaining families in the Niagara Falls community that housed 235 families until August are packing their possessions and memories, and preparing to leave their homes.
Residents have been evacuated for the last six months, since it was discovered that living in the area presented a serious health hazard. The area was used as a dumping site for town chemicals more than site for town 25 years ago.

But even when the Love Canal is all locked up, the hazards of chemical dump sites cannot be forgotten. About 800 of the 32,000 chemical dumpsites across the country are potentially as dangerous as the Love Canal site, said Dr. Samuel Epstein of the National Cancer Research Center.
-And that danger hits close to home.

In Onondaga County alone, 142 landfill dumpsites have been identified. Some br these hold industrial And the Power Authority of the And the Fower Authority of the State of New Yort has used the herbicide 2,4,5-T to clear brush in four counties north of Syracuse. A com ponent of this herbicide is dioxin, considered the strongest toxin on earth.
Recent studies on the herbicide indicate its use may increase the chance of miacarriage and have cancerous effects on humans.
Regulations to control the dump site problem are scarce and ineffective. Although N.Y. state studies, soil analysis and monitor-

Apparently red-tape worms get that name from the color their faces turn when you ailk questions. I started to walk away, but I heard; "I feel like the peon."
She continued, "I feel like the peon, and here comses the (student) master with the whip.'
Oh boy. This was more than 1 had hoped for. A stream of emotion was about to spew from this creature, and I was there to catch it.

ing of chemical dumpsites were enacted in August 1977, there are no laws regulating what chemicals may be dumped. Also, no regulations exist to hold chemical polluters responsible for the damage they cause.

And federal regulations controlling the dump sites are almost non-existent. The Environmental Protection Agency has not yet enacted any dump site regulations. It banned the use of the herbicide 2.4,5-T only last Thursday.

More and stronger federal legislation is necessary to ensure does not happen again. Companies must be held responsible for the way they dispose of their waste.

Industry is lobbying against proposed legislation that would atrengthen control of the dump siten because it would be costly to them. But the absence of such legislation is costly to the taxpayer.
For example in the Love Canal tragedy. New York state paid \($ 10\) million in relocation costs, and the federal government paid $4 million federal government paid \($ 4\) million for a ditch to drain off the chemicals.
"Nobody looks into the cost of illegally run hezardous waste dumps," said Joe Salvo, New York Public Interest Research Group regional coordinator. "The Love Canal will probably cost the taxpayers \($ 30\) million," he said.
Effective legialation could also be used to locate potentially dangerous dump sites. Until recently, many companies havenoteven kept records of where they were legally dumping their waste.

There is no reason why industries should not be held responsible for their actions. They should be forced to monitor their dumping carefully and pay any costs that might arise from this.

The human tragedy of the Love Canal is enormous. Effective legialation, including regulations on exactly what chemicals can be safely durmped, would notonily hold companies responsible for the costs after a tragedy has occurred, but would prevent harm in the first place.

Onily then will the tragedy of the Love Canal truly be over.

\section*{Letters}

\section*{A big mistake}

\section*{To the editor:}

A few days ago, I received a letter from Steven Kiadstrup, a sood friend of mine, who is studying in Syracuse Univeraity' A Amsterdam program. He has asked me to submit a portion of his letter to the Daily Orange.

Divison of International Programs Abroad is making a big mistake by making atudenta with no language background think that there is no problem over here. Pic ture yourgelf in a room where everyone is speaking Dutch. You, alone, do not know what is going on or being said. You feel badiy about speaking English and making everyone speak it to you. Besides what should you say? Soon people, who don't understand, begin to think that you are ahy or that you

\section*{Not so mean}

To the editor:
This is in reply to Martta Rose's letter in the March 1 issue of The Daily Orange.

I am a gecretary at SU in the Division of International Frograma Abroad. It's hard work, with little pay. (Did you think that'a where the bigh tuition money was going? Ha, hai) In fact, this is one of the mhin reasong why we are trying to unionize.

In any case, we have to deal with students all day long, some with very arrogant attitudes and demands that they feel we must comply with. Who are the real "pe don't want to know them. Once they begin to think that, everything you do begins to make an impression on them. This worsens until people understand you better. That's if they're around you long enough. Besides all this, you can never really talk to anyone, even if they "know" Eagkish.

So tell the language department to keep Dutch around for the DIPA studente. And tell DIPA to check out its act if it really cares about the students. If they make a year of Dutch mandatory for students to go to Amsterdam, it would weed out those students who come mainly to party, and make it easier for those who are coming to find out what the Dutch are all about."

working at SU are small (try taking the allowed 6 credit hours while worcing full time - it's practically im possible). The big reward here(i.e. why we don't want to leave our jobs) is that the atmosphere of many offices is more casual than in business and we get to work with more intelligent and liberial people than we would in business offices.

But unfortunately, in dealing with students, sometimes I find that it's like beinga waitress working here demanding customers who leave no tically whiking below the minimum wage.

So, nuext time, try to be a little more considerate of us "bimboa" who sit behind the deaks. We really can be nice poople when others are conciderate of ma.

\section*{Hotline offers help with callers' crises}

By Laurie Loewenstein It is late at night. A young woman, recently divorced, liea awake wondering how she will support her children. A. \(78-\) year-old man spends another sleepless night trying to combat the loneliness and boredom which seem to engulf his life. A teenager worriea that she might be pregnant. A businessman needs someone who will just listen.
There is a place in Syracuse where all these people can turn for help at any time. It is CONTACT, a 24 hour telephone serviceat 445-1500.
CONTACT is a non-profit organization and recrives its organization from individuals, foundation grants, donations from area buisinesiecs and by selling cookbooks and holding carnivala.

The service was established in Syracuae in 1971 and is part of a network of over 70 CONTACT centers across the nation.
between 1100 and 1400 phone calls are received per month, according to the Rev. Ross Blake, CONTACT:s execulive director. Most of the calls are from people who are lonely, depresered or emotionally upset, Blake said.

CONTACT's phones are manned by about 80 trained volunteers, including Syracuse University students, faculty and administrators.

The Community Internship

Program offers three academic credits to students who take the 50-hour CONTACT train ing course, man the phones and do additional reading per taining to the phonework Students can also get credit for CONTACT work through independent study.
Michael Flashner, assistant professor in the College of En Vironmental Science and Forestry's department of chemistry, has worked at CONTACT for about a year and a half.

\section*{Cohen: the self-made player}

\title{
Headd: not common on court

By Dave Gymburch
"Hard work" are the words one most often associates with guard Hal Cohen of the Syracuse University basketball team.
After spending two years mostly watching, learning and working, the 6 -foot junior from Canton, N.Y., has assumed an important role for the Orangemen this season as a consistent outside shooter and a steady ball-handler against pressure defenses. Coach Jim Boeheim and Orange co-captain Dale Shackleford both stressed Cohen's dedication when they discussed his in "Many people felt he wouldn't be able knew he would put in the time to improve himself. We knew his great desire would overcome his relative lack of whility. He works much harder than anyone on the team.'
"Hal always worked so hard, you knew if he got the chance to play, he'd "Wiake the most of it, "Shackleford said. anything but make himself better."
Cohen said he comes to practice early to work on his shooting and stays for to work on his shooting and atays for roughly an hour after practice to shoot some more. He also said he spends some more. He also said he spends between an hour and an hour and-a-half every day in the summer playing half every
In addition to the time he spends on basketball, Cohen also works hard enough in SU's premed program to have a 3.75 grade point average.
"It was tough for a while, getting used to being tired after practices and then trying to study," \(C o h e n s a i d . ~ " B u t ~\) r've learned to budget my time pretty strictly. Now I take the view that if I weren't playing basketball, I would havea lot of extratime that would go to have a lot of extra time that would go to Cohen said he knew when he accepted a baskethall scholarship to SU he would have to put in a lot of extra effort to be successful.
"I didn't want to go to a smaller school, be successful, and then always think about how I might have made it at a bigger school," Cohen said. "I kept working harder.
According to Cohen, one of the SU was getting used to being one of the smallest members of a basketball team after being the tallest person on his high school team. Cohen said his adjustment was easier because his high school team, coached by his father, played a very "team-oriented" game. He played guard frequently despite his height advantage over other players. Cohen played very Iittle his freshman year at SU. During his sophomore year, he played much more, although Ross Kindel usually started ahead of him. Boeheim said Cohen's improvement was gradual, but added geason during the Canisius game on Jan. 20, in which he started because Eddie Moss was injured.
"I don't think any one game really turned it around for me," Cohen said. "I relt at the beginning of my sophomore season, after I had played a lot during Games in Israel that I was playing as well as the other four guards on our team."
To improve himself further, Cohen said, at the end of the season he writes down what aspects of his garne need improvement - "shooting better off the dribble and shooting better under pressure, for example." He said he pressure, for example. He said he aspects in the summer, while also tryaspects in the summer, while al
According to Cohen, the eronched Groucho Marx dribbling style he often uses in SU's delay game is an example of how he has compensated for his physical limitations.
"It just developed mainly because I wasn't as quick as many of the players I was facing," Cohen explained. "I found that bending over while dribbling like that was the best way for me to shield the ball from quicker players."
Cohen said he hopes to eventually make a career of sports medicine. After graduating from SU he might play in a professional basketball league in Israel, where he would also attend medical school.
Despite his dedication to basketball and studies, Cohen possesses a certain lightheartedness and wit.
"I would defnitely say that making the 60-foot bank shot is my biggest weakness," he deadpanned. "That, along with the hook from 45."
With his desire and initiative, Cohen someday might even be able to make those shots regularly.
 with groat physical talont. Cohen has become a tarting guard for the the tifth ranked tearn in the nation through hours of herd work before and after as well as during practice. The irmportance of SU' shooting guards was borme out in the Orangemen'* 68-58 loss to Georgetown in the ECAC UpstateSourhern Championahip last Saturday. Cohen went 5-for- 11 in shooting from the field, while Headd shot a dismal \(t\). for-11. The mistires led to SU'sinability to crack the Hoyas' stingy zone detense and the Oragia's impotent second-half scoring attack. Cohen and Headd will have to be on when SU plays the University of Connecticurt in the second round of the Eastern ragional this Saturday when SU coach Jim Boeheim hopes his predietion that "Headd will never have a garne like that again" will come true.

SU guard Marty Headd (23) is not a great phyaical spacimen, biut his shooting touch has sparked the nationsliy ranked Orangemen on many game winning aurges.

\section*{By Greg Luckenbaugh}

Major college basketball players usually stand out in crowds like the Pope at a witches' ritual. However Marty Headd, one-half of SU's starting guard duo, could easily pass for an or dinary man in the street.

Headd's Lawrinson dorm room is sparsely furnished, and his tastes are far from elegant. "I like to play backgammon in my spare time," he said.
Slightly hunched and prematurely balding, the \(6^{\prime} 2^{\prime \prime}\) Headd resembles anything but a basketball player - he is a common man. Yet, just as the com mon man is the heart of America, Marty Headd is a vital organ of the SU' basketball organism.
"Actually, he's my favorite guy on the team,' said a smiling Coach Jim Boeheim.' "He's the only guy with less hair than me.
"Seriously, Marty isn't a auperstar," Boeheim continued. "But he blends his alents to helocreate our team concept. He is the prototype of our team.
"I really don't have any spectacular talents," Headd said. "But I do think I'm solid in all aspects of the game. I complement other players well, and my defense is improving. Hecis, I'm only a sophomore.
Although Headd may not be a superstar, or have any "spectacular superstar, or have any "spectacuiar preasive.

He can do more things well on offense than people give him credit for," Boeheim gaid. "He sees things well, and he moves well without the ball. Without any real quiciness, this movement allows him to get his shot off. And once he gets open, with his quick release, there's noquestion about the shot.
Many have said Headd's defense has hurt the Orange, but Boeheim differs. "His defense in the beginning? Well ". Boeheim said with a laugh. "But sated wall for his lack of quickness by playing position defense well. As he gets more experience, his positioning will improve, and so will hie defense.
"His lack of quickness hasn't hurt us," Boeheim said. "He's worked hard and done extra worl to improve hia defense. Besides, he doesn't have to be perfect yet - he's got Louis (Orr) and Roosevelt (Bouie) behind him helping out."
Despite Headd's physical abilities, there are many who have questioned his mental prowess.
"Anyone who has questioned his intelligence, isn't making a sound judgernent," Boeheim said. "He's maintanned above a Caverage, and his court knowledge is excellent." court knowledge is excellent."
"I didn't come here to be an accountant. I came here to be a ballplayer," Headd retorted. "I sure as hell won't be in premed, but I've maintained a 2.3 cume, and I'm happy about it. Heck, I know kids doing worge than me, and they aren't athletes.
Headd, who signed a letter of intent to play baskéthall atSU on the first day of classes during his senior year at nearby Christian Brothers Academy, says the intensity of college ball hasn't changed him. Im stil just an average, quiet, easy-going guy," Headd baid. 'I've learned a lot about a lot of things since I carne to SU, but I'm still Marty Headd."
Headd is a young man who is attisGed with his life. "I don't really have any idols," he said, -But David Thompson is my favorite ballplayer rd be a fool to wish I was someone clse. I still need improvement in a lot of areas, but Im young. In two yeare at baliplayer, but aleo a to ballplay
The future for Headd at SU is bright, since he is only zrophomore. However, as the NCAA tournament clones in, his concentration is on short-term, teamoriented goals.

Right now, I'rn not looking beyond anything but winning, the NCAA champronship," he said. Ater to my own personal goals."

Although Hexdd may deecribe himself an a "timple, average guy," his task for the Orangemen is not 80 sim ple. His importance to the SU squad is analogous to the importance of a wheel to a car. By itself, the wheel may be commonplace and mundame. Buit remove that wheel, and see how smoothly the car functions. Therein lies the importance of Marty Headd to the SU basketball program.

Mulroy had hoped the special security measures employed at last week's Styx concert would have been enough. "Peer security" forces, reserved seating plane and increased lighting were used in an attempt to controt drug end alcohol use at the concert.

Donald A. "Pete" Napier, director of the War Memorial, said he had heard of Mulroy's decision, but did not have the official wording and declined to speculate on how the law would be enforced.
The new law will give Napier the authority to waive the ban for various events at his discretion.

The county's decision has already prompted three cancellations. Eddie Money, Santana and Supertramp have decided not to play in Syracuse at the War Memorial.

Due to his concern about legal problems that may result from a smoking or drinking ralated injury, County Execurtive John H. Mulroy signed a measure that will ban smoking and drinking at moiroy signod a measure that wiul ban smoking

By Larry Jalowiec
An office funded by the United Auto Workers has been set up at 167-169 Marshall Street to aid the umionization efforts of Syracuse University support staff employees.
Nancy Klein, a support staff organizer, said the office, located above the Emporium on Marshall Street, will open at 5:30 p.m. today.
Support staff workers, which include secretaries and technicians, number about 900 on the SU campus. A group led by Klein has been discussing unionization since last ppring.
At least 30 percent of collective bargaining cards distributed to support staff workers have been returned, according to Audrey Parman, an inter-national-representative from the UAW.
Collective bargaining cards authorize the UAW to represent employees signing the cards in unionization proceedings.
This is enough to set upia unionization vote, according to National Labor Relations Board rules, but Parman egid the UAW requires about a 60 percent return to call a vote.
Parman gave no indication when such a vote will occur.
Parman and Mary Long, both from the UAW office in Detroit; will staff the local office.
Klein said the office was set up primarily to give the steering committee of support staff workers a place to meet and work on unionization activities. It will be open to all suppoyt staff members who want unionization information, Klein aaid. The office will stay open until a union is get up and alightly beyond that time to organize demands if slightly bey

However, the Student Association Assembly voted last night not to aupport the protest. The Assembly felt the demonstration could be detrimental to students seeking jobs at IBM.

\section*{The needs of the army}

The Daily Orange editorial of March 2 is a simpleminded and unrealintic approach to the problem of maintaining an adequately mized military force.
According to the DO, no "sane person" would choose two years of active duty in the armed services over one year of volunteer work in a national aervice organization. This claim is made without any aubatantistion whatscever. There are many more benefits a vailable to those who choose to aerve in the military, not the least of which is 36 monthis of the least of which is saining.
The DO solemnly affirms that The DO solemny arm to kill is "forcing people to learn to kall is repugnant to our consciences. First of all, not everyone who enters the of all, not everyone who enters the armed services becomes a combat moldier (women, for example, cannoldier (women, for example, carnnot). Second, anyone who has not). Second, anyone who has derious moral reservations about apply for conscientious objector status. Again the DO begs the quescion when it assumes that the military m manpower problems are caused by the fact that most people have serious moral reservations about killing. Actually it's caused by the fact that most people choose not to serve in the military because it does not fit into their plams, or because it is too heavy a personal commitment.
The DO further claims that "ex" cept for the few ingtancea when the cept ior the few instances when the nation's security has truly been threatened, the draft has aiways been h
If this is untrue, then why is it that during the Civil War, when the security and physical integrity of the country were threatened asthey never had been before, there occurred some of the most violent and widespread draft protests in this country's history? Why is it that during both world wars, when the couninvasion or insurrection, the draft was viewed as "necessary and Was viewed as necessary and mission?

The fact is that much more is involved is the question of the popularity of the draft than true threats to the nation's security-the economic, social and pulitical condition of the country plays a much more significant part.
Finally, the DO points out in another article that China has invaded Vietnam, Soviet troops are amassed nt the Chinese border and that "the U.S. is still atraid of the Communists taking over the world." This is a straw-man argument of the worst kind because the concern in the government is not that the Comthe government is nists are ploting to take over the munists are plotting to take over the Worid, but that the ability of the Onited States to meet its inciangs obligations in Europe and Asianing been impaired by the shortcomings of the volunteer army. The posvery real.
It is inconsistent for a democratic government to establish that there is a requirement for a military force of a certain size and for the population to not provide the neceaaary manpower to fill its ranks. The DO Rssumes that this is because of a widespread moral cammitment among the population against war and killing.
We would like to offer another explanation - because this country is at peace, because of post-Vietnam disillusionment among the poptalation with overseas military commation with overseas military commitments, becanse of the agcendancy of the an-called "me dancy of the so-called "me generation" which values self enhancement and materialism over enhancement and materialism over social and political concerns, most eligible people are not choosing to serve in the military.
The inconsiatency itself reasaina. Unfortunately, the DO has cortributed nothing to its intelligent discubsion.

\section*{The union mess}

To the editor:
I take offense at Sharon Franc's letter of Feb. 27. Doesn't she think that there are some support staff members on carapus who are and can be "your own person"? Isn't she aware that complaints have been made to the personnel department by some staff people?
Sonoe support stafif members have been pressured by their peer group to sign the cards authorizing a unionization election. To me it is comforting to know that the personnel department thinks enough of the support staff members to listen to their complaints about such pressure tactics.
I'd like to ask another question. Do We want to live with the union mess officials of our every move, and in creased dues whenever the union officials feel they need a cost of living raise?
I think not.

\section*{Brutal suppression}

To the editor:
I disagree with Robert Wheeler's contention Getter to the editor, Feb. 28) that divestiture is "detrimental to the fight against apartheid," and that investors' adherence to the Sullivan Principles is an adequate reaponse to the racist South African regime.

The Sullivan Principles, which endorse fair employment practices and desegregation, are aimply unenforceable given the vast body of dates xacial eegregation and ine quality. As stated in "Inveatments quality. As stated in Investmenta in South Afncs: A Summary of the Question of Withdrawal and Other Alternatives," a report prepared last year by Syracuse Univeraity'e office of the vice president for public af fairs, "more than a dozen statues remain that inhibit black ancement" in South Africa. sion of bamic human rights and aspirations is a more apt assessment of apartheid. Moreover, the South African Aseembly has moved to specifically forbid the enforcement of foreign corporations' codes of conduct, auch as the Sullivan, PrinAct, 1974; Protection of Busineases Bill, 1978)
In essence, foreign in vestors have failed to affect meaningful change in South Africa by cooperation with its whiterun government. In fact, massive investment by foreign corporations has enabled that government to prosper, a tact which explains South Africa's hearty encouragement of such investrinent. If investors are berious in their intentions to encourage a truly democto do buainess with the present to do
Such divestiture would not be "washing our hands of the situation," but would be a means of economically pressuring South Af rica into abolishing apartheid. Un doubtedly, divestiture would create economse hardahips for blacka a well as whites. But is is significant that most black South African leaders support such an economic boycott in the belief that it woold facilitate liberation.

\section*{A bad stereotype}

To the editor:
On March 5, The Daily Orange printed an article entitled "Pedes trian wrecks auto," by alias Jack Mehov, in which he outlined the tereotype of the JAP (Jewish American Princers). This letter will address istelf to the aubtle form of anti-Semitism at Syracuee Univer sity, which manifesta itself most in the JAP issue.
A person pinned with such a stereotype is considered to be upper middle or upper class, aloof, to appear to have stepped out of Vogue magazine wearing deaigner-named clothes, and finally, is supposed to wear a mask of makeup. The anyone who fits the above des cription.
However, when people think of such a person, they think of the word such a person, a type that is specific to the jewish people. Some people say the Jewish people, Some people say that a JAP doesn't mean a Jewiah person but meanis anybody who fits these people we say bullahit.

Anti-Semitiam has been around for nearly 6,000 years, and the JAP isaue is one more excube for a neverending flow of Jew-hatred, subtle as it is. One can not help but think of the stereotypes promoted by Nazi Germany which, for example, por: trayed fat Jews sitting on bags of money; The person depicted in Mehov's article exemplifies such a stereotype.
This subtle form of anti-Semitimm s a slow form of hypnotigm which trains people to beanti-Semitic. This can be deveatatingiy effective in hard times, because it gives people a scapegoat, which history has proved to be the Jew.
What has been presented in this article has been brought forth to dernonstrate the far-reaching effect of gimple statements, or in this case the term JAP. In general, anybody the texm this term whether or deliberately is promoting or anti demberately: is promoting anas dangerous form of it.
In conclusion, the article "PedesIn conclusion, the articis trian wreciss auto' has made a joke trian wreciss auto has made a joke out of a very serious and real and specifically, the Jewish students on campus.

\section*{Martial law?}

To the editor:
On March 1 at approximately 5:00 p.m., a food fight spontaneously erupted among several diners at Graham dining hall. Needless to say* this action is deplorable and juvenile.
Nevertheless, the action taken by the dining hall management follow. ing the incident was unjustified and, above all, blatantly illegal. Diners, the vast majority innocent, totally uninvolved and devoid of all blame in the incident found that their in the incident found that their patibway for leaving Grabann was blocked "No one is to leave," they

Since when has the university the right to establish martial law? By whose authority were hundreds of paying university atudents literally ncarcerated, for however ehort a perind of time? No security personnel impowered by state and city authorities were presant. Are we to therefore assume that the dining hall manager posaesses executive powers? Are the checkers deputized by the Syracuse Police Department? The State Police? The National Guard?

No!
Ask any university student if they've ever choked down meal in order to moet an appointment. How many of those detained were mad ate for important engagements?
The university already requires all freshmen and sophomores to live on campus, a blatant cenial constitutional rights. I fox one will not stand for being conmined for such a paltry act as a food Gight. I must therefore respectfully diemand a full and public apology to all those studenta detained.

\section*{Senseless statements}

To the editor:
Martta Rose, in her March 1 lettex, spole of her frustration in dealing with a university sacretary, whom she refers to as "some bimbo hemmed in by senneless rules." and a "red-tape worm behind the desk." She also states that "every secretary has her price."

1 think we all tend to treat each other with whatever degree -of respect and consideration we recaive.
If I were to come in contact with Ms. Rose, and she were to treat me bs an wnethical-bimbo-worm, I daubt 1 would even give her the bine of day.

To a large extent, the quality of student life at Syracuse University depends on the quality and diversity of atudent activities on camsity of atudent activines Students have a chance to pus. Students have a chance and preserve that diveraity today by voting in favor of the \($ 4\) increase in the student fee.

What's at stake for the individual student's wallet is a few dollars. What's at stake for all students is the quality and financial survival of their daily student newspaper of their daily student newspaper government to continue to fund a wide range of atudent activities.

One dollar of that increase is earmarked for The Daily Orange, Political football is a game we've ail become familiar. with. One politician aids another, and this support is reciprocated. And while mupportis reciprocated. And while molitical machinery of a democpacy, there are times when a politician should take the ball hirnself and do a little open field running.

Onondaga County Executive John H. Mulroy has been the ballhandler in the recent scrimmage over a proposed ban on smoking and the drinking of alcoholic beverages in the county War Memorial.

And for a while, it appeared that Mulroy might veto a law that would discriminate against young concert goers.

But yesterday Mulroy decided it would be easier to accede to the which is funded by a direct subscription collected with the student fee. On Monday we explained at length why we need that dollar: Virulent inflation has eroded the paper's financial position since the last \($ 1\) hike three position since the last \($ 1\) hike three revenue to take up the slack has reached its limit. With the increase we can improve the quantity and quality of our news and features; without it we will be forced to publish more ads and fewer stones publish more ads and fewer struggle for fiscal survival.
Three dollars will be placed in the fund allocated by Student Association to various student groups to pay the costs of their activities.

As inflationary pressure on the student fee has increased, more and more painful choices have been forced on \(S A\), such as thie complete elimination of UUTV from funding. SA has tried to make ends meet by various methods including sharp cuts in the stipends of SA officials, but the increase is needed if groups with legitimate funding requests are not to be excluded.

While you're on campus today, take a few minutes and vote for the fee increases. It'll cost you a few dollars, but given the choice, we think it's a bargain.

It's not enough to say "other people will vote for it, so I don't people to bother." Even if the increases pass they must do so with at least a five percent turnout, and last year that level of turnout was not obtained in the Senate elections.

While you're at the polling place, vote in the University Senate election for your home college. The students you vote for will be your representatives in the Senate, SU's only campus-wide policy-making body; they'll be your most direct voice in influencing the faculty nembers and administrators who make the policies that affect you.
Vote "yes" on the fee increases today. The quality of student life at SU depends on a stroke of your pen.

bill's sponsors than to hold ta his convictions.
In signing the bills-that bans smoking and drinking at the War Memorial, Mulroy switched to the opposing team, the Democrats. And while that may have earned him points with area voters, he has possibly created more problems than the ban will solve.
Mulroy said he was concerned about legal problems for the counity arising from smoking or drinking related accidents in the War Memorial. This reflects the professed feeling of the bill's sponsors that the youth of Onondaga County must be protected from themselves.
But if the legislators' concern is for the concert goers, why is there a fine of \($ 100\) or 15 days in jail, or both? Ousting an overly intoxicated fan from a concert would serve the purpose.
To enforce the law, T-shirt clad squads of high-school kids will frisk those entering the War Memorial. But will the law be enforced during events that draw an older crowd? Will Sinatra fans have to empty their pockets? Will Mulroy himself have to prove he isn't concealing alcoholic beverages?

And Mulroy's decision did not just put a potentially discriminatory law into effect; it endangered the future of concerts at the War Memorial.

At a forum last month on the proposal, concert promoter Cedric Kushner threatened not to book any more concerts there if the law was passed. Since yesterday's decision, at least three groups-in-Cluding Supertramp, Eddie Money. and Santana - have cancelled their Syracuge appearances.

Syracuse University students make up a large portion of concert goers at the War Memorial, but their opinions have no effect on their opinions have no effect on Mulroy or other Onondaga County legislators. They can't vote when Mulroy comes up for re-election, but the conservative Syracuse residents who supported the bill despite its unenforceability can. despite its unenforceab.
In the end, only the participants won when Mulroy played ball with the Democrats; the concert goers were left on the sidelines. As far as we're concerned, John Mulroy fumbled the ball.

\section*{Raising the student fee}

Today atudents will answer a very important question. They will decide if the student fee should be increased by \($ 3\) from \($ 41.75\) to \($ 44.75\). The question was raised once before and was defeated by 16 votes, out of 2900 cast.

\section*{Guest comment: \\ Dale Cohen and \\ Larry Schulsinger}
The outcome of the vote was due to the lack of information about the referendum available to the students.
This was, in large part, Student Association's fault. No one bothered to tell the studente about the vote or why they should check the box mariced "yes" next to the question. Hopefully, this comment will answermany of thegaps in communication between the SA'sexocutive branch and the a verage etudent living in Dellplain, Day, or that 6-bedroom house on Euclid.
The student fee is used to fund the various campus organizations and ac tivities in which students participate. That means that all of University Union's activities (whether they are concerts, speakers, etc.), all campus publications and moet groupa (athletic, ethnic, or social) are subsidized by the student fee.

the responsibility of allocating the fee in the moat equitable and nititarian manner. Unfortwnately, during the three years since the last fee increase, inflation has hit evexybody. Think about it; when was the last time you could buy anything useful for a dime? Even the New York Times costs a quarter now!

This inflation which has hit you ao hard has severely restricted the ser vices and activities of carmpus organizations. Printing costs have skyrocketed, entertainment is more expensive than ever and the student fee can no longer cover the cost of goods and services which it hat in the past. With inflation spiraling, each group must request a bigeser portion of the fee. Not everyone cain be allocated more Not everyone can be allocated more money and the reault is that you, the atudent, lose.
UUTV last example is the case of UUYV last year. There was simply not enough money available to fund its operabons last Mpring and it was forced to close down. This past fall, it was able to begin again but with a small budget winich hindered its quality. The same could happen to some of the other groups. And worse yet, ticket-prices might have to rise for events. Ome of the best things about Syracuae's campus community is the low-priced entertrinnient programas (e-E.p feature films for a mere \($ 1.50\) at Gifford Auditorium).
One hates to be trite, but as the commexcial saye, "Yon can pay now, or pay it later." Three dollars now means continued grood eervices for little or no price the day of the event. The three dollar increase will not greatly expand services, it will merely allow gromps to regain the high levels of service from which inflation has so rudely removed them.

There are many important things planned for next year, most notably, a teacher evaluation guide. It is important that everyone so out and vote for the increase so that programming and publications do not have to be curtailed by the inflationary crunch. Syracuse has a reputation for its diversyracuse has a reputation for ita diver sity of campus activity, /et's not see that reputation tarnished by vote in Wednesday's election.

\section*{SU libraries economize to offset inflation}

By Namey M. Cratti
Infiafion ignores nothing, not even libtariea. rracuse University Libranies and the librazy at SU's College of Law are no exception.

SU Librariea, inciuding Grnest Stevenson Bird Libcary and the Engineering and Life Science Library received a materials budget increase of alightly mone than 10 percent from the sU administration in July 1978 for the current academic year.

However, Donald C. Anthony, director of SU Libraries, said, "we"re barely holding our own with the inflation rate of 12 to 15 percent a year, which is componnded by the devaluation of the dollar."

Becaume of this, Anthony maid, SU Libraries have had to be "a little more selective" in purchasing materials.

Since 1971, U.S. serials, or materials that are published continually, have averaged a 17.5 percent annual price increage. Prices of hardcover books jumped 11.6 percent in the \(8 a m e\) period.

Serials now take up 62 to 65 percent of 5 I Libraries' budret, according to Metod M. Milac, assistant director for collections.

Milac said that the libraries do not have much leeway to remove serials, but are "very highly selective on new subscriptione."

SU's Law Library, which has been operating on a budget separate from that of SU"s other libraries since December 1976, has albo been hit by inflation.
A. 4 to 5 percent increase in the Law Library \({ }^{\circ}\) budget base, combined with an inflation rate of at least 12 percent, means that the hbrary has lost about 7 percent of its buying power, according to Thomas C. Kingeley, Law Library director.

Referring to a "Literal explosion of information in the law discipline over the last 20 years," Kiagsley satd the outiook for Iibrariea is discouraging. Seriala take up approximately two-thirds of the Law Library's budget.

Certain materials such as Supreme Court opinions are necessary if students and professors are to doany research, Kingeley said. Therefore, a law library doesn't have as much purchasing Rexibility as other research libraries. The lack of purchasing power has damaged the regearch quality of that library's collectiom, he gaid.

The Law Library has had to economize in services also. "We're undergtaffed to begin with, Kingrley said. "We've had to take cuts in our student assistant, or work-study, budget.
"That's hurt us a great deal, because theme students allow us to keep our library open the latest of any libTary on campur."

To help offeet these inflationary effects, SU Libraries and the Law Library welcome donations in addition to the money they receive from the SU administration.

"We have been encouraging law firms to give us gifts of money and booka," Kingsley anid.
SU Libraries are "trying harder to get gifts" Milac said. He cited a group called the Líbrary Aspociates who donate materials or money forlibrary purchases.

The campaign is run by William A. Hider, director for William A. Hider, director for annual funds.

Hider said this year the Parents Fund is seeking support for SU's general annual fund. Money recenved from this campaign will go into the general revenue pool for the university to spend as it sees fit.
Hider said that in the past, the fund has contributed to such projects as the Student Center and the health center.

Hider said the difference between this year's campaign and previous ones is that parents are being asked to contribute to the university in general and not to a specific project.
Previously, the Parents Association has had input into where the money would go.

Hider said "parents have always been instrumental" in contributing to the university "We get some unsolicited donations from parents," especially after Parents Weekend, he said.

The Parents Fund is kept separate from the Parents Office because the office is not mechanics of the project, Hider said.

Hider also said parenta should not feel they must contribute in order to use Parents Office services

Edna F. Einsiedel, associate professpr in the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications, is back on the job again after recently baing granted an exchange visitor visa. Einsiedel is from the Phillipines.
Einsiedel was unemployed for three months last semester when offcials at the Buffalo office of the U.S. Department of Immigration refused to accept a petition filed by Syracuse University allowing her to officially tranafer from her previous teaching position at Kent State University.
According to Henry F Schulte, dean of the Newhouse School, the petition was denied because of the officials' belie that Einsiedel's position at Su would be a continuing one. Her original visa was only granted on a yearly basis.
However, Einsiedel was eligible for the exchange visitor visa which she later applied for at a U.S. Consultant office in Canada. This visa carries a three year limit, according to Virginia Torelli, director of the SU International Student office.
Einaiedel could not draw unemployment, Torelli said. and did not receive any employee benefits or compengation of any kind from 'SU during her absence.

Einsiedel resumed teaching about two weelss into the epring semester. She said she had no problems getting back into her classes.
Eimsiedel can apply for per-t manent U.S: neaidency buty says she has not decided tast this point. At present she thinks ahe will be teaching at SU again next gear.

But an educational program for alcoholics or problem drinkers is being set up for next year, according to Jane Hyde of the office of atudent activities.
Hyde said there is no specific alcoholism rehabilitation program because, until recently, alcoholism Wan not considered a problem among students.

\section*{SU has no help, information programs}

One outside counselor hel ping SU students is Carol Reader, a prychiatric social worker.
Although Reader said there is no one defnition of alcoholism, she describes it as "a progressive disease characterized by progressive loss of control over one's drinling or which has interfered with any area or function of a person's life."
- Many students drink because of peer, academic and farnily pressures, Reader said. She explained that it's harder to determine when a college student is drinking to excess then when an adult is.
An adult may find it difficult to cover up the effects of his orher drinking at work, while a student can find many ercuses for doing poorly in school, Feader explained.
in schoo, Froader explainer in college Aso, a problem drinker in college may not think he is behaving abdrink more in college, she added.

There are warning signs to separate the occasional drinker from the problem drinker, Reader said. One example is the student who is more preoccupied with alcohol-related activities than academic work.
Blackonts are another signal Reader noted. Remembering only bits and pieces of previous ex periences because of drinting can be a very serious gign that the drinker is abusing alcohol.
Other signs include a tendency to Besides help that counselors such as Reader provide, a problem drinker can become involved in the best known rehabilitation program, Alcoholics Anonymous.

\section*{Alcoholics Anonymous}

AA was founded in 1953 by two alcoholics in an effort to stay sober and help others. There are now more than a million members worldwide. Although most are adults, the number of younger members is innumber of younger members creasing as youth alcoholism rises.

The topic is then diecussed by the entire group. Each begins his contribution by reciting his name, adding, "I'm an alcoholic." There is no shame or sorrow in the statements, only an honest acknowledgement of the truth.

Members often respond to the discussion enthusiastically, offering the support and empathy which can

By attending AA meetings and remembering the group's cardinal rule - to stay sober one day ata time - members can hope to remain sober.

Greetings from a 'wild and crazy' kind of cityl Heavens. I think I could write a book Amsterdam is very beautiful and old-worldish. It should be since it is 700 years old. The "houses" extend for the entire block, many with step-gable roofs. They are usually four floors and, as you can imagine. many families live in them. However, since everything looks so similiar, landmarks are hard to distinguish. If I could choose two pords to describe Amsterdam, it would be 'brick' and 'shoe box'. Everything is made of brick and is about the size of a shoe box!
As you can imagine, I've learned much about Dutch culture. For example, asimplething like eating- they use both knife and fork; fork in the left and the knife pushes in the right. It was a. little messy at first, but I've since inastered the technique. I have a lovely family: vader is a minister and moeder is a very good housewife. They are in their mid fitties and so'sweetl It is a very traditional home. Teais taken with breakfast, lunch, and at 4:00. 'KCoffie' is taken at 11 and 8 p.m. Both aremade very differently. Koffie is very strong and thee is made with loose leavies and teabags (those barbaric things) don't exist. And the cups and spoons seem doll-house size. Americans certainly have a grander scale, for everything. Oh yes, I am going to schooll Jacob Obrechtstrast is quite tiny. The staff and our director, Miss Robinson, couldn't be any nicer. I work in the library seven hours a week and am the student representative for the College of Human Development. My classes are okaymuch reading arid a substantial paper for each. Dutch painting in the 17 th Century is my favorite class. One day a waek we meet in the Fijksmuseum and study from the real thing! Tell Wendy it's incredible to look Rembrandt's 'Night Watch' and 'Jewish Bride' and Frans Flals' 'Merxy Tapper', right in the eye. I have a ceramics class: the teacher is the head of the very famous Tichelaar Makkum works (as famous here as Delft is to outsiders). Then there is Intro to the Netherlands, with a vory dynamic and captivating professor. I have learned much about this fascinating culture through him.
Next weekend I'm off to London and Scotland for my crocus break. I can't waitl! Take care. tell ail "hello".

To celebrate Syracuse University's 20th year in Florence, the Division of International Programs Abroad is making plans for a reunion of Fiorence alumni. What makes this reunion special is that it will be held in Italy!
According to Michael Calo, Assistant Director of the DIPA and a former program participant 'once travel arrangements are finalizeq, a letter outining the itinerary and expenses will go out to approximately 2000 people who have studied with Syracuse University in Italy over the last 20 years. This will be a rare opportunity for a diverse group of people to share memories of their student days abroad while rediscovering the Italy of today: The trip will last approximately 7-12-days with a major portion of that time spent in Florence. Once in Florence, DIPA alumni will be treated to some very special events.
The reunion is tentatively being planned for September, Fall 1979.

Twenty-one of syracuse University's faculty members will be abroad during the 1979-80 academic year. An additional twenty members will be teaching and advising students during the summer sessions abroad. According to Haroldi A. Vaughn, Director of the DIPA. no other university's faculty makes such a commitment to academic programs offered abroad for it's students. The university's faculty abroad is augmented through the use of foroign nationals, usually from educational institutions in the host country.
The following Syracuse University faculty have recentily be appointed to serve overseas during the 1979-80 academic

1. What is the cost of a semester abroad? The University wants foreign study to be a practical option for all students. For the average student at Syracuse, a semester abroad will cost about the same as the cost to remain on campus. Students pay regular Syracuse Univ. tuition ( \($ 2,250\) for Fall of 1979) and a program fee ( \($ 1,370\) ), which normally covers outbound travel from New York City, orientation, and boerd and lod ging for the seme ster.
2. I am currently receiving financial aid, Can I takeit withme? Relax! All scholarships valid for use at Syracuse may be used to study abroad. We even have a limited number of work-study positions available. In addition to the financial aid that youmay now be receiving. you are also eligible to apply for special foreign study programs ranging from \($ 100\) to \($ 300\) in value.
3. I'm enrolled in a professional school. Do you have any programes for me? We sure do! In addition to a variety of Arts and Science courses we offer academic options in professional areas such as Management. Architecture. Visual and Performing Arts. Public Communications. Social Work and Human Development.
4. I don't spanis a foreign language. Does that mean I am ineligible for a DIPA program? No. In fact. there are no language prerequisites for most DIPA programs. Students may take language at the entry, intermediate or advanced level while studying abroad.
5. Where do I live? Perhaps one of themost unicuesspects of the DIPA programs is the living arrangement. With exceptions of the London program, students are placed in private homes. This arrangement is viewed as an integral part of the total language/cultural learning experience. Students in the London program may live in a private home, a boardinghouse a.bed sitter," oì theymaysharea flat with other students.
6. How do I apply? Stop by the DIPA at 335 Comstock Ave. (cormer of East Adams) and pick up an application form. The staff at DIPA will be happy to assist you in any vray we can.

\section*{Teacher, performer: Two careers in one}

\section*{Professors pursue a delicate balance}

By Renee Tursi
In the tiny basement room sits a chair, a deak and a single music stand. Sheets of music lie everywhere. On the door is a weekly schedule aheet with no blank spaces.
Inside this room, William Nichols eaches music at Syracube University, Like the other Crouse College music profeesors, Nichols is a performer as well as a teacher. He finds it hard to maketime for both, which is a growing problem for many music professors as well as their students.
"With enrollment being high this year," Nichols said, "I'm finding it more difficult to find the time to prac more My lessons always come first and I do what I have to do.
Nichols, however, does give many recitals and orcheatra concerts in recitals and orcheatra colleges. The noodwind teacher also gives a yearly recital in Crouse.
"I feel a tremendous pressure," he said, "because I know I must keep up my teaching schedule along with the recital preparation."

Despite the pressures, Nichols said he feels he offers his students enough opportunity to see him in addition to weekly lessons
"My students know they can see meif they have a problem," Nichols said, "even if it is during my lunch.
Nichols is a full-time associate professor whereas many members of the Crouse music faculty work part time Many come to campus only a few days a week to teach, which creates a problem for their students.
"My teacher is not around here enough," said Tom Thrall, a fourthyear trumpet student of James Mosher. "If I have a question, I make sure to ask him during my lesson. I won't see him again for another week."
Ken Knox, a sophomore piano student, is taling lessons from Syracuse University Artist-inResidence, Frederick Marvin. Marvin cording to the Crouse masic office.
cording to the Crouse masic office.
He is always too busy to see me, Knox said. "Another drawback is that he is a performer more than a teacher. He can show me how to play a certain way but he cannot explain why I ohould play that way.
According to M. Douglas Soyars, as sistant dean of the kusic school, Syracuse University looks at prospec tive faculty as both performers and teachers.
Many good performers are bad teachers and many good teachers are bad performers," Soyara said. "But I do not feel this is the case here."
Soyars, who also teaches saxophone, said teachers are expected to performo publigh music regularly. He added, however, that performances do not normally conflict with the teaching schedule of any Crouse faculty.

With the present calendar," Soyars said, "the long Christmas break and summer season enable the performers to have ample time for recitals."
Knox, however, said he feels Marvin's concert schedule does interfere with weekly lesaons.
"At times during my lessons," Knox aid, Marvin seems moxe preoccupied with his concerts than teaching me. He is paid to practice and give concerts, 80 the university can say he is from Syracuse.'
This ant of recruitment through public performances creates tensions or some teachers, but not for others Most teachers do not appear to feel pressured by the university to perform more than they wiah to.
"It comes with the territory," said Stephen Marcone, assistant professox and head of the music indubtry cur riculum. "I feel a responsibility toward he university to perform, but I do not feel any pressures. People look at you as a representative of the school, so you play the best you can."
Claninetist and bassoonist Nichols however, does not feel that he escapes the tension of recruitment, which has two parts for him. When he performs, Nichols said, he realizes that he not only represents himself, but also Syracuse University, giving him double pressure.
Soyars admita performances bring attention to the university, but he does not think they are the most important factor in recruitment of students. Soyars Baid he does not believe high school students look at the university for its teachers, but rather fors its programs.

Students who choose to attend Syracuse Univeraity with a particular teacher in mind are a rarer case than the average person realizes," Soyars gaid. "The majority come here for the diverse programs we offer.
With its central. New York State location, Syracuse University lies between two renowned music conservatories. Eastman School of Musicis in Rochester and the Juilliard School of Music is in New_York City.

These conservatories center their programs around performance for the very talented student," Soyars continued. Our students generally graduate into the related music fields, guch as music indusiry or education. Only a aelect few have the talent re quired of a professional performer. came to Syracuse University becauseit came to Syracuse University because it was the beat school to accept them. Was the beat school to accept them: Eastman School, Oberlin College in Ohio, Boston Univeraity and the State University of New York at Potsdam. Neither student chose Crouse with a specific teacher in mind.
"I came here because I wanted a university atinosphere, and not just a conservatory," piano student Jeff Davison said. 'I wanted to take academics along with my music courses."

At Syracuse University, however having time for both academics and practicing can be a problem.
"It comes down to priorities," Davison said. "The students here are serious, and they make the time for serious, and they make the time for what is important. However, the atmosphere is relared and
The music stradent also said the likes the closeness of the school. He said the music students get to know each other well through chamber groups and ensembles who are around all the time really seem to care about the students. They all seem to want us to make oomething meaningful with our music.

For Professor Nichols, the students are of first importance.
"Many of the students are confused about where they are headed in their careers," Nichols said, "They are unsurre of their talent and they see an ungure job market in the future. I can offer them guidance and knowledge simply because of what I've experienced. I want to give them my time to help them in any way I can."

Trumpet player Marcone, who leads the Jazz Ensemble, holds a similar view.

Although my teaching load is heavy." he said, "I try to devote time to atudents in every way. I perform a lot, but I don't let it get in the way. Right now Im worling on a new mnsic industry degree. I want to help the students by way of designing a new students by way of

"After all, the kids are the future," he added. "I want to pass on to them all I know so they can carry on with music."

Dungeons and Dragons: The ultimate fantasy

By Tom Moczydiowskix
Imagine mythical lands of foregts and dangeons filled with trolls and unicorns. Further, imagone creating adventures about these creatures with an added cast of human characters like magicians, clerics and thieves.
If you enjoy envisioning such unreal images, then you have the potential to be a Dungeons & Dragons player.
Dungeons & Dragons, or D& D D, is a fantany role-playing game. And the current fantasy boom due to the success of books like "The Lord of the Rings Trilogy" and movies like "Star Wars, "' has made D&D more popular than ever.
The firstatep in playing D&D is to ac quire one of the various rule books that quire one of the specifics of the game.

Geddes SLD books ranking stocks about seven DisD books ranging from amateur mimeagraphea publicationa to professional few bookstores in Syracuse selling few booksto
After bugin a DeD book players After buying a D&D book, players choose fantasy characters from any number of the existing ones or they make up their own. In the next step; players develop the characters: abilities. The six basic abilities are dexerity, strength, intelligence, constitution, wisdom and charisma.
By rolling three dice, the player determines each ability. For instance, a roll of 18 means a super-powerful ability and a roll of three means a weak ability.
Once the characters are established, the Dungeon Master, the D&&D of ficiator, degigns the ecanario of the game. Then the Dungeon Master aets the ganne in motion by telling the players the intent of the game. This usually involves a quest of some sort, such:an rescuing a maiden or finding a kidnapped prince or a pot of gold.
Once the game is initiated, the plavers set their characters loose in the mythical, world ascribed by the Dungeon Master.
The backsround of D&D characters

Anyone can create the adventures of trolls and unicorns when playing Dungeons and Dregons, a fantasy role-playing game that is quickly becoming popular on campus.
comes from just about every mythology from ancient to presient times. For example, there are characters like the snake-haired Medusa of Greek Egyptian mythology and the mighty Gghter Conan from the mythology of Robert E. Howard, a modern fantasy writer.

According to Edwards, the origins of game was known'ás Chainmail and wat less complex. In 1973, a group called the Castle and Crusade Society Chainmaidean for the expanmion of Chainmail and developed the more complicated fantary game which they called Dangeons and Dragons.
D&D can be compared to a wax game; but it would be a mistalke to call it one. It is different from war games since creativity rather than re-enactment is emphasized, Edwards said. Also, D&D is "unique in length, complexity and adaptability," said DRD player Betay Cronin.
As few as three people can play D&D, but a good game usually involves six to 10 players. There is no age limito on the game. Edwardis said both young and old buy his D&D books.

D&D players seek each other out and form groups mach like bridge players do. The groups meet regularly and continue the game from where they left off at the last beasion

A typical D&D group is the one Cronin belonge to in Shaw Hall. She has been involved in games that lasted as little as four hours. However, other games are drawn-out like the four-month-long game she is now playing. The group sessions, called "dungeons." meana more than Monopoly-type entertainment; they become meaningful experiences for D&D playera. The games are more like reminiscences, memories. Weeks after a dungeon, Ili say to another player, 'Remember that time my ogre killed your pixie? "Cronin aaid.
In playing D&D, creativity and a good imagination are important factors. In fact, Cronin likened the game's essence to the writing of a fantasy novel. "You are an active participant in the creation of a story," she sicipa

The fantasy aspect of \(D & D\) is the main reason ita enthusiasts are drawn to it. "As a D&D character I can do things I wouldn't do as a person," Cronin said.
Another D&D player agreed. "It's an escape, especially from schoolwork, he said. "I can kill my enemies or seduce a princess. All in the bounds of fantasy of course.'

\section*{Ex-Beatle's new album lacks.} inspiration and youthful punch

By Tim King
When any established artist releases a new album, it is deotined to be compared with the axtist's beat. Such is the unfortunate case of George Harrison. The ex-Beatle's lateat release, George Harrison, is a pleasant, well put together album, but it lacks the diversity and youthful punch of his 1970 releane, AlL Things Must Pass.
Since leaving the Beatles. Harrison has gone through some major changes in both his music and his outlook on hife.

His early work, exemplified by All Things Must Pass, was marked by a search for faith. marked by a search for faith, identity, and the meaning of ife. His outlock was often somber, as songs like "Art of somber, as songs like "Art of Dying" and "Beware of Dying and Beware of search for identity caused him search for identity caused him to experiment with different musical etyles, offering a glimpee of the vast potential of his well-ronnded but previously untapped talent. However, in the next nine years he would never come as close to reaching that potential.
The fate that befell Harrison on his next three albums- Liv ing in the Material World, Dark Horse, and Extra Tex ture-is the same one that befell fellow Beatle John Len non: tunnel vision. Both Hax rigon and Lemnon became completely absorbed in one aspect of their life and music.

The 1976 release of "Thirtythree and a Third" signified a radical shift in direction in every facet of his music. Unfortunately, his tunnel vision didn't disappear. He just moved to a different tunnel.
Thirty-three and a Third reflected Harrison's change to reflected Harrison's charge to a positive outlook on life. It a positive outlook on lofe. It and in many ways an improvement over the previous three albums. But he also took a few steps backwards.
On the whole the lyrics were boring. And the instrumental arrangements were permeated by a sterile blandness through overuse of the blide guitiar and basic synthesizer and string arrangements. And though Harrison sounded as if he was enjoying himself, the muzaklike instrumentation prevents it from being the mood album that he was apparently seeking to create George Harrison suffers for the same reasons. Released nearly three years after Thirtythree and a Third, it boests of no great innovation or inspiration.

Perhaps the only change worthy of note is the disco beat of the album's first cut-"Love Comes To Everyone. It is a warm, cheerful, and optimiatic song which seems deatined to be a single. Because of its similarity with his other material, though, it conid not material, though, it conid not be connidered a blatant: "igel! ut."
While the first song is only disco, the next two are downright banal. Not Guilty" is well played and sung but yrically mindless. And HHere Cormes the Moon' is trite in title and approach.
"Here Connee the Bun". wan one of Harrison's finest com positions. The fact that he had o borrow from ita success by stealing its name only strengthens the suaspicion that he is running out of material. And the mone itealf bears more than slight reaemblance to "Pure Smoker" from Thert threeandia Third proviosthat aree banalty mei provingt
When banaisy reigns, it poirr.
The remainder of the album a generally acceptable, bu certainly not lacking in aswe, Even the few songy with creative and poetic lyrics; like "Your Love Forever," give the impression that some of the ines were written for no other reason than the fact that they rbymed.
Harribon's guitar playing is as indistinguishable as his lyrics and is hampered further by his similar use of the slidein nearly every song.
The remaining musicians Andy Newmark (drame), Willie Weeks (bass), Neil Larson (keyboardis), Ray Cooper (percuesion), and Steve Winwood (Bynthesizer and backing \(\begin{aligned} & \text { (Byntheaizer acals) } \\ & \text { vore }\end{aligned}\) competent and pleasing but as distinguished as pages of the dictionary.

For all its faults, George Harrison is by no means a terrible album. Overall, it is really quite inoffensive, although a comparison with All Things Must Pass shows George Harrison is capable of much more. But as long as he is happy with what he's doing and anwilling to experiment, there seems to be little hope that George Harrison's nousic will ever reach its creative potential.

Muddy Waters-the legendary bluesman whose recordings are hoarded by record collectors and rock superstars-is now touring and recording with the cookingest band of his career. Welcome Muddy and his blistering blues into your home on the all-new album, "Muddy 'Mississippi' Waters Live," featuring a guest appearance by Johnm Winter.

Syracuse Stage is now operating out of the 202-sea Experimental Theatre.

Enjoying a "blow, steady growth* since its opening in 1973, the professional theater company "has come to the point where it must move-there's just no place elae to go." Martin said.

Ticket sales cover 40 percent of the company's operating budget, and Martin said she sees "no growth potential in that area mriless we move to a bigger location."

The move ia expected to double current incorne, reducing the need for outside support.
Renovation of the Regent will involve a complete gutting of the intarior, Martion said. It will be replaced with a 450 -geat anditorium with a modified thrust mtage.

Expected to open in October. the new theater may possibly inclade a bar to increase income.

The capital fund will soon launch a mail campaign to solicit money for the removation, Martin said.

EARN OVER \({ }^{5} 650\) A MONTH RIGHT THROUGH YOUR SENIOR YEAR.

If you're a junior or senior majoring in sciences like math, physics or engineering, the Navy has a program you should know about.

It's called the Nuclear Propulsion Officer CandidateCollegiate Program (NUPOC-C for short) and if you qualify, you can earn as much as \($ 650\) a month right through your senior year. Then after 16 weeks of Officer Candidate School, you'll get an additional year of advanced technical education. This would cost thousands in a civilian school, but in the Navy, we pay you.

It isn't easy. There are fewer than 400 openings and only one of every six applicants will be selected. But if you make it, you'll have unequaled hands-on responsibility, a \($ 24,000\) salary in four years, and giltedged qualifications for jobs both in the Navy and out.

Ask your placement officer to set up an interview with a Navy representative when he visits the campus, or contact your Navy representative at \(800-841-8000\), or send in the coupon. The NUPOC-C Program. Notonly can it help you complete college. It can be the start of an exciting career.

\section*{Orange enter new season}

By Geoff Hobson
In the last decade, the NCAA basketball tournament has become a festival of American sports on a par with the World Series and the Super Bowl, appealing to everyone from the grandmother in a rocking chair to the cabdriver on a barstool.

And for the seventh consecutive year, the Syracuse University Orangemen will enter this madness of heart-pounding finishes, Cinderella tearns, sweat-soaked coaches and crying cheerleaders when they play the University of Cheerieaders when they play the University of Regional of the NCAAs in the Providence Civic Center this Saturday.

Because this is the NCAAs, UConn's inexperience, the earlier 74-60 SU win over the Huskies this season and the Orange's dismal showing against Georgetown last Saturday mean as much as a warmup drill without disco.

UConn, which won the ECAC New England cham pionship by upsetting the University of Rhode Island, 58-50, starts three freshmen and two of them are the team's top scorers. It was this inexperience that led to the loss to'SU in New Haven, as the Orangemen slapped on \(s\) bothersome full-court press.
"I don't think they will be as inexperienced as they were the first time they played," SU coach Jinn Boeheim said. "They've been through a season The They've been through a season, but not many of them have been to an NCAA tournament. Only starting center Jeff Carr and one of the startinf guards, Randy LaVigne, (who teams with freshman Clay Johnson) have been to the NCAAs. Buth played their freshman season in 1975-76 when the Huskies were beaten by Rutgers in the Eastern semi-finals.

While only two of UConn's players have played in a total of four NCAA games, the top six men for Syracuse have played in 13 games.
But the Huskies are hoping lightring can strike twice Saturday. In 1976, UConn upset Hofistra in the second round of the Eastern regionals and won the right to face undefeated Rutgers, who beat them in Greensboro, N.C. Coincidentally, the winner of the Su-UConn game will travel to Greensboro on March 16.
In order for UConn to be traveling South, 6'8' reshman sensetion Cormelius Thompson wil have to be on his game. The forward leads the Huskies in gcoring ( 18.7 points per game) and rebounding (9.8) In the SU loss, Thomapson was shut down on superb defense by Louis Orr, who held him to just eight points.

UConn's other high scorer, 6'5" freshman Michael McKay, is averaging 15 points per game out of his shooting-forward position. McKay, who will get his points against any defense, scored 20 against SU.

The Orange will most likely exploit their leading scorer Saturday, Roosevelt Bouie. Bouie scored 21 points against Conn this year and was the major reason for the win. Bouie is coming off a fine 17 point performance against Georgetown and is averaging 15.1 per game.

Dale Shackleford, who will be playing in his fourth NCAA tournament, is avernging 14.1 a game and will probably guard McKay when the Orange play a man-to-man defense. Ort will again cover Thompson and Boebeim has not yet decided who Hal Cohen and Marty Headd will guard in the

UConn backcourt
But all the statistics and thaprevious scores don't mean anything now, bectarse this is the NCAAs.

Although, the aize of Lawrinson frowdes a great view for: athe upper floors, this factwon't appease residents trudging upstairs after a 4 a.m. fire crill.
"Elevators are a definite disadvantage," anid Joe Lozano, a four-year Lawrinson resident. The elevators move quickly when they're working but when they're not, the walk to the upper floors is a lung-crusher.

\section*{DO funding increases}

Cleary said the main reason the polls closed early was a lack of voters. Many people rumning the booths had been on eight-hour shifte and were tired at the end of the day, he added.
The increase in the student fee will allow groups funded by SA to be allotted more money, Cohen said.
Before the elections, the SA budget was \($ 440,000\), Cohen said. The budget requent sabmitted to SA added up to \($ 700,000\). The increase will add approximatoly \($ 31,500\) to SA's budget.

\section*{Preserving a diverse press}

Pity Student Associatign Comptroller Dale Cohen and hii finance board. They face an immense task in allocating funds to the multitude of student groups on campus.
But if the finance board decides to eliminate either Vamtage or: :Report magazine or merge the two, as is currently being discussed, then the campus. community then the cam should be pitied.
The board may take theae actions, Cohen said, because "a strong case could be made that the magazin.

But such reasoning couldn't be further from the truth.
"The only thing we really have in common," said Vantage editor-inchief Eduardo Lopez, "is that we both serve the campus as a whole. are completely differentin editorial policy, format, story selection, and writing style. While Vantage has provided Syrracuse University with entertaining features in a slick magazine format, Report tackles magazine format, Report tackles stated in a Feb. 22 editorial, "occasional muckracking.'

A major difference in the type of service each provides is that Vantage is strictly campus-oriented, while Report ventures into the city and county. For example, in its last issue, Vantage profiled a model studying at SU, and prophesized what the university will be like in the year 2,000. Report, in contrast, featured stories on child abuse, childbirth, and tyranny in Iran.

As Report pointed ont in its editorial "To suggest that Report services is to suggest that the Village Voice, People, and Life magazines, are alike. They're not. magazines Cohen said any arguments that the magazines duplicate services are based on the statement of purpose each submitted to SA. Both describe themgelves as alternatives to The Daily Orange in a magazine format.

You have to go with the stated purpose," Cohen said. "We want to go with what they're anticipating doing - you have no other way of knowing what a new staff will do."
There is a much better indicator. Past performance. Report and Vantage have adequately proven they provide different services. And these statements of purpose were submitted when the magazines first received SA funding. While Cohen does not want to rely on past performance because he fears that performance may not continue, reliance on outdated statements is an even greater risk.

Money is not an issue in the Report/Vantage controversy. "The passing of the student fee referendura lets up the pressure in the minds of many students," Cohen said. "But it's not a question of money anymore." He contends the matter is strictly one of duplication of services.
If Bo, it is now up to the finance board to lay out gôme hard proof. And to be fair, it had better exannine other campus publications, or be open to charges of selective elimination.

For example, a case can also be made that Que Pasa, a publication geared towards Latin-American students, duplicates much of the coverage in Intertwine, a magazine aimed at international students.
But we by nomeans advocate the elimination of any campus publication. Although there may be some overlap in campus coverage, each publication has its own importance and distinct personality.
Competition between-campus media is an absolute neceasity to preserve a diverse and healthy discussion of campus isanes. The campus needs more than a daily paper pus needs more than a daily paper The Record. And it needs Report and Vantage, both of which play a vital role in campus life.
Although Cohen claims that a decision to eliminate either Report or Vantage will be based solely on an overlap of services, Report editors fear their magaxine's past mismanagement may be a factor. Report consistently published behind schedule, losing ad vertisers in the process.

However, editor Brenda Hessney, who assurned office in February, said Report has aince published on schedule. She also claimed Report has kept its costs down by printing fewer pages.
"We're very strong right now," Hessney said. "We're on our way."

If the finance board uses Report's financial trouble as rationale to destroy the newsmagazine, it will again be applying a double standard. Que Pasa, for example, is allocated \($ 3,020\) to put out four issues each year. It has yet to produce one.

Meanwhile, Vantage currently receives \($ 5,501\) and Report receives $5,720.
Regardless of the finance board's decision, Cohen's handling of the controversy has been unwise and unprofessional. While he claims to have made no personal decision yet about whether Report and Vantage about whetherkeport and Vantage duplicate services, he told editors of duphicate services, he told editors of overlap.
Cokien says that by informing the editors of the magazine's "duplication," heintended to "open up the issue" to prepare them for all possibilities.
"I said there was a duplication for the shock value," Cohen said. "I was playing the devil's advocate. I was trying to protect the feelings of friends and expedite things. In retrospect, I wouldn't do it that way again," he added.

As an elected official whose duty is to represent all students honestly, Cohen's actions in this matter have been deplorable. He has no right to lead students on for any purpose - even magarine editors. But what is most important now is what actions Cohen and the finance board take in the next few weeks.

Last night, the finance board had ite first good chance to review Report and Vantage in detail when it heard from Report editors. And tonight it will hear from Vantage. It will make its recommendations Sunday.
The outcome of these meetings will affect us all. Recommending to merge the two magarines or eliminate one of them would set a dangerous precedent, resulting in clumay and arbitrary manipualtion of campus media bv SA.
"I have no desire to censor or to manipulate the press," Cohen said. But such a decision would achieve just that.

On the other hand, the continued separate funding of both. magazines would ensure an independent and healthy alternative press on campus.

And a merger would only result in a mishmosh of conflicting styles and policy. Even Cohen admits that "merging was never a realistic possibility - they're too far apart in editorial policy and format."

He couldn't be more right.

Scott Rohrer for

Just about every upperclamsman in the university knows something that could be of benefit to students of othercolleges. If a few of them were to teach that knowledge in a mini-course, the tudent body would be anuch better off. To teach what you know about something you need to first reduce the material to its bare essentials (leave out the fancy otufi) and explain it in such a aimple way that etudente with no background - in the aubject can understand it. To create the minicourse, only two things are needed: an ounce of initiative and the ability to speak in front of people; both of which are much easier than most atudentes think.
Last November I decided to stop complaining that students in the School of Management lnew very littie about the computer and asked permission to tench them myself. Even-if it means using 12 huge, expensive Naufilus weight training machines to atretch and strain each muscle, one at a time Getting in shape is the idea behind the Nautilus weight training some students use at Syracuse Sports Conditioners, 718 East Washington St.
Robert Earl Rust, parit owner of Syracuse Sports Conditioners, ex plained the difference between Nautilus and other weight training auch as universals and free weights. Nautilus operates on a rotary motion, isolating a singie muscle group rather than the linear motion of traditional weight training involving several muscle gronjes.
Another key to the Nautilus system is the kidney-shaped gearing device in each machine called the cam. The special shape of the cam allows a constant resistance during. exerciae, Rust explained.
The muscles are strengthened and stretched from a fully extended position to a fully contracted one. A participant performs one exercise on each machine for as long as possible When he can no longer perform the exercise he has reached the point of momentary failure.
As soon as a person finishes a set on one machine he moves directly to the next machine in the circuit. "Because each machine isolates a different muscle group there is no need for rest between sets," Rust said.
I decided to take advantage of Syiracuse 'Sports Conditioner's free ' neck program. Starting with the tructed that each machine thise strict form. Moving your body out of place brings other musclesinto play. This defeats the purpose of working one muscle group at a time and cuts for the muscle group; Rust said.
I was sitting with my head and shoulder blades flat to the back of the tilted chatir. In front of me was a T-shaped footpeg. With this peg I lifted metal platen and lowered the lifting apparatus. Wedging my elbows and forearm between the pads I gripped the bar in front of me Wads I gripped the bar in front of me. angle to my upper arm. Ilowered the angie to my upper arm, llowered the apparal were behind my eare
As I were behind my ears
As I repeated the exercise my muscles began to burn and I found it more dificult not to lift my head or push with my forearms. "If it's hur Ling it's working, trainer Bobby Williams explained
Williams explained that each repetition shour it exercised with a fluid motion. It takea about 10 seconds to complete one repetition.
Three or four seconds are devoted to the extension part of the exercise and six or seven seconds are devoted to the contraction end of the exer cise. This full range of movement increases muscle flexibility, something traditional forms of weight training don't do, Williams said.
Reaching for the 12 th repetition 1 kept my back and neck rigid and pushed with my elbows. The final rep was anything but fluid as I shakily moved. the apparatus forward until reaching the point of momentary failure.
Williams helped me bring the bar to my waist then let me experience another Nautilus technique called negative failure.
This technique is used when \(a\) músciè group caimot perrorm the ex tension part of an exercise. The trainer aide in bringing the-apparatus to the fully extenced pocition, then as the weight is slowly lowered he adds reaistance by exerting preasure on the plate and the muscie group.

An SU student stratches and strains 80 minutes a week on Nautilus waight training equipmient to keepin shope:

Rust explained the negative failure technique is often used by women who initially have problems with the extension part of an exercise. "Females can't get a good workout with free weights. The cam geaning allows women to work out
Rust said about 50 to 75 women worknout, at. Syracuse Sports Conditioners out of 350 members. There is one women trainecr
The biggest fear women have is bécoming muscle-bound," Rust said. But he explained Nautilus is a form of exercise anyone can do. "We just have to educate women more,' he continued, "once they are involved they get paychect."

You don't notice how out of ghape you are until you use the machines," said member Judy Neary.

Another woman who has been using Nautilus for a year said, "I started because I noticed I wasn't as strong as I used to be. I wanted to incresise miy endurance."
Syracuse Sports Conditioners has two.-sybtems of twelve machines Worth a total of \($ 40,000\). The cost to use the machines is \($ 98\) for three months, \($ 160\) for gix months and \($ 235\) for one year. Student discounts and group rates are available.

\section*{Book shows merits of self-employment}

By Patti Schuidenfici
When-Dorothy and her companions finally reached the wonderful Wizard of \(0 x\), they discovered they already had within themselves the ability to achieve their goals. All they needed was the man behind the illusion to show thern the way.

According to David J. Morris Jr., everyone in modern society is a traveler in the land of Oz, relying on wizards to do all the things they could do themselves. In his 154 -page book, "You're Off To See The Wizard." Morris plays the role of the little old man behind the curtain, showing people how to be financially successful by developing their own skills. The book is developing their own akilase University available.
Morris' theory is that individuals today are being deceived into thinking they must rely on others - wizards to fill their needs. He claims the only way to maintain one's freedom is by liv ing a "horizontal life"- developing as many marketableskills as possible and woriking toward permanent self-employment. In other words, Morris' ideal is to become the ultimate do-ityourselfer.
"What's happening to us in today's society is that werre being told that we others have to do it for us because thege suings are so complex, Mornimplistic suggest that they whole propaganda program is to try to convince us that all these things are complex, to try to create and things are complex, to try tocreaveand retain wards."

For example, Morris cites people's dependence on carpenters, builders, electricians and plumbers, who must have government licenses to show they are qualined. What these professionals do, Morris lains, is actualy easy, and any person can teach himse to the same skills. In fact, he says in the book, "there is no job in the country that a person with average intelligence and the proper training cannot master within two weeks of directed study; from plumber to brain surgeon to United States President." Morris, according to the book's introduction, has taught himself chimney sweeping, masonry, carpentry, roofing, locksmithing, bartending and at least 15 other skills in the years since he graduated from college. He has used these skills both to save himself money and, paradoxically, to eara moriey by performing them for others.
Learninggand using these "marketable skills," Morris says, is the key to. controlling ones financial situation. This, in turn, allows the-individual to have complete control of his life. In the introduction to his book, Morris says, "Possession of many skills gives an individual access to a continuous money supply. In the future, the demands on the individual to control his personal finances will be progressively more complicated. The only defenge is the continued ability to respond to the marketplace."

The achievement of this financial independence is the major concern of "You're Off To See The Wizard.". Centering around Morris: do-ityourself philosophy, the book offers advice on how to get control of incoming and outgoing money, how to invest wisely, and how to start a business.

Chapters on understanding "Ozonomics," advertising and the powers of non-verbal communication are included to guide the reader toward financial succesa. Far from being a get-rich-quick scheñe, the book advocates hard work and determination as the means for achieving goals. A 50 -page section at the end of the book lists 94 businesses Morris suggests for those wenting to try his theories, recommending that people "acquire diverse knowled ge while testing new fields and skills."

Many of those are fields the average college student might abhor; people working on a degree are not likely to strive toward becoming chimney uweeps, dog groomers, snow plowers, parking lot stripers or worm farmers. Yet the book is directed in many ways toward college students - not to urge them on in theiracadenic careers, but to show them where they have gone wrong. In. Morris' worid picture of deception and antiachievement propaganda, colleges are a prime offender. "For 20 years colleges have been pushing out students who are trained for activities that don't exist," Mortis writes. "General education has become a vast accumulation of unispecialized knowledge leading to nothing concrete. There areno rewards but the grade. Unfortunately, one cannot eat grades."
Moris contempt for college arose out of his own experience. While worcing toward a doctorate after receiving a bachelors degree and a masters in nstructional communications from Syracuse University, Morris found he still lacked the useful skills needed to get a job and make money. Although he admita the college experience may be beneficial for developing social awareness and relationships, Morris describes it as an artificial environment, a business aimed at keeping young people out of the job market and maintaining the you-can't-do-ityourself illusion.
Disillusioned with useless academia. Morris set out to learn skille that would answer the demands of the job market. Through trial and error, trade catalogs, books and courses, Morris developed a repertoire of skills that allow him flexbility in his work. Seated in a room, Morris can look around him and explain how to build each piece of furniture, how to replace the flooring, how to repair a cracked wall. "Marketable to repair a cracked wail. Marketable skils are the only thing that s worth dividual must ask himself 'How' can I ingure my economic survival?"
Even "You're OffTo See The Wizard" is a product of Morris' individual effort, written, published and marketed by himself. Future publishing enterprises include books on building fireplaces; buying homes, roofing, and women in business. Morris also plans to teach a bartending seminar and a course called "Living With Inflation."
To aceusations that his view of life is too money-oriented, Morris replies that it is impossible to enjoy any of the fine thinge in life without gaining control of money.
"I'm not saying you shouldn't learn to play tennis," Morris said. "I'm just gaying you shouldn't play tennis at the expense of not learning to make money."

The program is "aimed between Firesign Theatre and Saturday Night Live," according to writer and co-producer Jeff Bailey. Bailey, along with co-producer Peter Jacobs and other witers and actors, presents Orange Crush on alternating Monday nights.

The show is a group effort," Bailey said. Different ideas are written and rewritten "until we arrive at what we use." Orange Crush is based on the format of short skits, keeping the pace lively and changing because, Bailey said, "many listeners don't sten the full time.
The Orange Crush Half-hour Hour was initiated by Jacobs and Bailey as a rebirth of the old Orange Crush humor magazine, which was published sporadically for the past few years. It finally auccumbed to financial problems last year. Bailey said they approached WAER with the idea for a half-hour radio comedy show, and "they, were pretty favorable." The show has aired three times so far, and will probably have three more episodes this semester.

Although the group has had few problems producing the show, listener response has been too limited to tell whether the show is successful, Briley said. "We need more feedsuccessful, Bailey said. "We need more feedback," he added. "We encourage as many people as we can to listen in. We've got pornething for everybody."

Many stadents currently living in Syracuie University coops never applied to live there.

Rich Camarra, treasurer at Peck, an all-male co-op, said only two out of the 15 students living in Peck applied for co-op housing. Angela Moody, resident ad viser at Hafts co-op. an all-female residence, said the majority of the girls she lives with are transfers who were placed in a cooperative living arrangement by the university.
Cooperative housing is an alternative to dorm and apartment life.

Students living in co-ops take turns buying food, cooking dinners and taking responsibility for light housekeeping chores: Hafts and Peck currently house 37 residents.

Lack of student interest is due to poor publicity, according to David Kohr, agsociate director of residence services. Co-opa have the highest vacancy rate of all SU Area housing, Kohr said.

Instead of living in a co-op, many atudents looking for an alternative to dorm living choose to rent their own houses with a group of friends or join fraternities or sororities, Kohr added.

Kohr also said co-ed cooperatives may be increasing in popularity, but there were no plans to change any of the co-op arrangements in the near future because there is no demand from the students.
Camarra said he would be interested in co-ed co-ops and that it would be easy to ac commodate this arrangement in Peck. Moody also said that a few girls have expressed some interest in Haft's becoming co ed.
Camarra also said that he was. concerned about the future of Peck. Camarta was afraid Peck is doomed to become a parking lot when the domed stadium is completed.

However, Carol Heagerty, vice president for institutional gervices, said she had not heard a thing about the parking lot; and that it probably was an eatimate on the student's part." Heagerty also said that she doubted the task force checking into parking facilities for the new stadium would recommend tearing a building down.
The cost for an open double in either Hafts or Peck is \($ \mathbf{$ 4 3 5}\) a semester, \($ 120\) less than an semester, Souble in a large residence hall.

\section*{Few campus crimes reported over break}

By Jack Berger
Week-long vacations usually produce a rash of crimes on the Syracuse Univergity campua. But this year's spring recess proved to be un exception, according to Johar C. Zrebiec, director of security.
The university was "fortunate" in that there were few crimes reported on campus during the break, Zrebiec said. Sandra Tuggle, a freshman n the School of Management, pad her Flint Hall room foken into between March 10 nd 18. Missing from her 500 m os a camera, a set of lenses od hash equipraent There ere no signs of forced entry Ad Tuggle's door was locked pon her return, Zrebiec said. No other ircidents were eported at any other dornitorien, fraternities or Prorities: There ware elso no ports from the Vincent partments or South Campus fusing.

Two apartment buildinge in the 600 block of University Avenue were vandalized during the wreek The Seneca Apartments were broken into three times and the Lehman Apartments once.
On Saturday, the security department caught two feroale students trying to broak into: Erig Seneca Apartinentis The caase was turned over: to Student Affairs: A jacket and a clock-radio were taken from two different rooms at Seneca, both with locked doors.
At Lehman, \($ 450\) worth of merchandise, including a calculator, radio and ekian were taken. Syracuae police and SU Safety and Security are continuing the investigation.

The offices of The Daily Urange were burglarized on March 9 and 11. The vandals took approximately \($ 300\) and broke into the soft drink machine.

\title{
Dire Straits: Will this band sink or swim? \\ By Greg Young
}

Although Warner Brothers Records recently announced plans to limit releasea by new, untested acts, that company seem hapy with ecs of that company seem happy with and its debut album of the same name. Led by guitarist/ginger/songwriter Mark Knopfler and his brother David, Dire Straits presenta' life in the backatreets of London in a manner often resembling that of Bruce Springsteen. The band's sound is mellow and rather restrained, owing to Mark Knopfer's gruff lead voca country-rock influenced guitar.
While the album is sound and enjoyable overall, it. nevertheless seems too restrained and lacking excitement when heard the first time. Vocailty Knopfler closely resembles ant times Bob Dylan - articulated at limited in somewhat cymicallin, bunsity. However, terms of range and intensity. Howill not once the istener real shout, and once hear overn she falls into the mood, this becomes not so much a shortcoming as adistinction.
The obvious strength of Dire Straits lies in Knopfler's excellent guitar work, which one cannot help but compare to some of Eric Clapton's recent (and better) country influenced lines. "Setbing Me Up" and "Southbound Again" with their mellow, uptempo, blistering guitar tracks.

This excellence is even more apparent on the highlight track of the parent on the highlight track of the album, "Sultans of Swing," which has been receiving heavy FM airplay.in is totally Springsteenin an Engliah setting:
"You step inside, but you don't see too many faces, Coming in out of the rain to hear the jazz 80 down. Way on to hear the jazz go down. Way on downsouth way on downsouth London town:

Down to the Waterline" is another highlight of the album, featuring those same. suggestions of Dylan and Clapton, but with a little Lou Reed or other whisper-iike vocals thrown in. Again, the story is ifice one of Bruce's, referring to jetties, jackets and torn jeans, French kisses, cold hands, and warm lips.
"Six Blade Knife" is a haunting, quiet track, featuring a guitar that lays back throughout, buraing to the foref many ways, this track characterizes many ways, this track characterizes the entire bibum - consistent, with prominent bursts of interest which pop up without warning.
It must be noted, howeyer, that Knopfler's finest and quickest guitar solos do come in most of the right places-even if they did not, they would be fine enough to warrant merit.
However, some question remains as to how far Dire Straits will be able to ex tend itself in its low-key vein, without letting loose for a rowdy time every once in a while on future albums.

\section*{* Sadler/Lawrinson offer diverse dorm /fiving}

Perhaps due to the number of upper classmen, Lawrinson is rather quiet compared to other dorms. Students do get rowdy. such as during the all-dorm International Christmas party last December, but these large parties are elatively rave
"It's a lot quieter this year than last ear," White said. "It's good because ou can get more work done, but I lificed better when everyone was more frien
'Though it can get rowdy, it's quiet mpared to other dorms," obser In facilities, Lawringon does Ovide as much as many dorms pack bar on the first floor was closed is year due to money troubles, and a me room has only recently reopened ter being locked up all year. The cond fioor has a library and a special traction, a large-screen television. hadler Hall has eight stories, with peh floor housing men and women in The Hospital," it's not very attractive om the outside. looking like a aphazardly-placed pile of bricks. It's etter from the inside, if you like cinderlock living. Iock living.
"It's not the ugliest dorm, but it's certainly not a esthetically pleasing." Hershenhart said.
Sadler is about evenly divided between split and open doubles. There are about a dozen singles.
The dorm is 50 percent freshmen, but this still provides for a mix of clasees: The two wings on each floor join cogether in common loange and to more use than the lounges inr Lawrinto mor

Sadleris not a rowdy dorm, butit's no library atmosphere either. Dave Waldman, Sadler dorm director, said, II don't think it's extreme to either end. It's a bunch of people with good heads on their shoulders.'
"I wouldn't aay it's rowdy, but we've had our share of lively times," Herhad our share
Sadler has more facilities than Lawringon, with a large first floor Lawrinson, with a large first floor lounge, a weight room, library, study lounge, meetin
However. Sadler is not using its facilities to its fullest potential, according to Hershenhart. She men tioned the weight room as an example.

Waldman also said the facilities could be developed much more.
A dining hall is located downstairs in Sadler, convenient for those residents who don't have to ventureinto the cold to eat. Lawrinson residents must brave the wind tunnel, a walk which is short but can test even the heartiest of souls on a cold winter day.
Thediniperoom is a lot nicer than any of the others," Lozano adid. "Brockway is like a cave and the others are too much like cafeterias.
Sadier Dining Hall is carpeted, and even Jeffers, who said he is moving to an apartment next year because he's sick of food service meals, admitted the food was better than in most other dining halls.

Sadler and Lawrinson are fairly accessible to academic buildings. "It's away from the campus yet close Enough to be convenient," said Sandy Freund, a Sadler resident.

This acceasibility was damaged somewhat with the demolition of Archbold Stadium. The stadium steps, which provided quick access to the quad, have been torn down, though many students continue to climb upthe hill through mud and machinery.

\section*{Brewster/Boland offers generous facilities}

econd-year Boland resident Barbara Nagle.
"At least you're not cinder-blocked n," said freshman Michael Downey, eferring to the construction of other lorms.
\(\mathrm{B} / \mathrm{B}\) also has the reputation of being uieter than many other dorms being fersse, than many other dorms. John ersse, third year Brewster resident, aid this year every floor is quiet, exept for the fourth and eighth.
Eighth floor residents tore down peir toilet atalls last semester, and one ighth floor reaident attacked the Wenth floor with a fire extinguiaher. With the exception of the first floor morm students in Boland consider their ormpus. Frashin Frashman Cindy Bearse, a first floor pland rentident, said "our floor is a Uernoon, but mostly yock music in the ouble rooms with loci B/B offers open Hany studenta uee their carrole to Gouse extra beds or refrigeratores, and nooms. une them as music practice Many Morriod. reaidents cite facilities such as yorried.

Abdo's Market as an advantage. Abdo's is a small grocery located under Toomey-Abbott Tower, the retirement center adjacent to \(\mathbf{B / B}\)
Also, Brockway Dining Hall is considered by many to be the beat dining hall on campus. It offera made-to-order crepes and omelets during lunch time. No otber dining hall has this service.
"I think Brockway is good compared to Kimmel and Haven. They are the pits," said Edna Fontaine, a ophomore.
"It is the beat dining hall. You just can't compare it to the others on campus, said freahman michael Downey. Although the atmosphere inside the dorm is quiet, the neigh borhood outside is just the opposite. The dorm is located in a poor neigh borhood where the crime problem is serious.
Several residents of the neighborhood have been seen in \(\mathbf{B / B}\), esidents stid.

It'e getting to the point where I am affaid to walle to Abdo's, day ornight,' Wid Eidna Fontaine, a Eophomore.
concerned about the neighbor were Brewnter refidionth noemed to be leas
"We put up with the bad neighborhood," said freshman Richard Roseman. "Syracuse ian't that great of a city to begin with. We keep the door locked."
. Other residents complained that \(B / B\) is inolated from the campus community.
"One thing I don't like about this dorm is that it's secluded from the rest of the university. You have to walk a ways if you want to get amywhere:" said B.T. Oakley. Boland sophomore.
B/B is also unique in that it offers single-sex dorms with ahared facilities: Students can enjoy the company of the opposite sex at Two Below, Brockway Dining Hall and in the lounge while maintaining privacy in the living quarters.
"I think the system is good," said freshman Pam Tuzzi. "Guys are great to have around, but you can lick them out when you want to.'
Brewnter resudents seemed more apathetic about the single-tex atature, however. Bill Link, who has lived in Brewster for four years, asid he doesn't think the arrangement is much

Construction of the Carrier Dome will also be a major disadvantage to potential residents next year. Hendricks Field, a grassy plot used for recreation, located between the two dorms, has been committed for use next year as a staging ground for machines and trailers.
'Who's'going to want to live here with a six-foot chain link fence surmachines: the field and all making noise?" White questioned. How much of a liability the noise factor will be remains to be seen.
Crime might also be seen as a drawback to the Sadler-Lawrinson living experience, due to the Henry Street ing experience, due to the Henry street is not one of the best neighborhoods in is not one

However, most atudents said crime hasn't posed too much of a problem except, ironically, in the Lawrinson parking garage, which has been the acene of many car break-ins and was frequented by a sexual attacker this year.
Dorm living may not be for everyone. but for those who want to give it a try. residents of the dorms feel that Lawrinson and Sadler Halls offer two fairly good alternatives.
different from a coed dorm.
"The girly aren't that far away," he said.
Others do not like the single-sex ar rangement. One girl moved from Boland to Dellplain last Bemester, giv ing the reason that "the guys are too far away."
While the living arrangements at \(B / B\) are popular with the residents, the intanous "103 Steps" leading to the Quad are anything but popular.
The steps bother me at times. especially Monday morning at 8:30, said Sarah Weing, a freshman.
During the winter months the steps become icy and fall apart. Physical blant is not friahed shoveling the steps in the morning and many students with morning and many students with \(8: 30\) classes have to trudge up the steps through the anow. Despite the bad neighborhood and the " 103 Steps," moat \(B / B\) reaidents seem content with their living ar rangement. Summing up the feelings of rangement. Summing up the feelinge it here. I wouldn't be worth taking the chance to move"

\section*{Penn＇s Ivy poisons SU Final Four hopes}

GREENSBORO．T．Brady Headd stood at the podium at a press conference following Syracuse Univer－ gity＇s NCAA becond－round win over the University of Connecticut．Someone asked him how SU would prepare to play North Carolina in the Eastern Regionals，and a grinning Headd get by Penn first．＂Ripples of laughter glled the room．
A week later，no one was laughing． The University of Pennsylvania had indeed beaten third－ranked North Caroinns to qualify for the regional seminginals and the Quakers went on to 84.76 upset of the Orangemen Friday night here at the Greensboro Coliseum．
The Orange descended on Greensboro with viaions of Salt Lake City（where the NCAA Championships NCAA championship，particularly since Ahantic Coast Conference powers North Carolina and Duke had been upset by supposedly inferior been upset by supposedly inferior Eastern teams But the acene Friday nught against the Quakers represented just the latest chapter in a story that Thas become all too familiar for Snatans． ranking and impressive 26 －3 record with them，but were simply outhustled， outsmarted and outplayed by a Penn team that hadlurkedin the obscurity of went on to win the regional cham－ pionship．
When the weekend had ended，it was the Quakers who were headed to Salt Lake City，while for the third straight year the favored Orange returned to Syracuse the Salt City，a land without glory，without a lake，and without an NCAA championship tour－ nament．
Friday＇s game started auspiciously enough for the Orangemen，as they minutes remaining in the first half behind a combined 12 －point output from center Roosevelt Bouie and rallied to tie the game at 20 two minutes later，the Orange lost what was to be their last lead of the season．
If anyone still suspected that Penn＇s upset of Carolina was a fuke，that notion was quicky dispelled，as the Quakers，leading 26－24，iterally ran off a \(20-5\) tear that left the Orange in what coach Jim Boeheim later aptly called ＂ach big hole．＂

\section*{Quick guards}

At that point，with 2：10left to play in Orange were left gasping and beaten． The astorishing aspect of Penn＇s streak was that the Quakers had out run a Syracuse team that one newspaper called＂the only rumning
The Quakers obviously had other ideas，as the mercuric guard tandem of Bobby Willis and James Salters blew by slower SU guards Headd and Hal Cohen at every opportunity，beating the Orange doy．

There are very few teams as quick as we are，＂Salters asid．＂We defnitely thought our guards were quicker than theirs，and we just kept taking it to them．Our forwarda knew to let us take charge and let us take more shots than urual，and it paid off．＂
By half time，the Guakers led 50－37． Like a group that had juat been overrun by a herd of jackrabbita，the atanned by a herd of jackrabbita，the atunned otaggered to the lociker room．
＂Our offense could have been better， but it was the defense that got us beat in the first half．they scored 50 points， Boeheim said．＂They are the first team that has beaten us up the court this year．When you do get yourself in a hole like that．it＇s hard to come back． especially against a amart team．Penn is a very good，smart basketball team．＂
While it was primarily Penn＇s apeed that put the Orange in the hole，SU did its best to helpdig themaselvew in．A firat Syracuse，as did Orros absence with his third personal foul with 10：38 remainimg．Oxr had held Quaker atar

Tony Price to four points，but the \(G^{\prime} T\) forward exploded for 10 more after Orr＇s departure．The Orange were also unable to work the ball in to Bouie after his early inside dominance．

\section*{Toolate}

But perhapa the most damaging blow to the Orange was the play－or lack of play－of SU captain Dale Shac－ kleford in the Grst half．Shackleford， despite logging the most playing time of any Orangemen with 19 minutes， might as well have been at the airport waiting for the flight back to Syracuse． He scored two points and had one rebound．
In tho second half，Shack was back． but it was too late．Suddenly beginning to take charge in the last half－game of his collegiate career，Shackleford scored 14 points（ 6 of 8 from the floor） and added four assigts as the Orange made a final run at the Quakers in ffort to regain some lost dignity．
ontention as a full－court into contention as a full－court press second half turnovers．The Quak 15 second half curnovers．The Quakers superior quackness was atile evident as he Quaker guards had little trouble Benetrating the Syracuse defense，but Boure rose up to awat the ball awny with four blocks．When Price sat down Orange down \(65-67\) ，and 9,021 apec－ ators in the half－empty Coliseum seemed to senae the Orangemen were about to make one last push for Salt
With 6：50 left．Headd hit two foul shots to put Penn＇s lead to five，69－64 and the Orange had the chance to get even closer when Moss lead a threeron－ one breakaway．

The big play
Then came the play that symbolized the difference between the Orangemen and the Quakers，the play that could have put the Orange down by only three．．．THE PLAY．Mons decided to keep the ball himsolf on the drive，and leaned into the lone Penn defender enough to be called for a charging foul． His shot went in，but it was disallowed． The foul was Moss＂fifth，and in losiag him，the Orange lost the only player who could help neutralize Penn＇a quickness．
Moreover，the play demonstrated the quality many saw as the difference between SU and Penn．The Quakers have been praised by nearly all those who have observed them as a＂smart＂ basketball team．No one has accuaed Syracuse of possessing this same quality．Instead the Orange have ac－ quired a reputation as a team with superb physical talent：In this case，SU tried the＂physical＂rather than the ＂smart＂play and played a physical rather than a bmart game．．leaving the court lowers，instead of winners．
After the charging call，guard Mark Cubit was whistled for two consecutive fouls，and after the second，Penn was awarded two consecutive one－andone opportunities．Cubit＇s first foul had opportunities．Cubits frst foul had pushed the Orange over the tanm ovimit， the shots werlooked not awarded until after the shots were not awarded unin after calmly converted both opportunities for the maximum four points to douse whatever flickering Orange hopes remained．The Orange，once nearly within three points，now trailed by nine．
Hall converted three more one－and－ one chances down the stretch，and Saiters made sood on two，as the Quakers finished the game ahooting 22 of 26 from the foul line．In contrast，\(S U\) shot 12 of 23 ．
drove down the lane with authority and conviction，the expression on his face combination of anger，fristration and determination．Shack lammed the ball through the hoop vicioualy，bs inging the Orange back to within ti pointa．

\section*{＂Grodi＂season}

It was too late．The Orange han awaken from the furst half nightrnan and fought back，making the Quaken lose their composure at times．But ibe effort was never quite enough，the by play and the big shot were never ramde and the chances were never really grasper．When the buzzer sounded， horde of ecstatic Penn fans swarma onto the floor，while the team mam had predicted would win the regiom had the floor beaten．
＂The two things that concerned me all year were our turnovers and our fire throw shooting，and that＇s probabl What did us in tonight，＂Boeheim aaid We had problems with their two quic vear lang Edevie（Mones crouble all year long．Edilie（Mosa）can handl
＂Rosie did other gives us trouble＂
Robie did an unbelievable job of protecting the basket in the second half，not ao good a job in the first holf，＂ second half，but he just couldn＇t get it going in the first half．By the time by got going，it was really too late．
The feeling of disappointment in to SU locker room was mingled with macer tain aense of satisfaction as piayera congratulated each other for a＂good season＂－and a good semen it had been．
But，because of what happened Fr： day might，it was not a great season． Like a man taking a bite from a andwich and getting all bread and no meat，something was missing．The 28 wins，the national ranking．the in－ pressive reputation－everyone seemed to talk about how good the bread was－ obviously it was a lot easier than remembering that the meat was tmis sing．And perhaps it was that fas－ cination with the bread inaread of hunger for the meat that kept a good team from being a great one．
Penn was hungry，not just for the NCAA titie，but for respect and for mere recognition．Quakers supporters wore buttons that stated：＇Penn：It＇s no longer a secret．＂Especialy not in people will be talking about that secret for a long time to come．

PROVIDENCE，RII
PROVIDENCE，RL－Virtually \(n\) one knew about Penn，however，when the Orange faced the University of Connecticut Huakies for what everyon thought wond be the night to fact North Carolina in the Eabtern Regionals．And while everyone seemed to be talling about the Tar Heela before the game，by half time，South Caralina was mentoned more often．
No，South Carolina wras not involved in any post－season tournament，but the way SU manhendled UConn in the first half，of the second－round conter reminded everyone of a similar stretch of near－porfection earlier this yes againat the Gameockes at Madus Square Gardern．
The Orange ueed a lightning－quic fast break to storm by the young Hy liea．SU never trailed in the conte after an early 22 tie，and at one pol rolled up a 25 －point lead at \(45-20 \mathrm{w}\) ． 4：24 left in the firmt hate．

Yet one thing everyone remember about the South Carolina game that the Orange becaune mioppy the big first half lead（17 pointa in bo games）and had to fight to stave oll然解的d half Gamecock charge．Tt The Orange managed to holdy everal UConn rallies，but the Hu oventually managed to pare SU＇s． hugelead to four points with 26 secu lehim and tovie reverge thamd at the burzer gent to Oramge on theith fated trip to Greensboro．

Editor's note This is the third segment in a 10-part series examining student housing at Syracuse Univeraity.

By Scot French
While most dorms have a good mix of freahmen and apperclassmen, Watson and Kimmel/Marion Halls offer the extremes in class Only
Only eight of 364 Watson residents are freshmen, while esse than 20 percent of Kimmel/Marion residents are upperclassmen.
Many Kimmel/Marion residents choose to live there because of the location. The dorm's location requires only a short walk to Marghall St., Bird Library or the Quad.
After a year, however, many Kimmel/Marion residents move to Watson for the equally good location and opportunity to live with other upperclassmen.
Wateon residente like their dorm for the same reasons a person likes an overstuffed easy chair - they know it's ugly, but it's too comfortable to rade in for a new one.
Residents of the four-story brick building say it is as close to apartment living as one can get in a reaidence hall: Suites are a big attraction for those used to cubicle-sized rooms.

Watson also has aingle and open double roorms and is coed by room on neariy every foor. Most desion posaibilities many design possibilities. However, the desks and bulky piece, which tends to buiky piece; which tend Residents sense a friendlier atmosphere in Watson than in other dorms, and that feeling other contrib, and to a high has contributed that a rate and the low percentage of freshmen it is harder to get a lottery than other dorms.

A grassy courtyard separates residents of the building's east and west winga, and a main lounge at one end connects them. Both the coartyard and the lounge are used often by residents in socially active dorm.
Sophomore Dave Goren, a fixst year reaident, said he Ends the people in Watson downto-earth, and that is wh he plans to stay next year.

of strdents come and go. Bill Van Houten has made his home on the hill since 1968, when hewas 16. With his long, scraggly, brown hair, skinny body and old clothes, he blends into the bohemian atmoaphere: He is a veteran of the late '60s' and early '70s when MStreet was not only populated by atudents and merchants, but was a haven for the counterculture-the long hair, the drugs, the radicalism and the so-called politics of liberation. For 11 years he has watched the times and the faces change, sometimes an an active participant, sometimes as a passive obecrver.

Bill's Syracuse University is different from the one in the university's promotional brochures. It is different from the university the chancellor and the board of trusteen discuss in their ofnces. For someon
For someone who has lived for so long in the shadow of the university, Bill has little to say about it. "What do I think of SU? I feel the same way about them as they do about me. They'reas absent as I am," he says.
Until recently, Bill was an employee of the university. As a "spider," he worked in the stockroom of the university bookstore, which is known to the employees as "the web." Bill spent eight hours every weekday sorting books in the web, hidden from the gaze of bookstore management and customers. Although he has worked there for nearly a year, he earned only about \($ 3 \mathrm{an}\) hour, fractionally more than the minimum wage.

Yet Bill survives, just like he survived the street life of the '60s. He takes a drink of dark beer and recalls the past.

The parents and politicians took a look at what was coming down on this hill and knew they had to do something, so they started tearing down the houses and making parking lots. That's their idea of how to get rid of the undesirables."

Bill talks about a building that was his home for'a while in the late '60s, 505 S . Crouse Ave., which has long since been torn down
"There were three main apartments in that building. Apartment number one was full of a bunch of prostitutes and drug dealers who used it to do business and send their people out on the street. Apartment number nine was a crash pad, an open house, and it was always full of atoned crazies packed to the rafters with weirdos. The other apartment, was mine; I had a bed in there. A recommendation to allow provioualy ineligible Syracuse University employees to acquire a different retirement plan was passed at yester day's Univeraity Senate merting.
If approved by the administration, the propoaal will allow SU support taff employees to be covered by the Teachers Insurance Anvities Association and the College Retirement Dquity. Fund. Currently only faculty, designated administrators and exempt library staff are on TIAA/CREF.

According to Phyllis Kent. chajrpermon of the sub-committee on services to the faculty and exempt staff support staff employees are currentily on the university retirement plan, which does not allow for as many benefite as TMANCREF:

The admimistrintion will review the propoand and may malce changes from the original recomprendation, Kent

The Sennte also approved a list of 16 cancidtate for honorary degreed. The honorees will receive their degrees at commencement exercises in May.
Juanita Kreps; United States aecretary of commerce and Bishop Bennie Warner, vice president of the Republic of Liberia, were two of the people selected by the commities on honorary degrees.
The committee also submitted the name of Boyd E. Golder, former mayor of Utica and past Utica College Foun dation Preaident. Golder died last November.
However, Senate by-laws require each person receiving a degree to be present at the commencement ceremonieg.
Tadeus Janowsli, chairpereon of the honorary degree committee, said the faculty and preaident of Utica College requeated that Golder be considered for poethumoug degree. It will be up to the adminintration to decide whether this request is granted, he said.
The Senate also passed a proposal establishing a ono-year certificate mogram in computer science at Utica College in the fall of 1979 .

The program will train stadents for lower level positions such as computer operator, coder, keypunch operator and programmer. Utica College currently offrers a four year program preparing students for either professional level positions in computer science of Eraduate programs.

Also, Otway Pardee, chairman of the agenda committee, announced the creation of an ad hoc committee to look into problemat caused by the building of the Carrier Dome.

In view of last year's masaive demonstration in support of the anion briilding, it is incumbent upon us specially the senior clase, to follow through now that a viable and realistic plan has been preaented which may accomplish what the demonstration was all about.
The point here is not to advocate blind acceptance of the proposal. Be cyaical. Lord knows it is a time for a critical look when Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers refers to the pledge plan by saying, 'I believe thia is a workable plan and a good one."

\section*{An unfair attack}

To the editor:
The recent Daily Orange editorial "Premerving a Diverse Press," in the course of making a valid point about the future of campus publications, went one step too far when it madea buzz worded attack about the antagonist in the controversy, SA Comptroller Dale Contro

Instead of limiting their statements to the future of two campus publications, Report and Vantage, and their future in the upcoming budget hearings, Marics and Rohrer instead took it upon themselves to attack the competence of Cohen. What Cohen sought to do was to inform the staffs of both publications of the options they might be confionted with during the budgetary process, at a time whon such things as the future of the student feeincrease wera very much up in the air. He touched a very men gitivo-nerve with both groupery but at least gave them the opportunity to form an opinion before the fact.
To call the giving of this common courteay "deplorable" is in itself depiorable. Would theae groups and other interested students have preferred that he wait until midway during the finance board hearings before he told them of aomething that would have happened after the fact How "deplorable" would that have been?

this figure, ono-half would come from alumni who pledged as graduating saniors and one-half would come from alumani contacted by letter. The Union Project is expected to account for onethird to onethalf of the final cost, ac cording to Dale.
It will be a difficult task for the senior committee to attract their gral of 1,000 pledges in the two and one-half months before graduation bat they intend to make it. "This year my expectations are not very high because we started in February," eenior committee member Brian Cooke said. "Over a five-year period, though, this plan will be tuccessful."
The premise behind this plan is that it is easier to obtain a financial commitment now than hater at leas when a union building is involved.
Until this proposal was derived, the administration found that alumni were plainly not interested in donating towarde a Student Union. It is more prestigioas to give money towards a prestigioas to give money towards a new acadernic building, endowed chairs, renavation of older structures, and ao on. A union may repreanit the frivolity of youth to some alumni who view a college education much more serioualy than we do - and even more seriously than we do-and even more suriously

At present, we can relate more easily to the need for a Student Union than we will in the future. Peranps this is the administration's ulterior motive for attempting this project; it is a gamble on their part, to be aure, but a well-thought-out gamble at that.

There have been many complaints citing problems in the pledge program. cinng problems in the pledge program. cymics aee the studenta getting taken or cypped-off in various ways.

The biggest problem is to take the time out to learn what it (the pledge plan) is all about," said Dale.
It may be tempting to complain that the administration expecta the students to pay for something they shouid not have to pay for. Stadents. however, will never pay a cent towards the project; only SU graduates will contribute money.

There have recently been two letters to The Daily Orange expressing op poaition to the union project. In one, the writer infexes that the pledges are being paid to the administration to une as they see fit
This ia not the cabe. Rather, the plodge whonld be viewed as a payment of the studente of tomorrow. They are the ones who will benefit the most; the adrninistration will only profit in directiy.
Becarme the plan is voluntary another grievance is rendered irrelevant. If the adminiatration decided, at some point in the future, to raise the pledge amount to \($ 300\) or 80 , the studentes could then effectively shut down the entire project Similarly, if each donor in asked to contact three or more alumni or if the plan continues to ran beyond the 20 . year period, the seniors could cease to participate in any fund-raizing effort. Though the issue at hand is Student Union financing rather than its deaign and operational control, perhaps there should be some tiemin between the two. The pledge agreement could include a joint agreement similar to the following: "Students shall be guaranteed at least equal represer tation on any Student Union gover ning body eatabliahed in the future, thereby ensuring both significant student input into Union policy and decision making, and significant student control over student space.
According to Dale, much of this haw already been agreed upon in previous meetinge with the chancellor. If the studente are going to break their backs in order to raise the funids and generally perform a large part of the zole that the adminitration normally occupies, they are entitled to ask for some protection for studente five years some prote.
from now.

SA recently mailed letters explaining the program to each senior. This weelx the semsior coy phone-an-thon.

You should not pledge the $250ifyou deapise and abhor \($ U_{\text {; however, if that }}\) is the way you feel, you showid probably not be heme at all.

Cooke, a junior, intends to pledge \($ 500\) next year in the hope that a few othera mitsht follow his example. A for myeelf, \($ 250\) will have to be sufficient. After all, in five years, what will \($ 250\) buy on the marluetplace? At SU, it juat might buy a Student Union.

\section*{The retreat of winter}

For the first time in more than four months, the campus sprung to life yesterday.

The quad was teeming with people as atudents stopped to chat with other atudents or to absorb the sun's warmth while relacing before a class. And, of course, one of the trappings of college hife - fribbees - were in abundant supply.

Walnut Paric, like its counterpart the quad, also arose out of its. winter slamber. Fraternity and sorority members, whose houses line the street, camped out on their porches to do nothing in particular except watch passer-bys and listen to spenkers blasting Beach Boys music All over campus, from Brewster/Boland to Skytop, people were breathing again.
Like an occupying army, winter has retreated for now leaving in its wake clear skies, warmer temperatures and lifted apirits. But a word of warning: winter may at any time just decide to renew its attack. It was only a week ago that it dumped 9 inches of snow on Syracuse.
For now, however, students can bast in the warmth and wonder of that time of year called spring. And in Syracuse, that is something to be happy about.

\section*{Water Street Boys flow up to M-Street \\ Boys perform mostly original}

The Water Street Boys, an Oswego based jug band, will perform Saturday night at Hungry Charley's. Offering ragtime and reggae, the folk band plays a variety of footstompiag tunes in the southern style.

The band consists of Ruah Tattered, Scott "Kid" Regan, Gene Tighe and Dirty Jim Sherpa. They all sing and play a wide range of instraments, including kazoo, guitar, washtub baaa, banjolin, mancolin and spoons.

Although the Water Street tunes, the band also playt old folk songs, jamz classics and country ballads.
The four mavicians decided to form the band after a jamming session one night a few years ago. Since then, they have been playing coffeehouses, bluegrass fegtivals, bars and benefits. The jug band's music appeals to both the young and old.
The Water Street Boys were heard over WAER-FM in September and appear regulariy at The Firebain in downtown Syracure.

\title{
Al/man Brothers new disc signals comeback \\ \section*{By Norm Meyer}

Southern rock seemingly reached its venith in 1975 When Lanyrd Skynyrd and The Charlie Daniels Band were riding high on the heels of Sweet Home Alabama and The South's Gorkna Do It. And the Allman Brothers Band, the group that introduced the country to rock from below the Mason-Dixon line, was about to release a follow-up to their superb Brothers and Sigters LP.
But the situation deteriorated as the Allmans' next album, Win, Lobe or Draw, was panned by critics and failed to generate heavy sales. Finally, after bitter infighting, the band broke up in early 1977. The nadir for Southern rock was realized in October 1978 when a plane crash killed three members of Lynyrd Skynyrd, the band that epitomized the spirit of the Allman Brothers.
Like warm weather. Southern rock is making a comebnck. I eading the revival comeback. Leading therevival is the reformed Allman Brothers Band. Original members Gregg Amman,
Dickey Betts, Jai Johanny

Johanson and Butch Trucks have been joined by guitarist Dan Toler and bass player Dan Toler and bass player David Goldflies from Bets Great Southern band. Alhough their new album, Enlighterned Rogues, is merely kood, not great, it marks their return as one of America's beat bande.

You won't find any gems like "In Memory of Elizabeth Reed," "Whipping Poet" or even "Jessica" on the new L.P. but the instrumental and vocal performances and the production are outstanding. The major fault is unambitious lyrics, five of the seven songs with lyrics are about the pain of lost love. These rogues are talented, but certainly not enlightened.

The disappointing moments come at the beginning and end of the album. The first aong on side one, Betts' "Crazy Love," begins with recycled slide guitar riffs from the intro to "California Blues" on hia Great Southerr solo album. This is one of the lost love geries, but its dull lyrics are series, but its dull lyrics are background vocals of Bonnie

\section*{Ashort course in Bonded Bourbon.}

First lesson: Bonded Bourbon is so unique that it took an act of Congress (in 1897) to establish the standards for Old Grand-Dad and ather Bonded whiskeys.

100 is perfect. Bonded Bourbon must be 100 proof. No more. No less.

Final exam. You need only one sip to recognize the clearly superior Guality and taste of Old Grand-Dad.

Old Girand-Dad Bonded is authentic Kentucky sour-mash Bourbon, made with pure limestone bourbon, made with pure limestone water, the finest grains, and aged in new water, the finest grai charred-oak barrels.

Only Bonded whiskeys havea green tax stamp. It's yourguarantee that the whiskey is at least four years old. Old Grand-Dad Bonded is always aged longer.

Bramett, and the music is lifted later by flashy (and more ofiginal) glide playing by Betts.

Another of the lost "love group, written by Betts and frequent collaborator Don Love" In addition to its Crazy Love, In addition to its cirche With tired theme, Can't Takeit With You" has many forced rhymes ("Play it high ror Carlo'). The song is at Monte Carlo'). The song is saved at the end by a furious lead guitar exit by either Betts or Toler.
The other diasppointment is the album's last song, "Sail Away." Written by Betts, it also plays on lost love (Betts had a hand in all five of these heart-wrenchers; the last word from People magazine is that Betta is happily married). Sail Away" is a slow song highlighted by an ascending guitar pattern, but the pretentious lyrics make it appear to be an attempt to reach the mellow AM airwaves.
The trivial lyrics of the other two lost love tunes are overshadowed by brilliant instrumental and vocal exhibitions. "Blind Love" is an uptempo blues number with intense vocals by Alman. Written by Betts and Johmson, the cut has a pretty melodic hook supplied by Allman's organ, which eacedates into a raw slide solo by Betts.
On "Try It One More Time," Betts battles his latest prohlem, bland lyrics, by overcoming an old fault, uninspired singing. His vocals are so passionate that when Betts tells his former lover they should "try it one more time," you get the feeling he's making his point by tightening his grip around her throat. uffer from worn-out lyrics, but only because it is an instrumental. His true talents, writing and playing music, are the reasons he excels in a hand, rather than as a solo artist. The guitar playing on "Pegrasus" flies like the "Pegasus horse. It's fast, but never reckless.

Beaides Betts, the other driving force behind the Allman Brothers Band is Gregg. All his personal problems during the lant few years have made him better at what he did, and still does, best - sing the blues. His voice is scratchy and worn, but it's still intense. On , Willie John Mertis', "Need 'Your Love So Bad," Allman's vocals are supported by the soulful harmonica playing of Jim Ersery. On his own ing of Jim Dasery," the his own longing in Allman's voice highlights the 'album's best lygricas:

You ride down that acine old sireet

You've' seen a thousand times

That overflows with neon lights and enormous aigns

My God, how you want to leave there
A mournful guitar solo carries the song to the end.

Producer Tom Dowd keeps things simple, never adding strings or horns to clutter the grrangements. This allowe the band's strengths, Betts' musicianship and Allman's emotion, to remain in thespotlight. Enlightened Rogues proves the Allman Brothers Band is not only No. 1 in the South, but also one Syracuse University recenty received a gift of \($ 60,000\) from the Standard Oil Co. (Ohio), Cleveland, toward the \($ 4\) million progrem for a new School of Management building.

Roger H. Hunl, SU vice president for development. said "The grant from Sohio in evidence of industry's conevidence of Syadustry Enivar sity:" 4 million school of The s4 milion School of Mankgemen farto \({ }^{* 4} 55\) million for a qift to name the buildiar SI 5 million from national cor. porations such as Sohio which porations such as sonio whited connections with have hmited connections will the university and \($ 1\) million from corporations in Central New York," Hull seid.
"In effect, we intend to construct the School of Management on a room-byroom basis solely with cor porate funds," Hull said.
The gift is part of Sohio's policy of "strong commitment over many years in support of private schoola of figher education," said Clifford D. Shields, Sohio's director of educational relations and corporate contributions.

We have been a strong supporter of colleges and universities of high quality with which Sohio should maintain contact and interaction," Shields said. We have an intereat in helping achools that provide personnel or technology and research in this growing field."

Because it is a technically based company Sohio' predominant focus has been on engineering and chemistry but in the Last two years the company has two years the grant program to include grant program to include schools of management.

The basement of 507 South Crouse was called the "shoot ing gallery", according to Bill. "It was a huge basement with blankets hanging from the ceiling to make little cubicles where all the speed frealcs and junkies went to shoot up.
Bill is a veteran of Woodstock, the rock festival that became a counterculture legend.
"When I first heard that Woodstock was coming dawn, I said, 'Yeah, I'm going.' I went down to St. Marten's halfwny house on the Weat side, because I knew this crazy there who had a car. I gave him some hash and talked him into going. We drove down to \(M\) Street to get some more people to fill the car. 'Hey, man,' we gaid to all the freaks, "let'sgo to Woodstock.' But nobody wanted to go. They were all too burned out. Too stoned to go."

Bill was not drafted, he says, because he took too many becaus and the draf boar drugs, and the draft board knew it. He regrets it, though, potent ISD available in Vietpotent He bays the LSD was coming from the Russians who hoped to undermine the Army with drugs.

\section*{Wins 16-3 decision \\ By David Okun}

The situation did not look good for Gene Mills. Not only was he losing 13 10 with one minute remaining in the NCAA wresting championghips in Amea, Iowa on March 10, but he had been taken down three times in the first Gonzalez pounder from the University of Califorpia at Bakersfield and the only wrestler to defeat him this season ( \(9-8\) in an exhibition match).
"Gonzalez is a great wrestler but I felt I could beat him if I wrestled as hard as I could for the entire match," Mills said.
True to his word, Mills made the most of the final few seconds. After wrigglof the final few seconds. After wriggling free for a one-point escape, Mills to tie the acore.
"At that point coaches (Ed) Carlin and (Brian) Schmidt told me to hand on to him. I had riding time and they wanted Mills said.

ing time gave Mills a \(16-13\) win and ing time gave Mills a \(16-13\) win and gave \(S U\) its first national champion since Tom Schlendorf won the 191 pound class 12 years ago.
"Despite the win, I'm not that happy with the way Gene followed the game plan for this match," Schmidt said. "We told him not to bob up and down when he wrestled from a standing position. He didn't listen and twice Gonzalex shot in, grabbed his legs and took him down while he was bobbing up. Before his close encounter with Gonzalez, Mills had wrestled to near perfection in his first four matches, pinning Adam Cuestas of Oregon, Jim zenz of North Carolina State and Bill DePaoli of Cal State of Pennsylvania. \section*{Yankees invade South: where's ACC?}

Three Rut By J.T. Brady Rutgers University students strutted through the parking lot on their way to the Greensboro (N.C.) Coliseum, where the NCAA Eastern Regional aemi-finals were about to be played. All three wore gcarlet T-shirts that resid played. All three wore scarlet T-shirts that reid "Rutgera Basketball \(# 1\)."

As it turned out, that statement was not quite accurate, since the Scarlet Knights lost to St. John's a few hours later. But on the back of those same shirts, the whole NCAA weekend at Greenameshirts, the whole NCAA weekend at Greensboro was Hell Is The ACC?" Below the question, the words Duke and N.C. (North Carolina) had been crossed Dut.

For the first time since 1956, all four teams in the Eastern Regional were truly from the East - that is, that portion of the eastern United States that does not include the Atlantic Coast Conference.
Where the hell was the ACC? Well, Duke and North Carolina had somehow lost to those "Damn Yankees" from Pennsylvania and St. John's, and the descent of those funny talking northerners on Greensboro was looked at by North Carolina Gatives as the most horrifying invasion since Shernatives masched most horrifying in

It was for this reason that inside the 17,000 aeat Coliseum the excitement, action and color of an NCAA ballgame was dissipated by the presence of nearly 8,000 empty seats. Where the hell was the \(A C C\), or rather, where were the ACC fans? They were certainly not inside the arena, but if you looked outside in the parking lot, you would have found an unusually large number of scalpers trying, without much success, to unload the tickets they had bought in anticipation of an all-ACC final.
"Ah been lucky if ah could git fahve or six dollars fur these damn things," one scalper groaned. "Ah fought 'em for ten bucks apiece!"
One annoyed Syracuse fan, looking at the empty seats, said angrily, "Look at that - people would be seats, said angrily, Look at that People would be turned away if this was in New York or Philadelphia. These aren't basketball fans down philadelphia. These aren't

The North Carolinians clearly viewed the northerners with similar disdain. A front-page article in Saturday's Greensboro Record appeared under the headine: "These Yankee fans are a different bred: Invade Coliseum.'
The article was based on observations of a Record reporter, who was in the SU cheering bection next to a member of the Hardwood Club, SU's basketball booster organizations. The reporter told of the SU fans tempermental outhursts and included such obseryations as: "The Lord's name was used often -and in vain," and "The northerners usealot more vulgarity than when ACC teams play," said a southern ticket-taker. Syracuse was described as "the Frostbelt," and "America's Siberia," and the reporter noticed that the teams did not play like "Southern gentlemen" but rather "Sibexia-style."
While the article was little more than the byproduct of theirritation and frustration of the North Carolinians, a touch of irony was added in that the cheering section the writer criticized was composed not of students, but rather of middie-aged supporters whose conduct inspired the writer to label the group "The Zoo."

In many casea, the irritation of the natives was not unprovoked, as northern fans did their best to rub salt into the wounda. At one bar, another group of middle-aged Syracuse fans taunted the mildmannered bartender:

Hey Larry, you know what ACC stands for? Ah Can Choke, it's the Ah Can Choke conference. We all from Syracuse, we're gonna come back down here next year, Larry, and we're gonna reconstruct the South."
The boisterous group then broke into a chant of "We Are. . SU," and the noise carried over into the adjacent hotel restaurant where Univeraity of Pennsylvania guard Bobby Willis was eeated waiting to be served. Willis, who had helped the Quakers to a win over the Orange the night before, shook his head in disbelief, turned slowly toward the source of the clamor and said softly, almost to himself, "You the clamor and Willis, his teammates, and the Pennsylvania fans had been through a lot during their stay in North Carolina. While the team fought to earn recognition and respect on the court with consecutive wins over North Carolina, Syraciuse and St. John's, the identity they sought still did not come easily.

The Quaker fans wore buttons proclaiming "Penn: It'a no longer a aecret," but after the wins over North Carolina and St. John's, deadlines in the Greensboro Daily News called the team "Penn State." Penn fans wishing to buy souvenirs from the hawkers at the Coliseum found the vendors waiting with thoussends of dollars of Penn State merchandise. Most were not amused.
Yet, the Penn fans left North Carolina Sunday thinking not about the ACC, not about Penn State. but about Salt Lake City and the Final Four. The sign in front of the Quakers hotel had read: "Welcome Penn and Syracuse fans" on Friday morning. Sunday night, as the Quakers prepared to head toward the airport it read: "Welcome Penn and Final Four."
Welcome . . . as welcome as a group of Yankees in ACC country can be.

Four Eastiorn busketball teams, Syracuse, Penn, Rutgera and St. John'e deatroyed the myth of the powerful ACC confortuce when all four qualified for the Eastorn regional wami-finals last woekend. Die-hard ACC fans., who were waiting for a DukeNorth Carolira showdown in the firials, reaponded by sealping tickete and ploying the raluctimt hout.

 City of Syracuase, yet the Noumt is a community oway from the urban jungie.

Editor's note: This is the fourth segment in a 10 part series examining housing at Syracuse University.

By Carl Johnson
Secluded from the main Syracuse University campus, Mount Olympus provides an important alternative to an otherwise urban campus.
"You get awny from the hustle-bustle of city life," said Flint Hall resident Brad Littlefield. "I like the Mount. It's like we're in our own community."
Indeed, the Mount is in many ways a self-sufficient community. With Graham Dining Center the Top o' the Mount Shop, the Junction anack bar the the Mount Inn Flint and Day Hall resident really only need to leave the Mount for classes.
The Mount has lawns which are uged for every aport from football to sumbathing, and commands an excellent view of the Onondaga Valley.
Graham Dining Center separates the two dorms and is connected to thern by tunnels. The dorms "are convenient to the diniag hall," said Day sophomore Geri Mouchka

Also, Graham has a good reputation compared to Kimmel and Haven. "The atmosphere has im proved since they got new chairs," one Day resident said.

\section*{Monorail may link downtown to Dome}

By Walter Giblos
City transportation officials are considering a \($ 60\) million monorail system to link Syracuse University with the downtown area to revitalize the city and relieve traffic congestion during events at the Carrier Dome.
The proposal, suggested by Warren H. Frank, executive director of the Central New York Hegional Transportation Authority, is a three-mile "automated guideway system."
Frank said a monorail system may be warranted by the domed stadium and a planned enlargement of the Hotel Syracuse.
"It's not just a method to relieve congestion for football games," Frank said. "I seeitin a much broader concept than that.
A proposal has also been made to reroute traffic around several blocks of Salina Street to make way for trees and park benches, he said.

I view the entire project with all its components as a method to revitalize the urban area of Syracuae as well as supporting the 50,000 seat stadium at UU"' he said.
He said the future will see the population of Syracube grow and its populanity increase
Were the crossroads of the state," he said. "With just a little vision," a monorail system wrould make Syracuse even more attractive "Travelers would look to Syracuse as a stopover point just to see this new domed stadium and to see such a sophisticated method of moving people," Frank aaid.
It's kind of visionary, but I don't A study ridiculous.'
A study of the proposal will be made by the Syracuse Metropolitan Traneportation Councine Policy Com= mittee beginning April 1. However, Richard Wiles, executive director of the committee, aaid he is "sort of negative" about the monorail concept, mostly because of the cost.
"You could do over the entive sewer aystem in the city of Syracuse, which is in very bad shape, for about the anme amount of money," Wiles said.
He said a monorail system is "probably not within the reach of this community," and "does not haveprime commideration at this time."

Wiles also questioned the usefulness of such a system.
"I don't think it will do everything everybody thinks it will," he said "Monorails in other cities have had only shadowed success.'

But Frank is enthusiastic
"There are systems in Disneyland and Disneyworld, and I've ridden them," Frank said. "Those are not toys. They are very real methods of moving people."

He also cited similar systems in Dearborn, Seattle and Washington Though these cities have extensive suideway systems, a smaller system of similar nature would revitalize our community," Frank said.

However, a more feasible way to han: dle increased traffic. Wiles said, is the widening of roads and the improvement of bus aervice connecting the two areas.

I think that would be more practical at this time;" Wiles said.

\section*{Union building drive raises \($ 50,000\) in pledges \\ By Stacy Schneider \\ be succeasful this year, aince this is}

About \($ 50,000\) in pledges was raised during a phone-a-thon for the Student Union Building Tuesday and Wedneaday evenings.
The phone-a-thon, sponsored by the Syracuse Univeraity senior committee for the union project, reached almost 2,000 students: Its purpose was to inform seniors about pledge plan funding for the building, said Elaine Stern, chairperson of the committee.
The plan asks "eniors to donate \($ 250\) to the student union construction, payable the first year they earm ton, payatele the fratyear they earm \($ 20,000\). If the building is not under \($ 20,000\). If the building is not under construction in five years all donations will be returned. About \($ 7\) million is need Packets containing information on the pledge plan and pledge cards were distributed to seniors last week.

Syracuse University will match the amount of money that the students raise, Stern said.
In addition to a donation, seniors are asked to contact two alumni from the graduating class 20 years prior to their own, asking them to match their pledge.
-Stern aid the committee was aiming for pledges from 40 percent of the senior class."It is important for it to the first year," she added. Approximately 30 atudents were making calls both nights. Reactions to the plan are mixed, but most people liked it once they understood it, said Martha Pichey, Student As sociation representative.
However, "I think some students see \($ 250\) and throw the pledge card away," Pichey said.
The callers went over the plan until the student understond it. We are soliciting through understan Oing," Stern said.
Of the seniors contacted, 20 percent made a pledge, 30 percent said they would think about it and 50 percent asid they would not pledge, Stern said.
However, Stern believes students who said no may change their minds.
"I am happy because the beginning has been great. I not only have support from the committee but from the administrition and Student Association, as well.'
Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers, present at the phonea-thon, also asid he was pleased with the outcome "Both the effort and enthusiasm will make the plan go," he added.

Egyptian-lsraeli peace
An Egyptian-Iaraeli peace treaty was approved this week by the parliaments of both countries, of ficially ending a 30 -year-old war between the two countries. The treaty, constructad with the help of President Carter and other U.S. of ficials, returns to Egypt the Sinai peningula, captured by Israsel in peaminna, captared by forael in 1967 , and paves the way for limited Palestinaian autonomy on the West bank of the Jordan River and in the Gaza strip. A breakthrough in negotiations occurned when Carter convinced Egyptian President Convinced Enwar el-Sadat to concede on his demand for an Egyptian liagon demand for an Egyptizan hason Israel to buy oil from Sinai fields.
U.S. presidential envoy Zbigniew Brzezinski returned home Sunday after visiting friendly Arab countries and baid he was encouraged by his talks with the kings of Jordan and Saudi Arabia. He was conand Saudi Arabia. He was conVinced the Egypt-israeli pact wouid peace. The United States has plediged \($ 3\) billion to Israel for the costs of ita Sinai withdrawal and said it would provide Egypt with \($ 2\) billion in weapons. In addition an American-Istaeli agreement, ex pected to be signed soon, would provide American political support in case the Egyptian-Ieraeli accord is violated.

\section*{Labor leaders' criticism}

Labor leaders this week criticized business for excessive profit taking. AFLCIO President George Meany said Wednesday that business firms are engaging in "profit gouging" at the expense of workers. Frank \(E\). Fitzaimmons, head of the Teambters' Uthion, taid it is not faix to hold down workers wages ac cording to federal guidelines when corporate profits are soaring. The Teamsters are currently negotiating contracts with the trucking industry. A government report released earlier this week showed profits were up 26.4 percent in the fourth quarter of 1978 over the fourth quarter of 1977. Overall pronts for 1978 increased 16.2 percent over 1977.

\section*{New energy program}

The Carter administration is considering a new energy program that would combine the phased lifting of price controls on domestic crude oil with an accompanying tax on wellhead oil or on oil companies profits. Such a program would inevitably increane the cost of gasoline and home heating oil but is also designed to encourage conservation, administration sources said.

\section*{Carter business investigation}

Attorney General Grifinn B. Bell has appointed a special prosecutor to investigate pogsible financial improprieties in President Carter's family peanut business. Counnel Paul J. Curran will inventigate \($ 7\) million in loans to the Carter businese from a bank controlled by the President's friend Bert Lance, former director of the Office of Managernent and Budget. Lance resigned from OMB after inves-

Noise is a big problem in Flint, and many residents attribute this to the lack of carpecing in the halls. "Carpeting makes all the difference in the world." said Dave Mercer, noting that Day seems quieter becauge of its carpeted corridors.

Even though, Flint underwent repairs two years ago. damage is still a problem. Paint is chipped. ceilings are broken and panels are missing from some bathroom doors.

Despite the damages, one advantage to Flint-is that new students can mix with each other and meet people of their other and meet people of their own age and interests.

Its a great dorm for Greshmen. said resident Ken Guggenheim. I think it s an advantage for freshmen solive among their own kind." Head mitted Flint was noisy. but not compared to Booth. Flint Laurel Rech, another Finnt resident, said, "Besides the resident, said, "Besides the cinderblocks, the atmosphere is pretry nice."
Freshman Mitch Wo inarowicz agreed. "Aside from the grimy walls and the partiers. it's home."

Unlike Flint, Day Hall is mostly upperclassmen. Co-ed by room on all eight floors. Day offers a large main lounge and a study center. There are open lounges on all floors, and each is equipped with a kitchenette. A full kitchen is located on the main floor, and all rooms are open doubles.
Resident Advieer Barney Sherman said he chose Day Hall because "I knew Day Hall would be relatively quiet it's more upperclassmen." He also mentioned the carpeting in the halls, which significantly reduced noise.
Sherman said another advantage of Day is that "very few people are placed there; most choose to live there." He said that for this reason, the students' "attitude is much better. They"regonna be more conscientious.
Vandalism is at a minimum in Days, and many of the foors have murals done by students to make even the cinderblocks Jook better.
"It's good living with upperclassmen," said freshman Meredith More, adding that she liked the atmosphere of the Mount.
Day resident Joan Berkowitz said. "It's very convenient - the bookstore, the dining hall, classes are all close. I like the cemetery." she added, referring to the popular campus partying and sunning spot.

The cemetery may not be the most important asset to life on the Mount. but it certainly is not the only one. For many people, the fittle community at the top of the Mount is the only place to live on the SU campus. Monday-Booth and Haven Halls.

A memorial aervice and candlelight procession to commemorate the anniversary of the Sharpeville Massacrein the Republic of South Africa were held at Hendricks Chapel Wednesday night.
The Sharpeville massacre, which took place on March 21 , 1960, started as a peaceful demonstration by thousands of black South Africans, but ended with 250 blacks killed or wounded by South African police.

South Africa operates under a syatem of apartheid, which discriminates against nonwhites.
Since the time of the massacre, the situation in South Africa has only worsened, according to Dumisani Kumalo, a black South African journalist who fled the country in June 1977 following police

By David Zamojaki The writing on the walls has always been a reflection of the nature of aociety. And what could better reflect the nature of the male of University mic biiding bathroom to the South Crouse the academic buildom SU men freely express their Avenue bar barmerations via graffiti. Men's room emotions and the male payche.

graffiti mirror the male payche. Women rarely see men's room sole by nature of Whomen rare. That is unfortunate because male opinion of the female population is the fundamental matter of most grainit. The majority of this grafintils crude and offensive. The grafiti that are not crude and offensive are essentially derogatory.

SU men have few good words to describe SU women:
"What's the difference between Syracuse coeds and toilet seats?
-Toilet seats warm up when they're touched.
-Toilet seats have nice, round curves.
一Toilet seats aren't bad lookin':
-Toilet seats aren't always full of it."
Nevertheless, graffiti are means of self-expression. The creative male mind is capable of witty commen: tary: "Ignorance of your culture is not considered cool."
The logical male mind is capable of briliant deduction: "Smoking pot gets you high, whereas, not smoking pot does not get you high.

Whatever the male mind, its graffiti are artful, absorbing and ageless.
sorbing and ageless. graffiti and sit-down graffiti, said one SU graffiti. writing male.

Stand map graffiti are the hastily-written one-liners scribbled on bathroom walls, he said. Most graffiti fall into this category, amusing the reader with wards of enduring humor:
"You're, only young once, but you can be immature forever."
"I'd give my right arm to be ambidextrous."
"Let he who is stoned cast the first sin."
"Remember! You can't spell SUCKS without SU."
"You can't spell SUPERFICIAL without SU."
"Only you can resent porous spires."
"When a person weighs over 250 pounds, they are no longer a person. They are a place."
"Here today, where tomorrow?"
On the other hand, sit-down graffiti are lengthy messages of obscure meaning. This type is more timeconsuming to write and more thought-provoking to read. Sit-down graffiti are enigmatic:
"And as we stand on the edge of darkness
Let our chant fill the void
That others may know
In the land of the night
The ship of the sun Is dirawn by THE GRATEFUL DEAD."

Student comment on university policy is usually passed by word-of-mouth complaining. But men's room walls abound with written protest of SU:
"Thanks for all the help, SUI-The South African Ar. my"
"No, sweat' \($ 6.9\) million is nothing among friends. -

For those who consider themselves overworked and in Shaw Hall:
"Whatever happened to human sacrifice?
IT'S ALIVE AND LIVING IN THE SCHOOL OF ARCHITECTURE."
Kimmel Dining Hall was a favorite target of the men in many SU dorma. Unfortuzately, the graffiti are just plain vulgar:
"Welcome to Stall #1. Home of the Kimmel Saliabury Steak"
"Flush hard It's a Long way to Kimmel Dining Hall"
And for some brotherly advice from a Booth Hall retident to the men on his floor:
"If you heep getting dirty fingernails, try toilet paper."
There seems to be some disagreement between two men in Shaw Hall:
men in Snaw Hall exotic shorts are found at Tops to (in pen) The most exp.
(in pencil) "NO. The most exotic shorts are found on megavolt pouver transmission lines."

Looking at men's room graffiti, SU males evidently have an interest in the relationship between drugs and the nondescript entity known as reality. This relationship is explored in the men's room of Hungry
"Drugs are a crutch for people who can't handle" reality:"
"Reality is a crutch for people who car't deal with "rugs."
"People, are a crutch for drugs that cin't handle reality."
"Drugs are a reality for people who can't deal with crutches." crutches.
"Syracuse is for people who carr"t handle reality."
"Is this reality? Or just a small villa in the sauth of France?"

At one time, radical political messages covered the rest room walls. The days of Vietnam and "Tricky Dick" Nixon are over. Few traces of the pro-sex, prodrugs, anti-establishment movement remain on bathroom walls. The graffiti of the 1960 s and early 1970 s have fallen victim to wash buckets and paint rollers, but new political graffiti now appear on the walls:
"Workers and peoples of all countries unite to smash the Fascist dictatorship of the bourgeois."
In response to that was scribbled:
"Sorry, but as classy as bourgeois sounds, it does nōt mean the elite. It is thein that rebel."
In the next stall written in bold, black letters was: "Down with US imperialism Down with SOVIET social-imperialism
Victory to the Iranian people.
And along with serious political comment comes the racial jokes, most in such poor taste that they are unprintable.
Aside from the written matter, the boys from Syracuse have decorated their rest rooms with explicit drawings of what is on their minds. And the non-artists have taken to plastering men's magarine centerfolds on stall walls.
Bathroom reading material will never be the same. After all, they say a picture is worth a thousand words.

Look for the female side of rest room graffiti next week in The Daily Orange.

Costello, the most successful artist both financially and critically - to emerge from the New Wave scene, is one of the most prolific songwriters in rock dozen tunes on three albums since his emergence in the fall of 1977 .

Tour reports indicate Costello is relying heavily on material from Armed Forces. his latest and most successful album. The alburn represents a turn to commercial accessibility for Costello, yet sacrifices none of the lyrical bite that characterized his first two efforts.
Costello will probably play selections from My Aim Is True, his debut album, such as "Alison," a bitter ballad of lost love, and the reggae-tinged "Watching the Detectives.
My Aim Is True, reportedly recorded in less than a week, garnered unusually large sales figures for an import record before being released officially in Armerica.
With the release of his second album, This Year's Model, Costello continued to be a favorite of music critics. Many called the record the best of 1978 .
Elvis had a hit single. "Pump it Up," in England from this album, but couldn't match the commercial success in America. Though This Year's Model entered the top thirty and Armed Forces receatly hit the tod ten on the American charts, Elvis has yet to have a hit single. which may be a mark of distinction in this disco-crazed world.
Costello appeared at Landmark last April as part of a tour to support This Year's Model, delivering a non-stop onslaught of rock and roll to an appreciative audience. The Attractions, Costello's backup band for the past year and a half, consists of keyboard player Steve Naive, bassist Bruce Thomas and drummer Pete Thomas.
If nothing else, the unpredictable Elvis and the Attractions should provide an interesting show. In addition to a fast and furious offering of rock and roll, Costello has been known to regale concert-goers with a lengthy set of country music.

Early start
Munker's career began with commercials at nine years old, when a friend of her mother's suggested they look into acting and modeling. They picked a manager out of the yellow pages and the outgoing "All American looking child," was gigned up within a week.
An original cast member of the children's series "Sesame Street," Munker has also appeared in the Broadway productions "Happy Birthday Wanda June," and "Children, thday Wanda June," and "Children, Children" ns well as numerous films and documentaries.
However, daytime TV is what she currently enjoys most, with roles in "The Doctors," "The Guiding Light" played villainess Marianne Randolph for two years.

Munker, who never took acting lessons, finds it a challenge to portray Marianne," but says it is easy to put herself in their situations.
She believea soap opera characters experience the same things viowers do. At "Another World," she received approximately 25 letters a month from girls with problems similar to them all, even if they aaddened her.
"And people say the story lines aren't realistic. T've learned from these letters that they are. The trammas just don't happen all at once in real life."
Unlike her characters, Munker laughs frequently and just really enjoys life. When ghe ian't working or studying. she takes karate, ballet and and cross country skiis.

Her large, expressive blue eyes widen even more when she mentions her mother - her best friend.

the things I go through," shesays. "My mom has always been there ..
One of those down periods occurred when "Another World" released Munker from the serial in 1977. She was never told why.
Two, weeks later, "As the World Turna" requested she play Melinda, a role created for her. They did not even require her to audition for the role.
"It made me feel better," she says, adding that several of her fans have written to say they switched to "An the World Turna'" with her. 'Maybe it's good that I left and tried something new."
After graduation, Munker plans to continue acting and maybe have a family someday.
"I can't think that far ahead, though," she says with a smile. "I just have to concentrate on making it have to concentrate,"

Performed in theater-in-the-round style with the audience seated on four sides of the stage, the action incorporates nearly every corner of the theater. Director Byrne Gallagher has mastered the technique of four-sided theater, staging the play so that at no time during the \(2^{1 / 2}\) whour perfomance is any spectator shortchanged by the view. And except for a few awkward pauses, the pacing is good, eapecially during a rapid-fire card game cene between Brock and Billie.
Limitations in costumes and scenery threaten the credibility of the aetting; the shabby furniture hardly auggest the expensive hotel suite Brock brags about, and most of the coatumes - with the exceptions of Billie's finery and cousin Edine Brocks gangsterish suit-

Deapite Salt City's attempt to revive "Born Yesterday" for the modern stage, the audience remains too distant from the the audion to feel moved, inspired or stimulated by it. There is nothing terribly bad about "Born Yesterday," but there is nothing terribly good about it either. And nothing is ultimately what the audience leaves with.

But Norma's getting tired of this kind of living, so she accepts a marriage proposal from another mill worker (Beau Bridges) on their second date.
Their marital bliss, however, is inter rupted shortly thereafter when Norma oins up with Reuben Marshasky (Ron New Yan), a union representative from New York. Marshasky is trying to unionize the worisers by standing outside he mills gate and handing out leaflets Director Mous fanatic.
Director Martin Ritt ("The Front") and Writers Irving Ravitch and Harriet Frank obviously intended to make an because they opted for loig apeeches and testimonies about the labor struggle instead of developing any of the film'a major dramatic conflicts.
For instance, when Norma starts apending more time with Reuben and the union and leas time at home, her new husband complains and a quarrel results. But since the quarrel is presented comically, what should have been a major scene in the film becomes a joke. Both literally kiss and make up, but without reasiution. The problem atill exists, and if Norma in any way feels tora between her family and the union work, the audience never finds out Other conflicts and issues related to the fims theme are glossed over in the same mamuer. The white and black worker manage in the union effort until the cusing thent posts a notice falsely ac the union. Slacks of planning tak furiated over the idea of "taking orders from a black man," and this leads to a least one racial scuffle. All returns to nor mal once the notice is removed. This seems much too simple a solution for the exploaive racial situation that is now suggested to exist in the mill.

SU's senior co-captain Kevin Donahue (light jersey) and his fourth-ranked Orange teammates completed a successful Southern road trip with impressive wins over North Carolina

\section*{Syracuse checks southem opposition}

LEXINGTON, Va, By Don't Fecteau behind you. A Syracuse University lacrosse player may be catching up. State and The Orange snuck up on North Carolina State Washington and Lee University during SU's annual spring trip last week.
"N.C. State thought they were going to handle us with ease," gaid Sytacuse Coach Roy Simmons Jr. "They were looking ahead to their game with Maryland and before they knew it,
they 15-10 on March 13 in Raleigh, N.C.
More of the same occurred against the then sixth-ranked
Cortiand State. The Syracuse teame he used to play againgt Cortiand State. The Syracuse teams he uged to play against were nothing compared to thia. He didn't know what torexpect," Simmons said. The Orange took the Generals, io-7, on March 17.
Certain
Certainly the word must be out by now. The Orange are currently rated fourth nationally behind defending champion John Hopkins, Maryland and Cornell. Rutgers is right behind Syracuse in fifth.
Freshman Brad Short passed the message along to W&L after 27 seconds of the opening period. He beat Steve Johnson to the net and slipped a low shot past, goaltender Bob Clements. George Santos of W&L and SU's Tom Donahue traded goals soon after and SU held a \(2-1\) lead after only \(1: 15\). traded goals soon after and SU held a \(2-1\) lead after only \(1: 15\).
When W&L star Jeff Fritz scored 21 seconds later, it looked like the offenses would have a feld day,
But the defenses shut things off until W&L's John Black broke through to score more then broke through to score more than 10 minuten later at 12:07. Syracuse back even at 3-3. From that point on Powless, Short and fellow attackman Tim O'Hara gradually took control of the garne.
"They played it pretty much the way we expected. We knew they had a good defense and we'd have to keep tually we'd get the shots," Powleas explained.
o'Hara fed Ralph Spinola to make it 4-3 at 7:00. Then Short found Tom Donahue just outside the crease for SU's fifth score. Short scored twice more before the period ended to give the Orange an insurnountable 94 cushion. That gave Short, who "I thought he looked terrific," Simmons said. "You jus can't expect much more from a frogh. The two practice games we had againgt Delaware and the University of Baltimore (SU won both) really helped him."
etting elder Doug Sedgwick bcored at 3:00 of the final period reatraining line.
Altogether. Syracuse played a 36 -minute stretch in which it yielded only one goal. Syracuse's offensive control and ability Syracuse me ball contributed to the weakened W&ch attack. because they ran a lousy ride, and partly because we just outhustied them," Simmons said.
The W&L ride included coverage of SU goalie Jamie Molloy and defensemen John Desko and Bil Udovich. The Generala left Mario Stemer, who they perceived to have the weakegt atick, alone. Unfortunately for the Generals, Steiner was able stick, alone. Unfortunately for the Genezals, Steiner was able tobbed the ball upfield on a fast mareak after a save. "We love the transition game," Simmons anid.,

Mars it was pretty bad out there," Molloy joked. "I can' take this ... One shot every Eive minutes."
Molloy finally saw his loag-awaited barr the grome an Syraczise let op slichtly. Three near the end of the game as Syracuiee let up slightly. Three gtraight W&L goals, one with only five seconds left, made the final score 10

\section*{No. 4 Ora \\ By Joel Stashenko}

Tomorrow s game in Garden City, L I between Syracuse and Cornell is the most important lacrosse game an SU team has played in nearly 22 years.
Not since Jim Brown led an SU lacrosse team over Army in Archbold Stadium in 1957 to give Syracuse the unofficial national title has an Orange team been in quite the position will be in tomorrow.
And that position is undefeated (2-0), ranked fourth nationally in the first coaches nationally in the first coaches poll, and, incredibly, fauored poll, and, incredibly to beat the Big Red.

Beat Cornell in lacrosse? The same Cornell team that won NCAA titles in 1976 and 1977; the same squad which Was 13-1 last geason and second in the NCAA playoffs second in the NCAA playoffs to John Hopkins? No, cantbe co John Hopkins? No, can't be. But yes it can. "I would expect us to be geven-to-eight pect us to be seven-to-eight goal underdogs to SU," said Richie Moran. Cornell's wildly successful coach who is \(119-15\) with the Big Red.
But Syracuse coaches and players are not buying of the matchup.
"Irish in him" said Syracuee coach Foy Simamons Jracuee "He has a young equad of great has a young squad of great game yet. I'd aay the game is even."
"It's what is called a "mirrored' game," said Syracuse Mabneaney, who played for Moren at Cornell from 1975-77 "Both teams will be using the grme offense and defenge ita like two football teams Things like conditioning and motivation are most important."

In a way it's a miracle that Syracuse is close enough to Cornell so that enings like con dinomang and motivation will probably make the difference Bo onesided thest Cornell had so one-sided that Cornell had won the last 11 games by an average of 12 goals, and of ten 1976 SU-Cornell controversia 1976 SU-Cornell game (which the Big Red won 24-6), the series was temporarily surpended. It wes revived thit suspended. It was revived this season, and for the initial season, and for the initial game the two tearms agreed to game the two teams agreed to \section*{Talent and respect}

"There's a lot of pressure in the game," Simmons said. But as far as I'm concerned it's pressure on me to worry about the recruiting, it's not fair to put that kind of pressure on the kids. it's no grudge match between the kids, they reapect each other.
And between the two teams \(\begin{array}{cc}\text { there is plepty of talent to } \\ \text { reapect. } & \text { Cornell lost } 15\end{array}\) reapect. Cornell lost 15 lettermen from last season's ream, including eight Allteam, including eight AllArnericans, but is stay rankey return a squad deep in talent but shallow in experience.
"They don't have the Euperstars they have had in the past like Eamon Mc the past like Eamon Mc, Eneaney, and Mike French, coach Jay Gallagher, who graduated in 1974 from Cornell where he was an AllAmerican defenseman. "Definitely." Gallagher says.
McEno doubt about it McEneaney added.

I think we can." said Simmons, Who has not beaten Cornell as a coach, but has as a player. The Cornell-SU rivalry runs deeply through his veins.

\section*{Family affair}
"This game means a real lot. to my father," gaid Roy Simmons ill her heating them,
"I pisped for Saracuee on"

Syracuse will counter in this family affair with a team with perhaps more talent, but lesa depth, thein Cormell. The at tack कintichtplayed admirab down South, is anchored by Tim O'Hara, while Barry SU a well-rounded and potent scoriny trio andodand pold SU scoring trio Kevin and Tom Donahue and Greg Cun ningham. Eehind themidfield mingham. Be of coalie Jamie Molloy, will start defensemen Mark Steiner, Bill Udovich Mard John Desko.

On this group of players will be the tasly of eclipsing the Big Red sun. It is a job they seem ts relish.

This is the biggest game of my life," said junior midrielder Doug Sedgwick, though the amme is true for the who tearn.

And that arithmetic is about right, for it is also the biggest game for Syracuse in over two decades. Not tuxprisingly, an Orange win would be the thril of a lifetime for most of this year's Orangemen.

\section*{SU conservation projects save fuel, money \\ munications and the SU Health}

By Kenneth Guggenheim
Despite the sub-zero temperatures Syracuse had last February, Syracuse University burned oniy slightly more fuel than it had in previous years.
fuel than it had in previous years. This was the result of the relatively warm December and January and energy projects which

Among the changes made by SU Among the changes made Ey Sy since 1973, according to William J. Pitcher, are the elimination of excess lighting throughout the university, the change from incandescent to fluorescent lighting, the installation of temperatare controls and timers on heating systems and genera maintenance work, auch as the ingtallation of new pipes.

Last year, SU began a energy conser vation program in residence halls made possible by the federally funded College Housing Loan Program. This project is being instituted intwo parts, funded by loans of \($ 1.6\) million and funded by loans of \($ 1.6\).
\($ 1.45\) million respectivel \(x\).
\($ 1.45\) million respectively. Phase I involves changes in laundry rooms, such as the complete use of cold rooms, such as the complete use or roofs water, and the installation of new and lighting conversions in all major residence halls with the exception of Shaw and Brewster/Boland.

Part of Phase I, the installation of new windows which provide greater insulation, has not yet been completed.

Phase II involves similar repairs, where possible, in most other university-owned housing with the excertion sity-owned housing with the excertion of Area housing.

Pitcher said that the university wouldn't be able to get a loan for similar repairs in Area housing because this would requixe an additional \($ 3.5\) million loan.
One of the major energy conservation programs used by the university in classroom buildings is the "Load Shedding" systern, which has been Newhouge School of Public Com-

Center.
Under this system, a computer monitors the energy used in each building during the peak load period, when the most energy is being used, and automatically shuts off unneeded equipmenf to save on the fuel bill.
Though this system is expensive, it saves the university money is the long run by reducing consumption by 25 percent in the affected buildings.
The university also depends on students to conserve energy. sroom buildings twice a night and turn off unnecessary lights, classrooms are entered sometimes after the checks and lights are turned back on. Every classroom that leaves its lights burning throughout the night costa the university \($ 1.50\) a night, Pitcher said.

Residence halls are another area where students can conserve energy. Pitcher estimates that roughly half of dormitory electricity is under student control.

According to the Office of Residence Services, utility costs made up 19.4 percent of the room charge for the current school year. With energy costs going up about five percent more than the expected rate of inflation, this is a major reason for the increase in room prices.

Booth and Haven Halls are a study in contrast. While Booth has a reputation for being Syracuse University's "Animal House," Haven often seems quieter than Bird Library. Both these dorms also have the distinction of being the only separate singlesex large residence halls on the SU campus.

Actually, Booth will not be so tinique next fall, when the currently all-male dorm goes coed. Haven, however, will remain all-female.
Booth now houses 312 men, 80 percent freshmen. Over the last few years, the return rate at Booth has dwindled to about seven percent and the Office of Residence Services feels that a coed arrangement may make the dorm more popular.
Booth is usually regarded as the rowdiest dorm on campus, and a coed arrangement might eliminate that image. "It'll probably be a little more gentle with the girls around," said Booth freshman Daniel Rushefsky.
However, many Booth residenta feel the building's reputation is undeserved.. "Booth is noisy. Noise is one thing, but rowdy is another," said freshman Russell Byne. "Booth has a lot of stereo power."
Many residents complained about Booth's reputation. "You're constantly living down the reputanon. Bage," Byne said. "People say. "Ugh! You live in Webster's dictionary defines tenure as "permanence of position, often granted an employee after a specified number of years." Academia dennes tenure as that systern of faculty geniority and job security which justifies acadernic freedom.

As the American "professoriate" turns steadily grayer, all other stoc kholders in higher education are becoming increasingly alarmed that the tenure system is protecting an ag ing faculty mindlessly overbreeding itself at the expense of the future health of the university and the entire generation of young scholars.
Subsequently, these consequences are bringing college officials and students steadily closer to a head-on conflict with the tens, the increased use of part-timers and temporaries, apecial of part-timers and temporaries, apecial reaearch grants for older faculty to make way for the young.......these opening salvos are basically just measures to reineve the strain. \section*{Asking important questions}

Until now, cries of opposition to Syracuse University's domed stadium have come from area residents who fear the new stadium will adversely affect their neighborhood. Their protests have focused on parking and noise problems and environmental impact the stadium will have on their ives.
But the impact of the 50,000 seat stadium on the SU campus itself has largely been ignored. Will the academic and social atmosphere of the university be disrupted by the presence of a mammoth stadium in its midst? Exactly what problems will the stadium cause?

Nobody really knows at this point.
The University Senate took a sensible and important step last Wednesday to discover what problems the dome will cause. It formed an ad hoc committee of four faculty members and two students to study the multitude of issues and problems the dome's construction presents.
"We'll be raising questions a lot of other people won't think of," said Otway Pardee, chairman of the Senate agenda committee.
Two major problems the committee will explore are parking and security, Pardee said.

When five or six football games were played yearly in Archbold stadium, campus parking was restricted to keep roads free of cars. With the dome hosting up to 50 events a year, will the same restrictions be enforced? If it is, faculty and students will be greatly inconvenienced.
Moze importantly, parking may be a secondary concern"if faculty and students cannot gain access to academic buildings when the dome is in use. If past policies are followed, surrounding buildings will be under lock and key for security purposes during stadium events.
The great number of events the dome will host makes the dual problems of parking and accessibility to academic buildings that much more serious. When the campus had a stadium that was used only six times a year, faculty members and students could plan around these infrequent interruptions. They'll have no such lux: ury in the future.
Also, the great number of events and the uncertainty as to when the state will use its alloted days complicates the scheduling of other university events, like speeches, concerts and meetings.
The ad hoc committee also plans to look in to the recreationial ases of the domed stadium. Will it be available for jogging, frisbee throwing and other recreational pastimes?

The noise and inconvenience of the construction of the stadium presents even more problems for surrounding classrooms and the residents of Sadler and Lawrinson.
These questions and many others must be raised. Some may have simple solutions. Others will not.
Bút finding amswers is necessary to ensure that the new stadium is a boon to the university community - not a bust.

The tenure crisis will encourage, or force, faculty who hold only master's degrees to enroll in terminal degree programs. It is probably an accurate programs. It is probably an accurate

We also should see more faculty and gtudent involvement in the process of hiring new faculty, recommending promotions, and establishing tenure policies. Pexhaps the era of the autocratic administrator is nearing an end. Collective decision-making should become the norm.

Also evaluation criteria will be more clearly delineated, enabling faculty to clearly delineated, enabing precisely what is required of know precisely what is required of them in preparation for advancements and/or tenure. This should strengthen policy and eliminate distrust am

Costello and The Attractions stormed onto the stage and reeled offa few tunes from Armed Forces. Several new songs were introduced, including an impressive number called "B Movie."
Along with bassist Bruce Thomas, drummer Pete Thamas and Keyboard player Steve Naive, Costello covered the theater with a dense sound. His show was much more a nod in the direction of the New Wave than the ' 60 s -influenced style of his album cuts, which are restrained in comparison.

was most evident in an eerie version of "Green Shirt," which made the Armed Forces version pale in comparison. The organ sound swirled around the restrained vocal, and Pete 'Thomas' drumbeat attacked like a machine gun.

Costello's first "oldie" of the evening. "The Beat" off This Year's Model, again surpassed the album version: The live rendering is much faster than the original, providing the adrenalin kick the song intended.
"Accidents Will Happen," Costello's latest single, was sloppily performed. It would have gone over much better with a simple keyboard accompaniment than with the hard treatment it received.
Costello displayed some of his best guitar work in a haunting version of a song never released in America, "(I Don't Want to Go to) Chelsea." His guitar also dominated theroaring rocker, "(What's So Funny Bout) Peace,, Love and Onaterstanding.'
The tempo slowed only once during the evening when Costello performed a crowd favorite, "Alison," from his debut album. Elvis' pas sionate vocal would have em barrassed Linda Ronstadt, who attempted a cover version of the song on her latest album "Are you people in Syracuse satiafied with the radio?" Costello challenged the crowd. When the response was a resounding "NO," Elvis delivered "Radio Radio," his blistering attack on the in dustry, and atormed off the stage.

And, at least for the last two qualities, McEneaney probably owes some credit to Moran, whom he played for during his days as an All-American at Cornell (197577).

Now McEneaney, perhaps the greatest lacrosse player of all time, has traded the game, the two dynamic forces met head to game,

\section*{Monday mourning}

The fan was, of all places, in a phone booth outside a bar in Boston when he dreams had been upset by the dreamers from the Ivy League.
When he heard the terrible numbers 84 76, the fan stumbled back into the bar with more emotions washing over him than a soap opera actress on a Friday afternoon. He was disappointed. He was mad. He was frustrated. He was puzzled. How could Syracuse lose?
This was supposed to be the year. The year opponents could not devise a defense for them. If they didn't slice you apart with their perimeter shooting, they destroyed you inside with a marvelous balance of strength and grace.
This was supposed to be the year of the Final Four. It was the year of the firstround bye, the easy second-round draw, the upset of the top two seeds in the basketball had gone was as if the god of basketball had gone out of his way to put happened?

The autopsy said the patient died from turnovers, poor foul shooting, slow guards and foul trouble. But for the fan who lived and died with them through the \(19-g a m e\) winning streak, the scrappy come-from behind wins over Temple, Rutgers and St. John's, the two victories over St. Bonaventure on hostile courts and the fifth-in-the nation ranking, the statistics seemed to him only part of the story. There must have been more to it than that, the fan thought.
Hestudied his drink as if he were about to launch a jumper over James Bailey. All through the tournament, he had watched as teams statistically inferior to Syracuse kept advancing further and further. St. John's, losers of 10 games and the last team to be picked for the NCA As, had won three consecutive tournament games and unbelievably reached the Eastern Regional finals. This asme team that had cracked afainst-Syracuse in the second half of its \(79-72\) loss at Manley earier this season pulled off three upsets in the last seconds within a week. Emotion and momestum
The fan would watch on the Sunday after SU's loss as five men from DePaul tore apart a deeper and more talented UCLA team in the Western Regional finals and earned a spot in the Final Four. Obviously, the fan thought, it takes more than talent to reach the Final Four. It takes emotion and momentum. Teams that couldn't beat JV high school teams in December ride those two elements to basketball glory in March.
The fan knew SU is not an emotional team. The team is a mirror of its coach, the cool, poker-faced Jim Boeheim. Boeheim stresses that SU play each game like every other ballgame. The Orangemen are cemen; cool calculating computers who do their job quickly and efficiently, turn ut the lights and go home. A win is a win. A loss is a loss. There is no hysterical cheering and there is. no slamming of ockers or fist pounding.
Boeheirn said his team was emotionally up for the Pennsylvania game. "There was more noige in the locker room before the game than there has been all season, win or lose, the fan thoughys care if they win or lose, the fan thought. One can see Bouie and Magonized faces of Roosevel Georgetown. But how can the fire loss of team in the nation fall behind by 17 point to the Ivy League champion at the point the first halr?
Maybe emotion wasn't it, or at least not the whole story, thought the fan. UCLA won all those national titles with the emotion of a mortician at a funeral. He remembered a remark by a veteran SU basketball observer: "How can you get emotional about jumping over a \(6^{\prime \prime} 4^{\prime \prime}\) guy from Canisius?"

The schedule
The fan had heard this argument before. Critics of SU basketball from plained the Orange play a creampuff schedule during the regular season and are not primed for the NCAA competition in March.
But the Orange played 12 teams in 1978 79 that went to post-beason tournaments and beat nine. The problem with the schedule is that it does not give SU the momentum it needs to do well in the NCAAs:

The Orange were at their peak at the end of January and mid-February. At the end of January, the fan remembered as he played with a chewed-up swizzle stick, the Orange looked invincible, beating Rutgers in Manley and Temple in over time on the road. They returned to Manley and destroyed a good West Virginia team that eventually finished second in its conference
At the beginning of February, SU beat South Carolina on a neutral court and then snapped St. Bonaventure's 19-game homecourt winning streak in Olean.

But suddenly the level of competition dwindled. Tuning up for the pressure cookers of March, the Orange played a Niagara tearn that had won five games Colgate playing leas than 500 ball and LeMoyne, a Division II school. The momentum SU had captured with its griliant play against the powers of th East was destroyed by weak competition The month of March has not been kind record of 5 - 5 in his three-seasons, he has mark in the NCA A tournament The fan mark in the hCAA tournament, The fan Bourd not help remeab that in Beason in March 1976-77 (when.th Orange w pionahip with wins over St Boneventure and Old Dominion and reached the fina 16 by upsetting Teninessee). SU played five tough tearns to Einish the regular season.

The Orange lost to St . Bonaventure in Olean, but beat Niagara (when they were decent), the University of Rhode Island, St. John's and Rutgers.

ing to make or break our program 1978 Carrier Classic at Manley, 1978 Carrier Clabsic at Manley counts is how you play at the ofof

That bad?
But as the fan pushed aside thos emotion and momentum, he wos was he taking it too hard? It was! criticize Boeheim, (except disappearance of Hal Cohen in game) who has won a mind-bogd games in three years. He has led to the two best seasons in its hisw '77 and this year at 26-4) and theta been ranked in the top 15 mod season. What more could a fan

\section*{Mighty Cornell outmuscles Orange stickmen}

By J.T. Brady
The Cornell mystique - it hung in the air as plainly as the dust whipped up from the windblown field after the Big Red had upiversity lacrosee team, 10-6, at Garden Univergity lacrosge team, 10-6,
City. L.I., Saturday
Perhaps more'than Cornell's hard-hit ting play, more than theimpenetrable Big Red defense, and more than the loosebal grabbing, of the winners, the Cornell mystique was responsible for the mystique was responsible for the difference - the difference between a red hot Syracuse team that had convincingly and the tentative, confused Orange team that was never really in the game Saturday 'We weren't up for this game like we were for Washington and Lee and North Carolina State," said SU midfielder Marty Whipple. 'The name is what gets everyone . . . you know, the Big Red. It's like when Ernie Shavers is fighting Muhammad Ali - he knows that other guy in the ring is Muhammad Ali.
And SU, unfortunately, knew that the other team in the red jerseys was Cornell. The team that has dominated the American lacrosse scene in the 1970's more than any other school wasted no time living up to its reputation. After the Orangemen won the face off and flubbed their first scoring opportunity, the Big goalie Jamie Molloy.

Cornell demonstrated throughout the first period that they were hardly the underdog many had thought them to be, as the third-ranked Ithacans controlled piay and finally added a second score at 13:50 of the first period on a shot by Charlie Wood.
"The thing that surprised me was when the first quarter ended with usleading two to nothing," Cornell coach Richie Moran said. "We felt they were favored by three or four goals, they had scored very atrongly against two good teams, but we had good offensive opportunities and they had limited opportunities."
SU's inability to get untracked offensively was due largely to the active, handhithe cornell defense, which patrolled the area in front of the Cu nel and made an easy shot. The defense also smothered an easy biot.-coring attackman Tim OHara, who ran in circles behind the Cornell net trying unsuccessfully to make his way to the front of the Cornell goal.
"We had a lot of trouble today," O'Hara said. "They played a defense that slouched in towards the net. We couldn't run.from behind (the net) well at all. You'd come around the cage and all you could see was red.

Cornell's Woody Jay made the Orange see more red when he scored an unassisted goal at 3:41 into the second period to put Then, in
Then, in the next six minutes, the Orangemen mounted their only real threat of the day. First, O'Hara managed long enough to fire a shot past Cornell long enough to fire a shot past Cornell 6:59. Then, Orange midfielder Greg Cunningham scored on an assist from Kevin Donahue at \(9: 40\), cutting Cornell's lead to 3-2.
It was the closest the Orange would get all day. Cornell promptly recaptured the momentum when freshman Wade Bollinger and talented Navy-transfer John Mutch score at 10:01 and 13:18, respectively, to close out the half with the Big Red leading 5-2.
The second half was to be no different. The Big Red once again seized the all-im portant momentum when Bollinger scored again at \(1: 47\), driving the CU advantage to 6-2.
No one scored for the next nine minutes, but even in this stretch, Cornell clearly dominated play. The Big Red scooped up nearly every loose ball, and more than once jarred the ball loose from an SU player with a vicious body check. After Ene Cornell hit, SU assistant coach players and yelled.
"You see, they don't go for the stick (check), they go for the body.
Cornell's physical aggressiveness proved particularly effective in stopping the smaller \(S U\) team, which relied more on speed and finesse.
Cornell's Jay broke the scoring drought when he sped past the SU defense and beat Molloy to give CU a 7-2 lead at 10:54. SU's Larry Collins countered with a goal of his own less than a minute later, but Mutch again deatroyed Syracuse's nomentum with an unabsisted goal afiod a beautiful move at \(12: 41\).
The play of SU freshman Brad Short sept the Orange in pursuit of CU at the kept the Orange in purguit or unassisted goal at 1:06 of the period, and unassisted goal at it: pifk on a Cornell defender to free O'Hara for a score at 3:38. Between those two scores, however, Cornell's Reiley McDonald had tallied an unassisted goal so that the Orange still trailed \(9-5\) after O'Hara's goal
As they had done all day, the Big Red let the Orange come no closer. Only 19 weconds after O'Hara goal, McDonald put CU's lead back to five with an unassisted goal.
The Orange did manage to pull within four again on a Whipple goal at 10:00 Cries of "They're tired," and They don' want it." came from the SU bench, and ©hen defenseman John Desko led an Orange fast break, an SU rally stil seemed poasible. Griffin, however, ended those hopes aiter Desko had passed off to a wide-open Short. The CU goalie came up with a nice save on the freshman's hard shot. The Orange never seemed a serious threat after that.
SU head coach Roy Simmons, Jr., acknowledged that the Cornell mystique may have been one factor behind SU's fiatness.
"I'm afraid so," he said. "It was a little bit less evident today, but it's obviously still there. Maybe we'll get another shot at them.'
If the Orange are to do that, it will have to be later this year in the NCAAB. As everyone knows only too well, that's one place you can always find Cornell at-the end of a lacrosse season. to the Big Fied Saturday in Gardein City, L.I. The Orange offense saw nothing but Red around the goal all day, and Bollinger kept

The 33-year-old Buffalo resident is well known for his raunchy repertoire of songs, like 'Philosophical Bullshit," "Shithouse Blues" and "Gross Out Your Mother," and is also popular for his impromptu limericks and obscene stage manner.

Valby's skill on the piano came from lessons in Catholic schools, but his ability to twist songs from the clean to the obscene came from his fraternity days at Middlebury College in Vermont.
Valby said the first time he played professionally, "I played by myself, and I threw in three dirty songs. The next night, people came back asking for those same three songs. I became a mirror of what the crowd wanted."
That is exactly what Valby gave the Jab audience. He demongtrated his extraordinary ability on the piano, mixing his dirty compositions like 'I'm Looking Under a Two-Legged Wonder" with classical selections of Mozart and Beethoven. The audience yelled for more dirt after each song, sbut was unreceptive to Valby's classical selections. "This is a pretty tune," Valby said, "B0 shut the f -up and listentoit. A special part of a Valby performance is his involvement with the audience. He gets the fans to bing along, and uses their ideas for improvised lyrics. He also spices up the show with local color.

"You hate Penn? Just cause they beat you \(f\) ars?' he asked. In one song, he sang out. "Boland sucks Brewster.
But corrupting old standards like "Mickey Mouse" "Come along and do a bong. . . ,") is not the only part of Valby's act. Along with his classical renditions, he belted out a rousing medley of '60s hits like "Houge pf the Rising Sun and "Satisfaction."
Valby explained his act-simply: "Variety is the spice of everything."
And in his variety, Valby manages to give his audiences exactly what they want.

One problem in Booth is its freshman reputation. Many residents said they are moving next year because they want to be with upperclassmen.

However, freshman Jainee Friend said he will live in Friend said he will next year. "Freshmen won't bother me unless they act like fools," he said:

The circular Haven Dining Hall is connected to the curved Haven Dorm, and because of their appearance, the buildings are collectively known as "The Toilet Bowl."
Like Booth, Haven has an ideal location. It's a short walk to the quad, Bird Library and Marshall Street, and residents do not have to brave foul weather to get to the dining hall.
Haven is an 11-floor building which houses 393 women, 50 percent of them freshmen.

Even though the rooms are cinder-block, the building's physical characteristics are an advantage. Each hallway and room is carpeted.

Many residents like the fact that Haven is quiet. "It's a serious dorm for studying; compared to the other dorms," said Kim Fave, a junior.
Haven seems to be a dorm for people who want to go their own way. Residents in the dorm are generally not very close, and some residents like it that way.
Others complained that the atmosphere in the dorm is less than warm. "Haven probably has more snobs than any other dorm," one resident said.
But some residents disagree. "I think it's definitely overrated" as a Haven for the pretentious, said Dawn Benson, a junior.
Residents do agree that Haven is seriously lacking facilities, however. Haven has no snack bar or outside no smack bar or outside residents want both.
"All the other dorms have recreational facilities. We have two pinball machines," said Cathy Maltman.
Others wish the building would become coed. "It's the nicest dorm on campus. Too bad it's only girls," Maliken eaid.
However, some like the singlesex arrangement. If it went coed, "it would be ruined inside," said sophomore Susan Arena:
Haven plans social ac-

\section*{Artificial hormone causes cancer in young women}

\section*{By Walecia Konrad}

In the 1940 and \({ }^{150 s}\), doctors gave millions of pregnant women a symthetic hormone to prevent miscarriages. The hormone, diethylatilbestrol or DES, did not atop miscarriagen, but it did cause medical problems in a large part of the 4 to 6 million mothers daughters and sons exposed to DES.
Syracuse University student Judy is DES daughter. Luckily, she is not a victim of veginal cancer, which afficte vice out of every of 1000 DES-exposed daushter She does however, euffer droghters. She does, however, buffer from adenosis, a condition where abnormal patches of glandular celle are found on the cervix or the vaginal found wall
Adenosis, found in up to \(90 \%\) of DES-exposed women, is not Berious in itself, but must be closely examined because of the evidence linking cancer to DES exposure.
Another problem affecting about one-third of the women exposed to DES are structural abnormalities in the reproductive organs.
Most doctors who treat DES patiehte recommend that they not use birth control pills. The risks involved in taking birth control pills are multiplied when combined with exposure to the estrogen in DES.

Sons also affected
Although daughters have been most affected by DES esposure, recent evidence suggests some medical reper cussions in mothers and sons.
Preliminary research shows an increased risk of breast cancer and other cancers of the reproductive organs in mothers who took DES. There are also reports of urinary problems, genitalabnormalities, low sperm count, sterility and testicular cancer in DES anss.
No final statistics have yet been es tablished for mothers or sons however, investigations are continuing.
Because the oldest DES-exposed daughter is only 30 , it is impossible to determine the long-term effects DES may have on patienta and. their offrpring.
Although there is no information on the long-term medical effects, research has been done on the psychological effects.

Pgychological problems
The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare DES takk force report indicates varying degrees of peychological and social stress in many DES-exposed mothers and daughters. Commonly experienced emotions include anger, guilt, shame. fear of cancer and worries about fertility and sexual image.
"I was never really scared," Judy said, "because my mom always explained everything to me. But I do get angry when' I think that doctore could give out this drug so frequently for no reason, without knowing the consequences."
When Judy's mother first read about the hazards of DES in a newrapaper the hazards of DES in a newapaper blurb, she asked her gymecologistabout t. He told her the situation was blown out of proportion and refused to take any special precautions. She soon switched to a gynecologist with some knowledge about DES exposure.
"I was tearful and felt guilty," Judy's mother said. "I felt I should have known more about the drug before I took it. I felt totally manipulated by coctors."
Yet Judy's mother stressed the importance of overcoming these emotions and finding out about DES and the necessary precautions she and her daughter must take.
"Ive talked to mothera who feel so guilty they took thedrug, they don't tell their children. That's dangerous," she said.

The HEW report states, "Such examinations are not routine in our society, and thus, long-term paychological consequences of this procedure are unknown.
Yet the HEW stresses the importance of these examinations because if cancer is detected early, it cen usually be cured through surgery and radiotherapy.
The SU Health Center does not provide colposcopies. Dr. Ramzi K. Humsi, health center phybician, said he refers girls to Syracuse doctor Abid G. Musa for colposcopies. He added that he felt there wasn't much of a problem with DES exposure among problem with

However. Dr. Herbert Bauer, Syracuse doctor who alao treata DES patients, disagreed. "I would say DES was used as much here as anywhere else." Bauer said that the incidents resuiting from DES exposure are proportionate to national statistics. DESAction DES-exposed patients need not only turn to doctors for help in dealing with phyaical and emotional problems. They can also contact DES Action, a national, non-profit organization that informs panerts and helps them deal with their emotions.

SU Hilled members show their support for the lsraeli:Egyptian peace treaty.

\section*{Student groups clash on treaty}

Cries of praise and protegt from two Syracuse University student organizations came in response to the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty gigned in Washington, D.C. yesterday.
The SU Arab Student Organization and the B'nai B'rith Hillel Fonndation held conflicting rallies yesterday at 12:30 p.m. on the steps on Hendricks Chapel.
Approximately 30 ASO members protested the signing of the treaty while about 50 Hillel members praised the agreement.

The treaty calls for an end to hostilitiea between Egypt and Ifrael. Included in the treaty are guidelines for an Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai and a normalization of relations between the two countries.
While the ASO was marching around the quad, Hillel members, though not scheduled to start their rally until 1:30 p.m. stood on the steps of the Chapel.
After the ASO completed their march they returned to the Chapel steps and a shouting match began between Hillel and ASO.
"We support the P.L.O." and "Down with Sadat" were the cries from the Arabs. Hillel members ahouted back with "We support peace" and "Shalom." Both groups left about I p.m.

Nasgib Habayeb, president of the ASO, said the treaty "would be a start for war. The treaty should inclade the Palestinians," he said.
The peace treaty calls for talks to begin one month after the ratification of the treaty on the issue of Paleatinian self-rule in the Weat Bank and the Gaza Strip.

While Arabs here express bitterness about the treaty. Joyce Stein, Hillel president, expressed optiniam. "I think it's great," she said, but "it's too early to say" if the treaty will last.

Staging a rally which conflicted with Hillel'$, SL Arab students demonatrate their dissatisfaction with the Middle East pact.

\section*{DellPlain, Shaw show diverse dorm lifestyles}

Editor's note: This is the sixth segment in a 10 -part series examining housing at Syracuse University.
By Rick Bonnell
As far as living environments are concerned, many college students fall into one of two groups. One group likes a home-like atmosphere, while the a home-like atmoaphere, whie the other prefers a feeling or independence. Here at Syracuse University, DellPlain Hall provides an independent atmophere in a dormitory setting, and Shat Hall is about as close to being at Shafy Hall is about as Dellplain's high rate of upperclapemen is one reason for the dorm's atmosphere. Three hundred fifty of the 475 students in Dellplain are upperclassmen, and the dorm has one of the highest return rates on campus.
Seven of the eight floors in Dellplain are coed by room, and the first floor is all female.
Although many residents like Dellplain's independent atpaosphere, the dorm has the reputation of being unfriendiy. Paul Franco, a third year reaident, said this is because people often move into Dellplain in chiques which interfere with interaction on the flow.

There's a lack of sense of community," Franco said. "The people of this dorm see this place as just a place to sleep."
The fragmented atmosphere also seems to interfere with social activities in DellPlain. Only 77 of 475 Dellplain residents attended a free party sponresidents attended a free partycil in Nored by
"I think the problem lies in that the staff and the dorm council have failed to bring the dorm together," said Coun cil President Greg Weinglase.
While Weinglass said the rexident advisors do a good job, others in the dorm had less than kind things to say about their RAs. Some alleged that certain RAs.have not done an adequate job.
One resident eaid her RA had been openty selling druga during the year, and otherrs on the floor agreed.
The girl said this is inappropriate behavior for min RA. "If they want to be \(\mathrm{RAB}_{2}\) she said.
Despite its problems, DellPlain has many important advantages making it popular. It is within easy walking disMance of the Quad, Bird Library and Thornden Park, which provides extengive playing fields, jogging trails and baskethall and tennis courts Dellplain also offers many facilities and housing options. Open doubles, and small and large split doubles are available. Large splits are generally grabbed up by previous Dellplain residents.

A large lounge equipped with a kitchenette separates each floor into winge. Rooms at the end of ahort wings are-made into study lounges once extended housing is moved out of them. The dorm also has a first-floor library and a smack bar, open Sundays through inursdays.
Three dining halls - Shaw, Kimmel and Haven - are located withim one block, the closerst being Kimmel. In the past year, Kimmel has tried to improve its mese-hall atmosphere by adding murals to its walls.

In contrast to Dellplain's fragmented upperclassman environment, Shaw Hall residents said their dorm is friendly and home-like.
"This is a lot more a home than just a place to live," said Shaw RA Marilyn Glazier.
"I think it's good for freshmen," said second-year resident Diane McClurg. "They meet people because they are forced to.'
The basis for this involvement is Shaw's conversion to a coed living-learning concept four years ago. As aponsored by the Office of Residential Life and the College of Arts and Sciences, Shaw has been divided into nine units of up to 50 residents, each with a separate aubject of atudy.

Subjects range from "Sports in America" to "Ecology and Technology" An RA is assigned to each unit and leade the group in pieking speakers and organining otber ac tivitien Residents say groupe aleo determing whether the unit will be mos-

\section*{Carter's budget: taking from the needy}

Jimmy Carter has the Robin Hood theory all messed up. Hood theory to that tale we all remember from childhood, one is supposed to take from the rich and give to the poor.
President Cärter apparently thinks it should be the other way thinks it shound. The fiscal 1980 budget heis proposing calls for massive cuts in proposing calls programs - including financial aid for college students-and increases in the already gigantic military budget.

Carter's reasoning is shaky. "America does want to be the world's peacemaker," he said. But how can nuclear weapons conhow can nuclear, wate to world peace? They can't. But they can contribute to defense contractors' bank accounts, at the expense of the taxpaying citizen.
Simply, moremoney for weapons means lessaid to the poor. Financial aid forstudents will also becut. Look at the cuts that will affect college students. Carter proposes that Social Security benefits to college students should be eliminated. Today, if a student's parents are disabled or retired; the ptudent can get up to about \($ 1,500\) a yearin Social Security. Millions of yearin social security. Minits, and students get these benenis, and sidered from low-income families.

Although this proposal would not affect students already in college, its effect on peoplejust starting college could be devastating. Imagine if one-fourth of all your fmagine if one-fourth of all your eliminated when you were \(a\) freshman.
Carter also proposes that funding for the National. Direct Student Loan Program be cut from \($ 220\) million to \($ 90\) million a year. The president argues that the program has been so inefficient in the past that millions have failed to pay back loans.

But inefficiency is no reason to cut funding for a necessary program it is a reason to improve program should be totally redesigned so that it can be efficient and help students. Anything less than that is quite simply, ing less than the problem.

Furthermore, Carter is calling for cuts in the Baisic Educational Opportunity Grant program. This program gives needystudents up to \($ 1,800\) a year in grants, and most recipients have family incomes of under \($ 10,000\). Again, this is taking from the poor. Never mind the fact that millions of students need aid. Just take it from them - maybe Just take it from

A lot of people are noticing, however. Senator Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts said, "The budget is an unfair one because it gives too much to some and-demands too much from others."

Speaker of the House of Representatives Tip O'Neill was indignamt over the budget. "I've been working for the poor for 40 years," he said. "I didn't becomespeaker to strip them."

It is important that we notice, also. Write to Carter and/or your congressman and tell them how you feel about the budget. Tell themi how you think it will affect the poor. Tell them how it will affect you as a college student.

In the end, it is up to us. Congress will not dare to pass this budget if the public raises enough hell. We must remind Jimmy Carter about the Robin Hood theory.

His robber baron budget is a joke, and it is our duty to see that it is defeated.

Mono, a disease which affecte 100,000 college etudonts a yamr, may reatrict victirne to bed reat for weeks at it time.

\section*{Mono:}

Easier to catch than it is to cure

By Barbara Krupnicki
Infectious mononucleosis is a disease that is easy for college students to catch, but difficult for doctors to pin down.
Part of the problem is the widespread misunderstanding in both the medical profession and the college population about the disease's mode of transmission, symptoms and degrees of seriousness.
Susan Feit, administrator of the SU Health Center, Baid that mono is a virus, like a cold orinfluenza. After flu and respiratory infections, mono is the third most commonly conis the third most commonly contracted disease by college students, U.S. Public Health Service atudies show that mono aflicts approximately 100;000 college students each year.

Everyone has certain white blood cells - called mononuclear lymphocytes - in their bloodstreams. However, when a person's tolerance to viruses is lowered by cold weather or fatigue, the virus can enter the blood strearn, causing an increase in the amount and the development of abnormal lymphocytes.

Kisging Disease
Most people believe the virus is tranamitted by close physical contact. Its nickname, kissing Hoagland, noticed that outbreaks of mono peaked six weeks after the cadets returned from leave, according to the Newsweek article. However, since the disease did not pass from roommate to roommate, the doctor hypothesized that it was carried by galiva.

Although mono is often transmitted by lissing, itican also be contracted through sharing beverage bottlea or eating utensils, and in some cases, from receiving a blood tramsfusion from a person incubating the difease, according to the Reader's Digest.
A 1973 Comsumer Reports article staten that the in cuibation period for mono is epproximately one month. After this time, the person begins to exhibit some or all of the disease's symptoms.
"I had five exams in three days. and I had been pulling a lot of alli nightera. After my exams were over. \(I\) felt really tired. One morning \(I\) wolke up with a fever and I didn't: know where I was. I passed out whien I walked to the bathroom," said Skip Wardynski, a sophomore who had a Wardynski, a sophomore who had Along with the extreme fatigue and fever, symptoms include chills. sore throat, swollen glands, headaches and weaknesg. In serious casea, mono may affect theliver and spleen also.
Mono is difficult to diagnose because its symptoms often imitate those of other diseases. Although it is most commonly mistaken for flu, whooping cough or hepatitia, it has whooping cough or hepatitis, it has been misdi
One SU student said a case he contracted in 1974 whs mistaken first as hives, then as rheumatic fever; before it was correctly diagnosed. Another student said doctors told her she had an ovary infection from Wearing her jeans too tight before they discovered she had mono.
Feit said that the Health Center recommends that-students report the first eigns of mono, or any illness, to the center before the aymptome become unbearable.
In many cases, people will exhibit the aymptoms of mono, but not test positively, or they miay have few or none of the symptoms and still have the disease.
"It takes a good physician and a good laboratory test to diagnose mono," according to Dr. Alfred Evans, a mono researcher at Yale University.

\section*{Simple tegting}

Teating for mono involves a simple blood test called a mono spot. A drop of blood is taken from the patient's finger, and than measured for the amount of mono antibodies in the aystem, Feit said. The test is freeat the Health Center, the added.

Once mono is diagnosed, doctors usually recommend complete bed reat, increased intate of ifuids and medication auch as aspirin or menicallin for accompanying penicilin for accompanying symens cike fever or sore throata. In suggested.
There is no known drug or antibiotic which is effective against the mono virus itself, according to Consumer Reports.

Between Dec. 1 and Feb. 28 the Health Center diasmosed 114 cases of mono among SU students, Feit said.
Mono's degree of seriousness varies. Wardynald spent one week in the Health Conter infirmary before he was sent home for five weeks rest. While he was home, hespent most of While he was homa, hespentmast of the day aleeping- He had to withdraw from three classes missed, he staid.
"My professors were very understanding. One allowed me to take makonp exams, and another didn't count an exam I missed," he said.

However, another atudent said her profeasors were not underotanding when she had mono in her freshman year. "I.never caught up. My GPA really suffered. I was a firgt semerater freshman and I didn't know I should take incompletes. I tried to do work, but you get over mono better if you have no pressures at all," she said.
One history and political science major said that when he had mono in high school, he was out of school for \(I^{1 / 2}\) months. However, he said he would oceasionally go into school for a class or to see his friends, and he continued to play varsity football during his illness.
"I think some people play up on it. A lot of it is in your mind. I did milk it, I have to admit," he maid.
Pat Manturi, a senior who had mono in high school, said he had to drop basketball and several other activities for three months. He said the mono alowed him down. "1 lost a lot of quickness as a reault of mono, and I can still notice my lack of speed even now," he said.
Although the symptoms of mono usually subside in one to three weeks, the fatigue sometimes last for months, Dr. Evans said.
Despite occanional serious complicationg, infections mononucleosis is "a benign illness, ustrally of mhort duration," according to the lieader'a Digest article.

By feffrey Romannow
Early in 1966 George Balanchine ballet master for the New York City Ballet, paid a Visit to Van Cleef of Axpele Fifth Avenue Salon. Tacen by the beautiful dieplay of jewels, Balanchine decided to try to capture this beauty in dance. Sunday night at the Civic Center Syracuse was given a chance to look through George Balanchine's eyeglass and see the New York City Ballet perform the ballet "Jewels." What the audience saw and felt was a captivating array of colors and moods created by the ballet.
"Jewels" is made up of three separate dances, "Emeralds"" "Rubies" and "Diamondar" All radiated different moods and colors lending to the overall theme of "Jewels': the characteristic colors and emotions each stone seems to preasent.
As the curtain rose for the first dance, "Emeralds," the light, melodic bound of music set by Gabriel Faure and the soft green hue of the lighting and the shimmering cogtumes drew whispers of adulation from the audience. "Emeralds" concentrated on classical ballet with soft. caressing dance movements and light, lyrical music. The and light, lyrical music. The aecond dance, "Rubies," set to music by Igor Stravinaky, took almost a full turn regarding mood and tempo. Like the fiery red shime and movement of the ruby when held to the light, so wres the setting and performance of "Rubies."

The stage was lit in glowing, gensuous red and the dancers' coatumes were of a satin texture. The ballet was more ture. The ballet was more apbeat and contemporary. The movements of dancers Heather Watts, Robert Weiss and Wilhelmina Frankfurt were often explowive and powerfully expressive, It was the performance of "Rubies" that made one understand why Balanchine has been called the foremost conternporary choreographer in the world of ballet.
The dancing by Robert Weiss drew moat of the ap plause, his high leaps helping to set. the emotional at moaphere.
The final dance, "Diamonds," was equally es beautiful as the previous two ballets. But aggain the mood and the atmosphere get by the dancers and lighting was totally different from the other diances.

The number of dancers on the stage was the largest of all thiree ballets, and with the powerful grand air conveyed by the music of Peter Hyich Tchaikovsky the ballet carried a feeling of commanding excollence and grandeur. The principle, dancers in "Diamonds" were Suzanne Farell and Sean Lavery. Peter Martins, who usually dances with Farrells in "Diamonds," was unable to dance because of an injury. However, the per formance by Lavery was superb.

Balanchine once wrote "Like music of great musicians, it (ballet) can be enjoyed and understood without any verbal introdaction or ex planation . Sunday might's performance of "Jlewela" was a visual spec tacle par excellence, earning three curtain calla for the andience. It enabled those in the audience to get lost within the feeling of the ballet. \section*{Best part of job is working with students \\ thernselves, you know what I mean by}

By Carolyn Beyrau A stocky man in horned-rimmed ghasses and a green sweatshirt stepped off the elevator, easily pulling a hage trash bin behind him. As he maneuvered dow Hell he greeted a few third fioor of Day Hall, he greeted a few leepy residents with, "Nice day we're 'avin, ain't it?'
The man with the trash bin is Geoffery Charles Mace, a Syracuse University janitor. He immigratod to the United States from Great Britain 22 years ago, and he has been an SU employee, for all of those 22 years.
"When I came over in ' 57 , thinga were tough," the 62 -year-old Mace said em. phatically. "Weren't many jobs around. I was lucky to get what I did." On the third floor, the trash room door was kept closed to prevent the rank odor from eacaping. The garbage scattered over the floor was illuminated by a bare light bulb. Mace entered the room, turning his sleeves up. He emptied each garbage can in quick succession and then picked up the loose garbage that had been carelessly discarded.
"If you work 'ard, you know, there's opportunities for everyone in America," Mace said. "Boy, and I've worked 'ard, believe me. If you don't work 'ard you don't have anything. I used to work 'ard over in England just the same as 'ere but there was never no opportunity.'

Shortly after arriving in Syracuse from England, heand his family began work on a cabin in northern New York spending time there whenever they could spare it
"I built it myself," he said. "It's something the Mace family did by that? It's an accomplishment, a big job, you know. I took one little piece of wood up there at a time on the car 'cause it's in the woods. You can't have nothin delivered I had to carry everything."

Mace aleo had to work hard to become an American citizen. He and his wife went to night school for six Weeks to learn the facts about the United States government that they needed to pass the U.S. citizenship test.
"It's not easy to become a citizen, you know that?" Mace said, shaking his finger. "You got be good. When Iwasi't a citizen I was like a fish out of water, a citizen I was like a figh out of water, as we say in England. When f becamea citizen it was a wonderful feeling; don't know the feeling you have."
As an immigrant, Mace was sponsored by his brother-in-law, a Syracuse resident, before coming to thie U.S. Mace's sister came to the States during World War II, which was part of the reason he moved.
However, he was prompted most by the American soldiers he met in England while working as a U.S. Army depot during the war.
"I like the (American) boys so much," he recilled, "Why, they used to run in my house like they owned it over there. I liked the American people over there and that's why I came here."
Mace has not been back to England since his emigration, although relatives have come to visit him
"This is my 'ome now; I got nowhere else," Mace baid. "I'd like to go back, else, Mace said. "rd like to go back, but Ive been too busy."
Not only did Mace have to orient himbelf to America, but he also had to himself to America, but he also had to establigh a home for his wife and his three children, the youngest of whom was born his first year here.
"I worked long hours all them years so my kids could go to college," he said. "I give 'em opportunity. They can't look back and say, 'Well my dad and my mom, they never gave me any opportunity.' They say they got the best motherrand father in the world.'
Mace has three children, ages 35, 28 and 18. Although each was eligible to attend SU tuition-free because Mace is an SU employee, none has chosen to do so.
"How can you make a kid go to a certain college?" Mace said.
His oldest child, a son, entered the U.S. Navy after he finished high school and his younger aon attended Florida State-University Mace's youngest child, a daughter, livee with Mace and attends night achool.
Like his own children; Mace said the students he has seen come and go during his 18 years at SU are "nice kids." Hithough he admitted he cannot be oidfashioned in his job, Mace, a teetotaler, diasagreed with-drinking and all that "Tuff.
"That's the only sad thing I see here," he said. "You know, you gó outside and see all them beer bottles scattered all over the place. I've aeen your grandparents, your parents and 've seen most of the children and they all do the same thing. They all drink:"
Nonetheless, Mace said the best part of his job is working with students. His daily greetings to the residents are usually reciprocated and his face is familiar on every floor.
"He's a great guy," said Candy McComber, a resident adviser on the third floor of Day. "He's always got something nice to say.'

\section*{SA committee helps students fight SU red tape}

By David Zamolski
Feeling helpless while fighting the university bureaucracy is an uncomfortable position for any stadenk But last moxih, nitiated a prol the indiviaual university problem he encounters.
Under the auspices of the SA Administrative operationcommittee wes the Samll Problems Subcommittee was formedon February 5 "to wade through the bureaucracy for people who have niether the time nor the information to do so themselves," said David Cleary, administrative operations vice president.
"We can solve the problem faster than the individual," Cleary said. "We' te got to help the studenta because an indi vidual student isn't al ways able to help himself."
Any difículties that Small Problems cannot resolve will be directed to someone who can be of assistance or to another service, such as Alteracts and. the Student Legal Service, according to Cleary.
Cleary's committee, composed of seven assembly membera, has been faced with problems ranging from broken facilities in'Lawrinson Hall to grading disputes between students and professors.
professors. case involved a female student living off campus who called security four times to get a ride from campus to her apartment late at night. Cleary said. Each time she called, Becurity refused to give her a side.
cleary was most annoyed by a problem the residents of Comstock Cotprobe, 760 Comscock Ave., encounteredtage, 760 Comscoc
"Therresidents wanted a fire escape installed but maintenance refused," he said. "The residents then offered to pay half the cost of a fire escape if maintenance would furnish an eacape. Again, maintenance refused. It was then the residents turned to Small Problems.'

Small Problems has solved half of the cases brough't to them since February, Cleary said. "But remember. some of them are time-consuming to some ," he said.
Because SA's budget is tight, there has not been a publicity campaign for has not been a publeity campaign for Small Prob However, Cleary and his staff have put flyers under each dormitory door, have drafted Ietters to all campus resident advisers and have run advertisiments in The Daily Orange's Here. tisements in The Daily
There & Everywhere.
Cleary said Small Problems is part of SA's aim to make students aware of what SA can do for them.
"Students are paying \($ 44.25\) student fees and are not aware of what they're paying fori," Cleary said.' "It's not a glorified job for SA. We're a service to the students. We_want to get their problems solved" Dale said he thinks the concept of Small Problems is "fantastic
"But then again it was myiden" But then again, it was my idea, h said. We will look out for the interest of the individual."
Students who wish to contact Small Problems ahould call 423 -2650 or complete a problem form, available at the plete a problem form, availabl

Football five finds happy marriage in track
}

The age of the two-sport athlete in college thlerics às dying but, but five SU football playera participated in indoor track this winter in order to help prime them for spring football practice. Offensive lineman Craig Wolftey says throwing the shotput (left) teaches explosion and body control. two key factors for a good blocker (above). Cooperation between football coach Frank Malonay and track coach Andy Jugan may result in the players being able to participate in both abietopr track end spring practice. The football practice. The football wortrouts this Friday

\section*{By Drew Schwartz}

They are often wed by the common bond of speed. Yet, football-track marriages among Division I college athletes have becume less frequent in the past 15 years, according Head Football Coach Frank Maloney.
The reason for less dual participatio
The reason for less dual participation is that increased pressures to win the "big-time" college football have made the sport a 12 Wheress football players once took up a second sport to keep in shape, year-round conditioning programs now serve that purpose.
However, SU football players Joe Morris, Art Monk, Craig Wolfley, John White and Doug Smith chose the two-sport method of keeping in shape by participating in indoor track this past winter.

They're performing a valuable service to the team," said track Coach Andy Jugan in appreciation of his "borrowed" athletes. "We'd have \(a\) hell of a time trying to fill \(15-18\) events without them.
"But they're not doing us any good at all if they're doing it as a favor," he added. "I'm not around to gerve somebody else's conditioning needs."
The football players' contribution helped Jugan's team achieve a \(10-5\) record, with Morris playing a major role in many of the victories, specializing in the 50 -meter sprint and \(400-1\).
meter relay.
By the time the speedster from Ayer, Mass., reached fourth grade, he was outrunning junior high school athletes. "My mother used to worry about me all the time, Morris recalled of his prehigh school track daya. But enough and I loved all those blue zibbons."
Morris continued his spectacular running in high school, becoming the first two-time New England 100-yard champion.
After graduating from Ayer High School, Morris went to the junior Olympics last summer, where he ran 100 yards in 9.5 seconds. Before deciding to attend Syracuse, Morris made it clear to football recruiters that he wanted to rum track in college.
Monk also gained recognition as a high achool track star in White Plains, N.Y. Before coming to Syracuas, he carned a first-place finish in the 330-yard intermediate hurdles at a national meet in 1976.
Monk regularly ran the 50 -meter high hurdles and the 400 -meter relay this season. Jugan said the versatile junior could become the NCAA decathalon champion if he trained year round.
Besides a weightlifting routine to prepare for apring football, Wolfley does very little training to throw the shotput. However, he has enjoyed the challenge of heaving the 16-pound cast-iron ball as far as his strength allows.
The Orchard Park, N. Y, native said the heavy weightlifting he does for the shotput teaches explosion and body control, which have helped his blocking as an offensive lineman.
Jugan said Wolfley's devotion to weights (the junior bench presses more than 400 pounds) has paid dividendsin both sports. proper footwork are important to linemen and strength is very im portant to shotputters," Jugan said.

Track training also has an extra benefit for White, a freshman walk-on punter who will compete for incumbent Jim Goodwill's job this spring. The long jumper from Westchester, N.Y. said track has strengthened his legs so when spring football arrives, he will be able to punt at maximum efficiency sooner. than if he had decided to take the winter off
Maloney encourages his players to par ticipate in track because he said it is the ideal coripanion sport. "Track keeps their wind in good shape,"Maloney said. "They don't tend to pudge and it keepe their legs well-toned."
Smith entered spring foothall practice last year in such good condition that he was able to impress Maloney and make the team as a walk\({ }^{\circ}{ }^{\mathbf{j}} \mathbf{j}\)
Jugan also observed the December switch in sports is extremely difficult. "Football to track is the most logical and easiest adjustment but not necessarily everything you do in football would carry over into track.
Morris claims that greater flexibility is one of the primary benefits his second sport delivers. He said another advantage being able to transfer improvements in speed and quickness gained from track to the football field and will be "that much more effective."
Although Morris may use related skills to outrun sprinters and escape the clutches of defensive linemen, the paychological differences of the two sports could never be mistaken for distant cousins.
"In football you're one part of a whole system that strives for a common goal," Morris aaid. With the exception of relays, track is a team sport composed of individuals, Morris added.
The pre-game preparation for the two aports is also drastically different. "In football the game plan changes every week, but in track you play whit has to be done over and over in your mind," Morris said. "You don't have to think; it ust becomes instinct.
As a result of this instinctual process, track involves much less practice time. "Foothell is ten times more demanding," Jugan said. "You can't get lost going around a circle."'
Both Morris and Monk have expressed-an interestin rumning around the track this spring Jugan said he can only koep the athletes he thinks are aure bets to qualify for the outdoor IC4A championship meet. However, Morris Monk and Smith all qualified for the indoor ICAA's and therefore meet Jugan's standard.
Although Jugan would like to have the talented trio in the spring, he eaid they would have to initiate discussions with Maloney.
"Football is paying those guys" freight and don't want to be the fly in the ointment,"Jugan stressed. "Coach Maloney has always been very supportive and fair.

We only practice four daye a week in the spring and we could try to work something out that is mutually effective," Maloney said.
It appears the cooperation between the two coaches will allow the two sport-stars to continue their happy marriages.
Monk, Morris, Wolfley, White and Smith will get untracked this Friday when the SU football. team opens its apring football practice.

A suit presented by three university-area groups to halt construction of the Carrier Dome at Syracuse University was dismissed yesterday by State Supreme Court Justice Edward F. MeLaughlin.
The Home Owners Mobilized for Environmental Safety, the Southeast University Neighborhood Ascociation and the Outer Cometock Neighboriood Association claimed that construction of the dome is in violation of New York state environmental laws
'I'm very disappointed," said Marjorie Oricin, president of HOMES. "I've'always had great faith in the courts and the law, and for gome crazy reason I've the courts and that faith. But now I'm not so aure. I'm just never lost th

McLaughlin ruled that the state Urban Development Corporation had a "rational basis" for not requiring an environmental impact etatement

The judge aleo ruled that the City Planning Cornmission did not act in an "arbitrary and capricioua" manner when it decided that the dome will not violate long-range plans for the neighborhood

The original suit was filed against the UDC, the City Planning Commission and the County Planning Board, who approved the plans for the stadium. The petitioners claimed that "no intelligent planning has gone into this project," and that the Archbold site is an "incredibly inefficient" location for a domed stadium.
They also said the large crowds anticipated at the stadium will cause serious parking, pollution and safety problema in the area.

Many students at Syracuse University spend their first years in large dorms, later moving on to Skytop, off-campus. or Greel housing. Yet residents of the Area and the International Living Center see them as positive compromises between the rowdy atmosphere of a dorm and the hassles of an apartment.

The Area houses 640 people in 15 buildings. Each building has anywhere between 12 and 100 etudents and is unique in shape and size, unlike the dorms, and is unique in ahape and size, unlike the dorms, Thich Areem has an 80 percent return rate.

The forum is open to all members of the university commanity, including faculty and staff as well an atudents.

However, this does not mean the Area will close, Horst said. There are no major problems with brick structures euch es Seneca, and no plans to close them. Most people in Area housing are upperclasamen who chose to live there, and nost seem happy with their chaice.

George Grow, a senior resident, called Seneca "an echo chamber." Stereos and musical instruments cain be heard clearly at night, he said.
In spite of this, Grow said Seneca is conducive to privacy because of the aingle bedrooms and semiprivate bathrooms found in suites.
While Seneca residents like theirhomein spite of its thin ceilings and an ugly basement sitting room with little furniture and no television, Abrams residents praise their home.
"I lived in Flint my first-two years, and got tired of living in a cubicle," said Dan Bianca, a junior. "This place has got a lot of charm to it, like the diversity of rooms."
Amy Chapman, a sophomore, agreed the different room atructuree are a plus. "There axe seven singles here, only one double, and the rest are triples, quads and one six-person room."

Abrams residents said many people return to the Area because mtudents there are generally older and Area because thindents there Schechter also said he was disappointed with the decision.

"But there is no doubt in my mind that the case will go into the.higher courts before it is finally decided." he said. "Consequently, I am beginning to prepare my appeal."
However, Orkin said that HOMES and SEUNA, who have pooled their resources to pay court costs, have no móney for further court action right now. "We do aeem to be able to raise money when we need it though," she said. "We'll just have to go out and ask for it."

Joseph V. Julian, SU's vice president for public affairs, said he was "delighted" with yesterday's court decision.

But some people feel the description of SU is accurate. "The grade inflation here is tremendous, and I speak as someone who has benefited from that inflation," Student Association President Jordan Dale said. "The academic standards are pretty lax in most ases."
One of the main criticisms of \(S U\) in the \(Y\) ale book is that the university is impersonal. "Everything seems computerized, from regintration to library checkout, and it's not unusual to feel a little lost in the crowd," the book said.

\section*{A chance to criticize}

Tonight, Student Association is rorowing an idea from the Univerborrowing Senate.
It is holding an Open Forum in Kittredge Auditorium at 7:00 p.m., to give students an opportunity to question, criticize, and make quggestions to SA President Jordan Dale and his administration.

Like the university administration, SA has been accused of being alienated from students. Whether this is a fair assessmentis not as important as the fact that this feeling, for some students, does exist. Students do not know how SA touches them, or what really concerns the SA biggies in their little gray building at 821 University Ave.

There is a mystique about SA, an isolation from the rest of the students - whether it's because of SA's own actions or general apathy on the part of everyone else. But this administration apparently wants to change that.

Dale has instructed all SA assembly members to attend dorm floor meetings, so they will have a clearer idea of what their Open Forum is the first in many years.

Dale, SA Comptroller Dale Cohen, and other SA administrators are asking for criticisms and ideas.

And their requestisan important step towards bringing SA closer to the people it represents.

Questions for Jordan Dale, SA President:
1. Does SA feel faculty unionization is in the best interest of students?
2. What is being done to memorialize Ernie Davis?
3. What is SA doing to ensure the survival of Community House?
Questions for Dale Cohen, SA comptroller:
1. How will the student fee increase be spent?
2. Can students expect a real growth in campus services?
Questions for Dan Keefe, SA vice president for academic affairs:
1. To assure fairness in the teacher evaluation guide, shouldn't students doing teacher critiques have had the teacher in the past? 2. If not, how can an objective and accurate evaluation be made based on observing only two or three classes?
3. How fair is your planned survey of the ten best and ten worst lecturers?

Questions for Frank Slazer, SA vice president for student programs:
1. What is being done to save the Commuter Plan?
2. The Quality of Life survey, which campus residents completed, seemed both vague and very broad. What did you learn from the survey, and what will be done with the results?

3. How many times has the Syracuse University Bookstore Advisory Council met since its first meeting in early March, and exactly what has it accomplished?
Questions for Larry Beer, SA vice president for university/community relations:
1. Why hasn't anything been done with the Nestles boycott?
2. Why did the SA Assembly support the Committee to Stop Apartheid's protest of IBM only after it had already taken place? How far is SA willing to go to support divestiture of SU's stocks in companies operating in South Africa?

Questions for Dave Cleary, SA vice president for administrative operations:
1. What is the average attendance at SA Assembly meetings, and what are you doing to increase it?
2. Will you make it mandatory for assembly members to meet with their constituents at floor meetings? How successful has this been so far?

Evaluating effectiveness

\section*{Guest comment: Peter Osborne}

Formany years, Student Association has expressed its intent to publish an effective teacher evaluation catalog. Publications like the course evaluation guide, Touchstone, resulted from this desire to provide students with a basis to compare teachers. After careful consideration, the SA Academic Affairs Committee decided to publish a catalog, to be called The Good, the Bad and the Boring, using written critiques rather than statistical data-
Why a critique instead of a survey? I think perhaps a different question should be answered first. What would a critique include? The evaluator would be required to sit in on a number of classes his assigned professor taught, keeping in mind that professors differ according to the learning environment. Printed instructions written by editor Jim Naughton and Rita Giordano emphasize the need for a balanced picture. Thasize are often as many different There are often as many different opinions of a professor as there are students. For that reason, a vital part of the evaluation's task is interviewing of the evaluation stask is interviewing studenta in the cla overall perspective.
One might say getting objective in formation would be easier to get from a printed survey. Indeed, many teachers feel SA is malking a grave mistake not using the survey method which "was so effective in Touchstone." But as any statistics professor can tell you, every "expert" has a different conception of what makes up a valid survey. Professionals have difficulty getting acceptance from professionals. By using the tance from professionals. By uaing the ourselves up to tale criticism actine ourbelves up to take criticisin from a scientific aspect from teachers who received negative reports.

The last catalog published in this field was the infamous Touchstone. Credibility for this publication was and is non-existent. Touchstone followed the survey format and had invalid questions and interpretations which did not necessarily follow the data from the questions. We felt a complete turnaround from previous years might be in order.

The element of timeis another factor. Drawing up a valid survey, printing and distributing it, collecting and interpreting it, and ultimate publication would take a great deal of time. Publication probably would not take place until next gpring. Publication of the critiques will take place over the summer and distribution will be at the beginning of the fall semester.

An immense task is ahead of us. Many people have expressed an Many people have expressed an interest in various aspects of the project. Many more are needed to make needed from every course of study in needed from every course of study in the university. We have a lackor people from the smaller schools in the univer sity, that is, Engineering, Computer and Information Science, etc. More people are needed from the larger schools also. With editors like Jim Naughton. Howard Mansfield, and Jacqui Salmon, minimal writing ability is needed. Interest in the project is what is important.
Production people are also needed. No publication could exist without the behind-thescenes people. Layout. advertising. artwork and all other phases of production are just as important as the writing. Without produc tion, all we have is a stack of papers. With it, we have a living document for all to see.

The ultimate aim for this catalog is to give students a basis on which to make a decision. The critiques are designed to provoke discuasion and argument among students. Obviously, everyone will not agree with what is written about professors.
However, at no point will we atate that the critiques are the final word. That the critiques are the inal word. Thomas Jefferson once said, "Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free tocombatit. the critiques. Strong bias one way or the critiques. Strong bias one way or the other wi the editors.

The higheat degree of objectivity can only be maintained through participation of a wide variety of students. Get involved in something really important. Call Jim Naughton. Dan Keefe, or Peter Osborne at 423-2650. Peter Osborne is chairman of the SA teacher evaluation subcommittee.

Activities funded by Student Association may be reduced to help pay for the phone bills of student organizations funded by the student fee, aiccording to Dale Cohen, SA comptroller.

Cohen said the total amount of thia year's phone bill has not yet been tabulated. He said the extra expenges will have to come out of SA publicity and programming.
"It's possible that certain activities will have to be cut," he added.

Last year SA and the Syracuse University Office of Student Affairs split the bill, with each paying approximately \($ 4,000\), according to former SA Comptroller Carl Kleidman.

"From a layman's point of view, I think the law is absolutely unconstitutional," Scher said.

Scher thinks if the law is enforced and not challenged in court, concert promoters will stop bringing big-time bands to the War Memorial.

Powell, who has taught at SU for siz years, is leaving in June to more actively pursue a career as a freelance illustrator

I love something while 1 do it and when I feel I'm finished with it, I look for a new experience," Powell explained.
Before teaching, Fowell was the art director at Mastropaul Design Inc. in Syracuse. That job encompassed all felds of artincluding advertiaing, fine art, and graphic design. Siice then he has concentrated on illustration.
The other illustration profeasors "have been sup-

After teaching at SU for six years. Ivan Powell is léaving to pursue his career as an illustrator. Powell, deascribed by students as "zany. unbelievably intereating and great." lives in Greenwich Village four days a weak. Powell said. He calls this step another "new experience" in his life.
Powell's experiencee have ranged from his art related oceupations to bartending, taxi driving and axtensive travel:
To escape the conformity of a business world envroring and teachived in the university area while vars.
"I like the type of lifestyle acceasible in a university area," Powell said aid Jon Perny and a very peraonable kind of gay,' said Jon Perina, a senior in illustration who has taken two of the artiata courses.

An assignment often happens right in front of class," Powell said, admitting his teaching style is unusual.-."I just run at the mouth, that's the basis of my style."
He said his teaching techniques keep his students interested during class. "I care for them as individual people, giving them all equal time," he added. Powell's classes meet regularly every three weeks. Between classies, atudents are scheduled to see him individually to discuss the progress of their work.
Once his class pulled an all-nighter together to aee what happens to the quality of work throughout a long session. "Students must pull all-nighters as a form of self-punishment," commented Powell. The results of the experiment showed that the quality of work declineg. "It gets 23 hours uglier," Powell said.

According to Powell, his studenta are influenced by his etyle of illustration, which is usually a line drawing rubbed over with pastels. This style seems to give the work a feeling of motion and immediacy.
Powell has done work for Esquire, Penthouse, The New York Times, NBC, World Tennis Magazine and Quest, as well as designing book jackets. In addition, he has won many awards for his Salt City Playhouse posters.
Powell tries to keep his notoriety in the correct perspective. "Considering my black ghetto background, Ive come a tong way - becoming visible in the community through ability and hard work. But it shouldn't get blown out of proportion," he said
Powell was one of the designers and builders of the elephant slide at the Everson Museum. "We builtit so it would have to be maintained. Neither the city nor the county, wanted the responsibility, so about four years ago it was torn down," Powell said. He ironecally pointed out
As if in defiance of this side of man, Powell continues to create and build through his illustrations. His presence at SU has been an ingpiration for students to do the same.

In fact, Dale asid, the worst thing about the univeraity "has to be the impersonality of the bureaucracy hat just dwarfs any sense of being an individual." The Yale book also criticizes SU'a admissions policy. "Although Syracuse hires good individuals for teaching, the admissions policy is very lax," the suide says. "Syracuse's reputation is that of an expensive private university, and it tends to take virtually anybody with average grades who can pay the cost."
Gies said this criticiarn was unfair.' "The admisaions standards are lax -compared to what?' he eaid.

The guide gives figures for the median SAT ścores of SU students. The median score for men is 492 in verbal and 547 in math;-while the median verbal score for women is 483, and the median math score is 495, accordirig to the guide.
Cumminge said he didn?t think these figures were applicable because each school and college at SU has different admissions standardis.
"Actually, they're not bad figures," he added. They don't sound like figurea any university would be ashamed of." Cummings said the average SAT scores for college-bound students are 429 in verbal and 469 in math.
Gies also criticized the guide because he said it was oversimplified. "It's very, very difficult to answer thoae kinds of generalities," he said. "Anything anybody bays is shadow-boxing with generalities."

Powell illustrated the cover of "Smoke: Another Jimmy Carter Adventure," written by Alexandeir Cockburn and James Ridgeway. The book (above) is a satire of the Carter administration. Many of the posters Powell has designed for the Salt City Playhouse, such as the one below, have earned him honors. This type of illustration is quite unlike Pawell's usual line-drawing style.

One afternoon late last September, 10 -year-old Mario sat beside a bushel basket halffilled with apples he had picked. He had been moving from tree to tree in the large orchard since early morning, reaching for the ripe, red fruit. Through the branches, Mario could see his father and mother filling similar baskets.

While most childrem Mario's age are at achool, he must work in the fields to help his parents supporit their family. Mario is one of thousands of migrant children in this country who to field, wheriever a crop is ripe. to field, wherever a crop is

Syracuse workshop
Last week, parents and teacherb of migrant farmworker children met for three days at the Sheraton Inn in Syracuse for the New York State Migrant Tutorial Education Workshop. The participants attended discussions and activities designed to look at the children's difficulties and the programs that exist to and the pro.
The workshop was sponsored by the Migrant Tutorial Sored by the Migrant Crogram Consortinm, an organization of migrant education programs in New York state schools and olleges.
Tad. Thompaon, workíhop coordinator, explained how the Tutorial Outreach Program works.
"In 12 areas throughout New York state are located tutorial 'eatellites,' each of which provide educational services to migrant children within a certain geographical distance," Thompeon said. TOP tutors are sent into the schools to work with migrant children. Emphasis is placed on reading, mathematics and bilingual education, where needed.
Richard A. Bove of the Chief Bureau of Migrant Education, Néw York State Education Department, said the reason the United States itarted programs such as TOP was out programs such as ISP was out of fear that the USSR was pas-these programs exist to help these groups. Legislation passes every year which increases funding, thus allowing us to improve the programs every year," he added.

Jim Symula, director and president of the TOP. Consortium, said the TOP programa have-grown immensely in thelast 10 years.
In 1973, the TOP dealt with a little over 100 cids . Now we currently have. two more Outreach stations in the wor kings for the mtate. We will then have the whole state. blanketed."
Symula added that Syracuse University joined the TOP this year, not as an outpost butas a sponsor.

\section*{Tutors help}

One of the most successful components of the TOP, according to Bove, is the Goals for Youth 'Program, which for Youth Program, which League players -into the schgols as tutors.
"The ballplayeris are people first and interegted in helping first and interested in helping encouragerment and a pat on the back does an awful lot. The players provide a sort of héro worship.

From New York state, the TOP uses minembers of the Buffalo Bills and the New York Giants. Bills-defensive lineman Eric-Smith, who attended Tast week's Workshop, commented on how he works with migraht children.

I first try to talk to them and find ont where their heads are at. These kids are more mature than the average," he said. "They see how life works at an early age and must learn how to survive earlier than most lids."
Smith aaid educatore do not always understand these capabilities in migrant chpabilities in migrant principal who sent a family of migrant children home for of migrant children home for be weathers. "Ther.
family oldest girl of that years old was in about 10 years old, was in charge of keeping the whole-household and getting the kids to school. When I asked that principal why he had sent them home. he said that he wanted to teach them some responsibility. How much more responaibility could he ask for?":

Vidal A. Rivera Jr., of the Migrant Education Branch of the U.S. Office of Education also described the problems of migrant children.
"Their environinent is void of everything we take for gupermaīkets banks, the manence. The, the per even sets up a different stan dard for them. The working age was lowemed from working age was lowered from 12 to 10 years old. That's like walking into a McDonalds and having a 10-year-old wait on you you'd never see it."-

Records system The key to helping migrant children lies in cooperation among states in sending records of progress and learning levels wherever migrant Student Record Transfer System currently provides this service to some extent.
\({ }^{4}\) For every migrant child, a record is Eled on his health, recordisged onkills and educational progress," Rivera said of the computerized system. "When he moves to another area, the record is transferred to the new achool system, where teachers can even learn what the child was even learn what the child was learning the day he left his old locating a child is seven minutes."
Rivers said a standard system is now being developed so that all teachers across the country will be able to understand the different educational information on the records. As of now, the medical information is the most used.

The records are inaccessible to anyone not authorized to see them," he continued. "We've refused the FBI, CLA and the immigration services: We aren't concerned with a child's citizenship, we just want him to have the education he is entitled to."
Migrant parents are enthusiastic about the programs. Sandra Chase, a mother on the Parent Advisory Council, thinks the program is "wonderful."
"I can see the results in my' own children. The gaps are being bridged.
Tina Buchaman, another mother on the council; thinks the tutors should visit the homes to let the parents know how their child is progreasing.
"Otherwise, I think the program is good," she said. "I want my son to have the opportunity to go as far as he wants - evencollege. It will be Wants-evencollege. It will be has the chance to go that far."

Editor's note: This is the first of a two-part series on DO sportswriter Alan Fectean's adventures as an and goaltender for the Syracuse University lacrosse team during the fall season.

By Alan Fecteau
National Hockey League goalie Eddie Giacomin once authored an article goalie in the NHL It was titled "You Goatta Be a Nut."
Gracomin's point was that, to be an NHL netminder, you had to be bonkers. The piece listed characteristics of the position, such as gray hairs, loud boos and opponents' shots aimed at the and o

Sounds like fun, huh?
Maybe he was right. To tolerate conditions like that, it would seem a bit of the crazies is necessary.
But hockey goalies are not alone. Thes can innd comfort with their lacrosse counterparts, methinks. The position nearly mirrors hockey goalies

A lacrosse ball moves slightly slower (about 85 mph ) than a hockey puck (about 110 mph). Lacrosse goalies must cover 12 additional square feet of net area. And, of utmost importance to me area. And, of utmist importance to me last fall, lacrosse goanes have conthe legs.
Maybe that is why Jay Gallagher, assistant coach for the Syracuse University lacrosse team, advised me at my sity lacrosse team, advised me at my first practice in Octaber to "leave the kick saves to Eddie Giacomin."
My guess is Giacomin is not as crazy as he claimed in the article. At least he has leg pads.

\section*{Láx lesson.}

Actually, at the first practice, I wauld have been pleased with any kind of save., "I'm going to atart you from day one," Gallagher said. "C'mon, jump in one, cage."
I have to admit, I did not exactly jump. As I neared the nets, my thoughts drifted to how I "Put your heels on the goal line. now take a step out. 'That's where you work from. Go from pipe to pipe with shot comes, move to it. . Anattack the ball" Gallagher explained.
After the lesson, he took a few shots. Some I saved. Some hit me because I wasn't quite quick enough to get out of behind me. On the bright side, I quickly became proficient at scooping the ball out of the netting behind me and flipping it back to Gallagher.
Wing it back to Gallagher. Gallacher. Until I became accustomed got to him on one or two bounces. "What, do I need equipment on to play catch with you, Fecteau?" Gallagher catch with you, Mectea. the nets for a scrimmage. Here, my the nets for a scrimmage. Here, my ing play, a goaliermust be vockal, calling out where the ball is at all times

The man behind the mask is Daily Orange sportswriter Alast Foctaau, who was a goalio on the SUlacrosene team during the fell season. Fecteau, who played with no leg pads, survived "atingers," "buddy passes" and vengeful assintent coaches.
Instructions help defensemen know check" is really the result of a high where the ball is without actually looking for it.
Luckily, the ball seemed to be at the other end of the field a great deal, so 1 didn't have to rummage through the netlingtoo then. But sti, passing wa a problem. The coaches told me the pas sing motion in lacrosse is like throwing a baseball. Passing is crucial for goalies, and I learned how quickly they out "buddy passes."
A "buddy pass" is" one that is somewhat accurate, but is lofty and slow getting to the receiver. As the ball hangs in midair, an opponent is afhangs in midair, an opponent is arforded plenty of time to line up the checke.
Check.

\section*{'I made the fatal mistake - I upstaged the assistant coach.}
walling up the grassy hill bebind Coyne.
The wind sprints. Why don't we just skip this part.
As I straggled to the locker romom, Gistant coach Mneaney, another as gotta stick coach, approached me. "You need another target? Hooboy.
The other target was backup-goalie Steve Gorman. ''You're playing Eoalie? Does that mean I get to: play DO reporter?" he anked:
Gorman has played behinid SU atarter Jamie Molloy for the past two seapons, He yiewed this fall exhibition geason as a chance to show the coaches he capable of starting Molloy spent Ane semester abroad, studying in Amatercam.

Gorman's nickname is "Gorm-fry," as in "fry-brain." The nickname is an indication of his Gracomin-type reputation. But in the nets, he is intensely competitive. He believes sincerely he should make every save, clear the ball every time . . no mio takes. Even when he appears not to be at fault for allowing a score, Gorman accevts the blanae
"Gorm-fry" was my chief counselor during the first few days of practice. "You gotta áttack the ball," he would say. "You can't be afraid."
For at the outset, I developed a habit of "covering up" to prevent "stingers" - shots to the protective cup over the groin. I had heard that, even with the cup on the pain from a "stinger" is somewhat like having your toensiss pulled out, one at a time. My conoern Whas so obvious that Head Coach Roy Simmons Jr. immediately dubbed me as having "castration complex.

\section*{Dangerous drills}

Goalie drills and taking shots helped. Coach Gallagher would initiate the clear-out drill by toasing a ball to the goalie. But before doing so, he would ry to fake him in mome manner.
Standing about three yards away, he would force goalies to look up by holdwould force goalies to look tip by holding the ball above his head. Byasking a question, he would try to entice the goalie to look down. For ingtance:
"Awright, Al. What's the color of your ahoes?
"Uh...Orange"" I said.
What's the weats?" "Uma in uh ... there ian't any number," I replied.
"Awright I'm going to score right now. Ready? Shoot . . score."
Gallagher would then throw the bail At times he would just flip the bal 6 me. Occasionally he would really gol' the score. After picking off one rea attempt, I made the fatal mistake upstaged the assistant coach.

In your face, Jay," I laughed.
Gallagher retreated to pick up another ball. "What did you say, Al?" face, Jay.," said you have a neal nice Needless to say, he didn't buy it. He threw the next hall into the net: . .right through the epace where myi head through the bepace if hadri't ducked.
Next: The game.

Mike Sheehey, a 6'4" guard-forward from Rocheater, has gigned an institutional grant with Sycacuse Uniyersity. Sheehey, of Rochester East High School, is one of the most highly-recruited baskethall players in the Rochester area. His arrival will not be guaranteed pntil he signs a letter of intent by April 15.

Syracuse also recruited Sheehey's tieamininte, Mark Jonet, but the 6 '2" puard decided to attend St. Bonaventure in the fan.

South Campus Housing may appear to be an appealing op portunity to get away from crowded dorms, where privacy is as rare as a late bill from the bnrsar. But, there are negative aspects that the potential Skytopper should consider before making the move.
The two and three-bedroom apartments are usually clean, modern, efficient and in relatively good condition. For most residents, theidea of having their own kitchen and living room, coupled with the novelty of sharing a bathroom with only one or two people, makes Skytop an enticing option to other forms of university housing.
However, the independence attained by moving to Skytop, students, can be transcended by the isolation from campus activities. In addition, the serse of community that prevails in most dorms and the opportunity to meet new people is virtually non-existent in Skytop.
Jean Crewford, assistant director for South Campus housing, admitted this is the biggest problem among residents. "It's very difficult to communicate when everyone's got their own front doors," she said.
Although South Campus housing is available to all fulltime students except freshmen, Crawford acknowledged that the independence and isolation students who problems for made fis who haven't aiready fortable at Syracuse Univerfortab

No one wants a new stadium more than Syracuse University students. Supreme Court Justice Edward Fr. McLaughlin cleared the way for construction at the Ar chboldi site. Tuesday when he dismisese \(&\) sait by three universityairea groups who oppose the stadium's construction.

But we cannot consider the decision' a victory.
The arguments against the Ar chbold site brought by the Homeowners Mobilized for Environmental Safety, the Southeast University Neighborhood Association and the Outer Comstock Neighborhood Association are both valid and strong.

Casting these arguments aside merely to speed up the gtadium's construction, without solving the problems they suggest, is not the way to build a stadium.
"We are pleased that (the court) recognized the planning for the recognized the planning for the plicable legal requirements," said a delighted Joseph V. Julian, SU's vice president for public affairs, on Tuesday.

But the legal requirements were certainly lax. The Urban Development Corporation, in charge of administering the \($ 15\) million loan from the state to the vironmental impact statement to determine exactly how the stadium would affect the area.

The County Planning Board and the City Planning Commission approved the plans to build the stadium even though many issues. were never addressed.

Parking, pollution, and safety. problems have been generally ignored by the university and the ignored's planners, but construcstadium shanners, sut cheduled to tion of the dome is

The planners' sole effort to solve these problems has been the creation of a task force to study the situation. The task force is comprised of representatives from SU, prised of representatives from Sus, area hospitals (whose operation may be severly affected by heavy traffic), neighborhood residents, traffic), neighborhood reside
One idea the task force is considering is a park and ride system, where spectators will park their cars at a distance from the dome, cars at a distance from the dome, and be transportation.
But this "solution" has somemajor flaws. For example, the Silverdome in Pontiac, Michigan utilizea the park and ride system. It takes four hours to transport 10,000 people there-and we will have 50,000 .

It also is estimated that three people will come in every car to the new Dome. With 50,000 people, this amounts to 16,666 cars. Downtown Syracuse has only 12,000 parking spaces.
Also, the Archbold site is so small there will not be enough room for the buses to turn around. The park and ride system has been successful at the New York State Fairgrounds, but those grounds are large enough for the buses to maneuver.
In fact, the Archbold site of eight and one-half acres will be the smallest site with a domed stadium in the country. The next smallest, in the country. The next smallest, the King Dome in Seattle, is 35 acres. The University of South Dakota's domed stadium, which seats 11,000 people, is on 60 acres.

We must wonder if the university's objective is to get the stadium built at the Archbold site, no matter what the obstacles are, or problems it creates.
If so, that attitude may prove to be an ever greater cost to us. The disruption to area residents and the campus itself will be immeacampus itself will SEENA, and Burable. HOMES, SED Tu, and Court decision, as they should.
"There is no doubt in my mind that the case will go into the higher courts before it is finally decided," said HOMES's attorney, Richard
A. Schechter. "Consequently, I am beginning to prepare my appeal.'

The neighborhood residents will certainly be facing a powerful opponerit in the university as they appeal. They also have no money for farther action right now. But there is always the chance they just might win.

In that case, SU might be forced to halt its construction, and be left with a partly-constructed dome. The aniversity would then have more problems than it ever more pro

Instead of rushing to build the stadivm, SU should concentrate all its efforts on solving the immediate problems this construction presents. Buildings, especially those that accommodate 50,000 people and a multitude of putomobiles, cannot be planned retromatively.

Wise planning might prevent SU from running into barriers in the future, it would provide for a stadium that is acceptable to all.

And because a lack of planning would affect the hospitals and resicients of the community, as well as the academic environment at SU, postponing construction to find solutions is the only proper thing to do.

\section*{Freshman English for profs?}

\section*{Guest comment: Donald Holden}

Editor's note the following is reprinted from the Feb. 4 New York Times with the author's permission.
Like most of my friends in book publizhing, I groan when I get a thick package from a univeraity.

Inside the envelope, I know there's a manuscript from some professor who's bucking for a raise, a promotion, tenure-a manuscript that serves no one but the professor himself and some faculty committee.
I know that the book will be written in the illiterate acholarly jargon that publishers (and cynical graduate students) call "dissertationese." Because we try to give every author a fair hearing; my staff may spend houra putting the manuscript through its paces. But in the end, 1 know that almost certainly the book will be rejected.
Publishers know that most professors are bad writers. The professor's grammer, spelling and punctuation are usually passable but his prose is apt to be pretentious, unclear and chaotic. And like most people who write badly, he does it on purpose. As George Orwell points out in "Politics and the English Language," bad prose doesn't happen by accident: It's a conscious attempt to deceive.
Dissertationese, the standard lingo of doctoral dissertations, is the language that professors use to disguise self-contempt with pomposity. The scholar who often spends his professional life counting the cats in Zanzibar, secretly knows that what he has to say is umimportant. So he inflates his diction, convolutes his sentences, and builds a complex scholarly, atructure (with lots of footnotes) to make the context sound important.
Faculty committees-who grade him or how well he plays the academic game - may be impressed, but publishers are not.
The publisher also knows that bad writing usually hides (or tries to hide) intellectual laziness. Every experienced editor can tell you the real purpose of those turgid, ponderous sentences: 'They're designed to conceal the fact that the writer hasn't taken the time to figure out precisely what he wants to say. And why is the professor's "story line" so chaotic and bewildering? Not becanse his ideas are so lofty, but because he's dodged the writer's tonghest intellectual job- to link his facts in a tight, logical chain.
Even an inexperienced editor soon discovers that bad acadernic writing (like political apeeches) can be a subtle form of lying.
With rival scholars watching, the professor may construct a vague, pompous sentence or a meandering *itory line" to avoid the facte that don't sup port his case-to bury what hedtornt prant to say-or to blur the distinction between what he can prove and what hecan't Acadomic writing is oftenj he can' Academic wrin plain dishonest.
Bad academic writing begins in the graduate achools where professorstobe are trained to write by the professors whose books we turn down. Doctoral programs breed bad writing because they fail (or refuse) to teach the funsimple, well-orqanized manuces a clear, star of the bookis not the writer, but the reader.
Good acholarly writing, like good teaching, isn't an ego trip-a monument to your intellectual achievements-but a aervice. you perform for a stranger. To write well, you must put yourself in that stranger's shoes and imagine that you are the reader. Whether that reader is a scholar or a layman, your primary responsibility is to him.
Professors are fond of saying that the hard-earned Ph.D. is the license of their trade- But until doctoral candidates are taugeht that responsibility to the reader is the basis of good writing-as responsiduility to the student is the basis of good teaching-publishers will conanue to regard the Ph.D. as a virtual guarantee of illiteracy. And professors Whes continue to bore their readers as Domald Holden is editorial directorof a New Xork City publishing howse thet specializes in art books.

But after the first few songs, The Police appeared to have found the right combination of vocals and instrumentals to keep everyone in the audience frantically jumping and shouting for more.

A third of the way into the set, the band members showed their prowess at handling their instruments. Summers' guitar licks, along with Sting's powerful bass playing and strong, raspy vocals, made for some good rock ' \(n\) ' roll.
The rowdiness and intensity of the music reflected the atmosphere at Uncle Sam's.

There was, at times, a little more than some friendly pushing and shoving, when a fight Sroke out in front of the stage, Sting bluntly told those in the audience who weren't there for the music to leave.
In the middle of the set, The Police played "Born In The '50s," a pounding song with a catchy hook that had everyone singing along. The song was vocally powerful, with Sting rasping out such demanding vocals as: You don t understand us/ so don't reprimand us/ We're takin' the tuturer. We is a song that teacher. it is a song that Although the Police albumis no. 43 on the charts, at the moment the band's name and music are more familiax to moat people through its hit Pingle "Roxanne". When The Police played an extended version of the song, the crowd guitar riffs and deep melodic bass were overwhelming and showed why The Police and becoming more popular every day.

Finishing off with a throaty and upbeat song, "Next To You, The Ponce recenved wild applause and yella for more. The group responded with a longer version of the song it had played firgt that night, May't Stand Loaing You. Maybe the band members realized the song hadn't sounded as good sas it could have. But they more than made up for it the second time around, playing with hot intensity.

The Flashcubes, who warmed up for The Police, were about the beat they've been in Syracuse. Coming off a succeasful tour of eastern cities, the Flashcubes were primed. They used the Police sound system and proved that with a better system, they could soon be as good as any national group.

vantages. The layout and space in each apartment allow residents to make it more reflective of their personalities than a cell-block dorm room. In addition, heat can be individually regulated in each apartinent Skytop offers two styles of apartments, a two-bedroom duplex with the bedrooms and bath upstaira, and a three-bedroom one-level layout.
The duplex, designed for occupancy by two or three atudenta, has a double and a gingle bedroom, with a kitchenette and living room downstairs. The three-bedtwo single bedrooms and a double, and are designed for three or four residents.
Although. the one-level apartments have a larger liv. ing room and kitchen, along with more closet space, the duplexes allow for more privacy. They also havea more design with wooden stairs and design with wooden stairs and providing access to the living providing access to the living Eam.

For the more adventurous or those with a car, Peter's IGA supermarket is one trafficlight east of Skytop Road. It is part of a plaza that also includes a drug store and a liquor store to ease residents lives.
Peter's is often frequented by Skytop residents. They are not required to be on an SU meal plan, so most residents buy food and cook in their apartments.
Although the cost of the apartments is acceptable to most residents, it is nothing to joyfully ahake a checkbook at. In September, the two-bedroom apartments will cost \($ 1,524\) a semester, divisible by the number of people in the apartment.
Therefore, a duplex would cost \($ 762\) each for two rommates or $506 apiece for three roommates. The three-bedroom apartments cost \($ 2,100\) a people or \($ 525\) for four.

All utilities are included in the price, a feature cited as advantegous by most students.

Residents are not required to leave their apartments while lesve their apartments while school is not in session during the academic year, and are not faced with the problems of finfaced with the problems of finding a subletter during the ding a summer.

Currently, 195 of the 764 apartments in Skytop are used for family housing. Like the 306 Slocum Heights residences that also fall into this category, the apartments are unfurnished and cost up to \($ 280\) a month for a thit up to room apartment.

Skytop Halls are also a part of Sonth Campus Houging These three buildings have students each house about 60 students each. Most residents are transfers or graduate students.
This year, each resident at Skytop Hall'has a single room which is the size of an open double, and ahare bathroom and kitchen facilities with about 10 other residents. Washers and dryers are on every floor.
Skytop Hall RA, Jack Krollman said, "Each wing becomes a small community. It's like a mini-dorm without the screaming madness found in the larger dorms."
However, there are no snack bars, gamerooms or carpeting in any of the halls. Because these buildings are dominated by transfers and graduate students, its isolation from campus and other South Campus housing makes the seclusion even more acute.

Another South Campus housing option is Vincent Apartments. Housing about 400 students, Vincent has many of the advantages of Skytop, with a few more disadvantagea.
The 15 three-story buildings on Roney and Smith Lanes, a few blocks from Skytop, are old and worn. Residents complain about chipped paint, cockroachea and holes in the kroach walls.
Residents like the fact they have their own apartment, but also complain about the isolation and lack of closeness among residents.
Like Skytop, Vincent apartments are furnished and buses serve the area regularly. In the fall, one bedroom apartments housing one or two students will cost \($ 1,134\). Two-bedroorn apartments housing two or three students will cost \($ 1,374\). Utilities are included in the cost.
campus housing offers residences away from SU acadamia to students who have already established themselves at the university. But don't be looking for neighbors to show you a good time; chances are they won't even know you exist.

\section*{Researcher wants to protect the confidentiality of sources}

By Joyce Mirabile
Everyone talks about the rights of minorities and women, but the subject of researchers rights is seldom discussed. But at Syracuse University, someone is concerned with the rights of researchers to protect the identity of their sources.

Professor James D. Carroll of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs has been involved in questions of research policy for 12 years.

Recently, a Maxwell professor involved in a research project concerning government finances in Cleveland, inves tigated the use of city monies. He was asked to reveal the information and was subsequenty indicted, but refused to tly inge his findinge divuige his findings.

Carroll said such a case is "not terribly common" but added it presents a problem that a researcher, "when designing a project, should be aware of. Otherwise it can result in an awkward situation.
the subjegan researching the subject after he recommended to the American that an entirence Association the rights of rugesedone on the rights of researchers to protect their sources, conten ding that the law dealing with such matters was "muddy.

Carroll is a member of the APSA and has also berved on the committee on Ethics and Academic Freedom for the associated in Washington.
"A main effort of the project was to bring about cooperation among the major sacial sciences associations in the United States to examine these problems which are of mutual interest to research scholars," Carroll said.

The two-year study, prompted by the jailing of a Harvard professor who refused to disclose research gourcea to a grand jury, found that in the last 10 years, about 50 subpoenas have been issued to researchers in 18 cases, all demanding the revelation of sources and subjects of research projects.
Three of the researchers were imprisoned for refusing to disclose their sources. Carroll concluded that "from legal, ethical and pragmatic viewpoints, scholars have a confidentiality problem gimilar to that of the press.
"News people and scholars are caught in a conflict between different forms of the right to know, he said.
\({ }^{\text {rin }}\) In Form One of the right, the public, acting through grand juries, courts and other official bodies, has a right to inquire into the conditions of inquire into and to determine society, and crimes have been whether crimes have been "In Form Two, members of the public, acting individually and in groups, have a right ander the fixst amendment to. unquire into the conditions of inquire into the conditions of government, and to publish the reaults.'
According to Carroll,"These are two conflicting purposes, both with very high vaiues free speech and fair trial."
Carroll gaid one form should not he given legal precedence over the other.
The needs of law enforcernent shouldn't be subjected to the needs of journalism or of science, Carroll said. Conversely, the needs of journalism and science shouldn't be subjected to the needs of law enforcement.
"Law enforcement, journalism, and acientific inquiry can and should be allowed to co-exist, even if in uneasy tension," he added.

Where can Carroll go with the conclusions he seemingly so logically developed from the two-year research project? He's uncertain.
"I don't think the courts would accept my position. This would change the court's power. They would want to any power. They would want to say determine what's pertinent evidence and what isn't. evidence and what isn't. are problems with the doctrine we want adopted by the courts or a stature by Congress to resolve the question of confidentiality by researchers, Namely, who is a researcher and what is research."

By Nayda Rondon Syracuse University students are helping to keep a woman alive.
Recent patrons of Spectrum may have noticed large bags with labels asking for donations for empty cigarette packages. According to Spec trumn employee Sandy. Videgar this is part of a drive to keep a Rochester resident on a kidney dialysis machine.
The drive, sponsored by General Electric, is turning into a growing cycle of enthusiasm and concern on campus.
"People come in with boxes and boxes - at least \(300_{\text {a }}\) day." Videgar said. "It's really great."
Sophomore Suky Aronoff has been collecting cigarette packs since the beginning of the semester. Since the worman, who prefers to remain anonymous, receives an additional minute of life for each pack collected, SU atudents have been reaponsible for keeping the machine running 36-48 hours so far.
Videgar and Aronoff collect the donation baga, also located in Winchell, Day, Booth and Hutchings Psychiatric Center.

The patient, in Strong Memorial Hospital in Rochester, worked for General Electric GE is paying 10 percent of her medical bills; the government is paying the reat.
Videgar added that moat people donating cigarette boxes know little about the woman, yet they are atill willing to help.
As Agnoff said, "Nobody who is doing this is benefitting except within themselves.'

\section*{Dinner theatre} may be coming to dining hall

By Claudia Estelle
Dinner theatre may come to Syracuse University tomorrow night - but only if 75 people buy tickets.
Brockway Dining Hall and SU Musical Stage are planning an evening from 8-11 p.m. featuring a catered roast beef dinner and excerpts from the musical "The Boy Friend" Tickets are on sale for \($ 3.50\) at the dining hall under Brewster/Boland and at SUMS in Watson Theatre.

Proceeds will be split between the two couples representices in the muscular dytrophy dance marathon, April 6-8.
"We're hoping to get 100 people," said Phil Gurin, SUMS president and director of "The Boy Friend." But if we don't get 75, were canning it."If 100 people attend, \($ 1000\) or the ticket money will cover overhead expersses of food and scripts, and the couples will each receive \($ 125\).
Brockway employees will work for free at the dinner, which begins at 8 p.m. The show will start at 9 p.m. Tickets must be purchased for both the dinner and theatre. "They can't be split; thai defeats the purpose," Gurig regulars, and has been in \(#\) works for three weeks.
Gurin said the event is in doubt because his nublicit staff "didn't do their tob"
"I'd hate to have to canct this, though." he added, this, though, he fause this is the first time dinner theatre has been tried here and if it doesn't work, it here, and if it doesn't.

\section*{Film expert supports criticism}

By Steven Titch Pichard Corlisa goes the role of the film critic as an educntor. Corliss, critic, author and editor of Film Comment magazine, said many people magazine, saitics like Andrew who read critics inke Andrew Sand Pauline Kael ("The New and Pauline kael learn more Yorker want to leal.
about firm in geke with students in the College of Visual and Performing Arts yesterday Performing. Tuesday.
In their role as teachers, In their role as teachers, Corliss said, critics influence other teachers. He attributed the high regard given Hollywood directors like Howard Hawks, John Ford and Alfred Hitchioock to the criticism of Sarris, Kael,Robin Wood and Raymond Durgnat. These critics were the first in America to take Hollywood movies seriously. "They influenced ageneration," Corliss said, "They made American cimena exciting."

Corliss became Film Comment editor in 1970. Much of the magazine at that time was devoted to the study of old waserican flots. Corliss soon Amencan hims. Corliss soon fegmanakers as well, especially after the masane's espange in ater the magazine s change in format shortened its lead time tance of an article and its printing). This allowed articles on recent films to remain timely.

Film Comment, in Corlisa' conception, is a writer's magazine. Uninke other film journals, Film Comment has no established political viewpoint and supports no "school" of criticism. Corliss said his writers are free to go their own way. "I will never indicate to thera what they should think about a film." he said.
Corliss does not believe critics can "make or break" films. He said the highest box fims. He said the highcat box ofnce gross of the year went to Grease, a movie that received
He added, however, the only critic in Hollywood is Kael. Critic in Hollywood is Kael. Even if a film is a financial disaster, Hollywood will give disaster, Hollywood will'give the director another chance if

When it comes to writing his own reviews, Corlisa, who had a column in the now-defunct magazine New Times, said the process is exciting. but sometimes frustrating.

There are so many aspects of film, and of real life and film, that bringing them all into one column can be a real challenge."
"There are dozens of things to say about a film " he continued "Rather than develop tinued. Rather than develop one line, I like to put the things I like and dialike in a review." must always take space or lack of it, into account. For this reason, he said, an 800 -word article can greatly differ from a 6,000-word one
At times, Corliss said, writing is.immensely difficult. He often searches for a gimmick to bring his ideas across easily and in a novel way. For instance, Corliss wrote a review of the recent re-make of "The Big Sleep," (he greatly admired the original), from the point of view of an antry Philip Marlowe, the movie's detective protapanist Metective protaganist, Mariowe was originally played by Humphrey Bogart.

Syracuse laxmen barely get by Bucknell, 12-11

Editor's note: This is the second of a two-part series on Daily Orange sportswriter Alan Fecteau's adventures as a goalie for the Syracuse Univeraity lacrosse team during the fall seasorz

\section*{By Alan Fecteau}

Roy Simmons, Jay Gallagher and Eamon McEneaney form the SU coach ing trio. Of the three, McEneaney is most quiet. Gallagher is the middle-of-the-roader.
Gallagher and McEneaney, both former All-Americans at Cornell University in the 1970s, handie much mons oversees. The pair played for mons oversees. The pair played for regularly. So, it seems SU is trying an "if you can't beat 'em, join 'em" approach.
And there's nobody who wants to beat anybody worse than McEneaney. He is intensely competitive. He was unown at Cornell for vocal attacks "You can't stopme," he allegedly told a defenseman in one contest. "I'm God His former His former coach, Richie Moran, is alsoknown for a keen competitive edge.

Slightly more subdued, Gallagher is a true player's coach, often joking with players during practice.

In time, I had accumulated a few nicknames, the one most often used being "White Lightning." It was invented by Gorman in appreciation of my clear lack of footspeed.
As a tune-up for my scheduled participation in the Geneseo State game, I played slightly less than half a scrimmage against Herkimer Junior College. There, I fell victim to the infamous behind-thehead shot. A Herkimer player cut in front of the crease, received a pass and quickly realized he was at too steep an angle to shoot across the front of his body. Instead, he flipped the ball behind his head and caught the far corner of the net. I never saw the ball, although I know that's Syracuse had defeated Geneseo the previous spring, 23-3, so a blowout victory here seemed likely. The sooner the wout, the sooner I would play.

At the half, the Orange led comfortably, 6-2. A sunny Saturday at Coyne Field that Oct. 21, but few spec to be an easy win. Gorman was raraly to be an easy win. Gorman toas rarely the opening half.
The Syracuse clear is relatively simple, but effective when done correctly The goalie first calls which side he wishes to clear the ball from - either gtrong right or strong left. If he handles the ball to the left of the cage, it is strong right; from the right of the cage, strong left. If the opposition defends conventionally, there will only be three attackmen against the goalie and three defensemen.

Good clearing is crucial to winning lacrosse. The size and speed of defensemen Reap, Bill Udovich, Mark Steiner, Tom Dieh and Mark Spaiding overpowered tefensiveride.

After three quarters, the Orangemen led 9-3. Time to play.

Awright guys, remember, we've got 'George Plimpton' in there so let's play it id uh ... conservative," Gallagher said before last period.
Ball control strategy seemed fine with me. As long as we had the ball, they couldn't score. Syracuse scored twice before the ball even crossed to my side of the midfield and I wondered if the ball would ever reach our defensive zone.

\section*{Close call}

After about three minutes of play, the ball came across and a Geneseo player worked free for a close-in bounce shot from about seven yards out. The ball bounced about three yards in front of me, and glanced off my left shoulder over the net-a close one. If the ball wadn't nicked my shoulder, it likely My stick? Where was that? Don't ask complicated questions.

Eventually Geneseo toolt another ahot that went well wide. Mark Steiner got to the back-line first, so we controlled the pass-in on the clear. By the fourth quarter, Geneseo had anjunted to the clear and shifted all three at tackmen to the strong side of the formation. "Strong right," I called. Bux I noticed that no one wass covering forego the regular clear and pass quickly to Steiner. It might have been o good idea, but a better pass would have helped. Syracuse scored again shortly after the penalty ended, and SU's lead stretched to 13-3. Geneseo pressed again, this time taling a shot off the fast oreak that whistied wide. In the midst of a fast break, Geneseo had no one near the back-line to ensure they would maintain possession. I left the net and raced to the backline. After what seemed like an eternity, I arrived there Erat. This gave me my second shat at a clear.
I again called for strong zight. Thise time I flipped the ball to Reap, just like it's drawn up. After Reap attracted a defender, hegaveit to Udovich near the sideline. But Geneseo reacted well. Udovich had no room up the gideline and no midfielders were immediately open. I called for a "redirect" meaning "Let's get the ball and try it again."

\section*{Success at last}

Fortunately, the ball.returned to me quickly, while most of the Geneseo defenge was still shifted to the right side of the field. I took off upfield about 10 yards until I encountered a midIelder. As he approached, I finpped the ball to Steiner on my left. He took care of the rest, and the redirected clear worked.
After some more ball control, Syracuse scored its final goal with about two minutes left. I was suddenly conscious of the possibility of a ehutout. "Just keep control." I would encourage the offense.
Geneseo got one more shot off, making their total five for the period. I nabbed this one after a high bounce, upfield. After some kind words from upheid. Alter somer, I bowed to him.

The appeal will be flled with state Supreme Court Appelate Division in Rochester, a group of five judges which reviews decisions of lower courts.
The groups originally sued because they claimed that "no intelligent planning has gone into this project." They feel the Archbold site is an inefficent location for a domed atadium.
Orkin said Tuesday that appeal plans were in doubt because of a lack of funds.
"Money always seems to be a problem," she said yesterday, but the group decided to go on with the appeal anyway.

Orkin said she was confident her group would winits appeal against SU. We have a better chance with a better panel of judges who understand state environmental laws," Orkin said.
Joseph V. Julian, SU vice president for public affairs, said the decision to appeal will not affect the university's construction plans.
"There have been four public bodies which have reviewed the case and all have found the planning to be rational," Julian said.
"As a consequence, the university will continue to pursue the project."

\section*{Time to prepare}

Time-it's something most otudents have little of, especially when it comies to studying for final exams.

This year, finals will start only one day after classes end. For many reasons, this is not enough time to prepare for the most important tests of the semester.
One day is not enough-but four should be. Classes this semester end Wednesday, May 2 and final exams are given from Friday through Thursday: Commencement is Saturday, May 12.
But if exams were to begin Monday, May 7, students would have an extra three days to study, while an extra three days to stay atSU foran extra day:-
We know the change can't be made this year, but it is a change we recommend the calendar review committée implement for future semesters.
It is a necessary change because a whole semester's grade can slip away with one-bad exam. Most finals entail at least half a semester's worth of material; some involve even more. These tests can make or break a student's course. grade.
It is not a rare case for two, or even three exams to fall on the same day. Although the university has a policy whereby a student can switch a third exam to another day.
often this is not possible.
Half a semester's work in five courses adds up. Reviewing this bulk of material in one day would be quite'a feat for anyone.
And on'top of this, most students are recovering from the end of the semester crunch.
Most professors have a funny habit of developing virtually the same courge outlines with tests and papers falling on the same days. And the end of the semester is no exception -as a matter of fact, it's worse.
The effects of a one-day reading period reach even further than a few nights without sleep and suffering grades. It can have an adverse affect on chances of being accepted to graduate school or lanaccepted to graduate school or lan ding a job that depends so heavily on the grade point average.

Other universities, such as Cornell, allow as much as a week to study for finals. This extra studying time definitely gives their ing inme aenaitely gives over students an á Having an extra reading day at SU would cost the university some money. It must keep the dorms open one extra day, and pay for all the costs that entails.

But it is certainly a cost worth paying.

\section*{To improve our work}

As an art student in the College of Visual and Performing Arts. I would like to gee two reading days implemented between classes and exams.
More than this would extend the More than this would extend the semester unduly. As it is now, SU students have an advantage over many other college students in the summer job market, since we finish slightly earlier than most schools.
This is very important to me. I also would not like to see the fall semester. start much earlier than it does now, since many jobs demand guarantees of availability until September 1 , after which additional time is very helpful to prepare for the move to school.:

This may sound as though 1 am giving summer jobs priority over college helping to finance tuition, it becomes an inseparable part of the college experience.
Still, the present one day reading periodis too short. I have final projects in many of my classes, in addition to exams. With an extra day to work on these projects, they could be improved greatly:
It is wrong for the work to suffer due to lack of time. Therefore, I would support a change to a two-day reading period.

Amy Roper

\section*{In order to learn}

As a Syracuse Uni versity, student, I feel I should comment on having an extended reading period to study for exams. I think SU should have three to five days for arreading period.
When a person is forced to cram an entire semester's work into one day of studying, he doesn't learn the material.

He just memorizes the easentials until the time of the tegt.
Fo aid students in truly learning the material, I am aure reading days could be incorporated into the existing academic calendar.

Michael-Scott Richardson

\section*{Studying at Sutter's?}

If it'e May 2 and you have three finals on May 4 with half the semester's reading yet unread, I have only one question to ask: What have you been doing all semester?
If you were under the impression that Bird Library was closed and therefore took your books to Sutter's, then alas; it looks like you're up that well known creek without that equally well known paddle.
There are two alternatives to your problern, other than the inconvenience of auicide. First, switch one of your finals to another day. This can be done

\section*{A difficult task}

You finallymade it - the last class of the semeater. All you have left between you and summer is finsls week. But Hou and summer is finals week. But this is a much harder tas nimistration sees it fis. "blessed" with only one, day between clasaes and finala. This is hardly an adequate arnount of time in which to review a whole semeeter's worlc. With the emphasis professors place on finals, we, the \($ 7,000\) paying student, deserve more time to review what we have learned.

Some people may asy we should start studying earlier. But if you have a pro-in accordance with SU policy.
Second, pray that they extend reading days so that finals won't begin until May 7, giving you the freedom of four unfulfilled days.
But keep in mind that Faegan's, Sutter's, Hungry Charley's and the Varsity will still be open, and you arnidst the anguish of cramming might wish to find solace in a few brews.
So it appears that the only benefit derived from a possible extension of reading days will bereaped by the proprietors of Marshall Street:

Elisea Kahn
ject due the last week of school, as the students in the architecture school do, this is impossible. Professors also have a tendency to rush through the last two weeks of school to finish everything that will be on the final. This is no time to start studying. It is hard enough to learn what the professor is speeding over. Usually you have to learn this information on your own.

What we need is a longer reading period, preferably from Wedneaday to Sunday. It will be easy to gee why when May' 2 is upon us and we all havebut 24 hours to study for our fimale.

Richard M. Roberts.

\section*{A disadvantage}

As one of the many atudents at Syracuee Univeraity who plans on continuing his edracation after college, I'd be interested to know how many graduate and profeasional schools consider the fact of a one-day reading period when reviewing SU students for admineion. In today's syrutem, in which the letter grade has taken on in-creaning-importance, it would seemthat those schools allowing adequate time to prepare offer distinct advantage over those, auch af thif one, in which many time the final crade is determined by hoy mpiehione fan ab sorb in only a few short days.
Although I do not particularly enjoy them, I accept final exams and what they entrail as a neceasary part of college hife, providing the situation is a fair and consiatent one. But, if indeed atudents from other institutions, with whom I'11 be competing againgt for post-graduate positiona, enjoy an edge in this important area, then I feel the need to equalize the situation in all too apparent and an adjustment must be mende.

Under the leadership of Jay Beckstein and Jeremy Wall, Spyro Gyra is succeeding in doing what few bands can: blending musical styles and making them work together-
The title cut of Morning Dance has an island-like feel. Marimbas, congas and steel drums back up Beckstein's work on alto sax. The cut has a lightness that makes it thoroughly enjoyable.
"Jubilee," on the other hand, is all jazz-funk. It begins with a solo riff by guest guitarist John Tropea, a lively opening tone that never lets up. A strong brass section behind supports the rest of the playing.

Thankfully, Spyro Gyra has not sold its style in favor of record, sales on "Morning Dance." The album has many different influences - rock, jazz, jazz-rock and even disco - but the band does not let one style dominate in order to make a more commercial product.
"It Doesn't Matter" blends many of the different styles, somewhat like George Benson's recent instrumental work. Chet Catallo's guitar and Beckstein's sax trade the light beat and gently flowing bass-line. This cut and one other have three background singers.

Interestingly, the singers are really like extra instruments. They don't carry song melodies; it's hard to tell if they areevensinging words. The voices are extra instruments, and they work on that basis.
"Little Linda" sounds like a traditional jazz cut updated. The primarily acoustic number has a rhumba-like dancerhythm. Butithasafeel that seems new, not traditional.

The next cut, "End of counterpoint to "Litile Linda." It is every bit a jazz-rock number. A driving drum-beat and heavy synthesizer prove the point.

The band's performances throughout the record are inspired and spinited

In addition, the recording quality is drasticallyimproved from their frist album, which was produced for a small Buffalo recording company. Everything on the record Lists crisp and fresh.
Listening to Morning Darnce one gets the feeling that the members of Spyro Gyra had fun recording it. The feeling is contagious.

By Stacy Schneider.
Poor attendance and a lack of issues accompanied Student Association President Jordan Dale's open forum Wednesday night.
Thirty students attended the forum, at least half of which were SA assembly members. Concerning the weak attendance Dale said, "Students are either very pleased with the either very pleased SU or they have such a high standard of havesuch that minor inliving conveniences do not concern them."
One of the few issues brought up at the forum concerned the quality of teachconcerned the quality of teach SU student Andy. Burns SU student Andy Burns asked Dale if SA could do anything about removing some tenured professors.

"If faculty are proved to be incompentent they are not guaranteed their jobs at the univergity,". Dale said. "SA would like to challenge some of the professors.

Dale added that he hoped *the teacher evaluation book will make teachers do a better \(30 b\)

SA is currently working on a publication which will evaluate professors' performances in class. The guide is scheduled for completion by next fall.

Also, SU student Sue Heskins asked what SA could do about the increase in teaching assistants under the new Arts and Sciences' Standard Plan. SA has a training program making sure TAs are trained, Dale said. He added that \(S A\) plans to monitor the standard plan for effectiveness.

The effectiveness of academics at SU met with disapproval from Dale at the forum.
"On a whole, academics are not on a high caliber; there is no great presaure about missing classes," he said.
However, SU student Edward Kross disagreed, saying most of the people he knows do not find SU easy.
Dale then admitted some departments are harder than others and that "there are excellent teachers spread around,"

Also at the forum, students questioned the naming of SU's domed stadium after Carrier Corp. Burns asked if SA could Corp. Burns asked in SA could Dale said SA tried "as hard as we could" to change the name. "We are now treing to institute a Davis Bowl game to institute a Davis Bowl game to memorialize Ernie Davis," he added.

The success of the union building project was also questioned. Dale said the plan, which sesks SU seniors to donate \($ 250\) whien they begin earning \($ 20,000\), has received an estimated 200 pledges.
"We hope to raise \($ 10\) million over 20 years." he said. "This will pay for half the building." Yesterday Dale said the university will pay the other half.

Yoga studio offers introductory workshop

By Walecia Konrad
Groups of tall skinny prophetic people twisted into strange positions is the first impression brought to mind by the world of yoga.

Yet people who experience yoga have a different impression. "Yoga helps to unify the body with the mind," Dainne Sautter, member of Kripula Yoga amid.
Kripalu Yoga is sponsoring an introductory workshop this weekend emphasizing stress reduction and diet control through yoga. The workshop is for both yoga veterans and people who have never experienced yoga before.
Yoga allows people to experience different levels of consciousness through meditation and diet control. Yoga is not a religion as many people think. "It is simply an experience related, to spiritual and
The yoga experience begins with relaxation and meditation. Meditation starts with letting go and relaxing, Stutter said. While participants meditate they concentrate on their breathing, the main life force.
As participants learn to relax and meditate, they soon learn yoga positions. The deeper someone positions become," Shutter said.
Yoga postures aren't just for the well coordinated. Sautter said they can be learned by anyone, "I was always the kid who couldn't take gym, I was so uncoordinated. Now I teach yoga."
Stutter said there is no competition in yoga and once a participant learns to relax, the positions come easily.
Another side of yoga is diet control. This doesn't mean a restrictive diet, but rather listening to your body. "It will tell, you what it wants and needs to eat," Shutter said.
Sputter said yoga is taught and practiced several places in Syracuse besides Kripalu Yoga. "You have to find a teacher that is right for you," she said.
Anyone interested can start with the weekend workshop which will be held at The Yoga Studio, 700 East Water St. The fee is \($ 20\) which includes lunch. For questions and registration call Dianne

Sputter, 423-3494. \\ Ladies' Room Scrawl: from untouched tiles to free-flowing female philosophy

By Patti Schuldenfrei
Traditionally, women have been stereotyped as incessant blabbermouths, eternally gabbing and never running out of things to say. However, there is at least one area where Syracuse University women seem to be verbally repressed - bathroom graffiti. In fact, the most striking thing about ladies' room graffiti at \(S U\) is the noticeable lack of it.
In contrast to the abundantly defaced men's room walls that lampoon everything from women to politics to drugs, ladies' rooms on campus are generally devoid of lewd writings or creative quips. Their tiled walls have been spared the wrath of a walls have been spared the wrath of a racasional set of initials or for an occasional set

Once infamous for its wall-to-wall scrawl, the women's room of Hungry Charley's was repainted in the summer of 78 , thus casting to oblivion the pearl of wisdom collected there. The reading material was sorely missed; one group of girls, shocked by the naked walls Were prompted to write: "we were here Nov. 4 - Where the hell is the graffiti?' Undaunted, graffiti devotees once again took pen in hand, so that the Hungry Charley's ladies' room now has a healthy display of female self-expression.
While men's room graffiti reportedly dwells on crude remarks about women, the female of the species prefers to grace the walls with sentimental thoughts on the nature of love. Some are quietly philosophical:
"Love is like holding your breath sooner or later you have to let go.
while others are downright desperate:
Unrequited love is the pits!? and some are touched with cymisism:
"Love is all you need.
Sex is what you get." but many female graffiti writers don't seem to mind. The eager-to-please male needn't look. to heager-to-pleasemale need Monk to his copy of the Sen sike if he could to discover what women ladies' room walls hew a look at some ladies room walls, he would find out ex licitly what really turns women on.

to accomplish by listing their sexual preferences there.

To complete the holy triad of vice, local women have also inscribed their thoughts on drugs and rock ' \(n\) ' roll Beginning with a simple, "Smoke Dope and Snort Coke," the drug fans work their way up to an intriguing quesdion: "Is it true that LSD consumes 47, times its weight in excess reality?", Meanwhile, the musical quotations the ladies have chosen read like a rock anthology, with inspirational words from Jackson Browne, the Grateful Dead, The Doors, and a strangely appropriate women's room quote from Cheap Trick:

Mother told me, yes she told me, I'd meet girls like you.

She also told me 'Stay away, you'll never know what you'll catch.
There is also a strangely \(y\) inappropriate quote from the band Devo that asked, "Are we not men?" Under which, malady with her wits about her had precociously scribbled, "Of course not." Less easily understood than this brilliant observation are some of the philosophical scribblings on the walls, which have a stream-of consciousness quality that makes the reader wonder just what was going on in the author's mind:
"Words get in the way.
Expectations impossible to
A word of wisdom for

"And sometimes there's no way out!" (of a bathroom stall?)
Mixed in is some distorted political reasoning, like, "Not voting for Carter makes you a lesbian and voting for him makes you a homosexual." No further explanation is given. Perhaps were better off.
Just what pleasure the graffiti writers reap from their antics is dif. ficult to explain. Perhaps it is just a way of being heard - a medium of selfexpression. But at least one student decided to expand the restroom world into the mass media; on the inside of a stall door is a tattered sticker that proclaims, Smile - you are being photographed by national television?"

After graduation they go their separate ways. Six years later they reunite, by chance, at a party in the garden of a Manhattan apartment. There, new ideals and lifestyles put their "unbreakable" friendship to the final test.
Playwright Jack Heifner does not consider "Vanities" to be exclusively about women. Nor does he consider its success attributable to the '60s nostalgia.
"I've always considered it to be about friendship. That subject seems to be of group that's bored by it." Heifner said.

While its universal theme of changing friendships has attracted audiences, its amall cast and aimple production have made it particularly attractive to producers outside of New York. Regional theaters throughout the country have done the play, including Syracuse Stage, which produced "Vanities" last spring.
"It was the most-produced play in the United States in the last two years," Heifner said. "It has received at least two hundred regional and community theater presentations.'
Despite its eventual succeas, "Vanities" did not receive immediate recognition after its New York opening in March 1976. Reviews were mixed and for several months it struggled along with small houses.
But, by June of that year, favorable word-of-mouth had begun to take effect. "Vanities" began playing to full houses, which it has been doing ever since.

\section*{By Brent Marchant}

Breakfast in America, the latest LP from the British rock group Supertramp, from the British rock group Supertramp, few high points, is about as appetizing as runny eggs and reheated coffee.
Inspired by the band's relocation to this country nearly three years ago, Breakfast in America is a loosely woven concept album which attempts to take a cynical look at American values, lifestyles and atthe process.
Perhaps the most striking thing about this album is that there is nothing striking about it. Supertramp has pressed a collection of songs that seem to. lack both thought and inspiration. And like the Crisis? What Crisis? and Even in the Quietest Momerts .... Supertramp has again failed to achieve the levels of musical and lyrical perfection attained on its classic 1975 release, Crime of the Century, a highly progressive album that showed the true depth of the band's poten-tial-potential that has since been left unfulfilled.

The album 's biggest fault is the band's inability to properly coordinate good music and lyrics. On most tracks, the band manages to concoct one or the other but not both. Such is the case with the band's current FM hit, "Logical Song," a cut featuring the stagnated musical style

The reverse of this situation is true on the cut "Take the Long excellent harmonica intro, which is spoiled only by ita nonsensical lyrics. This problem of inaponopriate musical and lyrical coordination occurs throughout the album on a number of other songe, such as "Oh Darling," "Casual Conversations" and "Goodbye Stranger.
Another fault of the album is its overreliance on several musical devices in its "Grangernents. Several tracks, Buch as "Gone Hollywood" and "Child of Vision" use choruaes of squeaking background vocals that sound like the Bee Gees on laughing gas. Even more annoying than these mouge-like choruses is the band's blatant usage of the mellotron on nearly every cut. Such frequent usage of these devices must surely make the listener wonder if the band is running out of material.
Lyrically, Supertramp has come up with a mixed offering. On several tracks, such as "Goodbye Stranger," cliches abound, trying the patience of the listener Goodbye stranger, it's been nice Hope you find your paradise Tried to see your point of view Hope your dreams will all come true Goodbye Mary, Goodbye Jane Will we ever meet again? The filma has a few entries on the credit side: the cinematography and editing are reasonably good, the "visions" sequences are handled well, and the romantic scenes are handled well, and the romantic scene between Jones and Dunaway are moothly presented even if the romance tself is a bit forced.
And the ending is ... disappointing. In "Chinatown" the ending was violent and shocking but the audience could sit in stunned silence and slowly let the logic of Mars" is as contrived and stereotyped as it Mars is as contrived and stereotype

Despite the album's faults, Breakfast in America does have several factors in its favor. Perhaps the most noticeable improvement over the band's past two albums is the group's willingness to play together as a unit. Not since Crime of the Century has Supertramp produced a more cohesive, together sound, whereby every band member gets a chance to show off his individual talents, and no one can mercilessly dominate the music.
Superb musicianship is another factor in the album's favor. The band has never performed its music with such fervor or intensity as it has on this LP. Among the gtand-outs are Roger Hodgson on guitar (whose talents have been severely underplayed on past efforts) and John A. Helliwell on woodwinds. Of particular note is Helliwell's mellow sax-playing on such cuts as "Gone Hollywood" and the album's best track, "Lord is it Mine."
However, despite these few improvements over past efforts, Breakfast in America is still a par boiled effort that was not cooked long enough.

"The interest is definitely there but the students just aren't willing to put it out Students always looked forward to issues," she said.

\section*{Hard starts}

Other dorms, such as Kimmel-Marion,'Sadler and Lawringon, are having diffieulty getting their publications off the ground this semester.

RA Shawn Hollick, editor of Kimmel-Marion's newsletter, "The Mouth," attributed the delay to the turnover of new RAs and to the difficulty of starting a new publication. He starting a new publication. He hopery three weeks.
Sadler has run into similar difficulties. Last semester, difficulties. Last semester, Paper' were printed, but no isPaper were printed, but no issues have been forthcoming this semester, repo

When the publication was active, it consisted of one page of dorm activities listings along with parodies of ads and movie critics. Copies were distributed in the bathroom stalls of each floor and copies were given to the RAs.

Lawrinson, like KimmelMarion and Sadler, is also in a transitional period. According to former "Flash Flush" coeditor Kathy McLeod, the appeared the third week of this

Other residence halls, such as the Area, Brewster-Boland and Haven, as well as Watson, Flint and Shaw, have produced. quite successful newsletters, although the frequency and. Iength of publication varies from dorm to dorm.
Onepage newsletters are issued by the Area, BrewsterBoland and Haven. The Area's publication, unifike all the other newaletters does not clac-sify itself as a newsletter.
Co-editor and RA Angela Moody claimed "Area'Tidbits" is exactly what its name intends. Every three weeks, copies are delivered to the 15 cottages, providing in-various cottages and on-campus events-
According to Assistant Dorm-Director of the Ares Joan LaiBarbera, this is the first year a general newsletter has circulated to all the cottages. In the past, she surmised that newsletters were run by individual cottages.

Although both the Area and Brewster-Boland print onepage newsletters, BrewsterBoland's "B/B B.S." is produced more frequently. Editor and RA Kathy Filtch prepares for publication every other week on Tuesdays. With this one-woman show, Filtch reports on dorm and hall council news, coffee houses and Brockway Cinema.

One Bolard resident commented about "B/B B.S." and said, "I like it because it is fun to read. It's good to have because I know what's groing on."

\section*{Too gossipy}

Haven's paper, "Haven Hall Newbletter" also is quite in ormative. Ras Sue Ogden and Cynthia Bradley edit the onepage weekly paper Content is drawn from student requests, dorm functions and regulations: Bradley noted that "Haven Hall Newsletter" replaced student-run "Haven Hotseat'" because the paper was too gos sipy.
One Haven resident assessed" "Haven Hall Newsletter" and said, "They put the newsletters where everybody can read them. Everyone has to go to the bathroom.

Day's "Toilet Paper" is also a onepage paper like "Haven Hall Newsletter." Editor Judi Iscovitz initiated the weekly publication this semester because "nobody knew about dorm events."
Some students organized another newsletter this semester, "The Rolling Paper," which claims they are "the underground answer to Toilet Paper."

\section*{Amusing columns,}
"Watson Weakly," publication which varies from two to six pages an issue, is creatively edited by. Howard Bishoff. This biweekiy newbietter is -distributed to each room and bathroom, with Bishoff Bishoff claimed there are no special columns anymore, but personals are a popular item this semester. Much of the content includes poetry and ample coverage of dorm and intramural events.
"Watson Weakly' is a very good publication. It's really funny. The guy that edits it is excellent, but it should be directed more towards the dorm," commented one Watson resident.
The Watson paper mainly prints dorm activities, but feature columns are also written. "Dear Prudence," a apoof on Anin Landers, as well as a mystery RA contest have' appeared.
Flint's "Flintstoned" is about as long a newsletter as "Watson Weakly." According to editor Beth Heindenrich, who prepares the publication with four other members, the newsletter-usually runs five pages per issue.
Announcements, personals. and humourous pieces highlight each edition, which are distributed door to doorHeindenrich said the newsletter summarizes publicity for upcoming events.

According to one Flint resident, "when the paper comes out it is somewhat muning but mostiy ridiculous. It serves a purpose of cormmunicating within the dorm but it's nothing to write home about."

Special interests
"Shaw's Jaw" is the lengthiest newsletter on campus, averaging about six pages per biweekly issue. Editor Donovan. Welsh claimed a special 12-page edition of "Shaw's Jaw" was printed for Parent's Weekend.
Welsh, along with his 10-person staff, slides one copy under each doox. Additional copies are posted on bulletin boards and sent to the administration.
Two special columns are incorporated into each issue. "Focus on Unit"? concerns features on the different "Kterest units in Sollege Krap" in"Kommon Kollege Kr

Other articles include personalities, dorm acts and a calendar of upcoming eventa. According to one Shaw resident, "It'a a must-read newsletter." Another said. "For a dorm newsletter, it is light-hearted and humorous, but I think it should come out more frequently."

Despite obstacles, dorm mewspapers are advancing Many dorms have revived old publications and are using new ideas. Hopefully, students will keep up on happeninge at home.

The Euclid Avenue-Wertcote Street area is by far the most popular residential area for students who live off-campus. "It's close and convemient and most of the buildingis are in good condition." Siwels said.

But rents are higher in the Euclid-Weatcott area than in other places. The average rent in the Euclid-Westcott area is about \($ 120\) a month per person plus utilities, Siwek said.

Utility bills are a disadvantage to off-campu residents. "Utilities are roug in winter. Verbinnen said. Many of the houses off-campusare poony insulated. Verinnen \(\quad\) b had \($ 120\) utility aparmerr had a \($ 120\) utility bill for February.

\section*{Room lottery slated to begin on April 2}

By Betsy Niesyn
For many students at Syracuse University, this week will include a race to sign up for next year's university housing.
Students who have paid a \($ 50\) room deposit should have received a lottery number by now from the Office of now from the Office of Residence Services. Juniors have first priority for entrance in the lottery, followed by in the lottery, freshowed by sophomores and freshmen. Students returning to the asme Sonth Campus apartment can sigro-up Monday at Skybarn from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. At least one student from an apartment group must bea current resident of the apartment.
South Campus residents who wish to move to another South Campus apartment can make their selections Monday from 6-7:45 p.m.

Students wishing to move from North Campus to South Campus may make their selections Tuesday at Flint Hall.
A \($ 60\) security deposit is required of all students wishing to live at South Campus. Checks should be made payable to Syracuse University.

Students wishing to return to their same North Campus room may sign up on Wednesday, April 4. Sign up times will be decided by the individual residence halls. To select a roon, both roommates must be current residents of the dorm. Those wishing to move to different rooms within the same dorm may sign upon April 5. Only one of the roommates needs to be a current resident of the dorm.
Squatters rights ensure that students returning to the amme room will not be turned down. Sign-up is generally fast and easy if the student has hid room selection card.
Sign-ups generally run all day for students staying in the same dorm, and few lines are anticipated. The real challenge is for those wishing to move to another residence hall.
Room selection for those students will take place at Flint Hall April 9 between 6 p.m. and 9:15 p.m.

To make room selection as quick as possible, ORS recommends students arrive no more than ten minutes no more than ten minutes and have several room choices and have several room choices are necessary. All roommates should be present when choosing rooms. If sompone cannot be present, their SU ID is required.

A popular practice for students returning to the same building is to signin a friend's name as roommate and then pull the name out. Students do this to ensure receiving the room of their choice and to room of their choice and to preser

However this plan does not work, according to Cindy Horst, ORS assistant director. ORS will asign a transfer student or someone from extended housing to the room.

Ed Lalor and Rick Bolstad

\section*{Swimmer, diver pool their talents}

By Joe Grande
As members of the Syracuse University men's swim team, they occupy opposite ends of the totem pole. At one end is the experienced, established college diver, Rick Bolstad, whose college diver, Rick Bolstad, whose many outstanding performances over the years have elicited praise from SU coaches.
And in the wings atands a newcomer, full of promise and potential freshman swimmer Ed Lalor.
Despite the years that separate these talented swimmers, there exists a link of intense desire that unites the pair. "The unique thing about Ed Lalor is his huge competetiveness, he just doesn't like to lose,' SU head coach Jon Buzzard explained.
"Rick Bolstad is a perfectionist," SU diving coach Mike Edwards said. "He pushes himself to the top level., Bolstad, the elder statesman of this aquatic duo, considers his tenure at SU an enjoyable one, despite some "ups and downs.
The junior engincering student from Kersey, Pa., cited the learning experience that preceded his current success on the diving board.
"I had to get used to the three-meter board in my first year," Bolstad said. "In high school we didn't dive three meters,' However, Bolstad mastered the new challenge (including his engineering stadies, in which he has a 4.0 gradepoint average), while in the sameswoop learning a number of harder dives.
"He just canne out like a ball of fire in his sophomore year, winning a lot of meets, Edwards said.

Unortunately, due to an early start was "burned out by the middle of and was burned out by the midde
This year Bolstad performed consistently well throughout February in preparation for the Easterns held Feb. Pittsburgh.

Matched against some of the finest divers in the Northeast. Bolstad finished eighth on the three-meter board and fourth in the one-meter competition, an improvement over his performance in the meet last year. The junior went on to the NCAA nationalqualifying meet at Harvard.

\section*{Poor performance}

Bolstad failed to perform with the consistency that had marked his diving all year. He finished 17 th and 15 th on the one and three-meter boards, respectively, failing to qualify for the national meet.
"It was not a good performance," Buzzard said.
What about the future? Despite his numerous diving accomplishments thus far, another year remains before the SU diving mainstay ends his the SU diving
And according to Edwards, the \(1979-\) 80 season will be the season for Rick Bolstad.
"He's not yet reached his peak," Edwards said. "His senior year will just be the icing on the cake; he'll be the man to beat.'
The \(1979-80\) season for Lalor will bea year of familianity with the SU swimming program.
"He's probably one of the beat incoming swimmers at SU aince Brian Crouse in 1972," assistant coach Dale Newburger said. According to the firstyear assistant, Crouse lost only one race in four years at SU.
A native of Bryn Mawr, Pa., Lalor brings with him a strong swimming background. As a backstroker and midprep school All-America hor gained prep school All-America honors at Haverf 10 sehool system," Newburger said.

"He's not begun to touch his ability," Buzzard said. "He's making the adjustment from prep school to our program and progressing very well."
200 Lalor's indindual specialities are the 200 and 500 -yard freestyle events. However, the SU coaching staff has already shown enormous confidence in already shown enormous confidence in the freshman, entering him in numerous other events. The ambitio

\section*{Challenge met}
"I'll give anything a shot," Lalor said, "It presents a real challenge for me.
The coaches' confidence in Lalor so early in his college career lies primarily in his overall natural talent.
"With his ability, we can match him \({ }^{4 p}\) against the other team's best swimmer," Newburger said. "You need to have a guy like that."

Just getting his feet wet in the collegiate swimming world, Lalor has already handled responsibility and aready handied respo pressure like an old pro.
In fact, in the most pressure-packed meet of the season, the Easterns, Lalor set two school records in the 200 and soo-meter freestyle events. He placed anchored the 800 and 400 -meter relay anchored the 800 and 400 -meter relay teams that set new to qualify him for the nationals.
"Ed did a really nice job," Buzzard said I wouldn't say mm surprised Maybe there is a two-year diff.
Maybe there is a twear difference in college experience between the two common link that goes much deeper common link that goes much deeper bond which is truly indicative of the efforts of Bolstad and Lalor at SU.
"I just wanted to score points for the team when I came here, I just contribute," Bolstad aaid.
The team has a lot of potential and I want to be a part of that," Lalor said-

Recently Columbia Pictures, relansed "The China Syndrome," m movie dealing with a nuclear accident at a power plant. It received reviews terming it panie" "and conducive to "eocial panie" We noclear powex nuclear power plantacmdent in hintory Peansylvania.
"People are going to start calling" it the "Harristrorg Syndrome," aaid Sheryl Wolfe, a Harrisburg resident Wolfe is in Wolfe is in Syracuse visiting her brocher, Gary, a Syracuse University student. The accident prompted her visit
"Everybody's pretty panicky (in Har sburg): that's why I'm here, she said Cooling System Failure
The accident occurred at the Three Mile Island Nuclear Power Plant because of a failure of a pump in the cooling syatem, according to Jack \(G\). Herbein, a vice president of the Metropolitan Edison Company, one of the companies that operate the plant.
The cut-aff of the flow of water appeared to have triggered a meltdown of uranium pellete, releaking radiation, stop the auclear reaction, according to The New York Times.
The heat from the reaction caused a rupture of a drain tank, releasing radioactive ateam that built presaure inside the reactor building, state of ficiale said.

The most immediate dangex now is the posaibility of a massive meltdown which wouldreleate highly radioactive material into the etmarphere Thight now there is a problemp with a hydrogen and aryien build-up in the reactor," said Eugene E. Drucker. SU professor of mechanical engineering.

A meltdown would have little effect in the Syracuse area, Drucker naid "There would have to be a very narrow wind band blowing exactly in the right direction for Syracuse to feel any effect. The chances of any appreciable build up is just about negiigible."
Nuclear Regulatory Cornmisaion of ficials said Saturday that the hydrogen bubble in the reactor has ahown signs of gradually turning into a potentially explosive mixture that could wrecik the already damaged reactor.

Officials Uncertain
However, officials don't really know what to do. "If there was a cleat choice it wouldn't have taken is so long to Ggure out which one," said Edson Case, deputy dinector of the NHC's ot fice of nuclear reactor regulation

Drucker said the situation could be called a crisis. "Things could get much better or they could get much worse, he said. But he added that the odds of a meltdown occurring are "small."
However, Joe Saivo, regional coordinator of the New Yoxk Public Interest Research Group, is not as confident.

The whole incident is so scary," he said. The realm of possibilities have only been guessed at. Now we're faced with-a situation where the odds are much better of a meltdown occurring."
Drucker said that a meltown would cause severe radiation in the Harrisburg area, but no direct fatalitie. vould occux
"Long-term effecta are possible," he sxid. The greater the exposure to radiation, the greater the risk of cancer.

Editor's note The following is the deseription of Syracuse Uriversity in the 1978-79 edition of The Insideris Guide to the Colleges, compiled and edited by the staff of The Yale Daily News.

Syracuse University is a college that belonged to the sixties. Now that The bill is no longer a site for strikes, protest demonstrations, or even footprotest demonstrations, or even ball rallies, it's lost a little of its personality. A big university in a fairly large city, Syracuse is neither the sports haven nor the fraternity school sports haven it used to be.

New York, and the city itself has a New York, and the city itself has a gignificant representation in the student body. Living conditions in the dorms are understandably crowded, and off-campus housing may mean chasing one apartment after another While the city and the urban renewal people pursue their own business. But if population density isn't an annoyance, then the living quarters aren't too bad. Most of the dorms are modern, and vir tually all are centrally located.

Most of the students at Syracuse either love it or are bored by it. Everything seems computerized, from rexistration to library checkout, and it's not unusual to feel a little lost in the crowd. But parties abound, and academic pressure is ata minimum. Youdon'thave to work very hard at Syracuse to get a degree, and if you do want to put time into your education, some facilities are into your education, some facinties are there. Although Syracuse hires good individuals for teaching, the admissions policy is very lax. Syracuse's reputation is that of an expensive private university, and it tends to take anybody with average grades who can pay the cost. If you're looking for stimulation from fellow students, it's more likely to be found in the honors program, the creative writing workshops, or some of the more esoteric nelds of endeavor.
Syracuse's extracurzicular activities seem to be more personal than institutional. However, there are still fraternities and sororities and student organizations. There's a film society which shows good, cheap movies at Gifford Auditorium, a student radio station, and a folk dancing elub which meets out under the stars when the meets out unde Syracuse's main attractions are the Maxwell School of Political Science. the SUNY School of Forestry, and the Newhouse School of Public Communications. The first two are very good, while Newhovise doesn't quite live ap to its reputation.

Location is a negative factor. The weather's usually gim. Even when it's not, the nniversity's not a nice place to walk around at night. Syracuse has a göod program for foreign atudenta, and people from India, Africa; and points beyond cive the univergity, pome much-needed diversity. The International living Center on campus is a good opportamity for Arnericans to live with etudents of other nationalities in a cooperative atmosphere.

\section*{Guest comment: \\ Thomas Coffey}

The article I wrote last week about the description of Syracuse University in the "Yale Insider's Guide to Colleges" has produced a tremendous reaponse Although I disagree with many of the views people have expressed, in the long run this exchange of ideas can only have good effects. For the first time in recent memory, the indents are seriously thinking nbout the nature of acadernics at SU, and about the nature of the univeraity itself.
But there is a danger of being sideBut there is a danger of being sidetracked. The focus of this duscussion should not be the Yale guide. Many of the criticisma levelled against it are true. The guide relies on generalities, and its descriptions of schools tend to be elitist Anyone who would base his be elitist. Anyone who would base his decision to attend a college simply by reading the guide is a fool.
Instead, the discussion should cpacentrate on two printa the guide raises and students often express, however inarticulately. The first point is that academics here are not challenging. The second is that the university ie cold and impersonal -a bureanacracy.
The quality of academicz should be the most important aspect of any university. Unfortumately, academics almoat seem to be igrnored at SU. Ad. ministrators are concerned with building the Carrier Dome, profeasors concentrate on their research and students just want to have a good time. Education, the primary function of a university, is forgotten by everyone.
The result of this attitude is sad. Administrators 7oncerned with monetary matters in no way encourage the immovernent of academics. Professora provement of academics. Frofessors treat clasaes as an afterthought, and require very little from students. Students soon realize they don't have to academically, so they put little effort into their classes.

In the end, SU fails to really educate its students. The goal of education is not to train people for the job maxiket. Rather, its goal is to make people think. This does not happen at SU.
Of course, there are always exceptions. Some professors put a great deal ofeffortinto teaching, and their clasoes are stimulating. Everyorie, hopefully, has had at least one cocrae that provoked thought. Generally, though, it's easy to play the academic game, to get good gradee without really learning anything.
The nature of the univeraity is an important matter nobody every thinks about. We all get involved in quemtion:
about the stadiom, the atudent union building, bookstore boycotts. But we don't think about the cause of these issues, a classic case of not seeing the forest for the trees. The basic problem with SU is that the administration has turned it into a business enterprise, the corporate university.
Many administrators are proud that SU has balanced ita budget for several years running. Thia fact is commendable, but the dollars-and-cents attitude it conveys is nok. In a rush to be fiscally sound, the administration has forgotten the purpose of a university. Traditionally, a university's major goal is to provide an environment for learning, not to balance ita budget. It's not Eurprising that the administration not aurprising that the admizistration has exerted little leadership fort to improve academics.
ort to improve academics.
But the bureaucracy here runs smoothly. Forms are mailed out on time, nccurate reconds are kept. It's all depersonalized; it's also dehumanizing. Students here are known by their social security numbers not their names. Even George Orwell didn't go that far SU has nightly been criticized for be ing more of a corporation than a university, Every year the -administration balances the-budget, ignores academics, and doesn't care. So any effort to make SU a true univeraity will have to come from un.

\section*{UUTV: give it a chance}

University Union Television is caught in a frustrating and no-win situation.
It's been trying to get off the ground for two years but suffers froma rundown equipment and low finding. UUTV experienced its most recent setback last week when most recent setbacklast week when the Student Association Finance Board recommended not to fund it.

SA Comptroller Dale Cohen said the board's decision was based on UUTV's low viewership and the poor condition of its production equipment, which will need to be replaced in the next several years.

Cohen said SA might be willing to allocate some contingency funds to UUTV ifit can demonstrate that it has outside funancial support to replace its equipment.
'I don't want to see UUTV close down," Cohen said, but "they have to show us that they can replace their capital equipment."

Cohen's attitude epitomizes the catch-22 bituation in which UUTV is caught. The finance board's failure to allocate funds will make UUTV's job of raising fonds from the community that much tougher. "Why should a city organization or a national company like. IBM give to a student organization that does not have the backing of its student government." asked UUTV's general manager Hal Schlenger.

In addition, without SA support, UUTV cannot get funds from other campus organizations. The Residential Life Advisory, Committee for example, will not allocate funds for new moniters unless SA funds UUTV.
Without these funds, only five of UUTV'g-11 monitors will be in operation - preventing a sizable operation -m preventing a sizable block of dorm residents from watching its programming.
UUTV will probablybe caughtin the same bind next year that itis in

We cannot aee how backing up the opinions stated in a book, which does indeed knock every univernity but the one which publishes it, can serve SU any beneficial purpoee. Dale's opinions may have some validity, but this was not the opportnnity to express them. These criticimms cauld have been made more constructively. this year: no money and a lack of monitors, which means fewer Without stable funding, UUMV will never get off the ground. It can't build up viewership unless all its monitors work.
Even with oper゙ational equipment, UUTV will not become a phenemenon overnight. "It takes time to build up a following." Schlenger said, and "SA ismot giv. ing us a chance in a reasonable amount of time."
UUTV has made substantial progress with its programming this year and has tried such innovations as a weekly TV guide.
But it needs aupport from the campus community SA should give UUTV a real chance to get on its feet by guaranteeing funding for at least two years. With added reveave from the student fee inrevenue from the student fee increase, theassembly ghoud beable to allocate most of the \($ 14,995\) UUTV requested. A two year trial period will allow UUTV to repair or replace some of its basic equipment and prove whether people want to watch it or not.
Ameaningful allocation from SA glso would be a big boost in UUTV's quest to gain funds from other sources. Without it, UUTV will continue to run in circles trying to prove it can do a good job.

Their lives are immersedin debt and deceit, alienation and loneliness. They have lost their jobs, destroyed their self-confidence and mortgaged their futures. They supply the horseraces, bingo games and one-armed bandits with a healthy part of a \($ 500\) billion annual diet. They areinflicted with an incurable disease - compulaive gambling.
There are as many as 10 million compulsive gamblers in the United States. They come from all walks of life, but have one thing in to gamble.
Many compulsive gamblers offer similar explanations for theirimpulses - a desire to escape from reality, a something for nothing. Their atories have the same endings - dejection, unhappiness, and financial ruin.

\section*{Persomality change}

After several meetings, gamblers realize they must change their per aonalities, not just their monetary bituations. "I have a comecience now." is stated by almost all of the Syracuse GA members. "Others add, "I've learned patience," and" "Now I know what understanding is."
Eventually the compulaive gamblers learn they can never return to cam bling of any type. They cannot even participate in a pennyante wager on a World Series game, unless they are will ing to fall backinto the same inevitable patternes. "Sure I could go back if I let go of my disciplines and beliefs," said one man. But at is a progressive illness. It"ll kill me the next time."
GA emphasizes that their success rate is 100 percent for people who strictiy follow its program of recovery through group unity. The organization believes it is impossible for a person to return to gambling if he attempts to follow its guidelines. \section*{Renaissance exhibits changing tunes}

By Scott Rohrer
Remaissance delivered a concert Thursday night worthy of the palatial setting it. was played in.
It was a magnificent performance at the plush Landmark Theatre as the British rock group serenaded a near-capacity crowd with its classically-oriented songs.
The one hour and 40 minute set, with one encore, encompassed material from all its albums except Novella. Renaissance also played four. songs from its new LeP to be released May 4.

Renaissance opened quickly with two excellent renditions from the album, A Song for All Seasons. The five member band did a fine job of matching the studio quality of "Day of the Dreamer" and "Northern Lights."

Each performer was superlative throughout the concert. Lead singer Annie Haslam's performance was particularly flawless. She handied difficult songs, such as "Vultures Fly High" and Prologue" with ease.
John Tout also gave a standout performance on keyboards, evident in such songs as "Mother Russia" from Turn of the Cards and the title song from A Song for All Seasons.

The four new songs, which were average at best, were politely received by the gudience. The new material is a further departure from its heavy classical leanings. Starting with Novella, Renaissance is moving to a more commercialized, pop sound.
A case in point is the song, "Secret Mission," based on a James Bond spinoff movie. Bass guitar player Jon Camp

In their opening act, David Buskin and Robin Batteav delivered an entertaining 45 minute set. The two guitarists played songs from their former band, Pierce Airrow, and a number of other country rock songs.
But the audience's response to Buskin and Battean did not match its reaction to Renaig sance's finale. After closing with "Prologue," a thundering ovation brought the group back on stage for about a 12 minute rendition of "Ashes Burning." It was a superb job, with a light ghow and some jamming intermingled, that brought the audience to its feet on aeveral occasions:

Many reception activities are possible becanse of time donations by the faculty. However, "a few hundred dollars for extra buses" will be needed, Cummings anid.
Receptions will begin at 9 am. with registration at the Heroy Geology Building. This will be follówed by a welcome at Hendricks Chapel by Cum minge, Dr. Ronald \(R\). Cavanagh of the religion department Dr. Peter T. Marsh of - the hiatory department and Student Aseciation. president Jordian Dafe.
Simultaneons meetings will be given for parents at the chapel and for students at designated locations accorcing to their college.
From 2 to 4 p.m., a Campus Life Exposition will be held in the Women' Building. Colleges and student services and other orgenizations will be repreaented.
Residence hall tours will leave the exposition every 1.5 minutes from 2:15 until 3 p.m.

\section*{Seniors support union drive}

By John H. Sturgis
The plan to attract pledges from seniors for the construction of a student union building has been working well, according to senior claas committee members.
After the initial two-day phone-a-thon two weeks ago, 167 seniors had said they would pledge \($ 250\) towards the ninion project. By the end of last week, that total had been raised to 259.

The plan asks seniors to donate \($ 250\) to the otudent union conetruction, payable the firat year they earn \($ 20,000\). If the building is not uncer construction in five years, all done will be returned. About \($ 7\) million is needed for construction of the building.
Most important to the seniors' effort is, the drastic reduction of the percentage of atudents who said "no" to the pledge plan, accorting to Jim Flinton, senior committee member.

At first, 50 percent of the seniors indicated they would not be willing to make a financial committment. However, a week of continwed telephoning cut that figure to 34 percent. *We're overjoyed," Flinton gaid.

Seniors'who have indicated a desire to par ticipate in the project increased by one-third, he added. In addition, the percentage of studenta who have not made a firm decision jumped from 30 to 40 percent.

With each of the 259 sieniors pledging \($ 250\), the total money pledged has been raiged to $64,750. The. official phone-s-thon ratsed \($ 41,750\).

A receptión held in the Aluminae Lounge of the Women's Building Saturday night honored the semiors who have made a pledge. The event was sponsored by the senior committee and SU administration.
The first 200 feniors to pledge were given a chance to sign a "Founder's Scroll." Tentative plans are to include the acroll in an exhibit inside the union building once it is built.

According to Flinton, only about half of the sedior class has been contacted thus far. Many have moved, had their phones disconnected, or were simply not home to answer when the attempt was made to contact them. Plans are being made to contact these ntudents by mail.

\section*{From coed dormitories to coed apartments}

\section*{By Magaly Olivero}

Julie's mother had a "conniption" the day her daughter moved into Day Hall. The poor woman couldn't believe Jalie would be living on the same floor with 32 males.
A \(6^{\prime} 2^{\prime \prime}\) guy came out of the men's bathroom with a towel around his waist and waved at Julie's parents. Her mother almost fainted.
Her father stood by, speechless - probably in shock Julie's face beamed. "This is college life." she thought happily.
Three years later Julie's mother is atill having "conniptions." Her daughter has left the noisy dorms and now lives in a two-story house on East Genesee Street with a few friends two guys and one other girl. Mom, however, still shakes her head in disbelief. Coed habitation, platonic or not, is a popular lifestyle for college students. Each year more students ignore social taboos and set up homes with members of the opposite gex.
Recent studies suggest that the number of unmarried youth who have lived with a member of the opposite sex at least once ranges between 10 and 33 percent of the college population. Within the next six years, an estimated three out of five familes may have to face the reality of their children's coed living arrangements.

\section*{Coed dorms}

Moat college students' first encounter with coed living is in the dormitories. Nine of the 12 Syracuse Uni veraity dorms are coed, and the all-male dorm Booth Hall, will join the coed list next fall. Officials a the Office of Residence Services feel turning Booth coed will decrease the dorm's rowdiness and help prevent vandaliarn.
"I was really nervous when I first moved into a coed dorm," recalled Nancy, a Sadler resident. "I wasn't

\section*{'You're exposed to more}

\section*{real-life situations when} \section*{you live with people of} the opposite sex."

sure how I would react to having guys right next door. thought I'd be inhibited
Now, at the end of her freshiman year, she said she ouldn't be happier. "It was the best thing \(I\) ever did, me said.
Most students enjoy the coed arrangements ecause its the "natural thing to do." according to Day resident Liz Miller. "That's the way it's going to be in real life, so you may as well live in a coed setting hile.in college.
Some disadvantages, however, unnerve students. Bathrooms and privacy seem to be the first things students mention as problems with coed living.
"You lose some of your privacy once you're living in a coed dorm," said Mary Phillips. "I know I'd feel freer to walk around in a bathrobe or wet hair if there weren't guys around."

\section*{Coed bathrooms}
"Sometimes it's impossible to take a-shower," aiffed one freshman girl in Day. "You go into the bathroom thinking you're perfectly alone, and then ou discover there is a guy in the stall next to you. He idn't want to walk to the other end of the floor where he men's bathroom is. I'd do the same, butit can geta bit crazy. You get paranoid after a while Despite these problems, most students prefer a coed ving arrangement. Some parents, however, are not quite as happy. Mom and dad fear that coed living eads to sexual promiscuity.
"My parents were convinced I'd hopinto bed with every guy on the floor," baid Bonnie, "but they soon Calized all they had were active imaginations."
Dr. Daniel Peterman, a psychologist who studied cohabitation at Penn State, doubts that coed living leads to more sexnal activity.
"My research doesn't show that students in coed domms are any more or less likely to be cohabitating than those in single sex dorms. In many cases kids living in coed dorxns form opposite-sex friendships that are not particularly sexualized. In fact, coed living may have some influence in a negative direction."
Coed living may or may not inhibit romantic atachment, but most agree that it does foster nonsexual male-female relationships.

\section*{Platonic relationships}
"It was the first time 1 had a non-texual relation ship with a girl," said junior Bill Petera. "You appreciate people, of whatever sex, for what they are." Many studentis continue these friendships off-campus in coed houses or apartments. It's not unusual to walk into a home and see a copy of Sports Illustrated ossed on the living room table next to the recentisgue of Cosmopolitan. Or find a pair of panty hoae eoaking in the bathroom sink and a dirty football jeraey lying n the corner of the floor.

It's great," said Tom Den, who lives with two girls and one guy. He and his housemates moved into the "umner Street apartment last fall
"It works out perfectly," he continued. "I enjoy the coed environment. You're exposed to more real-life situations when you live with people of the opposite sex. You begin to view all people as total individuals."
Lisa moved in with two guys last semester when her previous roommate went to Londion.
"At firgt we didn"t know how to act. We were always walking into embarassing situations and fumbling with our feet when we didn't know what to say." said Lisa.
"We finally sat down one night and talked it over." she continued. "It cleared the air. We realized that it didn't matter how we acted as long, as we were being ourselves. We didn't have to be on good behavior just becauge we were living with people of the opposite sex. We get along fine now.

\section*{Social pressure}

Other students, however, feel coed habitation increanes social pressure. "Living with a bunch of girls can drive you batty if yiou*ve only been li wing with guys all your life," said Larry. who lives with three and girls have different mind gets - we act, think. and girls have different mind sets - we suct, think, and feel differently because of our bex. Sometimes that can camee problems.?

Larry knew his housemates for two years and got along with them Gine when they lived in the dorms. But once they moved in under the same roof, the friendships began to crumble.

Sharing the bathroom is just one of the situations \($ U\) studente meter sediept to whan thoy decide to Inve with the opposite tex.
"We just couldn't tolerate each other'stiabits," said Doris, one of Larry's housemates. "I hate his beei drinking, buddies, and he hates the smell of my hail polish. I's better to live with your own sex, otherwise thinge get hairy."

\section*{Almost married}

Now, enter lové. Cohabitation gets a bit trickier once it becomes a matter of the heart.
Cathy and Dave started dating during their freshman year in college. They enjoyed each other's company, had the same hobbies, and discovered they company, had the same hobies, and discovered Cathey had moved into Dave's tiny single dorm room. Three years later, Cathy and Dave are still together. A one years later, Cathy and Dave are Btill together. Aone bedroom apartm.
the dorm room.

Cathy and Dave are just one of the growing number of unmarried couples who've opted to share a home and bed without legal and parental ganctions. There are no exact estimates on the popularity of this lifes tyle, but figures range anywhere between one an eight million
"We considered getting our own apartments, but it was a stupid idea," said Cathy. "We knew we'd even tually end up in one place, so we decided to start off together from the beginning. We like to think of it as an experiment-

The experiment is working out well. They share household duties, expenses, and take tarns walking their shaggy grey-haired dog. Their combined efforts have made the oncebare apartment into a cozy home. Dave built the living noom furniture and Cathy weaved the macrame hangings that adorn the wath. For all practical purposes, Cathy and Dave feel they are married.
"I think we"ll get married somie time in the future when we both want to have children. But for the present this is the best living arrangement. We're not lègally married, but we do have a commitment to each other.

"We've been very fortunate," continued Cathy. "Our parents, didn't hasale us, and luckily we've gotten along."
Another unmarried couple a few houses downis not as fortunate. Their coed living arrangement is a recent yenture and so far one problem has only led to another.
"It's crazy, absolutely crazy. This whole business is driving us bananas," said Tina, as she brushed a dark curl from her forehead. "Phil and I think it's a great idea, but the rest of the world is making it im possible for us to live.

\section*{Landlords disapprove}
'It's hard trying to get an apaztment when you're not married," explained Phil. "Studenta don't think twice about living together, but neighborg and lan diords walk around with railed eyebrows."
They rented the apartment in Phil's name, but once the landlord saw 'Iina's belongixigs he cancelled the lease.

It was infuriating. I couldn't believe he had the nerve to pams moral judgrnent", said Phil.;

A surprising number of couples are discovering that living together is not the rony picture theycon jured up in their areams.
"Students don't realize what they're getting into when they decide to live toget her" saidJudith Law Lang, an SU sociology professor. "It's a lot more serious than they think.

To the editor:
Co-opse are a unique campus living situation. They provide atudente with options not found in any other type of univernity housing. In the March 21 Daily Orange, the article on coops mentioned the advantage of low cost. But coope offer a lot more than lower prices.

These girls are the eubject of "Vanities," a play which pokes fun at the prissy popularity cliques of school. "Vanities" shows us the trite and naive concerns of this group, then goes a step further by showing what happens when they leave school:

A New York City touring company brought "Vanitiea' to SU Sunday night, playing to a receptive, thongh not capacity, crowd. The simple oet and staging adapted surprisingly well to Grant Auditorium:

The three girls first appear in the gym of an East Texas high gchool, They had gathered there to practice cheers for that evening's game.
Practice soon digresses, however, to goasip about the "pimplefaced creeps" in the band who play during their cheers, and to a girl named Sarah who doesn't put sex in boys' heads but does "put it in their hands."

Referring to the job of editorial editor, Mansfield enth usiastically said, editor, Mansfield enthusiasticaliy to write and say whatever you It is fun to write and say whatever you want. When you know what
However, "as managing editor people were always mida at me," he ad mitted. "The job is hard and the hoars are-long," he said
He said he is glad he decided to attend Syracuse University. "They save me the most financial aid," he added:
"SU is a school that hides its assets well It is-a very diverse school with some really good professors," Mamsfield said. "You just have to fish for an good education.

However, as Manafield's expression ightened he said he did not like the S.I. Newhouse School of Communications. "It does not teach you eubatance, only technique," he asid.
Upon graduation, he is looking for work as a writer "anywhere between Boaton and San Francisco," he snid.

Mansfield was honored to receive the amen award as Ketcham and MeClure. However, "I would give it up to dance like Fred Astaire," he said.

\section*{SU women's crew has tough act to follow}

\section*{By Drew Schwartz}

The Syracuse Univerwity women's and men's crew teans lie on opposite ands of the athletic mpectrum.
One is the defending national champion, the other is struggling to es ablish respectability in its second yeaz of varsity status. Although the men received a new \($ 11,000\) boat this year through the generoeity of the Syracuse Alummi Fowing Association, the women don't even have their own docker room. Karl Marx' \(\theta\) theory of the "haves" and "have nots" has hit coach Mark Lyvers with stunning reality.
The women's crew coach guided his tean to a \(4-5\) record last year. Other firstyear teama, buch as the ragamufin 1962 New York Mets, had far worse debuts.
"We performed up to my expectations considering that it was a new sport a SU and that about 15 people had never rowed before," Lyvers said.
Lyvers overcame other obstacles as well. The women had no facilitiea to shower at SUs boathouse on Onon daga lake and had to borrow most of the boats and oars they used from their male counterparts.
Although the women diare themen's locker room this season, the equipment situation hasn't improved much.
"It's hard to explain to the kids that this is what you've got to work with when some had five times more equipment in high achool," Lyvers said. "I tell them to do the best they can with what they've got, and to hope it gets better in the future."

Lyvers said if a 50 percent budget increase is passed, it would enable him to buy boats designed for women and improve the team. "You can't go as fast in prove the tearn. You can tgoas fastin men's shells because night,' Lyvers gaid. The programs currently don't balance in terins of current budgets, balance-in terins of current budgets, scholarships or coaches, either. The women's program spends onetenth as much as the men's team. The university can avoid the thorny Title IX issue, which guarantees equal opportunity for women's athietic programe, if they say the scope of the two programs is different. The athetic depariment claims the men need more money to keep winning, while the women aren't yet winners, Lyvers said.

As a reault of this budget disparity. there are only two women crew members on echolarship compaxed to eight men. However, Lyvers said more people have remained in the program this year because ita reputation has grown.
Since the team now has 28 mernbers (counpared to last year's 16) the less experienced performers can now compete on their own level. "You can't buind to the top of a pyramid withont 2 he a junior varaity and novice (freehman) teaxn," Lyvers said.
The biggest obstacle Lyvers faces is hat the three wornen' crews have to share one coach, "The novices develop slower and aeed to work on different aspects of rowing." Lyvers explained. However, Lyvers finds it imposaible to devote equal sttention to all three groups.
The former SU crew captain also must repair faulty boats and oars Lyvers claims the responsi bilitiea force hima to spend a minimum of \(10-12\) hours a day on the job
Three coaches and an equipment man divide these duties on the men's team. "There's a big convenience factor built right into the men's program," Lyvers and. "If I don't fix momething that gets broken, we don't practice the next day."

The women have been preparing for their first meet of the season (Saturday against Yale in New Haven* Comn.) Lyvers is pleased with the team's development and said the nowing times will improve as the season progreases. His goal is for all three boats to make the finals of the Eastern Championships, which will be held in May.

Lyvers said the varsity boat will contain Ruth Sibley, Lymne Della Pelle, Shari Hersh, Lestie Weber, Diane Kulpinski, Kaja-Anne Ježycki, Irene Marx, Kristin Brodie and Beth Sandall.

Despite the problems Lyvers faces in trying to establigh a winning program, he remains optimistic. "They (the university) can't erect barriers high enough that we can't get over," Lyvers said. "But we, have to spend time and energy clearing them.'
Lyvers must wonder when money will be added to the time and energy.

The Syractre University warmen'末 crew tomm zind couch Niath Ivver (abovel will ehove off fta 1579 bataon thia Saturday in New Haven, Conin, matinat Yale Univaraity. Lyvere and the team have wpent the latet two yoars calling for herp in the atruggle to grain oquility with the men' team, the defending national enampions.

The seasori may have ended in agony for the Syracuse University basketbal team on the hoor of the Greensboro Conidum last month in the NCAA tournament, but the Orangemen are reaping benefits from their \(26-4\) sesson.
SU head coach Jim Boeheim was named the District II Coach of the year by his fellow coaches, and also received the same honor from members of the Baakethall Writers Association.
Jumior guard Hal Cohen was named to the second team of the Academic AllAmerican squad. Cohen, who averaged 8.1 points per game was third on the team in arsista with 87, was chogen by college sports information directors.

Also, center Roosevelt Bouie and forward Dale Shacideford werenamed to thie Widmer All-Eagt bagketball team. Forward Louis Orr was named an Honorable. Mention on the team that was chosen by a regional panel of 30 sports writers and broadcasters.

SU has had a budget surplus in each of the past six years.
"Our track record has been pretty good so far," Winters said.
Winters predicted a surplus of less than one-third of one percent of the \($ 146\) milion budget for this year.
"If nothing inforeacen or un= fortunate happens, we may have a modest aurplus," he suid.
A decision on how to use the surplus will be made over the summer, so senators must make their recommendations before the school year ends said Nahmin Horwitz, chairperson of Group to urge stricter waste regulations at senate hearing

By Mike Grogan
Representatives of the Syracuse University chapter of the New York Public Interest Research Group will attend a state senate public hearing Friday to urge for stricter regulations on industrial dumpsites.

The hearing will be held at the Be Vard Community Room of the Onondaga County Civic Center at 2 and 7 p.m.

NYPIRG will suggest that waste disposal facilities and industrial companies provide chemical descriptions of their waste to the Department of Energy Conservation.
Also, NYPIRG will urge that companies make funds available for emergency situations and develop ways to reduce or eliminate chemical waste.

By receiving descriptions of waste from both an industrial company and the waste disposd racility which it employs the DEC could detect any inconsistency, NYPIRG intern Marc Chytilo said. This would prevent the illegal dis posal of industrial waste in areas other than disposal facilities.
NYPIRG will also stress that disposal facilities ghould pay for their own shutdowns The group will also support an emergency fund to finance the disposal of a closed plant's remaining waste and a fund which would allow the DEC to monitor the facility area indefinitely.
The fund would assure that all remaining waste is identified and placed in an "environmentally safe place," Chytilo said.
Disposal facilities should have to provide these funds before they are allowed to operate, Chytilo said.

Through the existence of an emergency fund, state taxpayers would not have to pay for waste disposal problems. Although Hooker Chemical and Plastics Corp. was res: ponsible for dumping toxic waste at Lové Camal', in Niagara Falls, the state financed most of the waste dis posal, Chytilo said.

Hooker paid about \($ 280,000\) the federal government paid about \($ 4\) million and the state apent \($ 11\) million, he said.

Chytilo also said Love Canal shows the need for monitoring of evacuated disposal sites.

Hooker stopped its operations at the Love Canal in -1953 , but the effects of the toxic waste were not detected until last August.
At that time, the state health department evacuated: 200 residents because of high rates ofillness caused by the toxins. NYPIRG will also suggest that the state provide incen tives for industrial companies to devel op ways to eliminate or reduce waste.

Possible incentives inciade tax increases or government grants. Chytilo suggested that the state impose a tax on companieg which produce hazan dous waste.

After these were taken care of less than \($ 9,000\) of the student fee increase was left to allocate to student groups, a meager sum in comparison to the total increase.

fund to be about \($ 24,000\). Also, no telephone bills will have to be taken out of contingency, leaving more money to work with.
However, that process defeats the whole purpose of spring budget allocations. Student groups are left in the dark, or are at least presented with a negative financial picture, until they can request the money until they can requthe money from contingency in the fall. That does not allow them to plan accurately yntil then, and also rekindles the politica Student Affairs' decision to no longer holp SA pay the telephone bills of student groups was part of a loing term plan by that office to give up that responsibility, according to Melvin C. Mounts, vice-president for student affairs. He said it was a matter of "deciding whose responsibility was whose."
However, that policy change caught Kleidman by surprise because it came in the middle of the year. "It. was basically because their budget was cut back. We discussed it, but there was not much we could do."
Cohen is not happy about assuming a new \($ 8,000\) bill, however. "As far as I know, not too much of a fight was put up about it. I think if it happened today, I would put up more of a fight. The time to complain about this was last year. As of right now, there's not much I can do."
The lack of communication between the comptrollers is somewhat undergtandable because transition is a very hectic and confusing timé. However, their similar attitudes of resignation towards the cutthroat financial move of Student Affairs are-lesg than commendable for elected officials.

\section*{1-1 \(Q\) ?}
For Student Affairs to cut away from SA's financial base at a time when SA was faced with soaring inflation and the uncertainty of a student fee increase is inexcuseable.
It is a slap in the face to students when the administration treats SA whoddily, because it reaffirms SU's uncaring attitude to the needs of students.
And for two elected student officers to give in without so much as a fight reaffirms the ad ministration's view of students as helpless puppets begging to have their strings cut, thus rendering them totally ineffective.
Toughness is not how much we can take, but how much wé refuse to take. And that is the stance SA must assume in the future if it ever plans to have a real say in the university.
For the administration to raise tuition is one thing - we have never' really had control in that area. But if we lose control of our student fee, and \($ 8,000\) in telephone bills is a start, we are letting the adbills is a start, we are letting the administration squeeze our wallets a never let go.

HE Messiah came from the lands to the east, from a place knownas New Haven, many prophets lived and worshipped the Almighty Intellect He wore simple clothing. a purple robe draped over his slight frame and a wellpolished pair of brown Oxford wingtips. On his face he bore the spectacles that allowed him to decipher the infinate wisdom of the sacred texts, and on the spectacles it wras written; No Deposit, No Return.
It was in the spring that he came to the city of Syracuse, a land of heathens and idlers who worshipped the sunand scoffed at the teachings of the sacred texts. When he arrived, the pagans of tha: city were involved in all manner of lewdness and debauchery. Men and women alike paraded themgelves in near-nakedness. Many of them wandered aimlessly ixa a state of intoxicated giddiness or performed wild contortions while hurling saucershaped objects through the gir. Even the dogs, under the influence of the animalistic spirit that pervaded the city, ran wild and attempted fornication in large groups.
There was in this city a place known as the quad the very center of evil and wickedness. It resembled the vast pits of hell, teeming with sinners swarming over one another in reckless revelry. To this place came the Messiah, and there Ine preached the word of the Almighty Intellect to the fallen minltitude.

In January and February, the victimwitness assistance program in the district attorney's office received 229 complaints from women who said they had been beaten by men. But only 21 wives ended up fling charges against their husbands and only 23 girlfriends. Iled charges against their boyfriends. Most of these case have been. or will be, dropped at the request of the women.
No one knows how many battered girlfriends there are. A nationwide Psychology Today survey in 1977 revealed that 40 percent of the men surveyed had hit the woman with whom they had an on-going relationship. A 1977 report on battered women by State Senator Manfred Ohrenstein estimated that there were 100000 battered women in New York atate.
Locally, about half the woman-beat ing charges that the district attorney's office has filed this year are against abusive boyfriends. At Vera House, an East Syracuse temporary home for women, battered girlfriends account for about one-third of the battered women in the house, said Ann Burlington, house social worker.
There are also Syracuse University tudentes who are battered giriffriends. Few complaints are received by univer:

apartments around SU there are women who are beaten regulariy by their boyfriends.
Lisa Binney, co-coordinator of the SU Women's Center, said she received five phone calts in the fall semester and about twice at many in the spring semester from women who had been beaten by their boyfriends or who were afraid their boyfriende were about to beat them.
A girlfriend of a former well-known SU athlete used to get bgaten ap by her boyfriend every time he lost a game.

and social workers any there are complicated psychological reasons why a woman does not leave, but they agree that the reasons are the same for \(a\) battered girlfriend as for a battered wife.
"If ahe is the hind of woman who is going to put up with this, marriage doesn't make a difference, Burlington of Vern House. "If you don"t feel good about yourself, if you feel 'I am an asshole, then you are leaving yourself open for this kind of thing."
Angela Kantor, a staff person at the Women's Information Center, agreed. "I don't think the reason the women stay with men who beat them is whether they are married or not. They think, if I leave, no one else will ever lover, if

The woman may believe that ahe "ceserves" a beating, or that there is nothing she can do about it. For many women, beatings are the only kind of "love" they know. And some are afraid for their life if they leave the man who beats them
The mana will also insult and harass his girlfriend, telling her how stupid, undesirable and unlovable she is.
Marsha, who suffered six montha of abuge before she escaped, explaimed. "You feel so low. He tells youthow awful you are and you believe him. After a while, you think nobody could ever love you but him."

Another reason that women stayed tied to their abusive men is the theory of "learned helplessnegs," presented by clinical psychologist Ienore Walker in her recentily published book, "Battered Wornen.

Psychological tegts have ahown that if people do not believe they have any control over a situation, they develop a feeling of "helplessness" and"give up struggling to escape.
Walker believes that a woman becomes convinced after repeated eangs that she cannot change the situation and has no control over her man's behavior.

Once a woman is operating from a belief of helplessmess, the perception becomes reality and she becomes pasbive, submissive, belpless," said Walker. 'She allows things that appear to her to be out of her control, to actally get out of her control."
Often a woman will endure the beatings because she feels it is an expreasion of "love." Many abused women come from homes where they waw their mothers beaten. by their fathers, 'rhey do not know there is any other expreseion of lave except for a blow.

Fear can also keep a'woman loyal to an abusive man. "The man has their sense of 'ehe's my possession and I can beat her," said Binney of the \(S U\) Women'a Center.
SU student Maureen experienced this dilemma. After enduring beatings and abuse from a boyfrienti, whe finally summoned the courage to break up with him and began dating another man. But she was forced to stop seeing her new man after he was threatened and then beaten up by her ald boyfriend's friends.

There are several organizations in the area that offer programs to help the area that offer programs to help help, a woman has to believe that a man has no right, legal or moral, to hit mer.

Hecently, two women came into Somneborn's office. One had been beaten up by her boyfriend, had filed charges against him and now wanted to drop those charges. Sonneborn spent about 10 minutes trying to convimeeher not to drop them. Exasperated, he turned to her girlfiriend and said, "Your boyfriend doesn't beat you, does he?"

The woman answered, "Only when I

The reorganization proposal is designed to better integrate forestry instruction, research, public service activities and broaden the scope of ESF's natural resource policy programe, ac cording to Edward E. Palimer, college president. Palmer said the reorganization is comprised of four elemento:
- Change the name of the School of Enviornmental and Resource Management to the School of Forestry;
- Combine the departments of Silviculture and Forest Influences, and Managerial Science and Policy within the new achool;
- Broaden ESF's resource policy programs to all facets of the college by centering them in the Graduate Program in Environmental Science with dual appointments for faculty.
- Absorb the personnel and programs of ESF"s Applied Forestry Research Institute into the new School of Foreatry, or other unita where appropriate.

The program was designed by Charles C. Lar.

SAS delays creation of office

By Barbara Becker The Student AfroAmerican Society voted Sunday night to return to committee a constitutional amendment which would create the office of SAS president.
SAS is currently led by a fivemember central committee. Under the proposed amendment, the SAS president would have four vice presidents, each in charge of a specific area.
Central committee members currentily have an equal voice in group matters, making programming difficult because of conflicts between members, according to SAS external affairs, chairperson. Gregory Rolle.
"With five people, everyone wants to be boss," Rolle said. "Sooner or later there's a night. It's a lot easier when you have one person in control."
SAS put off a vote on the amendment so that it would coincide with a decision on another amendment proposing the formation of an SAS senate.

The senate proposal was sent to committee becauae of a disagreement over details.
The debate centered on how senators would be chosen, ani whether representation woul be basedon population, SASat large membership or a combination of both.
SAS members also discussed whether the senate should serve as a legislative body and /or a check on the president.
The constitutional com mittee will finish work on these issues within two weeks. The proposals will then be.put to a general member vote.

Tonigiat Syractae will give its first listen to the & witar sind harmonica player and his fourpiece band. The group will perform two shows at The Jabberwocky, at 8 and 11 . For-Twenty-four-year-old Forbert was raised in Mississippi but came to New York City two and a half years ago seeking an audience for Ironically enough, his recording career was initiated at punk/new wave haven CBGB's where the Ramoneg' manager Danny Fields hooked up with Forbert after seeing one of his shows.
Forbert's music is far from punk. His material blends folk, rock, blues and a hint of country and western.

\section*{Married students face different concerns}

By Myra R. Aronson
When Bruce and Jill Berg first met at Brooklyn College, the one thing they had in common was that they didn' want to get married. A dog, a house and four years later, they've joined the minority of married students at su od students, and to pay bills at the good time.
Married students look at college life from a different perspective thansingle students. They live in a different environment, have different schedules, needs, and concerns. For graduate ntudents, who make up a large percentage of SU's married population, the main problems appear whe tanctal.
In the years they ve been together, the Bergs have not been able to save any money, and have not made any major purchases for sociology at Although Bruce teaches sociology at Auburn Wrison, they musisto problems loans. Wasic Educational Opportunity with Basic Educational house Bruce Grant because they own a house, Bruce told the company that "you can't buy groceries with shingles. The Tuition Assistance Frogram still wants to know their parents jacomes.

A tight budget has forced the Bergs to change many of their plans. "When we got married, I switched to nurging because I knew I'd have to be practical," said 23-year-old IIll, who was originally an English literature major. The few married undergrads at SU have a slightly different situation. "Our biggest concern," said Pegey Barrieau, a senior who was married last summer, "is having to get jobs, and get them in the same place."

After one of her husband Gerald's job interviews, the employer called around 3:30 a.m. and Peggy answered the phone.

Iguess he thought of meas a typical college student shacked up with some chick." Gerald said. "But when he saw the ring on my finger, he was instantly reassured."
The Barrieaus find they have kept the same friends, from their sorority and fraternity, but people treat them and fraternity, but people treat them differentiy. In one course they take dogether, the professor was afraid to together, the professor was afraid to give them different &rades on a paper.

Peggy believes she is sometimes regarded as a freak. Students become gurprised when they notice her ring; "Before, I was just one of the sisters, said the Kappa Kappa Gammas Everyone wanta to know what it's like."
One thing she tells the curious is that married life isn't stable. Each time the semester changes. so must the housework schedule. Yet Peggy; a member of the tennis team, says this is the first time she can pariticipate in college activities. She claims, as do other married couples, that there is less anxiety now that she doesn't have to worry about dates, and she can spend more time studying. Peggy has a 4.0 average.

Syracuae University does provide service including marriage and family counseling, special housing and a busing service.
South Campus housing, once a tattered army barracks for returningWWH soldiers, has grown to 630 apartmenta in the Skytop complex. Unaparments in six years ago, those barracke still existed. Now they have been replacediby isted. Now they have been replaced-by modular one-, two, and three-bedroom apartments, ranging in cost from \($ 150\) to \($ 280\) per month. Couples find offto \($ 280\) per month. Couples find off-campus housing is more appealing, but also more expenaive, more time conuming, and therefore less practical.
Richard Johnston, who participates in the Armed Forces Photojournalism Program at the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Comraunication, supports a family of six. They will anly be in Syracuse for a year, so they rexard the chree bedroorn apartment on Chinook Drive as just a place to live. "When we got here, it was filthy," he explains, looking down at the once-bright gold carpet. "It took weeks to scrub the spaghetti off the kitchen wall."
The Khazari's twosbedroom apartment has a stadious atmosphere. Aaide from the problem of receiving mail from its homeland, the Iramian family is happy for the opportunity to studsing the United States.
Studying the United States. programming for international families;" When we are home, we speak Iranian"," she said. "We need-to have more contact with other American families on a regular basis, so we can learn English better."
Her husband, Fakhredine returas from doing the laundry, with the children. The educational administration major said he finds it. much easier to study when his family is together. "When we get frustrated with our studies," he asys, "we just remind ourselves that it was our decision to do this and we wanted it."

While college adds many pressures to married life, it also has its advantagesThe Barrieaus believe they will have extra emotional support during the transition between college and finding a job. "It's good to be married in your senior year "Gerald gaid "It fives you senior to iron the finks out of the relationship - we're a year ahead of relationship
Other couples accept a learning experience.
We,re learning more about each other," said Diana. "He has some good classes in which he learns about himself, and that helps our relationship."

\section*{'The Summer Game' revisits wintry SU}

\section*{By Geoff Hobson}

It is just a bag. An old worn-out equipment bag that was probably in its prime with Frankie and Annette on the beach.

But the bag has been pulled out of the mothballs for the first time since var sity baseball appeared at Syracuse six years ago by 22 men trying to recapture the lost sport for the university and for thernselves.
The bag, filled with balls and bats, is under the care of \(S U\) senior Mike Mulligan, president of the Syracuse University baseball club he formed last faIl.

Under Mulligan, the team went 6-1 last fall against Onondaga Com munity College and Morrisville College and is ready to open its five-game spr ing schedule today at OCC.
Mulligan, a fiery little ball of activity, has given the sport an air of con sistency and seriousness at Syracuse. Those two factors have been missing from the various baseball clubs that have sprung up since varsity baseball died in 1973 because of lack of money and the switch to the present academic calendar.
The second baseman-shortstop from East Meadow, L.I. takes his baseball seriously. Last Saturday morning. while his team took batting practice in a steady drizzle at swampy Lou Carr Field (hocated at the back of Manley Field House), Mulligan expressed op timism at baseball's chances to return to "WU. school this big had to have a baseball team," Mulligan said. "I think itcan mo here; the team is enthusiastic and we have a lot of support.'

But a return to varsity baseball in the near future is as likely as a HoustonToronto World Series this October. According to Assistant. Athletic Director Joe Szombathy, the club must "prove they've got ägreat organization, have had great success on the club level and show they have support."

\section*{Of swamps and lakes}

And for a team that has a \($ 330\) budget, nine baseballs, six broken bats and plays a sport that requires mastery of the preat outdons but plays in America's Siberia, those are three tall orders.

Weve been putting in our own money and time, Mulligan said. "Every guy is chipping in \($ 10\) for jersies, balls, bats and traveling expenses."

Mulligan, the eternal optimist, "It's not that bad," he said as he dodged a puddle the size of Lake Onon. dodged daga.

Since the team is a club, playersmust take care of the field themselves and Carr Field, built on a swamp, resembles a Vietnam rice paddy during the spring. \({ }^{\text {I }}\) I was lucky last week when it snowed," Mulligan said. "I borrowed tools from one of my. TAs and we all chipped in and fixed it up."

But when tools are not available, the team has to turn indoors to Manley or, as it did Saturday, stay off the mud (consisting of the baselines, the pitching mound and the home plate area) and practice on the grass.
we were able to have two scximmages Muligan said. "The weather isn't the Ereatest but it's not a problem.'

Some of Mulligan's pliyyers disagree The ciub's best all-around player and the man who will pitch today's opene senior Jim. Romanchuk, has troubl with the cool weather.

When it goes under 40, I hav trouble throwing because the col bothers my wrist," Romanchule said "You're at a disadvantage when yof have to play in conditions like this.":

Junior John Penn; the team's best outfielder, also feels the-weather hampers the players.
"Baseball was meant to be played outside and it's hard to get your timing and stuff down inside," said the Brookline, Mass, native moments aftes he had tracked down a high fly ball that was almost swallowed up by the swamp when it hit the ground

\section*{Love the gatie}

But the weather, the field and the money does not bother them. They have not been derailed by the elements or reality, On Saturday morning, fight ing the rain, mud and hangovers, abour 15 of the 22 assembled for a 10 ans. practice. They don't have practice uniforms, some don't wear spikes and others look like they just came off the dance floor. But they all bring gloves and they all want to play.
"I just love to play the game," Pemm said. "I played four years in high school and I missed it and I wanted to get brackia it."

Like their coach, they are serious about the game. They are not a bunch of guys with blankets and a case of beer trying to catch some sun in between catching flies. They stretch and-throw. They run drills and situations. All inder the watchful eve of Mulligan.
under the watchrul eye can comperte on I seriously think we can cornt now," the jumior coll Muligan aaid.

Muligan said Romanchul.
Romanchuls, who transferred to SU from Green Mountain Junior College, feels SyThcuse can beat- teams ho played against there.
"Definitely,". Romanchuk said. "We've got the talent and we've got the pitching:
Mulligan's pitching staff includes the right-handed Romanchuk, the team's best pitcher in the fall, senior Jeff Gould and freshman Paul McManus.

\section*{Laxmen eye St. Lawrence, poll tonight}

By f. T. Brady
Poll. It's a little, four-letter word, but its impact upon collegiate sports has been big ... big enough to change coaching strategies in nearly every sport, and perhaps big enough to make the SU lacrosse team's game with Divistion II St. Lawrence University tonight at C!une Satarday's showdown, with t.:.an Saturday's sho sicth-ranked Rutgers.
"If we were ever going to drop a ballgame to a team like St. Lawrence, it would give us a worse black eye than losing to Rutgers," baid SUe lacrosse coach Roy Simmons Jr.

The reason Simmons is worried about black eyes is that his team already suffered a bloody nose this week when it ran into a poll - a poll by lacrosse coaches that dropped the Orange from sixth to eighth place despite SU's two wins last week (12despite SU's two wins last week (12-11 over Bucknell and 18-9 against Penn State).
"It's kind of a fickle system," Simmons said. "I don't have much faith in it anymore."
Simmons acknowledged the reason for SU's fall was most likely the narrow escape against Bucknell, but Rutgers, which lost to now fifth ranked Army \(7-4\), fell only one place to sixth. In any case, the SU coach has developed a new strategy because of the polls significance the NCAA tournament bids).
"I'm thinking greedy," Simmons said. "I have to, if the poll has any validity. I played everybody Saturday againgt Penn State. If I left the darters in, we could have beaten starters in
"If we're fortunate enough to be on top in a game, I like to play everyone for the good of our team to keep all "But the happy," Simmons added. "But the way the poll is set up, I guess I can't be a good guy. We'regoing to have to win convincingly against St. Lawrence.'
For several reasons, however, the Division II Larries may not let Sim mons play the villain. The visitors have beaten C. W. Post 17.5 in their only regular season game, but used the aame kind of acoring power to sweep four games while winning \(a\) Florida tournament earlier in the year.
Moreover the Orange have not scouted St. Lawrence this year. The last time SU got a look at the Larries was in last year's \(18-7\) Syracuse win
"We know from last year that they're a well-coached, talented theyre a well-coached, talented team, simitely been thinking a lot about definitely been thinking a lot about the Rutgers game, puiting a lot of the Rutgers game, puting a concentration on it all week. Ioss against St. Lawrence would just give the NCAA selection committee an "I told you so' attitude. Any one of the top eight that loses three games is out of it.
That is, ont of the tournament, and, of course, ont of the poll and, of course, out of the poll.

\section*{Enjoying time}
"The secret of life is onjoying the passage of time," coes the James Taylor song. Nice thought. But with one month of school remaining, we have already peered at the calendar and know the work we face.

The passage of time isn't all that eaby to enjoy

There's not much anyone can do. We complain, whimper and bemoan all the work we must complete and the lack of time in which to complete it; we present our best smiles (though they are false) and excuses (though they are weak) to seemingly hard-as-stone professors.

And we blame ourselves for the clock's racing hands-procrastination has always been a favorite pastime.

The summer is one refuge, but we cannot dwell on the brief relief it brings... for we have no time.

Nor do we have time to contem-plate-that would be wasting time. Instead, we think of history and chemistry exams, of 10 -page political science papers. But they are superficial, empty thoughts, ixnportant only until the dreaded due date-then we discard them to conc
And the next.
But the work will get done, no matter how many struggles and sleepless nights it entails, or what grades it receives. The weeks of cramming and rushing will be over with one exam

Perhaps this last exam is the saddest moment. For by the time sadaest moment. For by the time we have recovered from the crunch, we have recovered from the time has all gone.

The semester is over, and there is no time to consider what we've learned and done. Students pack and leave after their last test and a final drink; the dorms push everyone out of their doors.
There is still no time to dig up neglected thoughts and find old friends; there is still no time to read a book not demanded by a course syllabus.
With four weeks to go, time is a force to be reckoned with. It is our choice of how to spendit. Maybe we could even find time to enjoy its passage.
That just might be the secret of life.

\section*{Stirring memories}

To the edicor:
I, a resident of Shaw Hall and a participant in the demonatration for Sixties Week, would like to say a few things in support of what we tried to do March 30 at the corner of Comstock and Euclid avenues.
First, this demonstration was by no means "a tribute to an imagined glorious past" as wes stated by Mr. glorious past" as was stated by Mr.
Oneil in an April 3 letter in The Oneil in an April 3 letter in The Daily Orange On the contrary, it whe merror and social upheaval of the the terror \(\mathrm{an}^{2}\) violent \(6 \mathrm{O}_{\mathrm{s}}\).
We of Shaw Hall believe that the complacent students of the apathetic 70s should have their memories stirred about a few things. Some of the freedoms - be they social, political, religious or otherwise - that are 80 taken for granted in the "70s are the result of the activism of the '60s.
I will admit that the deraonstration we held was thought of as 'fun.' But that's probably because the participants were anally into active demonstration As for causes, be it known that causes such as opposition to SU's stocic in South Africa, reingtatement of the draft, and saving the whale were all protested.
1 wholeheartedly agree with Mr. Oneil that the '60s is indeed a time gone by. I, too, feel the void that has existed in the 70s. I would have been existed over a 'mock' demonstration had I been in his shoes. But, I feel had been in his shoes. But, have that sady enough, our aims have as exemplified by the protest, was as exernplined by the protest, was meant to comn

I, nyself, am opposed to apathy. But, violence is no antidote either. It is my hope that the 1980a will bripg an intelligent synthesis of the social concern of the '60s with the nonviolence of the '70s.

\section*{Three Mile Island: another view}

\section*{Off the wall: Dave Stern and Thomas Coffey}

There seems to be an attitude problem in Harrisburg. Many so-called experts are taking an Elvis Costello approach to the nuclear disaster there, saying "Accidents Wil Happen." The problem in Harrisburg is serious, but the handing of it is a joke.

We didn't know whom to believe, the Metropoliton Edison optimista, the anti-nuclear pessimists, or the government officials who refuse to go one way or the other. So we issued lead guits to our "Off the Wall" investigative team and sent them to Three Mile Ialand to get the facts. Our team did a great job, even though one of them now has three eyes. They issued the following reports.
HARRISBURG - Trip wasted STOP State officials may evacuate pregoant women and little kids STOP Say no cause for alarm STOP

So our investigative tamm retmened from Harrimburg and tried to sort out "the facts." Although the problem in Hinriaburg wasn't mexious, they con sidered evacuating people, even though a meltdown was unlikely, it still could occur, but the bubble wail ahrinicing while at timenit was getting bigger, but radiation levelw weren't high, except people were told to stay indoors and tons of lead were airlifted to Harris burg so engineers could build a shield around the plant.
There seems to be an attitude problena in places besides Harrisburg The word "accident" is a euphemism at best Syracuse University professor Eugene E. Drucker maid, "We'vehadac cidents in just about everything we've done. You learn from them so they don't happen again."
This point of view has caused much of the confusion in Harrisburg. When somebody slips on a banann peel that's an accident. Whem radiation leaks affect a 10 -mile aren, it's more than an accicent from which we can learn a lesson.
We're atill confused about what han happened in Harrieburg. But we're no more confused than the nuclear of ficials who were aupposed to know what was going on.
To wrap up the aituation, we once again sent opr investigative teann to Harisburg Thoy mledithis final report -Trip not wasted STOP Enbble blowr up. plant molten down STOPThourand up, plant moltes down STOP Thougand dead, milions evacuated STOP OP

\section*{Enthusiastic MC's get ready for marathon}

By Kathrym . MeFarland Since last sear's record breaking dance marathon for muscular dystrophy, relatively anonymous etaff of volunteers has been preparing to make this year'smarathon a succesaful effort. Two such en. thusi astic vorunteers are Scott Klein and Rick Burton, the masters of ceremonies for upcoming Magical Mystery Marathorn.

No strangers to the annual marathons, Klein and Burton have the talent, confidence and Etamina necessary to sus* tain the dancers and the audience through the grueling 48 hours.

Scott Klein has had a hand-and a foot-involved in every marathon since his freshman year. Along with being a dancer his firat year, he raised \($ 700\) for MD through raffles and dorm TGIF parties. With no previous knowledge about how to run these acfivities successfully, Klein got a "total education in beer and partying."
partying. in his sophomore year. Klein raised even more money raing an idea that came to him in a dreann-the Great Bed Race. Over 100 of his dorm members and 500 participanta cooperated to raise \($ 2,500\) for forts of 20 people per bed, two in the bed and Is to push) with in the bed and 18 to push) with 25 individual teams continued as he served for the continued as he served for the year. Klein saw the MC's job year. Klein saw the MC's job smoothly, Klein, along with cosmoothy, Kiem, along winco-MC Ed Hall, performed magic tricks throughout the weekend.

The whole marathon worked so beautifully. It "Mowed naturally," Klein says. "Magicians are unusual people. They acquire a stage presence and confidence, and ability to perform without being nervous."
With these abilities, along with the dancers and corm munity support, Klein and Hall were able to see Syracuge University place second in the country with a grand total of \($ 52,215\) raised for MD.

Rick Burton, who says Klein is the magic and he is the mystery in the marathon, has never danced in a marathon. However, he has devoted his efforts to other fund-raising activities. In his freshman year, he helped coordinate the infamous pie-in-the-face for MD event. As a supervisor, Burtor hired hit-men to maice pie killings of unguspecting in lividuals. The group rain enough money to sponsor a couple in the marathon.
Last year, Burton was MC for the Shaw Hall MD wet Tshirt contest, and performed at the marathon an a member of the Air Band.
"We were fying lagt year," Burton remembers. "I have never been so drained or more elated. You just can't imagine if you've never felt that rus

"It's a great experience," Klein says. "I can't explain how exciting it is when it's all over and you've raised more than you had imagined. It'a so emotional when you've put 80 much into it Mein and Burton have been conscientiously preparing for the event by running together carly in the morning. Klein plans to rely on lozenges to keep his throat in good condition throughout the marathon.
"It will do no good for Scott and I to look beat," sayis Bux ton. They both agree their image is important to the success of the marathon.
"An MC must keep the ahow running smoothly and be a friend to the dancers. We must help them keep going. It takes great physical and mental effort. It's important to be up and alive and juiced," Burton continued.
The MCa must dance with the dancers and help with the entertainment during breaks. They also keep everyone moving and in good spirit.
In their interviewn for the role of MC, Klein and Burton were asked to prepare a wore asked to prepare a monologue to show theix situations.. Burton auditioned with a comic biretch on the subWith a comic sketch onthesubject of how to look cool on a Klein and Burton plan to work out a achedule of eventes that will include a ven triloquist act. ("Scott's the dummy" Burton jokes.) But most of their stage commants will be impromptu with both MCe relying on cool heads and quick wit.

Besides the monetary goals, both have set personal goals for themarathon. "This yearis special because this is it formae. I want to see us to the number one position," Klein says. "I want to be able to leave the dancers with the same feeling I had for the gay who was MC my fremhman year.".
Burton mirrors'Klein's hopes with hia own expectations.

Our manin puripose is to raise money: But in the process, it ahould be a priority to have fun, too. I want this to be the most exciting, greatest fun this campus nees all year:"

\section*{Smoking policy not enforced; students, professors dismayed}

By Nancy Crotti Despite a Syracuse Univeraity policy prohibiting smoking in classrooms and public places, the practice continues to the dismay of many students and professors.
"It's an emotional issue," said Robert M. Diamond, chairperson of SU's Academic Space Utilization Committee.
"There are two groups, the smokers and the non-miokers. Whatever the decision is, it infringes, on someone's freedom."
An unidentified student who is allergic to cigarette smoke wrote to Diamond earlier this sementer. She said that in one of her classes held in Kittredge Auditorium, "the instructor smokes a pipe before class begins, and the students begins, and the students through the lecture."

A February 1978 memorandum sent to SU deans and academic directors by the office of the Vice Chancellor for academic affairs met the rules academic affairs aet the
"Syracuse University fire regulations prohibit any smoking in university classrooms and public places the memorandum states. 'It is the responsibility of each faculty member to enforce this rule in memases.'
Most students and professors questioned at random agreed that smoking should be prohibited in classrooms.
Non-smoker Jason Braun, a graduate student, said smoking isn'ta major problem in his classes.
However, he added that "people should ask you before they light up. Usually theydon't."

David L. Miller, professor of religion and a smoker, said, 'There should be no smoking in class. It doesn't bother me, but I do know that it's a health hazard to-some people.'
Few students questioned said they had asked those smoking in classes to put their cigarettes out.
Non-smoker Karen Yavorsky -oaid. "They don't put their cigarettes out if you ask them. Usually they just finish them.
Smoker Heidi Kapszukiewicz also said smoking should not be allowed in class.
"Some people in my classes get up and move when someone near them lights"p," she said.
Several atudents said some of their professoris defy, thie regulations by smoloing in class.
"I've had professors who bum. cigarettes off kids." Kapszukiewicz said.
Jean-Marc Monnin said he was unaware of the university's no amoking policy, with the exception of rooms where no-smoking signs are posted.
"The only times I smoke in class is if it's not a crammed classroom,". Monnin .:said. Otherwise I sit in the back of the room or near a window."

James M. Powell, professor of history and a smoker; said he couldn't remember the last time he smoked in class.

As far as making students aware of the university policy. Powell, said, "I've never made a point of announcing anything. 1 -can't recall anybody smoking in class recently."

Assistant professor of public communications Chad Skages said, "I think that smoke is highly offensive to some people. It makes them uncomfortable."
"I. choose to make the smokers uncomfortable, rather than the non-smokers," he said.
"When I came here (iń 1978) it appeared to me that it was the custom to allow smoking in the classroom," Skagegs said. He has since prohibited smoking in his clagets.
Diamond expressed the frustration of implementing the no smoking policy.
"How can you enforce it?" he asiced. The best we can do is to asensitize people to the problem and ask them to cooperate."

\section*{The Simmons saga: sticking with Orange}

\section*{By Greg Luckenbaugh}

For Syracuse University, the '20s, ' 50 s and 70 s share little in common. During that time, the campus has grown and Archbold Stadium has disappeared. The student body has expanded from 5 , opo to 15,000 , and students names have be Bual security numbers. last half-century, a thread between the three decades remains at SU: the Simmons legacy.
From the years 1922-24, the SU varsity football team rolled up a 2243 record. Those squads were led by Roy Simmons, nicknamed the "Hobo Quarterback," because he had come to Syracuse from Chicago as a stowaway on a boxcar.
"The campus was entirely different than it is now", Simmons said. "There were less buildings, and a student body of about 5,000 . You got to know just about everyone in the school. There weren't as many things to do, so we devoted most of our time to campus life."
While at SU Simmons was exposed to and gained interest in lacrosse, quickly becoming a standout in the sport. Upon graduation, aside from being an assistant coach in football and cievelopsistant coach in footman and cieveloping a boxing team, Simmons was hired as coach of the lacrosse team. This welationship between SU and Summo Tha one that would ast untii 1970 . Thirty years after his appearance in Syracuse, Simmons' son came to SU as a freshman lacrosse player. "I'd beena a freshman lacrosse player. "I'd beena mascot on my father's teams, and I'd mascot on my father's teams, and I'd lived in discarded athletic jerseys all my life," said a smiling Roy Jr. "I figured, 'you've been in orange and came to your,"
"Actually my coming here was a combination of my father's wishes and my desires," he continued. "I don't feel mike he pressured me to come to \(S U\), but I like he pressured me to come

Successful son
As a player on the SU lacrose team Roy Jr. like his father, enjoyed ample succesa. He was an Honorable Mention All-American in both his junior and senior years, and was a co-captain of the squad.
In the spring of 1959, as a graduate assistant. he became the freshman lacrosse coach, a job he held for 11 years When his father retired in 1970 , the younger Simmons took over his present position as coach of the varsity lac rosse team.
Today, 50 years after the original Simmons arrived at Syracuse, the SU lacrosse roater finds itself with the names of three Simmonses - Coach Roy Simmons Jr. and his sons, Roy III and Ron.

I came here mainly because tuition was free since Dad works here," said Roy, a junior majoring in physical education. However, unlike his father, Roy III's first choice was not SU.
"I wanted to go to Springfield College first, because I felt smaller school lacrosse would be more my speed," he said. "However, after 1 got turned
"I don't really feel any extra pressure becausemy father is the coach," he continued. "As far as my teammates go, I don't think they're as'open with me because I'm the coach's son. But, overall, they treat me really well."
Roy III does not have many second thoughts about his decision to come to I think it would have been nice to play for another coach," he said. "However Dad doesn't really coach a lot. His as sistants handle the coaching aspects, sistants handle the coaching,
"Ash makes it better for me," the future, I wouldn't mind being a coach at the high school level:" he said. 'If rny son wants to come here - Ine. I'll let him make his own decision, just like my father did for me. The only thing I can definitely say concerning, a son of mine is that his name won't be Roy Simmons IV that's too much.'

\section*{Under pressure}

Ron Simmons is a sophomore art ma jor who, like his brother, came to SU because of the convenience of free tuition. He differs from Roy III in that he finds added pressure as a result of his father being the coach.
"I suppose I do have to uphold some kind of tradition of playing well," Ron said "Sometimes I feel - maybe it's within me - that the other guys on the team are always conscious when I'm around of who \(I\) am. If they talle about the coach, I usually don't hear it"
Fon said other problems result because his father is coach. "At times, I feel like he's tougher on me," he said. Even Roy Jr. admits the relationship between he and his sons is often thot like a father-son, but rather coach hke a father-son,

No favorable bias exists between Roy Jr. and his sons. "When things get tight in a game, I end up on the sidelines," Roy III saict.
"I don't play mpreh," Ron said. "I wish I'd play more. I've been thinking wish Id play more. Ive been thimk, but about asking for noreplaying time, but lacrosse."
"It's a bad attitude to bay 'yes' to having second thoughts concerning playing for my father, brat.times have been tough lately," ho continued. "I know in stay here, but bometimes I think about tranmferring. Sometirges i micture myself as a transfer at Johns Hopkina, We meet my father and \(S U\) for the national championship, and \(I\) end up acoring the winning goal agsainst SU
"I'm not sure if I'd recommend my son coming here for lacrosse," Ron said. "I don't even know ifI'd introduc* him to the gport - it would be hir him to the decision.'
Because of the three generations, the SU laerosse program has becow synonymous with the Simmons nam Whether or not the relationship will continue lies with the decisions of the fourth generation.

\section*{Nuclear accident}

After a number of days of anxious waiting, the dangerous situation at a nuclear power plant in Pennaylvania was stabilized earlier this week. The hazard at Three Mile Island power plant near Harriaburg began with a pump failure March 28. Radioactive stean was released into the atmosphere and radioactive water spilled from the reactor containment vessel into an adjacent building when a relief value opened but failed to close.
The situation worsened during the weekend when the drop in water pressure allowed the formation of a hydrogen bubble within the reactor. This brought the threat of an explosion and the possibility of a meltdown since it forced the water level in the reactor so low that part of the radionctive core was not covered by the cooling water.
A study panel determined Wednesday that a combination of mechanical failures, design errors and human mistakes caused the hazard. Two valves turned off two weeks ago for maintenance were never reopened and the emergencycooling syatem was turned off prematurely after the primary.
systern failed, the panel reported. Nuclear engineers are ztudying ways of cooling down the damaged reactor with the least possible risk.

\section*{Energy plan}

President Carter proposed a new energy progrsm last night which features price deregulation on domeatically produced ail. He said phased decontrol of American crude oil prices will begin June let and continue at uniform rates over the following 28 months. This move is designed to encourage American oil production by supplying income ncentives to dil companies.
However, Carter also proposed a tax on windfall profits which oil companies will gain from deregulation. The tax will be used to establish an "energy security fund." This fund will be used to provide tax credits to encourage conservation. tax rebates to lower income families. development of mass transit and development of alternative energy resources, especially solar energy and coal.
Carter also encouraged greater conservation efforts by individuale and eaid the government will work to increase conservation and production through the relaxation of some environnaental reatrictions and thmough the removal of bureauc ratic barriers to energy production projects such as new pipelines and refineries.

\section*{Unmasking the trustees}

Today, some very distinguiahed men nd women will drop their grand enterprisee for day to grather at Syracuse University. - They will meet around a table, trade a few joľes, and diecume just what to do with SU.
They are manobers of the Eoard of Trustees Exxecutive Committoe.

Who are the trustees?" is the mont common student response... It's no wonder. The trustees ara not par wondarly available to students; they were never considered to be rasponsive to students' needs.
But the trustees are the university's highest decision-makers. In real life, they are businessmen and company ex ecutives, with a few clergymen thrown

And that's not very easy.
The executive committee meets once a month; the entire Board of Trustees meets twice amnually. That'a not much meets twicearn the wants and needs of time to learn the wantand why many students, on understand whe divest SU's stocks in companies operating in South Africa or to plan a domed stadium before it's built. The tristeen have often been accused of inaccessability. That's a fair ap praisal. Many don't-live in Syracuse and thone who do don't acem to be too intereated in stadents affairs. The trustees just aren't the people a student wodd call to let know what lifeis really like at SU.

They have never been anaxious to open to us. The truatees hold no open forums and maice no great atternpts to learn our opinions.
While Kathy Courtney and John Green represent students on the board of trustees, they ars limited in what they can do
However, the trusteea have begnin to remove their masks and give us a glimpee of just who they are. After thair morning meeting, the truiteen will atteind a luncheon with about 20 atudents, including representatives froms Students Apsociation, dorms, University Union, The Daily Orange, and Greels Conncil. The luncheon in largely a xesult of Courtney's efforts. She was also in charge of inviting students to attend.
"I was looking for the average stodert who has genuine queations; Courtnoy said. "I wras trying to avoid the real political ones."
Courtney believes that mildly oedate luweheon with a few studentis will push the trustere into making themselves more accesaible \(t 0\) all stadents. It is a way of saying, "Look, we students are nice eatygoing people too; we can speak rationally and quietly about what's bothering ue. Don't be afraid of us,'
It is unfortanate that Courtney feels she must play down eerious campus political issues to push the trustees into meeting more mtudents. But the luncheon is a good, strong start that should not be underestimated.- It can only lead to a greater and much needed exchange between trustees and students.
Other etudents will aslo try to tell the trustees how they feel toduy. The Committee to Stop Apartheid will mittoe to Stop front of the administration building in an attempt to convince SU - which means the convince - to divest.

\section*{The dome: turning SU into a playpen}

\section*{Guest comment: George F. Elliott}

The chancellor and the money branch of the administration, an ch, have made it clear that nothing less drastic than a court order will stop them from building the Carrier Dome on the site of Archbold Stadium:
I am one of those who are trying to get that court order. We who live near the carnpus, on the south-east side, like our neighborhood and fear it will be changed for the worse if the Dome proceeds according to plan-the crowds, the parking. However, the greater damage, I believe, will be to the university itself. The purpose of this letter is to make you aware of the probable consequences of the Dome to the university as such and to enlist preferably your aupport for, but at least your understanding of, our suit.
My personal motive is affection for neighborhood; I don't want to see either of them rwined.

Suppose the Dome fails financially. I think the chances are good thatit will. ane War Memozial downtown has an annual cieficit of about \($ 400,000\), made of about a one-sixth and it has a capacity Filling the Dome ten that of the Dome. 50,000 the Donne ten times a year with 50,000 people and another 40 nimes or more with 15,000 to 25,000 woald not be easy under the beat of conditions, and the dearth of nearby paricing makea it unfikely that huge crowds will be Gamoning to get in. The but-trips and ar long walks.required juat to gett to and from the Dome are discouraging to pleasureseekers.
According to The New York Times for Mey 30,1978 , the Pontiac Silyer-

The Cartier Dome will be a 60,000 seates with an area of about 600,000 to draw on. The purpose' of the Pontiac Dome was to revitalize a sinlaing city; inntead Pontiac's genaral operating funda have beem drained by the effort to make their dome succeed.
The announced parpone of the Car cier Dome is to eave the univertaty, which will indaed be in atrious tronble in the upcoming ' 80 an, and to revitalize deteriorating downtown Syracuse. Theoe are serions and landable goals, but the propocal in far too simple really to malve the emorinous probleme confonting both the mivernity and, the city: in any cate the university's frat obligation is to education, not to ahoring up a deczyiare downtown. The annownced eftimate for the annual coet of operating the Carrier Dome is \($ 500,000\). Paying back the multimillion dollar loan which the Univer city may well have to take out at the curreat inderest ratew, will cout a huge Gum per year. So, what may very wall happen if the Dome is built in that for several years it will consume bo much of the riniversity's money that hesvy cuts will he necersary in other (i.e. acpdemic) Ereas; then it will just be abandoned \(C r\), if posaible, converted into an outdoor football stadium. (My Own notion of what to do now i to build a new- football stadimm, maroofed, on he present site.).

Despite the enormons waste, I think it would be better for the university if the Dome was' to fail rather than succeed. The failure, thongh expmemaive. meed not ba calamitoth, It arecege, bovever, would alter the miveraity irrevocably for the worme.

Deadline Jan learns military photojoumalism at SU

By Peee Hzipern In 16 -years only eight women have participated in whe Armed Forces Photojournalism programa at Syracuse University according to Professor Fred Demarest. designer of the program and chairman of the Newhouse photography department. photography depar Mate Second Class Jap Brownisone Seche two female participants of this year.
"My classmates nicknamed me 'Deadline Jan' the frat month of schoot." Brown said. "I always come in right under the wire."

Even joining the Navy wasa last-minute decision. "They said I had to be in boot carnp before my 31st birthday." she said. "I just made it. Boot camp, for me, started on Friday the 13th of May, 1977. On Saturday, June 18, one of the group leaders had everyone in the chow hall sing Happy Birthday to me. I wanted to hide under the table. Boot camp is one place where you don't want to call attention to want to Enlistment

Joining the Navy was a drastic and sudden step for Brown, brought on by dissatisfaction with her educational backeround and a desire to expand her career in photography out of the jeal of her Hartford, Conn Job. needed a complete change. Everything. I didn't have any deep roots in New England, so I decided to jump at the 'nowor'never' opportunity to join typical fashion, I was able to sign up just under the wire for the old GI bill, which offered me generous financial as me generous financial assistance for continuing my for sistance for continuing my for important consideration."
Under the delayed Enlistment Program, Brown signed up four months before General Life Insurance Company. She had been an advertising and public relations photographer for five years and "had really begun to feel stifled.'

Basic Training
In boot camp. Brown found the training for malea and females almost identical.
"The main difference between the men's trainimg and the women"s," she said, "was that we didn't have to carry niflea when we marched. Also, the women had to rum more time to finigh their mile-and-a-half ron during plyysical training"" Brown did not need the extra time. The oldest member of the two female companies in her training group. she conaistently finiahed ahead of the pack.
"The age difference actually turned out to be may ndvantage," she said. "I had long vance fearned to fun with my head ingtead of my feet."

After basic training, Brown was sent to Navy Photo \(A\) School in Pensacola, Florida, where the photographers get their technical training.

this opportanity for anything in the world, but I wiah there were more time to concentrate on quality work instead of quantity worl." That seems to be her only complaint about what she otherwise calls "an outstanding program.
The program, which traing military photojournalists, was initiated by the Navy in an effort to produce photographers of the same caliber as those working for Look and Life magazines. Because of the program's succeas, the Army Air Force, Coast Guard and Marines have joined the Navy's program.
The 17 service personnel take newa and magaxine writing, graphic arts and photography classes as a group. In addition, they take \(a\) sociolog' class, which, for most of them, is their only opportunity to mingle with other students outside of the Newhouse photolab.

Being a woman in a man's field is fun. I love it," Brown said. "Tvé always been a pioneer. Only now, lots of women are breaking into men's fields.
According to Demarest, the women's work is just as good, and sometimes better than the men's. Jan's work is very good," Demarest azid.

This may seem like all sugar and spice for our heroine, but with the course work of a fouryear program jammed into two semesters, the participants in the program find themselyes with very little free time.
"Free time? What's free time?" Brown said. "There have been times when I've have been lucky to find time to go to been lucky to find time to goto the bathroom. And life is now extinct
Before she, became a participant in the demansing program at SU, Brown used to enjoy such leisuretime ac tivities as scuba diving. underwater photography, fy ing a plane, and amateur theatrics. She loves animals both domestic and wild, and would rather shoot everything with a camera than with agun Rolling Stone's Annie Liebowitz" Brown said. "Annie's good. Really good. And a lax-mannered person like myself."

Byself. dreams don't earn money Brown sees her photography as a means of earning a living- "Profesaionally. I have to learn to please the person who is payng the bill. This is a hard pill to swallow, because I like to do things my own way. I'm doing my beat to learn to satisiy the "ustomer," Brown naid. "Pleasing myself often has to take a back beat.'

Future Plans
Upon completion of the program, Browns new orders will send her back to Pensacola, where the will be photographer and layout editor of a Navy slick-cover publication called Campus. "It's perfect for rne," Brown said. 'The magazirre is about education and training opportumities in the Navy. And.

"Rocky Horror" is a funky, up-beat cult movie that doesn't take itself too seriously. "Eraserhead," on the other hand, is dark, pessimistic, and horrifying. In addition, its director, David Lynch, has a definite purpose in mind.
It would also be wrong to dump it in the general category of "horror raovie." Placing it there connotes the typical horror movie structure - monster threatens com-

\section*{Anxious to taste international competition}
"When I'm facing the flag and singing the "Star Spangled Bapner," count the stars on the fiag, said Gene Milla. "I try to pace my connting 80 that I reach the both etar inat as im ginging the last, words of the songThen I aay a littie prayer to bring me luck."

This year Mills prayers were answered. After two spendid seasons in which he finished third and fourth in the NCAA championifips, won two Fastern titles and an AAU national freestyle title, Mills defeated Adam Cuestas of Orexon, Dize.Zenz of North Cuestan of Oregon Dim Tenz of North Carolina State, Bill DePanli of Califor-nis Stata of Pennsylyania and Joe nia Stata of Penngylyania and Joe Gonzolez of California State Bakersfield to win his Errst NCAA tithe.
"My first two matchea against Cuestas and Zenz really frustrated me,' Mill said. "Zanz seemed to work hard only when I was really applying the pressure. Cuestas was short, stocky and good on his feet, but he really clammed up when i got him down on the mat. Finally I began slamming them as hard as I could and I was able to pin thers."

Mills had litele trouble in the quarterfinals against Bastiamelli* or the semifinala against DePavi. "I really wanted to beat Bastianelli bad," Mills said. "I beat up on him during the regular season (winning by a pin) but had trouble with him in the Easterns (winning 7-2). I just concentrated on staying away from him upper-body atrength;" Milla won a 17-2 superanpericr decision.
In DePaoli, Mills met a wrestler with a style similar to his own. "He doesn't ise to wrestle on his feet and neither do ,", Mills eaid. "I ueually don't worry about che talcedown but in this match I did. I wanted to get on top of him firat." The strategy paid off and Mills woy by a pin.

After the DePaoli matoh, Mills completed some quicleness drills and did" "a lot of bouncing around to burn off calorien?" gatintiay, before his NCAA catozer match: with. Gormolez, Mills titie match: with Gouzolea, bother, a Worked out with hie Younger brother, a this season in an exhibition match. Milla went into the match confindent of victory. "I thought I had the first match won but the western referee (the match wais in Corvalis, Ores) didn't give me a few points," Mills said. II was alao horrified at the thonght of losing in front of my family, friends and coaches. I would be heartbroken if I let coanhes. In wow.

Mills did no such thing. After seven minutes of furious action that saw cronzolez repeatediy let Mille escape (worth one point) only to-taice him down again (worth two points). Mills found himelf on the ahort side of a 13 . 10 score. As the last few seconclaticked sway, Gonzolez let Mills un one more time. This time however it was Mitl who shot in for the takedown that tied Who shor wher the score. Khen, as Gonzoiez ackempted a last-second escape, Mills drove him to the mat for a takedown. The final score was 16-13 in favor of Mills.
Winning the most prestigious title NCAA wrestling has to offer is not enough for Gene Mills. Meplang to take next year off to train for the Moscow Olympics. "Freestyle Olympic wresling uses a different scoring bystem that awards only one point for a takedown unleas your opponient's back 8 exposed to the mat." Mille said. Escapes, worth one point in college, are worth nothing in Olympic wrestling.

Mills wants to devote fall time to learning the international atyle without being distracted by academic pressures. "Fight now wrestling has kept me awry from ray achool work "he aid mi thought I world thought 1 could get Be and Csim all my courges, but now I'm missing all of next week to so to the AAU championships.*
Last week Mills got a taste of international competition when ha was defeated \(17-6\) by a Soviet wrestler. "He was tough, but I could have beaten him if I was more familiar with the style," Mills asid

With a little luck a jof of akill and some hard work, Gene Mills may be singing the Star Spengled Banner and connting the stars in Moscow in 1980.

Happy Hour at the Jab and frat partien where beer flows like water are both favoxite paattimes of Syracuse University students, But if Meivin N. Zimmer Jx. bais his way, these activities will end for many SU atadents-

Assemblyman Zimmer, D-Syr.. is sponsoring a bill to raise the btates minimum drinking age from 18 to 21. This followsin the footstepe of anx other states which have raised their

"There are two reamons for the proposal." according to Matreen Polech, Zimmer'a preas secretary,
"First is to keep kids sober in clasn, and secondly, to try to cut down on the seconber of highway accidente that numically take young lives every day:"
Many Albany legislators have reservations about Zimmer's bill. Of five local representatives, three oppose it and two are undecided.
Because many legialators are against the bill, SU students andetaff are not yet worried about it.
"Right now SU is not doing anything" about the bill, said Laxry Beer. Student Association vicepresident for university tormmonity relations. "It's unlikely there's a chance in hell it will pass."
Beer said SA is trying to set ignatures of local club owners and liquor merchantito eosign alotter atating the bill would be detrimental to business, and is thinking of worling with other colleges to stop passiage.
"I think the bill would deatroy social activities here", maid Beer. "It would eliminate M (Marahall) Street business and bring aevere financial loases to the university, because it would put places like Jab and the Student Center out of busineas."
Although Jab Manager Deairee Day said the bill's passage would not automatically force Jab to cloge, the said it would not help business. Butshe is not yet wortied abont it becoming law, she staid.
"I think this is a political move on the part of Zimmer," Day stated. "If it got to a bad point I'd try to fight it. The univerwity might as well since theyEave aomathing veated in it
Many SU students do not feel that raiaing the minimum drinking age will keep students from drinking. Although junior Jaret Ring eaid ahe would notbe affected by having the drinking age raised, she thinks it is a bad ider.

Alcohol is mapposed to be prohiknited in high echools Tight now," she said. "I don't think it matters whiat the legal age is, they would atill bring it in juat to defy miles.
Wif we're old enough-to vote in elections, we're old enough to drink," said sophomore Andy Gissinger.
\({ }^{1}\) I come from Ohio, which is a 21 state, and it has no effect on college or even high school students. It is a law that can't be enforced, Giaginger stated.

Taking a sober look at raising the drinking age

Ain old and tiresome argumint ís being dredged up again: Bhonld 18 year-olds have the right to drink?

Right in our backyard, Assemblyman Melvin N. Zimmer Jr., Syr., started such a debate in New York state whin he introduced a bir in the assembly to raise the drinking age from 18 to 21. A similar bill- has also been introduced in the Semate.
Ziminer throws out a myriad of statistics to support his bill. He cites evidence of rising alcoholism among teenagers and an increase in the number of teenige deaths on New York roads caused by drinking. He feels his bill wonld be a major step in checking his trend.

Luckily, not many people agree with him-including Republican and Demócratic legislators from central New York-because it will create more problems than the few, if any, it will solve.
We agree that alcoholism is a problem among joung adults. The National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism estimates that 3.3 million studerats in junior and senior high school are "problem drinkers." Moreover the alcoholism that affects teenagers is no different from the disease that affects millions of older Americans. However, banning alcohol will not make the problem disappear.
Excessive drinking is only the symptom of a deeper, more serious emotional problem. If an alcoholic cannot get hold: of liquor, he will torn to dirugs or anything else as a substitute.

The cure for all alcoholics is patience, understanding, and some sound help from groups like Alcoholics Anonymous.
We doubt a law can leep teenagers from drinking anyway. Fake id's, creation of "black markets" where 21-year-olds supply booze to minors, buying from neighboring states or even stealing are just \(a\) few of the ways resourceful under-age drinkers can obtain liquor.

The higher driaking age will make life more difficult for the bar make life more díncuit for the bar enforce the law. Because of fake id's, they often have to rely on their own jnd gment in deciding who gets served. Yet, distinguishing between 19 , 20 and 21 -yearoldsis between 19, 20 , and 21-year-oldsis almost impossible.
Thin task wrill beimmensely more difficult than it is now with the drinking age at 18 . In most cases, teenagers 17 and under physically do not look as old as those 18 and over.

Irist as importantly, Zimmer's bill would infringe upon the rights of young adulta There is no magic age or number that automatically signifies your coming of age," concedes Maureen I Polech, Zimmer's press secretary.

Her reasoning has some merit. Who's to say that a 17 -year-old is lesa mature than an 18 -year-old? Or is a 20 -year-old any leas mature than a 21 -year-old? It is a difficult and arbitrary decision in deciding when someone becomes an adult.
Nevertheless, society has chosen 18 as that "magic age" Eighteen-year-olds have this right to vote, to drive a car, and to gerve in the armed forces. All of these require maturity and responsibility. And the right to drink belonge on that list.

Raising the drinking age to 21 would also aeverely affect Syracuse University and area businesses since a gizeable portion of the undergraduate body would be denied the right to legally drink.
Ironically, this would-hurt the administration just as much as the students. It is doubtful that drinking epots ilke Jabberwocky and Stadent Center, which are both teetering on the brink of financial diasters, could aurvive the loss of so much business.

As a result of fewer night spots, the character of campus life would change greatly, And oomehow, with mañy unable to drink or doing so legally, parties would never be the same.

Restanfants and bars on Marshall. Street would also be hurt. Some may even have to go out of business. Again, the diversity of campus life wonld be lost.
The experience at Michigan State bears this out. Most of the local bars there closed after the drinking age was raised from 18 to drinking age was raised from 18 to longer legally eerve beer on liquor at their parties.

Several states have recentiy raised the drinking age. Othera, like New Jersey, are also considering raising the drinking age. And to top it off, there is a And to top it off, there is ia

Connecticut to have a uniform drinking age in New England to prevent "border jumping."
By jumping on the bandwagon, Zimmer apparently thinks he can gain some votea in the next elecgain some votes in the next elec tion. But unlike the liquor and drug ban at the War Memorial, voters should be able to see through this guise.
We're confident his fellow legislators will also.

By Richard Walsh \({ }^{\prime}\)
Graham Parker and The Rumer who reléased three critically acclaimed studio albums in a span of two years, were in a state of lateficy last year because of promotional problems with their record label. Mercury. Having decided to fulfill its contractua obligationa as quickly as possibible in order to aign with another labelt the band released the uneven live album The Parkerilla last apring- Signing with Arista records soon afterward, Parker and The Rumour recently returned with anew studio album entitled Squeezing Out Sparks.

The new record, which consists of 10 songs composed by Parker, matches the intensity of his second album, Heat Treatment. That intensity was laching at times on his last studio effort, Stick To Me.
The new songs are fresh and vital; with strong meloaies complimnenting the bitter lyrics at times, as ovidenced in the closing cut on wide one, "Passion in No Ordinary Word:"
We Got new idols on the screen today Wegot new they make a lot of noises
They got nothin' to say.
They got nothin to sed
I try to look amazed
Itry to look am
But it's an act,
The movie might be new
But it's the same soundtrack.
In describing Parker's music, one is taken with the tremendous urgency he attempts to convey - both muarically through the very capable Rumorr, and lyrically with his freqently harsh statements. The music is a combination of Motown sool, Fhythm and blues and of course barroom rock ' \(n\) ' roll. They are a product of the pubrock movement which had its roote in London in the mid-708.
On "Squeezing Out Sparks," Parker is backed for the first time solely by The Rumour. whereas on previous alburns the band was accompanied by a brasa section.

The Rnmour seems to be more hard-edged due to this deviation, being urged on continually by the lead guitar of Brinuley Schwarz, where in the past the brass eection would have been. The abeence of the horn section allows The Rumour to stand alone, and the result is some fine rock ' \(n\) ' roll.

Although in the past Parker and The Rumour were favorites of the critice and a select group of fans, their album males have been lese than substantial. In order to brealk into the market auceessfrully, a band muat have an album with a selection of cuts that can be played on the airwaves. It soems that with this record, Parker. and The Romour might very well have hit pay dirt.

Four or five of the sangs are maingtream rock ' \(n\) ' coll, capable of receiving of airplay. Most notable is the recaiving or airplay, Most nota, ie is the album's frestcut, frocovering Japan "Waiting for the Urom aid
All the aonge have a harsh guitar An the gongs have a haxkh guikar sound except the acoustic "You Can't Be Too Strong." The Ftiunour is moat Be too Strong." The Ftumour is murt effective ans a unsit on Is No Ond Hurta Yound." \({ }^{\text {and }}\)

The merits of Squeezing Out Sparkz are many. The production is excellent. Jack Nitztche has done a fine job of placing the songr; his production at least matches the job done by Robert John Lapge on Heat Treatment, and far surpasees Nick Lowe's effort on Stick To Me.

Squeezirng Out Sparks is Parker's moat commerically acceptable record to date, but the fire and intensity of his previous efforts is not lont in the shuffle. The promive of Heat Treatment is renewed, and the razoredged rock 'n' roll remains in a faskion that will appeal to a laxger andience.
In 1976, Bruce Springstean was quoted as eaying of Parker, "He's, the only guy Id pay money to see." It appears that with his newest record Graham Paricer can pick up where he left off in 1976. Quite posaibly whem more people become familiar with this necord their sentiments will ecto Springsteen's praise.

The moat hnportent menory for mont SU porte ferm in \(1978-79\) hat to bo the duy the goal poati gwared en SU ghut down Nevy during the tinal

It was April, so the fan decided to leave che bar and stop mourning the Syracuse University basketball team. After all, it was April and that meant studying for final examp
But April also meant, with the exception of a few sports, the end of the SU athletic year. The fan didn't want to atudy for finals. Instead, be wanted to file the aports memories of the past year-sorting the records and the scores and storing them permanently into the little corner of the mind lableled 1978-79.
A memorable sports event has more to offer than recordy, names, numbers and the final score. It is like a memorable play movie or any other type of drama. It has attractive heroes and villains, intricate plots and sub-plota and climaxes and con clusions that leave the spectators as drained as the participants themselves. And it appeals not only to the fanatic who squirta at the amall type on the sports page day after day but also to the detached observer who doesn't know the difference between a touchdown and a basket.
With these criteria, the SU sports fan tried to put 1978 -79 into perspective with his year's top memories.
1. Syracuge vs. Navy footbail, Nov. 11. 1978.

It was a day carved out of a Hollywood gcript. The achedule simply said, "SU vs. Navy," but the stage was SU's Archbold Stadium, an endiaring symbol of the great teams and great players that once performed for Syracuse. November 11, 1978 was the last time Archbold would be used. No SU team had ever gone through an entire seston without winning at leagt one gatue there. The 1978 odition wat \(0-4\) at Ar chbold.
it did not look promising on Nov. 11.SU had won only one game all aeason and Navy wat the 18th bept teara in the nation.
But playing the script better than Cecil B. DeMille, the Orange combined courago, bill and luck to win Archbold's finale. The heroes run together in the mind. David Jacobe and his winning field gool: tackle Craig Wolfley with his injured mooulder; and running baci Joe Morris, as Jimmy Brown, Emin Davis and Floyd Lit tle, with his runhing.

And the conclumion wate moxe dramatic than the burning of Atlanta With a aurrentirtic base arvoloping Archbold, deaperthe letienecond hid to wrin the gryse whilp the moelponte eiviged in the nix. The gonlposts were the victims of the nostalgia huaters grabbing a piece of history by tearing apart bleachers, ripping upsod and carrying off signs.
At the end, the scoreboard said SU 20 Navy 17, but it was much more thaim that. 2. Syracuse vB. Florida State football, Sept 9, 1978
Whether they were sportswriters ready to give him the Heimman Trophy or students who thought he was the vice chancellor in charge of Buffalo. Bill Hurley's name was on the lips of almost everyone on campus on the weekend of Sept 9.
He was the man who was going to lead SU football back to Camelot; the man, who for one October Saturday in 1977 agninst Penn State was the begt quiarterback in the country; the man who would win the Heisman.
And the atage was a brilliant September Saturday, matching the hopes of the 30,000 fans jammed into Archbold. But in seven plays-it was all over. He was los for virtually the entire beason-a victim of haree broken ribe. Camelot had indeed been a brief and shinixg moment
The crowd spent the reat of the after noon barely watching the field and craning their necks toward the sidelines: "Ls he back?", "Will he play?", and "Is that him in the ambulance?", they asked in hushed tones.
One could hear a pin drop to the turf the reat of the game. The dramatic twist had left the crowd stunned, apeschlesn and frustrated. The scoreboard waid "Florida State 28 SU 0," but it was much more then that.

Syracuee va. Iona baskethall. Dec. 2,1978
Sylvetter Stallone would have loved it The Ions Gads were the "Rockies" of college backetball. In two years under head coach Jim Valvano, they had gone from being the second best team in Now Rochelle to a number nine prepeeman ren king in Sports milutrmied. But the eighth-ranked Orangemen weren't able to get by the Knighta on Sedgwick's play alone. Before SU's mooth-running offenae could get unracked, the Orange defenge first had to atate its case. And after a fow early lapses, the defense would not, rest against a team hat had 16-goal games twice this ecason. Moat of the early problems were created by the fleet Rutgers attackman James Fora. The Gule jumior gave Orange herenseman Mark the SU defense fits in the aecond period, asiating on one goal (RU's fourth) and then picking up a loose ball near midfield and streaking down the field past several Orangemen to beat SU goalie Jamie Molloy less than a minute later.
Enter John Desko for the defense.. the burly senior guarded Ford the rest of the game, and with a combination of quickness and intimidation, made sure Ford was no longer a problem.
"My man wasn't doing too much. so I asked if I could switch," Denko said. Ford ust left his stick out a little too much, and Itook advantage. He got a little frustrated.
"Mark Steiner played Ford pretty well," said SU assistant coach Jay Gallagher.
attacimen, making them force the ball. John did a great job:
But if Deako mnde a trang case for the defense, his partner Molloy clowed the cave for Rutgers. The lightning fast junior made 19 saves, but his beet nand most important stops came when Rutger threatened to widen it eecond-period margin.
"I didn't want to lose, because those guys weren't worth losing to." Molloy said. "We're a better team."
While Molloy held Rutgers at bay; SU's offense tran with the amooth preciaion it had lacked earlier in the esessonin a loss to Cornell. While Sedgwick'a individual excellence wha obvious, SU'a point produc tion wan mainly the reanit of a patient, patterned offense. Both of Sedgwick's frst-period goals (the quarter ended at 2-2) came on feeds from junior attackman Tim OHara, who was, in turn, freed on picks from freshman Brad Short behind the Rutgers goal
"We. just moved the ball well", McEneaney maid. "It's not an individual game, it's a team game. Any time you score 13 goals and have nine, assiats, it hows you're moving the ball."
The Orange moved the ball eapecially wellin the second and third quartare when the Orange stole the momentum Rutgers appeared to be building. The momentum clearly belonged to SU when O'Hara sandwiched two bcores around Sedgwick' tying goal and then ascisted 75 Kevin Donshue shot that gave SU a 75 lead at the half.
While SU ran to the shelter of the locker room during intermiasion, the Knights stayed huddled on the frigid field. No matter . . . the third period would be hot enough for the Knights. Rutgers acored firat on a Tony Haskell shot 32 seconds into the period, but Sedgwick reaponded with two etraight goals. After Robert Haskell brought RU to within 97, SUs Ralph Spinola took over. The bie reehman midfielder; a member of the SU wreatling team during the winter, fruscled in three goals to put Rutgers away
SU led \(12-7\) going into the final quarter, a deliberate period in which Rutgers' Bill Brown and SU's Marty Whipple'traded Eoals.

For the Orange, the hope of April and May poll climbing remains. For Autzers, the month of-eruelty and early May showers will not soon be forgotlen.

\title{ lives on through collection
}

\section*{By Richard Follere}

Margaret Bowrice-White was a pioneer, both as a woman and as a ar* tigt.

One of the first Life magazine photographers, ane shot the publication'a first cover in 1936. BoulceWhite was also the first accredited fernale war photographer and the onky American photographer to record the Nazi invasion of Russia.

Syracuse University owns her photographic collection.
Bourke-White willed her collection, which inclucies approximately 25,000 negatives and 8,000 prints, to SU, according to Michael McClellan, who oversees the works.

Bourke-White's work tells the story of her life on both sides of the camera. She began taking pictures while studying at Cornell University. To meet expenses, Bourke-White sold mhotos of the campus area for \($ 1\) each. Her Cornell pictures look hazy, but she blamed this goft-focus look on a crack most famous pictures. For more than \(25^{\circ}\) years ste traveled and covered stories or the magazine.
Bourke-White covered World Wax II; she was with the Allied troops that liberated the Buchenwald concentration camp. She also traveled to India and Korea, but she seemed to have a special feeling for Russia, which she toured for both Fortune and Life.
In her book "Eyes on Rusaia" Bourke-White recoumted one special incident. Attending a Russian workers* club social event, she was the only woman present and every man wanted to dance with her. Because ahe spolke no Russian she simply nodded and mmiled fater that evening the discovered that she had accepted more than 30 marriate proponels. an 30 white propasais Bonrie-White s career ended in the ate 1950 when ahe developed Parcinson's diberage. The digease crippled her and required extensive treatment, In a Iife articlery

Bourke White owned a New York photogiaphic studio in the 1920 s ard \({ }^{3} 30 \mathrm{~s}\). To get the correct angle, ghe often hung from ledgee while photographing the buildings of the city
She later-became the first photographer for Fortane magazine. Then came the years working for Iife, during which she produced her struggles, she suid: "1 was arnaxed at the notion a mere disease could eatch me. In the Mediterranean during World War II; I had been aboard a transport that was torpedoed and had escaped in a lifeboat. I had nown over Casmeno in Italy with German fighters following our little Piper Cub, Ihadbeen through too many bombings and shellings to count them, and once \(I\) was even dropped into the Chesapeake Bay by a helicopter.

I had always been arrogantly proud of my health and durability. The strong might fall to the waygide but I was indestructible," she eaid.

So Bowrke-White learned everything about Parkinson's disease. She often questioned her doctor and watched a brain operation just two weeks after she had undergone khe sameoperation. "The patient's world was for me a new world," she wrote. "Experiencing surgery was like going out on a new asaignment."
Bourke-White visited SU in 1966. Fred Demareat, chairman of the Newhowae photography depaxtanent, remembers her as physically frail, but mentally flawless. He said she had trouble antographing a book, but still charmed students.

Margaret Bourke-White died August 27,1971 . But, through her, pictare collection, her work is atill alive.

The collection is maintained thrqujf a graduate asaigtantship and funding from the National Endownent for the Arts, according to Demarest McClellan, aphotojoarmalismmajor, im responsible for sorting, organixing and duplicating works in the collection, which he eatimated will be opan for research in about 15 years.
McClellan taid he enjoys maricing with the collection, especially the pic tures Bourke-White ehot in Rusina:-
He sees her as a jerson, not as an in fallible artist "It' good to be aible to look at her megratiyea mind ,pee things that are, zomt of fifocua and undardeveloped;".fe said, "Mhen, I undarcevelopod, foul about doing those things myself."

Compurnity House has been sold to Delta Upsilon fraternity.

The sale was approved by the Syracuse University Board of Trusteea Friday, according to Chancellor Melvin A. Egerers.

Community House, owned by SU and rum by Hendricks Chapel was put up for aale because of monetary troubles. Last year"s \($ 21,500\) operating budget for Community House the Chapel's budget over-run.
In the transaction, SU gained the SU nurging ochool building, Eggers said. nursing achool Duta Upsilon owned the structure.

Some cash will be tranaferred in the action, Eggers said. He said he did not know the exact.figures, but he said the nursing school has a greater monetary value than Community House.
John H. MicCombe, dean of Hen* dricks Chapel, said he was unaware that the sale of Cormmunity House had been approved. "I am the most unin" formed person on the issue; no one is in touch with me," he said.
McCombe said about 1,000 people a week use Community House for Hendxicing Chapel, he added.

Commanity House was described by its director Iean Baum as a place where members of the SU comamunity with different religious beliefa and cultural backgrounds can commanicate with each other.

However, the Honor Society, the Volunteer Center, the Orange Place and f ve language clubs will have to \(b\) relocated to other places on campue.

Eggers said places for these activitiea will be found, although he did not say where.
Baum suid she did not know Community House had been sold. "I will feel very bad if it is sold, but there is nothing I can do about it," she said.

Kevin Cullen, Delta Upsilon president, said his fraternity needs president, said his fraternity needs present house is too amall. In addition it is not a good structure, he said.

Curremaly Delta Upillon rents ita house from Zeta Tau Alpha morority.
Eggers said the transaction still has to be legally completed. However, he does not anticipate any problems.

Syracuse University may demolish homes southwest of the campus to make room for parking during events at the Carrier Dome. All buildings being considered for demolition are currentiy owned by the university.
Details of the specific properties involved have not yet been worked out, according to Clifford L. Winters Jr., SU's vice chancellor for administrative operations
Winters said "seven or eight" SUowned houses in the ares behind fawrinson Hall are being considered por demolition. "Some of them have people living in them and some of them are empty now," he said.

They are going to have to come down sooner or later," he said. "But juast when we'll need them, I don't know."

The razing of university-owned buildings in the area would yield 400 to 500 additional parking spaces and busstorage spaces, according to Wilbur Smith and Associates, a New Haven traffic consultant hired by SU.
The consultant's report said expansion should be made in the "Stadium West" area, but did not give apecific recommendations.
Winters insisted that \(S U{ }^{\prime} s\) consideration of raving houses in the area "is no big deal." He said the increased parking demands will "not necessarily" require that any builtings be destroyed.
"I am not saying we won't tear down any properties, because we take them down all the time when they have outlived their usefulness," Winters sexid.

Winters ssid the university also owns buildings in the area that houses forestry and law school offices.
"There is quite a bit of appropriate land available and we have a lot of cleared land in the area," Winters said.

He also noted that SU is now leasing a parking lot to the Veterans Administration, that holds "something ike 400 cars

Other recommendations made by the traffic planners include adding 1600 parking apaces at Maniley Field House and 700 epacea at the Sxytop area.

The report says the maxitmurn number of cars anticipated at a football game would be 12,000 , with an average of three riders in each car.

Currently, there are 21,200 parking spaces in Syracuse, and 14,000 of these are downtown, the report says.

\section*{Voices in the Senate: \\ Nahmin Horwitz \\ Part 2}

Questicna concerning university governance are alwaya with us. They are appropiatequestions. Our daily lives are directly affected by governance ardaily lives are directly affected by governance arourselves of the rationale for what exists and to seek ways of effecting improvencents. In much of what: follows. the question of democracy vs. hierarchal structure is considered in the context of governance here at Syracupe University. here at Syracase University.
Legal authority for running the university resides in the trustees by act of the Legislature of the State of New York. Trastees are not educators and do not in fact run the universit: but delegate authority to the chancellor, who in turn delegatea some of the authority to vice chancellors, who delegate to deans,

Whe. What of the faculty? The legal structure delegates them little formal authority. Nevertheless, here and at most quality universities, the faculty plays a Fignificant determinative role, in a number of areas. Most decisions concerning curriculum are made by the faculty and in some units via a process that involves large elementa of democracy

The faculty plays a largely determinative role in promotion and the granting of tenure. This is an important area. It deals directly with the reward structure. The weight that is given to scholarly activity, to teaching. to university service, has a real effect on the effort faculty devote to these areas. Finally, the faculty normally plays a determinative role in deciding who should be hired to fill a position once that position has been assigned to an acadernic unit.

What a bout the students' role? Within academic a fairs, negligible formal authority is vested in students, although they are being increasingly included as voting members in groups that make cluded as voting members in groups that make decisions on curriculum, hiring, promotion, and tenure.
Tially are armportant areas in which there is essentially no opportunity for faculty or students to par ticipate via democratic procesbes:
1) Resource allocation: Which academic areas are most central to the purposes of the university? How much weight should be given to reaearch needs va.
instruction? Is it better to build on our strong departments or to shore up our weak ones? What is the relative importance of an endowed chair va. a computer vs. the attractiveness of buildings and grounds?
2) Policies concerning auxilliary activities: What kind of regulations for the dorms? Should corop housing be gubsidized? Should the bookstore make a profit? Is big-time football in the university's interest? interest?
3) Campus rules and regulations.
4) Admissi on and financial aid policies. These areas invol ve policy, decisions based on value judgements, ministrators > ministrators. The Univergity Senate is the one and only all- university body whose faculty and atudent membera are for the moat part elected by their reapective constituencies. It is the one body which has thatimphat ita members cannot long continue it their actions are unagtiafactory to their constituents. Unfortunately, at present, litile determinative authority is either all

The Senate serves as a clearing house when there is overlap between colleges in curricular matters. It serves as a forum where a diversity of subjects can be introduced for discusaion. It can be a pressure point Where the squeaks of aqueaky wheels catch the attention of the administration. It's Academic Freedom and Professional Ethics Committee plays an im portant watchdog function. Ita Budget Committee is allowed an embryonic role in the allocation of allowed an embryonic role in the allocation of resources. it is an established channel of comresources. It is an established channel of communication between stadents, faculty, and admunication between stadents, faculty, and ad ministration. (A university needs such channels they are extremely ugeful in mmes of streas and emergency.)
But the Senate is nota decision-mating body. It is not the vehicle by which faculty and atadents in a democratic manner can participate in determining university policy. It is well to bear this limitation clearly in mind. Failure to do so has led to unrealistic expectations of Sanate effectiveness and to frustration and growing cymicism when those unrealistic expectations were not fulfilled.

The case forkierarchal structure goes as follows: It is efficient. Freedom of action is important to good administration and is facilitated by the concen tration of authority in a small number of hands. Good decisions require expertise and acquiring exper. tise takes time. A hierarchal structure pernita concentratian the mogt important authority in the most capable hands. We live in a hard, competitive world. If the university isn't administered efficiently it won't survive. These are strong arguments.
What about democracy? Why should one try to develop mechanisms to enable members of the university community to determine the policies and directions of the institution to a greater degree than at present?
I take as axionatic that cornmunity determination of policies in the long run maximizea the degree to which the collective wiadom of the community is tapped and utilized: and that the collective wiadom of the community exceeds the wisdom available when one relies on small groups of leaders
Many of the hard decisions that have to be made are made on the basis of gut feeling. Na expert has found a formula to determine how much emphasis should be given' to reaearch and how much to teaching: whether we should Eirst buildon strencth or will ultimately beablessing or curse. These questions are decided by judgrnent. Or in less genteel terms, by bias and prejudice. There is much to besaid for putting more faith in the collective bias and prejudice of large numbers of the university community than those of a few at the top of a hierarchal structure.
I take as axionatic that community determination has the desirable effect of producing a sense of ideritification, of loyalty, of willingness to sacrifice if necessary for the welfare of the ingtitution. I talce as axiomatic that human beings derive more plearnue and satisiacion out ofivingif bey seal they are play institutions of which they are mer bers and that it is ingtitutions of which they are men bers and thatitis mppropriate that they should realize such satisfactions. Exclusion from such participation produces factions.

These axioms, forme, form the basis for supporting democracyin national government. If the strengths of democracy make it desirable for national government why don't those atren desirable for university governance?

The previous question can be turned around. If democracy is an inferior form of governance for a university why isn't it also inferior at the national level? The most seriova aspect of Watergatewas that one administration felt democracy was indeed one admanistration felt democracy Was indeed inferior. A president and his closest advisers felt so infexior. A president and his clogest advisers felt so certain they knew what was best for the country and certain they knew what was best for the country and inefficient, that they felt justified in atternpting to ineficient, that they felt ustified in attempting to ing authority in a small hiergrchal structure in the White House. What is frightening to mae about Watergate is that many in our population, desirous of strong leadership to solve their problerms, wese not overly concerned with that threat to dernocratic institutions.

How does a popalation get conditioned to look to strong leadership for the solution of problems as opposed to looking to themsel ves and to democratic processes? One ilkes to believe college graduates play a leading role indetermining the attitudes and values in society. Thosegraduates are conditioned by the example their university sets in its governance philosophy. We teach by what we do. I gense a trend gway from self-sufficiemey; a trend towards looking to strong leadership for bolutions. It's an unhealthy trend. Universities should try to be part of the solution. I fear they are part of the problem.
Developing new democratic governana inatitutions at SU that will operate effectively won't be easy. On the contrary, itiseasy to find examples of leas than statesmanlike behavior on the part of faculty and students. Often in the Senate one hears argumente concerming tuition, salaries, etc- that interest of the apeaker.
We get behavior that matches telegraphed expectations. The behavior we get now in part reflects the fact that the Senate lacks formal authority, performs limited sugnificant functions and, therefore, corr is not taken too seriously even by its members.
The behavior we get now is in paxt conditioned by a hierarchal structure which agonings that the appropriate fanction of faculty and otudente is io concentrate on presenting the case for their intereats to higher anthority. for adjudication, rather than to think in etategmanifise terme about maximixing the think in etatagmaname Faculty and atudents need to be trained and educated. We need to be encouraged to trained and educated. trainimg the population of a partony to prepare for self rule; like encouragement parents give their children to learn to make theirown decisions and to become independent.
It's overly simplistic to imagine that decision-making power is like a collection of wooden blocks that can be handed over to this or that group. It is that those in whom authority is now formally vested recognize the desirability of delegating it on a democ ratic basis to the fullest extent feasible. That means exploring and experimenting and feeling a sense of accomplishment when you find new mechanisms that work.
hat work. but berause it doenn't because it seems impossible beems that once you are ane them as desirable. it's one of the reasons you become an administrator) you take it for granted that you should be making decisions, that not to exercise uitima constitutes a shirking of responsibility.

My hope is that some day I will meet an ad miniatrator who will feel that one of the measures of his success is the extent to which he has made his of fice superfluous to the operation of the area of the university he administers.

\section*{Stepping on squatters' rights}

It may seem strange to label the Office of Residence and Dining Services a homewrecker, but because of an inane room lottery policy, many students could call it just that.
Accorting to ORDS policy, if a student wants to remain in the same room next year with a new roommate from another dormitory, he or she stands a chance of losing the rookn.

Students only qualify for "equater's rights" (choosing to stay in the same room) April 4 if they are staying with the same roommate, or moving in with someone else from the same building.

Students bringing someone into their rooms from another building have to wait until the next day, the day reserved for room changes within buildinges.

Thus, two people already living in the building can take someone else's room if they have a lower else's room if In effect, students give up the right to return to their room if they want an "outsider" to move in.

For obvious reasons, some students don't seem to think this is fair. Floyd Walash, a freehman who was able to bring a friend into his DellPlain room for next fall, said, "I don't think it's fair that people trying to move someone from outside into their room are thrown into the pot with everyone else. You're punished for trying to do it."

But ORDS thinks there is nothing wrong with the policy. Students realize they give up squatters rights by trying to move a resident of another building in, according to giving information on the lottery, never states the policy, It only hints at it, and some students had noidea that the policy was in effect Even ORDS seems to be confused about the situation. Last week a Brewster resident planning to move in with a Dellplain resident went to ORDS to ask if he and his friend were to choobe a room on Wednesday or Thursday. No one in the office was sure.

Of course, this problem and the others could be easily solved. ORDS should either add a day to the lottery or achedule a different time on the same day for students who want to bring outsiders into their rooms.

This day, or time, would come between the day for returning to the same room and the day for inbuilding moves. This year, it would be between April 4 and 5 .

This would cost.money and place an additional burden on the ORDS staff, but it would be worth the time and money. It would be a big advantage for many atudents. giving them a fair chance to get their old rooms back.

And then, fewer people would complain about the room lottery, and no one could call ORDS a homewrecker.

\section*{Overcoming apathy}

\section*{Guest comment: \\ Susan Heskins}

Apathy has become the most prevaient astitide towarde government today People seemingly do not get involvedin any issue that does not directly affect them or that does not show any immediate benefith This is evident when one looks at the reaction of students towards Student Association.
In Decermber, during an election where for the first time in Syracuse University history a presidential candidate was removed from the ballet, 25 percent of the student population voted. Ironically, this was an amazingly large turnout.
Many students are unaware that they paid a \($ 41.75\) atudent activity fee this year, which the assembly divided among organizations, athletic clubs and groups after lengthy and informative budget hearingz. Even if a student does not belong to any grow? he or she still gives this money for SA to distribute. For no other reason than to see where their money is going. students should be interested in \(\mathbf{S A}\). Still, SA is conaidered by some to be "a joke," and is not taken aerionaly by many Many students feel they have no voice in \(S A\), and even if they did, SA is ineffective. This is unfortunate, and untrue. Firat of all. every bingle undergraduate has an elected representative in SA; therefore, every student has a voice in SA.
Secondly, even if SA wereineffective, students can still hold the administration in checik to a certain extent because of the existence of a student government.

Student Aasociation is not ineficc Live, however. A brief overview of the past year will give evidence of that fact. A union building may finally become a reality, after a demonstration last apring mind becamine studentis gpring and becanie studenik themselves put together a plan whose success relies solely. on the efiorts of htudents. Students are finally going to have a \(g\) mittees.

Also, a teacher evaluation booklet, where teachers will be evaluated in a fair, res ponaible manner by students, is in progresg. The bookstore, which was boycotted last apring, has agreed to aet up an advisory council to adviee the store on prices, the buy-back policy, etc. As a result, students will finally havea say about the atore that is supposed to serve them, exclusively.

Ernie Davia will be remembered. The domed atadium may not carry his name, as is the wish of the student body, but the adminietration would have neglected Ermie Davis altogether if the student had not made it clear that we would not let the mreat football player, and greater person, be player,
The important thing to remember is that students have come together on isthat stucients have come together onis sues they care about. As in most camen, sues they caye about. As in most carea, it has not even been a majority of students that has put on pressure. At students that has put on pressure. At the Union Building rally, for erample, the Union Building rally, for example, 1,000 students showed up, which is 1,000 studenta showed up, which is only one-tenth of the wndergraduate student body. The bookstore still did business during the boycott, but because of the Eroup of students who honored the boycott, the bookstore lost a substantial amount of money.
Think of what could happen if every atudent worked on an issue that was important to all undergraduates. The

To the editor
Edwin (Chip) Landis III died while playing basketball March 19. On March 20 at 8 p.m. in Booth Hall's main lounge, a memorial service was held for Chip. Assistant Dean Fasching and Dean McCombe of Hendricks Chapel presided at the service.
Several students came to me the next day and said they would like to go to the funeral in Now Jersey the following day. The students and myself went to work trying to ar range trannportation fpr the trip. One atudent apent several hours on the phone calling area rental agencies to find the cheapest van rental.

Three other students went to see Jane Hyde in the Stradent Services and Development Office, They asked if there was any way the univeraity could help us. She sent the students to see Elizabeth Brown in the Parents Office. Brown called and we estimated the cont of the van rantal and gas to be about \($ 160\). Brown said she would make a few calls and get back to me. Within a half an hour, she called me back to tell me we had all the money we needed.
The money eane from thzee sources: the Chancellor't Ofice through the help of Ismes Gies, the Parents Office through Iitb Brown and from Newell Rossman, vice chancellor and sperial assistant to the chancellor.
I would. like to take this opportunity to thank all the people who helped us through this trying time.

Thomas D. Martin
Thomas D. Martin is the third floor resident advisor in Booth Hall.

To the editor:
Arter reading the article in The April 5 Daily Orange on Ralph Nader, I am a little irate that his appearance on campus was not widely publicized. The law school may have a pollicy of keeping lex tures of this cort undier wrape, but with a man of Mr. Nader's stature appearing. on campus, everyone should have had a chance to hear him opeak. SUmust etart exploiting Euch oppoxtmatien for the rest of the student body.

Scott Rosenman, the first two-year winner of the marathon, raised \($ 7,300\) with his partner, Nadine Muhl. All a dancer has to do is remember why he's there. The children in the wheelchairs are the inspiration," he said.
Flip Mancuso, co-chairman of the marathon, believed group unity was the motivatEroup unity was the motivating factor for They are all so psyched and to keep going."
Referee Mike "Tig" McTigue also noticed the togetherness of the participants. "There is a definite unity which evolves as time goes on-by Sunday night everyone is really close."
McTigue, who has danced in previous marathons, was unable to participate this year because of an injury and decided to support the marathon by refereeing instead. He encouraged the instead. He encourazed and made sure they kept their feet moving.
Even though they don't dance, many of the spectators are just as dedicated to fighting MD as the participants themsel ves. Danny Meyer supplied his friend Sherk with orange juice in the morning and provided her with complimentary backrubs throughout the weekend. In addition, he donated his foosball wurnament winminge to the cause.
Dancer Jim Sabitas said the hardest time for him was between breakfast and 1 p.rn., because "there's nobody there to keep you going. But when Sunday night comes, I hype Sunday night, connes, I hype end. I couldn't sleep Sunday night,: Sabaitas said.
By-7:30, most of the dancers were "hyping out." Along with were hyping out." Along with the crowds of supporters, the weekend continued to cheer weekend continued to cheer, clap, and stomp - thoukh perhaps more slowly-as each "I think bundayned are treated to basketball, wresthing and gymnastice and during the spring there is crew and lacrosse. However, there is not a men's tennis team at SU in any of these seasons.

In 1973, the SU athletic department dropped tennis as baseball and golf, claiming it was not fnancially feasible to maintain these sports. A tenmaintain these sports. A ten-

The members of the club petitioned the Athletic Policy Board in 1977 in an attempt to regain varsity status. After a lengthy presentation prepared was denied.
The tennis club, now in its fifth season, is barely managing to survive.
"They are, a struggling organization," snid Andy Mogish, director of club sports at su. "The club is competitive, butit is hard to arrange matches for them because they don't have inter collegiate status.

'Some schools won't play us because we are a club. They have nothing to gain and everything to lose," Paul said. Most schools have a general policy not to play club sports.

The top players on the club are Joe Schapiro, Steve Foss, Ting Pepper, Bobby Feinberg. Rob Stone and Paul.
"It's hard to say how we will do this year. Colgate is good do this year. Colgate is good and LeMoyne is solid," Paul and. said.
These are the only matches that have been acheduled at this point, but the schedule may be expanded if other teams have open clates. "We had a day's notice when we played Colgate last year," Paul said. The club will also acriurnmage against the powerful SU women's team.
The team is plagued by a lack of practice. "A lot of guys don't want to practice," Paul said. "There are no newards for playing on a club sport. We need discipline- a coach - 80 we can have an organized practice."

\section*{SU pursues uniform TA training program}

This is the first segment of a two-part series examining the teaching assistant training program at Syracuse University.

By Paul Franco
Despite several committees studying the problem or two years, little progress has been made toward developing a university-wide teaching asoistant raining program at Syracuse University-
Although a recommendation for a TA training program was submitted on March 5 by the SU committee on academic planning, the onily universitywide features of the programs, to be implemented next semester, are an eveniag oricntation meeting and a handbook to be distributed to new TA's.
A vast difference in TA training programs existe among departments at SU, according to aurveys conducted by the committee on instruction for the College of Arts and Sciences, the Center for Ingtruc tional Development and the-Board of Graduate Studies.

The most structured program is in the Freshmen English department. According to the gurvey, "Only the English department requires new TAs to enroll in a course designed to improve their teaching skills.*

The math department offers a two-day training program prior to regietration in September. In ad dition, the science teaching department and Biology 121-123 offer similiar instruction to their TAs.
However, some departmentes limit their training to one single meeting with the course ingtructor before the semeater. The survey results did not mention which departments offer one-meeting instruction.

Dr. George Atkinson, chairperson of the committee on instruction, was unavailable to comment on the results. Atkinson's committee conducted most of the research.

Also. Richard C. Fallis of the Office of Research and Graduate Affairs aaid stipends in certain areas are too low. He declined to name which deparkments had the low stipends, but said, "This is a problem we must work on together."
Although reports presented by the university two years ago asked for a minimum stipend for all TAs, the academic planning committee's recommendation does not mention anything regarding stipends.
"It just isn't practical." said Pirkto Turkki, committee chairperson. "Funds for stipends come from difference sources and it would be impossible to get a university-wide minimum stipend for all graduate students.
However, the department official was concerned about the amount of stipends offered to graduate students.

Ned Harris, president of the Graduate Student Organization, aaid SU ratea a little below average in stipends and benefits to graduate students.

Some TAs agree with Fallis. Bob Moran, a chemical engineering graduate student who is algo a math TA, feels the teaching assistantship is worthwhile.

The report called for the vice president for Research and Graduate Affairs to monitor compliance with the report. The report also said the compliance reports should be publicized in the Record and released to the vice chancellor for academic affairs, the Board of Graduate Studies, the Graduate Student Organization and the rest of the university community.
In response to the report, a training program for TAs was developed and instituted by the Center for Instructional Developtment in the fall of 1977. Inciuded with the program was a TA handbook called "A TA's Guide to Syracuse University." The handbook detailed services and facilities that a TA may need during the year.
The program, however, was diacontinued. The primary reason, according to Robert Dismond, assistant vice chancellor of the Center for Instructional Development was poor attendance at the workshops.
"The workshops were good and many people spent a lot of time preparing them." Diamond said. "But they were poorly attended."
The following spring; the Board of Graduate Studies asked the committee on academic planning to study the issue of a TA training program. Several other committees joined the commitite on academic planning and their recommendation for a training program was sub mitted on March 5.

Poge 3 Faculty

Today the Faculty Assembly of the Syracuac University chapter of the Syracuae University chapter of the American Association of University Arofessors will decide whether to submit the "designation cards" they have meceived from faculty members to the National Labor Relations Board and National Labor Relations Board and ank for a federally mapervieed unionization election.
We urge the Faculty Assembly not to aumit the cards and to reject the submit the cards and to reject the tive bargaining agents. Unionization wiladent's interest. It will not alleviate student's interest It win not elleviate several faculty members to organize the unionization drive. In effect, it will transtorm the university from a coman arena for economic conflic dominated by petty and rigid rules. dominated by petty and rigid rules.
Proponents of unionization place Proponents of unionization place considerable weight on the economic argument. They call for a union because faculty salaries have not kept pace with inflation, causing facuity members to lose realincome over recent years. They claim SU is slipping comparcd to other universities in wage compensation.
Some have asserted that faculty members' families are somehow subsidizing students' families since tuition sidizing students farmilies since tuition Consumer Price Index. They also argue that gtudents can afford fopay more so faculty can earn more. Some assert faculty can earn more. onough money to pay more but is. for sorme insidious reason, concealing it.
The last argument is easily dispensed with. There is not pot of gold in the SU budget. Nahmin Horwitz, Budget Committee, has stated flatly that he sees no quick, easy way to pwill money out of the budget for increased compensation. As for the good faith of the administration, last year's subatantial allocation from the budget evidence that the university is doing what it can, within budgetary limitationa, ionprove faculty salaries Amitations, benefits.
As for the implication that relatively rich student families are being aubsidized by relatively poor faculty families, the evidence simply does not bear out this argument. In \(1978-79\), the median income for families of studente receiving financial aid - neariy 80 percent of all student families - was percent of all student families - was \($ 19.195\). The average faculty member's compenaation at \(S U\) was \($ 24,900\), and compensation at \(S\) was \($ 24,900\), and this does not inciude pay from woriang spouses, book royalties or other outside income.
The proposal that tuition increases should be higher 80 that faculty salaries can keep pace with the CPI is dangerous, if not unfair. In order for faculty salaries to keep pace with in flation, thition increases must exceed it. But other costs must also be paid in part by tuition revenue, notably energy costs, which are rising faster tham inon the order of \(10-15\) pexcent. Judgsing from the figures on student family in come, such increases carry the risk of causing \(S U\) to price itself out of the market.
Clearly the faculty is auffering from inflation, but so are the fandilies of students, whose income has not kept pace with the cost of living either. The question is, can unionization bring an question is, can unionization brink an equitable solution to
As forthe "slippage" of SU compared to other schools and the supposed scholars, the problem is more a statis tics game than agenuine crisis. SU has slipped from 14-15th to 18-19th on the ANuP List of 29 private and public universities since \(1972-73\) in terms of faculty compensation. But an increase of only \($ 140\) a year would havekept SU in the gime place on the liet. We findincredible the assertion that a professor making \($ 20,000\) a year would leave or mot take a job here over a difference of \($ 140\) a year.
Even if the money seems greener elsewhere, is that how faculty judges a university? An AAUP May 1978 survey showed that of the respondents satisfied with their working ensatisfied with their working environment, four-fiftha cited support for research and acholarghip as the cause. The aniversity to as that the appeal of the aniversity to good scholart is the quality of its scholarly life, not the size quatity of its sch of its paycheck.
In addition to the weakness of its economic rationale, we have other objections to anionization. For one thing it would seriously weaken, if not destroy, the machinery of decision-making in the university.
An example is the budget process, which determines priorities for the whole university. If the faculty has a collective bargaining agent, the administration willigholy take the stand that since it is management dealing with employees and no longer ad ministrators dealing with scholars, it meed not allow faculty input into the budget-making process. In management-union environments, management bargaims with the union management bargaina with the union over pay, but remsining fiscal decisions are always the prerogative of management.
fuls model of a unionized faculty SU as a model of conflict, with amall group of faculty and administrators, instead of an open debate in the University Senate. Students would be excluded from this bargaining process.

We see it as an arena for economic conflict, with professors preoccupied with controlling and running their union and uaing it to promote their fiscal interest, thus distracting them from their bcholarly work. We see it becoming like many union workplaces: a place of rigid contracta, rules and dues which all faculty, even those opposed to the union, are forced to live and worle by. This is not a model of the university which we find attractive.

This is an especially bad time for a unionization election. The Yeghiva University case, in which that schoo refused to bargain with a umion, leaves unclear the legal -raminications of faculty unionization. If an election is held, a bargaining agent chosen and the university refuses to recognize it - all before the Yeshiva case produces a clear decision on whether or not faculty can unionize - the administration and faculty could become involved in months or years of divisive, expensive and unnecessary litigation.
We do not speak in opposition to faculty unionization because it would enhance faculty power at the expense of students. We speak againgt it because it aerves no one's interestin the campus community.
The union is neither an economic panacea nor a reasonable or influential means of university governance; it is merely a prescription for unnecessary conflict among indi viduals who should reason together on the problems of our university.

Senate. One is the so-called junior faculty, which consists of untenured instructors, assistant professors and associate professors. They are, of course, elicible known outside their own departments.
The other major group excluded is the secretaries and other members of the so-called support staff. The reason always given for their exclusion is that the Senate is basically an academic senate, with powers over curriculum, degrees, and the like, and that it would be improper to sive non-professiomals any authority in these matters. While there is much truth in that, it is also true that the Senate has evolved into much more than a purely academic body Virtually every meeting deals with at least one item of concern to the support staff. (It appears that the support staff members are taking the initiative to deal with their own disenfranchisement. They are organizing for collective bargaining, which they surely need, perhaps even more than the faculty.) whole is represented in the Senate, they lack as a whole is represented in the senate, they lack their puses, there is a Faculty Senate, presided over by an elected-faculty member, which makes many of the decisions our University Senate makes, and which speaks for the faculty. Such a body is needed here, if only to speak for the faculty, as Student Association only to speak for the faculty, as Student Association

Biudents. But no one has solved the problem of creating a faculty body which would not detract from the power, influence and prestige of the University denate. It in a problem which remains to be solved. presides over Senate meeting has a chilling effect on debate. Deans, departmental chairpersons and other facuity manobers think twice before actively oppoaing administration positions, particularly when the chancellor, from the chair, takes an active part in debate, as he often does.
5. Lack of Adequate Power: The biggest weaknegs in the present Senate is that it lacks adequate power to assure that atudents, iacuity and even most adjor decisions which affect them daily. The Senate not only lacks adequate power, it lacks adequate influence.
The Senate spends very little time on those aress where it has actual powers, anch as curriculum, where it has actual powers, such as curricuiun, sues rarely interest the Senate, unless the agenda is uncrowded, in which case Senators (especially faculty Senators) fill up the time by picking at gramo mar, style, etc.
The Senate apencts most ofits time and attention on matters where its powers are, at best, "advisory." of atudents in departmental and college promotion, tenure decisions and, in committee, review of top administrators. These are some of the most vital quesSenate requires legislative, and not merely advisory, powers in these areas.

But on the most fimportant decisions, the Senate is not even comsurted. What role did the Senate play in on the Archbold site, the decision to close Community House, the decision to build a new. managernent building. the decision to publish a mew university buildigg, the decision to publish a mew university magazine and the decian to make achievement awards to members of the univ

Last year, the evaluation team representing the Commission on Higher Education of the Middle States Association of Colleges and Schools visited our campun to review our planning procediares. They concluded that too much power to plan for the university's future is in the hands of what they called the "top leadership group;" consisting of Chancellor Melvin A. Egeers and Vice Chandelloxs Jonn Frucha (academic affairs) and Clifford 1 Winters (administrative operations). In their report, they also commented that the "Faculty Senate" and its committees "deserve a better understanding of their rolea than now prevails." The Senate they 日tated, "should be recast and revitalized or acknowledged as simply a general forum.
I would favor the former. If the Senate is "recast and revitalixed" it should be as a true legislative Unive with decision authority, on all important Chancellor. decisions subject to veto by the a "general forum," the least we could ask is that it be given the information and the opportunity at least to discusts, debate and advise on those important issues on which its views ane mot today solicited.

\section*{Seminar examines access law}

By Terry Murphy Public accesa to records and meetings was the subject of a minar held Saturday at the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communications.

Tim O'Brien, Supreme Court correapondent for ABC-TV newa, and Robert \(J\). Freeman executive director of the Com mittee on Public Accers to Records, were the keynote speakers.
Freeman, a self-described "advocate of disclosure," said the New York state Freedom of Information Act has provided access to previously anavailable documents. "Anyone who understands the law can get information," he said.

But O'Brien, who spoke after Freeman at the morning session. called the FOI act a sion, called hassle. "It is a bureacratic ha Freeman noted that government officials on the state and local levels will be cager to comply with the Freedom of Information Act.

"Being closed out or denied (information) at the local level is more newsworthy than at the national level, he said. "It will be exposed, whereas, on the national level, denial or exclusion does not directly affect people, and it will not be people, and it will not be broughtout. Ontack eye hurts more than the black ey O'Brien agreed, saying that on the national level, "they could deny your request and never tell you about the denial."

The Freedom of Information Act exists as both a federal and state statute. While both versions are similar, Freeman and O'Brien agreed that the law is more effective on the local level.
Freeman said his job is to give advice and provide assistance to anyone fling a FO request." He deacribed how to file for information and, briefly. What material is not available for publicinspection.
OBrien commented on problems that he has had obtaining CLA files. "They finally (after a year of stalling) sent me copies of all the letters Ihad written and received asking for a response to my request." he said.

During the afternoon panel discussion, O'Brien and Freeman were joined by several lacal governmerat officials and juurnalists. The New York State Open Meetings Law was the main topic of conversation.
The Open Meetings (or sunshine) law, which has been in effect for two years, allows the public to be present at, and listen to meetings of any public body performing a government function.
The law does allow for closed mectings or executives sessions
However, the wording of the law has led to debate and controversy over what can be discussed in private, and what must be said in public.

Anne Sly and Phyllis Perkins, local school board members, discussed the detrimental effecto the law has had on their respective boards.

Sly. of the North Syracuse School Board, said much dis. cussion is suppressed at open meetings. "It maken people guarded in what they say." Bhe said.

Perkins agreed: "Some people are self-conscious and have difficulty speaking off the cuff."

However, town of Clay supervisor Ernest Casales said he had no problem living with the new laws, "At the town level, there isn't anything that anyone shouldn't know.

oster as a free agent is a difficult chore. Woster asafreeagentisaterized scouting arnong the professional teams, it is a remarkable achievement to buck the odds and beat out a drafted player for one of the 45 spots on a roster. But for 1978 Syracuse University graduate Ken Clarke, hard work and determination led to beating out seventhround draft choice Grex Sampson of Oregon State as a mernber of the Philadelphia Eagles last season. "I was disappointed at not being drafted." Clarke said. "But I knew. A \(3-4\) defense is one consisting of three men in the down position on the scrimmage line with four linebackers in back. The \(3-4\) is a relatively unusual concept. since the 4-3 (four down linemen and three linebackers) is the traditional pro alignment.
"Ken is a perfect player for our defense (3-4)." Eagle Head Coach Dick Vermeil said. "He is very quick off the line, and his basic fundamentals areso sound."
After a strong senior year at SU anchoring the defensive line, Clarke worked out vigorously to meet the tough atandards of a professional training camp.
"The NFL Leems to be more technical than in college," Clarke said. "I improved my mental aspect about the game much more during training camp."
As the 1978 season moved toward the halfway point. Clarke began to get playing time, especially on third-down gituations. At the same tirne, the

In this recommendation, Dr. Pirkko Turkki, chairperson of the SU committee on acadernic planning, outhined a three part proposal for a TA training propram at SU.

The first part, which has already been scheduled on an evening next fall, is an orientation for new TAs. In the orientation, there will be discuasion of the xoles of TAs with either the chancellor, vicechancellor of academic affairs or the vicepresident of research and graduate affairs.
During the evening, a member of the Graduate Student Organization will speak and a diacumesion will be beld on university procedures, bencofits and responsibilities.
In addition, the Center for Instructional Davelopment will ditaributo the "Faculty Asvistance Catalogue" - which describes the availability and location of teaching aides on campus.

\section*{Taking time to evaluate teachers fairly}

To the editor
I read with great interest the comments of Peter Osborne, Student Association teacher evaluation aubcommaittee chairman, in the Wednes day March 28 edition of the DO.

This is an issue with which I arn somewhat familiar, During my tenure at McGill University as Bondergraduate representative to the representative to the Students: Society, I had the pccasion to be inSociety, I had the occasion to be involved in the development and implementation of an evaluation plementation of an evaluation syatem.

Our initial operating premise was simple: Studenta who require the gersimple: Studente who require the ger have no other reliablemerns of mak ing decisions (save for the opinions of facklty) After all the opinione others are usually sought out first A others are usually sought out first. A hexr the ideas of people he can truet hear the ideas or people he can trust, peopie he knows and hkes. If he has to tirn to a guide, the reinforcement cornes from the axiom of "strength in \(n\) um bers," not from the words of a select few.
Mr. Oaborne's contention that gathering survey-type information vould be time-conauming directly reflects the weakness of the committee's position. When it comes time to help the uninformed, don't you want your presentation to be metictulowely and methodically prepared? His reference to the failures of Touchatone in noway lesaons the validity of a survey approach - it merely shows the need for carefill pre-execution planning.
Rentifut are the courseg to be as plentifu as are thécoursea to beappraisea, But one point contincousiy comea into play when choosing an infomation-gathering ayftem No "critigue pergon" can as capably apcringe a profeasor's work as a class of etudents who have interacted of studenta wimg through a semester. \section*{No chasm}

To the editor:
In the interests of objectivity, we wish to correct the misperception of the International hiving Center as portreyed by your March 28th article on Area Housing. The great mafority of \(1 L C\) residents feel that the article inadequately treated the hasm between students and the present management which could affect anyone considering living here next year.

Editor's note: This Letter was also signed by 19 ILC residents.

Courses most in need of valuation are elective coursel with lover enrollments. The bigger the coarse, that witl hat the atudent wil know people who twok it previously.
Mr. Osborne gays that "strong bias will be checked. . Ficst of all, who are the editors to cetermine What bias is? What if that perceived biased opinion is the most astate among the critiques. Second, that uren bias could emexge az all constitutes a most serious flaw in he critique method.

I encourage a reconsideration of this policy and atreas itt potential problems. The presentation of at titude is a sensitive and vital under taking. If it is being done in an attempt to help students; a noble umdertaling indeed, het's minke sure it is carried out with the care it requires.

\section*{Paying for vandals}

A tired Syracuse University student walks into his dorm one night through the night side of the double entrance doors because the one on the left is broken. He walks toward the elevator, but then decides to take the stairs since two of the three elevators are broken. The stairwell is freezing because of The stairwell is freezing because of its broken windows. Ke walks up to step around the glass on the floor from the broken light fixture.

This student did not cause all this damage, and neither did most of the students in his dorm. But he will have to pay for at least a portion of the cost of repairs, along tion of the cost of repairs,

As usual, apathy at SU is the main cause of this problem. Like a main cause of stereo at 4 a.m., dorm damage is another example of students not is another about the university, let canng abone each other.

Students in dormitory hóusing lease their rooms from SU and therefore do not feel responsiblefor upkeep. Garbage is lucky to make it to the trash room, cigarettes are stomped out on the floor and stomped doors are ripped off their batioroom doors a Damages in major dormitories cost approximately \($ 250,000\) a year cording to Thomas estimate, acsupervisor of housing. The university, of course, is not willing to pick

Whe the entire cost of repairs. Whether it is in the form of increased taition, higher room costs or even individual student billing, the money will ultimately come out of our pockets.

The most direct injustice caused by this irresponsible damage is the billing of all floor residenta for damage done by a few students on their floors.

Determination of group billing is usually done by each dorm's Damage Control Board, a body namage Control Board, a body a floor is continual and excessive, the floor members are billed. So far this year, residents from \(15-20\) floors have been billed for damage totaling several hundred dollars, according to David Kohi, associate director of the Office of Residence director Services.

The damage board is not a bad idea, but the fact remains that innocent students are paying for someone else's irresponsibility.

The student causing the damage is not willing to pay for repairs, or he wouldn't have done it in the first place. If the university cannot pin him down, they have no recourse but to pass the cost of repairs to innocent students in one way or another.
The solution is up to the atudents. Watching someone rip a door offits hinges without bothering to stop him has the same consequences as if you did it yourself. You both pay the same price.

And apathy triumphs again.

\section*{Guest comment: \\ Rick Bodamer.}

There's a different kind of huffing and puffing emanating from the weight room at Archbold Gym. Frus tration-not exercise-is its origin. When I first walked into the "pit" last September, I was disappointed to say the least. It was like expecting to find a brand new 10 -speed bicycle under the Christmas tree and instead finding a used pair of roller skates.
I couldn't believe that a major university in this day and age could havesuch lousy athletic facilities. How could a school that chargee an arm and a leg to attend be satisfied with equipment that would shame most junior high schools? Maybe that's the anawer right there. Could the administration feel that it has taken so many arms and legs that the atudent body no longer has anything to exercise?

Being a graduate student, I tried to keep things in proper perspective by keep things in proper perspective by . grinning and bearing it. After all.
students of higher learning are supstudents of higher learning are supposed
My rationalization even worked for awhile. I've worked out on that pile of junk for nearly six months now with nary a public peep, but as the equipment progressively deteriorated so has my patience!

If you haven't seen the weight room (and I use the term only as a point of reference), please make an effort to do so. It's easily recognizable. It looks like an old ascred burial ground where decrepit Universal machines have limped off to die not so quietly. A torture chamber out of the Spanish Inquisition would be more inviting. The only things missing are a rack and thumb screws. Even the wall clock is on Mountain Standard Time.
But aesthetics anide, we're also dealing with a very real and present danger. If those weight machines were cars, they'd never pass inspection! Now I. know why the university maken health insurance mandatory for every matriculated student. I was in the weight room the day the military press station collapsed, almost pinning a would-be lifter. It would not have been a pretty sight.
Trae, there are some people who abuse the equipment; it's hard to take pride in a garbage dump. But the major problem is simply a case of old age, and problem is simply a case of old age, and death is not far ofr. The litticeives that uspally came mights to do some prevenave mantenance on the machines no longer come. The archaic equipment is now left to fend for itself and there are cope with.

1 know someone out there is saying: "Yeah, but what about the weightroom over in the Women'a Gym? Can't you use that?" Well, to you, all I can say is "Bullfeathers!"' I've been over to that room at least 10 times and have yet to get in. I have a very strong feeling that I'll have a better chance of seeing a flying saucer or Sasciuatch in my lifetime. Have I sensationalized the trivial? Do Iand the hundreds of other studente and professors (oh, yes!) who use the weight room facilities have our wriorities mixed up? Should the development of the mind be our sole concern here at Syracuse Univeraity?
Well, in the words of one of my old physiology professors: "'There ain't a physiology profesaors: There ain't a car going anywhere with a motor and no chassis and wheels to carry it!" The terminology might be a bit cr

By Andrea Abrahams
Man turns into beagt when the full moon is ont according to the scary oldtime werewolve movies. And allough verewolves and other fuli-moon egends are unbellevable, some people human behavior.
Dr. Arnold L. Lieber states in his book. "The Lumar Effect" that the full moon has a great effect on human beings, eapecially those with relatively unstable personalities. He cited both ancient beliefs and police and medical ancens done in varions United States cities to support his theory.
For example, Lieber said werewolf boliefs may stem for man's early daya beliefs may stem wor competed for food when developed a mutual respect.
This respect and fear is remembered in modern days, Lieber added. Manic depressives become manic during a full moon. Their metabolic processes speed up and often their facial hair brows faster, giving them a wolfish appearance.
Lieber explained the moon causes the tides in the sea. Because the body is 80 percent water, the moon exerts similar tidal effects on people.

The moon upsets hormonal balance and often causes psychological disturbances, particularly in already mentally unatable people, Lieber added. Maybe it's no accident "lunatic" is derived from the latin word "luna" meaning the moon.

Lieber cited many statistics that prove crimes and fires increase during full moon periods. The New York City Fire Department, for example, found that arson cases increased up to 100 percent during a full moon.
However, Syracuse crime and fire officials said they don't noticeany effects the full moon may have. "There are not enough resources available to us to do a study," explained a Syracuse Fire Department spokesperson.
Professionals are often skeptical of Lieber's contention. For instance, Dr. Joseph Himmelsback of Hutchings Psychiatric Center disagreed with Lieber's claim.
'There's very little scientific evidence to suppory increased mental illness during the full moon, although there's a whole wealth of folk tales and personal reports," Himmelsback stated.
Although Himmelsback admitted he didn't read Lieber's book, he said he had seen other studies which indicate had seen other studies which indicate the full m Himmelsback said admissions at Hutchings are no different during full moon periods than at other times. The geason and day of the week are generally more important factors.

However, Beth Goldbert, another Hutchings employee, said she has noticed admissions do tend to rise around a full moon. Monday's admissions were busy. Goldberg said. On Tuesday night there was a full moon.
Syracuse University seems relatively oblivious to the full moon's effects. Students questioned said they noticed nothing unusual about Tuesday night, and SU Safety and Security said they received no unusual calls.
However, one student said, "Maybe I'm just weird but Iseem to get crazier when the moon's full."

Rather than words, it was action. Instead of a lecture, the Theta Chi Beta religion honoary used its annual meeting Tueaday night for a celebration.
The program explored religious expression through the arts and transformed the Grace Episcopal Church into an unlikely showplace of visual and performing arts.

Under an austere wooden cross susperided from the ceiling, a woman wrapped in brightly colored traditional clothing performed an ancient Hindu temple dance. The program alao featured an organist, F fim and a spirited performance by the Black Celestial Choral Enisemble. The objective was to provide a taste of all different aspects of religious expression, according to the evening's sion, according to the eveninges

William Hall.
"The honorary was founded in Syracuse and has the distinction of be ing the oldest religion honorary in the country," baid H. Daniel Smith, a religion professor and the incumbent president of Theta Chi Beta.

The intent of the group." said graduate student Mark Lombard, "is to bring faculty, students, and corsmunity members together who share an interest in religion."
Tuesday night's ceremony welcomed into the group beven community members and four students who have celebrated religion through the arta. The students, Susan Schwartz, Sally Lewandowski, David Howlett and Doug Bradiey, all achieved an award for academic excellence in the study of eligion.
Higll said, "The worid of art allows us to enter a new dimension of reality that enables us to undergtand the universat response to the holyand divine." Heexplains universal responge as apparent in the community members newly inducted into the honorary, including \(B\) sculptor, a composer and mosaic deaigner.
Theta Chi Beta's newly elected president, the Reverend Betty Bone Schiess, represents yet another accomplishment in the field of religion. She is one of the first 11 women or dained as a priest in the Episcopal Church

It was decided that we should use this meeting to celebrate expression," said Bill Gully, a Ph.D. candidate in religion. *The arts grew out of religion and this has been lost in the Western religious experiesce. This prograin was relugiozs experiessce. Thi

Pop rockers keep SU hoppin' Ohms offer obviously odd odes \\ By Matta Rose
}

When Syracuse University students Rick Suburban, Zenny Caucasian and Ducky Carlisle formed a rock ' \(n\) ' roll band more than a year ago, they were stuck for a name.
"We wanted something young, fast and scientific," said drummer Carlisle. "We decided on The Ohms." The Ohms are currently the only SU rock band to release a single. "Teenage Alcoholic/Chain Letter," recorded on Northside Records, will debut in local music stores today.
"We've etched some weird things in the vinyl, too," added bass guitarist Suburban.
The aingle was produced entirely by the Ohms themselves at Ramjet Remote, where Carlisle is a staff producer. The vocals were overdubbed in their suite at Lehman Hall using a battery-operated mixer. The result is good sound reproduction and clear vocals not drowned out by the music.
"We didn't trust Newhouse, because they're not real engineers," said Carlisle.

Regular concert-goers at Jabberwocky, the Orange and the Firebarn have seen the Ohms open for the Flashcubes, and the Tuff Darts. They have also performed at the muscular dystrophy dance marathon and at campus coffeehouses.
"Teenage Alcoholic," according to lyricist and lead guitarist, Caucasian, was based on the television geries "James at 15."'It's about a boy who recognizes that there is a universal need to escape from reality:
I'm so mixed up, I gotto see a shrink/And then Igo home and have another drink/I don't wanna worry, I don't wanna think/And I'm really just like you.
"We drove out a lot of neighbors with that one," boasts Carlisle.

Caucasian explained the story behind "Chain Letter:" "A girl gets this chain letter and sends it to her boyfriend. Being a skeptic. he throws it away and hence, loses the girl," he said.

According to Suburban, the band frequently gets kicked out of bars.
"We've been kicked out of lots of places. I guess it's because people are jealous of us. We did insult a manager's wife in one bar and another said we played too loud," he said.

"We're totally exiled from Westchester, our hometown," added Carlisle.
In addition to original songs like "Neanderthal Band" and "Paul is Dead," the Ohms perform the Who's "So Sad About Us," the Beach Boys' "Help Me, Rhonda," and Paul Revere and the Raiders" "Kick." However, no matter what they play, old or original, the Ohms get the crowd hopping.
All three members agree that the Ruttles, Cheap Trick, the Raspberries and the Monkees were a biginfluence on the Ohm's sound. 'We were also influenced by Mickey Mouse," added Carlisle.
Anyone who knows "Ducky" Carlisle knowz his trademark, inherent in his name. I am really a duck," he addmitted. "I just sort of hatched. My parents flew south, left me here and I got a grant to SU." Among the paraphernalia he has collected are a 12-inch duck lamp,3-D Donald Duck eyeglasses and a Donald Duck wind-up toy.

Speaking on a more serious level, Caucasian Speaking on a more serious level, Caucasave summed up the philosophy of the Ohms: "We have summed up the philosophy of the Ohms: "We have seen the future of \section*{Fans favor Flashcubes for fun}

By Diane Lesniewski
Excuse me, do youknow where the Flashcubes are playing?"

The red-haired SU student sighs at the question and does not respond immediately. She is accustomed to walking down Marshall Street and having total strangers ask her about upcoming Flashcubes performances. Just because she never misses a show by the local pop group doesn't mean she walks, talks and breathes Flashcubes. But some people seem to think so.

Like this girl, many SU students have become fanatical Flashcubes followern. Each local performance is packed with people dancing in front of the stage.
"Our fans are special people. We try to know their faces, who they are," says bassist Gary Frenay. "The Jab and Syracuse are like home."
In addition to their obvious interest in their sup porters, The Flashcubes' bright pop compositions put them ahead of other local groups. Their second single features two of their best numbers, "Wait Till Next Week" backed with "Radio." The first pressing of 1,000 copies on Northside records is nearly sold out.
The Flashcubes are attempting to promote their single by touring outside the Central New York area.

The Flashcubes mecond eingle. "Wait Till Noct Year"is getting ex-tenshe airplay on WAOX-FM and WOUR-FM.

The band hias performed in Detroit, Boston and New York City.
"They've come a long way from the first time they played in DeWitt in September "77," says another fan. The group classifies its music as pop with a rock' \(n\) ' roll direction. "It is music we hope will be played on the radio,", says lead guitarist Steve Lenin. The Flashcubes' second single gets frequent airplay on WAQX-FM and WOUR-FM

SU fans describe the Flashcubes with one word-fun.
"I come to see the Flashcubes for the fun factor, as they're a fun group," a Haven resident said. "I first saw them a year ago, and since then I've been coming back to most every show."

A Marshall Cottage resident said, "I like to see the Flashcubes because they're a fun band, exciting, and play grod rock 'n' roll. I think they're better than Led Zepplin."

The band has even inspired some fans' creativity. Steve Wierzbicki, a senior majoring in illustration, designed a Flashcubes T-shirt for a friend. Frenay then asked Wierzbicki to design a head for Tommy Allen's drum kit. The drum head, red with a black Flashcubes logo, made its debut at a New York City performance.

Senior Jackie Lewis recently filmed the group for a videotape project about rock music in Syracuse.
"The most fun we have is when we go to see the Flashcubes," Lewis says, "As a band I sort of equate them to the Beatles. Their personalities attract me as much as the music. Theres something very special about these four guys together."

The Flashcubes are four extremely different individuals. Fans consider bassigt Frenay "a big brother." He shows a sincere interestin the audience.

Rhythm guitariot Paul Armstrong ia a grown up Dennis-The-Menace, raising hell with his wisecrack comments. Still, he is capable of writing poignant comments. Still, he is capable of writing poignait love songs. Lead guitarist Steve Lenin is the quiet

\section*{NYPIRG funding to be decided}

By Stephen Prasto
Syracuse Univerrsity Law ;chool gtadents will decide in a Scherendum April 17 on how to Farial the New York Pablic Interiest-Repearch Group next year.
Year. law behool aenate voted April 5 to hold the referendum. Aprisul Wilson, senate preaident, said the referendum will have two paris; first, whether to fund NYPIRG; and second, if students vote for funding, whether to- use a "positive" or "negative" checkoff.

NYPIRG receivea approximately \($ 1900\) ber year from the law achool from the law school.

Like the rest of SU, the law school uses a negative chec koff, in which a $3 NYPIRG contribution is added to the student fee and thoge not wishing to donate most file for a. refund later. Under a poaitive checkoff syotem, thome wishing to donate would pay extra.
Two weeks ago the senate voted "almost unanimovaly" to end the negative checkoff, Wison said. The Benake for in-house activities such as for in-house act inoot court team without raising the Iaw achool's \($ 35\) raising the waw schooled.

Following an. eight hour badget meeting Sunday, have a \($ 14,000\) deficit next year.
At the April 5 meeting. NYPERG representative: argued anainst the decision. NYPIRC's funding was act up directly by the students." said Ralph. Willmer, NYPIRG*a Syracuse office manager. Any change shoura also be done by the student body as a whole, not juat their legiglative representatives.

We have always had the students" aupport" he said. "The comatmer movement is as strong as ever.*

But regarding NYPIRG and the referendurn, Wilson said, "I don't think they'll win."

NYPIRG has responded strongly to previous challenges of its funding bygtern.

When the Gradaate Student Organization held a referendum last year on whether to review NYPIRG's funding annually instead of every four years, NYPIRG conducted a massive campaikn. Every graduate mfudent received a graduate ntudent received a and 600 were visited door-todoor.

The four-year review plan won, 271 to 60.
Wher the Law School Senate decided to withhold funding eardier this year antil NYPIEGhad advertised the \($ 3\) refund more thoroughly, remna more thoroughiy, refund period.
However, the number of SU students requesting refunds students requesting refunds to 500 this yeax.
Statewide, NYPIRG hais faced problems also. Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute at Troy discontinued NYPIRG's funding earlier this year and hat atate leginlature has made the negative chec zoff illegal for all state university campuses.
Despite such setbacks, NYPIRG has grown steadily since its founding. In 1977, the state legislature passed seven NYPIRG eponsored bills, including the decriminalization of marijuana, a broader freedom of information act and property tax exemptions. Willmer said two-thirds of SU-NYPIRG's funding comea from the activity fee, onefourth from the Com. prehensive Education and Training Act program and the rest from outside sources.

Most of the major league baseball eams opened their beasong last Thursday afternoon and. who knows? maybe he would have drawn the cherished opening day starting pitcher assignment againgt Mike Caldwell in Milwaukee, or Tom Seaver in Cincinnattior Dennis Eckersley in Boston. But last Thursday afternoon, Syracuse University history professor Bill Stueck felt he drew a more important assignment - he went to teach a class.
Back in the middle 1960 's, three major league teams, the Philadelphia Phines. New York Mets and Houston Stuack. were interested in Bigning right-handed pitcher at Springfield (Mass.) College, to a professional contract. after his junior year at Springfield, he decided to try to master the curves of the history books instead of tring to throw the curve and quit the baseball team to pursue a scholarly career.
"After my junior year. I had pretty much decided there were more im portant things in life than playing baseball," said Stueck, taking a break from poring over his lecture notes in his from poring over his lectur

Maxwell office last week. tually stimulating," he added. "As I matured intellectually, i-decided the people in baseball were not the ones I wanted to be associated with.
After sending the professional baseball career to an early shower, Stueck embarked on an impressive academic career. Graduating from Springfield in 1967. Stueck received his master s degree in history from Queens College in New York City in 1971, then received his Ph.D. from Brown University in 1977. He taughtin public schools in New York City, and at small junior colleges in Florida and Massachusetts before arriving at SU lagt fall.

\section*{Easy conversation}

His angular \(6^{\prime \prime} 2^{\prime \prime}\) frame looks cramped in the small office chair, but Stueck's conversation is anything but cramped. He is just as at ease talking about the firat years of the Korean War as he is discussing what it takes to be a good professional pitcher.

To make it, you have co learn to discipline your body and your mind, and you have to have that coolness under pressure." Stueck said. "Catfieh Hunter (New York Yankee pitcher) has never had fantastic stuff, but he ripen to the occasion in the middle of the World Series.
"Those two things - discipline and coolness - come from dedication to the game, and I just didn't have that dedication.
Instead. Stueck has dedicated himself to history, assubject he saya can teach basic skills like reading. Writing and cornmunicating. "I was willing to go through more for history than for baseball,' be taid.

History is a great challenge, Stueck continued. I like the sense of amount of facts, but you have to be able to do something with those facts. I get a kick out of teaching because it teaches those skills we all have to have.
Stueck's specialty is American foreign policy, stemming from an interest in the causes of the Vietnam war. Stueck, who teaches an American history survey course and another course called America and World Affairs, has done the major portion of his work on the carly years of the Korean conflict. He has just completed a manuscript on the subject which professors at Cormell University.

\section*{It's academic}

Stueck's experience with college athletics has left an indelible mark on him. "My philosophy is you have to emphasize the importance of academica, Stuecke said. "I don't think this is done n the sports-factory colleges today.

1 don't know how it is at Syracuse out I got close to this at Brown," Stueck continued. "Even at a place like Brown where the athlete really needs the education, because he probably won't go pro, he is exploited by coaches and professors who don't care about him off the field. The university has the obligation to give him a good education."

In a recent lecture, Stueck used sports in the 1920 's and '30s to make one of his points. 'I used it \(x=8\) a device to find arger social and economic developments in that time." Stueck said. "The popularity of sports in that period indicated a rise in leisure and recreation time, and the increase in jobs that required little phyaical activity.

Stueck smiles when he remerabers the lecture. "I told the class how I feel sports in America is over emphasized, but 1 told them that it is tinged with hypocrisy. Here I am, an avid skier and baseball player - a true jock - who went to a college (Springfield) where a teacher once got up and anid the Phys. Ed program is the most important part of the curriculum.

The conversation irresistably turns to baseball again. "I had a good fast ball and a sharp breaking curve," Stueck remembered. "If I had played my senior year, I think I could have got a good offer and had a successful pro career.
"The only regret is not knowing what I might have done, but when you have gone into something that you really like, as I bave, there are not really any

When Stueck, who coached Becker Junior College in Massachusetts) to the semi-finals of the New England unior College playoffe in 1977, wre told the SU baseball ciub needed a full time coach for next fall, the seemed interested.
"That's the perfect situation to coack." Stueck maid. "Those lids are not on scholarship, they are out there because they want to be. There is no press ure to win. Imight look into that"
If he does look into it, perhaps Bil Stueck will be doing more than teach ing on a future opening day.

The independent and liying center league championships have been decided as the intramural basketball season comes to a close this week.
Who Knows successfully defended its independent title, while Wetson 1-2 East became the new living center champion. These two champions must now play to decide who faces the fraternity league champion (either Zeta Beta Tau or Psi Upeilon) Monday night at Archbold Gym for the AllArchbold Gym
Who Knows defeated the Office of Minority Affairs, 63-53, to win the titie. Randy Edsall led the winners with 24 points., while Greg Williama added 20 and Terry O'Leary chipped in with 13. Jewell Pendleton led OMA with 21 points.
Pendleton also had 21 points in leading OMA to a \(37-36\) semi-final win over Clark Kents III on Monday night. Fich Saul had 22 points for the losers. In the other semi-final game, Who Knows built upan early 18 lead and went on to defeat the Governors by a acore of \(59-46\).
In the living center finals Watson 1-2E beat Day 8, 3726. Foul trouble wail a factor in Day 8's defeat an two playere fouled out and three others had four a piece en route to 23 total team fouls. Mike Andreozzi led the Watsonites with 11 points while Doug Reynolds was Day 8's high scorer with 10 .
Day 8 advanced to the finale with a 41-30 win over Kimmel I. while in a battle for Watson supremacy, Watson 1-2E beat Watson 3 4W, 37-28.

In fraternity action, Zeta Beta Tau and Pai Upailon advanced with convincing semi-final wins. Zeta Beta Tau thrashed Zeta Psi (B) 64-23. While Pai Upailon routed Phi Gamma Delia 50-27.
Zeta Beta Tau opened ap a 25-6 halftime lead and coasted the rest of the way to an easy victory. Alan Nathan popped in 19 points while Cary Fabrikant added 17 to pace the winners. In the other semifinal game. Psi Upeilon took a 22.11 lead at the half and went on to won handily. Psi Upailon had a balanced scoring attack as seven out of eight players scored.
But the name of the game in intramurals is not scores and point totals. It's emotion. As one OMA player put it, "There's nobody out there that They're not homan if they

\section*{SAS wants automatic student fee allocation}

\section*{By Jerry Zremski}

Upset over the funding it received, the Student AfroAmerican Society announced at Wednesday's Student Association budget hearing that it plans to start a drive to have part of the student fee automatically allocated to SAS.
Currently, SAS requests money from the SA finance board each spring, at do all other student groups ercept The Daily Orange SAS external affairs chairperson Gremory Rolle said SAS does not receive enough money. "We should never Work with less than \($ 20,000\) "he said. "What we've received - eight or nine thousand dollars - is unacceptable.
SAS requested \($ 27,950\) this year, and received \($ 9,024\) after two hours of intense debate. The SA finance board receommended that SAS should not get what it requested, partly becauge many SAS programs will be funded by University Union under a new co-sponorship program.
Rolle would not give an exact proposal, but he said at the meeting that half of all atudert fee money paid by blacks might be kiven to SAS. This would come to over \($ 23,000\) a year.
He compared this to the College of Environmental Science and Forestry, where studenta pay about half the enular studentiee to SA and the rest to ESF mtudent activities.
In addition, Dartmouth Univeraity's Student AfroAmerican Society is funded oucceasifuly thits way, Rolle said.
But SA Comptroller Dale Cohen said the SAS propoal was "quite
"If every group wanted their funding done thig way, it wouldn't work," Cohen aad. If you base allocation on membership, then Greek Council deserves more than SAS, and Hillel deserves more.
Rolle did not think this would be a problem. If many groups requeat to be funded based on membership. "something can be woriced out," he said.
"It's very possible that other groups will try this. It's a precedent," Rolle gaid. "Who needs SA to distribute funds? We don't want to be dictated ton":

To get the funding method changed, SAS would have to appeal to the Office of Student Affairs, Cohen said.

Well do whatever we have to do to get it passed," Rolle said. SAs might appeal to the University Judicial Boand or try to get signatures from Black atudents, he added
By the end of the seven-hour meeting. SA had a llocated its \($ 415,694,36\) budget and was left with a \($ 366\) surplus, which will go into the contingency fund for ernergency use.
In other business, the assembly allocated \($ 34,752\) to WAER The station asked for \($ 63,479\), but SA thought many of WAER's requests were not needed.
The finance board recommended $36,150 for WAER, but the ausembly cut \($ 1,248\) for a receptionist, which it thought was unnecessary. Funding for typewriters was ciut from the \($ 200\) recommendation to \($ 50\), and the \($ 100\) recommendation for All News. Week was awitched to buy new tape cartridges.

\section*{Faculty votes to end unionization drive}

By Lexry Jalowiec
The Syracuse University faculty assembly voted unnaimoualy Wednesday to end its campaiga to unionize the faculty.
The American Association of University Professors was the proposed bargaining repregentative.
All designation cards that have been turned will be destroyed and \($ 500\) in returned will be destroyed and \($ 500 \mathrm{in}\) to members, according to AAUP chapter president A. Dale Tussing.
"In my opinion. a majority of Syracuse Univeraity faculty members do not favor collective barzaining at present," Tusaing said.

Tusaing told the assembly that 285 deaignation cards had beén collected from full-time faculty members. Designation carda measure faculty intereat in talcing a unionization vote. Although the 285 carde are enough to meet the 30 percent requirement of the National Labor Relations Board, the assembly had previously decided not to file for a union vote uniess they recived a 60 percent return.
Tussing said the lack of a "galvanizing issue" among the faculty might be the reason why the return rate was worge than he expected.

Tussing said his group had "adopted - low-key, low-profile approach" and doubted that a more active or militant campaign would have resulted in more signatures.

I think the AAUP comes out of the campaign stronger, not weaker," Tus sing said. "For one thing, our membership has risen dramatically."
Tusaing said the faculty must await two developments before another attempt at unionization is made.
One is the selection of a new chancellor," he said Tussing said the decision, which will be made in two years, should be made with faculty and student participation.

The second is the adoption of collective bargaining by other independent universties," he waid.

II feel that we must now be a follower, not a leader, in this respect. Others must show how, and how well. collective bargaining will woriz on buch campuses."

\section*{SU marketing program: the hard sell gets results}

By Thomas Coffey
Syracuse University wages an intensive marketing program to encourage prospective students to attend. Although the program is succesaful, the picture it paints of the university may not be entirely accurate.
Freshman John Balaban called the admissions catalog "pretty misleading. Thare's a picture of a dorm room and it looks hize two rooms. I guess they shot it with a nice wide-angle lons. And there are a lot of summer hhots, too."

To the editor:
In recent weeks students marched against nuclear energy. They campaigned against apartheid in South Africa. Students at Shaw held their own mock protest as part of the 1960 's week.

Yet, there is an issue of justice much closer to home and an issue of majorimportance to people working on this campus. The gecretaries and clerks at Syracuse University are trying to organize. They aeek to redress 15 years of injustice, at the hands of this university's administrators. Workers elsewhere can look forward to progresgive inimprovement in their working conditions. \section*{Money doesn't grow on trees}

To the editor:
Once again the university has its greedy palm out, this time to the wretched senior class already plagued by cap and gown rentals, senior pictures, yearbook prices, not to mention graduation itself.

Student Association would like each graduating senior to pledge a mere \($ 250\) towards the construction of the fabled Union Building, which promises to make the student body more cohesive by providing common meeting ground.

First of all, show me how a building is going to unify the student body? The lines of demarcation are too obvious. A unified student body, one where there is mutual respect for (whether they bences among people (whether they be racial, cultural, political or religious) is not fabricated with slotted metal, steel beams or concrete.
Secondly, does SU really need another building? Why not channel money into preserving buildings already present, like area housing? Or expanding academic programs? Or has the university forgotten that that's why there is a university in the first place?

SA would like to receive the \($ 250\) the first year the pledgee earns at the first year the pledgee earns at least \($ 20,000\). If and when I makemy least \($ 20,000\). If and when I makemy first \($ 20,000\), I'll probably be buay

Those organizing the pledge drive seem to believe that money growis on the backyard trees of SU studenta. Sorneone should set them straight.

Syracuse University engages in What admisaions director Thomas \(F\). Cummings Jr. calls a competitive marketing campaign to attract people to the school.
It comes as no murpribe that the university markets itself to prospective students. After all, it has a legitimate reason for generating interest in the school. But Syracuse minikets itself frighteningly well.
Statistics cited by Cummings show just bow effective thia approach has been. Applications for the 1979-1980 academic year have topped the 12,000 mark - possibly the highest total in the university's history.
\end{abstract}

One national atudy has shown that applications to private universities in the past year have risen 9 percent. For the same period applications to Syracuse have increased 36 percent. Cummings said he anticipates applications for mext year to show a 20 percent increase over this year.

The problexn is that the catalogue does not present a completely accurate picture of the wniversity. None of the staternents in the catalogue are ontright lies, but they do create an image that does not really exist.

Granted, the catalogue cannot present a negative picture or even an objective one. It must present the

Every one of the photos in the catalogue shows the university drenchedin sun. Anyone who has iived here for any length of time knows how often that happens.
The book deacribes the campus as "picturesque." The photos reinforce the idea, with the Hall of Languagen, Crouse College and Maxwell appearing in picture after picture to create an image of a hallowed, ivy covered, scenic institution.
But there are no picturea of HBC, the Physica, Building or Hinds Hall, the campus's monuments to shoebox architecture.
There is no hint of the clusters of gravel parking lots that ring the campus, and which actually cover more area than the scenic walks and pastoral sreenery portrayed in the catalogue.
This may beem like a minor point. But it is a ficinly visible exparnple of jast how the catalogrue's marketing techmiques obscure mome of the facts abont the nniversity.

An example of deception on a more aubutantial ispre is the description of the univeraity's acadernic setting. Two of the four large windows in front of the stove will be used to show passersby how the ice cream is made.
One window will be rented to Ronsyalle's homemade candiea. The other window will hold An Orange Julius atore, which has a enack-bar typer grill.

The inride of the store will seat \(65-70\) people.
Nicicelodeon's owners have wanted to move into the University area for four years. But space in the Marshall Street area han been at a premium, and that delayed them for a while, Proppe said.
Another obstacle for Nickelodeon is ita unique process of maloing ice cream. It had to gain state approval as the process exnploys rocksalt.
The new CVS should open in drane, nccording to CVS regional manager David Hoyt.
CVS is a chain dragstore which apecializes in a large selection of health and personal goods at discount prices, according to CVS public relations director Harvey Rosenthal. Unlike other Syracuse CVS stores, the university branch will fill prescriptions.
Though CVS will compete directly with Bumett'a Pharmacy and Siegeris in the Marshail Street area, Rosenthal said the decision to open the store is based on careful market research.
"We don't intend to put anybody out of business, as there is a place for the independent drugstore for different community needs, Rosenthal said.
CVS plans to hire between 20 and 30 employees.

Problenas in this year's lottery have been the major concern of the Reaidential Iifo Adyisory Committee and the Office of Residence Life and Dining Services, according to Greg Weinglass. RLAC chairperson.
The lottery was a major iswe for RLAC and ORDS because too many students feel they have been cheated out of a room, said Weinglass.
- According to Weinglass, dozens of students floodod Susan Decker's office complaining about the lottery.
At last night's mLAC meeting, Cindy Horst, as. sistant director of ORDS, paid that changes mant be made to avoid future problems with the lottery.
The committee agroed that the major probleme included where squatter's rights end, loopholes and the selling of suites.
Preateatly, both atridente wishing to squat a room must be residents of the same dorm. If one persion is from outside the dorm, they cannot be pulled into the room.
RLAC and Cindy Horst suggested that next year ctudenter be given an opportunity to pull in noninto the intre-dormp lottery.
Aproblem with part lotteries ia that one atudent living in asuite will agree, to use his squatter's rights to pull in other atudentes wishing to live there the next year, and then leave.
Another problem ORDS faced thin year was suite buying. Many students in Brewsiex/Boland approached curcent auite-cecupanta with offers as high as \($ 1,500\) to buy their suites.
ORDS and the RLAC suggested that next year a etrict fine be impoeed upon suilty parties.
RILAC also auggested the room deposit be raised to \($ 100\) next year. ORDS said the in. crease will deter students from paying the room deposit for another student of a higher clase standing.

A number of advising and counseling services are fan by Syracuse University schools and departments. They vary in and departinents. They varyin bre, operamon and runction but have one common goal: to have strudenta help other students.

Academic Counseling Service, administered by the College of Arta and Sciences, but open to all SU etudeaks. provides the most comprehensive service.
Sixteen student coungelors advise other stridents on academic and personal problems, career decisions and any othex difficulties the advisees may have. About 75 atadents \(\mathrm{g}_{0}\) to the office for help each week.

Some couzaelore are paid work-study grants while others receive academic credit in peychology for their work. Student counseling may have some advantagen over other types of counseling. "Peex counseling helps make Disenchanted with her studies, Kobritz dropped out of college after three years. She worked part time until a year ago last in her kitchen that her home-made bread was too tasty to keep to herself. "I said to myself, Boy I should share this. 'Then I told my friends that I was going to start a bread business," Kobritz explains.

Turning towards the counter, she picks up a Christmas present, a huge wooden spoon, and smiles saying, "I can't afford a mixer."
Kobritz kneads the 20 pounds of dough for 15 minutes, just as she does for each batch of bread she bakes. Her arms roll over the two-foot-wide patches of dough for two hours this morring.

the real truth from getting out. Pexhaps the most impreadive attribute of the film is the authenticity with whichis was put together. Screenwriters T.S. Cook, Nike Gray and James Bridges have pua tic action and suspense. Ln addition, the lines are always appropriate - never contrived or phony Whats more, the streenwriter make their point without getting up on soap box es. The fim makes the viewer concerned preaching and without relying on long drawn-out, overdramatic soliloquies by the principal charactere. The screenwriters make their point purely on the basis of the filln's action - a truly dif ficult feat for acriptwriters to accomplish, but one which haw been executed beautifully here.

The meript contains an eerie touch of irony. When the journalistas discover the true meaning of the Chuma Syndrome, a nuclear physiciat explains that, had the melt-down occurred, it would have left an if for senturien.
In addition to the Buperb evereenplay, the acting is also one of the film's strongest assets. Fonda is magnificent as the deter mined reporter, siving the role a healthy dose of perswanive charm and sophisticated maturity never aeen in ber previous roles. This same maturity is also reflected in the performances of Lemmon and Douglas, who give their fineat per formances to date.
Taken as a whole, the producern of "The China Syndrome" have put together a Hit-chooclian-style, thriller, packed with intenge action and a meaningful mesmage. And in light of the recent Harriaburg incident it is m meanage that we had all better learn before it's too late.

Those stridents were only two of more than \(12,000 \mathrm{ap}\) plicants for admission to \(S U\). This figure represents a dramatic increase over last year.
According to Curnminge, a study done by a national firm showed that as of \(J\) an. 1 applications to public univer sities were down by two percent, and applications to private universities were up nine percent. Meantwhile, ap plications to SU had increased 36 percent. Cummings et timates final figures. to stabilize at a 20 percent in atabilize at crease.

SU's increasing popularity results from its academic prostrams, Cummings osid. Weillista a place where therear well-established programs. The diversity of academic programs and the career related programs appeal to stualents:

Some atudents disagree. "It always annoyed me that they were yelling diversity, and that's not the most important thing," Roper said. "The quality of atudents and profes sors is , what's most im portant." She added the academics here "don't impress me."

Other stradents feel SUTa size offers Böne advantages. "I was considering a gmaller sehool, but there are lots of op portunitiea at a larger achool," freshman Wendy Epstein said. Balaban called SU a "nice, big university. It's good that bhere are a lot of schools.
But SU's marketing campaign may also be a factor in phepularity.
pocho
"It seems like you get an awrul lot of atuff in the mail,' Epstein said. SU contacts prospective students between seven and 10 times, Curnmings sand, while most univeraities only contact them two or three times.

Also, SU ntarts to contact students in their junior year of high school, while most schools wait untill semior year.
Cummings anid SU does no more marketing than other universities. "We just do it well. And the name of the enrollment game is going to be copying what Syracuse does."

Marketing will be saining in importance in college admifaions. Thexe will be 1.5 by 1985 which means moids chiools are facino the prospet chools are facing the prospect of declining enrollment vailable will be more spaces available in higher education. han there will be students," Cummings said. "It"s a buyer's market and that means students are shopping for the product"
We are not selling the university. We are merely recognizing the facta. There axe too many universities, and Syracuse muat remain a viable horice.
SU probably will, judging by the admissions Engures. One prospective student planning to attend \(S U\) in the fall said last. week,' "I didn't expect Syracuse to be a heaven. It's a realimtic achool with realistic people."
Students already enrolled at SU have mixed feelinge about the marketing campaign.

Fordham University maintains three campuses in the New York metropolitan area.
- The Lincoln Center Campus is in the heart of Manhattan, one block west of the subways and buses at Columbus Circle.
- The Rose Hill Campus is an 80 -acre oasis of trees, grass and historic buildings in the north Bronx. It is two miles south of the Westchester border, and has plenty of parking right on campus.
- The Graduate Center in Thrrytown is located on the campus of Marymount College in Westehester county.

Available Courses
Our Summer Session Bulletin lists over 300 undergraduate and graduate courses as diverse as Economics, Organic Chermistry, Psychology of the Afro-American, Teaching Reading Through the Arts, Shakespeare, Intensive French for Graduate Students, and Statistics. If there's a credit courge you need, you'll probably find it here.

Convenient Times and Dates
There are two summer sessions, one beginning in early June and the other in early July. Classes meet in the daytime or evening, and most are given three or four times a time or evening, and most are given three or four timesa and \($ 100\) per graduate credit.

Amecording to Elliott, America's public school system is producing "a.great many badily, educated young people who are not able to use the lainguage, and whio are much more trainedinliving by commercial values than by appreciating artistic value.
"One way to teach students how to communicate is to communicate with them," wrote Elliott in his easay, "Teaching Writing." The essay was published in his book, "Conversions, Literature and Modernist Deviation.
"I talk directly and in their language," he eaid. "I always let my biases and tastes zhow. I find it quite enccessful."
Elliot was born in Knightstown, Ind, in 1918. He received his B. A. from the University of California at Berkeley in 1939 and his MA. from Berkeley in 1941 .
From 1947 to 1955 , Elliot was an instructor and an assistant professor of Englishat St. Mary's College in Califor. nia.
"I learned the most about teaching at St. Mary's because it was my frrst teaching job, Eliott said.

Before getting his first teaching position, Elliott worked at such odd jobs as shipfitting, labor. union organizing and selling real estate........? !

Elliott was an asgistant professor of English at Cornel College, before coming to SU as a professor of English in 198 8

Cis
Elliott said he first became interested in literature when he was 12 yeara old. "I read The Rime of the Ancient Mariner' and it atruck me that I wanted to write poems and stories," he said.

Since that Zay, Elliott has written four novels: "Parktilden Village," "David Knudsen," "In the World," and numerous. shost stories, essays, and poems.

A book of Filiott's poetry, "Reaching," will be published this year.

Elliott asid he is not fully aware of where or why hegets the inspiration to write. "I just get the idea."
"Sometimes it"s another poem, or an image that appears out of nowhere," he maid. "It"s not conscious at all. I've had ideas for stories conte from all types of sources. Ont example is a fever dresm, or example is a fever draam, or maybe I want to imitav another writer.".

Flliote's next novel will foctis on the life of a noyelist whois married to a poet, he said. "It'l not autobiocraphical?" b said.

Eillioth is teaching ope graduate writing couree and one undergreduate nitior courte at \(S U\) this samidi.
When he encoanters strudente in a vriting class tho have no talent, "I tall themont right to forget it, if they come and ank me," he maid.

Elliott aid he believes taleni is inriate. "I thinkthat all of os are given some form of taient, but it may develop in innumerable ways, " he said.
In Elliott's opintion, a bad writer cannot becoine a good writer. "Fard worle won"t do it either." he maid.

\section*{Peace Council} is still active, still non-violent

By̆ Stave Eamto
Since 1936, when a Syracuse business woman, an SU English professor, and a Baptist minister pooled resources to found the Syracuse Peace Cotancil, the group has worked to "educate, agitate, orgamize." It relocated refugees from Europe during the late "30s, educated conscientious objectors during the "40s, gurvived MeCarthyduring the \({ }^{2} 50 \mathrm{~s}\), and protested American involvement in Vietmam. It has worked against nuclear power for a decade, and recently joined the groups opposing the domed stadium on the SU campus. The role of the Pexce Council is to look further beneath the surface than is typically done in thio mociety," said Dik Cool, ne of the SPC" four fall time staff members Presently, the SPC works out of a white clapboard howse at 924 Burnet Ave. There is a bookstore in the front room. a kitchen in the back, a publication Jayout area upstairs and an offoet printing press in the basement.

Cool described the SPC as aupportive and reactive. "We help people take action collectively by providing contacts and resources," he said.

The players who were red-shirted seem to have accepted the decision. didn't play him in the Boston College didn't play him in the Boston College game. "He explained it to me nicely meant giving up a year. They thought it would benefit me more (to red-ahirt). I can adapt myself more to their syatem." Nett thinks red-shirting will be good for him. "I think it might benefit me fantastically,' he said. "It mikht benefit meacademically to have five years.
Maloney also considered using Frank Marone, a freshman wide receiver, in the Boaton College game. But, in the end, Marone was also redshirted.
"If I would've played for one play, I Marone said "It wae st the end of th game, too. Why waste a whole year? If I wasn't playing, I might as well redshirt."
Marone said he was not disappointed he didn't get a chance to play last year. "I think red-ahirting is very good," he anid. "Youget a chance your frat and second year if you're not doing too cood.:
Jeff Fischer, a quarterback, was another freahman who red-shirted. "There were a lot of quarterbacks better than me," he said. "I didn't expect to play as a freshman, and I've atill got four years of eligibility left.'

Fischer asid he was not upaet about being red-shirted. "They don't make any promises about playing." he said. "They tell you you'll be as good as you want to be.
The most publicized case of an SU eligibility is that of quarterback Bill Hurley. However Hurley did not technically red-shirt.
"Hurley is a medical hardship." Maloney said. "By legal definition it. isn't a red-shirt." Hurley could not redshirt because he played in two games Iast season, and he had to petition the year.
Red-shirting has changed in the past five yeara, according to Maloney. The reason for the change is the limit on scholorships the NCAA has imposed on schools. Currently, no sehool can issuemore than 95 football echolarships. scholarahips," Maloney said. "They used to bring in tremendous numbers of players." As a reault, hesaid, Big Eight echools would red-ehirt excellent players to give them another year to evelop.

It has been a long time since anyone hat abked me aboutanidea? univeraity I have been concerned about the abandonment of clasaical atudies, the decline of rhetoricand the three, R 's. I have been comionted by the advancement in the sciencea and arte and disconnfited by the retrogrestion in general although not aurprised, by the naivete although not aurprised, by the naivete and ignorance of academic specialists When they address their attention to problems outside their field of scholarhip.

I have also questioned the new responsibilities education in America has been trying to asaume. The revolution of rising expectations about the role of schools and colleges is, I believe, the chief reason why education is the scene of so much confugion and tronble.
It is perhaps simplistic to say that Socrates and his disciples were among the first and beat of the universities, or that the ideal college is a great profersor at one end of a lof and a bright atudent at the other end. The idea of a univeraity, however, is a commanity of acholars and students whose attention is focused on the congervation, the transmisaion and the advancement of knowledge.*A university's business is education, not politics. I doubt that this development can be Iowed or checked, although we ghould try. Pandora's box has been opened try. Fandora a box has been opened

\section*{Sullivan Principles: a road that leads nowhere}

With Einals lurging only two woeks avray, stadenter are more concerned with the immediate problom of parsing corruses than with human righto But South Africa's oppressive apartheid system will not ease for the momin
Neither should our concern for it.

No one at Syracuse University is in favor of apartheid. This includes, of course, the administration, which has long been the target of stadent and faculty protests calling for the university to sell ita stocks in corporations doing business in Sonth Africa.

As much as South Africs's system of racial segregation and opprossion if hated, we support it - financially.

SU currently owns stocks in 11 com panies with South African interests, representing an investment of about \($ 7\) million. The nniversity is restricted in the management of three of these stocks, by those who donated them.
All told. American firms in South Af rica employ about 100,000 workers there; 70 percent of the workers are black. This American investmenthelpa maintain apartheid by utilizing cheap black labor and contributing and technology to the system.
For this reason, by investing in those 11 companies, we at SU are not exempt from the guilt and shame of Sout rica's racism. We beneft and trustees' The administration and trustees* solution to the problem has been to adopt the Sullivan Principles, which adopt the Sullivan Principles, which press for fair employment practices. which have gigned these principles, Which have signed these principles, and has aold its Bhares in The company which refused to aign. en votes by proxy to encourage ite also votes by proxy to encourage
Our actions and support of the principles may sound good, but they are not good enough. African children still die of malnutrition; families are still banished to the Bantu "homelands," which in reality are poverty-gtricken wastelands where they can ntarve quietly, out of the sight and mind of the ealthy white minority.
SU has made an effort to see that the Sulivan Principles are carried out about the companiea' implementation of the principles. But thi course is the wrong one altogether. We Inust divest our stocks in corporations with South African interceats.
The 105 companies which signod the Sullivan Principles by lant fall were sent queationaires about ineir progreas. Eventually, 78 companies responded. The first report is now available at the reserve desk in Bird Library, under the name of Joaeph \(V\). Julian, vicerpresident for public affairs:

This preliminary report .... indicates that this effort is boginning to have an impact although much remains to be done" Julian aaid. But woubt whot chare his optimism. We doubt whether the Sullivan Principles can make any substantial impact to end spartheid.

The first of the aix principles calls for "non-aegregation of the races in all eating, comfor, and work then The report happily states that three fourths of the reporting companieas said they have desegregated or are in the process of doing so
But this figure includes companies like General Motors, who "complied" by removiniy written segregation signs Fichmond plant. When they took down the signs, they colorkeyed the doors: blue for whites and Asians (honorary whitea when it comes to toileta), and whites when it comes to toilets), and orange for blacks and coloreds. It is author of the principles, is on the board of GMO

The 25 percent of the companies who reported they are not desegrating gave various reasons: they are located in buildings they do not control, or the law iteelf prohibits desegregation. Clearly, the Salivan Principles do not affect the general South African apartheid princi principle two requires "equal and fair terms and conditions of employmuent." This includes. the.. eswhich has been accomplished in soms, which has been accomplished in some companies.

Realistically, however, these unions are powerless, having no legal mtanding. All companies negotiate their in dustry contracts. With a national industrial council, which naturally includes no blacks. The moat the unions can do is help with individual krievances; they do not help determine working conditions.
The third Sullivan principle calls for "oqual pay for all employees doing equal or comparable woris for the same period of time." Even the report admits this hasn't happened: the average in come for workers in American companies in lower for Asians than for whites, and consid
For example, the report divides income for salaried workers into 12 levelis. No blacks are in the top six level Principle four demands the initiation of and development of training programs that will prepare, in subatantial numbers, blacks and other non-whites for supervisory, clerical and techncal jobe. What is true that more blacs an than any other race the ing programa than any other race, the that most are being trained merrely to that most are being trained meraly to operate machinery at the lowest levels. creasing the numaber of blacks and creasing the nomaber of blacks and other sumpervitory positions Still two years after the principles were written, 68 percent of the reporting companies have no blacks in managerial or of ficial positions.
Finally, the sixth of the Sulfivan Principlea calls for -improving the quality of employeen'" lives outside the work environment in such areas ae houring, transportation, schooling recreation, and health facilities. But South African law prevents real ad vances, the American corporatione cannot, and probably do not want to, do anything about this.
For example, the Bantu Education Act of 1955 requires that 20 to 25 times more money be spent on the education Naturally child than on a black child Naturally, all residential areas are legally segregated. So even if the Sullivan Principles were successful inside the corporations,-which they are not, they still could not trannform louth Africa's broad, racist bybtera.

Divestiture would be a symbolic act on our part, but it would tell corporations how we feel in a langrage they understand - money. We must let them know our money may not be uned o finance oppression.
For as umpleasant as it may be to think about apartheid now or ever, we are all implicated. Read the report on the progress of the Sullivan Principles and draw your own conclusion.
The summer is a fine time for contemplation.

\section*{Wanted: an active University Senate}

The University Semate can clain two major victories this academic year: exto 70 for ing students a greater say in the tenurprocess. claim.

It has failed to pass a comprehensive tenure proposal, as well as other important proposals. It has not taken a strong role in the issues which really affect the university, such as the gtadium propoaal and the closing of Community House Traditionally, the Senate has dawdied on legialation while getting bogged down in routine adrainistrative work. This year has proved to be no exception.
Frustration with the Senate dates at least to the late 1960 a . This frustration зиганод resulted in a constitutional convention which met from 1970-72 to recommend ways to altert the power structure of the university. After intensive debate, a proposal to replace the Senate with a 100-member University Governing Council having extensive powers was placed before the university community. Faculty and stadenta would be equally repreamted, making up 90 percent of the council, with the remainng 10 percent as reprosentation for administration and staff.
The council would have a say in all matters concerning the umiversity. It could also overrule the chanc
Although approved by students; this propossl failed to get the necessary apmoval from the faculty and Board of Trustees - and rightly so. The virtual governing of the university would have and etudents at the expense of sacholar and students at the expense of scholarsing of the university should be left to the administrators.
This is not to say that faculty and students ahould not get a say in therun ning of the tuniveraity - it is vitally important that they do. But the otructure of the Sanate providon for this to occure. Each comprittee can work closely with the administration in its epecific aren, and in doing so, can influence administrative policy. It also possesses a very potent weapon: the authority to review administratora. This power is one of the most important ways the Senate can hold the administration accountable.
Granted, muchofits other powers are advisory. and depend on the cooperation of the sdminietration, which all too oftern is laching. Wut the real problom with the Slanate lies with the Senators themselves. It appears thiat many Senators just don't give a damn. Committees, auch as adwithout meeting Attendence monthe thly Senntemoting in avera at monthd the to ance in hore interested in priting home for dinore than in taking a role in governing the than in tak.

If the \({ }^{-}\)Senate expects the administration to give it any real say in decision making, it has to seize the initiative. Almost all major isanues Committea on Students should hase jumped on the Community House issue. The committee on Athletic Policy or Administrative Opexations should have picked up on the stadium isaue months ago. The Seriate should vote on the Calendar Review Committee's recommendations.

Examples do exist where Senate per sistence has resulted in the administration yielding some authority. The Committee on Budget and Fiacal Affairs has achieved several victories, most notably when the administration let it determine a spending a possible budget surplas.

Constant pressure on the administration can produce results, for there is no way any ruler can, rule An aggressive Senate can go a long An aggressive Senate can go a long way toward realizing the dreamis of the governing council - a univ governed fairly and justly.

\section*{Senate rejects tenure proposal}

By Debby Waldman
It's back to the drawing board again for James K. Weeks and the University Senate committee on appointments and promotions.

For the third time this year, the Univeraity Senate efused to pass a proposed set of tenure suidennea drawn up by the committee. Reagons for the negative vote ranged from the proposal's "hideous grammar" to the fact it was "a careless and inexplicable piece of writing," according to Senate members.
The purpose of a list of guidelines is the ensure a standard tenure policy for the entire university Weeks said the guidelines were advice to the senate. not absolute rules.
"I'm not zurprised, but I'm diaappointed," Weeks aid after the meeting. "It reinforces what I've always thought-it's evidence of an underlying resistance to a formalization of rules."
"They don't want to hold to a standard. We gave them the most watered-down version and if they found that unacceptable, they realy would not pass found that unacceptable, thang that would have any merit," he said.
The committee will go back to work on the list of guidelines next year. The Senate seerni to feel no guidelines next year. Ine think I can speak for the committee - we don't feel any urgency. School is over as far as I'm don't feel concerned.
"I consider it a waste of time to go back to the drawing board,"' he concluded
In other buriness, the committee on athilic policy moved to decrease the amount of student seating for men's basketball from 3600 seats to approximately 3100.

David Bennett, chairperson of the committee, said the greateat attendance at a baaketball game occurred three years ago when 2900 atudents showed up for SU-Pitt game.
The greatest attendance this year cocurred at the Syracuse-St. John's game, which drew 2750 studenta.
When questioned about the impact of the new basketballonly athletic cand, Bennett aaid if attendance did rise, his committee would move to reappropriate the onginal 3600 seats.
The senate reviewed a report from the committee on budget and fiecal affairs, which recommended a list of prioritiea to be used in the event of a budget aurplus. Items on the list ranged from \($ 50,000\) allocations for instructional and research equipment to a s100,000 donation to the fund for the student union building.
Student Association's resolution concerning final recommendations of the calendar review committee had to be tabled due to the lack of a quorum. Attendance at the meeting was not large and many senators left early when it became apparent the meeting would run past 6 p.m.

University Senate Appointments and Promoun Committoe Chairporson James Weeke ponders the future of his committee's tenure guidelines, which wore defeated at yesterday'a senate meeting:

\section*{Building fund nets \($ 70,000\)}

By Stacy Schneider. Over \($ 70,000\) has been raised in the student union building fund drive, according to Elaine Stern, senior committee chairperson.

Due to this contribution, the class of 1979 has made the largest class gift ever at Syracuse University, she added.

About \($ 50,000\) was raised during last month's phone-athon. Seniors were contacted by telephone and informed about the pledge.plan funding the building.
Seniors were asked to donate \($ 250\) payable the first year they earn \($ 20,000\). If the union building is not under construction in five years all money will be returned.
Since then. phone-a-thon pledges have been coming in by mail, Stern said. "We are aiming for \($ 250,000\)." she added.
"I think the pledges will double around commencement time," Stern said. The cost of constructing a union building constructing a union bis \($ 7\). million.

More businesa is coming at the end of the year. Pardee said.
'While committee chairpeople are generally elected at the firat meeting, they don't get going until late fall."
A. Dale Tussing, a member of the benate budget commaittee said, "What happened in the senate this year is that more work was done in commaittees and leas business on the senate loor.
"The senate was willing to go along with it because the committees were worling harder. This isn't a gign that the senate wasn"t working as hard. I think maybe theyre working, harder, but in com mitteen," Tussing Aaid.
However, Morrie Levine, student coalition chairperaon, said the low point of this year was the lack of number of committees working.
"This year wain rather disappointing to me. Nothing came out of the committee on students," Levine said.

Tenure was the most controveraial isaue faced by the Senate all year. The committee on appointmenta and promotions was given the respansibility of formulating a tenure policy standard to the entire university.
The policy was first inmoduced to the genate lagt Septeraber but it has yet to be pasbed.

Students, however, were satisfied with a resolution pasaed in November requaring course evaluations and making students voting members of college tenure cornmittees.

Solar energy is anything but a new concept. The sun has always been the primary energy source for the earth, providing energy for plants and heating the atmosphere. In recent years, it has merged as what many see as a viable energy zlternative, as a permanent fuel water and the generation of electricity.

There are two types of solar heating methods for buildings: passive and active. Paseive involves constructing the home or building so that it catches the most bun and the least wind Principle windows face the south and extra insulation is placed within the windward walls. With netesatry.

One such home was builtin 1975 by Ray Schneider of Oawego. Schneider brid he built the horme because of the impending rise in prices and decressing availability of heating fuels. The sun provides onethird of the space heat for the home, and could casily be hooked up to provide an

\section*{Other alternatives}

Another alternative to nuclear development is hydroelectric power, uging water-driven turbines to produce electricity. Although utilities have developed almost all the large-seale hydropower in New York state, small-scale hydroelectric generators could provide a great amount of electrical energy to local communities.

Small generators would allow for greater local control, and would require no high-voltage power lines, which have in recent years have been linked to auch heaith hazards as sterility in cattle.

A study by the Polytechnic Institute of New York identified more than 1600 places in the state where small-scale hydroelectric power could be developed, With a total capacity of 3,000 megawatts. The newsletter also states that wind power, which has been so quickly forgotten that people now call it "exotic," could annually supply the nation with at eust 1. quad inon BM, and that. 30 "quads" is not an unrealistic forecast. The nited States annually consumes about 80 quadrillion BTUs.

Schneider's home is by no means unique. The People's Energy Primer lists several passively heated buildingsin New York stak, and motes one honse in Holden, Maine, that ia almost entirely heated by the passive method.

Skeptics have doubted the effectiveneas of this method of the Northeast, with its cold winters and relatively low amount of incoming solar radiation, but many homes throughout the Northeast are heated almost entirely the sum, using the active solar collection method.

The active method provides water and apace heating by collecting the sun's heat in a closed box with a glase pane serving as the top side. Water or aur is pumped through the box, collecting the heat which can then be used immediately or thared. These collection boxes are often installed on the roofs of existing struc tures or placed on lawns, but more and more new buildings have active pola

\section*{Oswego nuclear rea}

\section*{By Carl Johnson}

Since last month's nuclear accident at the Three Mile Island reactor near Harthe Three Mile island reactor near MarTisburg, Pa-, particular attention has been paid to reactors in this area, and the quespaid to reactors in this area, and the queshere has been heavily debated.
Nine Mile Point Unit One is the only reactor in this area presently capable of operation. This plant, located in Scriba near Oswego, is presently shut down for refueling.
Another plant in Scriba, the James A. Fitzpatrick reactor, was closed in Feb ruary, along with four other plants in the country, because there may have been an error in safety calculations. an error that could leave that plant vulnerable to earthquates.
Nine Mile Point Unit Two is presently icensed and under construction. It is scheduled for completion in 1984. Another plant is being planned for Sterling, but there is presently an appeal on the license.

All of the plants are located on Lake Ontario, within 100 miles of Sypacuse.
A meltdown of the core at any of the plants would be conaiderably dangerous to Syracupe. William Sunderlin of the Syracuse Peace Council, a group strongly involved in the anti-nuclear movement, ssid the radius of danger in event of a reactor accident," would be "open to great opeculation.

\section*{Radiation risks}

One of the major concerns for any operating. reactor is the radiation emitted by the nuclear reaction. Although the plants are designed to shield and contain radioactivity, Suriderlin said, "A nuclear power plant is always releasing radioactive material.
Certain studies have linked low-level radiation, buch as that generated by nuclear reactors, to increased cancer rates. Sunderlin said that anch radiation has been linked especially with boiling water reactors, such as Nine Mile One and Fitzpatrick. Fitzpatrick.
However, Drucker said, "The normal radiation releases from an operating plant are extremely smail, smaler than the releases from a coal plant." He added that the reactors in this area "have been extremely good, running. Well below allownble limita, for radiation releasa.

Drucker admitted that radiation damage might be eignificant in the event of a major release, "but there has never been a major release." He noted that the radiatiom in the United States reaulting from a Chinese nuclear bomb test two years ago was graater than the radiation released in the accident at Three Mile

The federal government sets standarde tors. Dr. Charles Chamberlain a radiation specialiat at Upotate Medical Center, zaid that "as far as we're able to demonstrate, the limits appear to be aafe." Auth Kaplan of Ecology Action of Oswego, gaid that her group'a major concern with radiation is with "the dosage to workers who have to go into these plantz" The dosage to these workers has the dosage received by people living near reactors.

 effects of radiation on body

By Carl Johmmon Last month's nuciear reactor ao cident in - Harrieourg, panimaroused great public coneffects of radiation, but most people axen't fully aware of cacuses and effects of radioactivity.
When the nucleus of an atom is broken down, or "split," energy is relessed in the form of high-mergy particles or waves. Thedanger of radiation occurs when these high-energy particies or waves affect individual atoms in live tissue. The energy causes electrons to be removed from atoms, leaving highly charged particles called ions in the tipsue.
These ions can cause damage varying in range from killing the cell or tissue to mutating the genetic structure of the cells. causing miscarriages, birth defects and ther reproductive problems
In addition, this mutation of cells has been found to cause cancer by promoting the abnormal growth of abnormal cells.
However, Dr. Charles Chamberlain, a radiation specialist at Upstate Medical Center, said that research indicates that "cells recovex from a major portion of radiation damage. The huma quite resilient in that respect."

Chamberlain said that the effects of low-level radiation are "difficult to test. We're not really sure many timea what the basic damage is. An far as cancer induction it appears that this may be due to a genetic change, but we're not sure. The ffects of low-level radiation are so miniacule that you have to use statiatica."
Background radiation, that radiation which we are naturally exproaed to each day, comes from a variety of sources. About half is cansed by natural radioactive materials in the soil, the amounts of which vary depending on the geology of different regions.
Another 45 percent of background radiationto whichthe average Amerrican is exposed each year comes from medical and dental X-rays. Most of the remainder comes from fallout from atomic bomb tests, color televisions, luminous watches, microwave ovens and other consumer microwav
However, with the development of nuclear power, a new source of radiation has appeared.
"A nuclear power plant is always releasing radioactive material," said William \section*{Anatomy of an accident \\ Inside the reactor at Three Mile Island,} the "core", or center of activity, holds 36,816 fuel rods, coated with zirconium. Each rod contains pellets of uranium oxide, the fuel for the nuclear reaction. Nuclear fission, or splitting of the uranium atoms, prodnces energy in the form of heat Hested water is pumped through a primary loop, and the heat is tranaferred to Water in a secondary loop. This loop creates steam to drive a turbine, which mroduces 880,000 kilowatts of electricity, mongh to light \(8,800,000\) 100-wati Thetbuibs.

The core of the reactor, where the splitting of atoms takes place, is sealed in a 41 -foot-high vegmel with steal walls 8-7/16ths nches thick. This mands within a containment dome 190 foet high, 140 feet acrosa with 4-foot-thick wails of concrete over a concrete sheath, all designed to hold in the radiation produced by the fission reaction.

\section*{The accident}

Unit II of the Three Mile Island nuclear reactor had difficulties from its opening on Dec 30,1978 . Within weeks, it had to be shut down because two safety valves raptured during a test of the turbine. There were several other incidenta of faulty equipment, perhape foreshadowing last month's problems that resulted in the largeet civilian nuclear reactor accident in United States history.
The accident occurred early in the mor ning of Wednesday, March 28 , and was caused by both human and mechanical error. The Nuclear Regulatory Commiasion said that human error caused the pumps feeding water from the turbine to the reactor to be mhut off. Under normal conditions, when the pumpe ohut down, the Radiation exposure is measured in mailirems, units which measure biological damage to human tissue caused by ionizing radiation. The average Angerican is exposed a year.

The recommended maximum "safe" exposure is 500 millirems a year. A chest Xray alone exposes a person to 45 milliremg of radiation in just a few seconds, and some workers exposed to radiation on the job may be exposed to 5,000 millirems a year.

Sunderlin said he believes the effects of radiation are between 10 and 100 times greater than presently stated in federal reports. He said he thinks it is also likely that the federal protection standard wil be loosened toon because additional plants are being considered.
"What radiation standards lead people to believe is that exposure to such a level is safe," Sunderlin said. "Actually, standards are accounted for on a cost-benefit analysio the cost of health measured

Escaping radiation at the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant at one point last month caused background levels in Syracuse to increase fourfold. This event and the proximity of the Onwego reactors have led to the Syracuse Peace Council's call for daily radiation readings to be taken

When the pressure hit a certain level, the reactor antomatically dropped control rode, contwining boron, into the core, slip-

Heat and pressure corntinued to mount until a relief valve in the primary loop opened, allowing the excess water to flow into a tank and lowering the pressure. However, the valve stucle open and the water filled the tank and flooded onto the loor of the reactor containment building.
With this, water pressure in the loop fell fax below normal levels, and the main cooling pumps were thut off. An emergency core cooling systern began operation, pouring more water into the loop, but the water flowed out of the stuck valve and into the tank.

Carrier Dome will see more than just football games
}

By Walter Gilbba
There is a lot more planned Syracure University than Saturday afternoon SU football.
For one thing, SU may become a national center for playoff and championship action in at least two collegiate eports, "Weill be talking with the NCAA about the dome an an site or post-season basketbal play," baid SU Vice Pregident cor Stzdent Atrairs Melvin C Mounts. "And we'll be talking with the NCAA about the dome as a site for some postseagon football.

We're sure going to make our best effort to promote the use of the donse for that purpose," Mounts said.
However, more students may actually be aerved by the dometa less-celebrated capabilities. "I think the attractive feature of the Carrier Dome is that it is constructed in such a way an to permit a Thamet Benzel, the dome's Thanaging director.
The 87,300 gquare feet of floor apace in the stadium is large enough for interlarge enough for intercollegiate soccer, lacrosse, traels and field, and field hockey, Benzel suid.
Such informal student activities as frisber-throwing. jogging, and basketball will probably be permitted - even encouraged - when nothing official is going on in the stadium, Benzel maid.

But SU football will be the highlighted activity at the atadium. And it's the football games that have many of SU's neighbors upaet about rampaging masses of SU fans blowing exhauat furnes in their kitchen windows and trooping across their froat lawne.
The first exposire to the completed Carrier Dome for most stucients, and the dome's first teat for neighborhood approval will be the SU-Miami (Ohio) football game scheduled for September 20 . 1980 .

That is when the trie permonality of Arehbold's succeosor will be judged.
What they will find is that Ol'Archie just cannot compare with the manifestationa of modern architecture.
Physically, the Carrier Dome has been deaigned for efficiency: to give the best seats to the most people possible.
It will accommodate more than 50,000 people, yet it will accupy 10,000 square feet of land less than Archbold which held 32,000 fans.
The spectators farthest from the field will be 188 feat fiom the foothall sidelines. The worti seals in Arwhbold were 20 g feet froma the field.
The seats directly behind the playerg' benches in the dome will be 27 feet from the *idelines. Those same seathin Arehbold were 90 feet away.
About 70 percent of a capacity crowdin the dome, including \(S U\) students, will sit through a game on plain wooden bleachers. Most of the rest of the seata will have wooden backs attached to them.

And for those VIFs who waved enough fund-raising green, there will be 642 bucket seats, sports car style, to relax in.
Mounts said 3,600 seatst in the dome have been specifically allotted for SU sfudents from the 30 -yard line to the goal line on the north side of the field.
He said the student section could be wrapped around into the end zome shonld more students than expected show up for a game.
up Tor a game. atudent attendance for football games in Archbold was 2,367, Mounts said. For events that will not draw close to a capacity crowd, and there will be maany of them, a there will be many of them, a heavy curtain will be drawn atross the midide of the floor to create amore intimate viewing experience. This is how banket ball gamea will be watched, according to Harvey H. Kaiker, SU vice president for facilities adminimtration.
The basltetball court will be situated at the extreme west end of the floor (near Irving Avenue) where 28,000 seat will be available.
Mont of the non-mports events to be held in the dome, such as graduations and concerta, will be in that same curtained-off area, or the "mini-dome" as it is called.
Adjacent to the barketball court, with the curtain withdrawn, will be an NCAAapproved 200 -neter track. A jumpirsg pit, pole vaniting equipment, and other field facilities will be provided inside and outside of the track.
"Then, when the rag rolls out, you can have almost any kind of field event on it you can imagine," Kaiser said.
The "rag," or astroturf, will be rolled out, side-to-aide, in five-yard widthe and will cover both the track and basiketball court.
One of the unique aspects of the Carrier Dome, according to Kaiser, is its roof. It will be made of a transluscens material that will allow the field to be "saturated" with natural daylight, he said.

Daytime events will require no lights on a sunny day."There will be mitificial lighting soturcea capphle of producing light levels spitable to be picked up by color TV" for when the sun gete low, Kaiser said.

Institutional Services is to work in conjunction with the University Union concert board in an effort to maike better use of Maniley Field House.
According to Rickird F. Duda, manager of conference support services, Lustitational Services is in the process "of finding at least two or three groups for the oummer, although we have not signeed a contract with anyone yet."

Under the agreement worked out with University Union, UU concert board has primary booking of the facility

November through April. Institutional Survices coordinates activities for the remainder of the year. According to Dadia, the agreement is working out very. very well.
However, Larry Schulsinger, UU external chairperson, said that "in my mind an agreement was never really reached. To my knowledge no one in the UU of fice ever signed anything or really agreed to it.
Schulfinger said UU hopes to agree on an working proposal for the field homme, mut that the lant few drafte worked out with Inatitntional Servicem did not work
Despite these differences, the Allman Brothers concert in Manley on April 19 is being cosponsored by Lustitutional Services and University Union.
In addition to concerts Institutional Services plans to uchedule buanesa conferences and meetingre in the atummer.

All students must attend! co-sponsored by Student Association and University Union

By Debl Sherman Contrary to popular belief, iseoing bad checks within the Syracuse University Community does not geem to be a serious problem.

Gary Sommer, an attornes with Student Legal Services, said, "although cashing bad checks is not the most common reason for stadente: being arrested, we do get a few where students write checks, the checks bounce and criminal charges are brought against the student."
"Usually the merchant makes the effort to contact the student, and most students do make good a bad check,' he added.
Forzed checks do not appear often, Sommer said. "There are serious consequences involved with forgery. It is considered a misdemeanor, or a felony, depending on what was forged."
However, there are people who deliberately bounce checks.
One SU student said he has written checks even though he knew he didn't have enough funds in the bank to cover for it.
"I figured I didn't have the money now, but I knew I would deposit some money before the next statement was issued," he said.
However, most atudents are quite honest about their bank quite honest about their bank transactions, reports Sue Gransactions, reporer of the Goodellow, manager of the "One student" out of ten thousand is writing bad checks intentionally."

Goodfellow said the majority of bad check cases are errora.
"Sometimes a parent will deposit money in the account, but the transaction has not fully been completed at the time of the withdrawal," she said.
Tony Muller, manager at Lincoln First National Bank, said, "It is not an abnormal trend to see students overdraft Sometimes it is a result of them not keeping their records straight."
Lincoln's policy includes a $$ 5$ penalty fee for insufficient funds. Accounts will be closed after one month if people haven't cleared their records.
Marine Midland has a $$ 4$ return check fee for covering a bad check.
"When- a duderit" is deliberately fisuing bad checks, I handla it personally," Goodfellow said. "But I basically like the kids, and usually give them the benefit of the doubt."

A AM-Americans swim in unknown waters

By Gres Lackenbaugh
In a span of three years, the Syracuse Iniversity women's swimming tearn has emerged from the ranks of medioc rity to its current position as the 17 th best team in thenation. The reasons for Americans Liz Vilbert, Robin Butler Wendy Evans, and Patsy Klotz.
At this year's National Collegiate Swimming Championships, the squad captured its spot in the top 20 . Butler captured its spot in the the 200-yard inswam to ninth place in the 200-yard in dividual medley and fifth in the 400 yard individual medley, while viterert placed 13th in the 100 yard butterlly, ninth in the 50-yard butterfly, seventh in the 100 -yard backstroke and fourth in the 50-yard backstroke. The 200 -yard mediey relay team added a 12 th-place finish.

Riding the crest of this success is Coach Lou Walker. "There's no question about those four (the All Americans) being the reason for our success. The other achools who competed in the Nationals had squads with 15 scholarships on them. We went there with only four, and still came away with a finish in the top 20 ."

Despite the fact that the four An Americans represent the highest total of any SU team, the squad suffers from a lack of recognition.
It's hard at times (not receiving recognition) when you read stories about football players sitting on the bench," said sophomore Vilbert. "It's not that I wantrecognition - the whole women's athletic department needs moxe publicity."
"It's kind of disgusting," said Evans, a senior. "Our success speaks for itself - we went to the national with only four people, and everybody else had 20 to 30 . And etill we get no publicity."
Although there is a lack of publicity, combined with an extreme amount of hard work (the program involves three hours of ewimming every day, weight training, and running), each of the four spurns the idea of not swimming
"I don't swim for the publicity," Klotz said. "It'e really time-consuming and it's to agher than high school ever was, but the gelf-satigfaction makes it worth it.
"It's definitely worth the hassle," Butler said. "There's a great amount of gelf-drive and ippride in myself involved. Heck, I'm doing it for myself not for the university or publicity.
"If there's one thing I learned from swimming and being a student at the asme time, it's how to badget my time," said Evans, ia speoch pathology and audiology major. In a sense, swim ming preparee you for life.
In light of the number of scholar ahips raceived by the team, the success must also be traced to clever recruiting - recruiting that is handled by Walker
"We're limited in the quality of kide we get by the number and type of weholarshipa we give," said Walker, a former SU awimming standout (a 1975 graduate). "Since we don't give fullpraid rides - we just give free tuition I have to go for thie kids who weren't too heavily recruited in high school."
"Because we only get four scholarships a year (six as of next year), we have to struggle to compete," Evans said. "According to the university, we aren't a revenve aport, so we get a poor budget. If they didit on ability, we'd get the money.
The lack of scholarships can only hurt the program, but Walker seems to take it all in stride
"I'd love to aee us give full rides and have 15 scholarships, butlet's be realis tic," Walker said. "About sever years ago, women's sports were vixtuallis nonexistent. The money situation is tight, and it will take the ad miniatration time to work out a solution so that no sport will suffer. We'd like to see them move faister, but

Weight deals cruel fate to SU's coxswain

By Walecia Konrad

Ozzie Street is a great coxsowain. He is the kind of person followers love because he is so easy to follow, and leaders hate because he talcess, cond mand so quickly. Ozzie is a leader everywhere: in his boat, in his frater everywhere: in his boat, in his fraterhas and in the clasaroom. But 0 xar He's been outgrown his success.
He's been a leadar from the start, ever since the day his prop school coach picked him up by his sweatahirt and wouldn't put him down until hesaid he would be a coxswain on the crew team.

"I was all of 72 pounds then and my coach was 6-foot5 and weighed 245 pounds. I said I'd cox," Ozzie said with agrin.
Oxrie coxed for four years on the Phillip Andover varaity team. He was captain his senior year, the only coxswain to ever captain the Andover crew. In his junior year, Ozzie made the U.S. youth team that took seventh place in the Montreal Junior Olympica. the next sumamer in Austria, his fourman jumior Olympic boat won a ailver medal It was the forot time a youth boat had ever won any kind of medal and Oraie Street wan in charge

At SU, Oxzie's freahman boat won the International Rowing Association chaimpionship. As a sophomore last chear, he cored the varsity boat to the mational title. Both years he went with the team to the prestigous Henley Regettain England.
But his success atory stops there.
Weighty problem
, When he was a freshman, Ozuie measured 5 -foot-4. He has gradually measured b-foot-f. He has gradually grown since his freshman year and is weight for college coxswains.

Despite estengive and often brutal dieting, Orzie couldn't loge enough to koep racing welght. Although he reduced to 135, it wam't enough. Crew Coack Bill Banford met the maximum weight for Ozine att 130
"Ozzie'n a fantaetic coxawain," Sanford said. 'It's difficult for him to geet down to that kind of racing weight. 130 is the absolute limit.

Orrie can't weigh 130 pounds unless he spends all his energy loaing weight "When you try to loees wo much weight you lose all your strength, all you want to do is sleep, theres no timetostudy or do anything else"" he said.

Ozaie has been constantly struggling with his weight problem throughout his crew career. When hediets, or more accurately, starvea, he sieeps 18 hours a day to gain back some strength
"You get too tired to eat," Oxze maid. "Your stomach shrinks. You just eat a piece of toast and have a glass of water and you're full. You get sick and you stay sick, and you're alwaye cranky."
"One time I lost 40 pounds in a month. That was one of min more insane thoments," he said.
Losing so much weight so quickly is dangerous for anyone, but especially dangerous for anyone, out eapecially for Ozzie because he has a heart murmer. Yet Inziedaesn't worry about the dangerz. conging and how he survives without it.

Buey man

Ozzie tries to keep his mind off crew. He maintains a 3.7 grade point avgarage in accounting, is a mernber of the honorary accounting aociety, is vice president of Delta Upoilon fraternity and ia an active (and sompetimee outspolcen) member of the SA finance board.
But he atill misace crow. "I try and their concern is dollars, and ours is the program.
While the lane to success for the women's swim team has been choppy. the horizon looks promising.

I think our national recognition has already hel ped in the way of recruits for next year," Klotz said. "We can only get better.'

What about the four who have helped the Orange to reach national prominence? Butler and Vilbert are both "shooting for the Olympic trials." While Walker labels their chance of making the Olympic team as "an outside shot" both girls say making the triais is "an honor in itself"

Kloter, who is only a sophomore, said ahe is hoping to "qualify individually for the nationals next year." Evans, the only seniox on the team, said she would like to be an asaistant coach "if the opportunity ariaes

Although the fate of the four AllAmericans and the SU swimming program is atill in doubt, the success of the 1979 women's swim team is secure. Thanks to Liz Vilbert, Robin Butler, Wendy Evans and Patsy. Kotz, the Orange have overcome their obstacles to establish the SU women's swimming team as a national power.
tell myself I can live without it, but I think about it too much

When he watched hie teammates board the bus to the airport for a recent race in San Diego he said, "I felt like crying. A big part of me was on that bras."
"The most frustrating thing in knowing I have the ability. I'm good," Ozrie said, tugging at his orange SU cap. "But my physical dinability gets in my way. There's nothing I can do about it ozzie said he thatco he is probab ine country. He in guick to explain what makes a cood corawain. "Coxswains are in-bont coaches. They have to eize up the race and papor have to sule oaramen race and report back
"A 130-pound guy has to boss around 240-pound oarsmen when they're a lot more tired than you are," he explained.

How can a football player get excited about spring practice? After all, there is no Penn State or Pittaburgh waiting for hirn at the end of the week. Instead, the only thing to look forward to is an intragequad scrimmage at the end of April. Ian't apring practice just a gtroll through the sun while limbering up the muscles before taking a nice hot ahower?

Are you kidding? " asked Syracuse University offensive important We're all fighting for jobs."
Indeed, for a team that suffered through a $3-8$ season last year, gave up over 4,000 yards on defense and completed only 48 pasaes, there are more jobs available than in the civi Blervice.

Except for very few spots, there is competition everywhere for competition everywhere for Coach Frank Maloney, who is directing his sirth opring practice at Coyne Stadium.

play of the season, missed every game but one, and is now healthy: Maloney says spring practice is like a hard practice in the fall. There is agreat amount of hitting and contact and ever with the broken riba fresh in the defense's memory, Hurley has notescaped the intensity of defensive players trying to win a job.
"I've taken a lot of good shots here the last two weeks." Hurley said, pointing to the now-famous rib cage. 'It didn't bother me. I've forgotten all sbout the injury. You can't play the game if you don't."
The return of Hurley is not the only reason SU fans are drooling over the Orange offensive backfield. Teaming with Hurley are two running backe who between them have the potential to do everything on a foothall field except mow the graas while running a sweep.

Maloney feels the spring is a good time to experiment with strategy and with one baclifield containing the potential leading rusher, passer and receiver in SU history, Maloney is doing exactly that "We are trying to feature their talents," Maloney said. Morris is excellent as a tailback in the I formation and Hurley runs the Veer offense exceptionally. We're trying to combirie the two. It sounds easy but it is not. We also want to get the ball to Art in the air."

Can two prolifice runners like Hurley and Morris survive in a cramped backfield?
"Bill makes me more dangerons," Morris said. "I may not gain as many yards as last year, but I don't care as long as we win.
"It's a big advantage having two good runners," Hurley gaid. "The good rumners, finicy gaid. Ihe defense can't ook at the other gay or

If the defensive gecondary does not improve during ite spring overhaul, SU's opponents will get their yards as well. Syracuse gave up 2,089 yards passing in an area that was SU's moet glaring weakness last season.

Consequently, Maloney is looking at everybody but the chancellor for the four powitiong. Among others looking for jobs ane Terry OLeary, Warren Harvey. Jerry Kilpatrick Cedric Hinton, Bob Arkeilpane, Joe Sicklea and Boston College transfer Ike Bagosian.
"We're impraving there, Maloney said. "But rightnow I don't have the fainteat idea who will be havere in the Fall."

And after three weeks of banging heads on the offensive line, Maloney has no idea who will be there in the Fall either. The line has undergone apring cleaning with Gisainger moved from center to tackle and All East and third tasm All-American tackle Craig. Wollley moved to guard.
"Craig Wolfrey can do jubt about anythings," Maloney eaid. "We made anything, Maioney eaid, the changes as an experiment if he could play euard, but I couldn't if hecould play huardiout be in the tell ${ }^{\text {fall }}$

Tubes rap

By Brent Marchant As children of the Baby Boom, most of us owe our growth, development and mere aurvival in this dog eat-dog world to the scientific advancemente of the past three decades. Just think of where most of us would be today had it not been for the development of such wonderful commodities an disposable diapers and natural-shaped nipplea. But, despite the marvelous contributions of products such as these, none of us would have been able to make it had it not been for the development of an ingenious product known as television-that amazing. new-fangled contraption that could tell us everything from what was going on in the real world to how we could eliminate disgusting body odors.
Eiver since its development more than 30 years ago. composers have striverk in vain to put the praises of this illustrious idiot box into gong. (David Bowie came pretty close in 1976 with the release of the song "TVC-15"-a bouncy little number about a young girl in lo ve with her television set.) But no one until now has been able to effec. tively convey in song the plaudits this magical device deserves. And it's really quite ironic that it took The Tubea to sing the praises of TV.

The Tubes, the San Francisco-based rock band which first gained recognition for its outrageous musical satires and unabashed wit, has taken a new direction on its latest effort, Remote Control. On previous LPs, the group concentrated on the satirical aspects of its music, while tending to ignore the overall product, just for the sake of a few laughs. On Remote Control, however, the group has aban doned its "satire-for-satire's-sake attitude in favor of a well-conceived into account, Starang with the premise of television and its effects on our daily lives, The Tubes have put together an album that shows how the indominable idiot box innluences our feelings about love, life and death, and how truly difficult it can aometipres be for all of us to distinguished our real lives from the seemingly innate televiaion livea in all of us. And to accomplish this feat. The Tubes have put together an album thateffectively combines excellent lyrics, music, musicianship and packe more punch than the siz-million dollar man.
The bulk of The Tubes' message is carried by the band's amazingly cynical fyrics. In monysuchas "I Want it All Now" and "IV is King." The Tubes show us how television has made us believe that fame and fortune are available to us all and that it acquisition is as aimple as making an appearance on a quiz show. Lines auch as those from the song "TV is King" illuatrate:
$I$ wish $I$ was the man in the soundproof booth
I wish I had a chance to stop the band
Or maybe tell the truth
Aind maybe $I$ could win a car or television
In addition to the fame and fortune allusions, The Tubes have loaded their lyrics with witty double entendres, making television into something sexual, much the way networks currently do with their inane promotional spota. Lytics from the song "Ty is King" offer evidence:
You're just a tube full of gas
And a box full of tin
But youshow me your charms
But youshow me your
And if want to come in
And want to come in with skin. Oh television. you are my verything.
Furthermore, the Tubes don't hesitate to take a poke at the ratings game, as in the song "Telecide"-the story of a victim of a television suicide. and the elation TV programmers feel when they realize the ratings they'll get by broadcasting the news of it:

TV suicide
What an ugly may 20 die
This one is a doozie
We're pre-empting Lucy
Stay tuned to this channel
For our all-star paned.
Equalling the quality of the lyrics are the group's fine compositions. The electronsic quality of the television medium has provided The Tubes with the opportarity to inject unusual electronic sounds into theirmusic, as in the open. ing passages of mongs like "Prime Time," "Thirn Ne On" and "TV is King:"

The music also containg a number of parodies on televiaion show themes, The cut "No Way Out," for example, features a spoof on police'detective show themes. The song begins with an up-tempo introduction, featuring ecreeching guitars, followed by a light, almost happy-go-lucky refrain, which shows that no matter how impossible the odds are, Kojak the good guy will always find a way to solve the crime and find the way out that he"s looking for.

Superb musiciannhip is manother of the L.P's assets. The band plays as a Group throughout, but weveral per formances, particularly those of Wrummer Prarie Prince, pianist Vine Welnick and guitarists Bill Spooner and Roger Steen. Btand out.

Tying all of theae aspecta together in the excellent production work of Todd Rundgren. Rundgren has produced a crisp, clean sound that articulately blends the various instruments, but still allows for enough geparation to prevent the band members from getting loat in the mix.

The Tubes have produced an en joyable, entertaining ILP that gets it point across in a light, humorons manner, while simultaneoudy, enlightening us to- that-potentially dangerous remote control aevice in wh of our lives known as television.

Postponement possible in Regent Theatre renovation

By Andrea Abraharms The renovation of the Regent Theatre, originally set for April and now scheduled for May 1, may be postponed indefinitely, according to Dan Sutton. chairperson of the Syracuse Stage fundraising committee.
Syracuse University owns the three-theater Syracuse Stage Complex, including the Regent, which is set to be renovated at a cost of $$ 800,000$.

SU will pay for half of the renovation and the Stage will raise the reat.

Sutton said the Stage has raised about $$ 340,000$ in cash and pledges. Although the stage must secure most of its pledge money before beginning construction, any delay would probably occur because SUhas not yet paid its share. "I know SU was hoping to lock up one of two large contributors. But I know they don't have that big contributor

Native American organization seets, counselor for students

Erifglipent of Native Arierprine at Syracuat Unizerinty increased simatemanty, hins year, but so did this diop out rate.
Eniolfment of Native American:- atudent: at jumped from one or two in 1977 to 16 in 1978. However, six of thope stradents have already dropped ouk, according to Douglan George, a member of the SU Native American Society.

George attelbuted the enrollment increase to the diacarding of the Saltime Warriox as the SU mascot lant year. "It showed Native. Americann that SU cared," he said.

However, not uncil a Native American counipelor is hired at SU will the excesitively bigh drop-out rate among thete. students begin to slow, George said.
"Native American people, when they attend a highor education institution, have at lot of problems, but they can be minimized by the hiring of a counselor;" he said.

Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers promised a counselor to the Native American group once a position opened within certain areas of the aniversity. No action has been taken on this pledge made last December, George anid.

Egerert conld not be reached for comment.

Ergert mugerated at the December meeting-that the connmelor be placed in the Higher Education Opportanities Program. This would requize the coungelor to worly with all individuals falling under, that program, whethar they are white, black. Hiepamic or Native Amertcan.

East out the road where the canal ran, after 19 gas stations and 15 car lots, beyond the Golden Arches, the Beat Darned Burger and 21 other fast food jointa, part eight great audio eales and a store that sells neon signs, aprawled across a hilltop juat inkide DeWitt is the Shoppingtown Mall.
Shoppingtown is numbers. Seven hundred thirty-five thousand square feet of retailing opace (roughly 15 football fields) 3,500 parking epaces, 110 shops, 100,000 people per week (more at Christmas) and over $$ 75$ million in sales last year-

The Town Hall is half a block back, the community church is across the and and a cemetery rolls out green pay taxes and die all within a quartermile.

The mall dwarfs everything áround it. It has been that way singe 1975 when local architects introduced climatecontrol. The mall became a palace of marketable dreame.
"I like to think the mall is a small city unto itself," mall manager Larry Keefe said. Shoppingtown has its own saxitation and security forces, reaquor store and even a library. It is a consumer's mecca, but it is more than const.

It was a Saturday, gray and windy. The parking lot was crowded by 10:30 a.m. When a station wagon full of children pulled up in front of entrance #2. A brown haired boy in a and raced around to the driver's aide. Someone handed him a twenty dollar bill and said, 'id don't want to hear from you guys til at least 6

"What are you doing?" he asks.
"Oh, you know," she says raising a hand to indicate the stores around her. "The usual Saturday."
It is more usual than she realizes. "Local residents could about put the car on atutomatic pilot and come here," Larry Keefe said.
The mall han became a magnet. A U.S. News and World Report survey revealed people apend more time in shopping malle than in any other place outidide the home. The mall is "not only for the purpose of buying goods and services, but aleo to aatiafy a gocial need," wrote Louis Redstone in "New Dimenaions in Shopping Centers and Stores." SU geography profeasor Rowan Rowntree sand the mall has become a nuburban commanity center. Shopping has become one of the faw common American experiences and the department store has become the new meeting place. "The quegtion is no longer "Where quertion is. Will we so to Shoppingtown?
The mall draws people with its own magnets, the big wtores. "Penny's and Dey Brothers are our main draw," Larry Keefe aaid.

Three girls with feathered-back hair and cheerleader jackets atood in the aisle licking ice cream cones and talking about what Michael said to Martha. Behind thern a aign reada "J.C. ## Behind the tired gr

Behind the tired grandmother, in the fashion department, two stylishly dreased women are marvelling over a tiny model. "Yves St. Laurant in a girl's 8 ," one says, "Imagine that."
In each departiment the clerics look like what they sell. In the room of the crucified ahirts, where eight or ten of the intest fashions hang, arms cutetretched against a wooden background, a man with a cliphoard and m wide tie taps his feet to the music of 95-X. Down the aisle of cosmetics is a woman with a freah permanent wave and too much make-up:
Beyond the display of pillow cames with message about your Bexual prowess atencilod on in black is a matronly woman who is enthused with the community court where colored lights play on the up-ruwhing water, is the DeWitt Community Library. A little girl who has just learned how, is read. ing out loud in the Children's Room. Two gerbila play in a case beside her. Near the encyclopedias; afather is explaining glaciers to his son. Across from the main deak a lons haired girlof 12 is curled up on a U-chaped couch with a ecience fiction book. Except in the little girls and the gerbils the tib rary is quiet. Except for the leism reading room, it is almost empty:
"Wo have a difficult clientelle," said head librarian Connie Patterson "A lot of people just read magazines. It'a a distraction for them." It is also an unexplored refuge.
In the middle of the Library hange a gign that asys "We have history. myetery and is John: O'Conner, adminietrative aide to U.S: Representative James Hanley of Syracuse, said Hanley voted for the present all-volanteer army.

"It will talie a lot of convincing from the millitary and members of the armed services before Hanley woald take a stand azainet what he originally voted for (the allorginalary militaury."
The SU Student Association assembly recently passed a assembly recently passed a resolution tating they nre opposed to compuiacry military bervice SA has not, however, forwarded the resolution to any membera of Congress.
"The draft issue is a deep issue," Hanley said. "People look at it as if it is a black and white isoue but there are a lot of civil liberty implications involved."

A lot of big corporations offer you a big title. But how many offer a young college graduate a really important job?

As a Navy Officer, you don't have to wait to do a job that counts. We give you one as boon as you've earned your commission. A job with responsibility for the lives of others, and for millions of dollars of complex equipment. A job that requires skill and leadership. A job that Navy Officers have been doing proudly for 200 years
If that's the kind of job you're looking for, speak to a Navy recruiter. You'll find that Navy Officers have unequalled opportunities in fields like Nuclear Power, Aviation, and Engineering.
Or call toll free 800-841-8000. (In Georgia, toll free 800-342-5855.) Early responsibility. It's what being a Nayy Officer is all about.

At two-and-one-half hours old, this boy doesn't carel that Army Nurses are caring for him. But they care. They're Captain Karen Hayslett (University of Maryland) and Lieutenant Mary McNeily (Columbia University).
If you'd like to join them in the Army Nurse Corps, here are a few facts you should know. Army nursing is open to men and women under 33 who have a BSN degree. Every Army Nurse is an officer. The pay is excellent. Your initial tour is for three years - just time enough to try the job on for size. For more information. call

Author gives students college survival advice

By Barbara Krupnicki
It'e that time again. You have to do a semester's worth of reading for five courses, write four twenty-page papers and study for finals. There are several alternatives. You could pull fourteen allighters in Bird, take four incompletes, or panic. But if all else fails, spend a few hours learning how to make it through the right way by reading "The How To Go To College Book" from Passage Publishing.
Author Michael J. Gross states flatly what the book is not: It's not "A How To Succeed in College Without Really Trying

Words

Manual." or "a hip version of the High School Guidance Counselor Standard Rap," or "a simple step-by-step recipe for Instant Student." It's more of an "Everything You Alwaya Wanted to Know Abo

Gross gives hundreds of bits of advice some specific, some general, some that you've heard before, some obvious and some practical. He presents it all in a casual, succinct, entertaining and easy-toread 165 pages, for $$ 3.95$.

Operating under the assumption that "you still attach some intrinsic value on your education, that your practical desire for better grades and time-baving hinta co-exists with a more or less active respect for lesurning." Gross gives advice on how to choose courses, how to write papers and how to prepare for finale. In addition, he devotes a brief chapter to learning the techniques of speedreading
Considering the time you spend in a class, Gross recommends that you spend more than a half hour deciding which course to take. He advises talking to the instructor, sitting in on classes and sign ing up for an extra course to increase your Grions when you need to drop.
Gross believes you thould zet to know your advisor, but "not in the Biblical Onc.
Once enrolled in a class, he auggents a student 'look like a atudent, as my mother used to bay, it might help you act likeone." You should also develop a xelationship with proferaors, at least with eye contact. However, you must "do your best to avoid any actiona that reek of brown-nosing There's a subtle distinction between tact and manipulation, between toadying and showing respect.
Gross says it's better to take smaller classes, because "you have a chance to listen to your peers speak on something other than farting and football.'
"Most people can become proficient at writing first rate research papers - with a lot of work, a lot of discipline and a touch of B.S.," Gross says. He offers suggestions you won't find in most guides to researeh paper writing.
"Pick a prejudice" rather than a thesis, he says. And when you're through with your preliminary research, he tells you to "talk to yourself" (in public places) to get a clearer perapective. Gross aliso gives a complete explanation of when to foatnote and why.
The author agrees with most atudenta that final exams do not test knowledge. He thinks etudente "use the traditional twopronged attack when dealing with ex: aminations - study and worry." Although he is opposed to might-before cramming, he says there is nothing wrong with staying up all night from nervoug tension. When this bappens, he suggents reading a trashy novel. or watching reading
The morning of the teat, he advises eating breakfast in a restaurant - the change of scenery clesrs the mind. When asling questions for clarification, Groses asays, '"Don't ask silly questions... the only, way to question questions question's silliness is by trying your damndemt to answer it yourself." He even offers advice on what to do if you've really hlown an exam.
As finalm approach, Gross' auggestions are opporture. But evenif the book doean't help you at all, it at least gives you an erscuse to procrastinate for a few move houre.

"Coming Home" was also the first movie about Vietnam that went without a single war scene, yet it was still able to depict the suffering and the embedded anguish with an intengity that scorches the soul.
"The Deer Hunter," however, is a richer, longer, much more gruesome story that shows the minute value placed on human life in war.
 whole and feative friends collapaing on one another's. slumped shoulders because of Vietnam. It shows crumbled emotions, torn minds and, above all,
The most gut-gripping violence, and the film's peak action periods, occur in the Russian roulette games-When the money's on the table and a life is on the line- as the mounting tension whirls until it explodes, even with the thunderous click of an empty chsmber. "The Deer Hunter," like "Coming define, is strengthened by itely find their elastic minds or emotions stret ched to the breaking point. Thus, the true test of self-preservation $\longrightarrow$ each man's do or die decision $\rightarrow$ is threateningly at hand.
Michael (Fobert DeNiro), Nick (Christopher Walken) and Stephen (John Savage) are small-town steal workers whose immigrant upbringing and patriotic blind faith in Amerrica make them basically unaware of what they're really getiing into when they enlist. Their relative innocence results in their transition from working in helllike furnaces to their fight to survive the living hell that Vietnam wrought. The struggle is best exemplified by Michael, the "one ghot" deer hanter whose killer instinct is dulled by the insanity of war, but whose atrength of character serves as a vital sufpport for his and others' pending adjustment to the realities of war.
Throughout both films, however, the thin thread of hope, to which most of the survivors somehow manage to cling, becomes the rope of reform and repair. It's this hope that makes Luke Martin warn potential armed forces recruits in high achool that the reasons for fighting, killing and dying in Vietnam weren't "good enough" to be It'e the lack of hope that sends a naked Bob Hyde toward the Pacific Ocean to cleance his body and soul of the ain he witnesaed and felt a part of in Vietnam. Ironically, it is nothing more than hope-for America's eurvival as well as their own - that allows the emotionslly drained friends and family gathered in the bax in the final scone of "The Dié Hunter" to sing a subdued, but optimistic, chorus of "God Bless America" and raise their drinks in a toast to a fallen comrade.

Both films carry a simple message. We must continue to question the reasons behind our participation in political fiascoes like the Vietnam War, Where Uncle Sam lifted his immense gun and inadvertently aimed it at his own head. We can yearn for democ racy's survival and be willing to fight to preserve it, but we raust refuse to sacrifice thousands of Axmerican lives in a futile attermpt to save face in the eyes of ther nations.

Vietnam may now be history, but Coming Home" and "The Deer Hunter" are painful reminders that nany of the questions asked during that time still remain unanswered. even within ourselves.

Law school cuts NYPIRG funds

The Syracuse Univeraity College of Law Student Senate voted Tuesday to stop randing Yoris Public-Interest Rerearch Group for the 197980 school Gear:

The senate operates on a budget of $$ 22,750$. However. budget of $$ 22,760$. However, Wilson said student organizations within the college anked for about NYPIR

NYPIRG regional coor dinator Joe Salvo said that the Senate pressured studerits into voting agginst NYPBRG. The Senate informed various organizations that funding NYPIFUG would mean less funding for their activities, Salvo said.

NYPIRG and the Law Senate also disagreed on the wording of Tuesday's referendum. The referendum saked those atudents favoring NYPIEG if fundia ghould be an automatic deduction from the student activity fee or a postive checkoff.

The automatic deduction is the present way that NYPLRG is funded. Through. thie method the $$ 3$ used from each fee is refundable to students opposed to NYPIRG
The referendum didn't mention that this funding is refundable, Salvo said. Wilson asid the lobbying efforts of NYPIRG made the students aware of this fact prior to voting.

The positive checkaft would automatically give $$ 3$ from each student's fee to NYPIRG or would increase the otudent fee by $$ 3$ to acommodate the NYPIRC comtribution.

This method would force NYPIRG to "spend a lot of staff time and money to solicit funds," Salvo said. He said that many first year atudents are not familiar with NYPLRG. The group would be required to provide information to these studenta.

U-Unite dating service helps boy meet girl

Dates - Every Roby wants them, but not everyone can find them.

Dating services can sometimes provide an answer to this problem. But who wants to pay $$ 100$ to be matched up with someone whose interests are similar but is only 5 feet tall and interests are similar but is only 5 feet tall and

Geraldine Hammill offers an alternative to this pot-luck approach of most dating services, this pot-luck a with U-Unite.

Hammill started her dating service in January 1978 because of her own loneliness after a divorce. "I didn't drink or like to socialize very much and there wasn't any other outlet available to meet people," she said. "I started my dating service because I thought there must be many other people in the world like myself."
Setting up a date at U-Unite is a relatively simple and extremely inexpensive process. Prospective clients sit down with Hammill, who asks them 21 questions pertaining to their background and personal likes and dislikes. Hammill records the interviews and photographs each client. The photos are then placed in photo albums, separated by gender and sub-divided by age groups.

All clients have the opportunity to make an appointment tolook at pictures of other perspecappointment totorat pictures of other perspective dates. After finding one that appeals to them, they listen to the tape of that person's interview. 'Surprisingly enough, quite often when he (the client) hears the tape, he'll change his mind," Hammill said.

If the client wishes to set up a date with that person, Hammill will then reverse the process of the tape and picture screening. The latter person has the right to refuse a date, all reasons kept confidential.
If both clients agree to the date, Hammill gives the male partner the female's name and telephone number. From then on, he must take the initiative to set up the date.
"As you can see," Harmmill said," "I don't do the matching, they do the picking."

Currently, U-Unite has 350 members. Not only is there the advantage of picking your own date, but at only $$ 10$ to join and $$ 10$ for every date, it offers economic advantages over higher priced dating services.

Many of Hammill's elients are professionals, ranging in age from 20 to 80 years old. "Themajority of them are business people who don't have time to socialize," she said. "They are people who don't usually drink or are too tired to deal with over-crowded bar scenes after working all day."
Hammill takes a personal interestin all of her clients which is one reason U-Unite is such a unique service.

Hammill has been extremély successful in her business venture. Although she currently serves only local people and university students, she plans to start selling franchises soon. Future plana also include a special file for handicapped people.

Three couples U-Unite has brought together have married, and 25 percent are "going steady."

According to Hammill, the largest problem is the lack of younger girls, ages 20-25. "I have all these really, good-looking, young men that have joined my dating service, but no young girls for them to go out with," she said.

for the book blues.

Greyhound's quick cure

The book blues. It's those sleepless nights with visions of exams, pop tests and required reading dancing through your head. They just wor't go away.

But you can... with Greyhound. Take off this weekend, visit your farnily, see your friends... just get out of town and leave the book blues behind. It doesn't cost much and it'll do you a world of good.

So, if you've got the book blues, get on a Greyhound and split. It's a quick cure for what ails you.

If you're coming home to the NewYork area for the summer, you quon't be far from a Fordham Summer Session.

Fordham University maintains three campuses in the New York metropolitan area.

- The Lincoln Center Campus is in the heart of Manhattan, one block west of the subways and buses at Columbus Circle.
- The Rose Hill Camptes is an 80-acre oasis of trees, grass and historic buildings in the north Bronx. It is two miles south of the Westchester border and has plenty of parking south of the West right on campuis.
- The Graduate Center in Tarrytown is located on the campus of Marymount College in Westchester connty. Available Courses
Our Summer Session Bulletin lists over 300 undergraduate and graduate courses as diverse as Economics, Organic Chemistry, Psychology of the Afro-American, Teaching Reading Through the Arts, Shakespeare, Intensive French for Graduate Students, and Statisties. If there\% a credit course you need, you'll probably find itihere.

Convenient Times and Dates
There are two summer sessions, one beginning in early June and the other in early July. Classes meet in the dayJune and the other in early July. Classes meet in the daytime or evening, and most are given three or four times a week for four weeks. Tuition is atill $$ 85$ per undergraduate week for four weeks. Tuition and $$ 100$ per graduate credit.

Michael Kranish

I had a vision the other night of myself receiving the piece of paper I have spent the last four years of my life pursuing. Indistinguishable from my 3,400 peers, I timoroualy take the diploma like some atreet muaician accepting a quarter tossed into his guitar cabe.
My tassel is swinging in the breeze obscuring my vision. For just a fleeting second there is confusion as Itry to brush the strings away from my misting eyes, and for that second my vision is as clouded as my future.

But after the sight of thousands of beaming students and parents become visible once again, Iam already off the stage and a pretty usher with fading mascara whispers in my ear, "No, no. You're going the wrong way." It will be the last time someonegives me directions for a long time. But I am lost in the dizzying mass of graduates, and I weave back and forth as my tassel had a few moments before.

I find my way back to a group of friends, some of whom will remember to write Christmas cards, and gingerly slide my cap off, removing the protection of collegiate status forever along with it. My head is cold.

The friends smile to themselves and inevitably wonder how the time went so fast, but variously concede that they learned a lot, learned nothing didn't care in the first place, but hey, we had a good time, didn't we?

And there's always those going on, on and on for more schooling. Graduiate school, medical school, seminary seclusion, infinite perversion. Some will go on to be world leaders; others will go on to discover a better way to dice onions. Some will fill their father's shoes, or try to, and some will graduate only into the unemployment line. A civil gervant with a fading carcer will whisper in their ear, "this way please." Some will solemnly acquiesce, but one day, with a wife and one too many kids, some will scream in dignantly, "Which way? You show me the way but you give me no direction!

On this day all 3,400 are equal, but all studente do mot graduate equally. They have great differences in their visions, also. The artist sees it thiree times removed from reality (I have some friends like that), the jouranlist sees it as an anecdote and wonders What the lead will be, the photographer is gearching for the angle to show it's not just a graduation perhaps a baby crying in trick. Others variously view it as the end or beginthe trick. Others variously view't as the end or beginning of life. गThe rest who aren't sure go to graduate ning of school.

But our future will not be as finely woven as the Pierre Cardin suits we dig out to wear this day. We can't put the crises back in the closet. We have no chonce but to try to keep the edges from becomingito frayed.

Nothing particularly meritous has marked thit group of graduates. No suffering or hardship or fronted the generation en mastse. No one will eres wonder what happened to the children of the $N$
How much does that quarter in the guitiar e mean?

Not letting academics get in the way of education

Kevin Haynes

You can't always set what you want
But if you try sometimes
You just might find
You get what you need.
If Mick Jagger were an undergraduate guidance counselor, chances are that the above lines would be scrawled on the obligatory philosophical poster that adorns all counselors' offices.
And if he noticed that you seemed puzzled as to its relevance to college life, Jagger would probably rip open his shirt, shine the hot light of the nearest desk lamp into his twisted face and plead: don't let acadernics be your beast of burden.

That's pretty good advice, too, aince some of the most rewarding college experiences accur ontside the classroom. It may take considerable tirie and effort, but the only way to eacape four years of college with Your sanity and some meaingful growth both mentally and emotionally is by getting involved in nonacademic activities, which can range from working on campus publications to being in the senate.

The reasons for doing so should be obvious. Unfortunately, there aren"t any jobs in the "real world" for professional good grade-getters, but there are jobs for professional good srade-getters, but therearejobs for people who have made the grade in theirfield.
that requires more than a textbook intelligence.

If it accomplishes anything, college life whets the appetite for the outside world, the place where you no longer rely on studying to survive but, ingtead, learn to think and react to aimost any given aituation.

So, if you're awed by the awareness that a formal education can bring (but still strive to attain it), if you can learn to live comfortably in a small room with a perfect stranger, and if you expose yourseifith many different experiences as posaible duringyin four years, then college will have made you aflond person capable of coping with the unknown demen of an unsure future.
But if you constantly bury yourself in texthoolst on the other extreme, spend four years majoind social drug absue, then you haven't taken'ffild vantage of what college has to offer.
It's not that academics aren't important; it't: that there are other aspects of college life, ${ }^{\text {fo }}$ that there are other aspects of college should be of no leas than equal concern.

Those students who ace able to mix ach it business with collegiate pleasure in a reaboni' proportion may find that they didn'tgetall thay from everything college han to offer. But theive their versatility they've got what they nged to Take it from Mick.

Emerging from a long tunnel

John H. Sturgis

Five years ago this month, I was notified that I was accepted at an upstate New York "tunnel." Being from Massachusetts, all I knew at the time was that New York was one gigantic megalopolis. Surely, I thought, skyscrapers fill every acre in this far-away land. I was glad that I would spend the next few years in a tunnel.
I had never visited this tunnel before Septermber 1974. My impression of New York changed drastically as my parents and I drove through Albany, stopped for lunchin Utica, and approached a maze of stopped for lunchin Utica, and approached amaze of highways, bridges, and buildings. Where is the hignwel, I thought. My eyes peered from the windows in anticipation.

After having been made aware that there was a difference between New York City and upstate New York (I could tell when I took a deep breath somewhere past Albany and the pleasant scent of cow manure overcame my senses), I was in a quandary. Total confusion. . perplexity... severe dilemma. I no longer knew what to expect. ma. I no longer knew what to expect
This particular tunnel was called "Syracuse University." Soon after my arrival, when my pairents had left, I turned to face the tunnel's entrance. The doors opened, I.walked inside, the doors closed and the tunnel fell into darkness. It was the dead of night When all you can see is that which is immediately in front of your face.

It was not until almost two years later that there was any light at the end of the tunnel, and it was still very dim.

Kight now, however, the sun't rays have almost eliminated all the shadows which surrounded me. After one or two amall steps, I will have emerged com pletely from the tunnel. And, daman it, it feels great!

There remain many remembrances from my five years in the SU tunnel. I remember feeling totally lost during my first few days here. Living in Lawxinson, was told to pick up my linen at Marion. Who the hel was Marion? After finding out Marion was a dorm. set out to find the place. I found it and then had trouble getting back to Lawrinson. It was really dark in that tumnel.
The frustration of those first few days . is symbolized by the registration process. No student, freahman or otherwise, thould have to go through the present form of course sigi-up. Other twanels, even large ones, find other methods to select the courses one wants. Mail registration is one way, for example.
The first person I remember meeting was my roornmate. Paul was a sophomore at the time. Rooming with someone who had been through the freshman experience before me-was an invaluable help. I peppered him with questions beginning day one. As it turned out, he also became a great friend. We roomed together for three years. He took a year off after graduation and is back at SU attending grad school.

The friends from freshmen again.
be the friends from freshman year have turned out to be the strongest. One recently, celebrated his second wedding annivarsary - hemarried during our junior year.
A few days ago, I received a card from another good friend who transferred to, zwest coast school after our first year was over. He was Los Angeles through and through and never could adjust to the Syracuse climate. After it snowed October 2,1974 , I should climate. After it snowed October 2, 1974, I should have known he would leave. A three-inch, two-hour especially having been here for only onemonth at the time.

After that first year was over, I began to question the value of a formal education. Was it necessary to fight throweh forr years of college, obtain a degrese and then look for a job? A few guest speakertind Newhouge course I took suggested otherwiteit equally effective to move into the lowest range ding ding college, they said.

it made sense to me, if one knew what ont चhm thought to myself that if I could do it all over (that is, my freshman year), I would have gorit other route.

This realization began the destruction of tién that college is the real world. It is, instead, a tuns one notch below the "real world." Besides educt" (ideally) the young people of the country, collegs, people. Should all college students enter thet force en masse, the economy would be pushed tif. breaking point.
College is not a microcosm of the society asa ${ }^{\text {an }}$ As long as it is not perceived as such, it is 3 thwhile learning experience. The reality, it eower me, is that a college education is indeed of great 1 After travelling through the SU tunnel years, I decided to take a detour.
