"Newness is always a little scary. At least it is for me," he said. "Here we are perhaps feeling a bit uncomfortable searching for the right buildings, feeling as though we look brand new, different, awkward even.
${ }^{4}$ I understand. How do you think I feel? Standing up here looking like an overgrown orange," he said, referring to his orange ceremonial robe. "But it's a great color. I'm already full of orange pride."

It's big and it's good
As he admitted the new students, Shaw urged them to take advantage of the choices and ideas that flourish at a large research university.
"Yes, we are big," he said. "And that's good for you. In this place you will come to know people literally from every corner of the world.
"You'll lunch in the Schine Center with someone from your hometown along with a student from the plains of Kenya." Students should "seek out opportuniclassroom and throughout life.

He cited work study programs, internships and the Division of International Programs Abroad as valuable resources that enable students to use their "energy and enthusiasm to advance the public good."
"We want to help you not only strengthen your desire to help others, but to teach you how to do it - to give you the skills to be helpful to others.
He told the students to assume responsibility for theirexperiences; get involved experiment with thoughts and attitudes; have a good time and keep in touch with families.
"Stay in touch with your family." he said. "Think about them from time to time, call occasionally, and write as often as you can. Not just when you want to dump a problem on them - but If you see a lone figure trudging through the snow from the chancellor's residence to the Tolley Administration Building early one morning this winter. chances are it will be Kenneth A. Shaw.

"I might not be going by car (to the office),"Syracuse University's new chancellor said in an interview this summer. "I'm used to winter. It's altogether likely that I'll Walk.
"One of the things that walking around does is it gives you a chance to see and talk to people that you never see."

Shaw left his post as president of the University of Wisconsin system to become SU's 10th chancellor Aug. 20th. Chancellor Emeritus Melvin A. Eggers retired to an office in Bird Library.
Shaw was not planning to spend the summer moving to a different state. One daughter got married, and his other daughter and son moved to different states as well.
Shaw spent a June visit walking the grounds and getting familiar with the buildings, and spent three days in July talking with university leaders.
"I talked with key staff, faculty and students," he said. "I would guess I spoke to a minimum of 40 people.

Shaw also spent eight hours talking with Eggers.

he said. "Less revenue means that some very difficult decisions will have to be made and priorities have to be set.
"My greatest goal will be to confront (SU's) financial challenges in a way that enhances its basic values."

Though isolation is a problem that faces every chancellor, Shaw said he hopes to be highly visible this semester though he has not yet developed a specific program.
"You don't, by design, find yourself isolated from the people you're trying to serve, but all of the pressures impinge on you," he said.
"One of the things I'll try to do is structure some time to make myself available to the students," Shaw said. available will be opportunities for students to interact on a formal or informal basis."

Though there will be adjustments, Shaw says he is ready for the challenge.
"I like change and I welcome it." he said. "One of the big attractions was and is that I will have more time to focus my energies in one place and to see the effects of my labors in a more direct sense than you see when you're serving 160,000 students and 27,000 emplovees.

A university should be the kind of place that is always challenging beliefs, Shaw said.
"A good university should surprise you about every six weeks," Shaw said.

Freshmen party at SU's Playfair  By OMAR ALI

DO Editors
The chant. "SU, SU, SU," resounded and echoed off the Carrier Dome as students high-fived, shook hands and ran through lines of other students at Sun. day night's Playfair

By packing 2,500 strangers together and having them dance back-to-back; sit on each others knees and arranging groups with such common denominators as birthdays, the event promised new students would meet 100 people in two hours.

The idea is to get as many people possible to meet as many people possible a time as possible." Valentino, a facilitator from Playfair tnc.

That was the object of Syracuse Uni versity's fourth annual Play fair, for fresh man and transfer students at SU and the State University College of Environ mental Science and Forestry Lines of students descended the stairs inside the Dome, where students were greeted by other students cheering, shout ing, chanting and dancing.

Awkward smiles and looks of disbelier engulfed rnany faces, but once students stepped onto the turf, many joined the party.
Valentino told the group, "The only thing you need to know is that we're going to have an outrageous time.
Phillip Tufi, a Russian studies major from Eureka, Calif., had never seen anything like Playfair.
"I'm having a great time," Tufi said. "It's a great icebreaker and a fun way to meet people.

Freshrnan engineering major Jennifer Sharot from Brentwood, N.Y., agreed.
"It's pretty organized and a lot of fun," Sharot said as she stood in a circle with strangers.
As Valentino shouted instructions from a make-shift stage, Sharot proceeded to sit on the knees of a classmate while someone sat upon her knees. The while someone sat upon her knees. The object

According to Barbara Baker, director of the Office of Residence Life, Playfair was included four years ago as part of a reorganized orientation program for incoming freshmen and transfer students.

It provides a non-competitive atmos phere for new students to meet and make connections," Baker said. "We urge students to attend the orientation picnic then come to Playfair, where they can get to know each other better."

Senior Melissa Marroso, an orienta tion adviser and management major from Dearborn Keights, Mich., regrets not having Playfair during her freshman orientation.
"Playfair was rained out during my freshman orientation since it was held outdoors at that time," she said. "It's been in the Dome ever since."

Shaw must define issues

If first impressions leave lasting ideas, one has to wonder what goes on in Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw's mind.

His first impression of the university was students bombarding him with angry questions. Shaw, new to the campus, could make no real statements, but expressed an interest in getting to know students and their perceptions of the university.
He received an earful. Students fired expectations, telling Shaw he needs to take definitive stances on homophobia, sexual assault and racism. He should strive to make the university culturally integrated. He should determine how to appease students when inevitable tuition hikes ## hit are announced.

Though Shaw has only visited the campus briefly, he knows the mess former Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers left in his wake will be difficult to repair. In fact, the obstacles he will encounter as he picks up Eggers' slack might make his old job as the leader of the University of Wisconsin's public system seem like a piece of cake.

Perhaps Shaw's experience in Wisconsin will aid him in his effort to set SU back on its rails. We hope so.

If identifying a problem is the first step in solving it, Shaw takes a wise approach to ironing out the breadth of problems facing him. The Daily Orange wishes him the best of luck in his endeavors.

Headlines reflect sentiment

Playfair marks the initiation of all "prospective students" to the status of "freshmen." Myths vary as to whether the turf on the surface of the Dome instills the change or if meeting your "first hundred friends" actually does the trick.
As upperclassmen might have found, the people you actually meet at Playfair tend to dissolve into the woodwork, overcome by

The attempt is admirabe. Playfair offers every opportunity to create lasting friendships or relationships. but usually is remembered onl

There are, however, things students will encounter repeatedly on this large campus, no matter how long they stay at SU, courtesy of Your Favorite Student Group, or us here at The Daily Orange. Take note. There is no doubt you'll be hearing about these issues again.

The Administration: There will be shoes of debatable size to fill as the Shaw Administration enters the SU arena. Freshmen will know only the new administration, making them its best critics. Students rejoining the SU community might tend to compare Shaw to the previous administration, which would be a mistake. The tail end of the previous administration was understandably not as powerful as it was in its first stages., making comparisons unfounded.
SGA and the Activity Fee: More politics. The Student Government Association has the unStudiable task of allotting each student's yearly antivity fee. This often creates fireworks among SGA, the students and the student groups. SGA, the students and the student groups.
Since the total pot is based on student Since the total pot is based on student Biue Lights: This is a test. This year will be the test of the emergency blue light system. Since their installation in 1990, the blue lights, which are meant to stop rape before it happens, have generated controversy simply by being there. Their simplicity has been abused and fostered false alarms around the campus.

This is, however, only a test. Their usefulness has yet to be proven but their message to rapists and to women all over Syracuse is a positive and clear one.
Registration: It all begins when the green slips appear in students' mailboxes, showing registration date and time. Usually the assignments are based on class standing (sophomore, unior, etc.) and the student's previous registration date. Demons ike tuition payments, overdue library books and other outstanding

Some schools offer phone registration as an option. SU's size and the number of classes offered might hinder any efforts in that direction. However, the system is frustrating and could stand improvement.

And the list could go on. Of course, there will be another tuition increase. Students will also have to increase their environmental awareness as scientists discover more ways humansare desecrating the Eart will continue to be hotly debated on college campuses as many universities develop student codes of conduct, much like the one here at SU.

Phone call threatens

To the editor:
On Friday morning, the Women's Studies Program office manager, as usual, took messages off our program answering machine and then called me at home to alert me to one directed specifically to me. She had only been able to listen to the first sentence of this message, which detailed various sexual acts the caller proposed engaging in with me. People getting similar phone calls (or contemplating making them) should know that such phone calls are Class A misdemeanors under the New York State Penal Code. I quote from Article 240, Section 30 (Aggravated harassment in th second degree): "A person is second degree): "A pe

In other words, such harassment will not be considered "just joking. Of course we all understand that the caller was not really asking me for a date, that such calls have far more to do with "showing" women that the caller can do as he pleases. But since I have lately been accused of "advocating censorship" (among other things), I wonder if this is the level of discourse that needs level of discourse that needs
On Sunday, the city newspaper ran a lengthy feature article on sexual harassment, including the lead editorial titled, "An Affront to Common Decency." Later Sunday, a friend of mine, after retelling her own recent, dreary experiences with such calls, suggested that we collect a list of women's favorite retorts to obscene phone calls - either things you were glad you said back. or wish you had said. So if you have any you would like to share, send them along to me here at 307 Hall of Languages, and we'll find a way to collate them and make them available. Or maybe The Daily Orange would find it a service to its readers.

McDonald said that the shirts were sold to both the fraternity's members and the public at April's Block Party.
No formal response by $S U$
Although the SU administration did not take formal action against the fraternity, the fraternity's national headquarters investigated the chapter

The national chapter suspended 54 SU members in June. That number was reduced to 47 after several brothers graduated. Mernbers were required to appeal in writing or in person by July 15.

Of the 47 members affected, 25 were reinstated, two have been suspended pending an October hearing with the national chapter and two have been-placed on alumni status, said David Hotz, a leadership counselor with the fraternity's national chapter.

SU's Greek Council is also investigating the chapter and will be holding a hearing Sept. 10.

Eleven members will be living in the Alpha Chi Rho house this semester. The remaining 18 have been expelled from the fraternity.

National takes action

We hope people realize that we took large-scale action," Hotz said. "This was not a dog-and-pony show." Reinstaternent was based on letters written to the national chapter. Members had to apologize for the T-shirts and agree to criteria set for them by the national, including upholding the fraternity's landmarks -moral standards - and following budget guidelines.
The chapter also plans to print an apology in The Daily Orange.
Though the university administration condemned the fraternity for the T-shirts, no action was taken by SU against Alpha Chi Rho.

Syracuse University condernns unequivocally ... the behavior in late spring that included the manufacture, distribution and wearing of homophobic and threatening T-shirts by some members of Alpha Chi Rho fraternity," said Dean of Student Affairs Edward J. Golden in a letter distributed to students.
However, the university judicial board had no case against Alpha Chi Rho, Golden said.
'Didn't breach the peace'
A complaint undergoes several tests when a judicial complaint is filed, and the T-shirt complaint did not pass all of them, Golden said.

Though the ' $\mathbf{T}$-shirts were seen around the campus. they did not specifically threaten anyone or name names, Golden said
The shirts also did not cause an immediate breach of the peace, Golden added.
"It didn't pass the clear and present danger test," he said.

This T-shirt sparked an investigation and eventual suspension of 47 members of Alpha Chi Rho fraternity.

However, students should have their own ethical and moral standards and not simply abide by the student code, he said.
"Just because it's not illegal doesn't mean it's the right ining to to," he said.

Alpha Chi Rho will be required to sponsor an in-house workshop dealing with homophobia, Hotz said.

The fraternity was considering a program that has been used by SU security, as well as videos suggested by GLBSA's McDonald and Nancy Rhodes of the Women's Studies Department.
"I will also be visiting the fraternity once a month," Hotz added.

On Aug. 8, the national chapter revised its pledge to read: "I will not tolerate sexual harassment based on gender or sexual orientation." The pledge is read when members are sworn into the fraternity.
It's safe to say that was added because of this controversy," Hotz said.

Mixed feelings from CiEBSA
Though GLBSA leaders said they were pleased with the national chapter's actions, they were angered by the university administration's summer-long silence on the issue.
"What the national is doing is really good," MeDonald said. "It (the sensitivity program) is a definite gateway for change into the greek system.
"My major concern is the people who fell through the cracks." he said.

He fears those expelled from the fraternity will hold resentment toward GLBSA.
SU has a responsibility to provide an atmosphere in which students can learn, he said.
"Frankly, I don't feel too safe here," McDonald said. "The code of conduct is far too general to provide safety to any student on campus.
"The code basically says you can get away with wearing shirts that say 'rape women." lynch niggers' and club faggots.
The administration has control over the physical aspects of the campus but can't even enforce its own policies, said GLBSA Treasurer Bill Taroli.
"They do so much with changing the campus through construction, but simply enforcing their own policies seems impossible." Taroli said.

Homophobic T-shirts produced by the Alpha Chi Rho fraternity spurred a Greek Council and national chapter investigation and drew the attention of naand drew the attention of

The shirts were sold to both fraternity members and the public during April's Block Party, according to a judicial compiaint filed May 2 by Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Student Association Co-president Charlie McDonald.
The complaint charged the shirts violated Section 2 of the Code of.Student Conduct, which prohibited written harassment.
The T-shirts received publicity in The New York Times and The Nation magazine, as well as Outweek and New York Native, two publications that target the gay community
Chapter President Richard Kizik said the fraternity did not condone wearing the T-shirts and the university condemned the fraternity for its actions in a letter last week.
However, Outweek and New York Native denounced both the fraternity and the university administration.
'Upset a lot of people'
"The shirts have upset a lot of people," said David Hotz. a leadership counselor at the fraleadership counselor at the fraternity's national headquarters. the fraternity as a whole that produced the shirts, not enough members condemned those wear ing them."

 of the coup leaders and refusing to relinquish the democratic rights to which they had become accustomed.

Tens of thousands filled the streets of Moscow, ignoring the state of emergency. They sur rounded the Russian Parlia ment in an effort to protect Boris Yeltsin, president of the Russian Federation.

Yeltsin was a symbol of freedom and democracy to the Soviet people.

About 200,000 people gathered in Leningrad in an effort to back their reformist mayor Anatoly Sobchak.
In Moldavia, 400,000 people gathered to protest the hardline government.

In the Soviet Far Narth, coal miners walked off the job in a show of support.

As quickly as they had seized power, the coup leaders found themselves in a losing battle against the will of the people.

Gorbachev returned to Moscow and reassumed power, yet many questions about the future of the Soviet Union remain unanm swered.
"I think we have to think of the long-range objectives of the Soviet Union," said Syracuse University professor Goodwin Cooke.
Cook
Cooke, also a former U.S ambassador. believes President Bush would like to see the Soviet Union remain a union because this would allow for smoother diplomatic relations between the United States and the USSR.
"What statespeople hate most is instability," he said.

The future of Gorbachev and Soviet reform is now a very cloudy picture, Cooke said.

How far?
"The question now is how far will Gorbachev allow the decentralizers to act," he said. While the hard-liners, or centralists, wanted to concentrate power in the hands of a strong central government, decentralist forces are pushing for more political and economic reform, Cooke said.

Gorbachev, who had tried to act an a fulcrum between the two major forces in government. now owes nothing to the conservatives in the Soviet Union, Cooke said.
"Gorbachev apparently felt that he had to balance the various trends in the Soviet various trends in This position falled because Gorbachev was uriable to satisfy either side, he said.

They tried to kick him out. He does not need to placate them (any longer)," he said.

Gorbachev owes a lot to the reformist forces for their actions during the coup, mainly Yeltsin and others calling for decentralization. Since he has quieted the hard-liners. reform in the USSR should move faster Cooke said.

If Gorbachev is not prepared to move faster toward reform. there could be still more probthere could be still more problems said. If Gorbachev can't hack it, if there's further disillusionment within. (reformers) will probably find another head to lead the Soviet Union." Cooke said.

"We don't know whether or not Gorbachev can last," he said. The Soviet leader is presented with a paradox, Cooke said.

Gorbachev can maintain limited power in the Soviet Union, provided he is prepared to cede some power to regional and provincial governments, Cooke said.
"He can stay in power as long as he is willing to give away some power," he said.

The uncertain future

SU political science professor Stuart Thorson acknowledged three main areas of concern within the Soviet Union - the relationship between the central government and the republies, economic problems and ethics, economic
"Nothine
Nothing has happened that's going to make (the ethnic problems) go away right now," Thoron said.

As far as government control in the Soviet Union is concerned, the debates will be similar to those in the early days of the United States, he said.

The role of the central government, as well as the role of the states, will be frequently discussed, he said.
"How it resolves itself will be unclear ... if it resolves itself he said.

Cooke also said the United States needs a clearer picture of the Soviet privatization process before large amounts of aid are allocated.
-Until we know the plan. it is unwise to shower money on them." he said.
"My position is that aid in the form of cash couldn't do much good." Cooke said Free money would create a stagnant economy, hee explained. For example, if the United States supplies free food, the Soviets would not buy food from their farmers, thus undermining the reform process in the Soviet Union.
"Investment might be a way," he said.
"Change will happen more quickly. The question is what dimension change will happen along," said SU assistent proessor of economics Douglas Nelsan.

Change can happen along two dimensions - economic and political, he said.
"The two don't have to go together." Nelson said.

The coup leaders were more concerned with preventing political reform, while the decentralists pushed for greater economic and political reforms, he aid.
Nelson alluded to the liberal political and economic system of Poland. He commented on how to overcome some of the econornic problems both nations face.
"What Poland and the Soviet Union need is not a lot of aid, but the right to trade freely," he said. "The more they're integrated into the system, the more talk about domestic liberalization makes sense
However, the Soviet Union is unstable, which makes foreign investment improbable and risky, he said.

There has to be some stability." Nelson said.
"Is there even going to be a Soviet Union?" he asked. "Before we know that. committing resources is stupid and it doe:sn't lead to anything good."

What it does is lead to opportunities for corruption." hesaid

Syria's Assad toys with U.S. to achieve goals

In early August, Syrian President Hafez Assad granted an interview to The Washington Post. During the course of the interview, the Syrian dictator discussed President Bush and the Middle East peace process. JOSEPH The Post BURTON believes"he BELL NEWS ANALYSIS tlements in the occupied territories. the greatest obstacle to peace in the region.

Uneven standards
Jeanne Kirkpatrick writes, Unlike most previous admini strations, Bush and Baker do not seem to be moved by the notion that Israel deserves compensation for the three wars launched against her. The administration does not seem to apply to Israel the principal it applies to Kuwait - that victims of aggression deserve compensation and apgressors deserve punishment."
In his book Modern Dictator, Barry Rubin of Johns Hopkins University notes that Syria has used terrorism" more effectively and with less risk than the other major purveyors of international terrorism.

Entering Lebanon in 1975, the Syrian military easily outmatched the various militias that were engaged in a civil war. Rubin points out that Assad realized the situation in Lebanon was complicated and -the country was too fragmented to permit total Syrian contral to permit total Syrian control except at a very high cost." Through alliances and timidation, Rubin wrote, Assad played the various Lebanese factions off of one another. He asserts, "Christian, Druze or Sunni and Shite Muslim groups were subsidized or punished dependirig on Syria's immediate goals."
Rubi

Rubin notes the " most important use of Syrian-sponsored terrorism within Lebanon was to force the withdrawal of Israeli troops and U.S. Marines. At the least, the Isslamic fundamentalist suicide bombers who attacked the U.S. forces and embassy in 1982 and 1983 were allowed a free hand to train and mount their operations through Syrian-held territory."
Hostage as bargaining chips
American hostages were taken and held in areas under Syrian control. "Despite the anarchic conditions in Lebanon," wrote Rubin, "it would have been impossible for these operations to have been mounted without Syrian knowledge and assistance.

In exchange for siding with the U.N. coalition during the Persian Gulf War, the United States has looked the other way on Syrian activities in Lebanon while Saudi Arabiagave Darnascus, the Syrian capital, $$ 2$ billion dollars. The money was spent on Scud and M-9 surface-to surface missiles and taniss.

Writing in The National Review, J.B. Kelly noted the fact that Syrian contributions "to the coalition would prove worth less, as events subsequently confirmed, never seemed to occur to the secretary of state." Kelly wrote that one month after the Baker-Assad meeting in September 1990, "Assad's army crushed the last remaining Lebanese resistance to Syrian domi nation by destroying the Chris tian forces of General Michel Anan."

A month later, gunmen under Syrian direction murdered the son of former Lebanese president, Dany Chamoun. Chamoun's wife and two children were also killed.
"Such is the man," concludes Kelly, "whom James Baker is making the pivotal figure in his grand design toresolve the Arab-Hussein had been made the favored protagonist in the State Department's strategy, to con tain Iran."

Land of peace?
During a speech on March 6, President Bush said, "We've learned in the modern age. geography cannot guarantee security." This might have been a direct statement to Israel that the occupied territories were useless in the face of Arab missile capability. Thus, the notion of land for peace makes sense.

Dore Gold of the Jaffee Center for Strategic Studies at Tel Aviv University argues that Israel views the situation differ ently.
In the Aug. 26 issue of The National Review, Gold writes. "The basic question is whether conventional warfare is still decisive in determining the ulti mate security of nations or whether new push-button mis: sile exchanges are equally deci sile e.

Charges against Kirkaldy likely to be dropped

DO Stalf Reports

A videotape uncovered by a special private investigator played a major role in clearing a former Syracuse University basketball recruit from sexual assault charges.

Wilfred Kirkaldy, 19, will be unburdened of a pending sexual abuse charge in six months if no other trouble results, County Judge J. Kevin Mulroy said in court July 15. Kirkaldy had been accused of raping an 18 -year-old woman during a recruiting visit to the $S U$ campus in September.

The videotape, discovered by investigator Joseph Spadafore, provided newdamagingevidence which destroyed the credibility of the alleged victim, Mulroy said.
"This evidence is so damning that in the court's opinion, it removes the label of victim' from the individual," he said.

In the videotape, made one week before Kirkaldy's visit to SU, the woman talks of past sexual experiences and her desire to have sex with black sire to have sex with black athletes, a source familiar with Standard in July. She describes an episode in which she had sex with a University of Connecticut basketball player.

The woman was also taped relaying a story of how she deprived a man of having intercourse after allowing him to perform oral sex on her. She laughed as she recounted the situation, the source said.

Kirkaldy told police in September that he thought the wornan was "one of the ball team groupies -the girls who hang out with the players and do whatever they want.'

The alleged victim charged Kirkaldy with forcibly trying to have intercourse with her. deapite her negations, after she consented to oral sex. The alleged incident took place on Sept. 22 in the Sheraton Universityinn.
Kirkaldy rejected a guilty plea in April and was sentenced to five years probation. His trial was scheduled for July 22.
"1 have maintained my innocence since my arrest and believe that the outcome here today new shows once and for all that I am innocent." Kirkaldy said in a prepared statement released in July.
When the charges were origimally brought against Kirkaldy, he was expelled from a prepara* tory school in Virginia. He was then denied entrance into two more schools before enrolling in a prep school in the Philadelphia area.

Some colleges which were strongiy recruiting the 6-foot10 center from Brookiyn lost interest, Kirkaldy's attorney Donald Martin said.
Kirkaldy will attend West Virginia University this fall

Uneven armies

lsrael maintains a small standing army that depends upon the call-up of reservists to bring it to full potency. Its Arab. neighbors have large standing armies and Gold points out, "The period of Israel's highest vulnerability is when the standing army must hold off a numerically superior attick, and the reserve call-up is under way.

A geographically advantageous line of defense is critical at this juncture.

The point is raised that Israel has returned the Sinai to Egypt and has not sacrificed security. "Peace with Egypt," writes Gold. "gave Israel 120 miles of demilitarization and warning time mhita Isracl's arid southern bor der."

A mere 34 miles is involved in the West Bank and less in the Golan Heights. Gold concludes, "The Golan ... contains the water sources of the Jordan River, which the Syrians actually attempted to divert in the early 1960 s ."

Assad appears certain the United States will force Isrmel to yield the Golan Heights

Kirkpatriek writes it would be ironic if at "the time when Israel's most dedicated adver saries are weakened. the U.S government squeezes from the Hebrew state concessions that three Arab wars, decades of terrorism and three years of the intifadn could not wring from them"* Kirkpatrick warns "A thern." Kirkpatrick warns, "A settlement emerging under these circumstances will likely strengthen the regions mos dynamic dictator and weaken its only dernocracy. while also leaving Israel's borders less secure.

This summer, I worked for a federal agency in Washington,

1 reported to the federal office and was shown to my cubicle where I was left to do nothing. No explanation of my job or what the office did came forth. To this day, I still don't know what one of my bosses does during the infrequent times he's actually in the building. I was introduced to the workers in the office, including an analyst named Audrey who, I would soon discover, was one of the few employees in the office

Abstract

A Sigma Chi alumnus from Case Western Reserve University is now helping organize the greek system and other student activities at Syracuse University.

Al Page is the new associate director of leadership in student organizations for Student Programs, the university department that deals with student activities.

Page carne to SU from Rutgers University where he was the associate dean of greek affairs, a job he left in July. He says he chose to come to SU because he was offered a good position, and he wanted to get back to a private university. "The position is working with leadership and programming.

and I'm a big programming person," he said. "Also, public universities lack the sense of community I like," Page gaid Syracuse area "It's ikes the sized town with lots to do and less hustle and bustle than big cities," he said. "I like a big city, only if 1 can drive away from it." However, he quickly adds that he could live in his hometown, Cleveland, forever.

he resource person

Page said he will be the resource person for student organizations, helping them work effectively and set goals.
"We want them to be thinking of the future, not just now," he said.
our arent Programs handles system, student organizations, leadership and programming. He said he hopes the department will get the greek system back to basics, making it more effective with a more productive evaluation process, increasing positive communityactivitiesand increasing knowledge of issues.

For student organizations, he said his main goal is to broaden university awareness of the number of diverse groups available. As for leadership, he said, the goals are to develop skills and style for student leaders.
He said programming will use conferences and workshops to enlighten students about multicultural issues.
Page said the goals of Student Programs as a whole will dent Programs as a whole will include: recruiting more students into organizations, establishing a university community ramework, forming a leadership community, increasing faculty participation in student activities, promoting knowledge of organizations, recognizing students who excel in organizations, recognizing the diverse university community and creating a leadership resource center.

With this in mind, I was forced to put the woman on hold while' I went to inquire about how she could get the help she needed.

So I headed back to the secretary's desk. When I came around the corner. the secretary was hanging up the phone.
"I transferred her to the front office," the secretary said. "We don't deal with that here."

Campbell said additional student seating for football games has been opened up since the SU band has been moved to sit in the endzone.
"There are some great seats available," he said. "But I don't know if any of those are still lef."

Sept. 11 due date for basketball
Applications for basketball season tickets are due Sept. 11 , just four days after football season kicks off.
Forms for the lottery are available at the box office and the Schine Student Center.
Basketball ticket packages cost $$ 67$ for 12 games or $$ 73$ for 13.

Disappointed with the knowledge that this poor woman was now being transferred from office to office, I returned to tell Audrey and Bob that I didn't need the number anymore.
"I'm glad you do feel badly," Bob said. "But there are times we can't help."

Ready to leave

By the end of the summer, all the temporary hires were ready to return to college and escape the bureaucratic bungling of our workplace. None of us felt we had learned anything, except that we don't want careers in the government. This is quite sad, because the government needs an injection of energy from college graduates who believe in doing work while they're at the office.

Perhaps a realistic goal for the government would be to hire the game optional.

The lottery is based on class standing, Campbell said, with seniors receiving highest rank ing.

Last year more than 3,500 students bought football season tickets and about 4,000 bought basketball.
"I hope we do more than hat." he said. "University stu dents are our most vocal fans dents are our most vocal fans. The teams love to hear their cheers."

Professional basketball will also grace the Dome's court when former SU great Derrick Coleman returns with the New Jersey Nets for an NBA exhibition game against the Philadelphia 76'ers.

managers who manage and don't allow their staff to run amok. Maybe instead of making 10 copies of something that only six people will read, they could make four copies that could be passed along And just maybe passed along. And just maybe away 100 reports just because away 100 reports just because they had yesterday's date instead of today's.

I'm sure that not all government agencies are as inefficient ment agencies are as inefficient and unproductive as my office And I know there have to be more good workers besides Audrey.

But I still worry about the future and how the government plans to deal with its evergrowing bureaucratic body and alleviate the problems I've en countered. Unfortunately, our government is probably unaware that any proolems exist.

VOLPE NAILS are custom sculptured acrylic nails found exclusively at Volpe Nails salons. OSHA tested, the Volpe Nails product will not cause damage to the natural nail. They are non-toxic, therapeutic and are custom applied to suit the needs of each individual client with the end result being their own healthy natural attractive nails.

THE DIFFERENCE AT VOLPE ...We do not use glue or tips, the entire nail is $100 \%$ sculptured acrylic. Every nail technician has gone through extensive training and education. Technicians are trained to service a wide range of customers, from the most therapeutic (a bad nail biter) to the extreme cosmetic. Nail biters can consist of $40 \%-60 \%$ of our clientele. The average Fill-in appointment is every $3-4$ weeks as opposed to the national average of 2 weeks. With porper maintenance Volpe Nails will not lift.

STRICT SANITARY CONTROLS...
We use a Hospital Grade disinfecting solution on our nail implements and a sanitizing solution on both the clients and technicians hands. Our sanitary procedures are of the highest standards to satisfy the concerns of todays client.

Orangewomen's backcourt

 grows with Michigan guard
By ROB GUYETTE

DO Editor
The Syracuse University women's basketball team has added depth to its backcourt for added depth $1991-92$ season with the signing of a 5 -foot- 4 guard from Michigan.
Parn Young, a four-year varsity player at Murray-Wright High School in Detroit, has committed to play with the Orange.
"We think she has great potential," said SU head eroach Barbara Jacobs. "She's real quick and has great hands.
Jacobs called Young a defen sive specialist and said she expects Young to make iminediate defensive contribution; to the team. improvement and will continue to work on her outsitle shooting.
"She's had real good coaching," Jacobs said. "It's going to take some time for her to become a scorer for us, but in a defensive capacity she should play right away."

Jacobs said Young will be able to blend in with SU's other guards - Erin Kenneally, Karen Zajick, Charie Crouse and Angel Lewis - and help create a fast-paced tempo in create $1991-92$.
"I like to have five guards, which we haven't had for the past few years," Jacobs said. "We've been a bit sparse in that area. We'd like to run and press a little bit more than we have."
The Orangewomen had only eight players on their roster at the end of last season and were forced to play at a slower pace.
"When you have only two or three guards it wears them out, and then they can't score, Jacobs said. "With a little more depth, hopefully we'll be able to run and press again."

Young did not start at Murray Wright, where she played as the third guard behind twins that accepted scholarahips as Cali accep ${ }^{\prime}$

She has a good attitude," Jacobs said. "She did the most with the time she got. She's a good student as well.".
This past season, Young's high school finished the season $20-1$, with the lone loss coming in the state championship game. "I think I can contribute a lot to the team," Young said.
The Orangewomen's other signee this year was Melayne Cromwell, a six-foot guard out of Wheaton (Md.) High School.

Cromwell is a versatile player who can play either guard position or small forward.
"With her size, she can be an impact player for us." Jacobs said.

But Towson State, which had rallied in its previous three playofr victories, got two goals rom John Blatchley and Glenn Smith to cut the deficit to 12-10 at the end of three quarters.
"We knew we weren't out of the game," Shek said. "All through the playoffs we thought we'd be able to pull it off. But they have a lot of depth. They ran us down."

North Carolina finished an impressive season in which they beat three-timedefending champion Syracuse twice, Final Four participant Maryland twice, No. 4 Johns Hopkins, No. 6 Virginia and all the others.
"I don't think there's much difference between us and the dwo other teams we played this wo other teams we played this weekend, a gracious kiarmann said. "It was just one of those years whin. We could have very easily not won those games."

Home Sweet Home

North Carolina junior midfielder Joe Bedell had a homecomines to remember.
Bedell, from Fayettevilie, a Buburb of Syracuse, had a careerhigh six points (three goals, three assists) against the Orangemen.
"It would be an understatement if 1 said it felt great," Bedell said. "To come home like this and beat Syracuse - Carolina has never done that. It's a great feeling.

Bedell added two more goals in the final.
Another Central New Yorker, Tar Heel Steve Speers, tied his career high with three goals against Syracuse. Maryland's Rob Wurburger who attended West Genesee High School in Syracuse had four soals and Syracuse, had four goais and 15-11 semifinal loss to Towins 15-11 semifinal loss to Towson State.
Marechek moving up
Syracuse's Tom Marechek had three goals against Carolina to finish the season with 53, fourth on the SU singleseason list. The junior from Victoria, British Columbia, has scored 135 goals in his career, already fourth on the all-time SU charts. Marechek is 57 goals shy of former SU plaver Gary Gail's all-time mark of 192 goals.

Golden Tar Heel
UNC's Dennis Goldstein, who scored four goals against the Orangemen, broke the Carolina record for goals in a season in the May 27 championship game.

Goldstein tallied four more goals against Towson State to finish the season with 47. Bert Fett (1974) held the old record with 43.
Towson State 15,
Maryland 11
In the second semifinal game, Towson State broke away from a 10-10 tie and got clutch fourthquarter goaltending from Richard Betcher in defeating Mary land 15 -11
Betcher made seven fourth quarter saves ( 15 for the game) atoning for a five-save performance when Maryland beat the Tigers 17-16 in March
"This was a big win for me," Betcher said. "A little redemp tion on my part.

At the start of the season I said we have a lot of kids that you don't know their name," Simmons said. "I told you it wouldn't be that way at the end, and it isn't."

Fin scored three goals and had one assist against North Carolina. Bettinger, who scored four goals during the regular season, also had three goals. Both received extra playing time because sophomore Jamie Archer. SU's second leading scorer, missed the game with mononucleosis.
"Everyone knew before the year started that wed be a young team and we'd be rebuilding," said SU freshman Charlie. Lockwood, who had three assists in the semi-final loss. "Now, everyone's coming back next year, and we will be a great team.
While losing an NCAA playoff game was a new and painful experience for every Orangeman, Fin said the loss will stay with those returning and provide motivation come next season.
"It was a great experience," Fin said. "It's going to make us hungrier. It'll make us try harder and make us do the extra 10 percent to make us champions again.

Graduate and undergraduate students who want to study aging-who plan a career working with or on behalf of older people, or who simply want to know what to look forward to in their own lives-can take courses about aging at the same time that they work toward their degree. Syracuse University's Gerontology Certificate is formal recognition of their studies in the field.

The Gerontology Certificate is awarded to matriculated students who complete 15 semester-hours of aging-related coursework, drawing on courses from a range of disciplines and professions. Students, with counsel from their home college and the Gerontology Center, can usually take courses that count both toward their degree and the Certificate. Non-matriculated students can also earn a Gerontology Certificate through University College.

Course requirements for the Certificate program are flexible. One core course of 3 credits is required, and a field placement or internship is strongly recommended. In addition, the Center encourages students and faculty to develop aging-related material and assignments within other courses by mutual agreement on an individual basis. To obtain credit toward the Certificate, such agreements must be approved in writing by the course instructor and the Gerontology Center in advance. The necessary form is available from the Center.

Students who have applied for the Certificate may request a compendium of all courses automaticall', accepted toward the Certificate and suggestions for adding aging-related emphasis to other courses.

Owens leaves SU for professional ranks

By ROB GUYETTE

DO Editor
Three years after making one of the most celebrated arrivals into the Syracuse University basketball program, Billy Owens threw his own going-away party. Owens, the 1991 Big East Player of the Year, ammounced his decision to forego his final season of eligibility and enter the NBA draft
The 6-foot-9 junior from Carlisle, Pa., was selected by the Sacramento Kings as the third pick in the first round on June 26.
" 1 feel I made the right decision for my family and for me," Owens said. "I know my family wants me to finish up my degree, and I want to finish. So I promised my family that I will come back to school and receive my degree

Owens' decision was not a surprise. Speculation pointed toward his leaving immediately afer the Orangemen lost to Richmond in the first round of the 1991 NCAA Tburnament.

I feel I've learned a lot. Owens said. "I feel Ive made my mark. In the summertime in the Goodwill Games and at the World Games I proved that I could play at the next level.

Owens was the United States' leading scorer at each competition. The first team AllAmerican averaged 23.2 points and 12.6 rebounds per game this season'in becoming the first player to ever average more than 20 points per game under coach Jim Boeheim.

Owens is the first Orangeman to leave early since Dwayne "Pearl" Washington lef after his junior season in 1986 .

He's a very difficult gay to say goodbye to because he's doneeverything we'veeverasked him to." Boeheim said. "We're going to miss him - his leadership more than anything else - but he's left some ideas of what needs to be done."

The internal investigation of alleged violations within the program, Owens said, had no bearing on his decision
"I doubt if we would go on probation," Owens said
Instead, be said the toughest aspect of his decision was leaving his fans, who have diligently sent Owens letters over the past month.
"If you could read some of the letters 1 got, you could understand how towzh the decision was," Owens said. "I know deep down that they're still my fans. I just want them to stick behind me. As long as they just turn on the Sports Channel once in on the Sports Channel once in while and watch me play Owens and Kenny Anderson in Georgia Tech were the top underclassmen to declare for the draft, Larry Johnson of UNLV, Steve Smith of Michigan State and Georgetowns Dikembe Mutombo were the top "TThe

The only player with a comparable talent to Billy is Luarry Johnson," Boeheim said prior to the draft. "They're both great players I think whoever gets either one is going to be very happy. (Billy's) position has moved upconsiderabiy thisyear, and I'd be shocked if he didn't goin the top three."
Owens said he expected and would have been content with - a place in the top five.
"Next year. I could be a sure spot for one or two but now, talking to other people they say Im in the top fife (this year)," Owenssaid.
"I'm not really in it for the money. My dream is to be an NBA basketball player and put on that uniform.
Yet, in these days of skyrocketing salaries, the money factor is unavoidable. "I'll be set for life if I manare my money right," Oweris.suid. My-Dod worked many jobs when we were growing up. and he kept us off the streets. I just want to return the favor to him and my mother .. Owens was joined at the press conference by his father, Bill Owens.

We're happy for Billy," Bill Owens said. "He had a dream that he wanted to play in the NBA, and it was my job to see that Billy got to play in the NBA. As a family we're very happy for him."

Owens,

DO Staff reports
A pair of Syracuse University Orangemen were drafted June 26th at Madison Square Garden - one lower than expected and one higher.

Billy Owens, who passed on his final year at $S U$ to enter the draft, was taken third by the Sacramento Kings. Owens, a first-team All-American and 1991 Big East Player of the Year, showed obvious disappointment at becoming a King and moving out to the West Coast.

Owens was declared the best player in the draft by several people in the Charlotte Hornets organization, which had the first pick. The Hornets, however, settled on Larry Johnson from the University of Nevada Las Vegas.

New Jersey held the second pick, and instead of uniting. with former SU teammate Derrick Coleman, the Nets LeRon Ellis, who greatly improved his draft position with postseason camp play, was selected in the 22nd pick of the first round by the Los Angeles Clippers.

chose New York City product Kenny Anderson of Georgia Tech.
"Itwasn't meant to be," Owens said of the Nets passing on him. "(Derrick and I) talked about being together, and he said he would tell them that he wanted me on their team. I guess he didn't do a good job.
Coleman, SU's all-time leading scorer and rebounder, was the 1991 Rookie of the Year. The Nets' owners reportedly had the final say in the decision of Anderson over Owens.
Owens later in the week met with Sacrämento fans and told them he wished the Eakers drafted him. He also said he wanted to be reunited with Coleman. It is obvious that Owens and the Sacramento Kings are not a match made in heaven.

Still, the Kings are basing a large part of their future on Owens, and have already said that Owens will undoubtedly start.
"We think Billy is going to have a great career," said Jerry Reynolds, director of player personnel for the Kings. "Whatever it's taken, he's been able to do. We'll give him another challenge."

That's for sure. The Kings finished last in the NBA's Pacific Division and won only one of their 41 road games.
"Maybe I'll turn things around there like Michael Jordan turned Chicago around," Owens said.

Owens, like Jordan, was the third pick in the draft. And, like Jordan, Owens will probably play the off-guard position.
The Kings appear set at the forward position with Wayman Tisdale and Lionel Simmons, last year's runner-up in the last year's runner-up Small forward is Owens' natural position, but the Kings are paving the way for him to play the No. 2 spot with trades. They traded away Travis Mays, last year's starter at off-guard, to Atlanta for point guard Spud Webb.

Owens, at 6-foot-9, and Webb. $5-7$, will make an unusual pair in the Kings' backcourt.

LeRon Ellis, who spent the last two seasons as SU's starting center, was taken by the Los Angeles Clippers with the 22nd pick.

Ellis, 6-foot-11, labeled as an underachiever at $S U$, had outstanding senior camps at Orlando and Portsmouth (Va.) that dramatically raised his stock.

Ellis, from Tustin, Calif., will have a chance to play close to home.

His selection. however, was greeted with boos from a crowd watching the draft at the Los Angeles Sports Arena.

Eigin Baylor, the Clippers, General Manager, played with LeRoy Ellis, LeRon's father, from 1962-66 with the Los An: pic geles Lakers
"We think he has great athletic ability," Baylor said. "We were impressed with his postseason play this year. He has good size and can run the foor. If he needs anything, it's to improve his offense."

Ellis averaged 11.1 points, 7.7 rebounds and 2.4 blocks per game his senior season at yracuse.

He will likely back up Olden Polynice, who was acquired last season in a trade from Seattle. The Clippers are stacked at the forward position with Charles Smith, Danny Manning and Ken Norman.

- Keith Hughes. who played wo seasons at SU before transferring to Rutgers, was drafted by the Houston Rockets with the 47 th pick overall Hughes was then traded to he Cleveland Cavaliers for the Cavs' 1996 second-round draft pick.

ow far is this ridiculousness disguised as sports journalism going to go?
Apparently, some of today's baseball writers are having a difficult time remembering which publication they write for.

This month, both The Sporting News and Gannett/USA TODAY's Baseball Weckly made themselves look like The Star, National Enquirer, or maybe People.

ROB GUYETTE SPORTS OPINION
triplets were born, it made the top story of the local sports section.
Are you kidding me? That was the most important happening in sports that day?
Then, two nights later on ESPN, Righetti entered the game in the ninth inning trying o preserve a one-run lead for announcer beisco Giants. The story at the top of the inning and didn't finish until there and dran't finish until there were two outs and the third batter had one strike on him. Never was it mentioned how Righettis doing this season. Or if the Giants feel his big offseason contract was worth it You know, the on-the-field stuff.
I'm wondering how many times I will hear the triplets story. Worse, I'm wondering how many times Righetti has had to tell it.

But these stories (along with the wife of Texas third baseman Steve Bechele having ababy two weeks agol were just the groundwork. I read further in my Sporting News, and that's when I lost it

I was reading the New Yori Mets notes for the week. First I read how David Cone's 13 strikeouts increased his National League leading total. Then, I read about Mackey Sasser's newfound prowess in right field. All of a sudden it hit me.
"...Wives of (Dave) Magadan and Howard Johnson gave birth on consecutive days last week..." I DON'T CARE!!! AAARRRRRRGGGGGHHHH!!!

What is that news really telling me? Should I think less of these two guys if they weren't there with their wives? Or maybe they were. Why wasn't that information listed?
For that matter, I'd like to know the kids' names, height. weight and whether they're right-or left-handed. Was either the first child? And who has the most kids on the team?
(Excuse me for a second, I'm going to write this date on my calendar so $I$ can look forward to the birthday update in next year's New York Mets notes.)

Baseball players may be big news, and their personal lives are of great interest to some people. But when I watch or read about baseball, I want to know the scores of the day not the records of the day.

At least The National had enough sensibility to separate the news from the gossip. Three times a week, the now-defunct paper devoted one full page to sports gossip and photos (called The Eagle's Eye). It didn't pretend to be newsworthy. It was dirt on all the big names, and they put it all together into a one-page extravaganza.

If you cared, you could read it. If not, you knew how to avoid it.

Magazines like the aforemen tioned and other media publications should start taking a reasonable approach. People read the sports pages and expect sports news.

Every paper has a gossip column. Only these days, it's too often being disguised as a sports page.

I don't care. Repeat. I don't care. What am I supposed to do, write the twins' birthday on my calendar and root for Mr . Thompson?

Next, we come to the Dave Righetti deal. This is way out of hand. The day after Righetti's music trivia contest.

Even at a Syracuse Chiefs games last week. I was bornbarded with 45 seconds worth of announcemerits/advertisements between each halfinning.

But at A bner Doubleday Field in Cooperstown, where the Minnesota Twins beat the San Francisco Giants 6-4 or July 22, there are no advertisements flying in your face.

There is no music played between half-innings. Instead, the fans find their own enterthe fans thent hassling the playtainment - warming up to throw them a ball, the ultimate souvenir.
It's a far cry from the mid summer game in St. fouis when summer game in the Cardinals a game Braves was delayed because the person in charge of betweeninning music either fell asleep or had a jammed record player before the bottom of the sixth.

There were no guess-theattendance multiple choice questions on the scoreboard at Cooperstown. There were no dot races. No car races. No trivia questions.
The scoreboard, in fact, looked like one you might expect to see at your local American Legion field. It had the balls, strikes, outs and score. No frills or extra entertainment ploys. And, thank goodness, no ads.
The scoreboard at Doubleday Field couldn't have cost one one-thousandth of what today's do. It's located in left field where there are no seats, and wevery ball that sails over it for a every ball that sails over it for a home run lands in someone's back yard.

Doubleday Field also saves itself a couple million dollars making do without a hi-fi stereo system. The only music you can get there is from your headset (which doesn't do much good.
either, because these games don't make radio).
Every major league baseball game played today is on television somewhere. Each team has its own local contract, and ESPN's undertaking of The Show has flooded the market with games, as well as filtered unprecedented money into owners' pockets.
Commissioner Fay Vincent has said one of the biggest problems baseball faces today is the length of games, which is approaching the three-hour barrier.
Television, no doubt, has been the driving force. Squeezing in all those commercials is what keeps the money flowing.

The money has also led to higher player salaries, bigger egos and, most importantly, higher ticket prices.

An afternoon in Cooperstown can make you forget all the negative things commercialism brings. The game lasted just more than two hours. I wasn't overloaded with ads for products I have no interest in over a speaker system so loud that I couldn't think.

I didn't hear the recorded sound of breaking glass on every other foul ball. And there was no out-of-town scoreboard. The only thing you were aware of was happening in front of you - the game.

I don't consider myself a baseball purist. And I love watching baseball on ESPN as much as anyone.

But sometimes you have to wonder if the game is getting too big for itself. Big contracts and free agency are sometimes bigger stories than who does what on the field.
A one-day respite is refreshing. to say the least.

Three years of NCAA Division I lacrosse dominance ended May 29 in the same place it began.
Three-time defending national champion Syracuse University was beaten 19-13 by the North Carolina Tar Heels in a national semifinal game in front of 14,544 fans at the Carrier Dome.
The Orangemen, who beat Cornell to win the 1988 title in the Dome, failed to win an unprecedented fourth consecutive championship. The Orangemen had won 31 of their last 32 Dome games and had never lost a playof game under the nflated white roof ( 13.0 ) before Saturday.
Carolina, 16-0, finished its undefeated season with an 18-13 win over Towson State on Monday.
We didn't do what we had to," said SU coach Roy Simmons Jr. "We didn't get many breaks today. They had a lot of intensity, and were well-deserving of he victory."

The top-ranked Tar Heels outscored the Orangemen 7-2 in the second period to take a $10-5$ halfime jead. Syracuse $12-3$, could get no closer than three goals in the second half.
"It was everything both teams exDave Klarmann "I', said UNE Weach finally able to beat them in the Dome."

Cinderella's glass slipper had everything but the Heel.
Towson State's improbable run at the NCAA Division 1 lacrosse championship fell one game short as the North Carolina Tar Heels capped an undefeated season with an 18-13 win before 8,293 at the Carrier Dome.
Top-ranked Carolina finished the year $16-0$ and won its fourth national title, the first since 1986. The Tar Heels have never lost a championship game.
"You're going to ask me what the difference was, and honestly don't know." said UNC first-year coach Dave Klarmann. "It was a great lacrosse game. We just canned some shots at the nd."
The Tar Heels dominated, as expected against the 11 th-seeded Tigers in the first half and held an 11-4 halftime lead But Towson State came back with six third period goals, and when Doug Sharretts scored with 9:40 left in the fourth quarter, the deficit was cut to 13.12.

But Carolina scored the next five goals against a weary Towson State defense to secure its undefeated season.

We just reached down and there was nothing there," said Towson coach Carl Runk. "We don't have a great deal of depth. Carolina and the Dome got to us."
Runk said his team played through the second half in the muggy Carrier Dome on emotion only. The Tigers did not have as many quality lines as the Tar Heels, and their fatigue was exposed by UNC.
"We play on "drenaline, but there's only so much adrenaline you can go on." Runk said
"I'd credit our success to being able to play a lot of guys in the fourth quarter," Klarmann said. "It's wonderful to know you have fresher legs than your opponent. It's just numbers."

Carolina beat Towson State on faceoffs

23-11 and on groundballs 79-56. The fourth quarter numbers ( 7 -2 faceoffs and 23-12 groundballs) were even more convincing.
The Tigers, 12-4, beat a higher-seeded opponent in each of its three games before the final, including two games on the road. Towson made its first-ever appearance in a final.
We gave it our best shot." said Towson attackman Rob Shek, who had three goals. "We have no reason to hang our heads down low."

Combine throngs of people, the tackiness of a boardwalk and the allure of alcohol and pizza, and you've got the ingredients for a typical night out on Marshall Street.

Noted for its bars and eating establishments, M-Street, as it is more commonly known, is a major source of social activity for Syracuse University students.
An interesting mix of townspeople, students, beggars and mounted police are seen every weekend patrolling the area for their own respective reasons. Small children make money by doing back flips and sidewalk musicians play to crowds for tips.

Some of the biggest draws to M-Street are the bars, which number six right now.
Hungry Charley's, located in the alley at 727 S. Crouse Ave., is a perennial favorite for SU students. Nightly drink specials and a progressive rnix of classic rock and non-threatening alternative masic help draw a diverse crowd.

Chuck's appeal

Its graffiti-strewn walls, rows of tables and two bars that serve only beer, sangria and wine, give "Chuck's" an informal atmosphere that appeals to just about anyone.

The more popular features at Chuck's are Wednesday night two-for-one pitchers until 1 am. and Friday night Happy Hour and Friday night Happy Hour with $$ 2.50$ pitchers irom 3 to 7 pm. Sutter's Mill and Mining Co., located next door at 729 S. Crouse Ave., plays a mix of classic rock and dance music and serves up mixed drinks, food and beer specials.

Various bands play at Sutter's during the year, and the admission policy is $$ 2$ under and $$ 1$ over.
Maggie's, located on University Avenue in the Marshall Square Mall, admits only 21 and older and there is no cover charge. Mixed drink specials and the crowded onewroom atmosphere appeal more to the mosphere ap greek crowd.
Faegan's Pub Led. 734 S. Crouse Ave. is a 21 -and overbar that appeals to seniors and that appeals to seniors and graduate students who like to

The only failing of The Doctor is that the hospital looks too futuristic. The corridors Jack struts down are plated with reflecting surfaces that make the hospital look more like a modern airport or mall. The whole set looks like it was recycled from the $70 s$ television show Space: 1999.

But that's just a minor flaw. The Doctor is a moving and powerful film that deserves to be seen, especially by doctors who may have forgotten what it's like to be a patient.

Local restaurants deliver more than just pizza

If residence hall food sounds grossly unappealing and you're not up to cooking - don't despair. Phone for your food instead.

Syracuse has several restaurants that will deliver and there's LORA MESSING FOOD REVIEW more available than cardboardcrusted pizza or wings. A critic for The Daily Orange called six local restaurants for delivery to a Syracuse University address. Totals do not include tip.

Tony's Kitchen 472-3376; 11 a.m. 10 p.m., 11 p.m. 2 a.m.

It's a great deal for a homestyle meal. Tony offers fried chicken, barbecued beef and pork ribs, seafood and sandwiches as dinners for under $$ 10.00$. As these include cornbread and stick-to-yourribs side orders such as potato salad, string beans and french fries, you can hardly go wrong.
A six-piece chicken dinner with corn bread and two side orders costs $$ 8.75$, but coupon fliers give a $$ 1$ discount. The friendly woman who took the order said they were out of corn bread so we ordered three side-orders: Tossed salad, collard greens and macaroni and cheese. She said the food would be delivered in 30 minutes.
It arrived a little more than 45 minutes later, but hot, and with a smile. The chicken was nicely spiced though a little greasy, the collard greens were salty and delicious with chunks of ham hock, and the salad was fresh and lightly dressed. But the macaroni and cheese that night was a mass of overcooked macaroni held together with tasteless clumps of cheese.
As a meal, it was hearty and ample for two people - and what a price! Earth alert: The food arrived in styrofoam containers.
Acropolis Pizza 472-4876: 5 p.m.-2a.m.

They deliver more than pizza: calzones, gyros, sandwiches, salads, wings, spaghetti and even frozen yogurt. But since pizza is in the name, this reviewer ordered a small pepperoni and mushroom pizza with a small Greek salad for $$ \mathbf{1 0 . 2 0}$.
It was time to eat in only 20 minutes. The Greek salad was excellent with chunks of good feta cheese, tomatoes, black olives and green pepper rings crowding out the iceberg lettuce. The oil and vinegar dress ing had just the right zing.

The pizza's all-important crust was good and thick, crisp and not too doughy. But the bland, acidic sauce didn't do it justice, and the pepperoni and mushroom toppings were ordinary It was a quick and satisfying meal on balance and could have been a light dinner for two. Earth alert: The pizza came in cardboard, but the salad was in styrofoam.

Featuring wings, sandwiches. subs and salads in addition to pirza, this deli must erain all of the other rude people who answer calls for delivery food in Syracuse. Under duress, this reviewer begged for a dozen wings with mild sauce, a small salad and two soft drinks. The cost: $$ 8.95$.

As promised, the food was delivered in less than 30 min utes, and the charming manners of the delivery driver were mersh appreciated.
All was forgiven when the jumbo-sized wings were found jumbo-sized Wings were found to be perfectly cooked, hot and generously coated in a spicy-

Ling-Ling on the Square 422 . 2800 ; Friday and Saturday, $5: 30$ p.m.-9;30 p.m.; Sunday - Thursday, 5:30 p.m.-8:30 p.m.

The ultimate in delivery food has to be Chinese, and this was a good example. Ling-Ling promises to deliver Szechuan, Mandarin and Cantonese-style food.

Hungry and feeling ambitious, this reviewer ordered lemon chicken, stir-fried vegetables, an egg roll and wanton soup for the equally ambitious price of $$ 23.75$.

What arrived 40 minutes later although 25 -minute delivery whs promised, was a Chinese dinner for three. Everything was in quart-sized cartons, including quart-sized cartons, including the soup. There were rice, fried noodles, three fortune cookies noodles, three fortune cookies and enough condiments to choke a Chinese horse.

For a starter though, the soup was bland with salty broth and lots of too-chewy noodles. The

Since most of it was good, it was an impressive dinner. Considering the amount of food delivered, it was inexpensive, 200. Earh alert: Everything arrived in cardboard containers.
The Manhrtan Onion 469 4907: 6 p.m. 4 ncm . The restaurant offers pizza, subs, wings calzones and salads far into the night. Business must be boom ing because the impatient person answering the telephone warned not to expect delivery for 45 to 50 minutes.

Calzones are made to order from any three things on the menu. which includes anusage mushroorns, olives and mozza rella, but broccoli. ricotea and ham seemed like a good combination. Paired with a small chef salad, no onions, with Russian iressing on the side, $$ 7.96$ sounded reasonable.
After an hour and a half and a call to the kitchen to check on progress, the food finally arrived. The calzone was eastily the size of a medium pizza, with a thick, warm crugt that was slightly soggy on the bottom from the filling.

The filling was unspiced but comforting, with excellent guality ingredients. The sweet, thinly sliced shreds of ham were espe cially good. A dab of my own marinara sauce made it. complete.

The so-so salad had a bunch of green pepper rings, underripe tomatoes, black olives and pale iceberg lettuce. The incredibly thick and erearny Russian dressing heiped it out.
It was edible and inexpensive - the calzone would have served at least two people - but the long wait took the fun out of it. Earth alert: The calzone was in cardboard, but the salad was delivered in styrofoam.

Simple, pleasing pizza seemed the thing, a small one with bacon and mushrooms. Then 10 wings in honey-mustard sauce, a tossed salad and maybe some cee cream. The woman who took the order said there wasn't any of my favorite ice cream flavor eft, not apologizing, and that the total came to $17.21.

Everything was uniformiy delicious. The wings were hot, sticky with the tangy, sweet sauce and not at all greasy. The salad was large to sey the least sand pacted with cucumbers and pack celery and icebers lettuce. ettuce.
The 12 -inch pizza was superb. The crust was crisp, tasting of olive oil. and the sauce had plenty of garlic, though it didn't compete with the bacon and mushrooms. The mushrooms tasted sauteed.

This wasn't a fancy meal, but each item was done to perfection. There was enough food to satixfy at leazt two people, so the price was right, too. Earth alert: The pizza was delivered in cardboard,

Summer releases help revive music industry

 Alternative bands top summer charts
By BARBARA DAVIES  and BRUCE BUCKLEY  DO Editor  and Slaff Writer

The recession left a mark of confusion on the music industry this summer. Concert ticket sales, practically guaranteed to make money in the summer. aropped to record lows, and some independent labels struggled to stay afloat.
Meanwhile, familiar names on the charts (Van Halen, Paula Abdul, Tom Petty) were keeping strange company. Some of the summer's surprise successes were "alternative" acts EMF and Jesus Jones, rap group NWA and country singer Garth Brooks, who crossed over to the pop charts
No matter what the case, No matter what the case, here is, as usual, more music to hear than there is time to isten to it. Some of summer's best recordings are reviewed here, to alleviate confusion... and to tide you over until fall releases start hitting the stores in, oh, a week or so..

Crowded House: Woodface
The house is getting really crowded now, as the band expands from a trio to a quartet with the addition of Tim Finn (founder of experimental pop Troup Split Enz and brother of group Split Enz and brother of Neil Finn).

One more singer/songwriter, though, changes the sound of Crowded House very little. This album features some of the best songwriting in the music business today, true to Crowded House's form
The dark, introspective lyrics of Crowded House's last album are bolstered this time with frank phrases of life and love. "I want everythingyou throw out," sings Neil Finn on "As Sure As I Am," words of wisdom, sensuality and sarcasm.
Crowded House ranks with the best in creating whole albums of perfect pop songs, as in the wonderful "Italian Plastic" and "There Goes God."

Though it's taking the band longer to write these days - it's been three years since the band's been three years since the band's last release - the time it took last release - the time it took ously well spent.

still has strong ties to her dark past.

Despite its diverse tracks. Superstition flows smoothly from the dancey "Silly Thing" to the primal "Sister Waterfalls" to the delicate and ethereal "Softly." Superstition shows that Siouxsie still has a lot of both beauty and bite after more than 15 years on the scene.

itzer Ebb: ASIS
When $\mathrm{N} \cdot \mathrm{tzo1}$ abb released Showtime last ycar, it became apparent that the musical element of their predominantly industrial sound was replacing their earlier, minimalistic sound With'the release of their most recent EP, ASIS, it is clear that change is complete.

The songs on ASIS are all very full and intricately composed, with less emphasis on repetition and danceability and more on musicality. Songs like "Family Man" and the thrashy "Higher" not only display Nitzer Ebb's newly tapped musical talent, but also show considerable depth in the vocal lines and harmonies.

The result is one of the most unique sounds on the current industrial scene, leaving th:listener anxious for the' $r$ albunn release in October.

Eurythmics: Greate it Hits The current twentysu. י.ething pastime of reviving childhood trends moves closer to the present with this record. Beginning with "Sweet Dreams (Are Made OfThis)," the single that gained the Eurythmics fame back in 1983, this compilation marks the return of new wave.

But this collection, like the band, extends itself beyond the confines of early 80 s synthesizer pop. Presented here are the blue-eyed soul songs you know ("Would I Lie To. You?") and lesser-known songs that aren't really hits ("Love Is A Stranger'), but spotlight singer Annie Lennox's powerful voice.

Despite the title, Forbidden Places is listener friendly, and should draw new fans os well as please the old.

Anthrax: Attack Of The Killer B's

Anthrax fans won't want to avoid these "Killer B's"-killer B-sides, that is.

Although it has been nearly a year since the release of their last album, it is apparent that the members of Anthrax need more time to let their hair down before getting serious about a new album.

Their most recent release is a collection of Anthrax's goofiest moments during the past three-and-a-half years. The album appropriately jncludes covers of "Milk" and "Chromatic Death" from the hilarious thrash band Stormtroopers Of Death which included Anthrax mem bers Charlie Bennante and Scott lan as well as a thrash version of Public Fnemy's "Brin Noise" featuring s "Bring The Noise" featuring both Chuck D nd Scott Ian on vocals.
Killer $B$ 's also contains a couple of live Anthrax cuts and other goofy originals including a 1991 , super-acid-house remix of "I'm The Man" (a guaranteed hit at your friendly neighborhood metal/acid club). This album is sure to please any listener with a good sense of hurnor and a strong neck.

Primus: Sailing The Seas Of Cherese
Here they come again, thoge self-proclaimed "Bastardoy de Funk," back with their third album. As could be expected, Sailing The Seas Of Cheese takes the listener into some bizarre and uncharted waters.

While the album does not fall into the signature Primus funk groove of the past, Sailing The Seas of Cheese shows much more depth and experimentation than their previous works.

Sorges such as "American Life" and "Fiah On" ghow the bamd's heavier side, which is dominant on this album.

Robyn Hitchcock & tians: Perspex Islond

Bright pop song and witt wont pop songs and witty words make up the bulk of this dio's from one of college radio's longtime favorite artists.
Hitchcock's reedy vocals and knack for turning an odd phrase into an ear-catcher will no doubt bring on Beatles comparisons.

Sealing up the album's '60s pop roots is guest musician Peter Buck who dusts off and puts to good use the jangly Byrdsian guitar that branded the sound of early R.E.M. albums.
Although the album's emphasis is on uptempo tunes, Hitchcock's strengths on Perspex Is land are his moodier songs, such as the slightly scary "Vegetation and Dimes" and "She Doesn't Exist" (featuring background vocals by R.E.M.s Michael Stipe).

film, asking of Claus, "Is he the devil? If so, can the devil get justice? And all this legal activity, is it in Satan's service?"

Although Close appears in few scenes, she is dynamic as the drug-addicted heiress who was bitterly unhappy with her life. Passed over so many times for an Oscar, Close wasn't even nominated for this brief, but excellent. performance.

However, Irons did receive an Oscar for his part as the unemotional Claus. Irons plays the character with just the right character with just the right amount of coldness temper with shining glimpses of wit.
with shining glimpses of wit.
When he goes to a restaurant, he tells Dershowitz that after all the "unpleasantness," he now gets the best table in the house. After the waiter refers to him as Dr. von Bulow, he deadpans, "Two injections of insulin and I'm already a doctor."

Looking at a lawyer

Reversal of Forture is also a look at the legal process and Dershowitz's approach to the case. Dershowitz gathers his brightest atudents to help work on the case and has an on-again. off-again romance with exgirlfriend Sarah (Annabella Sciorra). While Silver's performance as the jumpy Dershowitz may get on viewer's nerves, it remains a portrayal rather than a caricature.
The few times von Bulow interacts with the law students, they seem to treat him in a rude manner that lacks realism. But he attempts to charm them nonetheless with jokes.
"What do you give a wife who has everything?" Claus asks. "An injection of insulin."

Director Barbet Schroeder. who was nominated for an Academy Award for this film. moves the film along at a leisurely pace. It may seem slow at points, but the acting from Irons, Silver and Close is so believable that your interest shouldn't wane.

Reversal of Fortune doesn't give a definitive conclusion as to Claus's guilt or innocence.

However, it is based on the novel by Dershowitz, so it is weighted towards his innocence. But as a comatose Sunny assures us. "When youget where I am, you will know the rest."

Glenn Close stars as ill-fated heiress Sunny von Bulow, and Oscar-winner Jeremy Irons portrays her husband Claus in the recent Warner Home Video release Reversal of Fortune.

Students struck on Waverly Ave.

By ROY S. GUTTERMAN and  IODI LAMAGNA

Two Syracuse University students were hit by a car last night as they crossed the street at the intersection of Waverly and Walnut avenues.

The wornen, both 20 , suffered unspecified head and leg injuries after being hit at about 8:30 p.m., according to Syracuse Police Officer Jim Clark.

One victim was taken to Upstate Medical Center where she was listed in stable condition. The other was taken to Crouse Irving Memorial Hospital and was listed in fair to stable condition.
"It doesn't look like it's life-threatening," Clark said.
Police and hospital officials would not release the victims' names, pending notification of relatives.

A 20 -year-old man from Jamesville who attends A 20-year-old man from Jamesvile who attends the scene said alcohol was not a factor and no charges were filed.

Several passers-by witnessed the accident.
Freshman Laura Zauderer said she saw the two women attempting to cross Waverly.

She said the two crossed the road to the yellow stripes and waited for the other side of traffic to clear.
"A Bronco stopped in the inside travel lane to let them cross the road," she said. As the students crossed the last travel lane, near Walnut Park, a Mercury station wagon hit them both.

SU student John Chasse said he also saw the accident.
"I heard screeching, a real long screeching," he said. "Then, I heard the bang and saw the girl rolling across the street."

At that point, Chasse said he pushed a blue light. "It took security a long time to respond," he said. "Like about 10 minutes."

When most students left for the summer, the road reconstruction project was only in its beginning phases.

Now, the finished product has left many pedestrians fearing the roads on which they walk.
Last night, two Syracuse University students were hit by a car as they crossed the street at the intersection of Waverly and Walnut Avenues.

The widened roads with rerouted traffic have created a dangerous traffic situation, said Student Government Association Executive Assistant Brian Rubenstein, who witnessed last night's accident.
"Cars have been screeching all over campus all week," he said. "There are no stop signs, no traffic lights, nothing to prevent cars from going crazy."

Earlier in the week, many returning to SU expressed mixed reactions to the new road plan.
"I've found that it is easier to drive now after the reconstruction," said SU junior Tina Sansone. "But I am much more nervous to cross the street because the driving traffic doesn't seem to consider pedestrians."

Another SU junior, Stephanie May, agreed. "I think it is a good idea blocking off the traffic on the main campus," she said, referring to University Place, which is now restricted to authorized traffic during daytime hours.
"But down here (the intersection of Waverly and Cornstock avenues) it is very difficult to cross because there are so many more cars now,"she said.

Steve Chirello, SU director of community relations, agreed that a complex problem existed because of the high number of drivers in the university area.
"No plan is perfect but through studying it over the two-year trial period we will be able to fine tune it." he said.

SU students cross the recently widened Waverly Ave. Tuesday afternoon. The atWaverly Ave. Tuesday afternoon. The attempt to alleviate trafic problems on campus seems to have caused g.
During this two-year period the city will monitor the reconstruction plan, said Harvey Kaiser, vicethe reconstruction plan, said Harvey

SU purchases DeWitt home for former chancellor Eggers

this sort

"When the university purchases an asset, that is a non-budgetary transaction," Marcoccia said. "You're reducing your cash and making another purchase."

Transactions conducted in this manner are difficult to link to tuition funds because non-tuition revenues such as endowment money are also included in endowment money are also inciuded in the plant fund, he said, but he would not eny the linkage.
As a non-profit organization, SU needs assets to carry out its work, Hill said. The Eggers' will carry out that work because the "chancellor will continue to be a friend of Syracuse University, as will his wife," Hill said.

Off-campus assets

The university has other items covered under the plant fund, including Minnowbrook, the university conference center: the Greenberg House, SU's Washington, D.C., center; and Lubin House, the New York City offices of SU.
Both Greenberg and Lubin were made possible in part by donations. However, the upkeep and maintenance of these and on-campus buildings comes out of the plant fund, Hill said.

According to the recommended pro forma budget for 1990-91, the Greenberg House has an annual operating cost of $$ 96,000$. Located at 2301 Calvert St, N.W., the house was purchased in 1989 See HOME Page 6 few gains, many declines General scores on both the verbal and mathematics portions of the Scholastic Aptitude Test showed record declines in 1991.

SATs scores show

The average math scores dropped for the first time since 1980 , from 476 to 474.

The average verbal score dropped two points to 422 - the lowest level ever.

Women's average verbal acores dropped one point, while men's plummeted three points.
The average verbal and matinscores for Puerto Rican and Asian American stu dents show increases while those of other ethnic minorities declined.

Some educators saw the falling scores as signaling the deteriorating quality of the nation's school system, while others attributed the changes to the Educational Testing Service's effort to make tional Testing Service's effort to make ethnic minority students.

A St. John's University disciplinary committee recommended Monday that three students who were accused of sexually assaulting a female student be expelled, even though they were acquitexpelled, even though th ted of criminal charges.

The committee, comprised of faculty members and students, also recommended the expulsion of another student who gaid he had joined in abusing the woman but was not prosecuted in return for testifying.

The panel said the student was guilty of "conduct adversely affecting his suitability as a member of the academic community of St. John's."

A final decision on the four men's expulsions will be made by the university's president, Rev. Donald J. Harrington.

The three defendants were acquitted last month on sodomy and other criminal charges.
Young proposes budget
Syracuse Mayor Tbin Young unveiled a proposed 1992 budget Monday which includes utility and property tax hikes.

The city has been plagued by declining state aid and drooping sales tax revenues.

The proposed 1992 budget includes a total net appropriation of $$ 303.1$ million $-$ 144.6$ million for city operations and $$ 158.5$ million for the school district.

The Common Council will begin its budget review Sept. 11. It must come up with a spending plan by Oct. 15.

Young administration officials said raising the utility tax from 1 to 3 percent will help redistribute the city's tax burden to the 50 percent of city property that is exempt from property taxes including Syracuse University.

The tax applies to Niagara Mohawk and telephone bills and must be approved by the state legislature.

New chaplain seeks students for interfaith communication

BY KATHERINE DROUIN DO Editor

Syracuse University's new Catholic chaplain is no stranger to college campuses.
Father James Lang served for 10 years at Oswego. He left his post to succeed MonsignorCharles Borgognoni, who retired last spring after 28 years as chaplain.

Father James

Though he says he does not plan to be a flock-stealer, Lang wants to increase dialogue between faiths at SU.

"I was the only chaplain for 8,000 students of all faiths at Oswego," he said. Twenty percent were Jews. I had to make everyone feel welcome.
"There, 'Catholic' meant 'here comes verybody.
Lang says he expects questions and confrontations from SU students and will deal with them frankly.

Part of what the university is about is challenging your beliefs," he said You have to let go of one ladder rung to get to another."

Lang plans to carry out some of the same programs he had at Oswego, such as a "Stump the Priest" program in which he fielded questions from dorm residents.
"Students think about these things," he said. "There are certain questions Catholics have always raised that have never had any satisfactory answers."
"I want to be seen in every residence hall and eat in every dining center," he said. "It makes no sense to sit in the Alibrandi Center and think students will come to you."

Lang also wants to institute a pro gram for faculty and staff. He said it is important for students to see that faculty are men and women of faith.

Lang's office is only half-decorated, and he invites design ideas from art and other students.
"I'm setting up the office to be comfortable," Lang said. "We need the inside of the building to look less institutional."

Though Lang says he doubts he could or should remain at SU for 28 years, he plans to stay long enough for students to remember him
"I'm not going to leave tomorrow," he said. "I'll be here at least 10 years; probably longer. This is a permanent committment."

REVIEW 'big one' for the past eight years" to presenter Gilbert Gottfried's five minute monologue on masturbation, Sunday night's telecast of the 43rd Annual Emmy Awards was decidedly PG-13 in nature. The ceremony's rousing start held promise that the program would be entertaining - not long and cumbersome. And for the most part, it was an enjoyable affair Stalwart actor James Earl Jones, who later won an Emmy for lead actor in a drama series for Gabriel's Fire and another for supporting actor in a miniseries (TNT"s Heatwave), began the evening ranting about excellence in television as only he can in his strong dramatic voice. Then he got a pie in his face as the first tribute to comedy, the theme of this year's Emmys.

That pie would later come back to haunt the Emmy producers as star after star slipped on the pie remains. Presenter Crystal Bernard was one of the victims, slipping as she walked on stage. Luckily co-presenter Alan Thicke broke her fall. "She said she wanted to do that as part of the tribute to comedy," Thicke joked.

Cheers for 'Cheers'

Cheers was named best comedy series and co-star Bebe Neuwirth, who plays Lilith, picked up her second Emmy for best supporting actress in a comedy series. Cheers co-creator James Burrows also won for comedy directing.

Writer Gary Dontzig was awarded for a Murphy Brown episode.

An exuberant Marilu Henner presented the Emmy for lead actor in a comedy to her TV husband Burt Reynolds of Evening Shade.
"I've never been nominated for anything, and I've sure as hell never won anything," Reynolds said when accepting his award. "Well, I won a few People's Choice Awards:"
The now-canceled Thirtysomething was also lauded, winning a best lead actress in a drama award for a tearful Patricia Wettig, who plays Nancy. Timothy Busfield (Elliot) won for supporting actor in a drama.

Thomas Carter won the best directing award for another has-been, Equal Justice. Other canceled series up for Emmys included Twin Peaks and China Beach. Neither took any Jonathan Winters was named best supporting actor in a comedy for ABC's mid-season replacement series Davis Rules, and Gabriel's Fire co-star Madge Sinclair was named out standing supporting actress in a drama series.

Best mini-series/special honors went to ABC's Separate but Equal; the miniseries directing Emmy was given to Brian Gibson for HBO's The Josephine Baker Story. Gibson's wife, actress Lynn Whitfield, was a winner for best actress in a Ruby Dee won in the supporting miniseries actress category for her role in Hallmark Hall of Fame: Decoration Day, and John Gielgud won lead actor in a miniseries for Masterpiece Theater: Summer's Lease

The hosts of this year's event were Jamie Lee Curtis, Dennis Miller and Jerry Seinfeld. Curtis joked about people watching award shows to ridicule what the stars were wearing, while Miller poked fun at the Reagan family. "Ron Reagan has a new show," Miller said. "I hope you all watch it, because we know what happens when a Feagan can't make it in entertainment."
While Curtis and Miller were great hosts. Seinfeld's low-key humor was too subdued for the awards show. Though it works well on his series, it slowed the pace of the ceremony.

Most of the presenters were funny, too. Burt Reynolds and ife, Loni Anderson, humorously agonized over his demotion fim to television. Please excuse him, Anderson said He's happy just to be working.
However, Gilbert Gottfried was his usual obnoxious self. Desi Aribe to the late Michael Landon and the induction Wallace, Danny Thomas and $T$ Love Lucy into the Acad, Mike Motion Picture Arts and Sciences Hall of Fame were well do and not coma-inducing.

One of the best award shows in years, this year's Emmy telecast should be awarded an Emmy itself.

Be careful out there

Originally this editorial began with the words, "someone will die." An hour after it was written, at 8:30 p.m., the current traffic situation at Syracuse University had brought two women closer to that end. This misfortune should shake some sense into those who need it - namely, the university.

The road in question was cityowned, but a similar accident could easily happen on any other street. It is the university's responsibility to make safe the roads it encompasses. Instead, the university treats the new road system as if it were a Matchbox car racetrack. It's time to own up to responsibility.
When accidents happen, people want to know one thing: Who is to blame?

Was the driver going too fast? He couldn't possibly know. There are no speed limit signs.
Did the women cross at an inappropriate time? We lack this information as well. There are no crossing lights aiding nighttime judgment. The overhead lighting on Waverly Avenue, the scene of the accident, is so dim, the women probably could not see.
Since university roads were rerouted this summer in favor of creating a natural quadrangle, crossing campus streets has become comparable to playing the video garne Frogger. In Frogger, one has to maneuver a frog across a steady stream of traffic. Sometimes, either the driver or the pedestrian lacks agility, and the result is a: dead frog. The same holds true for the SU traffic scenario, except here we're dealing with student lives. During the past two years, people have been killed in campus accidents. Let's not make it three.
Four lanes of traffic with no stop signs, blinking lights or traffic lights inevitably leads to injury and perhaps even death. Common sense tells us that. It should tell the university the same thing.
When drivers see four lanes of traffic, the inclination to cut loose to freeway speed looms large.

Such tendencies could be aborted, however, if the university would take the necessary precautions. While the reconstruction of university roads seemed a novel idea, the execution of this plan leaves much to be desired. The task force the university appointed to ensure pedestrian safety must now rectify the reconstructive oversights and encourage the installation of speed bumps and speed limit signs.

At this point, the traffic conditions on the corners of Comstock Avenue at Waverly and University avenues are unacceptable and treacherous. Further complicating the problem is the fact that once one-way streets such as Comstock, S. Crouse and Euclid avenues now accommodate two-way traffic. Students, accustomed to looking one, not two ways before crossing, must condition themselves to follow the traffic rules their parents prescribed for them as youngsters. Drivers must drive as if other lives depend on it, because they do.

Currently, student survival rests on self-reliance. Perhaps the motto most applicable here comes from Robert Fulghum, author of All I Really Need To Know I Learned In Kindergarten.

Fulghum writes, "When you go out into the world watch out for traffic, hold hands and stick together. And then remember the Dick and Jane books and the first word you learned -- the biggest word of all -- LOOK."

This message doubles for pedestrians and drivers.

LETTERS  Protect students' liberties

To the editor:
A year ago, I submitted a letter to The Daily Orange criticizing aspects of the thennew Syracuse University Code of Student Conduct. In the intervening year, some substantial and important revisions of that code have been introduced. Most notably, the harassment clause of the code has been revised to exclude any suspect "categories" of speech. This revision is fundamentally important to the protection of free expression on this campus. I would, therefore, like to commend the Task Force on Student Rights and Responsibilities for making some of the important changes necessary to protect civil liberties on this campus At the same time, I must warn all members of the warn all members or the university administration continues to violate the rights established by the Statement of Student Rights and Responsibilities. In fact, the university has continued its policies of restricting protecting expression, of restriction of assembly rights, and of practicing routine discrimination. Perhaps bestknown among these violations are the recent disciplinary action against activist Pat

Chang, and the university's infornal response to antihomosexual T-shirts at Alpha Chi Rho.

In a recent D.O. article, Dean of Student Relations Edward Golden defended the university's low-key response university's low-key response suggesting that the T-shirts "didn't pass the clear and present danger test," since they did not cause any immediate breach of the peace. Despite this suggestion, the university did act to prohibit Alpha Chi Rho members from wearing the T-shirts. In fact. I was in Steele Hall with Dean Golden when an administration official informed an angry group of informed an angry group of members had been told not to mearbers had been told not to wear the shirts and would be warned again. warned again.
The universi

The university also struck a blow to free expression when Pat Chang was disciplined for her alleged involvement with the "Phi Delt fliers," which accused the Phi Delta Theta fraternity of gang rape. Ms. Chang was found guilty of harassment, despite Dean Golden's allegation that "in this case a fraternity and an individual have been unjustly labelled' as 'gang rapists.". Quite clearly, Golden's allegation was that of libel, not harassment. And in light of Golden's more recent comment on the Alpha Chi Rho T-shirts, one cannot help but wonder how the "Phi Delt fliers' could possibly have passed the "clear and present danger test" described by Golden.

The fact of the matter is that the university administration has demonstrated a continual pattern of ignoring published student rights whenever it chooses. As a result, students should not be satisfied until the university demonstrates a commitment to honoring the fundamental student rights established by its own regulations. We all must work to protect our basic rights. to provect our basic rights.
Toward this end, efforts are underway to establish a civil underway to establish a civi Siberties advocacy group at Syracuse University, to known as the Syracuse known as the Syracuse University Civil Liberties Union, or S.U.C.L.U. The group Unill be or S. U.C.L.U. The grou all members of the university community, and interested individuals may contact me by phone (4638767 ) or by mail (greeny 1 top.cis.syr.edu) for more information.

Summer construction changes road access  By PAULA CHRISTIAN

DO Staff Writer
Students returning to the Syracuse University compusare finding several roads widened and closed off, as well as new traffic patterns resulting from a recently completed reconstruction plan.
"The whole idea behind the construction plan was to alleviate vehicle and student congestion on University Place,"said Steve Chirello, director of community relations at SU. The most notable change was the conversion of College Place and sections of Comstock, South Crouse, and Euclid avenues to two way streets. Chirello said.

Patriots pick up Carpenter

BV DAVE BUSCEMA

DO Editor

Former Symacuse University wide receiver Rob Carpenter's departures and arrivals are becoming more difficult to chart than a 747's.

His departure from the Cin cinnati Bengals, the team that drafted him, was even more abrupt.
Carpenter, who was chosen in the fourth round by the Bengals last spring, was unex pectedly released on Monday night.
Yesterday, however, Carpen ter was claimed by the New England Patriots.
The claim cornes after Patriot wide receiver Hart Lee Dykes broke his kneecap in Saturday's preseason game against the New York Giants.

Carpenter will be reunited with former SU head coach Dick MacPherson.

Former West Virginia standout Reggie Rembert, a secondround pick of the New York Jets' last season, beat Carpenter out of a roster spot in Cincinnati. Rembert outshined Carpenter in last Saturday's game against Green Bay snaring six balls fo: 73 yards. Carpenter did not make a catch.

Carpenter, who caught 52 passes for 895 yards with 5 touchdownsat SU last year, had been predicted as high as a been predicted as high as a second-spring.
Instead, he has caught on with his second team in as many days.

Oranges were dropping all over the place Monday night, as 12 former nrangemen were cut from their prospective NFL teams.

Don McPherson, Michael Owens, Deval Glover and Fred DeRiggi continued their merry-go-round rides in the NFL as they were cut by Philadelphia, Kansas City and Buffalo, respectively. The players have umped on and off with these eams on multiple occasions. McPherson, however, signed a contract with the Hamiltion Tigers of the Canadian Football League shortly after he was cut.

Also cut: Mike Charles (Raiders), Rob Thomson (New England), Duane Kinnon and Gary McCummings (Giants). Turnell Sims (Seattle) and Mike Bernard and Brian LeBaron (Pittsburgh).

SU makes schedule changes

QyROR CIIYETE
OO Editor
The Syracuse University men's basketball schedule was announced on Jaly 16.

The Orangemen, 26-6 last season, announced a 27 -game schedule that will include six national television games.

The first regular season game will be against Cornell on Nov. 26 in the Carrier Dome. The season will conclude on March 7 when Villanova visits the Dome.

The following games will be televised:
Dec. 3 - SU plays Florida State on ESPN in Atlanta in the final year of the Big EastiACC final year Challenge.

Jan 26 - SU hosts preseason favorite St. John's in a Sunday noon game on CBS.

Feb. 3 - Connecticut brings its incredible freshman class into the Dome on ESPN.

Feb. 15 - Digger won't be around to do any victory dance, but John MeLeod and the Notre Dame Fighting Irish come to Syracuse in this annual nonconference game on NBC. The road team has won the last five games in this series.

Feb. 23 - The traditional season-endinggame againatGeorgetown has been moved up a couple weeks, but will still be on CBS. Alonzo Mourning will make his final appearance in the Dome.

March 4 - The Orangemen will make their only national road television appearance, this time at Connecticut on ESPN.

Aside from Florida State, the Orangemen have no other highlight games on the pre-Big East schedule.

The Carrier Classic has an especially weak field as the Orangemen play Eastern Ken tucky in the opening round. St. Joseph's and Wright State will play the other first-round game.

St. Joseph's will feature the return to Syracuse of former Jamesville-DeWittstar Bernard Blunt, who was the Atlantic 10 Freshman of the Year last season.

Miami (Fla.) will begin roundrobin Big East play this season as the conference schedule has been expanded to 18 games, another reason for the short, mediocre preconference schedule.

Syracuse will play two exhibition games in the Dorne. The Orange play Marathon Oil on Nov. 12 and the Canadian National team on Nov. 19.

Again, the Big East Tournament will be held in Madison Square Garden. The 1992 Final Four will be held in Minneapolis.

Virginia, in fact, declined an invitation on that basis.

The city of Tempe voted in favor of the holiday, and Corri gan said last year's problems are not likely to resurface.
"We discussed this situation a great deal," Corrigan said noting the first and second rounds of the NCAA Men's Basketball Tournament were played last March in Tucson. '(The holiday) will be back on the ballot before this game is the ballot before this game is played. As long as those com munities are dedicated to doing what is right, then that would be satisfactory.

Most of theminor details have yet to be worked out. The length of this agreement has not been set.
In general, the alliance will help clean up bowl-bidding wars and appears to be the best alternative that keeps the tradition of the bowls.

This is important in the long run for the financial aspects of college football and it will create a lot of fan interest," Brock said. "This alliance has a chance to be a big bonanza."

Coach Mac shouts life into Patriots

The National Football League season hasn't yet begur, but somebody ure deserves a "pat" on the back. The New England Patriots have been called one of the worst football teams of all time, but that didn't deter former Syracuse University football coach Dick MacPherson from leaving the Orangemen for Foxboro

JOSH  BARNETT  SPORT'S  OPRION

 The Patriots were I-15 last season and ended the sea son with a 14 game losing streak. But that didn't stop CoachThe efermally optimistic MacPher son may have brought some new life to the Patriots, yet early in the preseason they still looked dead on the field.

In their first three preseason games the "Patsies" went 0-3, were outscored $101-13$ and were blown out $46-0$ by the Phoenix Cardinals.

After the Phoenix loss, even The Optimist had to be a little pessimistic. "We took this job knowing it wasn't going to be easy," MacPherson aaid after the loss to the Cardinals. "Quite honestly, I didn't know it was going to be this hard.

But in the Patriots preseason finale, they certainly had a reversal of fortune.

New England, which hadn't broken into the win column since Week 2 of last season, soundly beat the world champion New York Giants 24-3 last Saturday at Foxboro.

The Patriots were able to win before a partigan Giant crowd in their own home stadium and without hold. out running back John Stephens and wide receiver Hart Lee Dykes, who broke his kneecop.

Granted it was only preseason and the Gianta were without All-Pro linebacker Lawrence Taylor, but the Patriots were atill fired up, even after beatings taken the previous three weeks.

Credit for their attitude has to go to their fiery head coach. Coach Mac was out there cheering his players on with the enthusiasm of a little kid -not a 60 -year old football veteran.

When the game ended, the Patriots celebrated as if they had just won the Super Bowl and Mac got a kiss from Super Bowl and Mac got a kiss from team executive vice president Sam team exec.

Don't expect the Patriots to even come close to making the playoffs, especially with the quarterback combination of Tommy Hodison and Hugh Millen, but in the mediocte AFC East they could surprise some people.

With Victor Kiarn's financial trouble and the remains of the Lisa Olson affair still hanging over their heads, it will certainly be an uphill elimb for MacPlereon and the Patriota.

But now, with a victory under their belt and some signs that Mac's enthusiasm may be rubbing off, the Patriots should beamuch-improved team. And give MacPherson that pat on the back because he may just be the jumpatart the Patriots needed.

Bowl Bonanza comes together

Fiesta Bowl, alliance could decide national champs

By ROB CUYETTE  Sports editor

The Fiesta Bowl was added this past July as the final piece of a college football puzzle that all but assures a national championship game and delays the need for a playoft system.
The alliance will begin after the 1992 college football season and includes the champion of the Big East Conference, of which Syracuse University is a member.
The complicated system includes the Fiesta, Cotton, Orange and Sugar bowls.

The Cottion (Southwestern). Orange (Big Eight) and Sugar (Southeastern) bowls automatically extend invitations to the winners of their respective conference associations.

The other five teams will draw from the Atlantic Coast Conference, the Big East, Notre Dame and two "at-large" teams, as chosen by the seven-member teams, as

The rationale is to match the highestranked team of the three locked bowls with the highest ranked teams from the "pool of five." But if the three locked bowls do not have the No. 1 or 2 team, the Fiesta Bowl can draw from the pool and put forth a national championship game.

The filling of the berths will be done after the season is over. possibly eliminating early-signing and bidding wars. which in the past have backfired on bowls trying to put together a top-notch game.

SU athletic director Jake Crouthamel said the alliance is a step in the right direction for the Big East and for college football in general

We certainly didn't anticipate the collection of bowls that expressed an interest," Crouthamel said. "The fact that we got those four bowls to talk shows the strength of the need that has been lying out there untapped.
"The notion was there. It was a matter of making it happen."

The major obstacle to the alliance is that neither the Big Ten nor Pac-10 champions will be inciuded. They will continue to honor their Rose Bowl com1 or 2, there will be no championship 1 or 2, garme.
Eame.
Either of the second place teams from those conferences could be included as an at-large team, however.
The second loophole in the alliance opens if the No. 1 and 2 teams both come from either the SEC, SWC or Big Eight $\rightarrow$ meaning the top two teams both would be locked. Cotton Bowl President Jim Brock said that detail has yet to be worked out, but he added it woula be unlikely for one bown to release its lock in order to help another bowl create a national championship.
Big East Cormmissioner Mike Tranghese said all eight Big East presidents ese said all enght big diasst preaident of the extra games and extra time it of the extra game ${ }^{\text {ound }}$ We have a great feeling for the bowl system." Tranghese said. "We want to promote and enhance that system."

Said Crouthamel: "The exercise we've gone through is not to thwart a national playoff despite the fact we're not in favor of it. We've put ourselves in a favorable position for the future, whatever that future may be."
Becauge schedules are made years in adivance, Big East members will play a lopsided number of conference games this season. Crouthamel said, however, that round-robin play will be in effect for the 1993 season.

The Fiesta Bowl beat out the Citrus, Blockbuster, Gator and Holiday bowls, which all made proposals to the sixmhich all mader committee.

Gene Corrigan, Commissioner of the ACC, said there were no specific factors which made the Fiesta Bowl the most attractive. He said the committee never voted, but rather came to consensus.
The Fiesta Bowl made an incredibly good presentation." Corrigan said.

The Tempe, Ariz.. site of the Fiesta Bowl will give the alliance geographical balance, with at least one bowl in each of the three major time zones. That, in turn, will allow for flexibility in game times.

The Fiesta Bowl is in just its 21st year, and 11th on New Year's Day. The other three have been New Year's Day traditions for over 50 years.
"We're kind of the Johnny-comelately," said Chuck Johnson, President of the Fiesta Bowl. Whe're nattered to oin these three major bowls and hope ve can continue to grow with them."
Controversy gwarmed the Fiesta Bowl last year, resulting from the rejection of the Martin Luther King Jr. holiday in the state of Aricona, The University of

The woman was taken to University Hospital and police were called. Armed with a warrant, police searched Owens hotel room at 9 a.m. and took him into custody for questioning

Owens was being fingerprinted and photographed at 12:50 p.m. at the Public Safety Building.

Owens, who has not received a degree from SU, was registered for fall semester classes.
The football player. from Carlisle. Pa., is the odder brother of former SU baskes: ball star Billy Owens.
Owens was selected in the spring of 1990 by the Kansas City Chiefs in the ninth round of the National Football League draf. He was cut from the eam and made an unsuccessful try at playing for the World League of Fcotball San Antonio Riders.

He was re-signed by the Chiefs last March but was cut again in July.

Owens wore the famed number 44 jersey during his three years at SU where he ran for 2.009 yards, the 10 th best in school history

In 1989, he gained 1,018 yards for the Orangemen, the fift best season of any unning back in SU history.

Owens' most famous play might be his last-second sprint into the end zone for a two-point conversion during a West Virginia game that gave SU a $32-31$ straight wins and sent the school to the Sugar Bowl, where it tied with Auburn.

Republics build on Gorbachev era's reforms

On August 19 the world witnessed a coup in which eight Soviet hard-liners removed Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev from power. By August 22, news Mikhail Gorbachev from pow agencies reported its failure.

On the morning of August 24. Cable News Network announced, "Inter-Fax News Agency reports that Mikhail Gorbachev is stepping aside from the Communist Party, leaving his post as General Secretary, and using hispower as president of the country power as president of the country in the Soviet Union."

Although the report could not be confirmed, Soviet journalist Al Gurnov said he was not surprised and he hoped it was true. "Gorbachev has been very predictable these days," said Gurnov, "and this is because he's behind the events. This is bad for a politician... Yeltsin is ahead of the events."

Amidst the rapid pace of change generated by the coup, there can be little doubt that Gorbachev has coup, there can be little doubt that Gorbachev has forever altered the face of history. The Berlin Wall has come down, Germany is whole and the Warsaw Fact is a memory. Madeleine Albright, president of the Center for National Policy describes Gorbachev as a "magnificent figure who has had a very difficult task of leading a nation of 280 million people out of the dark ages."
Where Corbachev stands?
But what is Corbachev's role today and what will his relationship be with Boris Yeltsin, president of the Russian Republic?

Yeltsin announced last Thursday that the Russian Republic will fly a new flag, without the hammer and sickle, while Gorbachev announced at his first press conference since the coup attempt, "I am a committed conference since the coup attempt, "I am a socialist and I see nothing wrong with that."

As Yeltsin announced his desire to accelerate the As Yeval of Commonist Party cells within the military and the workplace, Gorbachev opposed such drastic action. The Soviet president may now be attempting to play catch-up.

The cognoscenti scrambles to determine what American policy toward Moscow should be.

Jeremy Azrael, analyst for the Pand Corp., suggests that Yeltsin will emerge as a prime mover in Soviet politics. He notes that over the past year Yeltsin has attracted many intellectuals and economists away from Gorbachev and has shown an extraordinary ability to digest their advice:.
digest their advice.
If the Soyiets are to get their economy going. Azrael said the West will have to provide technical assistance in "building their economic infrastructure," including. in bunking system and "all the things a market economy. a banking system and "a depends on to function."

Problems ahead
The Soviet people have taken to the street and embrace a new power. But the failure of the coup will have no effect on an insufficient fall harvest, and Moscow is still hobbled with an economy that continues to plunge into a dark abyss. Despite food aid from the West, the Soviet winter will be cold and hungry.
Addressing the wisdom of Washington providing economic aid, Zbigniew Brzezinski, a member of the Carter administration, said, "We should be forthcoming only if the Soviet government adopts a wide range of programs of economic and political reform. Aid is not a reward...aid is supposed to make things work. Unless there is a comprehensive program, there isn't anything there aid."

President Bush has said he expects Soviet reform to accelerate, declaring that the coup "frees up Gorbachev to work with Yeltsin to see reforms continue."

The future relationship between the two leaders may have been previewed last Friday when Gorbachev joined Yeltsin on stage to address the Russian Parliament. Ignoring Gorbachev's opposition, Yeltsin signed a decree that outlawed the Communist Party within Russia, fired the director of Tass and shut down six Communist Party newspapers. Gorbachev promised to turn over control of Russia's natural resources to the Russian Republic. While the two agreed to form a coalition, it appeared the pendulum of power was swinting in Yeltsin's direction.
Voice of democracy
Within the American ideal of democracy, political voices are not silenced because they are offensive. voices are not silenced because they are offensive-Voicing this consideration, Stephen Cohen, director of Voicing this consideration, Stephen Cohen, director of Russian Studies at Princeton, said that closing down newspapers and banning political parties shouldn't be newspapers and banning political parties shouldn't be done. "Either you proceed democratically and constitudone. "Either you proceed demo tionally or you do not," he said.

Cohen was also disturbed over members of the Russian Parliament shouting down Gorbachev and suggested the problem of mob rule should not be viewed as a frivolous concern.
Speaking of Gorbachev's future, George F. Kennan, the Soviet scholar who authored Arnerica's containment policy during his tenure as Ambassador to the U.S.S.R.; gaid "everyone in public life has his moment and going onto another generation and another group of problems."
Kennan acknowledged the tightrope Gorbachev has walked for the past few years. He reasoned that even though the party and police were not as powerful as they had been, they remained a potent force. Thus, Gorbachev was likely anxious to keep them on board while clinging "to his belief that the party could be made a suitable instrument of change." While respecting Gorbachev's loyalty, Kennan said, "I think he's wrong."
The Russian republics are not convenient packages and Kennan said the central government can no longer hold them together. The day of the empire that embraces different languages and nations is past. Citing the Austrian, Hungarian and Turkish empires, Kennan noted that all have succumbed to the forces of nennan noted

In a prophetic editorial that appeared in The Los Angeles Times on August 11, former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger wrote that the United States ought to reassess its commitment to Gorbachev. While giving the Soviet president credit for embarking on the road to reform, Kissinger said that today "nearly all Soviet democratic reformers are...opposed to him."

Gorbachev tom

Noting that Gorbachev would not be the first architect of change to be swallowed by the forces he unleashed, Kissinger wrote, "Destiny and his own manipulative penchant have transformed him from a leader into a broker between the democratic reformers, who accept him only for want of a more authentic leader."

Kissinger pointed out that Gorbachev was forced to try to appease both groups because if either side emerged as the absolute victor, he would find himself expendable.

Acknowledging, as did Kennan, the unlikelihood of the Soviet empire remaining intact, Kissinger wrote, "Unity is unobtainable without repression, which would undermine hopes for democracy, decentralization and even peace."

The Soviet Union is a nation which encornpasses 102 nationalities that speak over 100 different languages. There is no center left to hold them together. Perhaps Gorbachev has finally learned what former Foreign Minister Eduard Schevardnadze has said: "The party cannot be refcrmed."

Mikhail Gorbachev's place in history will be enshrined for surveying the road that the Soviet Union now looks down. The task falls to another generation of Soviet leadership to pave the road.

Syracuse University is releasing information about rape and sexual assault to incoming student groups in order to comply with a New York state law that takes effect Sunday.

If the state law had already been in effect, SU would have fallen short of the full mandate because it did not release the information to incoming students.
"Incoming". students clearly implies students who are not yet on campus, said SU senior Lindy Crescitelli, who serves as co-chairman on the Safety Advisory Committee.
Institutions of higher learning are mandated by the state law to provide information to incoming students about laws, ordinances and regulations of sex offenses.

These include

- The penalties for committing sex offenses.
- The procedures at college for dealing with sex offenses.
- The f vailability of counseling and support services for victims. - The nature of common instances of sexual offenses on campits.

Law mandates committees
Universities were required to set up Advisory Committees on Campus Security to review current campus security policies and make recommendations for improvement to the chancellor.
"The committee tried to comply with the state law by sending out the information in a July issue of The (Syracuse) Fecond," Crescitelli said.

During the summer, however, the university decided not to accept the recommendations of the committee, which is onethird students.

A letter from Benjamin Baez, judicial adviser, received by one member of the committee over the summer stated: "There has been a change of plans... The staff of (the Admissions Office) did not feel it appropriate that our information be released as we intended.

Proposal pulled

The committee proposed a four-page insert that met the minimum requirement of the aw, but the Office of Admissions pulled it citing there was "too much information that would scare students," according to Crescitelli.

Desmonique Bonet, an SU junior and the other co-chair of the committee, disagrees with that office's reasoning.
"There was nothing scary in it," she said. "It was just information on how to avoid an uncomfortable situation."

And, she added, people should be afraid after reading the statistics.
"People need a sense of fear about this issue," Bonet said. Parents would even have more respect for (SU) if the information was reported

Bonet said she was under the assumption that the committee, which is required by the law to be one-third student, one-third faculty and one-third administration, would have the final say to the chancellor
"Nobody told us the Office of Admissions would have a rubber stamp on it," she said.
Joan Gibson, director of the SU Rape Crisis Center, submitted the four-page insert to The Daily Orange to provide the information to students. This

Support S.C.A.R.ED. rally  At least 12 times last year on the Syracuse University campus, a woman's body was violated by an unwelcome party. It is safe to assume that many more rapes went unreported.Not coincidentally, seven of last year's victims were freshmen raped during what is known as the vulnerable "honeymoon period" - the time from the beginning of the semester until Thanksgiving.

Forgotten cyclists: watch out

What a rush. You're heading back to school this fall with your new Schwinn bike. You're ready to cruise onto campus and show everyone how invincible you are. After a summer of hopping trails, negotiating curves while going 38 mph downhill and weaving your way through city streets, the Syracuse University campus should be a cinch.

BE

SAFE torists are watching out for new street signs, other motorists, and pedestrians. The city is watching its reputation with the area residents. And the University is watching its pocketbook. Bicycle traffic safety is getting the shaft.

In the Ideal Campus Setting, there are bike lanes so cyclists can travel safely on the right side of the road. A nother thought is a reduced speed limit, or even signs that alert motorists to bicycle traffic. Some campuses even have adequate bike parking so cyclists can protect their investments.

I guess these considerations were left on the planning room floor.

More than 250,000 cyclists are injured in accidents every year, most of which happen within one mile of home.
Approximately one-half of all cyclists killed in accidents each year are over the age of 14.

Of all cycling fatalities, 70 percent are caused by head injuries, 85 percent of which could have been avoided by wearing properly fitted protective head gear.
So the solution is plain to see. You've got to look out for number one. First and foremost, wear a helmet. So what if it's not attractive. Ive never seen a healthy looking dead person. Be visible and ride defensively on the road. The motorists around campus right now are just as preoccupied with the changes as you are. It's your responsibility to let them know you're there.

Obey all traffic laws and use hand signals to alert motorists of your actions. Cyclists who blow through red lights are simply accidents waiting to happen Ride on the right hand side of the road, WITH the flow of traffic. It also helps to understand your bike and all its functions so you can ride with confidence.

Aside from being fun, riding a bike is one of the best ways to get around. You don't use gas, contribute to air pollution, add to automobile congestion or have to pay for parking. And biking is one of the greatest forms of exercise. In a contest between a car and bike, however, a car always comes out first.

the burden of rape, we are all burdened.

The new tramic lights will be suspended on a wire strung diagonally across the intersections.

Funds for the lights will be drawn from the project's original two-year budget, which was designed for "these kinds of adjustments."

The shatdown of University Place, which is frequented by students and used quented by students and used to be a major car and bus route, may make it safer for pedestrians, but it made other roads far too dangerous, Zenick said.

Other university ronds may be up for adjustments as well, Kaiser said, pending further observation.
Zenick said based on feed back she received, other areas such as Comstock Avenue in front of Shaw, Dellplain and Booth halls should also be considered.
"I think the reaction of putting the lights at University Place and Comstocic will slow down thingg," Kaiser slow

Volunteer deals with  By ANDREA IEYAVEERAN

 DO Contributing WriterWhen Richard Rivera was in training to be a teacher, he heard the story of a man who had lived in the jungles of Guatemala with the Peace Corps. When the man returned to the United States, he tried the job Rivera is now doing.

The man couldn't finish, according to the story. He said the jungles were safer.
Rivera, who graduated from Syracuse University with the Class of 1990 , is a member of Teach For America. The organization is a nationwide teacher corps of people from different grounds. Members commit two grounds, Members commit two years to teaching in rural and years to teaching in rural and urban areas with teacher shorturban areas with teacher shortages. Salaries range from ages. Salaries ra $$ 17,000$ to $$ 29,000$.

At SU, Rivera studied political science. He now teaches 8th grade social studies at Elijah D. Clark Junior High School in the Brons.
"You're not teaching under normal circumstances," Rivera said. "It's a poverty-stricken area. and you have to be aware of that."

One of the reasons for the teacher shortage in an area like the Bronx, he added, is that most teachers don't want to deal with the headaches that come with the job.

The headaches of teaching

On any given day, there can be many headaches in a school like Rivera's. Most of his students come from siagle parent homes or broken homes. Many have been abused or have had babies. On a regular basis they see what most other kids only see on television - thef, violent crime and drugs.
"You can't go in with the mentality that you're going to save them," Rivera said. "That's wrong and dangerous. They won't learn anything. You're there to teach."

The most difficult experience so far for Rivera occurred two days before Christmas. One of the school's studente was shot and killed by a group of kids driving by in a car. The shooting driving by in a car. The shooting took place during lunch period right in front of the school.
"You learn a lot about yourself and your limits because you're tested all the time," Rivera said.
Teaching in a situation like his is like "performing on stage - and it's a solitary act," he said.
A while ago, though, a student from the high school where Rivera student taugint during training called him. The call came all the way from L.A., and the student had called just to talk and say "hi." Rivera said the call meant a lot to him

Helping a community
Teach For America is a great way to give of your time, he said.

Rivera joined because teaching had always been one of his interests. The organization was ideal for him because it is geared towards non-education majors and offers the chance to give something back to the community.

He especially encouraged minority students to get involved in the group. Many of the kids in inner city areas are AfricanAmerican and Hispanic and need positive role models, he said.
Rivera still misses his days at SU sometirnes.

College isn't the raal world - it's a ball," Rivera said. "The real world isn't always too real wrorld isn't always too Rivera has also become more eritical of some aspects of college IIfe.
"You don't get taught a malticultural perspective, it's all very Euro-centric." he said. "We need all minorities in the history books."
When his two years with Teach for America are up, Rivera says he plans to teach for a year or two longer. After that he plans to go on to law school and possibly get invalved in government. Then he might come full circle and teach again.
Rivera said Teach For Americn is like the Peace Corps slogan, "the toughest job you"ll ever love."

Keeping SU ID proves worthwhile

By LAURIE HEROLD

Do Contributing Writer
Hold onto that orange Syracuse University identification card, even if the picture is terrible.
The card has plenty of worthwhile uses, according to Pat Marcely of the SU Onfice of Reaidence Services.
Marcely said the card can save time and money in several ways.

Presentation of the D at certain Centro bus stops allows the student to ride free to and from the university. Schedules and maps of these shuttles are available from SU Transit Serv ice $(443-4437)$ and can be found in the Schine Student Center.
Students also can save money on Carrier Dome tickets by using their ID, she said.

The 10 can be encoded with money for use in vending machines. It can also be encoded with money for use as a SUpercard.
SUpercards allow students to have accounts from which they can pay for food on campus by presenting the ID. Encoding is done in multiples of $$ 25$. SU Dining Services gives a 3 percent discount for encodings of $$ 100$ and an 8 percent discount for encodings of $$ 200$. No sales tax is charged on either food purchased with the account money or on the money put into the account.

Key to the campus
The card can be used for access to some campus buildings such as the Archbold and Flanagangymnasiums, some acadernic buildings after hours and libraries, where it is shown at entrances.
Recently installed card scanning locks permit only students with Ds to gain access to some residence halls.

Students living on North Campus can use the card to enter their own residence halls 24 hours a day and can get into any other residence halls between 8 a.m. and 8 p.m

Marcely said cards are intially available free of charge but replacement cards must be purchased at room 204 Steele

New York Times Supreme Courtcorrespondent Linda Green house admitted that 25 years ago, she ignored the Supreme Court.

My mind (was) a blank," she maid. But "the Court is on the front burner these days."

Greenhouse spoke Tuesday night in Goldstein Auditorium about changing times and the Court.
She said it was odd speaking to a college audience on a warm August night about the Court, in light of current world events. But, the Court is important, she said.
"Democracy is too important to be taken for granted anywhere," she said.

"I think it's fair to wonder if (the Supreme Court) has the breadth and vision and back ground to deal with current issues," she said.

But she said she thinks the Court's judgments are "about right" concerning cases that deal with the press.

Ruling protects press
Referring to the 1964 New York Times vs. Sullivan case that gave the press protection against libel suits and a recent decision allowing reporters to paraphrase ideas, she said the Court has been sensitive to the "dangers" of inaccurate quotes.

She said the ruling permits reporters to "clean language without changing meaning" of a quoted subject's actual or intended malice.

And while she said the Court's decisions havenot hurt the press, she fears that it may freeze actions of some newspapers in cluding The New York Times.

The paper "kind of decided to go along with it" when the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, under privacy rights, refused to provide a transcript of the audiotape of the Space Shuttle Challenger crew's last seconds. The paper filed a request under the Freedom of Information Act, but did not bring it to the Supreme Court.

She said the paper feared a Suprerne Court decision that would threaten the press' ability to obtain information.

Syracuse University defines rape as any form of nonconsensual sexual intercourse committed by physical force, threats, or intimidation. Sexual intercourse includes anal, oral and vaginal penetration.

Sexual assault involves any actual or attempted sexual activity, including sexual intercourse, sexual touching, exhibitionism, or sexual language of a threatening nature.

Nonconsensual sexual activity includes situations where a person is unable to consent because of physical force, threats, mental incapacitation, physical helplessness due to drug or alcohol consumption, or unconsciousness.

Sexual offenses are punishable by the Penal Laws of the State of New York. An offender may receive a misdemeanor sentence of a maximum of one year imprisonment or a felony sentences which could mean up to life in prison.

Syracuse University publishes regulations on Rape and Sexual Assault in the Syracuse University Rape and Sexual Assault Policy in the Student Handbook. Sanctions for such offenses include suspension and permanent expulsion.

key to prevention is education. Syracuse University is dedicated to providing the information and resources necessary to fight the issues of rape and sexual assault within the campus community.

With education as a premise, it is crucial to understand the circumstances under which most sex offenses affecting our students occur.

Afunction of the University R.A.P.E. Center is to report rape statistics. These reports indicate that most cases involve alcohol, are between people of the same race and are committed by non-stranger, perpetrators, Rape is a crime of opportunity; it occurs both on and off-campus, Reports verifyithat many of the persons who reportincidents of rape request formal 䍜ciplinaty action. The University Judicial System and the District Attorneys Office are the resources utilized most often for this purpose.

Each month specific statistics are available through the R.A.PE. Center (315) 443-7273. In addition, these figures are printed in the Syracuse Record and The Daily Orange.

Something to Think About

In a national survey of 3,187 college women, 478 reported having been raped. As the breakdown shows, only $10.6 \%$ of the offenders were complete strangers.

COMMUNICATING ABOUT SAFETY

As with many crimes, the key to preventing rape and sexual assault is awareness. Students must recognize that they can become victims and therefore need to take precautionary measures.

At Syracuse University, the campus security department, the Office of Residence Life, the University R.A.P.E. Center, and student organizations such as Students Concerned About Rape Education and the Greek Council are working together to help educate students, faculty and staff about the crime of rape and how they can protect themselves from becoming victims.

RESIDENCE LIFE STAFF

Residence Life staff members conduct safety and crime prevention programs throughout the year. As soon as students arrive on campus for the beginning of the fall semester, information is distributed and meetings are held on safety and personal security as part of orientation. In addition, Residence Life Staff conduct safety and crime prevention programs throughout the year.

CARD-KEY ACCESS SYSTEM

The card-key access system is being phased in throughout the campus. Installation in residence halls will be updated by Fall 1991. Students gain access to their residence hall by inserting their ID cards into the card-reading device at the entrance.

BLUE LIGHT SECURITY SYSTEM

Emergency alarms have been installed at strategic locations around the Main and South campuses. They are identifiable by blue lights above the alarm box. When the alarm button is struck, the warning signal summons a security patrol to the scene within seconds.

SECURITY OFFICE
Security patrols the campus 24 hours per day, seven days a week. The Security Office presents crime prevention workshops throughout the year in residence halls, fraternity and sorority houses, and through staff development programs. All Security personnel are trained in handling cases of rape and sexual assault. Female officers are available to assist in these cases upon request.

Student Safety Services provides student marshals who assist security officers by patrolling campus and monitoring all residence areas from 7:00 p.m. - 3:00 a.m. On request, they will provide an escort to and from evening classes. When this service is unavailable, Security will provide the escort service.

EUS SERVICE

After studying late at the library or laboratory, students may utilize the University's free shuttle bus service, which runs between residential and academic buildings. Schedules are available from the Security Office, Bird Library and the Schine and Goldstein student centers.

UNIVERSITY R.A.P.E. CENTER

Syracuse has taken a proactive stance against rape and sexual assault with establishment of the Rape: Advocacy, Prevention, and Education Center. The Center provides support and assistance to victims of rape and sexual assault. The Center also conducts educational programs across campus, in residence halls and fraternities and sororities. A trained advocate is available on-call 24 hours per day. During regular business hours an advocate can be reached by calling the R.A.P.E. Center at $x-7273$.

S.C.A.R.ED. is a student organization formed in the fall of 1989 with the purpose of offering support to su vivors of sexual harassment, sexual assault and rape. Through educational programs, S.C.A.R.ED. works to prevent future incidents. The office is located in the Schine Student Center (x-5352).

PEER SEXUALITY PROGRAM

The Peer Sexuality Program is a student-run, University-based student organization sponsored by the Office of Residence Life ( $x-3637$ ). The program holds issue-oriented workshops and provides an information/referral service. Workshop topics include relationships, sex roles, birth control, rape, homosexuality, and sexually transmitted diseases.

GREEK SYSTEM

Greek Council, the governing body for Greek letter organizations, is actively involved in rape education programming. Greek Council will also provide support and assistance to any person wishing to file a complaint against a Greek letter organization. The office is located in the Schine Student Center ( $x-2635$ ).

A student-initiated program within the Greek System is the BIue Light Safe House Program. Chapter houses on campus displaying a blue light are places offering safety to victims of attack. These chapters have educated their members about the crime of rape and sexual assault. Information about the Blue Light Safe House Program can be obtained from Greek Council steps to reduce the risk of becoming victims of any violent crime. They must be aware that the problem exists on all campuses, and then they must incorporate some common-sense safety precautions into their daily routine:- Don't prop open security doors in the residence halls.

- Lock your own door -- even if your roommate frequently forgets his or her key.
- Don't let people who don't have proper ID cards into the residence halls. Only hosts should be responsible for letting in their guests.
- Call campus security if nonresidents are loitering around a residence hall or wandering through the halls, day or night.
- Always walk with someone you know well and trust, especially at night or in isolated areas of campus.

> After a summer of laughs at the movies (i.e. City Slickers, Naked Gun 2 1/2, Sonpdish etc.). this fall's films are largely sci-ence-fiction and fantasy.

> After losing popularity in the mid-1980s, the genre is back in full force with a deluge of offbeat mythical characters who will be appearing on the silver screen in the next few months.

> Paramount Pictures has two such films ready for release. The Addams Fannily will be in theaters at Thanksgiving and Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country, the last voyage of the original crew, will boldly go where that film series has gone before beginning Dec. 13.
> Although this is the 25th anniversary of the original Star Trek, the preview, which has been showing in theaters since mid-summer, has attracted more guffaws than genuine enthusiasm. However, The Addams Farnily preview has been getting great response which will likely translate into rich box office take.

Other fantasy/sci-fi films on the way include Morgan Creek's Freejack starring Mick Jagger and Silence of the Lambs' Dr. Lecter, Anthony Hopkins.

Collegeg Woman?

With all the classes, papers and exams, it's sometimes hard to fit another thing into your busy schedule - even something as important as your own health care.

At Planned Parenthood, we understand. We can schedule your appointment in about three days of your call. We have new evening hours - until 8:45pm on Tuesday and Thursday - if you just can't get away during the day. And, of course, we continue to provide the affordable, confidential, reproductive health services women have trusted for over sixty-six years.

Even a busy study schedule shouldn't come between you and your well-being. Call us at (315)475-5525 for more information about our services or to schedule an appointment.

Do it for yourself.

Syracuse probe postponed again

DO Staff Reports

Perhaps Syracuse University is hoping good things come to those who wait.

For the second time in the past four months, SU has delayed an announcement on its internal investigation of the Or angemen's basketball team

A report that was originally supposed to be filed in the spring will now be filed in "mid-autumn," according to SU spokesman Robert Hill.

The internal probe, along with an NCAA probe, is the result of a Post-Standard series published last December detailing possible NCAA rule violations.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Brien's money
New York Yankees top draft pick Brien Taylor has finally signed, though he's still not worth as much as either Mike Witt or Tim Leary

Taylor ended his holdout Tuesday as he signed a $$ 1.55$ million contract to become the highest paid player in the history of baseball's amateur draft.

Tennis anyone?
On the men's side, top seeds struggled tut survived. Ivan Lendl lost the first two sets and staved off two match points before beating Richard Krajicek.

Stefan Edberg was a point away from being down two sets to one before rallying to beat Bryan Shelton in four sets.

Boris Becker, Michael Stich and Jim Courier won easily.

There were no upsets on the women's side as Arantxa San-chez-Vicario, Mary Jo Fernandez and Martina Navratilova won easily.

But really, now that Andre Agassi lost, does anything else matter?

NFL news
San Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana was placed on injured reserve and may miss up to four games.

Dexter Manley, cut by Phoenix on Monday, was resigned by the Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

In the spring, SU said the announcement would be delayed until its new chancellor, Kenneth Shaw, took office. Now Hill said the report will be postponed because of a wealth of information.

As you investigate, information often leads to more information," Hill said in the August 21 Post-Standard. "You can't consider it a complete job until you chase down all the alleys. And that's what's happening now."

Hill said that the delay was not caused by any shocking discoveries. University officials said the report will be given to Shaw in October or later.

Chiefs awaken
The Syracuse Chiefs continued their roll on Tuesday with a $5-4$ win over Pawtucket. The Chiefs have won four in a row.
The Chiefs haven't lost since last Saturday's game when in a truly bizarre baseball moment, Luis Mercedes of Rochester threw his helmet in the face of threw his helmet in the face of Ty died?

Tonight in Anaheim, Calif., Ty Detmer of Brigham Young University begins his defense of the Heisman Trophy against Florida State in the Pigskin Classic.

Detmer has taken a media and professional scout beating over the offseason, as his twogame, 10 -interception performance to end last season has been magnified.

Many pro scouts have said Detmer is a fluke and will not even be drafted next April. Tonight, against the top-ranked team in the nation, Detmer has his chance to prove his critics wrong

COLEMAN  Continued from Page 24

The SU football schedule will not interfere with the game, since the Orangemen will play an aftemon game on Oct. 26 at Rutgers.
The Nets-Heat game of a year ago featured just one SU player ago featuredint guard Sherman Douglas. Heat center Rony Douglas. Heat center Rony Seikaly, now one of the game's highest-paid players, did not. make the trip because of a sprained ankle.

Nets Vice President Willis

Reed attended a press conference in Syracuse in late July to promote the game. Reed realized, of course, that he was on the hot seat in this town for not reuniting Owens, who was drafted by the Sacramento Kings, with ex-teammate Coleman.
"We really liked Billy, but for our team to be cemented we needed another building block," Reed said, referring to Georgia Teech point guard Kenny Anderson, who was taken with the Nets' No. 2 pick.

Reed said he pictured the Anderson-Coleman duo as a possible "John Stockton-Karl Malone combination."

Anderson's aelection is New Jersey's indication that Mookie Blaylock, a first-round selection of two years ago, will be phased out of their plans.

There still may be a second former Orangeman in the game. The Nets are pursuing the services of Rafael Addison, who left SU in 1986 and played four years professionally in Europe. Addison recently completed an impressive stint in the Nets' free agent/rookie camp.

Last year's team fell victim to intra-squad squabbles and dissention but according to Schulte, those kind of petty problems are in the past.
"They look at what happened and that's that," Schulte said. and that's that, Schulte said. "It makes them more deteroriented goals rather than individual ones. The new recruits have blended really well with the juniors, too."

That kind of "all for one, one for all" spirit is a key element to the team's success, Schulte said.
"We play nobody we can't beat," Schulte aaid. "We have to play them all one at a time and if we stay together we could pull some end-of-the season surprises."

Hairy events cause cut-up of Yankees

About a week and a half ago, I really missed working for The Daily Orange. Why, you ask?

No. it was not because of the wonderful contribution this paper makes to the campus, nor was it because of the endless great times I had here.

DAVE BUSCEMA  SPORTS

 OPANIONActually missed this paper because an event transpired at that time that so irked me, so annoyed me, so annoyed GERED ME, that I was compelled to tear off a vicious, hate-filled, incoherent piece of babble in this very space.

Now despite the fact that it is old news and my ire has been somewhat quelled, I will address the Don Mattingly haircut idiocy.

Don Mattingly, the captain and leader of the Yankees, the man who has played with a heinous back injury, the pre-injury lock for the Hall of Farne, was benched because. because..

Because manager Stump Merril and general manager Gene Michael were envious of Mattingly's full head ing hairlines?

Because Michael was upset that Mattingly had requested a trade from a team he has serviced for eight seasons with almost perernial allstar play, and without a postseason reward?

Because management suddenly felt an inexplicable urge to return the Yankees image to the halcyon days of George Steinbrenner?

None of the above. The correct answer is: because Michael and Meranswer is: because Michael an ril are MORONS. MORONS!

Even Michael and Merril's lack of baseball intelligence doesn't justify the complete ludicrousness of the situation. Talent and work ethic aside, Mattingly's role as captain was all but stripped during the benching. How are all the promising young players in the Bronx supposed to look up to a leader who is told to forget playing ball and go to Barbizon?
Still. despite all the madness of the situation, I did not expect to have to write something to express my anger. I would instead channel my outrage through the New York media, who would surely blast Yankee management for their sophomoric stance. In fact. I smiled with devilish glee, in pondering all the different ways the vulturous tabloids would slice and dice the Yankees.
I hurriedly slapped my 35 cents down as 1 picked up my copy of The Daily News. There it was, in Bill Madden's column, a debasing. and downright nasty tirade about the haircut antics. Unfortunately, and incredibly, however, Madden blasted Mattingly Madden, a writer $I$ once respected and admired, said Mattingly was being silhy in waning to keep his own hairstyle the way he wanted. because of Yankee tradition. Tradition, Mr. way: with hustle, determination and talent.

The Syracuse University women's volleyball team has finally dumped its Rodney Dangerfield image.
According to coach Dan Schulte, the squad has gained national respect after last year's 35-10 campaign.
"I think people fear us now," Schulte said. "We got national respect. We beat enough teams last year to be recognized us a top team in the East."
SU finished last season ranked No. 12 in the region. They also won a school record 24 consecutive matches, after a shaky $11-9$ start.

The Orangewomen will open their 1991 season Friday night at 7:30 in Manley Field House against the University of Alabama.

The 1991 Orangewomen will be virtually urirecognizable to SU volleybal! fans, according to Schulte.
"This is a younger team than I expected." Schulte said. "I expect to use a lot of everybody. There will be a lot of new faces on the court."

A new style of play as well as the loss of several key players has also helped to transform the look of the Orangewomen.

SU lost last season's setter and cocaptain Sherry Cowling when she transferred to Florida State. A seconer was lost when highly touted freshman Stacy Lee Bollinger also transferred. Bollinger le

Just when Schulte thought he had recovered from the loss of his top setters, the Orangewomen received a blow when junior Denise Pearman blew out her knee. She will miss the entire season
"When we lost Denise, we lost a lot of upper class depth." Schulte said. "She could play all the positions. We'll really miss her serve, too.

Despite the cold reality of losing three of the team's top players. Schulte tries to keep the team fired up with great expectations.
"I'm really excited about this squad,"

Former Orangemen center Derrick Coleman will return to Syracuse University as a member or the National Basketball Association's New fersey Nets. The Neta will play the Philadelphia 7Gers in an NBA exhibition game in the Carrier Dome on Oct. 26.

Junior outside hitter Aimee Mask misses a dig in a match last season. Mask is one of three returning starters for the Orangewomen's front line. SU will begin its season Friday

As a student representative for a travel company, he became disilusioned selling students trips organized by executive who lacked he dedir product suited to a student's needs. Raiff product suited to a student's heed". Rait Wave Vacations" was incorporated.
Currently. Raiff organizes trips to Cancur his specialty). Jamaica, and Bahamas for High School and College students. In his first year Raiff boasted 7.900 participants! He recently traveled to Europe to research and negotiate expansion opportunities. He is planning Ski trips to the Alps targeted to college students and recent graduates and teen tour trips for Junior High School students.
aiff's high integrity company philosophy works. Although campus reps promote his trips for commission, Raiff is quick to reward ind viduals whose sales results do not reflect their genuine efforts with a relies on networking and personal contacts for direct mail campaigns and elassified advertisements.
Raiff's success results from hard work and perseverence. He saved every penny from part time jobs while in school to raise capital to launch "HeatWave Vacations."
Becorning incorporated at a young age and dealing with the related legal issues was no easy feat. Even if Raiff loses money in the end, he says he would consider it "tuition" for everything he's leamed. Running a business, negotiating with lawyers. dealing with accountants, even ordering office supplies has been a priceless and valuable education.

We interviewed the experts to get some advice for would be entrepreneurs. We spoke with Kimberlee Walsh, President of the Intermational Association for Collegiate Entrepreneurs and Professor Constance Bagley, of Stanford University School of Business and author of Managers and the Legal Environment Strategies for the 21st Century.

What are the first steps to becoming a student entrepreneur?Professor Bagley: Find a product or service where there are sufficient barriers to entry, so that you won't be eliminated by someone with a larger company than you Find a niche market.

Ms. Walsh: Find your peers. Find other entrepreneurs on your campus, visit an ACE (Association of Collegiate Entrepreneurs) chapter, network in business classes, etc. Everyone will say you Can't do it. You need to look in the face of potential to succeed. Seek advice from potential to succeed. Seek advice from yourcess. Work schedule, sleeping habits and diet contribute to the ability of the young entrepreneur to succeed.

What are the most important questions an aspiring student entrepreneur should ask him/herself?

Professor Bagley: Ask yourself 1. Why do I want to do it? Have clear objectives.
2. How can 1 find a product or service am excited about? takes work and selfsacrifice. You need a high energy level. 3. How can lassociate with professors and business people to help facilitate the successful realization of my project? In other words, network Ms. Walsh:

1. Do I believe in what I am doing? It helps to be dedieated. helps to be dedicated.
2. Would I do it without gerting paid, and can I take a risk? The experience is invaluable, but often it takes a while to reap the financial rewards

What's your dream?

American products don't do as well in japan as they should. I'd like to help American companies become more competitive.

What do you do?

I'm using the Macintosh and a program called EG Word to translate Japanese articles into English for my advanced modern Japanese class. It's a great way to expand my knowledge of the Japanese language and become farniliar with the more common phrases and symbols. The hard part was learning more than 2,000 characters in the Japanese symbolic alphabet:

What are you most proud of?

The fact that I'm able to write, in Japanese, to friends in Japan. I write words out phonetically, and then the software translates everything into symbols.
For me, writing in Japanese without a Macintosh would be impossible"

"We're the quickest-and most cost-effective-way to get the word out. The Ad Agency is a completely student-run advertising agency. We have 25 student employees. Our clients include student groups universiy departmens, and oflcampus businesses.
we can get a mes business: creating ads, doing budgets, and keeping track of expense and paperwork--even for automatically sending out invoices. We do all of our accounting and general ledger work on the Macintosh. We keep a database of our clients that helps us keep track of all the work we've done for them."

What are you most proud of "Our clients really trust us. And our protits are up 124 percent from last year. Beyond that, we feel it's great that the agency offers a way for students to use their business skills and their creative inclinations."

Why Macintosh?

With a Macintosh, once you've used one program for a little while, you can use any program. Because they all work the same way. In a business ike ours, where there are a lor of different students in the office, that makes it a lot easier to train them.

The most important part is that the Macintosh never gets in the way of what you want to do. If we want to take names and addresses from our client database in HyperCard and use them in another programsay, a word processor, so we can send out letters-it's easy. We just copy the information from one program, and paste it into the other. If we want to create a great ad or draw a graphic we just do it. It's that easy.

We couldn't run our business without it. We've already made plans What's your dream? "I want to design spaces that have great personality.

What do you do?

"Our assignment for our master's thesis was to design a dance school needs and a site-a nicely landscaped hillside. I wanted to design somerhing that was an expression of the use of space for dancers, and also something that responded to the site Ithought that the building should be designed from the inside outthat the inside was the most important part, and should inspire.

started from scratch
The first part of the process was and figure out the best way to to adrantage of the site The important thing was to stay open to different ideas and not to ger locked into one solution. The Macintosh let me explore a lot of different options. I decided there should be three basic volumes: the performance space, practice spaces, and offices and classrooms.

The next stage was to work out the floor plan and to design the roof shapes. The challenge with dance spaces is that they should be very spaces is that they should be very simple. You should just have four walls, with very few wind ws because they can be distracting. To create something unique, you need to work very hard Macintosh let me constandy witch berween two-dimensional floor plans and three-dimensional models.

When we were done, we used the Macintosh to write a complete 20 -page proposal for our solution, including technical specs."

What are you most proud of? When you start designing a building, you star with ideas about how the building will feel, not how it will look. The hardest part is giving shape to a feeling or mood. I think this project

Why Macintosh?

I'd never used a Macintosh before this project. And we used it for everything. We only had seventeen weeks for the roject, so I didn't have much time to learn bout he computer. It was a litue hard at first, but picked it up really quickly.

Design is a very back-and-forth process. You do something, you look at it, and then you decide what to do to it. You always start with a vision, but you need to work it all out. It's how you figure it out, and what the details are, that makes the difference.

The Macintosh lets you visualize in three dimensions quickly. If you just want to see one by hand. But if you want to see many perspec tives, or see many ideas, it's much better to use a Macintosh. It helps you try more options in the early stages, when you can have the biggest effect on a building.

With Macintosh, I could walk through It's the closest thing to building it."

re beginning, there was the computer And it was confusing.
Confusing to set up, confusing to learn, and confusing to use.

So at Apple, we decided to make a new kind of computer-an easy-to-use computer. Before we designed it, we did extensive research on how human beings think, learn, read, communicate, remember, and understand, as well as how they interact with technology and machines.

We took what we learned and created Macintosh-the personal computer designed to work the way people work. It was the world's first intuitive computer. And it was quickly recognized as a major breakthrough in personal computing.

What's your dream?
"I want to design products that add to the quality of our lives -things that celebrate how we live.

The world is becoming a more and more homogenized place, and products are becoming more and more alike. I want to find a way to create products that are mass-produced, yet look like they were created by a craftsman, not a machine."

What do you do?

"This quarter, I wrote a Macintosh program that changes the design and manufacturing proce interactive which promotes greater exploration in the design phase. Second, it randomizes the manufacturing phase, allowing for variations among the finished products.

Right now, rm using this program to create spoons-although it could be tailored to create car fenders, bicycle seats, bowls, or anything else. The program randomly chooses from different sizes, scales, and iterations of shapes that are spoonlike-and presents the designer with options. Every time the designer runs the program, it creates a totally different spoon. This way, designers can explore possibilities that they may not have conjured up in their own minds.

The program is also capable of introducing randomness to the manufacturing process. manufacturing designers usually have to give precise, completely planned commands to drive

In essence, letting the human brain control an artificial hand, arm, or leg. It's not a new idea; it's just that the technology keeps getting better and better. And now it's in the realm of the possible.The main thing we do involves silicon chips that translate between electronic signals and nerve impulses. So far we've implanted chips in animal nerves and proved that these chips can stimulate a nerve and record signals from it-essentially, talking back and forth to the brain.

"For term papers and other complex assignments, you may want to use a create a set of electronic index cards. They work of electronic index 3 -by- 5 cards; the difference is that they stay in your Macintosh, which means you'll in youer Iose them. You can write and draw on these cards, and even your own voice. You can also eate electronic links between cards. It's a great way to keep related ideas together. When it comes time to write your paper, you can use the Find and Search features of HyperCard to go instantly to the information you need."

Somewhere in the beginning of your paper, usually in the first paragraph, you'll want to dearly state your thesis-jour particular point of view on the topic

Writing the thesis of your paper is perhaps the most challenging part of the work. You want to be dear and concise, but also thoughtprovoking. Remember that the person who reads your paper is likely to be reading thirty, forty, maybe even a hundred other essays as, well To get noticed, you need to grab the reader's attention. Your thesis can help you do that.

Take the time to write and revise your thesis until it fully captures the complexity of your thoughts and ideas.

Sorme questions to ask as you read your theais staterment: - Is it dear? Will the reader understand the topic and the position you're aking?

- Is it compelling? Does it convince the reader tha your paper will be interesting, worthwhile to read? - Is it original? Does your thesis go beyond the obvious, beyond what has been said before? There's too much redundant clutter in this world. Be original "One of the great things about the Macintosh is how easily you can write and then revise your writing. I spend a lot of time working on the introduction of a pape revising until I'm really happy with it. think Macintosh encourages you to do better work because you can experiment-keep the good ideas, and throw out the bad."

- We ere:est

Now that you've written the thesis for your paper and dig in and write the first draft.

The important thing here is to block out a chunk of time on your calendar to write it-at least an hour or two for each page of text you hope to produce. Allow more time if you prefer a more leisurely pace

You'll need to concentrate. You might consider turning of the ringer on your phone and sending your roommate to the movies.
Some advice:

- Don't obsess, just write. Concentrate on geting the ideas down on paper; you can perfect the wording later Relax.

Connect your ideas. They should flow from one othe next. Concentrate on the argument you're making, and the words will come naturally.

- Use placeholders if you don't have the exact wording. If you can't seem to flesh out a particular the right words, or because you find you need to do more research-put in a placeholder and return later ofnish it. (It's rumored that Ernest Hemingway ended each day's writing in the middle of a sentence, so he'd have a clear place to begin the next day.)
"I have a Macintosh with a color monitor. Itry to write the first draft quicklySometimes Ifind the right words the first time through. Other times, Ill write a paragraph, and I won't be very happy with it. So inf put it in a different color, say red, which reminds me to come back to it later and work on it. Sometimes 1 get really ambitious and use a lot of different colors: red for things $I$ want to rework, blue for things that need more research, green for things that need more proof."

An important part of creating a stellar paper is spending the time to perfect it. Rewriting is the process of editing your own work to make it better. The best In's a in weverying they we pass l's a good idea to let some ame pass or if your deadline allows, a few days. The more distance you have from the paper, the more objective you can be.

Pointers:

- First, read through the paper to evaluate the flow of the argument. Have you made your points clearly? Are they in the right order? Are you missing any major points?

Are there any "grand leaps of logic" that need to be corrected? Are there extraneous ideas, paragraphs, or quotes that should be removed?

- Second, read for tone and style. These details give your writing flavor. Try reading it aloud to yourself or to a friend. Does the writing sound like you?
- Third, trim the fat from your writing. Haveyoubeen direct ${ }^{2}$ De yeurnake your peints ecenemiontly? Are there保 - Last, look at your "The Macintosh makes references. All cited them accurately. paste it where it belongs. paste it where it belongs Macintosh lets me focus on getting my ideas down on paper, rather than on how Volla You've moved your paragraph.

Set aside some time to proofread your paper. This is best done when you're alert-and calm Avoid doing it on the way to turning in your paper Sit at a desk, red pen in hand, and read carefully.

Misspellings, Gulty grammar, and factual errors are distracting at best-and at worst, may significantly lower your grade. Be diligent: Correct them all. A computer can greaty speed up the process by catcining misspellings and even many grammatical errors. Some word processing programs come with a thesaurus that Check Spelling... [is will suggest just

Once you've proofed your paper, all you have to do is print it. Which, on a Macintosh, is quite straight English soypu can't miss it (Formore advice on printing, see page 14.)

Some things to look for

- Factual errors. Make sure you've spelled the names of all major works, people, sources, and so forth correctly. Make sure your dates and other historical information are correct
- Misspelled words.
- Misused homonyms. For example, have you used it's" when you should have used "its"? Have you used "there" when you should have used "their"? - Double words. When people type, they often epeat words accidentally.
- Missing words. When your mind works faster than ou can type, it's easy to leave out words. Read carefully to make sure you haven't. Reading out loud lps a lor.
- Other grammatical errors. (If you'd like to brush up the books listed at the top of this pape)

Space Travel and Cultural GrowthThe space program that once rode a wave of national pride and support now nceds concrete justification. Increasing environmental awareness and decreasing government funds have led many people to question the need for human presence in space, or more specifically, the need to support such presence with approximately $0.3 \%$ of our gross national product (Lewis and Lewis 119). The traditional response to such criticisms is to cite the various "spin-off" technologies created from the space industry, such as Velcro and very round ball bearings. But this seems unfulfilling at best; as columnist George will noted, "we have justified space exploration in a very banal way; we have sold it on the basis that it produced nonstick frying pans" (quoted in White xviii). And in fact, more visionary supporters have begun to hail the space program for its cultural as well as its technological meritsi. Yet as visionaries, these supporters tend to analyze the space program in its adulthood, skipping over the current stage of infancy: they discuss galactic society and extraterrestrial interaction. Thus, there is a relative vacuum of discussion dealing with the cultural benefits of space travel in the near future

Yet these cultural benefits can be substantial. As space explorers shed the physical weight of flesh and bone, so may they shed the social weight of provincialism and cultural centrism. But while they must eventually resume the mantle of gravity, many will have permanently discarded their social biases. Upon their rerum to Earth, it is probable pat elite spaccfal biases. Upon their return to Earth, it is probable pat elite spacefai

Writing is hard work. There's no question about it. But if you follow the tips on this page-and use a Macintosh-you can make the process of writing manageable, and even enjoyable.

And who knows? Maybe nine hundred years from now, deep in an archive, students will come across one of your papers. And maybe they'll find, in reading it, how different your ideas are from theirs. But maybe they'll also find that students writing papers, even when separated by centuries, have quite a lot in common.

Why Macintosh?

"I use the Macintosh for a lot of things: for all of my writing, for my math and engineering problem sets, and even to connect to the mainframe computers on campus.

When it comes to papers, I use the Macintosh to write an outine. Then I spend a lot of time getting the introduction right. Sometimes, if only have short chunks of time to do my writing, ill focus on the ideas and not worry about things like word choice. I can come back and edit those things later. The Macintosh lets me keep my notes, quotations, and research organized and in one place, which makes writing the paper and composing the brbliography much easier.

When it comes to printing, I usually use a laser printer. The Apple LaserWriter is great because it prints exactly what you think it's going to."

DIPA program suffers from low enrollment

BY PAULA CHRISTIAN

DO Staff Wricer
Enrollment in the Division of International Programs Abroad for the fall of 1991 has dropped 40 percent from last year, due in part to the Persian Gulf war, according to Nirelle Galson, DIPA director.

The decrease in student enrollment at Syracuse University, coupled with the economic recession, has also contributed to lowering DIPA's enrollment, Galson said.
"The bulk of the students which participate in our DIPA programs live in the Northeast part of the coun try,"said Robert Yoshioka, DIPA associate director. "Since this area has been one of the hardest hit by the recession, many families do not have the extra funds to allow their children to go abroad. ${ }^{\circ}$
The decreased enrollment will not hure DIPA programs for the fall 1991 or spring 1992 semesters, Galson said.
"The decrease in enrollment will actually benefit students going abroad this semester," she said. "We are expecting smaller clasges, mone personal attention by the faculty and many group-excursions and field trips," she said.

Enroll or eliminate

In the long run, if DIPA enrollment does not increase, they will be forced to eliminate some programs, Galson said.
"We have' no reason to believe that enrollment will not go back up again," she said. "DIPA enrollment has been steadily increasing for the past 10 years and we are optimistic for the future years."
"We are already seeing a much better student responge so far this semester," said Yoshioka. Many more students are stopping by for applications and for information."
The program is one of the oldest largest, and most highly recognized international study programs in the country, Yoshioka said.
"We accept students from 150 universities and colleges across the country, "he said.

Students applying to study abroad do not need to know a foreign language, Galeon said, and she recommends that students have at least a 2.5 grade point average.
*The most important factors we are looking for in our students are those with committment, motivation, and an independent streak," Yoshioks said.

The deadline date for students inter. ested in studying abroad for the spring 1992 semester is Oct. 15.

Prison population hits high number

New York's prison population grew faster over the past five years than the The population of 40 other states. The number of prisoners in state institutions rose by 59.1 percent between 1985 and 1990 . According to the U.S. 1985 and 1990. According to the U.S. Statistics only eight states had a higher percentage increase.

The popularity of drugs is the main reason for the rise in the prison population, the Justice Department's statistics show.
"You can define the entire prison system in a word: drugs," said Jim Flateau, a spokesman for the State Division of Criminal Justice Services.
"Traditionally, robbery and burglary were the main crimes of commitment Not anymore," he said.

Dr. Edwin H. White, professor of forestry at State University College of Environmental Science and Forestry, visited Zambia this summer to help battle that country's famine

White and his graduate student Robson Mwiinga conducted research in Agro son Mwinga conducted research in Agrat Forestry to help revive Zambia's soil.

Agro-Forestry involves the combination of traditional farming of food crops with the planting of multi-purpose trees
The trees would produce fodder and fuel while at the same time allow the soil to receive more nutrients for future farming.

White said in Zambia 99 percent of the wood grown is used for fuel and people often have to waik 10 miles from their huts each week to gather this fuel.

This process is not only difficult, but t is also harmful to the soil, which is trampled and stripped of vegetation by the people on their hikes.
White and Mwinga are trying to determine which species of tree would be best for the tasks of revitalizing and serving the Zambian soil

They will report on the project at the American Society of Agronomy conferamerican Society of Agronomy conferOnce on

Eggers reminisces on growth, conflict

By KATHERINE DROUIN  DO Editor

Syracuse University's former Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers once had a fascinating office.
However, the wood-paneled room in the Tolley Administration Bullding was bare and devoid of everything expect essential furniture and papers toward the end of August.

His plaques and memorabilita had been removed or sat in corners, waiting for the chancellor's new office in Bird declared simply MELVIN A. EGGERS.

The office was emptied in anticipation of Egerers' Aug. 19 retirement. when he made way for the next chancellor, Ken neth A. Shaw

As Eggers spoke, the windowpanes shuddered slightly in their frames because of the construction taking place right beneath his office -- evidence of the continuing legacy of construction enacted during his term.

A huge bookshelf covered an entire wall, but Eggers said he hadn't had time to read any of the books on its seven to read any of the books on its seven shelves since he had been chancellor shelves since he had been chancellor.
"Actually, I think I did read one," he said with a slight Midwestern drawl. "It was an economics text.'

Economics paved the way

Economics was the path that led Eggers to SU in 1950. Describing his childhood as one of "very, very limited means," he attended college part-time for several years after high school. After receiving his baccalaureate from indiana University in 1941, he was drafted into the Navy, where he served during World War II. After the war, he completed his doctoral diasertation at. Yale University on the economic development of Japan From 1868 to 1900.

From there, he was hired as an associate professor of economics at the Maxwell School of Public Aftairs and Citizenship. Ten years later, he was named the department's chairman; 10 years after that, he was named vice chancellor for academic affairs and provost.
One year later, in 1971, he was named chancellor and president of SU.
"It's been a good ride," Eggers said, first goal was to steady the university as the storm of anti-war protests passed through the campus.
"The general condition of higher education was in turmonl," he said. "It was dificult to think of many goals other than stabilizing the situation."

Modernizing SU

Eggers' goals of modernizing the campus soon became evident, and he is now perhaps best known for the nearly 30 construction projects enacted during his term.

Eggers said he simply continued the development of SU that was started during Chancellor William P. Tolley's tenure in the 1950s.
"We got back on the track," Eggers Though Eggers said he doesn't want to be remembered solely for the buildings, he described the projects with ings.

If you go into the Hall of Languages, you know that the interior is not the original, but the exterior is," he said. "That says something about what we're doing - it's a hollowing out but keeping the basic character the same As the university developed, the students and faculty needed more facilities. he said. The university responded to that need.
"It's not like we put up a building and decided what we were going to do with it," he said. "I don't want people to think of the structure as a monument; a monument has no internal use.

The Washington Monument, you can facilities in which activity can occur. In that sense we can call it symbolic or suggestive of what's really going on.

Just call him 'Mer'
The name Mel Eggers has become a symbol of SU administration to students. During his terure, people casually referred to "Mel" when speaking of tuition increases or the latest campus controversy.
His position also helped Eggers to become an easy target in the name of the university,
"I don't take it personally," Eggers said. "I don't think they hate me.

And he sees angry protesters demon-

Quotes from  twenty-year chancellorship

What former Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers had to say over the years:

On campus growth in the 1980s There were very severe problems as the decade of the 70 s came to a close. The Dome was completed, but the university still did not have a student center and that was high on our list of priorities in the physical sense." - Dec. 1, 1989.

On the Schine Student Center, built in 1985
"It was critical. I don't know how we got along without it. When I go into the building and see the number of people, I wonder what they would have done if we didn't have the facility." - Dec. 1, 1989.

On the last two decades ...

The 70 s , in par ticular the first half of the "70s, were periods of anxiety. As the took began, we turesome, moreag gressive approach." - Dec 1, 1989.

On the future
"I think the university will conence growth. There is a sense of entreprencurship and progress that I think will be sustained throughout the 'sos." - Dec. 1, 1989.

Student leaders shock

Something shocking happened this summer.

For the first time in recent history, student leaders worked together effectively. The result is the creation of an event designed to make freshman week a bit less hokey. Autumn Street Festival, a day-long extravaganza featuring an arts and crafts fair, food and tunes, promises more than just a day of entertainment.

It marks the beginning of a new day. Groups that used to compete for Student Government Association funding and exposure now work together to provide viable social options for students on this campus.

But the ability for student leaders to collaborate extends beyond benefitting the campus socially. Cooperation can lead to more effective negotiations with the administration such as successful anti-tuition hike rallies. It also would lead to a unified campus voice rather than multiple self-interested cries.

Lack of unified leadership led to the downfall of student rallies and social events in past years, so the promise the coordination of this event holds is exciting.

Without collaboration, student groups competed to draw masses to their own events. Many worthwhile events failed because student organizations unwisely scheduled their biggest programs on the same evenings.

Co-sponsorship enables student groups to relax a bit and enjoy cosuccess. When this happens the inclination toward self-preservation vanishes and student groups readily assist each other.

Sharing and compromise, though not frequently practiced ideas on this campus, remain our best bet for getting anything done at this university.

LETTERS

Oppressed

To the editor:
Many of you have read in the local press about the gaybashing T-shirts sold and worn around the Syracuse University campus by some members of the Alpha Chi Rho fraternity
On the front they read, "Homophobic and Proud of it." On the back, "Club Faggots. Not Seals." The T-shirts were first sold and flaunted by fraternity members at SU's annual Spring Block Party
They were first spotted by me on A pril 22. I was stunned and incensed the moment $I$ saw them. They are a direct incitement to violence against gays and lesbians and therefore gays and lesbians and there Student Conduct. This sort of Student Conduct. This sort of "innocent" provocation has a grave historical antecedent: the grave historical a Nazi Holocaust.

Now, let's pan our camera to the left to focus on another set of less-publicized incidents that occurred at SU near the same time.

At the end of March flyers protesting the dangerous rape climate bred by the greek system at SU were hung around campus by an organized collective of undergraduates. graduates and faculty working to end rape at the university. The flyers arose out of a purported rape incident at the Phi Delta Theta fraternity that month, to which the administration had failed to respond.

Shortly thereafter, Pat Chang, an Asian-American lesbian activist and copresident of the GLBSA (Gay president of the GLBSA Bisexual Student Lesbian Bisexual Student Association), was singled out by SU Security and Dean of Student Affairs Ed Golden as Student Affairs Ed Golden responsible for an activist responsible for an activist action that was carried out by many people.

A University Judicial Board hearing ensued and Chang was found guilty of property damage and harassment. The board, half comprised of greeks slapped the 104 -year-old fraternity on the wrist with the least severe charge of sexual ## groups are

misconduct. The verdict stuck, even after appeal.

Different standards of justice were applied to the fraternity and to Chang. With thisaction the administration's implicit message is criminal but clear: We will spend more energy prosecuting a lesbian. AsianAmerican activist, who by cultural standards is wholly expendable, than we will prosecuting those who encourage and perpetuate rape

By juxtaposing these two incidents, gay bashing and incidents, gay bashing and connected issues.

Unfortunately, Dean Golden has consistently refused to acknowledge this fact.

The gay-bashing T-shirts arose out of a campus climate of anti-rape rallies and Chang's persecution, not on its own as an isolated incident.

At this spring's graduation ceremony, the activist collective passed out literature explaining the rape incident and Pat's persecution. We also distributed pink triangles and red armbands, the former a symbol for gays, the second for women and rape survivors at SU.

Our action was a huge success. At least half the faculty marched in the procession wearing the triangles and armbands. The local press commented on the local press commented on the armbands but failed to mention the pink triangles. Here we see yet another severing of these two intricately-connected these two intricately-connected issues.

Thanks to Nancy Rhodes, the SU T-shirt story made it to at least 10 national publications and media organizations, including The, New York Times, The Nation, and CNN. But the highlypublicized rape problem at SU was never included in any * of these articles or reports. This separation has important and harmful consequences. By failing to consequences. By failing to highlight that these are both highiggt that these are issues of gender, sexual difference and power, a cycle

linked

is perpetuated whereby men are let off the hook and gays are let off the hook and gays

Only by ack nowledging the common attitudes working to produce both homophobia and produce both homophobia and rape will we begin to break the rape will we begin to break th cycle that produces both. As cycle that produces both. As weall know. gender and sexual we all know. gender and sexual difference bring with them difference bring with ther specific cultural roles and specific cultural roles and places for men and women places for men and women.
When a woman has a voice When a woman has a voi ragay asserts his or her or a gay asserts his or her identity, the power of straight men is threatened. There lies the link between homophobia and rape. A brief scenario will help to illustrate this point.

From experience, I know whenever some groups of men (not necessarily greeks) congregate at SU, you can be certain the terms "dyke" and "fag" are used to oppress, even if only as a joke between two heterosexual males where one chides the other for not getting over on a woman.

In this discourse, intercourse with the opposite sex is the best way to prove you are not gay, or a "faggot." If a male does not conquer a woman, he is labeled just that. If a woman does not "want it," she is labeled a"dyke.

In both cases, women and gays become least common denominators, and therefore, targets and objects of oppression. Either the man is reduced to a woman by being called a "fag" or the women sheds her "appropriate" submissive role and becomes a "man." Quite frankly, women do not stand a chance in male discourse. Neither do gays or socially-progressive straight men.

Looked at through the lens of this relatively common scenario, one that occurs daily. the connection between gaybashing and rape becomes all too clear.

Hail SU tradition

To the editor:
Syracuse University is unlike many other institutions of higher education. While rival colleges go to extremes to preserve their campus buildings, organizations, and traditions, SU is usually willing to abandon such things for the sake of progress. I lamented this attitude as a student. I had witnessed the removal of the "Saltine Warrior" as the mascot, the demolition of virtually every building on the west side of University Avenue, and many other changes. I continue to lament it as an alumnus, having recently seen the "new" College Place.

I am happy to report that neither the chancellor nor the Board of Trustees has yet stripped the campus of at least one tradition: kiss someone while sitting in the stone seat located on the east side of the Hall of Languages, and you will marry the person. So it was said to me by an elder classmate during my freshman year at SU. While visiting the campus last October, I decided to put this piece of SU lore to the test. The result? I was engaged in November and married in May.
Here's to tradition at SU

UUTV makes renovations

BY KATHERINE DROUIN DOEditor

University Union Television is inching ever closer to becoming a true television station. said UUTV General Manager Matt Prohaska.

The station is looking into Hetting a construction permit to run a low-power television channel. UUTV also renovated its control room during the summer and repaired and purchased new equipment. Prohaskn said
"We're laying the foundation," Prohaska said. "This begins the process of becoming a real TV station.

Carpeting was ripped out of the control room and tiles were put in to cut down on dust.
"Some old things are gone," said Program Director Laxman Gani. "There's more space."

The station also purchased a third videotape editur for $$ 6,000$ dies. and repaired uther equiprient. "This means there won't be people standing three deep in line to use the editor." Prohaska said. "The editor and repairs were our number-one priority."
The new equipment will lead to an increase in productivity, he said.
"It's running amoother with more people and more interest in the station," he said.

UUTV also hired a development manager, senior Dave Barsky. to get underwriting for the station from small companies.

Construction of a transmitter would cost in the tens of thousands, Prohaska said

Syracuse University's first Auturnn Street Festival will commence at 10 a.m. With an arts and crafts fair and continue at noon with live bands until 5 p.m. Food and information at noon with live bands until 5 p.m. Food and booths will also be on hand throughout the day.
The festival will take place on University Place in front of the Newhouse School of Public Communications building and the Schine Student Center University Union President Dan Delehanty called the festival "a multicultural event complete with live bands, arts and crafts and information tables, aimed at showing the students what SU has to offer."
Delehanty emphasized the underlying significance of this event's diversity.
"This event is a combination of University Union, the Student Government Association, SAS, Greek Council, NAACP. RHA, the Admissions Office, the Student Programs Office and the GLBSA - many of whom traditionally wouldn't interact," he said.
"This event is in some ways a celebration of difference -it symbolizes the diversity that exists on campus and proves that it can be a strength."

Strength in diversity

The diversity is illustrated by the different focuses of the participating groups. The Student African-American Society (SAS) the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Student Association (GLBSA) and RHA, the Residence Hall Association, typically deal with issues of interest to their respective constituencies.
The festival begins with student and community groups holding arts and crafts exhibitions and sales at booths in front of Newhouse. Also available will be a variety of ethnic foods and entertainment courtesy several of SU's cultural student groups, such as A.S.I.A., Asian Students In America. Dome concessions will also provide refreshments.

A diverse lineup of bands will play the festival on a stage

REVIEW out to one-up Alfred Hitchcock with his psychological thriller Dead Again. And again, Branagh succeeds, this ing fashion. Margaret (Emma Thompson) and Roman (Branagh) Strauss were married in the 1940 s and led a life of musical bliss. He conducted symphonies; she played in them.

But paradise was lost when Roman became jealous of Margaret's friendship with rumpled journalist Gray Baker (Andy Garcia). There were arguments between the once-loving couple, and then Margaret was murdered.

Roman was tried and convicted of her murder and sentenced to death.

In present-day Los Angeles a woman (Thompson) wanders into a Catholic boy's home. She doesn't utter a word and has no recollection of her name. She is helped by "finder of heirs" Mike Church (Branagh) who nicknames her Grace. He tries to learn her true identity by placing her name and photo in the placing her

Journey to the past

Franklyn Madson (Derek Jacobi), an antique collector/hypnotist, shows up at Church's house and puts Grace under hypnosis. Soon she is speaking again and the three continue the search for the woman's identity.

Throughout her sessions, Grace flashes hack to the lives of Margaret and Roman Strauss. Is she indeed arreincarnation of Margaret? And is Church the presentday embodiment of Roman?

Although Dead Again begins slowly, this build up is necessary to establish the plausibility of reincarnation and the development of both sets of characters in 1948 and in the present. Once the film in Branagh's web of intrigue and your mind will leap through all the possible conclusions as to who killed whom and for what reason.

Borrowing liberally from the work of Hitchcock, Branagh films the flashbacks Hitchcock, Branagh filmsthe flask and white and uses steep camera angles to capture Grace's home with the requisite thunder and lightning backgrounds.

Dual roles abound

Branagh uses the same or similar locations for parallelism between then and now. He also has many of his actors portray characters in the past and present. Many of these small nuances will likely be unnoticed, but it is Branagh's skill and diligence that count.

Comedian Robin Williams makes a cameo appearance as Cozy Carlyle, a former psychiatrist who tries to convince Church that reincarnation is possible.

According to Carlyle, whoever is killed in one life gets to do the killing in the next. "It's the cosmic credit plan: buy now, pay forever," he says.

Thompson and Branagh both master their American accents for the presentday roles and they make for an intriguing couple in both lifetimes. Once around they're charming and romantic, the second time they become skeptical and dangerous.
Although Andy Garcia's role is limited, he makes the most of it, portraying Baker as the stereotypical alcoholic. chain-smoking, womanizing, unshaven pulp journalist. "I'm not looking for Miss Right," he tells a fellow party-goer. "I'm looking for Miss Right Now."
Garcia also delivers a nice antismoking scene when Baker is an old man dying of cancer in the present day.

Despite its slow start and few bouts of typicality, Dead Again is a dead-on thriller that would make Hitcheock proud.

Royal Crescent Mob rocks festival with funk

DO Stati Writer
This Saturday, Syracuse University's Autumn StreetFestival will welcome the funk $n^{\prime}$ roll sound of Royal Crescent Mob with a performance that lead singer David Ellison promises will be "full of enough flaming grooves to make Jerry Lewis wish he weren't in Las Vegas. but in Syracuse gettin' down but in Syrac Since 1985. Royal Crescent Mob has been turning out Mob has been turning out grooves that range from funl-out-funk to straightforward rock $n$ funk

After their debut album, Omerta, the Mob was quickly picked up by Warner Bros. On Warner. the band released Spin the World and, most recently, Midnight Rose's.

Despite being signed by a major label, Ellison says the band's underground status has changed very little.

We are considered an alter native band," he admits, "but I think we could be more. I feel we could have a hit album on our own terms,"
"We're pretty hungry these days," he says. "We can barely afford to put ourselves out on the road. We've been off tour since July Fourth, because this summer you're either on Lollapa-## looza or forget it."

Major predicament
Ellison says the band has fallen into a predicament common to many former independent acts - they have fallen between the cracks of alternative status and mainstream success.
"We've been thinking of moving to another label where we would be more of a priority you want to know that the year you spent on something is going to get a fair shake.

But Ellison acknowledges that the experience with Warner Bros. was not wasted. "If we've learned anything, it's that the record companies don't know more than we do about our sound. On the new album it will be our way or no way.'

They did it their way
The Mob's our-way-or-ncu way ethic recurs in its shows as well. Ellison recalls one $\mathrm{p}^{10-}$ tentially dismal show that wound up with the band throwing all ethics to the wind.
"We were playing in a place that was like Walt Disney World North was like Wait Disney world North, in a bar complex, which you should always shy away from, in a place with a lot of natural wood and ferns, which is another thing to avoid. the kind of place where if you wanted to order a burger it wouldn't just be a burger, but a 'Bohemian Bavarian Boogie-Woogie burger,' which you have to order from the waitress and sound embarrassed, and there's like white shorts and floral print shirts.

After four songs, I turned to the band and said 'I think it's time for 'Cat Scratch Fever.' We did covers from then on in and it went over great."

Such nights of abandon have led the band from doing 1970 s covers to reworking current songs like 'Mama Said Knock You Out.'

Strictly groovy
As far as the Mob's next project, Ellison hints that it may be a return to the funky and furious Omerta sound.

Over the years, our sound has changed from strict grooves to more structure and melody," he recalls, "but now we're going back to the strict grooves. So far the new songs have all been in the funky vein, which is rare for us because we normally will do about three funk songs, three novelty songs and a roots-rock song -it's unusual that we song -t veered off in another direction yet "Omerta was such an innocent time," he says. "We just kind of wrote the songs, and the fun in doing them is evident on the album. It is difficult to recapture that without it sounding really contrived."

Ellison says on the last al-

I feel like the band's more united now than it has been in a long time. It's an exciting time, and I like how we're writing together. We're just going to shoot the moon on the next album."

On the next project, the Mob would like to eliminate the middleman "We want to work with a good engineer and produce ourselves again. We want to get back that spirit," he says.

trouble," the exact tag tine created by Disney's advertising department to promote Who Framed Roger Rabbit?.

Changes in the characters from Who Censored Roger Rabbit? to Who P-P-P-Plugged Roger Rabbit? are incredibly blatant. In Censored, Jessica is an exporn star, Roger isn't an innocent honey bunny and 'toons speak in word balloons as they do in comic strips.
While Wolf keeps the word balloons for this new novel, he throws away the character's backgrounds in favor of the sanitized Disney images. Wolf even changes his description of Roger Rabbit to fit the ani- tive way for Eddie Valiant to mated character. And the new book is set in the 1940s like Disney's movie setting, while Wolfs original creations lived in the present day.

Deeper meaning missing
Another aspect of the first novel that has been partially lost is the segregation and discrimination towards 'toons as an allegory for present day bigotry. While the theme still appears in a few spots, the impact is dulled by the overshadowing Disney image of love, peace, happiness and not a problerrin the world. Yet for all the 'Digneyana,' Wolf never ceases to corne up with a new, descripdown his liquor.

The interplay of real-life events and fiction leading up to the production of Gone With the Wind is the most amusing part of the book. Wolf pushes the two together so seamiessly that it doesn't seem unusual that Selznick originally intended to cast Roger Rabbit or Baby Hercast Roger Rabbit or Baby Her While there are undoubtedly worse places to sell the soul of your creation than the Walt Disney Company, it is still unfortunate that after the success of Who Framed Roger Rabbit? Wolf couldn't have written a follow-upinvolving hiscreations, rather than the company mascots they've become.

EGGERS

"I am a personification of this university." he said. "If young people aren't protesting about something, they are going to be called apathetic or lethargic or called apathetic or lethargic or to be protesting to somebody. I have to expect to be a part of that.'

As a child of the Depression, Eggers said he was "kind of a protester" when he was in college.
"This is a strange world," he being sent to Vietnam to shoot people - (the soldiers) don't hate those people. Inn't that a strange world? Can't young people sensibly say that?"

Chances sare that?
Chances are that if typical SU students aren't talking about tuition, they are talking about the latest allegations against "I am disappointed
"I am disappointed with the aspect of the reports (in the The Post Standard)," he said in regard to illegal recruiting allegations made by the local paper. "It needs a little more time. I don't mean that I'm trying to whitewash it or trivialize it.
"But we are dealing with allegations from a newspaper that needs a story. We need to hold off until the facts are in."

Eggers said that although that can unite strangera with sports has always had a strong history at SU, the addition of the Carrier Dome helped to boost the program.

Rebuilding football

"In 1970 and ${ }^{\prime} 71$, we came close to closing out the football team because they didn't have a place to play," he said. "They were losing because they couldn't recruit; they couldn't recruit because they didn't have a place to play; without a place to play there was no audience."

No audience, no revenue, no coach, no players, Eggers said.

SU sports is usually the chosen topic of conversation in Central New York, an obsession nothing else in common.
"This is entertainment generated by our own community -there's an intimacy about it," Eggers said. "And really, what is there to talk about but sports and the weather?"
"But that troubles me just a little bit because it overshadows a good many other things that a good many otner things that much harder for a community to talk about physics and quarks."
He lifted a gleaming plastic and metal model off the floor.
"This model was given to me by the physics department," he said "Quarks and anti-quarks. This represents three families...." he read from the base. "It's pretty hard for people to engage in a conversation about that."
"I lay my burdens down," he aaid. "I leave it to history."

Eggers bid his firnal farewell as chancellor at an Aug. 16 Ice Cream Social on the Quad.

Eggers may teach a course or two during the coming semesters.
"Possibly I'll be more visible than I have been," he said. "I have no real contact with the students... that bothers me. I don't like to think of me not being for the people.
"If I haven't been with them all the time, at least I can be there now."
I've had a great opportunity. Culture, learning -. it's all out there," he said, gesturing to the campus beyond his window. "And all you have to do is absorb it."

"Typically we like to use finding for capital expenditures, like new refrigerators or televisions to rent," he said. "However, the previous manager attributed a lot of our losses to theft. The security system was our primary need.
"The record business in general is very prone to theft anyway, so the system also keeps employees in tune with what's going on."

Duenwald said the record department has also switched to a different inventory system to keep better track of exactly what is in the store.
"Now we only have two or three copies of a piece (record. cassette or compact disc) stead of a lot, and if we see that we need more, we can order and have it the next day,". he suid.
He said their new way of monitoring, called a point-ofpurchaseperpetual inventory system, has actually increased the store's selection beca;ise it leaves more room for new pieces rather than taking up unnecessary space with duplicate pieces.

Duenwald said that despite the rumors, he does not foresee any more problems for this year.
"We have to recover from last year, of course," he said. "We won't be buying anything new, but we'll survive.
"A lot of people had a problem with the way the store was run last year, but this is a new management and a new attitude. Spectrum is the students' asset. We are here to serve the students, not to make money."

"Going abroad also looks terrific on a resume and it really makes a student seem more adventurous and worldly," Yoshioka said.

DIPA is especially encouraging minorities to go abroad, Yoshioka said.
"We would also like to increase our male ratio since as it stands now, only 30 to 40 percent of students going abroad are men, he said

Yoshioka said many male students are worried about finding workout facilities abroad.

The NCAA has narrowed the goalposts to cut down on those naughty field goals. The subject of overtime is treated like the plague. Two teams will defend a "national" titie. Joe Paterno and Pat Dye are still coaching. Oh, baby, college football is back!

And if you have the patience to put up with the constant problems, you've got to love it. Especially this year, when three teams with pro offenses will be right at the top: Florida, Miami ington will be right there as
On the other hand, cocky Notre Dame probably won't. And the boring Big-Eight teams should be back in the pack. Perfect.
Syracuse should have another solid season, but more on that next week.
Boston College ( +2 ) at Rutgers
Last I heard, Rutgers (3-8 last season) was still in New Jersey, but couldn't get many Grrden Staters to play there. Maybe it's that recruiting pitch

RU: "We play at Giants Stadium ..." DD: "To 50,000 empty RU: "Lots of great players have corne our way ..." DD: Because their only other scholarship offer was at Texas Tech." RU: "Our campus is beautiful." DD: "Not."

Tom Coughilin's Boston College team (4-7) needs to win now: Georgia Tech, Michigan and Mami are on the schedule. QB Glenn \{Speakert Foley is experienced, and TE-Mark Chmura is the best in the Big East.

While still a top five team, certain signs point downward for the 49 ers .

First, the rumning game is dead. Little Dexter Carter won't cut it as the every-down back. Next. Ronnie Lott is gone from the defense. While letting Roger

The defending champion Giants may have their problems too. The TE's and WR's are very average. Also, RB Rodney Hampton gets hurt too often.

Bills, Niners top picks for NFL season

Foctball predictions made while wondering what ever happened to Herschel Walker.
AEC East: I'm a Bills fan. Let it be known. I bleed Buffalo red. And why shouldn't I? Buffalo is the best team in the NFL. They tout the league's most proficient offense, led

FISCHER

SPORTS

OPINION of course by allgalaxy quarterback Jim Kelly, mega-super-stud backThurman Th omas, and the league's best receiver, Andre Reed.

If the Bills had a weakness last year, it was their offense was too potent. They scored so quickly, their defense never got to rest. The " $D$ " weathered the storm, though and was among the best in the NFL.

The Bills have worked especially hard this pre-season on developing a ball control offense. Coupled with their machine gun two-minute, no huddle scoring machine, the Bills could dominate all the way to their first Super Bowl victory

AFC Central: The Houston Oilers' ffense was second only to Buffalo's in the NFL last year. They're strong at every position, especially in the backfield and at the wide-out spot Any team with Warren "Shoot the" Moon at QB has got to be a contender.

Their defense is above average, and should be more than adequate.

AFC West: The events in Kansas City last year left many fans wondering if they hadn't been swept away by a tornado and transplanted in say, San Francisco.

The Chiefs were no fluke last year. Steve DeBerg finally emerged as one of the league's top signal callers. He has always had the tools, but always found himself regulated to back-up roles to the likes of Joe Montana and John Elway Christian Okoye is back and healthy after an injurymplagued seabon. The "Nigerian Nightmare" should return to his punishing form.

The jury is still out on Barry Word. NEC East: The Washington Redsking' backfield of Earnest Byner and Gerald Riggs is capable of controlling a game and scoring every time one of them is handed a ball. That's good, because the Skins' quarterback sucks. Mark Rypien has a howizter arm, but an Iraqi's aim.

The defense should be so many big names returning.
Nic Central: The most the Chicago Bears have going for them is the fact they play in the leagues wors division. Figure they play the Packers, Bucs, and Lions twice each. That could be enough wins right there to claim the Central crown. Big deal.

NFC West: The Forty Niners were underachievers last season despite their 14-2 record and making it to the NFC Championship game. They'll be back this season. The loss of both Ronnie Lott and Roger Craig will be their only obstacle.

To most, San Fran means Montana, but it's their defense that makes them win. They held opponents to an in credible 15 -points-per-game last year Expect a repeat this season.

There haven't been many surprises during the first week of soccer practice, according to Syracuse University first. year head coach Dean Foti.
And Foti said he would like to keep it that way.

The Orangemen won't be all offense this season, however. Foti emphasized that a good defense is essential to that a good defense is essential to "My philosophy is that it's easier to win a game $1-0$ than it is to win a game 4-3," Foti said. "It's very hard to score goals in soccer. If you have to rely on your team to score four goals a game, that's difficult.

Syracuse University quarterback Marvin Graves has gotten favorable reviews from most major football previews Fecently and SU is picked as high as No. 10 in the mation in one pre-season magazine.

Magazines praise SU; put Orange in top 20

By ROB GUYETTE
DO Editor
Based on last year's $28-0$ thumping of Arizona in the Aloha Bowl and several returning starters at skill positions, the Syracuse University Orangemen are being looked upon favorably by the preseason magazine forecasters.
The Orangemen have been ranked as high as 10 th in the nation by Sport magazine, but a few publications passed on Syracuse altogether.
The consensus is that Syracuse is near the bottom of the second 10 , as evidenced by three No. 19 rankings (Don Henrich's Foothall Review, Inside Sportsand Street and Smith's).
Rebuilding the offensive line was mentioned often as SU's top priority. Four of the five starters will be new - with only senior Terrence Wisdom returning.

The magazines had mixed reviews about Paul Pasqualoni replacing Dick about Paul Pasqualoni rep Football Action said the loss of MacPherson "puts a crimp into the future of the Syracuse program. Pasqualoni was lauded for keeping almost all of SU's recruits in a crucial five week stretch last winter.

Said Street and Smith's: "Don't expect much of a drop-ofr in Syracuse's surge. Pasqualoni doesn't."

Among the magazines not on the SU wagon is Jim Feist's College Football Annual, which picked the Orange for fifth in the Big East. In addition, it called sophomore quarterback Marvin Graves, "Morten Craves."

For the most part, Syracuse is expected to finish second in the Big East behind Miami (Fla.), although Sport had the Hurricanes ranked behind SU at No. 11.

Some publications were printed before the conference was formed. and the Orangemen are projected as the No. 2 Eastern Independent behind Penn State.

Graves won major points with every magazine, and drew complimentary comparisons to former Orange quarterback Don McPherson.

Linebacker Dan Conley and nose tackle Kevin Mitchell, both sophomores, won praise on the defense, although Conley praise on the defense, "Corley" by Jim Feist.

SU's key to success, according to the forecasters, is how fast Pasqualoni and forecasters, is how fast Pasqualoni and

Student witnesses file civil complaints on police brutality

By ERIN NEFF
Managing Editor
Seven Syracuse University students have filed civil complaint reports of brutality against the Syracuse Police Department after witnessing the beating a man by three officers in the alley off South Crouse Avenue.

About 200 people witnessed the scene, which took place outside the SU Thax office, 737 S . Crouse Ave., place outside the SU Taxi of

In a police report, officers say the man, Thomas Aģian. 21 , of 112 Garfield Place., was drinking a can of beer near the entrance to the aileyway. Officers say they approached Thomas and informed him he was in violation of the open container law.

After taking his beer away and asking him to leave, the police report states Thomas, who is black. "became extremely violent, began flailing his arms wildly and began pushing people around causing a disturbance."

Witnesses interviewed Monday said that report by the police is a blatant lie.

SU students Dionne Roberts, Lisa Nichele Skop and Sarah White watched as three white police officers on foot approached Thomas and his friend as they walked away from the scene. They say Thomas was in no way causing a disturbance.
"He was just walking away," said Roberts, who is also a member of Students Concerned About Rape EDucation. "His friend and he were just trying to get out of there."
Disorderly conduct charged
At this point, the police report states that Officer Mark Kleist, an off-duty officer, two mounted patrol officers and the writer of the report, whose name was not legible, moved into the crowd of people to arrest Thomas for disorderly conduct and incitement to riot.

The report states that police grabbed Thomas, told him he was under arrest and placed his hands behind his back.

Police say Thomas was pushed up against a wall in the Taxi Office after resisting arrest. He was then taken down to the floor where he interlocked his hands in front of his chest area, the report stated.

The witnesses dispute that claim by police. In a combined statement Roberts, Skop. White and SU students Charlie McDonald, co-president of the Gay Lesbian Bisexual Student Association; Tamia Greene and Lindy Crescitelli of S.C.A.R.ED.; and Scott Turnbull offered a different account of events.
"The three caucasian officers forced the AfricanAmerican man into the SU Thxi stand door. These officers each forcibly restrained the man, one holding his arms, one blocking his legs, and the third officer, (later identified as officer badge number 217), held the man in a choke-hold and repeatedly pounded on his

Student Dance Party ends in violent brawl

Staff Reports
A fraternity dance erupted into a brawl Saturday night at the Schine Student Center, leading to four arrests and two hospitalizations.

The

Dance Party, sponsored by Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity, was shut down shortly after midnight by Syracuse University security officers, The Post-Standard reported Monday.

However, the crowd spilled over onto the 200 block of Waverly Avenue, where officers faced 200 to 300 people, the police report said

A fight had erupted following an argument between townspeople and argument between townspeople and students, SU junior Carl Agard told studen Agard said the situation was getting rough and he and some friends went to their car
The car was surrounded by 10 to 15 people wielding bats and boards Agard said.

They smashed the body and windows of the car, and Agard and his friends jumped out and began running, the report said.

Agard tripped and was assaulted by five unidentified men, the report said. He suffered a possible fractured skull and left arm and received eight titches to the forehead.

Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw had begun riding in a security patrol car at 11:30 p.m. The car answered the nitial call of the fight inside the center, The Post reported.

Shaw was riding with security to become familiar witt the problems facing SU security ofincers.

A millionaire businessman, the hall brother of the Rev. Jesse Jackson, has been convicted in Chicago of drag deal ing and trying to use murder to silence rivals and witnesses.

Businessman Noah Robinson and six other defendants, reputed leaders of a street gang, were convicted. The seven face life in prison without parole when sentenced Dec. 12.
"This trial took out the day-to-day street leaders, the most violent people," said Assistant U.S. Attorney William Hogan. *We eliminated the entire upper echelon of the El Rukn organization.
"Robinson gave them a facade of legitimacy." he said. "The El Rukn were one step away from being an organization as difficuit to perietrate as the Mafia."

The trial was the third of five following the 1989 indictments of 65 reputed. E Rukn leaders. According to Hogan. 33 of the 65 have been convicted or pleaded

College leaders meet

to expand courses
BELOIT - Leaders of some of the nation's top liberal arts colleges recently convened in Beloit, Wis., to increase collaboration among the institutions.
The Beloit Conference on the Interna tional Liberal Arts College was desigried to avoid program duplication as well as to create a variety of programs previously available only to large universities, said President of Union College and Conference Chairman Roger Hult.

Such programs of study would include sub-Saharan Africa. "Students who graduate from college at the end of the 20 th century must be able to deal with people of different backgrounds," Hull.said.

Colleges "that fail to prepare students to do so will not be fulfilling their responsibilities. The colleges gathered for this conference have an outstanding record of exposing their students to other cultures. More needs to be done, though. Through the conference we will further this objective."

Another conference leader recalled an important precedent. "In 1984-85, the so-celled Oberlin Conference revesied the superior contribution of liberal arts colleges in preparation of the nation's top scientists," said Oberlin College President Frederick Starr.

The hinternational 50 Conference promises to accomplish the same for international students as the Oberlin Conference did for the sciences. "It will surely demonstrate the unique contribution of private colleges to America's ability to private colleges to America's ability to environment."

Brutality poses questions

The streets surrounding Syracuse University unfortunately bear a striking resemblance to those in Los Angeles.

Seven students filed civilian complaints after witnessing the beating of two black youths near Marshall Street by members of the Syracuse Police Department on Friday night. The officers approached the youths on foot and proceeded to beat and arrest them on charges of disorderly conduct and interfering with government proceedings.

Reports filed by the arresting officers not only conffict with those filed by the students but they also dispute their own departmental reports. Witnesses claim three officers beat the two young men. Police say only one officer was involved in the arrest. A member of the department was quoted by witnesses as saying he was not sure why "they," implying a number of officers, were beating the men.

If the seven students, many of whom are leaders on this campus, had not spoken up and filed complaints against the officers, there would be no hope of justice in this case.

Civilian complaints, however, are filed directly with the police department and are not available for public record or scrutiny. If the students had not come forward with the information regarding the attack, no information would have been made public.
Such activity against people in the same age group as SU students should concern us all; black or white, male or female. The brutal actions seem to leave many issues regarding our local police department unaddressed; issues such as racism and bias against students.
Too many questions about these issues will eventually lead to answers, answers the Syracuse Police Department does not seem to want to give.

"Award" recipients lose big

THE NAKED

TRUTH

First of all. I have to Program (TAP).
At private schools like Syracuse Univergity, where tuition hikes are as likely as the sun rising in the east, it has become increasingly difficult for students and their families to meet costs. Obviausly, these cuts are going to force some to opt for less costly SUNY schools and community colleges, where the quality of education might be less than ideal.

However, I understand that difficult decisions had to be made. My anger and frustration was not caused by the education cuts themselves. It is rather the result of my personal state financial aid award.

Last year, the New York State Higher Education Services Corporation originally awarded me close to $$ 1000$ in aid. That included more than $$ 700$ in TAP and a Regents Scholarship worth $$ 250$. While I received the full promised amount for the first semester. $$ 200$ of aid was trimmed for the second semester. Still, I believe I received a valuable and fair amount of state aid for the year.
This new fiscal year generated the news that Regents Scholarship payments were being withheld and TAP awards were being decreased dramatically. My TAP award this year is a whopping $$ 50$ per semester - the minimum any undergraduate student can receive. Although every penny counts these days, 5,000 pennies just doesn't do it for me. would not be doing justice to the word insulting by calling my award that.

If New York is so financially strapped, as all state officials claim, they should abandon the financial aid program altogether.
It isn't worth even having a Higher Education Services Corporation if their payouts are tion Services Corporation if their payouts are going to be so ridiculously low. I'm positive the going to be so ridiculously low. Im positive the administrative costs of the HESC run to hundreds of thousands of dollars. That kind ofsavings could really make a diff

Lanes cause problems  To the editor:  and the city agreed to the

It is sad to hear that two Syracuse University students were hit and seriously injured on the "improved atreets" surrounding the SU campus.

Neighbors and other interested citizens opposed the street closing and disputed the "expert knowledge" that was being handed out by SU-hired traffic consultants.

It is sad that SU's lack of support for education, enforcement and good traffic engineering led to this event. rhances of injury crossing any chances of injury crossing any street, with or without a light or flasher is increased by the number of lanes one has to cross, let alone with traffic travelling in two directions in multiple lanes. SU and the city ignored these facts which were presented by neighbors.

It was the neighbor's contention that the traffic "problem" wowld only be moved and if anything exacerbated in closing streets and "improving" others. What has come to be called "Harvey's Folly"is a classic example of the pursuit of land for development over concern for public safety.

It is interesting to note the enhanced crossing" "hash" markings and lights only recently appeared on the new roads. We proposed that this be done on the now closed roads. Such markings were only done after the University closing of streets and as public relations man Robert Hill relations man Robert Hill claimed the acquisition of a sreat asset." Where was the matter of safety either before or after the acquisition? or after the acquisition?
Those injured in this ongoing experiment rightly should consider a suit against the city and SU.

Neighbors continue to suggest embracing the "Walk Alert" program for all residents of the area. SU fortress mentality regarding its campus and the city of Syracuse's acquiescence to any of SU's administration's hairbrained schemes will in this instance, cost the taxpayers legal and cost the taxpayers le reacquisition costs.
And those individuals who supported these changes must share with the unaware pedestrians and motorist in this incident.

It is my hope that proponents have the decency to visit the have the decency to visit the hospitalized and offer their hospitalize apologies.

Campus roads should be open to all motorists, as is the case with most universities, and pedestrians and motorists educated to enhance safety. It is sad to hear that officials continue to tinker with "Harvey"s Folly" and experiment with pedestrian safety when safe viable alternatives exist.

CD producers perplexed by packaging ploy

The CD longbox presents a quandary for the music industry. The packaging that made it easy for record stores to phase out the LP has been deemed wasteful by artists and consumers alike. and a campaign to "Ban the box" is reaching all corners of the industry

But the longbox has its advantages. The package is large enough to deter shoplifters as well as retain the graphic appeal of an album cover. Most importantly, though, the box design allows music retailers to rack two longboxes in a space the width of one album, enabling record stores to switch from LP to CD with few overhead costs.

A race is on now to create a package that will meet require labels and consumers, without losing any of the longbox advan.- tages.
Geffen experimented with packaging early thia year, releasing Peter Gabriel's Shaking the Tree in the familiar plastic case (jewel box) without longbox packag:ing. Sixty-five percent of the album's sales to date have been on $C D$ format.
Other non-longbox CDs include Sting's The Soul Cages and Robert Palmer's

Riptide, both of which were released in Digipak form, a paperboard and plastic box the size of a jewel box.
Jewel Box Advocates and Manufacturers (JAM), a group including artists, consumers, plastics manufacturers and record labels believes marketing $\mathrm{CDg}_{\mathrm{g}}$ in the jewel box alone meets the right requirements.

The only wasted packaging would be more on a system to display jewel boxes, as in the way cassettes are displayed in locked racks. Without the racks, retailers say, shoplining would increase, foreing stores to absorb the losses.

The Eco-Pak has emerged as a possible replacement for the longbox and the jewel box, attracting attention with concrete support from WEA Distribution. a company that distributea labels spring 1992.

WEA recently announced plans to begin selling CD g in the Eco-Pak by

No tests planned for Pak
Criticism of the Eco-Pak far exceeds the number of actual packages in existence. Only a few prototypes were made for industry inspection, and WEA plans no test-marketing before introducing the packaging to the market. Questions about the Eco-Pak are many, with JAM ecological about Eco-Pak, anyecologi JAM's concerns include the fact that milhons of unsold CDs are returned to distributors every year. A jewel box can be reused after the paper is removed. An Eco-Pak. made of plastic and the shrink wrap around the jewel box, and record distributors would save 40 cents per CD - the cost to manufocture one longbox.

Costs passed to retailers
While record labels save on longbox costs, retailers will be forced to spend including Atlantic.

The Eco-Pak is the size of a longbox, but eliminates all wasted packaging except shrink wrap. Once a customer purchases a CD in an Eco-Pak, the package, made of cardboard and a few plastic parts, folds down from longbox pre-printed paperboard glued together, is not recydable

When the Eco-Pak finally hits market, customers may be unfamiliar with the package, given the lack of plans or test-marketing the product.
JAM lauds the jewel box as sturdy and better able to protect the CD's sound.

Seven Rays Bookstoré

But any $C D$ owner knows that jewel boxes, like cassette cases, are easily fractured. particularly at the hinges. When replaced with new cases, the plastic is then discarded.

Meanwhile, no one ever succeeded in replacing the paperboard LP sleeve with a plastic package. The question of packpackage. The question of packaging becomes: Which package

The April 20, 1991, issue of Billboard ran an editorial urging the industry to listen to consumers when deciding on a new package.

Smith and Thomas both could not be reached for comment.

The seven students who filed the complaints were coming from a movie and were heading to ward Hungry Charley's, located in the alley next to the taxi office. They had not been drinking and did not know Thomas or Smith, who are not SU students.

The police report stated that neither of the men appeared injured, but photographs were taken at the booking.

After the two men were arrested and taken away, two of their friends approached Police Omicer Joe Sweeney and asked him why the officer hit their friend.

Roberts and White said the officer replied. "I don't know why they hit them."
The seven civil complaint forms will now be forwarded to the Office of Internal Affairs at the Syracuse Police Office.

From Backpack to TOP过

Mono-strap pack appeals to campus savvy

By SETH KELLER

Staff Writer
. It's the first week of classes and students are trying to look cool with their stylin' clothes, sunglasses and backpacks slung over one shoulder.
The only problem is their backpacks aren't cooperating as they stroll acrose the quad. Packs are falling off shoulders every five minutes, and thumbs every five minutes, and thumbs are getting cramps trying to coerce one strap into Short of doing the obvious (but uncool) thing and using both straps, how can students keep the packs on their backs?
Phil Straughan has the answer: get a ToPAQ.
"ToPAQ is a one-strap backpack that is more comfortable than a regular backpack. And it won't slip off your shoulder," says Straughan, developer of the pack and president of TaPAQ pack.

Straughan visited The University Bookstore Thursday to promote TbPAQ and get student: promback on the bag.
"SU's been giving it a thumbs up so far," Straughan said. "I up so far, Straughan said. I learned today that a lot of students think it makes sense.
Some even thought it might make a lot of sense to buy one.
"It's centered better on your body for more support. It felt a lot more comfortable than any other backpack," SU student Poncho Gormar said. "If I need a new one. I would consider it. It's a great idea."

Torid Starmertime Daily Oranke
Phil Straughan, inventor of the ToPAQ, demonstrates the single strap backpack in The University Bookstore Thursday. Straughan, a Corneli Graduate, won best proposal in the School of Managment at Cormell for his idea.
Retailers apparently think so, too. Straughan said he hasn't had a hard time selling the pack to campus stores. The ToPAQ is being sold locally at the Iniversity Bookstore and Manny's on the SU hill. It's also available at Cornell University, Ithaca College and State University of New York at Cortland, along with many other colleges nationwide.
"It's been pretty easy to sell to campus store owners," Straughan said. "They just try it on and think it's really comfortable and a great idea.
While Straughan may be having no problem unloading the pack on campus stores, at least one store in Syracusa is having trouble unloading them.
"It seems like good product, but it's not selling. People just don't know about it. It's not advertised enough," gaid Lillian M. Slutaker, owner of Manny's.
"People look at it, see the big strap and don't know what to think of it," Slutzker said.

Autumn Street Festival

First Autumn Street Festival may result in SU tradition

By MATTHEW I. PALM  Litestyde Editor

From the student organiza tion tables to the craft vendor to the bands. University Union President Dan Delehanty pronounced the first-ever Autumn Street Festival a rousing success.
"It was a lot of fun for people who participated." Delehanty said. "I heard a lot of positive things."

Delehanty estimated 2,000 people attended the festival which consisted of an arts and crafts fair, student group information tables, a street painting competition and live performances.

Winners in the street painting contest were: Dan Giancola, first place; Steve Ellis, second place; and James Edwards, third place.

Delehanty said despite the large number of people involved, there were no problems with aecurity, littering or alcohol. Set-up also went smoothly, he said.

Delehanty said the multicul tural nature of the festival was a key to its auccess.

It was a whole new attitude for an outdoor concert at UU, Delehanty said. "It was multicultural instead of party-till-you-drop."

Besides UU, other sponsor were the Student Government Association, the Student AfricanAmerican Society, the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Student Assoc:a tion and the Residence Hall Association.

In addition to the sponsors, other groups participated through the information tables.

Asian Students in America, or A.S.I.A., served up fried rice and lo mein for a dollar a scoop.

We had everyone from the Marxist Collective to La Casa," Delehanty said. "To me, that was the greatest thing."

The bands who performed alsoshowed diversestyles. Royal Crescent Mob played rock and roll with a funk twist. The Meditations, a reggae band, also performed as did Mo Better Blues, a jazz quartet.

Delehanty said the event's purpose was to give students something special to do during the long weekend. He noted many freshmen don't go home during the Labor Day weekend because the holiday occurs so close to the start of clesses
"This is a good way to spend Labor Day weekend," Delehanty said. "This is a good way to welcome students back.

Delehanty said he had hoped for a bigger turnout.
"But I couldn't really be disappointed because everything went so well," Delehanty said.

The turnout would have been better if there had been more advance publicity, Delehanty said.

The worst criticism we got was 'We didn't hear about it in time," Delehanty said

Wimpy's wars with Ziggy's

By TED GLANZER
Contributing Writer
The thought of the genial cartoon characters Wimpy and Ziggy fighting over customers and getting into price wars in a business may seem toush to business imagine

However, such a battle is being waged right here at Syracuse University.Ziggy'sand Wimpy's are the names of food trucks that operate on campus.
"We were the first one. So far, everyone has copied us," said 29-year-old Mark Burnam, co-owner of Wimpy's.

Indeed, there is much history and controversy between the two trucks. Wimpy's has been in business, under several owners, for more than 25 years.
"People's fathers who came to the university have eaten here," Burnam said. "Wimpy's is a tradition.
The Wimpy Wagon is located behind Bird Library on Waverly Avenue.

There has been a food truck in the Ziggy's location, the corner of University and Comstock, for about 30 years, according to co-owner Pamela Hooley.

Both offer simitar food
Both trucks offer the same selection of food, ranging from hamburgers and pizza to kielbasa and chili. However, the owners of both trucks differ on which offers the best food.
"Put us (Wimpy's and Ziggy's) in a debate. Me on one side and him on the other with our food and a bunch of students eating. I'll tell you he won't be in business anymore," Burnam said Hooley said she likes to think Ziggy's offers better food, which helps in gaining regular customers.
"The guy who runs Wimpy's Wagon said things to students about my partner (Mark Ziegler) which we just don't do. He (Burnam) used to come up here on weekends and line the trucks up side by side. Every time he ends up not coming here anymore."

dents who now live in greek We don't give food to beggars," housing ask why there isn't a she said.
Ziggy's nearby, and they won't go to Wimpy's, Hooley said.

Wimpy's and Ziggy's rely heavily on regular customers. The two trucks will often cut prices or give some sort of deal to a student short of money.
"If college kids are who you are serving, you have to offer prices to their budgets; you have to take care of the people who take care of you," Burnam said.

Hooley said she will give away extra food at the end of the night to polite students. "If we have an extra pizza or french fries left, we will sell it for half price or give it to customers.

Marketing ploy
Like most businesses, Ziggy's and Wimpy's have ways to atract more customers
Ziggy's has a telephone number students may call to place their orders in advance. The owners of Ziggy's offer deals in the Money to Burn coupon book, which is distributed to students at the beginning of each semester.
Although Wimpy's does not advertise, it too has ways to attract customers. "We keep prices at college-student prices.

New book examines current race relationsIt's made clear in the jacket copy of Shelby Steele's book The Content of Our Character: A New Vision of Race in America that this dossier of Steele's opinions on contemporary race relations is not "an ax-grinding treatise."

But if Steele grinds no axes,
EILEEN neither
GLANTON does he BOOK - hatchets in REMEN fully-drawn cial preferences. Even as he decries racial-preference policies such as affirmative action, he makes it clear that today's white-controlled society is not without need of retribution. The end result: a refreshingly bold perspective on today's racial barriers.

Steele, a professor of English at San Jose State University in California, came to the forefront of political debate when Clarence Thomas was nominated to ence U.S. Court. Thomas, a vocal opponent of affirmative action, mirrors Steele's long-standing mirrors Steele's long-stand views on racial preference.

Steele, in an Aug, 12 interSteele, in an Aug, 12 interview with Time magazine, explained the blacis voice against afirmative action. "What I've tried to say, and I think Clarence Thomas atands for pretty much the same thing, is that by opposing racial preferences we stand for black strength rather than weakness."
Anti-atfirmative action
That becomes the basic premise of Steele's book. While he assails many of the means blacks have used to amass power --the term "African-American" and the existence of black separatist organizations, for example -he finds affirmative action the most damning of the procedures.

Steele reinforces time and again that society needs some mechanism to pull blacks up to an equal societal footing with whites. And he does not, at any time, allow whites to escape, guiltless, from past acts of racism. He recounts his own experiences with racism, from physi cal abuse in a segregated primary school in Chicago to stilted conversations with his professional colleagues.

But affirmative action, he says, is not the correct redress. Steele argues for an end to the Sictimization of blacks, but he believes that result must come from blacks - not whites.
"Historically, blacks have been terribly victimized," he writes, "but when today's black college students - who often enjoy preferential admission and many other special concessions claim victimization, I think that it too often amounts to a recomposition of denied doubts and anxieties they are unwilling to look at."

ustifiable doubts

Some of those doubts, Steele feels, are justifiable. For example, a black student in a lowfunded inner-city high school likely will not perform as well as a white, suburban-educated as a whitent performs on standardized tests.

His argument, however, is that a black student with equal raw intelligence should be able to overcome the differences in upbringing by hard work. And if the student is less naturally intelligent, he should not expect to dominate in competition for scholarships, for college admissions, for employment opportunities.
Steele believes that affirmative action encourages blacks to rely on their ethnicity and fail to develop themselves as individuals. That, he says, does nothing to further the cause of pulling blacks upward - rather, it reaffirms in the minds of all Americans the status of the minority as the victim.

The student told police she misunderstood the man and asked him "What did you say?"

The police report states the man, who had a dark complexion and was wearing a bluehooded sweatshirt, then restated his threat.

The woman then backed away from the car and the suspect asked her for the keys. She reached for her purse, knowing her keys were in her shorts pocket.
The suspect then asked for the purse back, and the woman, thinking he had a gun under his sweatshirt, gave it to him.

The woman told police she Hooley said Ziggy's is the only occupation she holds. During the diny, she and her partner take care of the truck's bills and maintenance.

A jack-of-all-trades
Unlike his competitors, Burnam is sort of a jack-of-alltrades. He has opened a pizza parador on Marshall street bearing the same name as his truck.
"When it opened in the summer, business was slow. But now that school has opened, the place is doing great," Burnam said. "I also have my cardealer's license and I work in construction." he said.

The owners of both trucks disagree on their happiness in the business.
"I love it. Where else can you work live or six hours for six days a week and make fun of drunk people, Burnam said.

However, Hooley is not as enthusiastic. "If I knew then what I know now, I wouldn't have gone into the business," Hooley said.

Hooley cited rude students and the hassle of bills as her reason for not liking the occupation. Having to deal with drunks all the time gets to be a pain. It's the worst part of the job," she said.

Most patrons of the trucks said the reason for going to one truck over the other had to do with location.

Al Wooten will start at fullback with Marcus Lee and Brian Picucci sceing time in the backfield as well.

On the defensive line. returnees George Rooks and Kevin Mitchell are joined on the right side by Jim Wentworth Ernie Brown. Ed Hobson and James Spencer could also possibly get some playing time on the defensive line.
SU's leading tacklers, Dan Conley and Glen Young, will anchor the defense at inside linebacker.
Jo Jo Wooden, Garland Hawk ins and Chip Todd will rotate as the outside linebackers.
In the defensive secondary, co-captain Tim Sandquist moves from strong safety to free safety.
Tony Montemmora, who played in all 13 games last season, will start at strong safety.

Co-captain Greg Walker. Dwayne Joseph and Ousmane Dwayne joseph and Ousmane back position.
If SU goes to a nickel package, Bary, Karlos Jackson or Bobby Grosvenor will enter the game.

Ismail needs just seven kickoff returns and 126 yards in return yardage to become SU's all-time leader. He will share kickoff return duties with Richardson and Kirby DarDar.
The competition for punt returner has been extremely close and Pasqualoni has yet to make a determination between Hill, Womack or Grosvenor.

Junior linebacker Glen Young, shown here pulling down a Temple ball carrier last year, will start at one inside spot. Dan Conley, Garland Mawlkins and JoJo Wooden will join Young as the starting linebackers.

The outstanding play of the SU front line anchored by Parisien, Paarlbers, and Casazza was further augmented by the play of setter Patton and the outside hitting of Andrea Carson.

The Orangewomen won the opening two games versus the Crimson Tide, then dropped the third game before going on to win the fourth game and the match - a feat SU would duplicate in its matches versus tooth the Owls and the Colonels.

Football cards not playing with full deck Syracuse University is at it again as In each of this year's program there will be trading cards of six different Orangemen. There are six home games, so a complete set will feature 36 players and coaches.The cards are sponsored by the SU athletic department, the Carrier Dome and Drumlins ROB In a release designed to promote the cards, the lead sentence says, "The Syracuse Univerwill continue to spread an anti-drug message to area youngsters this fall through, a series of football trading cards..

The catch here is that the cards can only be obtained if you buy a game program.

To get all 36 cards, you have to shell out two or three dollars for each of the six garne programs. That's about fifty cents for each card. The 1991 Kirby Puckett cards don't even go for that much.

This deal is shamelessly taking advantage of the card industry's success. But on top of that, they're promoting themselves for a cause that they're taking advantage of.
If you're going to promote something as anti-drug, then give the cards away to all kids 12 -and-under (or in some cases, 12 -and-over) as they enter the stadium.

Or give them to police officers so they can distribute them in the local schools. Or, if you really want to make an impact, set up appearances by the players to give anti-drug speeches in the schools. And have hem sign the cards
To get the cards, you first have to have enough money to buy a ticket and go to the game. So, in most cases the people getting the cards are the ones who need an influence and a role model the least.

Basically, the tri-sponsors of this ordeal are using an anti-drug message to make money. It's a phony attempt at public service. 'They're making a mockery of a serious public issue.

It would be like one of the local papers saying: "Buy us, we're an anti-drug paper."

It wouldn't bother me in the least if they put the cards in the program and promoted them as such without the anti-drug message. Or even put the anti-drug fact at the bottom of the release.

But to get your attention and lure $y 01$ into the cards by using a cause that is taken serjously and promoted by police officers and city volunteers simply for profit is wrong.

These cards were made for all the right reasons and distributed for all the wrong causes. If these sponsors are serious about their anti-drug afforts, they'll do more than sell the cards for fifty cents apiece. They'll reach out to the community that needs them.

If not, then let's just admit the cards are there to make money.

Weekend sweep starts season off for Orangewomen

By ZEV BOROW

Staff Writer
The 1991 Syracuse University women's volleyball team remembered to bring all the right equipment to its season opener Friday night at Manley Fieldhouse volleyballs, nets, uniforms, and a broom SU swept the three opening matches in its season opening tournament this past weekend at Manley Fieldhouse.
The Orangewomen hosted the fourteam tournament that also included the Alabama Crimson Tide, the Eastern Kentucky Colonels and the Temple Owls.

The Orangewomen began the 1991 campaign with a $3-1$ victory against Alabama

SU was led by senior co-captain Jessica Paarlberg, junior Annie Parisien and senior Kathy Patton. Parisien, who was named the tournament MVP, and up front.
However, the opening match with the Crimson Tide, as well as the following matches against the Owls and the Colonels, may well be remembered as the coming-out party for freshman Angie Casazza.

Casazza, a 6 -foot-3 middle blocker assists and three kills inded collegiate debut versus the Crimson Tide.
"Angie was very impressive in her debut: she still has a lot to learn, but she played very well," Schulte said.
"I was happy with the way I played," Casazza said."I was very nervous to start with. but the team helped to calm me See OPEN Page 21

Pasqualoni names SU starting lineup

Offensive line set, but not settled

By IOSH BARNETT Staff Writer

Many questions were answered Monday when Syracuse University football coach Paul Pasqualoni announced the twodeep for the season opener.

The Orangemen play Vanderbilt University on Saturday in the Carrier Dome at noon.

The biggest pending question concerned an offensive line, which lost four of five starters.
"(The offensive line is) an area we're concerned with," Pasqualoni said. "They"re working very hard. We don't know exactly where we stand, and exactly where we stand, and we're not going to until we've we're not going played a game."
The lone returning SU starter right guard Terrence Wisdom, will be joined at the guard spot by Jerry Sharp, a back-up nose tackle last season. John Capachione and Andrew Dees, a two-year starter at tight end, will play tackle. Sophomore John Reagan takes over at ceriter replacing Pasqualoni said he also expects to use John Niisen, Kyle Adams and Chuck Bull on Saturday against Vanderbilt. Dees' move to the line leaves end with Kevin Barker listed as a backup.

Another main question was, who would replace Rob Carpenter at wide receiver?
Qadry Ismail, a junior, has won the position and will play opposite Shelby Hill, with Bryce Bevill and Antonio Johnson listed as back-ups.

In the offensive backfield Marvin Graves, who started 11 games last season, will be the starting quarterback.

Graves passed for 1711 yards with nine touchdowns and a 57.5 completion percentage.

Senior co-captain Mark McDonald will be the backup. Sophomore Doug Womack will also get some playing time in different situations, Pasqualoni said.
"Doug Womack is expected to be in this game $5,6,7,8,9$, 10 times," he said.

David Walker will start at tailback but will split time with Terry Richardson. The duo combined for 850 yards and nine touchdowns last season.
"(Walker and Richardson will) both be seeing time - to what degree and how much I think we will determine as we go, but you can expect to see them both

SU improves accessibility for disabled students

By SHERRI BROUILLETTE
Contributing Writer
College life is an adjustment for all students. But, for the disabled it may seem especially difficult.

Often, students with disabilities find themselves thrown into an environment which may be completely inaccessible.

According to Karen Zuk of the Office of Disabled Student Services, Syracuse University is determined to end this feeling of frustration.
Zuk said there are about 100 students at SU with physical disabilities and the university has made tremendous headway for an older university in its efforts at accesibility.

This belief is shared by Nora McCabe, president of the Disability Advocacy Organization.

McCabe said the campus is quite accessible; however, "a few areas need work - faculty centers, possibly the ESF campus."

McCabe said SU has a wide range of services available to disabled students such as, "readers, notetakers, books for the blind and counselors for disabled students"

Most campus buildings are handicapped accessible.

Opening doors

Some of the university's older buildings may not be equipped with facilities for the disabled, but if a disabled student is placed in a classroom which is inaccessible, the class will be moved to another location, Zuk said.

Students can also receive keys to restricted elevators from the Office for Student Assistance which is located at 804 University Ave.

All residence halls are equipped with handicapped facilities and efforts are made to place disabled students in the halls which best suit their needs, Zak said.

Aside from outdoor ramps and automatic doors, each residence hall contains rooms which are furnished with special visual fire alarms for the deaf. Guide dogs for the blind are permitted in all residence halls and campus buildings.

Telephone service for the deaf is not provided by the university because a Telecommunications Device for the Deaf (TDD), may be purchased individually by the student.

This device requires no special services for use. Nevertheless, TDDs are available for student use in the Office of Disabled Student Services, the School of Social Work and the Disability Advocacy Organization.

Other services
Among other services available to disabled students at $S U$ are shuttle buses and sign language interpreters. The shuttle buses which run on campus are wheelchairaccessible, and wheelchair-accessible stops are marked by blue handicapped signs.

Stưdents who need sign language interpreters either in class or elsewhere may obtain this assistance through various interpreter referral services throughout central New York.

The Disability Advocacy Organization is here to "act as a trouble-shooter for students who may have problems with professors or any other academian McCabe said.

The alternative radio station WERW has been attracting much attention from students, a UU member said.

In the past, WERW could only be received on a TV set, but this semester students will be able to tune their radios to WERW-AM750 and listen radios voice of UU.

Free-form radio
The programming is free-form," said Greg Bellerose, a WERW disc jockey. "But, alternative music dominates."

Bellerose is also involved in another board of UU. He has helped to organize the Coffeehouse, which meets every Sunday at 8:00 p.m. in the Faculty Center on University Place.

The Coffeehouse gives student performers and artists an opportunity to expose their work to an audience of their peers, Bellerose said.
"Students can have a cup of coffee while appreciating the talent of fellow students," he said.

Jabberwocky is UU's newest board. Organized late last semester, the board was launched to provide freshmen with weekend entertainment in the Schine Dining Center.

During Opening Weekend, Jabberwocky held a comedy night, and last weekend a student rock band took the stage.

UU's nine boards were created to fulfill the desires of students, Poquette said.

Gorbachev criticized,

 then praised by YeltsinRussian Federation President Boris N. Yeltsin openly criticized, then praised Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev in his speech opening the second day of the Congress of the People's Deputies Yeltsin said Gorbachev and the rest of the Soviet leaders led the country "practically blindly" into last month's pract coup.
Ace
According to the Russian president, Forbachev caused the coup by not listening to reformers and by allowing the coup's participants to gain high positions in the Communist Party

Yeltsin also said he has more confldence in Gorbachev since the coup because Gorbachev "found strength in himself to re-evaluate a lot of things.*
The Congress is meeting to debate plans to reorganize the structure of the Soviet Union. Most insiders feel the Congress will move to grant independence to Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia.
Major in China; states human rights concerns

Britain's Prime Minister John Major yesterday became the first western leader to visit China since that country's 1989 military crackdown on the pro-democacy movement.
Major was in Beijing to sign a pact giving Hong Kong back to China in 1997. Before signing the agreement, Major expressed concerns about human rights issues, including cases involving jailed dissidents Chen Ziming and Wang Juntau.

Chen and Wang, who are serving 13-year sentences for taking part in the 1989 democracy movement, began hunger strikes last week to protest poor prison conditions
Major presented Chinese Prime Minister Li Peng with a letter from Armnesty International concerning the treatment of jailed dissidents.
Some human rights activist have criticized Major's trip, sayjng it improves the image of China's Communist government.

State to provide $$ 342,000$ for Syracuse infant care
The state said today it will spend $$ 342,000$ in an effort to cut down on the infant mortality rate in downtown Syracuse.

The University area, the west side and parts of the south and east sides of Syracuse make up one of six communities in the state chosen to receive a grant under the neighborthood-based initiative program, Gov. Mario Cuomo's office announced.

The money will go to private and public agencies in Syracuse and Onondaga County to provide better prenatal care and services to women and babies in the targeted area, which houses about 17,000 people.

Syracuse had more deaths per 1,000 births in 1987 than all but six other cities in the nation.

The program teaches students about "what's involved in transitions to university life," Cavanagh said.

It also will "help (students) with fears aspirations, expectations, make the fresh men feel more cornfortable in their environment and how to take a role in affecting this environment," he said

Each FAN grouping is scheduled to meet once a month to talk about concerns, questions and goals, Cavanagh cerns.
Each group will also go off campus for dinner and to a dining hall for lunch once a month, he said

These activities are designed to put the leaders in the position of "older friend, mentor or advocate," Cavanagh said However, he stressed that the FAN program is not aimed to replace aca dernic advisers or counselors.

It's like having a friend who knows all of the answers to the problems of college life,* said Jane Brody, a Newhouse Peshman. in Newhouse said, "FAN made me feel like I could come to the campus knowing someone."

Freshmen say they enjoy meeting other students in their groups and having someone to count on for advice.
Running through January
The program is scheduled to run through January with a "war stories" party planned for the advocates in February, Cavanagh said.

If the program works, Cavanagh said he hopes to extend the program to other schools without duplicating existing programs.
"It would be the good and right thing to take FAN as far as it really contributes," he said

Barbara Baker, a FAN advocate and director of residential life became an advocate because, "It's an opportunity to connect in a permanent way to first year students, know them as individuals and help ease their transition."

Education president fails  Yesterday George Bush chided the  students to expect nothing. In Bush

American public, telling us our educational system is disgraceful. That would make him, our self-proclaimed education president, disgraceful as well.

In an address to high school students, Bush blamed the failing school systems on parental neglect. According to Bush, children learn in the hame. If they do not learn there, they do not learn

Such messages sound peculiar. Children should not spend six or seven hours a day in class if they cannot learn there. If our current educational system has deteriorated to the point of complete ineffectiveness, it is the president's responsibility to encourage the redistribution of money and the sinking of cash into worthy areas.

He told Americans that "education and expectation go hand in hand." But impoverished schools and, at higher levels, cuts in financial aid, teach terms, those who expect nothing, learn nothing. How does our country fare? Our country is left uneducated and unfulfilled.

Surely parents can take an active role in educating their children. But schools play a fundamental role in education as well. If we take away funding, we eliminate competent teachers, state of the art equipment and the ability to properly educate American students. When we fail to provide our schools with everything they need, we take away the country's future.

Popular footage from Bush's premature and hypocritical campaign speech features our president saying "the world trembles with new possibilities." In Bush's tenure, he has brought upon his country a war, a declining economy and an enfeebled educational system. Indeed, the world trembles with new possibilities.

It has been 25 years since the crew of the Starship Enterprise first went boldly where no one has gone before. Today they continue to explore the final frontier in books, comics, movies, video games and The Next Generation.

Star Trek wasn't just a television series-turned endless string of movie sequels, it was a pop culture phenomenon.
When the show debuted Sept. 8, 1966 NBC executives were nervous that Mr Spock (Leonard Nimoy) would be rebuked for his devilish looks. Instead, he became a sex symbol.

And the idea of a woman in a position of cornmand so shocked the NBC chieftains that Majel Barret's character, Number One, was eliminated from the series after the first pilot was filmed. Barret later returned as Nurse Chapel.

Although the character of Uhura may be laughed at now as simply an interga lactic telephone operator with a salt shaker in her ear, back then having a black woman on the bridge also sent shock waves through the conservative network regime.

But Gene Roddenberry's creation triumphed.

It garnered critical acclaim, media attention and most importantly, a loyal following of fans whose letter-writing campaigns helped keep the show on the air for three seasons.
Even after Star Trek was canceled it lived on in books, comics and an animated series. By the mid-1970s the show had become so popular in syndication that Roddenberry sought to create a second series, to be called Star Trek II. When that projest did not go through, Star Trek: The Motion Picture was launched.

Though the first film was ravaged by critics, the fans ate it up. Soon Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan was in production. Better costumes, a better script and better direction by Nicholas Meyer helped the sequel garner critical acclaim. It is still regarded by many as the best in the series.

Since Spock died at the end of number two, a search for his body was necessary. So Kirk (William Shatner) and company gathered again for Star Trek III: The Search for Spock which was directed by Spock himself, Leonard Nimoy. Although this third installment was more emotional and less action-packed, it still brought in enough money to generate Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home which became a crossover hit. Not only did Trekkies love it, but so did the general public. Once again, Star Trek was hot.

Return to television
Then came Roddenberry's next slight of hand: a new Star Trek, set 85 years after the adventures of the original crew. Star Trek: The Next Generation was born, quickly becoming one of the most popular shows in first-run syndication. Now fans of the original had a whole new cast of characters to follow on weekly cast of char

When word of this scenario was leaked, fans were appalled. They couldn't imagine their old favorites being usurped by a new Star Trek brat pack. So Paramount nixed the idea, Bennett left. the production and Nicholas Meyer returned to cowrite (with Leonard Nimoy) and direct the fortheoming Star Threk VI: The Undiscovered Country, which will be the swan song for the original series.

'Uh-Oh' elicits mixed review

Robert Fulghum, in his new book Uh-Oh:Some Observations
From Both Sides of the RefrigFrom Both Sides of the Refrigerator Door, tells the reader: "I erator Door, tells the reader: "I realize that it's my part to write realize that it's my part to write this book and it's your part to read it; and since you don't tell me how to write it, I shouldn't tell you how to read it." Telling the reader how to LAMAGNA BOOK REVIEW the beginming of the least in he beginning of the book. Perhaps it just took Fulghum a couple of tries to get back in the swing of things, because once the reader gets past the first several chapters, the book takes off in the spirit of AII I Really Need to Know I Learned in Kindergarten and It Was On Fire When I Lay Down On It.
"Uh-Oh is not in any dictionary or thesaurus, and is seldom seen in written form. Yet most of us utter that sound every day. And have used it all our lives." Fulghum begins.

Small syllables, big meaning
"Un-Oh is way up near the top of a list of small syllables with large meanings.

We say 'uh-oh' to a small child who falls down or bumps his head or pinches his finger It means that we know the child hurts, but we also know that the hurt is temporary and that the child has the resources to get up and go on about his business... 'Uh oh' is the first wedge in weaning a child nway from us into independence.
"The older we get. the more experience and knowledge we have, the more able we are to distinguish momentary difficulty from serious trouble. The more we know that something is "uh-oh' and not 911 ."

And so begins the therne prevalent throughout the book.

Ch-Oh encompasses topics ranging from meatloaf, hiccups and cigars to fairy tales (particularly the pig in Cinderella) and how to know when to get married.

Fulghum spends several pages telling the reader about a kindergarten class that dramatizes Cinderella for a teachers' conference.

It is the story of a shy little boy named Norman who wante to play the role of the pig.
${ }^{\text {"Pig?"s the teacher asks. }}$ "There is no pig in this atory." "Well there is now," Norman answers.

Cinderella's pig

Fulghum writes,"Asit turned out, Norman gave hirmself a walk-on part. The pig walked along with Cinderella wherever Cinderella went... He made no sound. He simply sat on his back haunches and observed what was going on, like some silently supportive Greek chorus. The expressions on his face reflected the details of the dramatic action. Looking worried. sad, anxious, hopeful, puzzled, mad, bored, sick and pleased as the moment required. There was no doubt about what was going on, and no doubt that it going on, and no doubt that it wis and you kew The pig was pig, and you knew. The pig was so earnest. So sincere. So very 'there.' The pig brought gravity and mythic import to this wellworn fairy tale."

This is an essay about imagination. hope and people who make their own fairy tales come true.

Fulghum, with his gift for storytelling, leaves no doubt in the readers' mind that this is the point to the essay.

However, he disappoints his readers. Instead of stopping at the end of the story, instead of allowing the reader to draw his own conclusions about the circumstances set forth. Fulghum interprets the essay. He tells what he feels about it.

The reader almost feels robbed.
Makes readers think
One of Fulghum's greatest gifts is in his ability to get the reader to think; to ponder the meaning beneath the surface of the story.
By thinking for the readers. he takes this gift away from them.

Fulghum keeps up this prac. tice in the first half of the book. Granted, he does not offer an interpretation for every chapter (which when included, often appears at the end of the essay, appears at ine ens.
But when he does, the reader is disturbed.

Anyone who has read Fulghum's other works will know that they consist of thought-provoking articles ones that make you stop and perhaps see some aspect of life in a different way.

But in the first half of $\mathrm{Ch}-\mathrm{Oh}$. one misses this give-and-take between author and reader.
Fulghum gives, but he also tells his audience what to take away.
Luckily, he abandons this unsettling practice about halfway through the book and the readers can once again draw their own conclusions.
All essays are written in Fulghum's descriptive style drawing the reader into the story, making him feel a part of it.
All look at something. some basic part of our daily existence. that we usually have overlooked.
Once again, the author uses this take-time-to-smell-theflowers technique effectively.

And though the book gets of to a rocky start, no one will come away disappointed.

Once Fulghum finds his niche, he again brings the spirit of discovery and erlightenment to discovery and enlightenment to those works.

injustices, and he's pretty bitter at thirtysomething.

Costello spins a neurotic tale in "Sweet Pear," a song about a man who thinks all relationships are doomed to failure. The character, a self-termed"stupid lover, wretched groom," is so obsessed with thoughts of his wife leaving him that he cannot enjoy their relationship while it lasts.

Costello is also bitter about the human condition ("The Other Side Of Summer"), setting himself up as the archetypal fool who feels his emotions are beyond his control. "The sun struggles up another beautiful day/And I felt glad in my own suspicious way/Despite the contradiction and confusion/Felt tragic withoutreason/There'smalice and there's makic in every season."

On"Invasion Hit Parade"Costello also portrays an aging hipster railing against society: "I'd rather go back in the sweat underground/Where I can tell the time by the color of my skin/And I know thy neighbor cause he's the one, yes he's the one/ Who always turns me in."

His anguish helps his art, though. Which is also supported by musical experimentation with The Dirty Dozen Brass Band, and he renders a record as eclectic as any other in his catalog.

EMF: Schubert Dip

Melody Maker magazine crowned them "The Sex Pistols Ofindie Dance Crossover." They are EMF (E for Ecstasy and you figure out the rest), the New Kids on the Alternative Block.

Though EMF are about as political as the New Kids, the British band packs a real punch. The best-known example, of course, is "Unbelievable," which sticks in your head - and WrLL NOT LEAVE, EVER.

But Schubert Dip goes beyond unbelievable. An addictive blend of post hip-hop power pop, EMF dellvers racy music that melts into the unconscious.

Unlike other indie dance bands, EMF keeps their music fresh by relying on rock guitars and a bit of creativity - a noble idea.

Unbelievable," provides an accurate sampling of Schubert Dip, unlike number one singles on albums with no other notable songs.

If you liked "Unbelievable", you'll like Schubert Dip. It's as simple as a good pop song.

As a point of interest, however. "Unbelievable" contains one complex element that has listeners stumped. So for all those who mumble unintelligible jargon through that venomous rap verse in "Unbelievable," here EMF: More Than Unbelievable are the lyrics: "Seemingly lastless, don't mean you can ask us/Pushing down the relative, bringing out your higher selff Think of the fine times, pushing hink of the fithe times, pushing down the betce few/instead of ringing out the clues to what the world/and everything anger to, brace yourself/with the grace of ease, I know this world ain't what it seems.

Son Seals: Living In The ## Danger Zone

With the release of his eighth album, his first since 1985 ? Chicago blues great Son Seals dispels the "cry in your beer" myth. This structured alburn cheerfully serves the blues with a strong R&B horn section, the rock 'n' roll elements of bass and drums and a whole lot of kick.

The double-entendre stocked "Frigidaire Wornan," the lustful "Worman in Black" and the dubious "Tell it Tb Another Fool" sound a bit different: not only are they upbeat, but they also take pain and make it pretty damned funny
In "Frigidaire Woman," the graff-voiced Seals sings, "She had the coldest love that I ever saw/She had the kinda love you could never thaw/I got crossed and I'm still sore/from trying to get into her vegetable drawer" Seals has all the necessary ingredients for success in the blues, both in persona and musicianship. Haggard and wearied. Seals wears an emotive face and sad puppy eyes which exemplify Chicago blues at its best.

Let's hope events in this suitable life drive him to the recording studio a bit more often.

Big Audio Dynamite II: The Globe

The Clash they're not. But at least they have their moments. BAD dropped their fake-funk past to become BAD II: a genuine hip/hop punk cross reminiscent of their forefathers

Mick Jones, guitarist and vocalist of the Clash, makes his calist of the Clash, makes his roots obvious. From the first roots obvious. From the first words on the record, Jones is words on the record, Jones is hipping off the world in the best Clash tradition: "If I had my Clash tradition: "If I had my time again/l would do it all the time again/I would do it all the same/And not change a single same/And not change a single thing/Even when I was to blame." thing/Even when I was to blame. The Clash's infuence appears elsewhere on the album, as in a elsewhere on the album, as in a sample lifted from "Should I Stay Or Should 1 Go." BAD II also rips off The Who and puts a Phil Collins sample to better use.

The alburn's only tragic flaws, in their own warped way, contribute to the aesthetic of the album. Goofy intermittent narrative by an overly-white soulless man interrupts the flow of "Rush" causing it to get lengthy. But remove those portions of songs like "Rush" and BAD 11 loses comedic value.
Such is the case with "The Globe." an equally discursive song that uses the Clash's trade mark yelp as a snetze sound mark Vocals that harmonize despite themselves, snide lyries and funky music comprise the core of this record. Alternately angry and detached, funny and self-mocking, BAD Il preserves the essence of The Clash within the confines of modern music.

Next week's edition of This Ain't No Disco features a fall music forecast. Reviews include Lenny Krovitz and Chris Whitley.

Staff Reports
Bo Jackson's rehabilitation song and dance routine finally paid off.

Jackson, the duossport allstar who had been kept out of the majors and trapped in televi-sion-land since January, finally returned on Monday night.

Jackson went 0 -for- 3 in his recall with the Chicago White Sox, as he faced, ironically enough, the team that let him go because of a hip injury, the Kansas City Royals.

Jackson did drive in a run with a sacrifice fly and also received a standing ovation from the fans at New Comiskey Park.

While it remains to be seen if Jackson's return will be just a transitory one, his appearance alone defied most critics.

Let's hope his athletic career is back for good, because his singing was getting to be hard on the ears, and stomach.

The New York Mets' season may have ended long ago, but only one member of the team is officially ready to call it quits.

Dwight Gooden said he will most likely sit out the rest of the season because of a sore right shouldier.

With all due respect for the state of Gooden's health, who cares? Gooden, though having a decent year at 13-7 with a 3.60 ERA, is certainly no longer worth the price of admission. And the Mets are a team in such of the mid 1980's could earn of them fans

Rivalry returns
It was gone, but not forgotten.

The second greatest rivalry in football will resume next Monday night as the Cowboys host the Redskins.
Sure, the teams have always battled twice a year in division play, but this is a return to the national spotlight for the matchup.
For the Cowboys, this will be their first Monday night game in years. With a new offensive scheme, injections of talented youth and building conflence, Dallas is poised, once again, for nation is pention

The Redskins are coming off a $45-0$ pounding of Detroit. Yet despite the victory and the longtime absence of Joe Theisman, the 'Skins are nothing.

Still, the intensity of the rivalry should bring out the little power Washington has left.

The Miami Dolphins on Tuesday may have been the first team to literally trade a player to be named later.

The Dolphins' first round pick this year, Randall Hill, was in the midst of legally changing his name to Randall Thrill Hill, when he was dealt to the Phoenix Cards.
The Dolphins will receive the Cardinals' first round pick next year.

Syracuse University quarterback Marvin Graves will lead the Orange offense againgt an unknown Vanderbilt defenge. The Vanderbilt coaching staff has taken on a new look this year under new head coach Gerry DiNardo.

"The schemes on that film are not worth anything." he said. DiNardo, the offensive coordinator for national champion Colorado last season, has taken last year's wishbone and made it an I-bone.
He has taken last year's defense, which surrendered over 40 points seven times, and made it a "reduction 52 defense," designed to crowd the defensive line.

The I-bone, which DiNardo used to highlight tailback Eric Bienemy and utilize the strong throwing arm of Darian Hagan, is similar to the wistibone, Pasqualoni said.

The I-bone is basically an option offense with two backs in an I-formation behind the quarterback. A third running quarterback. A third running back can bell.
side as well

The main difference is that the I-bone allows more flexibility. "You can throw the ball better out of the I-bone." DiNardo said.
DiNardo's success at Colorado, where the Buffaloes averaged 34.4 points per game last season, proves he can direct the system. The challenge will be for him to do the same with last year's SEC doormat.
"We've played option teams in the past, but Vanderbilt will run more types of options and will give us more formations,' Pasqualoni said. "They will throw the ball deep more than most option teams."

Vanderbilt listed sophomore Jeff Brothers as its starting quarterback.

Brothers did not play against SU last year. Mike Healey, a better passer, and Marcus Wilson. a pure runner, did. Brothers has the best pass-run combination of the three.
"We've gone into opening games before against teams we've never played, but his is the first time we're opening up against a new staff," Pasqualoni said. "We don't even have their spring game. We don't have anything."

Pasqualoni acknowledged it will be equally difficult to prepare offensively, schematicwise. Vanderbilt will show some "52 formations," but anything beyond that is a guess.
"We also expect to see some things we don't expect,' Pasqualoni said.

DiNardo said the 18 return ing starters statistic would be misleading because each spot was reopened when he took over.
"Some (players) have more game experience than others, but I wouldn't say we're a veteran team," DiNardo said.

Connors gets better with age old game  In the age of multi-million dollar, crybaby athletes there are many who are content to take the money andBut there are others who outlast their counterparts, appreciate the fans and show some real class.

The remarkable Nolan Ryan, who at 43 still has the mechanics to pitch against players young enough to be his sons, comes to mind.

JOSH  BARNETT  SPORTS  OPRNION

 Kareem Abdul-leadingscorer.Abhad the ability to knock down the skyhook when he retired.Monday afternoon at the National Tennis Center, Jimmy Connors secured his place on that list

Connors celebrated his 39th birthday by defeating Aaron Krickstein 3-6, 7-6 (10-8), 1-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-4), in one of the most remarkable tennis matches in recent memory.
The five-set marathon lasted 4 hours and 41 minutes and featured two tiebreakers.

Connors has become one of those athletes who can electrify crowds with his intensity and amazing shots.

It seemed as if the crowd wouldn't let Connors lose and inspired him to come back from a $2-5$ deficit in the final set.

The fans, inspired by Connors' fist pumping and yelling, threw away the usual tennis decorum. The chair umpire, David Littlefield, was forced to request quiet after almost every point as the match wore on.
Connors yelled and screamed at Littlefield several times but he showed where his allegiance lay late in the match.

After a grueling point, Connors sat down courtside and said, "This is what they prid for, this is what they get."

You certainly had to feel for Krickstein, a 24 -year-old American who had only two fans among the crowd -his father and his coach.

It looked as if Connors might have been finished during the third set when Krickstein rolled to take the set 6-1.

In the French Open earlier this year, Connors was forced to retire during the fourth set of a grueling match against Michael Chang despite leading 2-1 at the time.

Not this time. Connors' adrenaline kept him going.

Even at 39, Jimbo still has some power. Several times his serve was in excess of 100 miles per hour. Connors moved into the U.S. Open quarterfinals for the 17th time in the last 18 years.

If it was anybody else they might start talking about winning the whole thing, but not Jimbo; he's still taking them one at a time.

But, it certainly won't get any easier for him. Next he plays Paul Harrhuis, who upset Boris Becker in straight sets.

At least for now, Connors can head to the trainer's table and enjoy the few days he has off.

He certainly proved what kind of athlete he is. So move over Nolan and Kareem, Jimbo is now a full-fledged member of the "oldie-but-goodie" club.

Syracuse University junior Denine Groff (15) and Kelly Larkin (11) work the ball upfield in a game last season. The Orangewomen went $17-3$ and were nationally ranked throughout all of last year. SU will open its season

Coach hopes to improve on record-setting season

By GIL PAGOVICH

Stafl Writer
Last year the Syracuse University women's field hockey team finished 17-3 - its best season ever - but failed to receive an invitation to the postseason receive an tournament.

After last year's controversial ending, SU coach Kathleen Parker says her tearn is looking to prove something to its biggest critics.
"They feel that they need to prove that last year was not a fluke," Parker gaid. "I think that's their mission, to prove we indeed should have been given some recognition at the end of the season that we didn't get."

The Orangewomen, who had a schoolrecord 12 -game winning streak last year, were passed in favor of Connecticut year, were passed in favor of (11-8-2) for the NCAA bids.

SU returns nine of 11 starters from its top two scorers, co-captain Kerers, Larkin and Yvonne Milionis.
Milionis, a senior tallied a schoolrecord 22 goals las year en route to be time leading scorer (29 goals). Larkin

Milionis netted 14 goals last

This past summer Larkin competed in the Olympic Festival. She scored the winning goal in overtime of the semifinal game and netted the lone goal in the championship game in leading her team to the fold medal Fellow co-captain Traci Dimeo cred ted Larkin for the SU team's previous and present success.

"Kelly is just all around, everything - All-American," Dimeo said. "You can't ask any more out of a player than you get out of Kelly."
Last year Larkin and Milionis were named to the Mid-East region AllAmerican team. Joining Larkin and Milionis on the squad were seniors Dimeo and Diana Despiaumolina.
With the all the returning starters, Parker is counting on is her team's experience.
"If we get into close competitive games, the experience is what will make a difference," Parker said.

Carkin is one of eight seniors on this year's squad, and Parker says she looks to all of them for leadership.

SU preparing for unknown Commodores

By ROB GUYETTE

Sports editor
The Vanderbilt Commodores have 18 returning starters, a sure sign of experience. That's the good news.

The Vanderbilt Commodores finished 1-10 each of the last two seasons, a sure sign that the coach will be fired. That's the bad news.
First-year head coach Gerry DiNardo inherited the mess left by Watson Brown and has promised a house cleaning.

The Commodores will face Syracuse University in the season opener for both teams Saturday at noon in the Carrier Dome.

DiNardo has reshaped every part of the Vanderbilt aquad. He's installed a new offense, a new defense and probably new players.
These changes have created a few problems for first-year head coach Paul Pasqualoni and the rest of the SU staff. They have no films whatsoever to study from.

SU crushed Vanderbilt in Nashville last year 49-14, but Pasqualoni said those films can only be used to evaluate personnel

New emergency line speeds on-campus aid

By KEN ALDRICH

Emergency: 711

Syracuse University students in need femergency help need only to dial this number.
During the third week of August, the Communications Department and SU security integrated a new software program into the pre-existing 711 emergency phone line to quicken response time. This new number will eliminate the former emergency number, 443 1212 .

The new software displays the phone number, street, building name and room number of the phone being used to call in an emergency, Previously, only the telephone number was displayed. The dispatcher would have to then look up the corresponding address in a separate book before sending an officer.

The software is on a one-year trial program. It was obtained from IBM and Northern Telecom International.
"The reliability isn't in question," said Elise Angiolilho, director of telecommunications at SU. The security and communications departments are only looking at possible enhancements, she said.

A 'resounding success'"
According to Lt. Jay Duda, SU Security's commanding officer in charge of communizations, the program has been a "resounding success."
Since the system was implemented, the majority of incoming calls have been students stuck in elevators.

The system also protects against prank calls, even hang-ups, since the numbers appear on the computer before the first ring. Duda said.
The phone numbers of handicapped and disabled students are also programmed into the system. This way the security force can determine if any extra steps need to be taken to ensure safety.

The former emergency phone number is still in operation because the system has not yet been completed. SU is on a separate phone system from local communities.

Off-campus addresses do not necessarily appear on the display, unless the phone used is serviced by the same New York Company Central Office, Angiolillo said. However, the phone number will still appear on the computer display as before.
Each officer on duty can receive one call on the display at once. All other incoming calls are put on an automatic hold until an officer is free Angiolillo said the departments are looking into having multiple calls appear on the display at once.

When the dispatcher receives a call, a police officer is sent to the address. The officer then must andyze the situation and decide whether to bring in medical

The health center consists of a general medical clinic which is open 24 hours a day, an allergy clinic, a cold clinic, a gynecology clinic and an infirmary for students who do not need hospitalization. It also provides counseling, pharmaceutical, X-ray and health education services.

Simkins said she plans to focus on health promotion, providing services that address the total aspect of the student.

Health advisory board
SU has a health advisory board with one student representative, she said.
A health advisory committee composed of students will be organized, Tims said. She will serve as adviser.
These students will help make decisions about how and what services are offered, she said.

The students will serve as a liaison between Health Services and the student body," she said. "They will serve on the different committees within Health Services."

Students can do many things to improve services, she said. For example, Brown University students hold office hours in the student union, she said.

Here, they answer questions about health-care services.
Students servicesenting all aspects of Students representing all aspects of the student body will be recruited, Simkins said.
"I want...all different types of students on campus to help us make decisions about how we provide services here," she said. "The students can be real advocates and help us make decisions."

Simkins said she is trying to reduce the amount of time students spend waiting for services.

Campus community unites under umbrella of SGA

By frank colucci

Staff Writer
The Student Government Association has already begun preparations for improving the Syracuse University community, according to SGA President Emily Zenick.
"I think it's important to note that we were here working this summer," Zenick said.
This advance work has already paid off, she said, citing the popularity of last weekend's Autumn Street Festival in front of the Schine Student Center and the recently published Who's New at SU book, she said.
"SGA aims to make students feel like an integral part of the university cormmunity," Zenick said.
SGA is more than just the forum through which student groups petition for university funds, she said.
"It's an umbrella organizstion for over 300 groups on campus," she said. It's a forum to address concerns and needs."
Tb meet these needs, SGA representatives met with Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw during his visit to the campus in July. They have also had conversations with Dean of Admissions and Financial Aid David C. Smith.

Attending council meetings

In addition, SGA sends representatives to Syracuse Common Council meetings and works with the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG) to improve student voter registration, Zenick said.
We try to be in touch with how issues in the community affect students," Zenick said.
During the summer, the organization also published the student handbook, had representatives on the search committee for the new associate director of leadership, and mailed firstyear students information about campus life, Zenick aaid.

SGA has committees on administrative operations, academic sffairs student affairs, and univer "ty' community relations.

Chinese police stopped three U.S. lawmakers yesterday who placed flowers in Tiananmen Square and held up a banner to honor activists slain by the Chinese army in the 1989 pro-democracy movement.
The three - Rep. Nancy Pelosi, DCalif., Rep. Ben Jones, D-Ga. and Rep. John Miller, R-Wash. - were meeting with Chinese officials to press for improved human rights conditions.
The lawmakers were allowed to leave the square after a short exchange with police confused by the language barrier. Police detained for 90 minutes three U.S. television camera crews who were filming the incident, the crews said

Soviet parliament   approves reforms

   approves reforms}The Soviet parliament yesterday gave preliminary approval to a plan to transfer most Kremlin power to the republics and turn the Soviet Union into a loose confederation of sovereign states.

The Congress of People's Deputies voted $1,126-289$ to approve a resolution on the measure as a basis for discussion. The two ballots were important procedural votes on the proposal by President Mikhail S. A Channelview, Texas mother was convicted yesterday of plotting to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading ival.
The jury announced guilty verdicts yesterday against Wanda Webb Holoway on charges of solicitation of murder. The woman who was plotted against, Verma Heath, was not killed.
The prosecution said that Holloway plotted murder because she was enraged that her 13 -year-old daughter, Shanna, had failed to win a spot on her junior high school cheerleading squad two years in a row. Prosecutors said that Holloway wanted a professional killer to do away with Heath, who is the mother of Shanna's chief rival and once a close friend of Holloway's.

SUFAR fights for better treatment of animals

By MIKE OVERHOLT
Staff Writer
A relatively new student organization on campus is tackling a controversial issue that affects everyone.

Syracuse University for Animat Rights (SUFAF), which was formed in the spring of 1990, is striving to achieve better treatment of animals at the university and in the surround. ing community, according to SUFAR President Jacquie Grieco.

However, the organization receives a lot of hostility from people and the majority do not listen to the group's message, she said. At frsst that bothered her, Grieco amid, but it does not anymore.
"Now 1 know (the problem) is not us, it's them," she said.

The protests also present problems in that SUFAR members have to be carefu! what they wear while protesting. Although whe no longer buys leather or animal-related clothing, Grieco admits ahe still owns Grieco admits ahe stil owns leather

In addition to protesting animal treatment and research, the group is also trying to get improved vegetarian meale for the dining halls.

Veggies, eggs and milk
Most of the current meals are forlacto-ovo vegetarians who eat foods that come from animals, such as dairy products. Grieco said. Vegan vegetariarns are a stricter group and do not eat any food related to animals. SUFAR would Jike to see a greater range of foods available greater range of foods ava Crieco admits that some people look at animal rigits advocates in a negative way because of their beliefs, but says that such views should not be taken personally because they are the product of a society which places great emphasis on animal use.

It will take a long time to change this emphasis, at least

Your new friends will cost you. Also, due to administrative safety policies, fraternity parties now need to be catered, which brings the entrance fee for drinkers often close to seven dollars. But this doesn't affect freshman because we all know that they don't drink, for it's against the law.
Unlike other schools, sports here are not free. You must pay and pay greatly. Do you want to go to the big SU basketball games? It will cost you more than $$ 70$. Even the lacrosse and soccer teams charge admission. But SU really needs the money to rearrange the roads and make them less safe for students but more convenient for the outbound truckloads of money.

The bottom line is that everything at SU costs money. If you find yourself doing well in academics, you may be invited into several honor societies. This so-called honorable invitation is just another devious way to yank money from you. So keep one eye on your studies and tife ither on your wallet:

Dollar's value has doubled

This summer I learned the value of a dollar, or I should say I began to hold a lot of value in each of my green paper portraits of George. Honestly, once I found a dollar lying on the ground and was very excited because I knew that week.

I was working two relatively low-paying jobs in a resort town on the beach (the trade-off).

On top of this, I worked in a gift shop and a candy store, two places selling merchandise that was almost all taxable, or not necessary according to New Jersey state tax laws. How many vacationing customers did I watch spontaneously purchase lapis earrings or a pound of marzipan with the simple flash of a plastic card? Occasionally I'd get the "urge to splurge" on such trivialities for myself or as gifts for others, but more often than not had to resist because I simply couldn't afford it.

To the saying, "You don't miss what you don't have," I'd post the addendum, "especially if you don't see others who do have." My experience this summer certainly taught my that. Prior to then I had little idea what things like lapis or marzipan were.

And relatively speaking, my aituation was hardly worthy of complaint. Just speaking for this country, we know that the poor easily aee what they're missing. Often they live right beside the wealthy or the wealthy's workplaces. If not, they can catch a glimpse of the financial "good life" on Dynasty and Virginia Slims billboards.
Seeing what they can't have can make the less fortunate angry and resentful. While they may well have an image of the wealthy as arrogant, selfish, snobbish and insensitive, portions of the wealthy population have been suspected to view the poverty-stricken as lazy, suspected to view the poveriy-stricken as good values, and stupid. When such attitudes exist, both groups obviously have no interest or are fearful of getting closer to the other in order to create better relations between them.

It seems to me that the poor don't have the means to attain the "superior" status that encompasses those qualities that the wealthy revere. They are often not informed abou ways to acquire money, a good job, or an education. They appear (to many who are whers of fact they have little choice since they when in fact they havelittle choice since they have not been given the fruits of quality have not been given the fruits of quality education, sife neighborhoods, lots of land opportunities for travel, even healthy food, the way the monetarily advantaged have. There's considerable tension between the wealthy and the poor because their lifestyles are so vastly different. The separate groups resent one another because one's existence supposedly prevents a completely financially and otherwise comfortable existence for the other.

So we are split, and our anger, distrust, and different cultural dialects hinder communica tion possibilities even more. We, them. Preju dice, stereotypes, discrimination, "isms" result. There's hope and real possibility for an "us" to come to be, but only if both "we's" want it.

In The Daily Orange on August 27, Dean Golden was quoted as saying that, the T-shirts, which contained the words "Club Faggots," did not specifically threaten anyone did not cause an immediat breach of the peace, and therefore did not pass the clear and present danger test. Syracuse University's Amateur Radio Club is for serious harns.
Ham radio is a "gentleman's hobby." said SU sophomore Dan DeRusha, the club's president. "But we like to stress community gervice as well as hobby."
By using ham radios on different frequencies, the group has provided communications for the local YMCA as well as emergency communications for SU Security and SU Ambulance.
"Many tirnes we volunteer services during events or emergency situations such as hurricanes," adviser Donald Shaw said.

By gaining access to licenseauthorized frequencies, the authorized requen puts out a "CQ." or a group puts out a call for other ham users and waits for a response.

Club Vice President Matt Penrod, a State University of New York EnvironmentalScienceand Forestry sophomore, said that many club members engage in "DX-ing." which is talking to other arnateur radio users from as far away as possible.
"It's a great way to meet people," Penrod said.
On the ainwaves around the world
The group has communicated withamateurradiousers throughout the United States and in other countries such as Spain, the Soviet Union, Czechoslovakia and Scotland.
"It's a hard thing to conceptualize without (ham radio) background," DeRusha said.
"We're encouraging people to come and find out about it and what we can do," he ssid.
The group encourages people majors to join. "Diversity really majors to join. "Diversity really because we can get in contact with anywhere in the world with amateur radio," DeRusha said.

"One thing we'd really like to do is get more people involved since the campus is so diverse," he added.

Tb begin working with ham radios it in necessary for mem bers to obtain a license by passing a Federal Communications Commission test.
"It's fairly easy to get a license," DcRusha amid. "We're willing, to teach people the hobby."

The group also welcomes SU and ESF students who already hold ham radio licenses.

More than just talk
Penrod said that after obtaining a license, communication possibilities are not limited to verbal conversation.

After (obtaining a license), you can do anything -morse code, computers, TV signals there are millions of different ways to communicate," he said.
The club is bound by FCC regulations in the United States and communication laws in other countries, but Penrod said that there are no real restrictions on conversstion.
"You can talk about basically anything you want, he said. You usually end up talking about things like your family and the weather.

DeRusha said that no business can be conducted over the air since ham radio is for amateurs.
"Ham radio is a hobby purely for pleasure," he said.
The only other rules governing amateur radio are "general goodwill and common courtesy," he said.
As a public service for the SU and ESF communities, the Amateur Radio Club uses its equipment to transmit messages to family and friends in the United States and other countries.
The club will send messages for students primarily in North America as a public service, as long as they are of a personal, non-business nature," Shaw said.
He said the main purpose of the group is to provide a form of communication for people with common yet widely varying interests.

He also said that ham radio can be educational. "Through ham radio we can learn about each other and improve technical abilities, Amateur radio can be anything you want it to be," Penrod said. "It's a group of people who have their licenses and enjoy communicating with other people."

The Onondaga County Convention Center is shaping up in downtown Syracuse one block south of the War Mernorial.

The center is scheduled for completion in the fall of 1992 and will include a 65,000 -square-foot exhibit hall. meeting rooms and banquet ballroom facilities that can seat more than 1.100 guests for dinner or 2.000 people for meetings or dancing.

A 1.000 -car parking garage will be on the lot east of the center. The $$ 40$ million convention center has been in the planning stages since the mid1980s, and the groundbreaking took place on October 24, 1990.
When the facilities are completed and fully operational, the county intends to close the War Memorial in order to renovate the building. Renovations on the War Memorial should begin in 1993 and last for 12 to 18 months.

Believe it or not, there is life beyond Marshall Street. If you're new to Syracuse you might not be familiar with Erie Boulevard, Syracuse's answer to Fifth Avenue.

If you aren't fortunate enough to have a car, then you can take a taxi ( 4 SU TAXI to various stops on Erie for about $$ 8$. There is also the Centro bus (4423300), but it does not leave straight from the SU campus. You'll have to transfer downtown in order to get to Erie.

Chitap eats

Typical of every "strip" is the large number of chain restaurants. Erie Boulevard is filled with them. Arby's, Denny's, Burger King, Bennigan's and Red Lobster all have outlets on Erie. There are also local places like Galveston's, and The Swiss Chalet for Chicken and Ribs.

SHOPPING

Erie is lined by strip centers consisting of all types of stores. One popular plaza is called the Hechinger/Price Chopper Plaza. This center has Hechinger, a huge warehouse filled with items for your residence hall room or apartment. your residence halt room or apartment.
It carries everything from lights, mirrors and blinds to nails. hammers and shelves and blinds to nails. hammers and shelves at fairly low prices. Also in that center at fairly low prices. Also in that center is Linens ' $N$ Things, a store that offers bed and bath necessities at low prices.

Price Chopper, an enormous grocery store, has everything you will need to escape residence hall food.

Hills Plaza is another strip center down the road that has national stores

Erie Boulevard offers a variety of retailers to meet student needs.
such as Marshall's and Silo, local store such as SoFro, a fabric store, (great for decorating your room) and Hills department store

Pier 1 Imports, right off Erie on Orrick St., is another place to find items that will make your residence hall room feel more like home.
Continuing down the boulevard. you will find Shoppingtown Mall.

There, you'll find Lechters, an allpurpose store that sells every kind of container needed to hold clothes and belongings that the residence hall room shet cannot Shoppingtown also has department stores such as Addis and Dey's, Chappell's, and J.C. Penney. For female fitness buffs, there is Kelly Lyn, a workout spa just. for women.

If the washing machines in the residence hall just don't do the trick, then right down the road from Erie. in East Genesee, is a strip center thit has a laundromat called Easy Wasi.

Options abound for mall-hoppers

> Students arriving on campus, uprooted from their familiar home-turf, can find their patterns of shopping and consumption seriously altered. This problem is particularly acute for first year students who usually lack wheels and knowledge of Syracuse's malls. The following is a brief overview of some of the malls, all with cinemas, in the area.
> - Shoppingtown, Erie Blvd.

> This mall, recently renovated expanded, added more than 80 new stores. Despite its gauche name, the Shoppingtown mall has considerably more nair than most, with large, clean, open spaces and lots of glass and bright banners. Its new food court, temporarily rivals you-know-whose.
As for stores. Shoppingtown has all the basea covered, ranging from bargain shoppers' delighti All for $A$ Dollar to $B$. Forman Co., an expenaive men's store specializing in Ralph Lauren and nlaihmene.

Although there is no all-important Banana Republic or Gap, the latter is promised to be "coming soon."

The mall is large and attractive, with almost as many stores as Carousel., One of its most unusual features is the DeWitt Public Library Emphasis in this mall is on decor. Several fountains were even designed without protective railings. Either leave your children home or keep a watchfal eye.

Fayetteville Mall, Fayetteville Free bus service, which picks up and drops off students in front of several dorms on Saturdays, may be the best feature days, may be the best feature the Fayetteville Mall has to Once Once there, expect to find many empty stores at one of Syracuse's oldest malls, despite fairly recent expansion.
The older part of the mall is dark with low ceilings. The renovated areas seem almost too eager to please, blasting shoppers with off-white walls and too-bright accents. Unfortunately, the expansion is rife with vacancies, and besides a Frederick's of Hollywood, little is offered beyond the standard ng goods and department stores like Sears and Hess's.

The food court sticks to the tried-and-true mall formula, offering burgers, Chinese fast food, frozen yogurt, etc. The food court's lack of originality goes so far as to include a wimpy carousel as its focal point.
Camillus Mall
Although not convenient to SU students, the Camillus Mall is an alternative to those experiencing Carousel burn-out. Camilus is everything the Carousel isn't: it's old, it's small and it has a South Campus look to it However, the kids from the nearby high school seem to adore.it.

The Camillus Mall offers the expected range of goods and gervices, but not much else, unless you consider K -Mart a bonless you consider K-Mart a bonus. It has fountains, synthetic gardens and a Burger king. What else could you want, aside from a carousel?
Penn Can Mall
Those contemplating suicide should steer clear of the Penn Can Mall. It is easily the most depressing mall in the Syracuse area. Reeking of earth tones, the older part of the mall looks remarkably similar to the one in George Romero's zombie pic Dawn of the Dead, and most of the customers look as if they could have been zombie extras.

Actually, the newer part of the mall is fairly pleasant, but once again it suffers from many empty stores, The Penn Can Mall may be a good choice if you need a quiet place not you ally a feature of more popular malls.

Penn Can's food court is actually a food hallway, its management having crammed most of its food outlets into one stretch of the mall. While this layout might eliminate the need for a planned. A plus for students is that Centro's Carousel bus will whisk you away from Comstock and Euclid (Shaw Hall) at many convenient times.

The Carousel, of all area malls, has the nicest mix of high- and low-end shops, such as Filene's Basement, Limited Express, Structure, the suddenly ubiquitous All for A Dollar, Chappell's, ad infinitum. Here's where you find out, after all the hype, that a Lechmere is a housewares store, or you can perhaps pick up a gift at Bonwit Teller. In fact, there are so many stores and so much space that a sort of "mall-aise" can set in it one shops there too long. There are many restaurant at the Carousel Center. The food court is easily the most varied and interesting of the area malls offering a deli, a french fry specialty store and restaurants such as L&N Seafood and Pizzeria Uno. Just about any fast food craving can be satisfied in the pleasant atmosphere of the Carousel's food court. But don't go looking for anything particularly healthy - all you will find is frozen yogurt.

In short, if you are "going to the mall," like it or not, you will most likely end up at the Carousel Center.

Broadway music star to perform at benefit

Staff Reports

Abstract

Broadway musical star Meg Bussert comes to town Friday, Sept. 6, to perform at the soldout Syracuse Stage benefit for Hospice of Central New York. Bussert, a veteran of Broadway shows Camelot and The Music Man, will reprise her cabaret program "An Evening of Loesser and Sondheim," which won her critical acclaim last winter in Los Angeles. Her most recent work was a performance of The Music Man before an audience including President Bush and Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf. Also, Bussert visited Syracuse in summer 1990 , when she performed in Syracuse Stage's Closer Than Ever. "We're delighted to have Meg Bussert," says Barbara Haas, press coordinator for Syracuse press coordinator for shyacuse Stage. "She's a very prominent performer and she was just wonderful in Closer Than Ever. wonderful in Closer Than Eve

\section*{Change in plans}

Bussert's program begins at 8:30 p.m. in Hutchings Auditorium, adjacent to Syracuse Stage. The show was originally booked for Archbold Theatre, but delays in the construction of a new roof there caused the change in plans, Haas says.

Although Hutchings Auditorium seats only 350, compared to Archbold's 500, Haas remains confident the benefit will help the Hospice as much as last year's sell-out show
"Last year the benefit raised $$ 30,000$ for the hospice. The numbers are different this year but there are 170 patrons this year, and that's pretty good. I'm sure we'll do well.

The hospice is a really good community organization," Haas says. "They help families to care for patients in the home if possible or in the hospital and they also provide family counseling.

The benefit will also help ADS patients through the Hos pice, Haas says.

Following Bussert's performance, the Sunday Night Road Band will take the stage at Sutton Pavilion at 10 p.m. to play big band hits and conclude the evening.

For those holding patron tickets, the benefit also includes a pre-show cocktail-buffet at 7 p.m. on Friday in Syracuse Stage's Sutton Pavilion.

Aventsigned with Italianchampion Caserta for roughly $$ 1$ million, and will leave for Italy at the end of the week.

Those high-spirited Irish Two starters for the Notre Dame Fighting Irish football team were arrested last weekend for public intoxication and disorderly conduct. The players were at an off-campus party.
Arrested were quarterback Rick Mirer and linebacker Demetrius DeBose

Irish coach Lou "God Is On Our Side" Holtz defended his decision not to suspend the players in a press conference Tuesday.
Holtz said the players would be disciplined for violating team rules, but would start Saturday's season opener against Indiana.
Mirer and DeBose claim they weren't drunk and were only arrested because they were football players.

These guys are still here? Get out!!

In this very space, yesterday, the exploits of "golden oldie" athletes were detailed and justly credited.

For all the elder athletes who succeed, however, there are at least twice as many who don't know when to quit.

There is not much in the sports world that is more disheartening than watching a once-great player humiliate himself by hanging around a little too long.
DAVE So please, chose of you who BUSCEMA
SPORTS
OPMION have been trying to recapture lost glory, stop embar rassing yourremember you fondly, as you were in your prime

And for those athletes who never even had a prime, I pity you

In case these athletes still don't get the hint, here is an open letter:

Gary Carter - The once energetic leader of the Expos and Meta has tried to play the same role for the Dodgers Yes, the Dodgers are in first place No, Gary, it has nothing to do with your lovely smile.

Carter's fist-pumping antics have long since rendered his arm useless and he is a non-factor offensively. Get out, Gary.

Charlie Hough - I thought Phil Niekro was around forever. Hough aeemas like he's been in the big leagues doubly an long. The only thing that appears to have lasted as long, besides those stupid bunny commercials, is the path of Hough's knuckleball to the plate. If Hough was a pitcher in Nintendo, he would have been pulled a long time ago with that 32 MPH pitching style. Get out, Charlie.

Fick Cerone - Actually, he doesn't even qualify for this column, as he was never a great athete. His career highight was in 1980 when he had a decent season for the Yankees and promoted the now defunct "10" jeans.

Cerone has jumped around with the Red Sox, Yankees and Mets. Rick, you tink. You always have, you always will. The only consolation right now s that you play on a Mets team that $s$ equally as bad as you are. You should have gone out with the jeans you promoted. Get out, Rick.

Dave Krieg - I have one question out Krieg's NFL career. Why?
Sure, he had a couple of decent geasons, but for the most part his career has been a joke. Granted, the Seahawks have never had the best mix f talent, but with Krieg at the helm, any semblance of postseason success is impassible. Bring good old Jim Zorn back. Get out, Dave Jeff Rutledge - His 'career' is a bigger joke than Krieg's. He has wiled in the league for over a decade as a reserve. Rutledre should just give up, find a real job, and a real life. Get out, Jeff.

So, for all those listed above, please uake a page from Ron Guidry's book. Guidry, a first-class hurier on and off the field, did not attempt to prolong his fine career. He, as these athletes should, knew to bow out gracefully

Although Dean Foti may be in his firs year as head coach of the Syracuse University soccer team, he's certainly not new to SU

Foti attended Syracuse from 1979 to 1982, where he was a four year soccer starter and a captain his junior and senior seasons

Foti said that once he got into caach ing, he hoped to end up back at SU some day
"It's always something you think about - coaching the school that you went to," Foti said.
Foti grew up in Oneonta, where he started playing soccer at the age of seven At Oneonta High School, Foti's solid play at midfield culminated in his being an All-New York State belection his senior season.

Once at Syracuse, Foti played an integral part in four straight winning easons
In 1982, his SU playing career came to an end as the Orangemen ended with 16-3-3 record and their first-ever Big East Conference Tournament champion

The already lucrative Big East foothall conference hasn't even established round-robin schedule.

But that hasn't stopped it from gathering a spot in the newly-formed bow alliance, a big television package and instant national recognition.

So who will win the first-ever Big East football crown?
The smart choice is the University of Miami Hurricanes, who have finished in the national top five each of the past four seasons.
The rest of the conference will most likely battle for second place, as several teams ottempt to take that step from up-and-coming to national power.
The Big East report will appear every Thursday on this page throughout the football season. This week, we preview each team, except Syracuse, which will be featured on Friday.
Miami - Who can forget the Hurricanes' 46-3 thrashing of Texas in last year's Cotton Bowl? And who can forget the beating Miami took for its taunting of the overmatched Longhorns?

Only 12 starters return for Miami which only means a new influx of the nation's best talent. The 'Canes lost the NFL's top draft pick, Russell Maryland, and quarterback Craig Erickson.
Key returnees are running back Stephen McGuire and All-American place kicker Carlos Huerta. Miami has road games at Arizona and Florida State, and their traditionally tough schedule also includes home games against Penn State and Houston.
Miami got off to a good beart last Saturday with a $31-3$ win over Arkanaas.
Virginia Tech -The Hokies are on everybody's teams-to-whitch list. After last year's season-ending mauling of Virginia and 6-3 defeat to co-national champion Georgia Tech, the Hokies return 16 starters.

Tech does not have the dificult schedule many Eastern teams do (James Madison, Akron, Cincinnati), but it will be tested by Florida State, Oklahoma and Louisville.
Tech has just one Big East game, Oct. 5 at West Virginia. The Big East champion will be determined by the highest ranked team at the end of the season, not won-loss record.

Temple - Well probably never figure out why Penn State dropped Syracuse and Pittsburgh in order to keep Temple, but who knows?

The Owls were the aurprise team last year, turning a $1-10$ ' 89 record to 7-4, including season-ending wins over Pitisburgh, Eutgers and Boston College.
Defense will key the Owls, who have to replace quarterback Matt Baker and receiver Rich Drayton. Temple opens up with three road games - Alabama, Pitt wind Clemson - which should indicate and it can duplicate last year's success.

West Virginia - The Mountaineers are the only team to play seven Big East games. They algo play road games at Penn State and Maryland.

University installs traffic lights

By ROY S. GUTTERMAN

Three sets of trafic lights should be installed and operational by tonight at three intersections deemed dangerous following recent construction, according to Harvey Kaiser, Syracuse University vice president for facilities administration.

The new lights at the intersections of University Place and Cornstock Ave., Walnut Place and Waverly Ave. and Walnut and Waverly avenues will ease traffic fow and make streets ease tratic now snd make stre safer for pedestrians, Kaiser said.
afer for pedestrians, Kaiser said.
"We are doing our best to get them in place and operational by tonight," he said.

The university's recent widening of Comstock and Waverly avenues to four-lane roads created hazardous conditions for pedestrians and drivers, prompting student and community outery.

That was capped by the Aug. 26 accident in which two SU students were hit by a car as they crossed the street at the intersection of Waverly and Walnut avenues.

'Quick response'

"We responded as quickly as possible," Kaiser-said, citing what he called the university's concern for student safety.

Crowds and traffic expected to accompany tornorrow's SU home football game further spurred the univergity, Kaiser said.

Six lights - two per intersextion - will be suspended on a wire strunk across the intersections. He said this type of light has "proven the safest."

Additional signs and street lines may be added as well, he said.
Temporary wooden poles were installed yesterday and Wednesday, Kaiser said. The university has ordered permanent metal poles; however, they will not be delivered for about three months.

The lights are being installed by an Oswego-based firm. Rizzo Construction, costing between $$ 30$ to $$ 50,000$ apiece, Kaiser said.

He did not know the exact cost for the installation, and said, these expenses will be incorporated into the road project's two-year budget.

Workers from Fizeo Construction install new traffic lightits Thur foday afternoon on Waverly Ave. The installation of the lights was prompted by the August 26 accident in which two Syracuse University students were hit by a car as they crossed the road.
"We are just bearing all the cost to get them in place as soon as possible," get ther,

Since the overall street project will span two years, Kaiser said, further span two years, Kaiser gaid, further modifications and safety features may modifical.
"We are going to be monitoring the intersections with video cameras a couple of tirnes a month," he said.
Traffic and pedestrian patterns, sight lines and length of signals will be studied. he said.
The lights also will be coordinated with current lights "for a smooth move With current lights of traffic," he said. The decision to install lights was made last Wednesday after a meeting between SU and city officials.

The road project has met with criticism from several sides, Kaiser said, but "people are just sorting out the best ways to come to carnpus."

NYPIRG encourages student activism

By ROBERT SHELDS Staff Writer  Stalf writer

The Syracuse University chapter of the New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG) needs students to help bring about change in the environment and government, said Bob Merli, project coordinator for SU.
"We want to get students out of their ivory tower and involved in positive change instead of just studying the issues," Merli ssid.
NYPIRG was formed out of the student movement of the 1960 s and its first chapter was formed at $S U$ in 1973 , he said.
Today NYPIRG is the largest public interest advocacy group in New York state, with chapters on 19 campuses and a professional staff of lobbyists, attorneys, and researchers, he asaid

This is the only state organization where students can make a difference on campus and for every citizen in the stote." Merli said.

All students who pay an activity fee are members of NYPIRG and that fee can be refunded upon request. "Students pay a small fee but they have use of the resources of a powerful statewide group," he said.

Leaming a number of shills

NYPIRG will undertake many projects this fall where gtudent will learn organizational and media skills, he gaid.

An ongoing project of NYPIRG has been student voter registration. According to Merli, NYPIRG has registered more than 150 etudents to vote in Onondage County this year. However; not all students will be given voter rights.
"It's absolutely' Iudicrous that students cannot vote,". he said. Onondaga County requires all students to fill out a two-page residency evaluation form that does not guarantee the right to vote, he said.
NYPIFG isactively involved in environmental issues, Merli said. "We will be working with the administration to further improve the campus recycling program, "he said.
NYPIRG will organize letter writing campaigns and pressure representatives in Albany to pass the Waste pressure representatives in Albany to pass the Waste in the state legislature, Merli said. This act will require fully in the state legislature, Meriasaid. This act will require, fully recycfable packaging, a bag tals.
recyclable diapers in hospitals.
This fall win see an entirely student-run campaign for a county law on item pricing "This will be an incredible way for students to get involved and to make a difference," he said. Students will learn organization, politics, research and public speaking skills.
NYPIRG will also work on eliminating standardized testing below the third grade.
"These teats are biased and there are more effective ways of assessing students," he said.

NYPIRG runs a Small Claims Court Action center to help students and community members who are considering going to small claims court.
"Students are trained by attorneys to offer help to people going to the 'real-life' People's Court," he said.

NYPIRG may begin a campus safety project in conjunction with S.C.A.R.ED. and other safety groups, Merli said.

NYPIRG will hold its first general interest meeting Sept. 11 at $7: 30$ p.m. in Room 304A of the Schine Student Center.

Starting as dispatchers
New student volunteers begin as dispatch trainees who receive emergency calls in the office, Dowden said. Students are required to volunteer at least 16 hours a month.

Before riding in the ambulance, volunteers have to be certified in CPR and pass an Emergency Medical Training course.
"I would trust any of (the volunteers) with my Jife,"said junior Lisa Diamond, SUA personnel officer. "If you don't trust the people you work with, you have a the people you work with, you have a

Soviet lawmakers

set up new parliament

Soviet lawmakers voted yesterday to end 70 years of Kremlin rule and set up an interim government to be dominated by sovereign republics.
Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev also formally acknowledged the independence of the three Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.
All but five of the 15 Soviet republics have declared independence.

The 1,900 members of the Congress of People's Deputies desperately tried to salvage the union in the wake of last month's failed coup by Soviet hardmonth

The Congress also proposed that the body of Vladimir Lenin, the founder of the Soviet state, be removed from the tomb at Red Square and reburied in Leningrad beside his mother's body.
Lenin's fate will be decided by a smaller legislature set up under the reconstruction plan.

South African plan details voting rights

If President F.W. De Klerk gets his way, a new constitution will provide universal suffrage for the first time in the history of South Africa.

His plan details a new, racially integrated system of government that would be created at national, regional and local levels, and chosen by proportional representation on the basis of universal suffrage.

The current Parliament would be replaced by a two-chamber Parliament open to South Africans of all races.

Health care workers anticipate pay hike

About 1.5 million Pexan health care workers, who receive $$ 4.25$ an hour, are expected to get wage increases.

Although governments, insurers and health-care providers are trying to find ways to keep costs down, industry officials say irresistible pressure has prompted the need for a pay increase.

With an aging U.S. population, hundreds of thousands of health care workers, mostly nursing home aides and women, will be needed to care for the elderly in the 1990 s .

A Federal law now requires aides to undergo formal training and certification, which enhances their value.

Political sparks fly

over pro-Thomas ad

Political sparks flared yesterday over a television commercial which expresses support for Judge Clarence Thomas's nomination to the Supreme Court because of the commercial's harsh attack on three Democratic Senators.

President Bush called the commercial, which is sponsored by conservative groups, offensive and counterproductive.
The pro-Thomas commercial questioned the ethics of three Democratic Senators: Edward M: Kennedy of Mass., Joseph R. Biden Jr. of Del., and Alan Cranston of Calif.
The sponsors of the commercial Conservative Victory Committee, a political action committee, and Citizens United, a lobbying group - said they wanted to show lawriakers what would wanted to show lawmakers what would happen to them if they engaged in what conservative groups called the "character assassination of Judge Thomas during confirmation hearings scheduled for next

WERW gives students AM alternative  By ERIN NEFF

Managing Editor
If you're flipping through the AM dial sometime in the near future and you come across a mean medley of "Give Peace A Chance" and "We Will Rock You," you've discovered WERW.

With programming ranging from the depths of deathly hardcore to the funkiest hip-hop, WERW AM- 570 will finally break onto the airwaves after years of broadcasting on only a Syracuse University cable television channel.
The fledgling station, which was recently heard spinning tunes at the Fun Schine celebration, has purchased a carrier current to broadcast on the AM dial.

This purchase and an upgrade in equipment was made possible with a $$ 20,000$ allocation from the Student Government Association, acco
General Manager Ben Tessler.

With the largest alternative and hiphop music library in Central New Yoric, WERW will broadcast to an untapped market of listeners who are tired of the music on conventional radio stations.

Only campus radio

WERW is the only station on campus that caters to the campus audience," said and film who is a senior televisiol, textual studies dual major.

The station will hit the airwaves as soon as all of the disc jockey slots are filled, he said. A grand organizational meeting will be held Saturday at 3 p.m. in Watson Theater for all interested DJs.

The average DJ is encouraged to explore new music that he or she has not heard Eut bpecialty: shows, in blocks of two and three hours, are available.
"You don't have to -be good or even you. DJs just need to be energetic and committed.

While most people understand the on-air aspects of the radio station, few know about the other opportunities at WERW.

"It's the only consistent thing you go to sleep with every night and wake up with in the morning," he said.
"There is also something particularly exciting about a DJ sitting alone in the studio at 4 a.m. waiting for your call or request," Tessler added.

As a 24 -hour-a-day radio station under the umbrella of University Union, WERW's carrier current will allow it to be heard in campus buildings and within 200 feet of a campus building.

R.E.M. prevails in video music awards

R.E.M. may have lost its religion, but the band has found its niche on MTV.

At the 1991 MTV Video Music Awards, the Athens, Ga., quartet swept up six statuettes, including Best Group Video and Best Video of the Year for "Losing My Religion.'

The video, directed by Tarsem, also claimed trophies for best director, breakthrough video, art direction and editing.

Taking the stage after Prince's Bacchanalian rendition of "Gett Off," R.E.M. singer Michasel Stipe summed up the diversity of the broadcast via a series of T-shirts he wore: Love Knows No Color. Love Knows No Gender. Choice. HandLove Knows
"We've got everything for you except Elvis and Rick James," said host Arsenio Hall, in one of his few energetic moments.

What Hall promised, MTV delivered: Pee-Wee Herman delivered the show's opening remarks to a cheering crowd. ("Heard any good jokes lately?" he quipped).

Van Halen performed live on TV for the first time, opening the awards with "Poundcake." C&C Music Factory compacted their dance hits into a medley. and Metallica delivered the single from their self-titled album, currently No. 1 on the Billboand charts.

Winning in a 'Wicked' way
Chris Lsaak's "Wicked Game" came in second in the trophy race with three awards, followed by C&C Music Factory, who grabbed two statuettess. .... .....

Isaak won awards for his steamy "Wicked Game" video, featuring the singer and an icy-eyed model rolling on a beach.
Accepting from the set of the forthcoming Twin Peaks movie, Isaak joked that his band would be suprised he won for Best Male Video. "I don't think they realized there was a male in the video., he said.
In addition, the video won Best Cinen.atography, by Rolf Kesterman, and Best Video From a Film.

C&C Music Pactory's No. 1*hit "Gonna Make You Sweat (Everybody Dance Now)" won for Best Dance Video and for choreography by Jamale Graves.

C&C singer Zelma Davis noted the controversy surrounding her lip-synching in the "Sweat" video, saying. "r'd like to thank MTV for showing 1 can sing."

Although Davis does sing other C&C songs, her singing credit was removed from "Conna Make You Sweat" after the actual singer, Martha Walsh, sued. .. LL Cool I took the Rap. trophy for "Marna Said Knock You Out," beating DJ Jazzy Jeff & The Fresh Prince, Ice T, Monie Love and 3rd Bass. LL Cool J and his new band also delivered a knockout performance of his winning single.
Winning women
In the Best Female Video category, Janet Jackson beat out Neneh Cherry, Amy Grant and MTV divas Paula Abdul and Madonna to claim an award for the hit "Love Will Never Do (Without You)."

Madonna did claim one award at this year's ceremony, beating out R.E.M. in the first-ever Best Longform Video category with Irmaculate Collection.

Jane's Addiction won the Best Alternative Video award for "Been Caught Stealing," prevailing over Jesus Jones. The Replacements and R.E.M. One of the evening's comic events occurred when David Navarro, Jane's bass player, and lead singer Perry Farrell's wife stepped forward to claim the award.
"I'm sorry, I just got here, and I sucked down way too much alcohol to make a rational, uh ... statement," slurred the singer's wife.

SU 'celebrates' crime week

President Bush recently signed a policy declaring this week National Campus Crime and Security Awareness Week.
This is how Syracuse University celebrated the event:
"An SU junior reported her purse stolen from her car over the weekend... A number of license plates were reported stolen over the weekend by people in the university area... A State University of Environmental Science and Forestry student reported his bicycle stolen from his porch at 116 Redfield Place... A woman walking at the corner of University Place and Marshall Street had $$ 25$ snatched from her hand as she was walking Thursday...," according to The Daily Orange Tuesday.

All of this - in one long weekend.

National statistics indicate nearly 80 percent of all campus crime is perpetrated by students against students. If the first weekend of our fall semester is any indication, SU seems to be following the trend.
Last year, Congress passed a policy that requires colleges and universities to make campus crime statistics a vailable. The policy requires institutions to release information about campus crime, like theft or vandalism, and make it available to the public.

T-shirts' instructions unclear

To the editor:
Yes, I do realize that AXP has already been condemned has already been condemn for selling and wearing Tshirts which read "Homophobic and proud of it?" on the front and proud of it!" on the front and "Club faggots not seals!" not resist this opportunity to point out a few things. First ofl, I'm a little confused. What exactly does "Club faggots not seals" mean? What about homosexual seals? Should we beat them with sticks of wood until they die, too? I do hope these people realize that homosexual behavior in seals (as well as in numerous other animals, including humans We are animals, fact that members of AXP won't let us forget) occurs in nature. forget) occurs in nature.

What kind of clubs should we use? Should they be similar to the ones the Neanderthals used? Should we carry them around with us like barbarians in case we happen to see a "faggot" on the road?
How do we spot these "faggots?" Do they all have limp wrists like the picture on the T-shirt? What about people with broken wrists? Are they "faggots" too? It is interesting to note that those opposed to gay rights resort to promoting beating sessions with clubs while those sumporting gay rights (like me) write peaceful letters to the editor. "Club faggots not seals"-shouldn't there be a comma after faggots? I guess they forgot. They forgot afew other things, too. They seem to have forgotten the fact that their organization is based on ancient Greeks, who certainly included a large number of "faggots."

LETTERS

Shirts pose no threat

To the editor:
I'd like to respond to a letter from the Lesbian and Gay Graduate Collective which appeared in the September 5 issue of The Daily Orange. In their letter, the LGGC protested "lack of action taken by the administration of Syracuse University after last spring's production and wearing of gay-bashing Tshirts by some members of Alpha Chi Rho fraternity.,

Frankly, I was amazed that the LGGC, was so apparently ignorant of the antiConstitutional andertones to this statement. People have a this statement. People have right to their opinions, no right to their opinions, no matter how bigoted (and I do matter how bigoted (and believe the shirts were homophobic) they are.

Enroliment in this university does not negate one's right to the First Amendment. Thus, people here should be able to say and wear whatever they want, provided that their exercise of their right to free speech does not violate the Code of St udent Conduct, and therein lies the LGGC's second miscanception.

In their letter, the group also said that the shirts, which contained the phrase "Club Faggots," were a violation of section two of the Code which prohibits "harassment, whether physical or verbal, oral or written, which is beyond the bounds of protected free speech, directed at specific individuals, easily construed as fighting words, and likely to cause an immediate breach of the peace."
The shirts, didn't mention any individuals by name; nor were they causing an immediate breach of the peace. To my knowledge, nobody was driven into a pique of gaybashing rage through the viewing of the shirts.

The main problem with the LGGC's logic is that they seem to think that homophobia is caused by, or originating in, a cotton silk-screen. The shirts are merely reflections of an attitude which has been created by years of misguided thinking in this culture and society. That type of thinking should be challenged, but only when it directly impairs the rights of others
Wearing an anti-gay shirt doesn't necessarily make someone a gay-basher in deed. just as not all perpetrators of anti-gay violence wear shirts advertising their beliefs. In their letter, the LGGC asked "Is SU waiting for a gay or lesbian student to be attacked before taking action?

Could LGGC be saying that people should be punished for people shouid be punished they commit an actual crime? they commit an actual crimed ingree with the group s good intentions. but maybe they intentions, but maybe they should aim higher than mere shirts which speak in generalizations.
Finally, does anyone out there think the members of the LGGC would get angry at what they think is a Code violation if the shirts involved said "Club Frat Members?" Anyone?

Glen Young said he and fellow inside linebacker Dan Conley make a perfect tandem. Conley and Young, accicientally paired together as freshmen roommates, finished 1-2 in tackles last season.

Young, Conley look like bros, hit like pros

BY KENT FISCHER
Asst. Sports Editor
Syracuse University linebackers Glen Young and Dan Conley are highly touted and respected. They are quick, thunderaus and aggressive.

They are also best friends.
They are also best ince Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, those Pas, Pasqualoni said. They are great kidity level of thed about the ability level of themselves and their teammates."

Young and Conley first teamed up when they were assigned to be roommates after arriving at SU in 1989. They have been together ever since.
"It's weird that as freshmen we used to be roommates," Young said. "It must have been an omen or something that we would be paired together one day."

Neither one realized the significance of that coincidental match-up until they played together, as inside inebackers, in SU's defense.

Young and Conley return to the Orangemen as the team's top two tacklers from last season.
Conley, a sophomore from Carnegie, Pa., registered a teamleading 126 tackles. Young was responsible for 111 .

Despite all the potential, the two did not get the chance to play together until last season. Conley redshirted his freshman year and Young blew out a knee second game of the 1989 season against Army.

Young's knee injury, more than anything else, put the pair's deatiny on hold.
"It"s beerk two years now (since the knee injury) and I'm just back to where I was two years ago," the junior from Scarborough. Ontario, said. "This year 'm a whole different person. I have two legs instead of one and this year I want to so out and really tag some people."

Young has certainly "tagged" enough ball carriers on his own, but linebackers coach Glenn Pires said the chances of Young registering bone-crushing hits are greatly increased with Conley in the game.

Pires said last season was the first time Young and Conley began to learn from each other's game, and most importantly, 20 eed offit.
Dan and Glen are two guys that really work well together in tandern" Pires said. "They"ve been together for a year now. so they're learming that they each have their own special talents.
"They're also learning how the other is going to react in different situations. They'rejust now getting comfortable with that."

It's those uncommunicated nuances, the instinctive reads and intuition, which allow the two standouts to work so well together. Both said, in fact, that despite all their gifted athletic good without the other
"When I play with somebody other than Glen, I don't think I play as well," Coniey said. "I play as well, Coniey said. I pretty much know every move well win make. We piay very well together and if you separate us, I feel kind of uncomfortable."
"Dan is a hell of a kid," Young seid. "I wouldn't wan to play with anybody else. I really wouldn't."

Despite the eerie ability for the two to play as one, they both still manage to keep their individual styles.

Young is a stickier for technique, while Conley relies heavily on his raw athletic ability. Both styles work well and each one is always, it beems, trying to outcdo the other.
"We're always going head-tohead," Young said. "You know, seeing who gets more tackles, who had the biggest hit. that kind of stuff. It's a friendlycompetitive sort of nature.

Conley added that their at tachment runs deeper than frierd: ship. Perhapg, he said, it all boils down to ehemistry' ! iterally. Contey"end It's lite when Glen and I are together there's this sort of chemical bond lis like fire. works going off. Something like that, anyway."

Separated at birth, maybe?

This year, though, Sandquist ill have to be the secondary's will have to be the secondary's signal-caller, and according to his roommate and successor at strong safety, Tony Montemorra, he is ready for the role.
"Now that he's playing free safety, he's our quarterback, and he's got to get us in and out of coverage," Montemorra said "So he's got a lot of responsibility now and he's handling it Ereat."

The way Montemorra sees it Sandquist may be prepared for the position now but wouldn't have been a couple of years ago
"He's matured a lot," Monte morra said. "He's more relaxed and calm. He sees things and then reacts. Rather than reacting to what he thinks he sees, he actually sees it now."

Still, when Sandquist sees the opportunity to pop someone, he will be more than happy to he will be more than take advantage of it .
"When I approach someone to hit someone hard, the frame of mind is, all the time. I want to try to make someone hit the ground herd," Sandquist said.

And, according to past and present teammates, when opponents hit the ground, the lights go out.
"I've had (the Sandman nickname) since high school." Sand quist said. "Then when I got up here, former Orange linebacker Terry Wooden) called me the Sandman, because he told me to 'sprinkle some sand on thern' after I hit them.

If you spot Sandquist on campus, chad in the menaing siliver and black of the Lu.A. Rataers it isn't difficult to form a corre lation between his aggressive style and the team it is derived frome
"The Raiders dress in black, they have that image, that bad boy image," Sandquist said. "I always liked that in them. *Im not a bad boy, (but) the Raiders portray an irnage, which football, I feel, should be portrayed as."

Sandquist's allegiance to the Raiders has evolved into a motivational toolfor him and cormerback Dwayne Joseph.
"We have a competition between each other, who can hit the hardest,* Sandguist said. We have a leather Paiders cap that we trade back and forth weelk to week.
Sandquist said he is in possession of the cap now - an offseason reward for perhaps his greatest hit in SU's $28-0$ sparking of Arizona in the Aloha Bowl.

Monternorra said the hit on Arizona quarterback Ronald Veal not only left Sxndquist with a cap on his head, but left the team with mouths arape
"(Veal) came around the corner on an option and Timmy just cranked him. I mean that's the only word you have for that kind of hitting - it was like whoa!"

Sandquist said that kind of hard-hitting play stems from his near hatred of the people on the other side of the ball.
"I dislike offenses," Sandquist said in a brutally-frank tone. "I don't like anybody on offense because I think offense is such a robot position.
"You come up, you so into a huddle and one man tells you what they're going to do and then you go out and you execute that play. I don't respect that and that's why I play defense."

However intimidating Sandquist may be for opposing offenses, he seems sof spoken off the field.

The idea that he is quiet is a misleading one. though. accord ing to Montemorra.
"On the Field he's crazy, Montemorra said. "And off the field, a lot of people who don't know him the way I do get the feeling that he's not that crazy -buthe is.
"He has moments where he's pretty crazy, none I think I can pretty craz Sandquist said. however, he is not a screaming maniac of a vocal leader on the field.
"I lead by example." Sandquist said. "You start yelling and you get tired.'

For now, Montemorra said Sandquist shows no signs of tiring, either in his punishing tackles, or his off-the-field an tics.
"He's just pluying good ball now, that's the bottom line," Montemorra said. "And, he's a goofball."

of Syracuse University defensive back coach, Phil Elmassian.

Three out of four starters lone newcomer played in all 13 games last season.
Greg Walker and Dwayne Joseph return as cornerbacks. Tim Sandquist has switched from strong safety to free safety, and Tony Montemorra is taking over Sandquist's old position.
"Any time you have snaps, any time you've got experience, it's a good thing," Elmassian said. "There's a lot to be said for having experience."
With that veteran core. EImassian, who came to SU from the University of Virginia, said he can count on the players and not worry about forming a new style or new system.

Elmessiansaid, however, that he does have a certain style which should rub off on the team. But how much the players will pick up is unclear.
"By the second ballgame, I'll be better able to tell our style," Elmassian said. "The first ball game is like a first date you really don't know what to do

He also said his focus will be on analyzing the players to build a system that works best for them.

My defenses are always on the attack so I'm oblivious to what you call it," Elmassian said. "But one year, Miami Notre Dame and Michigan were ranked No. 1, No. 2 and No. 3 in defense in the country and all three were completely different.
"What we're doing here will be what we feel is in the best interest of our football players and what they can do as players."

Elmassian said finding that combination will be made easier after the Orangemen open the season against Vanderbilt.

One game is worth 100 practices," Elmassian said. "I haven't been through that yet, but I know they'll play hard. There's enough talent to overcome my coaching so we'll be in pretty good shape."

Mitchell knows he's not leaving line

BYROB CUYETTE
Sports Editor
Kevin Mitchell didn't want to switch from a linebncker to a nose tackle. Now, he may never go back.

Mitchell, a sophomore, came to Syracuse University as a linebacker and spent his redshirt season there. But in the spring of 1990, with an overload of talent at his natural position, Mitchell was steered toward the nose guard slot.

At the beginning I didn't want to switch," Mitchell said. "I wanted to stay (at linebacker). I wasn't ready to go through learning a whole new position in the middle of a season."
But after starting all 13 games ast year as a freshman and earning ECAC All-Star and second team Associated Press AllEast honors, Mitchell said he feels better about the switch.
"At the time I wanted to play linebacker, but I just wanted to get on the field as fast as possible," Mitchell said. "II still have some ambition to play linebacker."

Now, the question is whether the SU coaching staff could afford it. Mitchell has established himself in one season as a nose guard and taken a lot of pressure off senior left tackle George Rooks.

Glenn Pires coached SU's defensive line last season. He described Mitchell's move as a "let's try it and see sort of thing." The more Mitchell tried, the better he got.

Mitchell always had the option to go back to linebacker, Pires said. But the way Mitchell progressed, going back would have only reduced his playing time.
${ }^{4} \mathrm{He}$ went in there and said, Gee, this isn't bad.' It was a real day-to-day basis," Pires said. "He did get better. We'd talk to the offensive coaches and they'd say, 'Yeah, he's doing pretty well.' As it went along, he ended up being the guy."
Not without, of course, a little hesitation and frustration on Mitchell's part. Nose guards take more than their share of abuse from offensive linemen.
"I get upset because I get double-teamed and get cut, Mitchell said. "That's just some thing I have to learn to take. It goes with the position."
Mitchell is not big for a nose guard (6-1, 245). He said he was intimidated by the size of the USC players in last year's opener. But as the season progressed, Mitchell became increasingly comfortable with his size, or lack thereof.
"Size isn't important," Mitchell said. "It's what you know and how you use your skills that you have. Size is not everything."
Mitchell was usually smaller than the offensive linemen he faced in 1990. At the beginning of the season, however, hewasn't facing ordinary linemen.
In the opener, he battled USC's Pat Harlow, who was taken in the first round of the NFL draft last April by New England. Mitchell recorded his first collegiate sack and recovred a fumble.

In the third game, against Michigan State, Mitchell faced off with Eric Moten, a secondround draft pick of the Denver Broncos. Mitchell had seven tacklea and a sack against the Spartans.
"It helped me because I knew back then that if I played well against them, then l'll be all right," Mitchell said.

Pires said Mitchell's attitude was the biggest reason for his early season success. Despite his freshman status, Mitchell wasn't about to be pushed around.
"He doesn't back down from anybody," Pires said. "We're telling him that the right guard from USC is an All-American. He doesn't care. He's calling the other guy names. The kid from Michigan State was a secondround pick. He doesn't care. He's a tough, blue-collar kid and that's the kind of kid you need up front.
Mitchell led Syracuse linemen last year with 56 tackles, including 33 solo. He tied for third in sacks with $41 / 2$ and was second in quarterback pressures with nine.

His finest game came against Boston College, a 35-6 SU win, when he received the game ball. Mitchell had two sacks and intercepted a pass that he took 22 yards for a touchdown.
"He surprised some people a little bit," Pires said. "He was asked to do a lot, especially in our scheme where you need a good nose guard to control things:"
This summer; Mitchell'spent many hours in the weight room, working primarily on his bench press. Mitchell has already proven that size is no deterrent, but to move up another level, he must get stronger.
His freshman successes have only spawned higher expecta-

Emanuel emits new emphasis

Intensity, relentlessness, aggression, and domination are the first pur wo to inculcate Emanuel plans to inculcate into the Syracuse Universi sive line's vocabulary.

School is now in session and Emanuel, a first-year coach at the position, is teaching a different style of defense from last season.

According to Emanuel, the defensive line has abandoned its prior defensive philosophy of stepping back and reacting, instead of moving forward and attacking.

I want the guys to take the attitude of intensity and line domination," Emanuel said. "We will try to force the offense to play by our game plan."
Sophomore nose guard Kevin Mitchell agrees.

We want opposing teams to say that we came at them hard every play, kept attacking, were in their face every play, and Mitchell said.

Senior defensive tackle George Rooks said the unit now believes ons stop any offense.
One thing this season's squad was unable to stop was the departure of defensive tackle Frank Conover, now a member of the NFL's Cleveland Browns.
"Any time you have to replace someone of his ability you always have question marks, Emanuel said.

Emanuel said he is a coach who refuses to deal with weak nesses or negatives. Emanuel spoke only of his defensive line's strengths.
"The experience of Rooks, Mitchell and (Jim Wentworth) are strengths since they are all familiar with the defensive line schemes," Emanuel said.
Rooks, a 6-foot-4, 275-pound left tackle, is the most experienced player on the line, having started each of the past three seasons.

Rooks was the only pure freshman to play for SU in 1988. His size, speed, and big play potential helped him earn pre-season All-America honors from Football Digest.
"George Rooks is capable of being an All-American," SU head coach Paul Pasqualoni said. "He has all the tools you need to be an outstanding player -size, speed, agility and intelligence."
Rooks, the 16 th-ranked defensive lineman in the country by The Sporting News, said he hopes to live up to his early billing.
"I have been saying to myself, ${ }^{\prime}$ Hey George, you got a lot of hype. So now it's time to go out and prove it,"' Rooks said.

Football Digest ranks Mitchell, who had a surprising freshman season, as the 10 th best defensive tackle in the country.
Further accolades came from teammate Rooks.
"When you think of a true football player you should think of Kevin," Rooks said. "Whenever I line up next to him I know something special is going to happen because he is a big play player."

Wentworth, a three-year letterman, was named as the third starter of this unit.

Emanuel said Wentworth's experience, work ethic and knowledge of the position make him an essential part of the line.
Last season Wentworth recorded eight tackles and one sack.

Returning to the line this season are juniors James Spencer. Scott Langenheim and Pat O'Rourke, and sophomore Ernie Brown.

The newest addition to the line is 6-foot-2, 290 -pound fresh man Ed Hobson, who Emanuel said might see playing time backing up Mitchell at nose buard.
Brown will now, Wentworth and Brown will share playing time, Spencer will be backing up Rooks and O'Rourke and Hobson will back up Mitchell." Emanuel said. "I am pleased with the amount of depth in talent we have.'

Co-captain Dees lines up at new position

By IOSH BARNETT
Staff Writer
You would figure the practice routine would be familiar for a aenior, but for Syracuse University's Andrew Dees things will be different

Dees has moved from tight end, where he was a twoyear starter, to right tackle, and has traded in his No. 86 jersey for one with No. 74.
Dees, one of the team's four co-captains, made the move to help fill a team need. He has moved to an offensive line with just one returning starter.
Because of that, Dees downplayed his individual role. "We're doing this as a unit, not just one person." he said. "So that's helping out a lot."
The SU offensive line started its recognition trip after back-toack impressive showings in 1988 and 1989. Dees said the pressure of living up to the past affects not only him but the rest of his fellow starting neweomers.
"Tb be a Top 25 team you've got to have a good offensive line," Dees said. "I'm not the only one under presaure - so's Terrence Wisdom, so's John Capachione."
Though Dees' skill level is not where a lifelong offensive lineman's would be, he has won praise from the coaching staff for an unselfish attitude.
"He has worked extremely hard to prepare himself in an extremely tough situation," said George DeLeone, SU's offensive coordinator. "I believe his progress is as good as anyone else's could be. Because of his charac ter and his unselfishness, he has really tried hard to do the right thing."
Dees said he still needs to work on the little techniques needed to make him a solid offensive lineman.

The coaching staff is willing to let him learn those tech niques through game-day action.

It's just a matter of him getting used to doing it," DeLeone said. "It's more experience than anything else. Physically. he has the ability to do it."

Dees will also have to get used to blocking different-sized defenders.

As a tight end, he generally drew an outside linebacker, who averaged 220 -to- 240 pounds. Now, he will be blocking defensive linemen who average 265plus.

As a tight end, Dees was primarily a blocker, while Chris Gedney was reaponsible for most pass catching duties.

Dees' blocking ability is what made him a viable candidate to switch positions.
"He was our best blocker among the tight ends." Deleone said. "He would be the most likely to succeed.

Dees has started 24 consecutive games for the Orangemen at tight end, and his game experience should be beneficial. "I don't think the nervousness or the uncertainty of being in the game will affect him," DeLeone said. "I think that's a plus."

At 6 -foot-6, Dees' height will be an advantage on the line, but he doesn't have the weight (254) generally associated with an offensive lineman.
"I think I have long arms for pass blocking," Dees said. "I think that's going to help if I just can stay back.

Dees said the additional responsibility of being one or SU's four co-captains has added to his excitement about the sea. son.
"I'm excited," Dees said. "My family's happy. Everybody in my community at home is happy-"
The work ethic of the captains has been partly responsible for the Orangemen's intensity throughout the preseason. Dees said.

As a captain everybody does look to you to see what you're doing." Dees said. "So we just do everything hard and as best as we can. If people see us doing this, they'll follow."

Andrew Dees (86), will no longer be catching passes from a tightend position. A two-year atarter at tight end, Dees has moved to the offensive line.

Wisdom must show knowledge

If the Syracuse University offensive line is going to have offensive line is going to have any success this year, experiany success this year, experience will have to breed wisdom. Wisdom is the only returning starter from last-year's line.

Offensive coordinator and line coach George DeLeone said Wisdom will have to set an example for his new linemates.

Terrence Wisdom is the only returning, starter with any exI am very, very pleased that he is back
"Terrence must lead by example; he must lead by word and by action. And we're hoping very, very badly that he can have very, very bad here yet".

Seeing the lack of experience on the line, the coaching staff made some adjustments.

Dees moved from tight end to offensive tackle. Also switching positions was junior Jerry Sharp, who was a reserve nose guard his first two years for the Orangemen.

DeLeone said he's anxious to see how Dees adjusts to his new position.
"We're looking forward to beeing how Andrew Dees responds," Deleone said. "He's a great young man; he's made a lot of sacrifices to be a tackle after being a tight end for three years. So we certainly hope he has the type of success that be had at tight end."
With only one returning offensive starter, and two starters who moved from other positions, the line is the only unproven part of the offense.

Peaple have already started saying that as the line goes, so will the Orange offense.

Sharp said the line has been tagged with a negative stigma before it gets a chance to play.
"A lot of people are sayins that it's going to be the weak point of the team," Sharp said. "We're a group of guys who are like blue-collar workers. We just want to get in there and get just want to get in there and get the job done. Nothing fancy, the job done. Nothing fancy, we're just going to get in there and get it done, and with that and get it done. and with that attitude we'll come out all right."
Wisdom said he learned a lot Wisdom said he learned a tot from his predecessors and is ready to show what All-American John Flannery and last year's other offensive musclemen have tanght him.
"Playing with those guys was a real treat for me," Wisdom said. "As far as learning from them, I learned how to play the game, what intensity level to play at, and how to go out there on Saturdays."

Wisdom said he is looking forward to working with his new linemstes and trying to re-eatablish the credibility of the offensive line
"As far as talent, we have guys that can step in and play," Wisdom said. "We've always reeruited good talent. And with the guys that we have on the bench, there's no reason they can't be just as good or maybe even better than the guys that left before.

Syracuse University wide receiver Shelby Hill's Saturday afternoons used to be 60 min utes long. Now, they're 62 .

Hill, a speech communications major, said he wants to bring in well known and unknown guests, including some professional football and basketball players, and "just go out on a limb sometimes.
But that new role is just a part of Hill's involvement.
Hill admitted his primary focus is on the game. And he also promised not to let his starring role both on and off the field get to his head.
"I don't know if anything's guaranteed," Hill said. "You've got to go out there and work for it, regardless of the fact you might be No. 1 ."

Hill, who started in 10 games next to Rob Carpenter and played in all 13, said his duty on the team is much different than last year.

Hill said he's willing to put his star status aside and make some of the little contributions that are necessary - along with, of course, his big plays and touchdowns.

Receivers do a lot, though they're not always highly looked at during a game," he said. "In certain situations and certain downs they're very visible. I don't say I want to do something spectacular but I want to do what I have to do to help the team out."

New departure leaves same old situation

BY CMRIS STANLEY
Staff Writer
Last year, Syracuse University found itself with a veteran wide receiver (Rob Carpenter) and a big hole left by the departure of another (Rob Moore).

The coaches' job was to fill that hole, as Shelby Hill and Qadry Ismail fought it out for the epot.

This year, the same situation exists.

Hill, who won the battle over Ismail last fall, has locked away the starting job, but Carpenter's early exit for the NFL left another hole and another batthe. This time, it's between Ismail and Antonio Johnson.

Ismail, according to first-year SU wide receiver coach Dennis Goldman, is ready to fill the spot this season. A truce, how ever, has not yet been called.

I feel right now that it will be Qadry Ismail along with Shelby Hill (against Vanderbilt)," Goldman said. "Qadry's worked hard over the summer. I think he came back ready to go and he's had a darn good preseason."
"But Antonio Johnson, who's had a terrific preseason carnp, I feel is right bekind him. Him, Shelby and Qadry will be our top guys."

Ismail won the praise of former receiver coach Ivan Fears during camp last beason. Hill, however, went on to start most of the freason and brea

"I think as long as we have receivers that can go in the game at any time, we want to play them," Goldman said. "If the situation warrants it, we'll get other people in the game. As long as we have the people to go in, we're going to play to go in, we."

Hill said this squad is ready for that type of play and he would love to see it.
"Everyone"s learned the systern pretty well this season," Hill said. "I think if someone goes down or someone goes 50 yards down the sideline and they're just dead beat, someone can come in and play a couple of downs and they know what to do.
"I'd like to see us do one of those run-and-gun offenses. But if it works out like last year, where only two guys play the majority of the game, that's fine with me."

While the number of receivers may change, the basic game plan, according to Goldman, has not, despite the inexperience of the offensive line.
"I don't think we plan on changing our thinking," Goldman said. "We're pretty much $50-50$ on running and passing and our offensive line is improving every day.
"We'll take advantage of what the defense gives is. If the defense will permit us to throw the long ball. we'll take advantage of it.

Shelby Hill stormed onto the scene as SU's No. 2 receiver last year. Hill will be the top wideout this season, and he has said he wants to eventually break the SU career mark for

Competition keeps tailbacks battling

Syracuse University head Syracuse University head coach Paul Pasqualoni named David Walker as his first-team tailback Monday, ending the epeculation over the starting role. For now.
Yet if any animosity exists between Walker and competing sophomore Terty Richardson, who is just a step behind him, they would be the last to tell you.
"We both know that we want to play and it"s friendly competition, Walker said. We don't hold a grudge against each other or anything like that."

Walker retains the role he earned last season, when be surprised many by leading the Orangemen with 730 yards rushing on 150 carries and six toushing on Success for Richardson, on the other hand, has never come as a surprise.

A Florida all-state performer in high school, Richardson received the honored No. 44 jersey as a freshman last season.

Although he did not see action until the fifth game. Richardson finished the year with 60 carries and 320 yards. Both totals were second-highest on the team
According to Richardson, the competition for the taillback spot has helped both players.
"We complement each other," Richardson said. "If I to something good, he'll want to do better and if he does something good. Ill want to beat that. It goes back and forth.
In having two backs with such equal talents, the SU coach ing staff was faced with an interesting dilemma entering the 1991 season.

According to first-year running back coach David Mitchell the problem of naming one starting tailback was quelled by a guaranteed positive answer.
"I think any time you have two athletes of their abilities you have a good gituation," Mitchell said. "It's good competition because right now, David can't take anything for granted." With the naming of Walker as the first-string tailback and Al Wooten as fullback Richardson will be relegated to "David's our No. 1 guy right now," Mitchell said. "Terry enjoys his position now, but if David slipg, Terry will be right there pushing hard."

Walker himself seems quite aware of what he needs to do to remain the $S U$ starter.
"You look over your shoulder and you see Terry running the ball and the things he can do,*

Walker said. "It just pushes me to improve that much more and keep at it so I'm No. 1 and he's No. 2."

Throughout the competition, both players have remained focused on the good of the team rather than personal achievements.

Richardson and Walker both spoke highly of each other's abilities and handling of the situation.

David's a hard worker, alWays willing to help out, man, I was trying to compete for his job and he still gave me pointers."
Walker said both he and Richardson would like to be sole tailback, but as long as both are around, that isn't likely to happen.
"It's kind of a situation like we both see each other there and we know we can't have it all," Walker said. "We just have to go out there and make the taiback position the best it can be."

Terry Richardson, a sophomore, will start the season as the No. 2 tailback behind David Walker. Richardson, wearer of the famed No. 44 jersey, didn't play until the fifth game last year but quickly ohowed he deaerved to inherit the tradition.

Intensity needs to be restored

By JEFF ELBAUM

Syracuse University special teams coach Bob Casullo said there should be a different look to that group this year.

The special teams often drew ire from Dick MacPherson the past few seasons. Blocked punts, fumbled punt returns and poor coverage became the norm instead of the exception.
"Overall intensity and pride of the special teams (are what we want to improve," Casullo said. "We want them much more intense, and we want them to take pride in their work."

There has been much competition for special teams positions.

At one of the few positions without any competition, Pat O'Neill will once again handle the kickoff duties. O'Neill, a sophomore, put 45 of his 62 kickoffs in the end zone, includkickoffs in the end ing 41 touchbacks.

The punting duties will also be handled by O'Neill. He took over the starting job midway through last season when Ken Hawkins was unable to get away from his three-step style.

One thing O'Neill won't be doing this year is scoring points.
Junior John Biskup has retained his place-kicking duties after making over 70 percent of his field goal attempts last season.

"He's having a great preseason," Casullo said. "So if he could put it on in the games on Saturdays, we're going to be in great shape."

Shelby Hill was named the punt returner Thursday. Hill battled for the job with Bob Grosvenor and Doug Womack. All are expected to have a chance in game situations.
"They're all doing well," Casullo said. "They're working good text drills every day They're working on their hands, they're concentrating on catch ing the ball, and they're all doing a good job."

Backs must cooperate to provide versatility

By MIKE BUSHShift Writer

The backfield for this season's Syracuse University football squad will be long in talent but perhaps short in versatility.
First-year running back coach David Mitchell and offensive coordinator George DeLeone have several options in their arsenal.

Mitchell said, however, none of those options can singlehandedly replace do-it-all back Duane Kinnon, whose eligibility expired last year.

I'm real pleased with the group we have," Mitchell said. "We don't have one ideal fullback or one ideal tailback. Each guy has specific abilities that can help the team."

Sophomore fullback Al Wooten will team with David Walker in the Orange starting backfield, forming a solid tandem to complement quarterback Martin Graves' explosive play.

Mitchell said Wooten's inside strength will be his primary asset.

Wooten was Kinnon's backup at fullback last season, carrying 19 times for 96 yards and three touchdowns. He recorded a sea-son-high 40 yards against Boston College

Gedney finally wins two year fight

For the past two seasons， Chris Gedney has been battling， for the starting tight end spot， but this season he will be going it alone．
After two years of backing up Andrew Dees，Gedney will be the sole starter as the Syracuse University coaching staff moves Dees to right tackle．
＂Instead of playing 30 min － utes．（I＇ll be）playing 60 min－ utes．＂Gedney said．＂I＇m going to be in there regardless of the situation，if it＇s 3rd－and－1 or 3rd－and－14．＂

Dees，a co－captain，said he has confidence in the man he once battled． ＂Chris is going to do a fine job just like he did last year when

I didn＇t start，＂said Dees，who missed the opener against USC because of a broken thumb．

Against the Trojans，Gedney caught a career－high seven passes for 82 yards．He followed that up with eight catches in his next two games but finished with just 24 receptions．
Since Gedney knows the job is his，you might think there

Last season, the Syracuse University football team possessed a potent tight end combination.

This season, they may still have a potent combination, but a 6-foot-6, 254 -pound component is missing.
Senior co-captain Andrew Dees, who started 12 games last season at tight end, has moved to right guard.

Junior Chris Gedney, who saw action in all 13 games, will be the starter and get most of the playing time.
"Chris is a very talented athlete," said tight end coach Bob Casullo. "He provides us with the total package of what we ask our tight ends to do.

Womack down, not out of return race

As a freshman third-string quarterback on the Syracuse University football team, Doug Womack was similar to a new car sitting in a dealer's Iot.

He was just waiting to rev his engine and show what he could do.

This season, the Orangemen will take the dynamic sophomore for a test drive down a new road, as Womack vies for the starting punt returning job.
starting punt returning job. Shelby Hill was named the starting punt returner on Thursday, but Womack as well as Bob rosvenor will get game action. Wornack, who returned two punts for touchdowns in a preseason scrimmage, said he's eager to take on the additional responsibility of working with the special teams and contributing to another aspect of the ## game.

"Right'now I'm just trying to win the job." the 5 -foot-11, 166pound Womack said. "I'm just fighting for the job to help the team out."
According to head coach Paul Pasqualoni, the reason for the additional responsibility was the diversity of his talents.
"We've always liked Doug as an athlete, and we've always loved Doug as a quarterback," Pasqualoni said. "He's a very, very athletic runining guy We We very athletic, running guy. We just think hes dynamic, and if we can get him to catch punts and return them, I think he can be an exciting player back

Special teams coach Bob Casullo said the mobility of Wornack made him an attractive candidate to fill the vacancy left by Warren Prisby, who will miss the season due to academic problems.
"Doug has always been exposed to the running, elusiveness part of the game," Casullo said. "He did these things in high school and he realizes that the tempo and the quality of the athlete is a bigger step here.
"But he's moved his game up another level, too. He's made himself a real viable candidate or that position."
Womack dabbled in punt returning while attending Aldine High School in Houston, Tx., where he was named the Houston Post and the Houston Chronicle Player of the Year. He was also honored with the Houston Touchdown Club Offensive Player of the Year award.

Although the two positions seem different, Womack said, seem different, Womack said, punt returning is not really a lar cry from quarterbacking "The major differen. "The major difference is that you're catching the ball," Womack said. "Punt returning is really an art. You have to be real patient and concentrate on body movement just to catch the ball. So once you catch the ball, you're all right."

The punt returning race was an intense competition. Hill may get the first few punts, but Womack and Grosvenor will get cheir chance.
"They're all pretty good at (returning punts) and (Womack) has those quick feet and the innate ability to read the open seam and hit it," Casullo said. "Then he's got the speed to go with it and take the ball. Me's working hard at it and I like him back there."

All indications are that Wo ack likes it back there, too.
"If I do get a chance to do it I'll really love it," Womack said. "Ill give it my best. That's all anybody can expect. That's all I expect.
After getting a peek at Womack last season, Orange fans may expect a lot from the sophomore, wherever he is.
As a freshman, Womack had 22 carries for 146 yards and two touchdowns, including a 49yard touchdown scamper in his collegiate debut against Rutgers.

Casullo said Womack has immersed himself in learning how to field punts in addition to quarterbacking by putting in long hours on the practice field. "He's tireless," Casullo said. "He comes out pre-practice all the time. He's always out there, Coach, I want to be catching em.' All three of them will do it. Doug will take his snaps from center, and then he'll come over and take his punts."

Casullo stressed that all three are likely to return punts at some point in the first few some p games.
sames.
"I really believe at some point in time in the first couple of games, all three of those guys will have a chance to return punts until someone standsout," punts until someone stands out," Casullo said. "Or if we just want to use them all ...I'm not adverse to using them all."

Although he's working hard to learn the nuances of punt returning, Womack said he'll take in stride whatever decision the coaches make.
"I'll do my option (quarterback) role and have fun, "Womack said. "If I win the job then I'll be helping the team additionally by returning punts. Anything to help the team out, I'll do."

Doug Womack didn't win the Etaxting punt return job, but head coach Pani Pasqualoni said he expects the versatile quarterback to be in the ganne 6-10 times.

TIGHT END

Barker isn't big for a tight end, but that hasn't stopped him from progressing, according to Casullo.
"He's really become a total tight end," Casullo said. "He's a really good blocker. He runs very good pass routes. He has very good p good hands.
${ }^{\text {sI }}$ I don't think he's a big kid, but he's big enough and he's but he's big enough and he's made himself strong in the made himself

The battle for the third spot is between two redshirt freshmen, Melvin Tuten- and Eric Chenoweth.

Traditionally, the Orangemen have carried only three tight ends, but this season they may carry four.
"Four tight ends is better because that makes practice a little easier for Kevin Barker and myself," Gedney said. "You have to figure next year, too. both of them are going to travel both if one or the other travel, it will get them that much more will get them that mu

The new coaching staff at SU has made adjustments in the offense. Casullo said the most important thing for the tight ends is committing the plays to memory.

COACHES

Now being head coaches, thei time to devote to each side of the ball will be cut in half, but each will rely heavily on a new staff of assistants.
z don't know if I'm any more involved in one side of the football than the other," DiNardo said. "We've got a good staff on both sides of the football and l've got a lot of input coming to me from our offensive coordinator."

Pasqualoni said the position of head coach may be overrated

I don't care who they are -they are always going to have to react and be experienced," Pires said. "You can never be a fully experienced linebacker Every week is a challenge with sil the different affenses we see in a season. We're just going to out and play, then well know so out and play, then well know how good they are.

Also vying for time this season are senior K.C. Sirowich juniors Matt Greco and John Lusardi and sophomore Reggie Terry:

Greco, the long snapper on the punt unit, has 11 tackles on special tearns the past two years. Lusardi played in all 13 games last season and recorded 10 tackles.

Terry sat out last beason recovering from knee surgery while Sirowich saw special ceams action.

MI think a whole lot too much is made out of the head coach, to be perfectly honest, Pasqualoni said. "I think we've got some great, great (cosches) here who are very, very wel prepared.'

Pasqualoni said he has kept the same basic offensive and defengive philosophy with the Orangernen.

DiNardo, on the other hand, has tried to totally revamp the Commodores -installing the multi-look I-bone offense and the reduction 52 defense.

Assistant coaches get nervous, too," he said. "They're concerned about the preparation side of the ball you're on and the overall package. Here at Syracuse if you're a football coach - you're a football coach."

Pasqualoniand DiNardo have something else in common "(It will be) the battle of two Italians in New York," DiNardo said. "Is this going to be a pasta benefit or what?"

Paul Pasqualoni and Gerry DiNardo will both make their Division I head coaching debuts this Saturday

But that may be the only common denominator between the two.

Syracuse University hosts Vanderbilt University on Saturday at noon in the Carrier Dome

Pasqualoni takes over a Syracuse team coming off a $7-4-2$ season. The Orangemen have maie four consecutive bowl game appearances.

DiNardo takes over for the fired Watson Brown. Vanderbilt is coming off back-to-back 1-10 seasons and has won 10 games over the past five yearg.
Pasqualoni brings the Orangemen into the new Big East Conference, where they are expected to be a top contender.

DiNardo's Commodores remain in the Southeastern Confarence where they have finished in the cellar three of the last five seasons.

Pasqualoni most recently comes from the defensive side of the ball, where he served as limebacker casch for the Orangemen for the past four seasons.
DiNardo had gerved as the offensive coordinator for the national champion University of Colorado Buffaloes before taking the job with Vanderbilt.

"There's a lot going on at once." Grod said. "We have every type of laser effect."

Grod added that many aspects of the show are just plain bizarre, including what he called a tremendous amount of what heotage that spans the entire career of the band.
HWe have interviews from the late 60 s with Jerry and other rare footage that dates to the present day," Grod explained.

This extravaganza is the final product of what Grod described as an intimate four-month project.
${ }^{4}$ I wanted to do something a little different." he explained, "not just a Led Zeppelin or Guns N' Roses show."
"Zeppelin is easy to do", he said. Since much of their music is loud and fastpaced, he explained, choreographing a laser show to them is not that difficult.
Grod had considered creating a show based on a number of bands, including U2, before settling on the Dead.

The challenge of the Dead
The Dead provided more of a challenge and involved more creativity, Grod said. Most of the creative process was directed toward the designing of new effects involving lasers, smoke and fog machines.

Grod also selected the band on the basis of their appeal to the young and the young at heart.  \section*{I'm 45 years old and I'm finding that  \section*{I'm 45 years old and I'm finding that  more than that.  Furs check out 'World Outside'}

For the first time since the carly 1980s, the Psychedelic Furs have approached an album as a group collaboration, resulting in a cohesive collection of diverse ideas that lead singer Richard Butler says makes World Outside one of the

TUXEDO _ captures the feeling of the Furs' Warlier albums like 1981's Talk, Talk, Ta/k, while showing new growth in the group's sound.

With help from veteran alternative producer Stephen Street (The Smiths, Darling Buds), World Outside weaves together airy acoustic guitar and paychedelie 1960s organ on songs like "Until She Comes." Driving drum beats, seductive sax lines and sonic guitar grunge combine cleverly seductive sax limes and Lyrically, World Outside revolves around Butler's trials and tribulations in relationships -from the lament of "Tearing Down" to the spiteful "Valentine."

Outside World'

While Butler says he feels "Get A Room" best sums up the album's meaning, he felt World Outside ftaken from the song "There's A World") was the most appropriate titie.
"This album is very introspective," Butler admits. "It sounds a little bit claustrophobic in some places, and 1 just wanted (the title) to imply that there's something else wanted (the title) to imply that there's something else."
Buther, who admittedly hates concept albums, stresses that World Outside was never intended to be so focused.
"I didn't sit down and think, 'I'm going to write all songs about relationships.' I gucss that's what I was thinking about duritrg that period. The record Talk, Talk, Talk was also about rblationships i it happens periodically," he laughs.
Aside from the band working more closely on this recording, Butler attributes the album's feeling to its short seven-week recording period.
"We spent a lot of time in the studio with Midnight to Midnight," he regrets. "I swore I d never spend more than two months in the studio again. It becomes counterproductive after an while.
"With music, usually your first idea is the best idea. If you spend too long, you begin examining your first ideas too much and you start looking for what is right and what is worrying about it, the more sterile it's likely to become."

Welcome charges
The Furs' newfound stability is a welcome change for a group whose sometimes spotty career has been marked with turbulence. Frequent personnel changes and lack of unity within the band had an effect on the Furs' alburns in the mid-1980s.
"For a while, around Mirror Moves time." Butler reminisces, "it felt like there were three song writers and three other musicians (in the band. That suited that kind of record because we wanted to make a very streamline sounding record. That was OK then, but I wouldn't want to make that kind of record now.

Knicks, Ewing should make up their minds

Basketball is probably the farthes thing from fans minds these days but one subject which can't go unavoi ded is the Patrick Ewing contract fiasco with the New York Knicks.

Late this summer, Ewing had the opportunity to become the highest paid player in the history of team sports. He, along with his agent David Falk, decided it wasn't good enough and it was time to take the team to arbitration.

Gilt Ewing and Falk

SPORTS

OPINION claimed it's player's freedom at stake here and not a matter of Ewing lost his case, and supposedly wants to leave the Big Apple.

A trade would not solve all of Ewing's problems. If the Knicks could get equal value for him, Ewing would probably be thrust back into a similar situation with his new bosse - no great players would be there to surround him. A trade is a difficult thing to accomplish, and a Wayne Gretzky or Herschel Walker type of trade doesn't occur overnight.

Granted the Knicks have not been the same since the departure of Rick Pitino, but with Pat Riley assuming the controls, better days are destined to return.

Magic Johnson and Michael Jordan agreed to take pay cuts to bring in players whowould improve their team list of Falk's impressive clients

So what's the concern here, money or a championship ring? Jordan and Magic possess both.

The Knicks just completed a re structuring of guard Mark Jackson's contract to free up money in the salary cap. That should have been Ewing's job, not Jackson's. Now, the Knicks are still looking for a player to fit into their puzzle.

The Knicks are not a bad team. They're a team of underachievers, and they lack motivation.

Maurice Cheeks. Charles Oakley, Kiki Vandeweghe, Gerald Wilkins, and former UNLV floor general Greg Anthony are good players who could thrive under Riley

You don't have to be the top pick overall to be a team's best player. Riley was able to motivate his players, and get the most out of their talents. A.C. Creen was selected late in the first round and Riley turned him into a key piece of the Lakers' success.

Pitino and Riley are very similar Not only are they both very sharp dressers, but their style brings something management and the fans like -wins.

Under Pitino, the players flourished. Is Ewing giving up too soon, ur he is just fed up with Knicks management?

Riley is a young coach, who could relate to his players well. After all, Riley coached the NBA's all-time leading scorer and arguably the best player ever, Kareem Abdul Jabbar.

Better days are around the corner. Ewing should be patient and not foolish. With his talents and a little bit of patience, he might eventually have something in common with Johnson and Jordan.

Syracuse seeks repeat weekend

By Zev Borow

Abstract

The Syracuse University volleyball team travels downstate this weekend for what coach Dan Schulte calls "the battle for New York's bragging rights."

No, the Orangewomen, 3-0, will not be taking in a Giants-Jets game. However, they will face off against the intra-state rival Hofstra's Flying Dutch, as well as the Virginia Cavaliers and the Southwest Missouri State Bears, in the weekend tournament being held at Hofstra. Hofstra. SU plays the Bears tonight at 7:30 p.m. On Saturday, the Orangewomen face the Dutch at 1 p.m. and the Cavaliers at 5 p.m.

SU hopes to continue the success of last weekend that saw the Orangewomen sweep their first three matches at Manley Fieldhouse. While Schulte may indeed be playing up the fight for "New York bragging rights" between SU and host Hofstra, the Orangewomen are confident and Island. "It is not exactly like we are archrivals, but the competition at Hofstra rivals, but the competition at hofstra shotld be a bitte tougher than last weekends cournament, senior cocaptain Jessica Paarlberg said. "We are just hope that we can continue to play well." ${ }^{\text {"Hofstra always is a really tough place }}$ to play, and they usually have very talented teams," junior Annie Parisien said. "Hopefully we will play well there and continue to improve.

While both'Schulte and the team are wary of the host Flying Dutch, the Orangewomen will have to remain focused for their matches against the Cavaliers and the Bears.

Virginia is a very physically talented team," Schulte said. "They have a new coach, and a lot of young talent. Their program is on the rebound and they will be tough."

Staff Writer
If the Syracuse University soccer team sounds a little hesitant about opening the season this weekend, you could understand why.
The Orangemen travel to North Carolina, to face ninth-ranked Duke on Saturday and second-ranked North Carolina State on Sunday.
"Physically, we're ready to play a game," SU midfielder Daron Jennings said. "Mentally, we're still a little bit mystified on what to expect, because we haven't played two teams so high in the rankings this early in the season before."

The Orangemen say they don't know what to expect. Because of new NCAA regulations, college soccer teams were not allowed to play any pre-season games. SU coach Dean Foti still refuses to look at this weekend's games as a tune-up.
"It's not a tune-up, it"s the season." Foti said. "Obviously, we look at this weekend to help us get better for later on during the season.
"The experiences we get from these games are going to definitely benefit us, whether it's dealing with a rowdy crowd on an opponent's field, or whether it's dealing with a top 10 opponent."

As of Thursday, Foti was still uncertain as to who would start in goal this weekend. He said that Charlie Wilke, Steve Pollnow, and Peter Kahn all have played well in practice.

Coplin stresses knowledgeover good grades

By SARAH BERNSTEIN

Contributing Writer
Students at Syracuse University have a decision to make regarding their education.

They can spend four years concentrating on getting a good education, or spend these years concentrating on getting good grades.

William Coplin, an SU professor of public affairs, said he is very concerned with this subject.

Coplin, founder and director or Undergraduates for a Better Education, feels there is a difference between getting good grades and getting a good education.

In a speech Thursday on making the most of an education. Coplin seid he feels that students are mainly interested in partying and getting good grades.

Getting good grades denotes negativity in Coplin's opinion because he believes students should concentrate on the amount of knowledge they are gaining, not the grades that appear on their transcript.

The audience, a group of about 20 freshmen, was told by Coplin, "All of you are motivated too much by grades."

He said he feels that those students who are simply concentrating on getting As and Bs are not necessarily learning. He pointed out that students need knowledge to be successful in life and in their careers.

Coplin referred to the cliche. "We learn from our mistakes." Using a logical approach, he added in good humor that a person who received an $F$ in a course probably learned the most because he or she made the most mistakes. Several of the students were taken aback by Coplin's theory. When he opened the floor for discussion, listeners pointed out that parents do not respond positively to poor grades and also that colorful transcripts are needed to obtain acceptance into graduate school.

Coplin said students who concentrate on learning but do not receive As and Bs should respond to a parents admonishment by saying, "I'm learning, isn't that what is most important?"
"Grade grubbing,"orbecoming friendly with professors to receive improved grades, is destructive, Coplin said.

Students who only concern themselves with getting good grades set standards that could be hazardous.

When high grades are not attained, the student may assume something is wrong.

Coplin said this practice destroys the relationship between students and professors.

He pointed out that no professor likes a student who is simply there to get a grade rather than absorbing knowledge. In addition, students who do not receive grades on the upper end of the scale often blame the teacher.
"I see professors and students basically at war with each other," he said.

Coplin said atudents need to realize that their professors are human. He pointed out that the professors are probably just as frightened that students will not accept them or their ideas.

The professors and students have made a deal in higher education," said Coplin.

This deal enables the student to get an $A$ and the professor is able to get away with lecturing for an entire class and having the students regurgitate the information on a test twice a semester.

Coplin said he feels that students should encourage active learning.

He said students should not allow professors to lecture for longer than 10 professors to lecture for longer than 10 to 15 minutes wit

Some of the organizations represented were: Black Pan-Hellenic. National Society of Black Engineers, Minority PreHealth Society and the Black Artists League.

Robert Moore, an editor of the Black Voice newsletter, said the publication has voiced the concerns of blacks since it started in 1967.
"African-Americans need to be told the truth." he said. "And that's what Black Voice does."

Williams, last year's SAS president, said he wants black students to sacrifice time and work hard to keep SAS as active as it was when it began 25 years ago.
"We must sacrifice as individuals and come together as a collective group, and we must be willing to work to help SAS grow and prosper," he said. He also asked the audience to stand and shout. "I'm African and Im proud."

New American security

"I'd like to describe a new American security," said the 46-year-old lawyer, based not on a force of arms but capitalizing on the end of the Cold War and directing those resources where they're so desperately needed."

Agran anid the president needs to set a deadline for the withdrawal of U.S. military forces from Western Europe and Japan

Proposing Dec. 31, 1994 as the date, Agran said, "It's time to demobilize those troops to the extent possible and cut military spending, which now amounts to $$ 200$ billion a year just for the defense of Western Europe and Japan."

Agran proposes to take the savings and "send $$ 25$ billion to the American cities to rescue them from their appalling conditions.'

CMC then decides if the confict should be mediated or if it would be better suited for litigation or counseling, Meeker said The parties involv to mediate the conflict the parties involved are contacted within two days, she said.
If both parties agree on mediation, a meeting time is arranged.
The meeting is moderated by two mediators. This means that the conflicting parties are free to tell their sides of the story without interruption.
Throughout the process, each side is encouraged to see the issue from the other person's perspective, Meeker said.

She added the parties should not bring discussion.

At the end of the process, a workable and liveable contract to help future relations is developed, she said.

Meeker said the contract is by no means legal and binding but it is hoped that both sides will adhere to it.

CMC does check up on past disputes periodically to see if any more help is required, Meeker said.

Programs work

Agran cited the need for a national rebirth using "liberal, Democratic programs that historically work.

The issues of crime, drugs, homelessness and health care are familiar themes that have been propounded by the na tion's mayors. Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson has said, "We want to take care of the rest of the world before we take care of America. We want to put more jobs in Mexico before we put them in our cities with the North American Free Trade Agreement...that's crazy."

Despite the degree of discourse gener ated over the plight of the cities, David Broder of The Washington Past doubts it will have much impact on next year's election.

Volunteers are vital to the success of CMC, Meeker said.
The center usually needs about 20 volunteers who work with Meeker, two interns and Neil Katz, the faculty supervisor.

Last year there was a pool of 47 mediators composed of faculty, gradumedes and undergraduates.

Volunteers should have good communication skills and be prepared to go through a training process.
CMC has made itself known around the nation, Meeker said. Last year, it held a conference and hosted several

The center was also covered in the National Bar Association's Dispute ResoIution Update magazine.

George Bruno, former New Hampshire Democratic Party chairman, agrees that other issues besides the White House hang in the balance. 'If we don't have a strong candidate at the top of the ticket." Bruno said, "then governor, Senate, congressional and local candidates are going to feel the impact of a weak ticket."

After Sen. Al Gore of Tennessee withdrew his name from consideration, it reaffirmed the fact that many of the party's major contenders are letting 1992 pass by. Gore's departure was particularly troublesome as he was viewed as one of the few possible nominees who could have competed in the area of foreign policy.

The New York Times said that if the Democrats cede next year's election, they will have to ask themselves "how much long-term damage would the party incur?" The Times said at that point the party will have lost six of the last seven presidential races and polls already show an ominous trend for Democrats as a prese and 18-29...identifying more and more as Republicans."

Court could hurt Bush
Political analyst William Schneider suggests the greatest danger of Bush's re-election lies in the Supreme Court
"Sometime between January and July of 1992," Schneider said, "the Court is likely to decide whether to uphold or strike down its 1973 Roe $v$, Wade decision protecting abortion rights."

If the Court overturns Roe, Schneider predicts "a massive protest will erupt and it will be strongest among young, well-educated suburban voters." That's the voting bloc the GOF has made its biggest impact with during the past decade. Schneider suggests these voters "Iike Republican economics...but they hate right-wing religion. They (won't) give up abortion rights without a fight."

The Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Student Association celebrates its 20th anniversary this year. Students Concerned About Rape Education, (S.C.A.R.ED.) celebrates its third. Both have reason to celebrate, as both set out to create awareness for their causes and have been successful in their tasks of educating and opening eyes with their confrontational methods.

In the past two years, GLBSA held kiss-ins to force their sexuality down the throats of passers-by; tested, time and again, the university's commitment to developing homosexual rights on campus; and drew national media coverage for its efforts surrounding the Alpha Chi Rho T-shirt incident.

Still fueled, GLBSA continues to plow through our still homophobic campus challenging people to evaluate their feelings about homo-

T-shirt slogans
I would like to thank the guys at Alpha Ch Rho for making one of the most profound statements of our time: "Club faggots, not seals."

T-shirt might be too much
But in keeping with the spirit of Alpha Chi Rho, I've come up with a few T-shirt ideas of my own. Now, having an opinion can be as easy as going to the mall.

For example:
"Fight anti-war protesters, not Iraqis." Perfect for all those neo-patriots who were brave enough to insult people who opposed the Gulf War, but were scared to walk near a Gecruiting office.

If carrying a "Nuke Iraq" sign is your idea of supporting your country, this one's for you. Comes in red, white, or blue.
"Im right..and you're a sexist, racist, et. al." Turning to the left, this shirt makes a statement for all those who believe they're the only ones allowed to make statements. Available in one, fashionably correct size.
cessity after 6 women were raped in the first months of school in 1989, enjoys similar success.
S.C.A.R.ED. initiated, and saw through to completion, the idea of a blue-light system, forced the development of a rape crisis center on campus and did the impossible in getting the university to take a definitive stance on rape.
Through educational rallies, S.C.A.R.ED. has also made just about everybody on campus aware of a woman's right to say no.

Recently, members of both groups took a stance against police brutality -an important move because without their testimony it probably would have gone unnoticed. The members of both organizations deserve credit for being gutsy enough to be confrontational and aggressive in conservative and apathetic times.

for the times

"Blame affirmative action, not yourself."

It's recyclable, non-toxic, all-natural, biodegradable and tie-dyed.
"You may be smart, but I have a job." Tired of your friends telling you that a university is a institution of learning, just because it has books and professors and stufl? You know you're just here to get a job, so flaunt it.

Emblazoned with the likenesses of Donald Trump and Michael Milken, it also comes with a bonus slogan: "It's a $$ $ $$ thing. you wouldn't understand.'

Now you won't have to be embarrassed when people laugh at you because you don't know peoplemany letters are in the alphabet.

These T -shirts provide a tremendous opportunity. Now you can be a narrow-minded tunity. Now you can be a narrow-minded reactionary crowd-follower with even less efreactionary crowd-followe fort than it usually takes.

Why waste all your time thinking when you can just follow a slogan? Now we can eliminate such difficult tasks as debating ideas and having original opinions.

Of course, you will have to decide for yourself what T-shirt to wear. But I can't help you there.

I saw you trip the Blue Light security system on Tuesday, September 3 at 10:40 p.m. on the corner of Marshall Street and University Avenue. I told the security officer that I saw you and I gave him a description of all three of you You turned in a false alarm. I think it was a very dangerous and disrespectful act: as far as I am concerned, you do not deserve to live here and be a part of this community.

Waverly Avenue. I remember seeing those two victims in pain. While it did take security some time to get there, I wonder if a phone call from a fraternity house or the library would have taken longer. And I'll bet the Blue Light system does reduce average response time. But how do we know, maybe security was responding to a false alarm that night, like the one you turned in, so they could not get there as fast as they wanted to. Do you think those accident victims would appreciate what you did? Think about it.

Brothers take blame

To the editor:
As you may already know an incident occurred at the end of the $1990-91$ school year in which several Alpha Chi Rho brothers produced and wore T-shirts bearing homophobic slogans. been expelled from the fraternity. Thus, it would be very easy for those of us who veryain to blame the incident remain to blame the incide on those men and absolve

However, we, the remaining brothers of Alpha Chi Rho, accept the blame. We also acknowledge that the responsibility for the T-shirts lies with us as well; and we accept the blame.

We also acknowledge that the responsibility for any which must be made rests our shoulders. That being said, we would like to take this opportunity to apologize for opportunity to apologize for any distress we have caused any member of the Syracuse community, regardless of their sexual orientation. Indeed, sexual orientation. Indeed, since our actions have recently since our actions have recently this apology to the country as a whole.

As a chapter, we now face a long and difficult road toward restoring the good name of our fraternity on this campus. We have been placed on probationary status by the Alpha Chi Rho National and have agreed to adhere to a strict set of guidelines for re-education of our brotherhood in order to remain an active part of the SU greek system. We have every hope that we will be successful in our efforts

Once again, please accept our most sincere apologies and rest assured that nothing like this will ever be allowed to this will ever be allowed to

POLICE BRIEFS

Police are looking for a suspect in the assault and harassment of a 58-yenr-oid cab driver outside the house at 942 Ackerman Ave. Saturday morning.

The victim, from the 900 block of Avery Ave., picked up three males in the Sutter's Mill and Mining Cö. alley at about 2 a.m. One of the males asked the driver for a cigar. When the driver refused, the male became irate, a police report stated.

When they arrived at the house, the males paid and began throwing dirt and gravel at the car. As the driver turned to leave, one of the males threw a crowbar and damaged the roof of the car, the report said.

The driver was then punched on the left cheek and his glasses were broken by the same male. The three then ran into the 942 Ackerman Ave house.

Police interviewed a 20-yearold resident who was identified by the victim as one of the three males but did not beat him or

A 21-year-old Syracuse University student was charged with disorderly conduct Saturday morning after blocking traffic on Walnut Place.

Vladimir N. Quinn, 21, of 304 Walnut Place, was arrested for disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Police said Quinn was standing in the middle of the street and refused to move. He then laid down in front of the patrol car. Police said he appeared drunk or high.

After being handcuffed, he refused to get up and walk to the car. Police were forced to pick him up and drag him.

A 23-year-old man was ar rested for disorderly conduct in the Sutter's alley early Saturday morning after try ing to engage in a fight with another man.

Police said that Sean Palmer of 62 Caton Drive, tried earlier in the evening to fight the same man. Palmer continued to shout and provoke a fight after the man had left the area, according to a police report.

Police said Palmer appeared to be highly intoxicated.

The Quad was transformed into 2 launch pad Friday morning for dozens of kites created by Syracuse University students in the
The kites took off as part of an annual interdisciplinary charette, involving in dustrial design, interior design and sur* face pattern design majors.

The original intention was to launch the kites without running, but because of an absence of wind, the fliers were allowed to dash across the Quad.

Kites that flew received a passing grade; those that didn't, failed, according to Professor Mary Ellen Letterman.

This is an annual event we do where we get all the students together at the beginning of the semester to work on a team project," Letterman said. "It's not an essentially serious project; it's more fun to get them mixing and to get them fun to get them mixing and to get them to integrate the

In the past, projects were more openended. One year the theme was "Eat" where students designed everything from

From Mickey D's to explosions
A bi-plane kite, a single nying wing, a McDonalds french fry box kite, a apinner kite, an exploding kite called The Damned, a circular kite featuring Da Vinci's Modular Man, a kite made from bags sporting the old SUB logo, a flying t-square, Gene Gene the Dancing Machine (a humanoid-shaped kite) and many airborne creations congesting the normally kite-free Quad sky.

Each kite-building group consisted of six students, generally two from each of the three design programs.

Brooke Carter, a senior in interior design, said her group decided on a circular kite based on Da Vinci's "Modular Man (a sketch of the human mateson. "All of our majors incopporate the human body, and we all design for human factors and human dimensions," good rums," Rooks said. "The second quarter we started to shut them down... (In) the third quarter, we shut them out."

Rooks also said Vanderbilt's loss of its All-SEC center, Kevin Brothen, with $4: 48$ remaining in the first hali, helped shif momentum.
A holding penalty on the initial second half drive left the Commodores with a 3rd-and-17 from their own 13-yard line.

Wingback Anthony Carter

24-yard reception to the Vandy 37-yard line.

Then he ran into a track in the guise of Orange cornerback Greg Walker. Walker popped Carter, forcing a fumble. SU aafety Tony Montemorrascooped up the loose ball and scampered 37 yards for the touchdown with $13: 29$ len in the third quarter.
"I saw the ball and said, "Just pick it up and go, let's go,"' Montemorra said. "Greg Walker blasted that receiver and made it all happen. Oh, God, that hit was unbelievable.

After the defense caused another Vanderbilt turnover, a fumble on the Commodores' next possession. Ismail raced down the left sideline on a reverse for a 31-yard touchdown

Syracuse closed out the scoring on a I-yard Al Wooten run late in the third quarter, and a 37 -yard Biskup field goal early in the fourth quarter.

Vanderbilt coach Gerry DiNardo said the combination of a poor effort by the Commodores in the second half and the Orangemen's explosiveness cost his team the game.
"We didn't play well enough in the second hall to win," in the second hell to win, DiNardo gaid. "But how DiNardo said. "But how Syracuse played has somethin to do with the outcome, too."

plays," Hill said. "The things n the middle, I guess, they could deal with and their defense could hold it."
The Commodores secondary was forced to give Hill room because of his speed, Graves said.
"Him being open like that ust complements Shelby," Graves said. "People respect his speed and they play off of him."
Hill used his speed to take a ateral and turn it into a 39 sard second half gain ard second half gain.
Shelby is certainly a dynamic player." Syracuse coach Paul Pasqualoni said. "He is a big play guy. He had a very, very ood game today."
Hill had a tough test in his debut, facing Vanderbilt's AllSEC punter David Lawrence, who averaged 42 yards per punt last season, along with a 4. second average hang time.

While waiting for one of Lawrence's booming punts to fall, it would be understandable if Hill was a little apprehensive.
Hill said, however, fear is not a good trait for a punt returner. If you're frightened, then you won't be able to do it," he said. "Punt returns can make you or break you. It's a scary position but there can't be any fright in your heart when you play there."

The No. 1 priority, Hill said, is catching the ball. Still, several punts bounced in front of him.
"He aligned a little too deep. in the beginning of the game," Pasqualoni said. "That's getting acelimated again. There's some work we need to do there but overall I think Shelby had a good day."

Rape's menace still looms over women

By JODI LAMAGNA

Editor in Chief
Erin Neff was raped the summer before her junior year in high school. She was 15 years old

The following is her account of the incident.

Tlived with my grandpar ents. They both had jobs so I was unsupervised a lot of the time. My friends and I used to hang out on the beach. There was this one lifeguard -Todd. He was best friends with my boyfriend, Bill, at the time. He was really nice looking. Athletic, had a good body.
"One day he came to my house and said Bill got hurt diving and to come with hirn and we'd go help him.
"I got suspicious when 1 noticed he was driving away from Bill's house, and 1 asked him where we were, going. He said, to have some fun."

Erin shook her head.
"I was only 15 at the time but I knew this would not be good, that I was in some serious trouble. He drove to the end of the main road on sand dumes.
"He started to grab my arms and to touch me and kiss me. Then he climbed on top of me and I started screaming. So he put me in a chokehold and raped me on the front seat of his car.
"I finally pushed him off me and started running. He followed me and I turned around and punched him. Finally he backed off.
"I ran for five miles back to my grandmother's house and I cricd for days. I didn't tell anyone. I thought if It told my grandparents they'd feel guilty for not being there. And if 1 told my parents, they'd pull me back home, which is where I didn't want to be.
"I didn't know what to do. I hated all men. I hated almost everyone. I didn't date any guys for a long time - until I got to college.
"I finally told my best friend about the rape during the next year of high school. When we had a falling out later in the year, she called my mother and told her about the rape.
"I remember my mom came in the room crying and she said to me, 'OK I want you to tell me everything.' I told my mom the whole story and she instantly wanted to press charges, to take him to court.
"This was six months later, though. She took me to a counselor. We decided I didn't have a case. There was no physical evidence six months after the fact. It would be my word against his.
"He kept calling me for a couple of months after he raped me. He'd ask how I was or if I wanted him to come over. He said he had fun when we were together.
"I'm better now. Some things still instantly remind me of the rape. Like if someone comes up behind me and puts his hands on my neck. Or if I'm at that area at the beach. The sand and surf and shore remind me of it. It brings back that memory.

I've told some of my close friends here (at Syracuse University where Erin is currently a senior). I've told some of the guys I've dated. All of them reacted totally differently. One guy 1 told because he was on top of me and I said 'get off' and he wouldn't He was tickling me, but he wouldn' stop when I asked him to. So I pushed him off. And he said, You didn't have to be so violent.' And I told him that yes, I did. And I told him the story. yes, 1 did. And 1 t.
He felt really bad.
"I have a box at home of things from that summer - pictures of my friends, concert tickets, stuff like that. It's my Pandors's box. I open that up and... 99

Erin closed her eyes and sighed.
One nut of every six women will be raped.

Ninety percent of those women will be raped by an acquaintance or a friend. The New York state definition of rape is "forceful penetration, specifically anal, oral or vaginal.
The term rape is broken up into tranger and non-stranger, according to Joan Gibson, director of the R.A.P.E. (Rape: Advocacy, Prevention and Education) Center.
"A person you meet at a bar and talk to for an hour does fall into the category of non-stranger. But there are varying degrees of non-stranger," she said.

Unfortunately, acquaintance and date rape are used interchangeably," Gibson said. "People think That wasn't date rape. I wasn't on a date.' Date rape is one very specific category of acquaintance rape.
Gibson said as soon as people start talking about stranger/non-stranger, date and acquaintance rape, they focus on the acquaintance part and not the rape part.

Someone actually said to me once, 'Well, at least she knew the person.' And I said, 'Are you telling me that if you I said, Are you telling me that if you were robbed by your best friend, there would be less pain and hurt involved than would be less pain and hurt involved than he said, 'Oh no. There'd be more.
"Well, it's the same thing," Gibson said. "There's more pain and hurt in volved when (the rape) is by someone you know, someone with whom there's some evel of trust.
"So the term 'acquaintance' softens the term rape?" she asked almost in disbelief. "The reality is the exact opposite. It's more emotionally devastating."

Societal attitudes tend to be more sympathetic toward vietims of stranger rapes, Gibson said.
"There's a difference in public empathy for the victim in the Central Park jogger case than for the (alleged) victim in the William Kennedy Smith case," she said. "No one asks, 'Was the jogger drunk last night? What was she doing out jogging at that time of night? There's much less blame (put on the There's much less blame (put Anybody, the male or the female, has the right to stop at any point - the right to want to engage in foreplay and not to have intercourse, Gibson said.

"And somehow, in society, we say that once you begin down the sexual behavior continuum, you're more to blame if you get raped," she said.
"This is scary thinking. It's all-ornothing thinking,", she said. "So if you kiss someone, you're more likely to be raped."
According to Gibson, there is a trend of moving away from blaming the victim. She said vietims who come forward are finding more support among people they know.
"There's a personal connection." she said. "People are more aware and more supportive. There's progress there.
"But on a non-personal level, it's easy to say, 'I never would have done that. Why did she?'
"We defend our own vulnerability by saying we never would have done what (the person who was raped) did," she said.

Gibson said part of that reaction is one's own self-defense -the that-would-never-happen-to-me defense.
"That's easy to do when it's someone we don't know," she said. "The progress is on an individual level, with victims coming forward and finding people they coming forward and findin

Communication is key

Once a person is in a potentially dangerous situation, it's hard to employ avoidance techniques, Gibson said.
The prevention occurs in what leads up to the situation. "It's the communication aspect," she said.

Sending as clear a message as possible all the way through the interaction helps both parties in the long run, she said
"It would help if both could be clear from the start. There are some men who are not going to stop if they want to have intercourse, no matter what the other person wants, and no amount of clear communication will stop it," Gibson said.

If that's (his) end goal of the evening, women ought to pay attention to thing red flags."

Gibson said to be wary if a man is not respecting a woman's choices during the time they are together.
"If he is not respectful or paying attention to your wishes in these other areas (where you want to go to eat, whether you want a drink), you can't expect him to pay attention in other, more intimate areas," she said.
Both the term "victim" and the term "survivor" are used to describe a woman who has been raped, Gibson said. The distinction comes with the length of tim

District Attorneys' offices and police departments, especially during the prosecution of a case, use the term "rape cution of a case, us victim," Gibson said.
"As you move further away from the incident and you begin your own healing and empowerment processes, there is very clearly a point at which you move away from being a victim toward being a survivor," she said.
"The rapist takes the power away from the victim," she said. "At the point when the healing begins and the victim begins to take her power back, she becomes a survivor."

People who fail to pay their New York Telephone bills on time will pay for their negligence - Iiterally.

Since April, people guilty of late payments have had to pay a 1.5 percent late fee each month.

The new system is designed to cut down on rate increases and to regain the money lost by warning repeat offenders, according to New York Telephone spokesman Cliff Lee.

Lee said almost one-third of New York Telephone's 9.2 million customers are late every month with their payments.

While it is too early to gauge the impact of the new system, Lee predicts that customers will spend $$ 7.9$ million on the late fee in the first year alone.

The late payment system has affected corporate customers since 1984. This past April, the Public Service Commission suggested a similar increase for residential customers, and New York Telephone agreed.

Lee stressed that customers would be given ample opportunity to pay their bills before the late charge is imposed.

Customers will receive a 21 -day grace period after their payment is due. In addition, New York Telephone will issue a warning the first time the payment is missed.

Are students prompt?

Elise Angiolillo, director of telecommunications at Syracuse University, says she feels this new fee will not drastically affect $S U$ students.
"Our students have traditionally paid ... fairly promptly, and I don't foresee any problem in the future," said Angiolillo in a telephone interview
"If (the late fee) encourages students to pay on time, then it is doing what it should," she said.

Almost half of the SU students contacted in an informal poll said they were late in paying their phone bills on time at least once last year.

Penalties among those polled ranged from what was referred to as "a friendly reminder" to threats of legal action.
The recipient of the latter message was Kyle Poquette, president of the cinema branch of University Union.

Poquette said he received three warnings from New York Telephone before he paid his bill, but he never paid any late fee.
New York Telephone had been one of the last major utilities in New York not to impose a late fee.

According to Lee, the late fee policy would have resulted in a $$ 33$ million increase in revenues had it been imposed last year.

New York Telephone made significant changes in SU students' phone capabilities in 1989 with the adoption of the DECCS (Digital Education Centrex Communication Service).

Johannesburg police are still waiting for someone to claim responsibility for Sunday's mass murder at an Inkata Freedom Party rally.

Gunmen opened fire on the crowd of about 300 people, killing 23 and wounding 18 others.
Johannesburg has been the site of recent fighting between the Inkats party and its arch-rival the African National Congress.
Following the rally, 13 people were killed when a grenade was thrown into a crowd of Inkata supporters returning to the black township of Soweto.
The attacks set off a rash of violence from Inkata supporters, who rampaged through the streets of Soweto, smashing windows and firing gins.
Authorities said factional fighting has remulted in more than 1,000 deaths in and around Johannesburg this year.

The plan, to be completed by fall 1992 , was started by John Kozak, dean of the school, to improve the college's academics. Kozak also said that assistant professors are more likely to devote less time to teaching and more time to writing and that they often inflate grades to gain tenure.

Some members of the history department were worried increased class size would lead to lack of student participation and apathy.
"The word 'history' comes from the Greek word meaning 'to interpret."'" said Linda Piper, an associate professor of history. "There needs to be discussion and this can't be accomplished in a large lecture class," she said.

The trend toward larger history survey courses is a matter of economics, not vey courses is a mat

Holden Observatory makes room for Maxwell

Landmark moves without incident during summer

By KAREN A. TESTA
staff Writer
Something monumental happened to the Syracuse University campus this summer.

SU's second-oldest building, a national landmark which stood the test of time for more than a century as a city and university developed rapidly around it, was lifted up and taken away.

But the movers didn't get too far. Holden Observatory, built in 1887 , was moved 190 feet to its southwest, making way for the expansion of the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

The observatory, home to the SU Soling Program and a favorite spot for local stargazers, now sits atop the hill at Irving Avenue, between the College of Law library and Crouse College.

There was no stargazing from the observatory this surnmer as the telescope was overhauled during the move.

Project Manager Joe Bello said the move, which took two days, came off without a glitch.
"It went into place without any complications," he said, "it's in its final spot." A new foundation was set and the building was set in place.

tor of Design and Construction.
Bello said Holden's designation as a national landmark caused some complications in planning the move, but he added, "We have received full authorization."

The movers had to ensure that the physical make-up of the building would not be destroyed and the exterior would not be altered in order to receive authori## zation, he said.

Holden Observatory was built in 1887 in memory of Charles Demerest Holden, an 1883 graduate of $S U$ who died of a heart ailment, according to Mary L. Brien, assistant to the archivist at the SU Arents Library. His father, Erastus Holden, was a local coal dealer and the first vice president of the SU Board of Trustees. He donated the funds for the observatory and set up a $$ 25.000$ endowment to help maintain the building.
Architect Archimedes Russell designed the building to be made from Onondaga limestone. Russell also designed the old Syracuse police station on Willow Street and the Tolley Administration Building on the SU campus, Brein said.

The only other observatory of this kind in the area is at the Syracuse Astronomimol Society in Vespar, N.Y.

Fees require caution

New York Telephone is reaching out to touch more than just friends and family. They're reaching for customers' wallets as well.

The New York Telephone Company will be charging clients late fees. One of the last long distance companies to do so, New York Telephone is issuing a warning to offenders who do not pay their bills. Since April, the company has been tacking on an additional 1.5 percent late fee on top of regular charges.

Students may be particularly vulnerable to neglecting payments since many do not have jobs and may suffer from the credit card syndrome where paying bills is put off because there is no penalty or real cash exchange involved.

The late fees are designed to catch people who do not pay bills on time. Students often fall into this category. Like a credit card, no additional charges are imposed unless the minimum payment is not made on time.

Approximately one-third of all 9.2 million customers are typically late with their payments, which denotes an untapped income of $$ 7.9$ million for New York Telephone.

Students should be aware of traps like late fees and do their best to avoid them, which may mean reverting back to an ancient form of communication - letter writing.

Academic freedom should prevail

To the editor:
I write this letter in the hope that it may shed some light on the Alpha Chi Rho gay-bashing T-shirt issue. Myself and many others. I think, would like to see an end to this event.

It is quite understandable that members of the Lesbian and Gay Graduate Collective and Gighly upset by the message conveyed by the $T$ shirts and by what appears to shirts and by what appear be inaction on the part Syracuse University to discipline the fraternity discipline the fraternity members. But when has it ever members. But when has it ever been the policy of universities to punish students simply because the view they espouse is offensive to others? Never.

And this is the very reason that students, for the most part, continue to grow in mind and in spirit. Academic freedom should never be jeopardized for political purposes.The university, if nothing else, is the ideal marketplace of ideas. This is the atrnosphere where theories are introduced, hypotheses are tested and issues debated. If students cease to voice their opinions and introduce their ideas because of the fear of offending others, there will be no intellectual growth. And the university will no longer have a valid purpose.

The problem with the position that LGGC takes, as stated in The Daily Orange on Sept. 5, is that it does not request that a debate session or conference be convened where the legitimate issues will be debated. The group demands that the university must "epunish those responsible for the shirts."

Of course such a measure will not change the opinions of those who made and wore the shirts and believe in the message. Punishing these students for speaking their minds or voicing their moral opinions is likely to enrage them because of the obvious injustice.

Their minds will not be opened any further. They may develop a greater degree of dislike and perhaps grow to hate those they perceive as hate those they perceive punishment, gays and lesbians.

LGGC also strongly suggests, if not demands, that the students be made to undergo sensitivity training on issues of homosexuality. This is akin to placing a Ku Klux Klan member in an African-American studies program. It is punishment. The sessions can be beneficial, but the student's power to choose is being abridged.

LGGC is demanding

 intellectual and social conformity in an extreme sense. It is not only making a moral judgrnent, it is demanding that its will be carried out. if that were the rule, the university and this country would no langer produce individuals like Aibert Eindividuals like Abert Thurgood Marshall and others who wish to think differently and follow different paths.SU's refusal to construe the imprinted message on the Tshirts as "fighting words" and punish the students is a sign there may be hope for academic freedom and its immeasurable benefits.

ACORD organizes forums

By KEN ALDRICH
Contributing Writer
Action through Creativity, Organization, Research and Discussion (ACORD) has been dedicate to organizing forums on the "cutting edge" of Syracuse University for more than five years, said Aimee Achorn, ACORD'sexecutivecoordinator. ACORD was formed in 1985 by graduate student George $S$. by graduate student George $S$. George to bring professionals

Achorn said the group brings people on the "cutting edge" of their fields to SU for "a forum for discussion across disciplines," These are "generally people you've never heard of before," she said.

In general, the speakers will discuss a specified topic before the audience for approximately 10 minutes. The floor is then open to audience members to speak and ask panelists ques lions, Achorn said. Sometimes panelists ask audience members questions, she added.
These discussions are open to the public and are usually free.

"We're like a smaller University Union," Achorn said. University Union's promotion board annually brings high-profile annually brings $h$ speakers to campus.
Last year ACORD held forum in which professors from the S.I. Newhouse School of Public Communication and the School of Architecture discussed how art relates to television, movies and video.

The group receives funding from the Student Government Association and has requested $$ 2,900$ this year. The group is looking into grants and will be applying for contingency funds this year. The group went over budget due to clerical errors last year.

Achorn said that "money is A bit scarce this year."

Last year the group lost the majority of its members due to graduation.
"We're working with a skeleton staff," she said. The group currently has five members, and is looking for new mernbers.

Keeping it going
According to Achorn, ACORD is in the "process of being restructured." This includes enacting its new constitution, drafted last year. "We are going to remain an undergraduate and graduate organization," she said.

ACORD will hold a general interest meeting later in September to discuss membership and projects.

Achorn said anyone interested in the organization should contact her at 475-7055 or leave a message in the group's mailbox in Room 1260 of the Shine Student Center.

ad campaign

Domino's Pizza is fighting a battle with Pizta Hut for the pizza delivery market and will soon add a new weapon to the fray: a new ad campaign.
Domino's will debut its new ads Sept. 13, featuring close-ups of gooey cheese and pepperoni pizzas prepared with loving care by Domino's employees for a smiling family.

Despite being known for its speed, Domino's has not enjoyed a reputation for great-tasting pizza. The company hopes this new advertising strategy will sway consumer perceptions. Domino's is reportedly spending effort to combat Pizza Hut's recently fierce comparative ads.

Alumnus achieves rank in ARCO

George Babikian leads corporation despite grades

By ERIC GRODE

Asst. Lifestyle Editor
Syracuse University students are generally wiven a specifie impression of alumni, especially those who are recognized by the school for their achievemized by.

These alumni are often portrayed as hardworking, top-notch students who hardworking, top-notch students who went straight to the top after graduatwen ing.
Meet George Babikian, one of the most highly respected oil executives in the country and a 1953 graduate of the SU School of Management.
"I never was much of a student," said Babikian, who received the School's Alumnus of the Year Award this past June.

His only extra-curricular involvement was with Sigma Chi fraternity. He said Syracuse supplied "a lot of good times and a lot of good memories," but he received sub-par grades.

Babikian was born in Fulton about 30 minutes from Syracuse, and after serving during World War II, decided to go to college on the GI Bill

But before attending Syracuse, Babikian went to Sarnpson College, in Geneva, which the government set up to accommodate the influx of soldiers.

The Korean War intervened before he could graduate, and it wasn't until 1953 that he finally received his bachelor's degree from the School or Management.

A fateful project
Babikian then began his graduate work at SU, which was cut short by a fateful assignment. As part of a project he was asked to critique a local company. The company he chose, the Atlantic Refining Co., was impressed with his work, and Babikian was hired to critique the company's sales program
From there, he moved into marketing and began advancing in the company, renamed the Atlantic Richmond Co. ARCOI.
Ele headed ARCO's marketing depart ment from 1978 until 1985, when he was named president of the ARCO Products Co. and a senior vice president of the ARCO Corp.

ARCO is one of 14 American compa nies that make more than $$ 2$ billion in profit annually.
Despite all his personal successes, however. Babikian strongly feels that

GLBSA marks 20th year

By ALI BENNETT

This year celebrates the 20th Anniversary of the Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Student Association. Group members express high hopes for the continuance of the fight for their civil rights nationwide as well as at nationwide as we Syracuse University.

GLBSA promotes gay, lesbian, and bisexual awareness and education and aims to dispel many of the myths that surcound their community, atcording to Charlie McDonald. GIBSA co-president.

Gays are "just as human" as heterosexual people. "Being gay doesn't define a person,"he said. GLBSA stresses that a person's sexual orientation is acivil right. *Regardless of the group right. *Regardless of the group you belong to, the civil rights issues are the sarme," said F
"If you're in an environment where one group is oppressed, where one group is oppressed, nobody is truly free," McDonald nabid.

Members stress that being gay is not a conscious choice.

Youdont have a choice about your feelings, (but) you do about your actions" Chang said.
"And in our society many people are afraid to act on their feelings," said Jenifer Maroon GLBSA member and director of the Women's Center.
Safety from the community
GLBSA attempts to provide a safe place for the gay, lesbian and bisexual community against gaywbashing, and also hopes to gaywbasting, and also hop change campus attitudes.

Group members say that their ultimate goal is the termination of the need for such an organizaof the need for such an organization and its eventual disbandtion and its eventual disbandment due to complete accepment due to conce in society.

Traditionally an active and vocal group on campus, GLBSA has plans to continue its public fight.

Last spring, the group received three awards at the Night of the Stars, the university's awards program recogmizing active and contributing organizations on campus.

GLBSA won Best Group Leaderstip for a small organization and also received awards for advocacy and campus issues for its involvernent with ROTC's discriminatory policies.
'This year GLBSA his year GLBSA will continue to promote AIDS education, members said

Stressing that AlDS is an issue for both heterosexuals and homosexuals, Jennifer Weiner. GLBSA member said, "ADDS doesn't care who you sleep with."
As a part of this, the organization distributed free condoms at last week's Student Organization Fair to gll stualents, re gardless of sexual orientation.

Many plans

Members say GLBSA has many plans for the upcoming year. These include forming an Year. These include forming an alumni organization, establishalumni organization, establishing an endowment for a scholarship for someone who has shown great public homosexual and bisexual rights advocacy, starting a newsletter and bringing part of the Lesbian-Gay Film Festival to SU.
The efroup also hopes to raise money to make a quilt panel for the Names Project, a quilt dedicated to people who died of AIDS.
"To understand the organization is to understand the culture," said Bill Taroli, GLBSA treasurer.
Everyone in the SU community is invited to become a member of GLBSA and is welcome to come to any meetings.
Socials are held Tuesdays from 8:30 p.m, to midnight and discussion groups are held every Thursday from 8:30 p.m. to 11:00 p.m. Open board meetings are held Saturdays at 2:00 p.m. All meetings are held at the group's office at 750 Ostrom Ave.

college students should worry less about furthering their careers and more about enjoying themselves.

Enjoy those college days
When asked if he had any advice for his children -his daughter graduated from the SU School of Management in 1978 - he responded: "I simply told them I wanted them to graduate from college. Period.
"What was more important to me was that they enjoy what they do."

And while his GPA may indicate otherwise, Babikian says he owes a lot to SU.
"Syracuse did a great deal for me," said Babikian, "and I'm grateful and beholden to Syracuse for it."
Although his office is in Los Angeles, he travels to SU several times a year. The last time was in June. when he accepted the Alumnus of the Year award. He and his wife, Mary Ann, are both active inalumnigroups, and both he and ARCO are financial supporters of the university.

As president of ARCO Products, the gasoline refining and marketing division of the ARCO Corp., Babikian has helped implement many changes during the last 36 years, including:

- the conversion of several gas stations to AM/PM Mini-Mar kets, a strategy that several other oil companies later copied;
- the creation of a new lowemission gas designed to cut down on air pollution;
- the elimination of the ARCO credit card.
Recently, he masterminded ARCO's strategy to freeze prices on gasoline during the beginning of the Persian Gulf conflict.
This strategy resulted in jumps in ARCO's market share and sales volume.

Webster's alters for '90s

By MIKE DAVIS
Contributing Writer
Most people believe dictionaries define words, but in reality they do much more than that. Sometimes they can define an entire culture.

Early this May, Random House published The Random House published The Random House Webster's College Dictionary, which has stirred up tionary, which has stirred up more publicity than any other more publicity than any other in recent years for several reasons.
The dictionary has 20,000 more words than the nearest competitor. Also, it has added more than 400 new words and definitions.
"(lt's) the first dictionary of the 1990 s," said assistant publisher Jack Hornor. "It is the new definition of dictionary."

Random House, with the use of a new database system created from The Random House Dictionary of English Language: Dictionary of English Language: Second Edition, Unabridged, was able to update the dictionary able to update the until mid-February.

In fact, the company was able to include such up-to-theminute facts as the announcement of the resignation of Soviet Foreign Minister EduardShevard nadze and the appointment of British Prime Minister John Major.

Despite all these innovations, Random House is receiving the most attention over the addition of words other dictionaries have chosen not to include and by changing many definitionsother dictionaries have chosen to ignore.

From women to womyn
The book contains a variety of new words ranging from seience terms such as "liposuction" and "ozone hole," to environmental terms such as "treehugger," to slang such as "crackhead" and "mall rat."

Also, the changing of definitions often considered sexist has received much publicity.

For example, the dictionary offers an alternative spelling for the word "women." It suggests that the word "womyn" would be more appropriate and less sexist.
"This is not a revision, but instead it is a brand new dictionary," Hornor said. Many tionary, Hornor said. Many words that were included came wrords that were included came from everyday sources such as from everyday sources such as newspapers, magazines and telenewspapers, magazines and television commercials, Hornorsaid.

Hornor also said consumer response has been phenomenal with the dictionaries virtually "flying out of the stores."

The entire first printing of 350,000 sold out in a record four months.

The new entries are not the only additions to the dictionary. Random House decided to include the name "Webster" to the title for the first time because it believed the name would increase the prowess of the publication.

Another edition on the way "Webstersaysdictionary," Hornor said. "Random House guarantees that it's the best."

The dictionary is separated from its competitors in several ways, Horner said. First, the most common definition of a word is listed at the beginning of an entry.
Although it has fewer illustrations than some of its competitors, Random House's illustrations show the intricate details of medical diagrams, animai species and geographical maps.

A new edition is already in the works and is expected to arrive in about three years.

Hornor said the dictionary offers "a larger and more sophisticated vocabulary that the student, business person and general user is likely to encounter.
"Random House Webster's College Dictionary is the single most important reference book for anyone's library," Hornor said. "It is the most comprehensive, up-to-date, accessible, reader-friendly dictionary in the world."

Teaching assistants are an integral part of the American undergraduate experience, according to Professor Dan Waterman, chairman of the mathematics department.

About 800 graduate students are employs di by Syracuse Iniversity to work in teachingrelated capacities for up to 20 hours a week, according to Leo Lambert, director of the teaching assistant program.
"SU is recognized nationally for its TA program," he said.
"It's the most comprehensive program in the country.
"TAs will be the professors of tomorrow."
TAs participate in a rigorous 16-day orientation program which includes workshops and seminars designed to familiarize them with American teaching methods in undergraduate education, Lambert said.
The training program helps international TAs adjust to cultural differences in the classroom, Lambert said.
"In other countries, students do not typically look the professor in the eye and they never ask questions," he said.

International TAs must also pass an English proficiency exam and show that they can thoroughly converse in English, Lambert said.

International TAs lacking speaking skills but who can still write and read English are assigned otfer teaching jobs, such as grading papers or conducting research for faculty.

Waterman said undergraduates often express concern about foreign TAs' accents.
"Accents and language seem to be overplayed by students," he said.

But Waterman said any graduate student who undergoes the training program is capable of being a TA.
"Many foreign TAs want to be teachers and have had teaching experience in their own countries," he said.
Mary Daly, adviser to the program and a former TA, said a lot of international TAs worry what students will think of their teaching.
"There is a fear among them that they'll be perceived as ineffective," she said.

We're honored that you like our banner so much, but would the person or persons that removed it from our door please return it - no questions asked! We need it to continue doing business.

Daly said, however, that students enjoy hearing stories about the countries international TAs come from.
"Bringing (TAs') diverse backgrounds to class helps students get to know their TAs," she said. "They like to find out stuff about their TAs."
Stacey Tice, a graduate teaching consultant, said keeping lines of communication open between TAs and students will help alleviate problems.
"A goal of the TA program is to work towards no communication barriers campus-wide," Tice said.

Previously, if the ball was snapped over the punter's head and he went to get it he could be hit as any other player.

Under the new rule, however, once he retrieved the ball and attempted to kick it, he became a punter and was protected by the normal kicker-roughing rules.
"It didn't look real pretty." Pasqualoni said. "But, by the interpretation of the rule Jo Jo did the right thing. I don't know how else we could have played it.
"He went and just became very cautious because the guy was protected by the rule."

Dees gets A's in new position Andrew Dees, a two-year starter at tight end, made his first appearance on the offensive line. Dees was another newcomer on a line which only had one returning starter.
"I thought Andrew looked good," Pasqualoni said. "The things that Andrew has to master are the little techniques of the position. He's learning those things and doing very well. He's a quick learner.

Walker ran the ball 10 times for a net of 51 yards. Richardson had five carries for 29 yards.

In long distance situations, Walker moved to fullback and Richardson to tailback, or Richardson moved onto the line of scrimmage with Walker in a single back set.
"We were pleased with it." Pasqualoni said. "It's something we practiced during the preseason. When the down and distance situation arises, we would like to have both (Walker and Richardson) in the game."
Syracuse took advantage of the single setback situation on its last drive in the first half.

In the two minute offense, Richardson lined up on the line and leapt for a 22-yard pass and eapt for a 22-yard pass from Graves over the middle which set up a 40 -yard John Which set up a

Not so Marvelous start
SU quarterback Marvin

Graves certainly did not begin his season like he ended last year.

Graves, who accounted for all four touchdowns in last season's Aloha Bowl, threw two interceptions and fumbled the ball against the Commodores.

Early in the game, some of Graves' passes were overthrown, but Pasqualoni attributed it to a new football.
"I'm not making excuses for Marvin at all," Pasqualoni said "But the first thing I thought was, he's probably using a new ball and maybe we haven't worked with a new ball and maybe it was a little slippery."
After the slow start, Graves finished with 211 yards passing. completing 11 of 18 ating. con

"I just think it was the first game," Pasqualoni said. "He's still only in his second year and we have to have some patience and give him some time to grow

Times change
The Orangemen will go from one extrome to the other in terms of kick-off time, for this Saturday's showdown with the University of Maryland.

After playing a noon game last weekend at the Carrier Dome, they will play a 7 p.m. game outdoors this Saturday at Byrd Stadium in College Park. Md.

Syracuse will attempt to get acclimated to the nighttimeschedule sometime later in the week. Pasqualoni said.
"There is nothing that we can do early in the week," Pasqualoni said. "It's more adjustments in our schedule as we go to the end of the week and what we do Saturday."

Pasqualoni said he hoped to have Friday's practice at $7 \mathrm{p} . \mathrm{m}$. to simulate game conditions.

DUKE

"I couldn't ask for a better effort," Foti said. "If we work that hard every game, we're going to be a real good team at the end of the season."
The Atlantic Const Conference is traditionally a haven for top ranked teams. Duke and North Carolina State are the highest ranked teams on SU's schedule.
The rest of SU's opponents aren't cupcakes or pushovers but they're not in the class of the ACC elite, either.
"The ACC is on a different level," Foti said. "It's a different atmosphere. Now we have to see if we can match that when we play against some of the teams on our schedule."

The Orangemen will begin digging into the rest of the achedule on Wednesday night when they host Colgate at 7:30 p.m. in the Carrier Dome.

Both N.C. State and Duke finished the Eighth Annual Metropolitan Life Soccer Classic with a 2 -0 record.

Stefan stuffs Courier

The surprisingly silky smooth sensational Swede Stefan Edberg destroyed Jim Courier on Sunday to win his first-ever U.S. Open charnpionship.

Edberg, who has now won five Grand Slam events, hammered the mad-hatter 6-2, 6-4, 6-0.

Courier beat Edberg in the quarterfinals of the French Open earlier this year.

Lost in the shuffle of Jimmy Connors: magical ride to the semifinals was Monica Seles winning her third major title of the year by beating Martina Navratilova.

Seles passed on the opportunity to win the Grand Slam when she skipped Wimbledon for unknown reasons. And there were many possibilities to chose from.

NFL Week 2
Dick MacPherson lost the honor of having the best winning percentage of any head coach in NFL history when the Patriots lost to the Browns 20-0, evening Mac's record at 1-1.

In other games, the Cardinals flew past the Eagles 26-10; the Bears pirated a win from Thmpa Bay 21-20; New Orleans rose oast the Chiefs 17-10; the Lions gobbled up the Packers 23-14; gobbled up the Packers 23-14; 52-34; the Rams slew the Giants 52-34; the Rams slew the Giants

If it got any more corny, it would be like getting stuck in a 5 -acre field in the middle of Des Moines, don't you think?

Baseball update
The New York Mets continue to drift into oblivion as the Atlanta Braves (hey, they're in a race) beat them $7-5$ on Sunday.

Atlanta's Tom Glavine helped solidify his Cy Young chances with his l8th win, tops in the National League.

On Saturday, Frank Viola continued his miserable slide (surprising, seeing as how he's an ex-Twin) and fell to $12-14$.

Frankie $V$ becomes a free agent at the end of the year, and his market value isn't going up. The Cubs' Shawon Dunston is also having a miserable pre-free agent year.

The Royals' Danny Tartabull, on the other hand, has at least doubled his market value with a stunning season of base hits, home runs and no injuries. We also hope the value of his rookie card will increase.

The Seattle Mariners* push for their first-ever winning season was dealt a serious blow this weekend in Boston. Seattle got hammered three straight.

The Mariners are now 68-69 and floundering. They're even tied with California for last place in the AL West. Ouch.

After Saturday's 37-10 drubbing of Vanderbilt, it appears as if the Syracuse offensive line is not as weak as many claim.
Maybe, though, they looked so good because Vandy was so bad. It's still too early to tell.

After a year and a half of knee rehab, he will not be denied. He is the squad's defensive leader who hits harder than Thor's hammer. Look for Young to steal some of Dan Conley's spotlight.

What a juggernaut this team is The words "unstoppable" and "unde feated" come quickly to mind.
-John Biskup's consistency is going to play a major role in the success of the Orangemen. If Saturday's opener is any indication of the season to come (Biskup hit on-field goals of 48,40 , and 37 yards), then the Orange will have a second weapon to complement their offensive scheme.

It's a proven fact that you can't win the big ones without a reliable kick ing game. (Buffalo being tirc exception that makes the rule.) With the goal posts narrowed this year, Biskup's role is doubly important.

Duke, Wolfpack top Orange

By ROB GUYETTE
Sports Editor
The Syracuse University soccer team is not ready to be ranked in the top 10 . But this weekend it found out what it will take to get there.

The Orangemen lost a pair of games -their first two of the season - this weekend at Durh shutout each time.

Ninth-ranked Duke, 2-0, beat SU 3-0 on Saturday, and second-ranked North Carolina State, $2-0$, toppled the Orange $1-0$ on Sunday.

Syracuse's first-year head coach Dean Foti said he was not discouraged by the losses. He said the exposure to what top 10 soscer is all about left an impression on the team
"It was a great experience," Foti said. "We've never been exposed to something like that before. It makes it clear in our players' minds what it takes to compete at the top. I don't think some of them knew."

The crowd of 4,237 watched the Blue Devils beat SU as Clint Carnell had a career-high three assists. Richie Dunn Chris Yankee and A.J. Siebeneck scored for Duke.

Syracuse goalie Steve Pollnow made five saves, while the Orange offense forced Duke goalie Jan DeWeer to make just one save.
"It's different to play in front of 5,000 people against a top 10 team when people against a top everything's going against you," Foti everything's going against, you, Foot on in practice, It's something you have to experience."

Duke outshot SU 18-12 and had five corner kicks to SU's four.

Neither team was able to scrimmage before last weekend due to new NCAA Syracuse University defender Chris Wright, shown here in action last year, helped keep the Orangemen in two close ball games over the weekend. Wright also had four shots on goal in a 3-0 loss to Duke.

rules. Foti said he didn't want to make excuses, but a scrimmage might have helped SU more than Duke.
"Usually the first game is good to work out the kinks," he said. "Against Duke, it's not really a good idea to work out the kinks."

On Sunday, the Wolfpack's Gabriel Okonkwo scored the only goal of the game at the $42: 17$ mark of the first half. N.C. State outshot SU 21-4, and again the Orangemen forced the opposing goalie to make just one save.

Pollnow had eight saves in goal for SU.

Foti said the final offensive regults are misleading. He said the Orangemen hit a crossbar and had a few other shots that nearly missed the mark.

But none went in.
"We had some good opportunities to score in both games," Foti said. "If one of those shots goes in, it's a different game. The best thing is that we know we can play with those tearns.
Foti said he was proud of the team for coming back and playing a better game on Saturday after having some steam

New coach keeps old ties

By IOSH BARNETT
Staff Writer
Paul Pasqualoni may be the new head coach of the Syracuse University football team, but in his first game Saturday, he didn't forget his roots.
Pasqualoni, a former linebacker and former SU linebacker coach, said he was keeping an eye on the group he used to work with.
"I was watching them to make sure they were doing what they were supposed to be doing," Pasqualoni said. "I phewed them out a couple of times for good old times sake. play had to merit praise from their former position coach. Inside linebackers Glen Young and Dan Conley combined for 26 tackles. The outside linebacker rotation of Jo Jo Wooden, Garland Hawkins and Chip Todd also made 18 stops.
"I just wanted them to make sure (they know) I'm still around," he said. "I'm watching them. They're fun kids to watch."

Body by Conley
After the game, Conley looked as if

Syracuse University quarterback Marvin Graves struggled through the early goings of Saturday's season opener against Vanderbilt. Graves rebounded though, and ended the game with 211 yards passing.
he were limping, but Pasqualoni said not to worry

Danny limps around every garne," he said. "He throws himself around so much that I don't know how he's not beat up and bumped and bruised. You'll see that and bumped week

Among Conley's 11 tackles were two solo. Conley was also credited with a pass breakup.

SU players suspended
Before Saturday's game, the Orangemen announced the susperision of wide receiver Kerry Ferrell and defensive back Tony Jones for two games.

Pasqualoni issued the suspensions because the players violated team rules, according to a press release.

The pair was charged with the theft of a student's property over the summer and they were charged with three felony counts.

They were also found guilty of violating the student code of conduct by the university's judicial board.

Block, but don't touch
Vanderbilt University's first possession on Saturday ended with one of the strangest punts you're likely to seeing this year.

The ball was originally snapped over Commodores punter David Lawrence's head. He retrieved the ball near the goal line and then punted over the outstretched arms of Wooden.

The Orangemen had a return on and it was Wooden's job to eliminate the possibility of a fake punt.

Due to a new rule interpretation, Wooden had no choice but to attempt to block the kick instead of tackling Lawrence.

Toxins may cause environmental disease

Many diseases once thought incurable can be healed by changing diet or living conditions, said Dr. Sherry Rogers, author of Tired or Tbxic.
Rogers spoke to an audience of 50 people in Marshall Auditorium about environmental illness on Monday night.
Toxic chemicals that cause environmental illness can be found in homes and offices, she said.

These are everywhere, we're exposed to them everyday," she said.
For example, they are found in carpets, dry cleaning solution, toothpaste, shampoo and home insulation, she said.
"We are a chemical world now, we use chemicals to our utmost advantage," she said.
"It's in so many places," she said. "Everything that is in the air is in our bloodstream

The body is unable to metabolize these chemicals, she said. Instead, they are deposited in arteries and body cells.
The most common target organ for environmental illness is the brain, Rogers said.
Symptorns include headaches, fatigue, depression, burning eyes and poor memory, she said.
"It can be any symptom, it depends on the individual person,", she said.

"The key to chemical sensitivity is how well the body detoxifies," Rogers said.

Since I wanted them to stop questioning me, I signed an affidavit saying I knew nothing about the fliers," she said. Chang said Nushwat and Karpinko with short hair hanging a paper outside the Hall of Languages.
"They asked me if I had ever been inside the Hall of Languages," she said. Chang said that SU Security assumed the Asian woman that had been described was her, since she was an activist and was found last semester putting up posters depicting members of the same sex kissing.

Chang, at first, claimed she was not involved in any way with the fliers, but later admitted that she was with the group that posted them. She maintained she did not actually post any.

Golden also wrote of a forum on free speech he was planning for this semester as a result of the incident.

I decided that the overriding interest was that the university understand free speech," Golden said. "The university has a high committment to free speech. But there are limitations.'
Golden said that the UJB made the right decision in finding Chang guilty.

Bloodthirsty bill kills  As time wears on, George Bush unwittingly titles himself "the incapacitation president."

Bush does more than get tough on crime in his bill, which passed 71-26 in the Senate in July and now awaits House approval, he literally kills it.

This extremist bill introduces about 50 new execution bills which instruct switch-throwers to systematically kill those who kill. This bill is undemocratic, and is an attempt to rid society of what Bush perceives to be social waste products - poor people and blacks, who are disproportionately slated for punishment by death for similar crimes.

Aside from being classist and racist, the bill, if enacted, would likely be ineffective. The murder rate doubled in the 12 states employing the death penalty between 1976 and 1986. But effectiveness probably isn't a priority.

Surveys bias poll appearances

Did you know that "Twenty-two percent of women like the way they look nude, while 68 percent of naked men are pleased with their appearance?" These statistics, compiled by Dolnick, appeared in an article "Is Mother Nature a Bigot?", appearing in the Aug. 18 Syracuse Herald-American. Well, I am impressed by what must have been a laborious and exhausting job of interviewing every man and woman able to see and with access to a WENDYE. unnamed researchers KAPLAN ADYOCATANG sion. Though rd imagine COMRNDCRNN most of us realize such ously can't refer to an entire population, the fact that statistics we hear or read do not specify, the tendency is to assume that the figure points to at least a majority of a general population. Among statistics that refer to percentages of people, these broad, unspecified percentages of people, these broad, unspecies such as "men" and "women" undoubtedly lead most men and women reading these bits of "trivia" to include themselves in these bits of "trivia" to include themselves if not those categories. Never mind that many, if not those categories. Never mind that many, in most, statistical studies examine relatively small numbers of subjects. Two hundred people, as an arbitrary example, isn't much of a representation for a population of more than 200 million, and are often limited to a relatively small geographical region-people living in New York state, for example, may indeed be influenced by different cultures, climates, nutrition, etc. than those in Florida, or Mexico, or Haiti.

Furthermore, these studies are frequently not confirmed by follow-up studies of the same subjects. How do we know that Dolnick's cited sample, for instance, didn't include people who, on the day of the interview or survey, had stuck to their diet or been complimented on their appearance such that their personal body image on that particular day was heightened?

On the flip side, is it not possible there may have been some subjects interviewed (or surveyed) during a hangover or on the first day of their menstrual period, factors which could certainly influence a negative response about body image? Even if asked to report on their general attitudes about their bodies, the fact that for some, these attitudes regularly fuctuate according to what the scale says or the number of gorgeous models they've viewed lately, suggests that a general attitude trend may not exist for certain individuals.

Beyond that, even if a particular study could somehow account for all men and women (to continue with Dolnick's example), what counts as "men" and "women"? Where in our process of assumptions do we draw the line between boy and man and girl and woman? If the researchers of Dolnick's cited study considered males and females of puberty age men and wornen, and therefore included some of their self-perceptions, I wonder how many subjects would rate their bodies positively when those bodies are suddenly bleeding, ejaculating, and sprouting hair and breasts.

It's likely that studies like these, when they're initially published in scholarly journals, do at least describe variables such as age range of subjects, size of sample, and geographic limitations. But how many of us read (or have even heard of Signs or Psychological Review before we flip on the TV or Review before we flip on the TV or pick up a newsstand magazine, tabloid, or local newspaper? It's from these latter forms of media that interpretations and simplifications of scholarly studies are made.

It's important to maintain a skeptical eye when reading or hearing these dangerously misleading second (or third or fourth-hand) statistical accounts. It's discouraging to think how many women, after reading Dolnick's article, may question what had been a positive self body image because they now see that they're supposedly in the minority, and perhaps therefore "deviant." We see ourselves as "men" and "women" just as the subjects of the study, by the simplified newspaper interpretation, were "men" and "women." As a result, these generalized statistics can and do shape the way we think about ourselves.

Letters  City politics angers

To the editor:
Why is mayor Tom Young stalling so long on his 18 appointments to the Syracuse Planning Commission (two), the Cable TV Advisory Committee (fifteen) and the Onondaga County Resource Recovery Agency (one)?

Some 75 people; including senior citizens, heard City Administrator Frank Lazarski on July 22 tell us of TV Cable appointments by August 12.

How do we hold bureaucrats accountable?

Since City attorney Frank Harrigan complains the city cannot find city residents willing to serve, the city should advertise the vacancies on the garbage, planning and cable TV panels.
In my view, the ad in the September Syracuse Peace Council Newsletter seeking letters of interest in the eighteen positions is not sufficient.

Legal advertising is supposed to be in a daily paper.

Animal rights defended

To the editor:
In reference to the Sept. 5 issue of The Daily Orange, we S.U.F.A.R. - Syracuse University For Animal Rights) wish to clarify a few points that we feel were incorrectly emphasized.

While S.U.F.A.R. is dedicated to "educating the public on animal rights issues," protesting remains a mere fraction of what we do. We have promoted vegetarian dinners, terminated the University Book Store's purchase of a line of animal purchase of a line of animal BIO 123 students that the dissection of fetal pigs is not dissection of fetal pigs is not mandatory. We also distribute mandatory. We also distribute numerous pamphlets and flyers numerous pamphlets and iyers as well as providing a variety of students with a source for of students with a source for animal rights literature.

On another issue, Jacquie Grieco was incorrectly quoted as claiming the problems she had were with the public and not berself. The problem of animal rights fall on everybody's shoulders. No one is exempt.

In regards to being "caught" wearing leather at protests, a majority of our activemembers have tried or succeeded at abstaining from the purchase or consumption of animalderived products. Regardless, those of us who own animalderived products (i.e. leather) continue to wear them because throwing them away would only waste a life that is already spent.
To avoid the issue, those being protested against often attack the protesters based merely on attire. It is for this reason we are conscious of our dress - it is certainly not for dear of being "caught."
S.U.F.A.R. looks forward to a productive and informative year of educating the $S U$ year of educating the SU community. We also look community. We also look forward to a year of good relations with The Daily Orange.

Networks go back to the basics

By ROB OWEN

 Asst. Lifestyle EditorA new television season is once again upon us, and the four television networks are readying their new series for the air History has proved that most wil likely flop. Only a precious few may be granted renewal for a second season.

After experimenting with unusual new shows last fall (Twin Peaks, The Flash, Cop Rock, Hull High, etc.) and seeing them nose-dive in the ratings, the networks are sticking with the tried and true. Sitcoms, action/adventure hours and reality programs populate the network schedules.

But some acclaimed programs remain on the air. Northern Exposure returns after a successful summer run of repeats, The Trials of Rosie ONeill is again in The Thials of Rosie ONeill is again in

Lenny Kravitz

Lenny Kravitz: Mama Said
This hippie hybrid pitches another retro-rock effort into the pop music arena with Mama Said. This, his second record, is refreshing in its symbolism. He is not a Tracey Chapman one-record wonder -he's got staying power.

 the lulling pop bal Till It's Over,' Till It's Over,'*Kravitz plays the creating vocal patterns suitable to both roles.
Kravitz, at this point in his career experiences an identity crisis of the best sort, as his androgynous attire and performance persona make him a cross between Janis Joplin, John Lennon and Jimi Hendrix.

His crisis, though amusing, does bog down his music, as in the psychedelic mire of "Fields of Joy" but he still manages to keep it listenable.
"All I Ever Wanted," the album's stand-out track, recalls "Let Love Rule" with its tortured integrity (Sean Ono Lennon on piano and Slash on guitar).

The song's vocals begin smoothly and deteriorate parallel to the depicted relationship, buoyed by a strong song structure.

Kravitz takes on all personas, ranging from lounge lizard in "What Goes Around Comes Around" to a Beatle-esque hypnotist in "The Difference Is Why."

Revisiting the past and altering it to satisfy current standards, Kravitz deliv ers one of the most promising records of the year.

Chris Whitley: Living With The Law
Though this record is Whitley's first, this bluesy outsider proves he's adept at taking the best of existing genres and creating his own.

Whitley's constants are meaty bass and a heavy dose of Southern guitars Sisters are also prominently featured in Good and Evil (Wednesday, 10:30 p.m.) with Teri Garr as the evil one and Margaret Whitton as the good one. Garr's character is out to take over mom's cosmetic company.

Last season's one-hour drama Gabriel's Fire returns with a new name, Pros and Cons (Thursday, 8 p.m.). James Earl Jones is back as ex-con Gabriel Bird and is joined by Richard Crenna. Crenna portrays a retired police officer turned private eye.

Reality television is still in vogue as FBI: The Untold Stories (Thursday, 9 p.m.) proves. Some dramatic re-creations of actual cases will be used. Pernell Roberts hosts.

Vocally, he rivals Bono sound country, with a white-trash edge: "Brother running powder money/ Daddy's somewhere on a drublo/In the hours after washing/I do my dreaming with a gun."

Otherwise, he's continually pulling tricks, careening from ominous Southern rock ("Make The Dirt Stick") to the or Chris Rea.

enough to enough to keep listeners awake, let alone engaged.

Play is set up as a play. probably because listeners wouldn't know what to feel without instructions. The concept album is better left to The Kinks, or best left in the 99-cent record bin.

The catchiest tune on the record is a self-rip-off of "Hourglass," which speaks volumes about the band's sense of songwriting on this album.

If you're laoking for Squeeze's typical up-tempo summertime music with amusing lyrics, look farther back in this band's catalog.

Violent Femmes: Why Do Birds Sing?

This band of sub-garage rockers poses an interesting quesers poses in their record title. And they unwittinoly provide an an swer: The birds really don't swant you to listen to this album want you to isten to this album edgy and entertaining Now edgy and entertaining. Now those moments are few and far between. It's a sad commentary when the highlight of a record is a marginally improved version of Culture Club's "Do You Really Want To Hurt Me?"

This predictable album proves mediocre in every respect and provides a logical regression from Violent Femmes III, which was a logical regression from the album before that, and the album before that, etc.

Simply put, a compilation of all the good songs from their past three records would produce a side and a half of worthwhile tunes.

The novelty has worn off, and fans who dug their first couple of records are unhappy. But, to put it in Femmes terms, "This is only a quess."

BISKUP

This season. the goalposts have been nartowed from 23 feet, 4 inches to the NFL dimen. feet, 4 inches to the NFL dimensions of $18-6$. sions of 18-6.

Biskup said he hasn't thought about the change but just continues to kick as if no changes were made.
"I tried not to even think about it and have that in the back of my mind," Biskup said. ${ }^{4}$ Hey, these goalposts are closer in. You've got to put the kick here. I go out there with the same approach. If you worry about that, you're not going to be successful."

The new goalposts have made the shorter kicks more difficult because the angle is cut more steeply.

Biskup said each season he changes how he prepares on the sidelines prior to attempting a Feld goal.

Last season he waited until the ball got to midfield before he would start warming up, but with so many reps his leg would be tired by the fourth quarter.
"I wait until the ball gets around the 35 -yard line," Biskup said. "I just start doing some warmup kicks and simulating being on the field. In my mind ervisioning the snap corming. (holder Mark) McDonald putting the ball down mind me kicking it."

Syracuse coach Paul Pasqualoni said one of the reasons Biskup is so successful is because of his conditioning and work ethic.

Biskup kicks on Mondays, Thursdays and Fridays and does drills on Thesday and Wedresday.
"He works hard everyday and he stays on schedule as far as what he's supposed to do," Pasqualoni said. "I think you saw the resalts of that (Saturdayl."

Biskup has had his ups and downs during his Syracuse career.

As a redshirt freshman. Biskup extended the NCAA re cord for consecutive PATis to 262 before missing one against Temple.

On the other end of the spectrum, Biskup won the 1989 Pamch Bowl for the Orangemen with a 26-yard field goal with only 25 seconds remaining.
"The Peach Bowl still sticks out." Biskup said. "You're talk. ing winning a major bowi game and not too many people have done that."

Biskup is gradually moving up the list of all-time Syrarase kicking leaders.

He currently is fifth in PAT's. sixth in PATs attempted, firh in field goals and seventh in field goals atternpted.

However, Biskup said records aren't foremost in his mind.
"(The records mean) nothing right now." he said. "Maybe right now," he said. "Maybe years down the road, I'll say Hey. Ive got this record or Pve got that record. I think the got that record." I think the biggest thing is to win games thats what we're here for that's what we're here for."

The biggest influence in Biskup'd kicking career has been former SU kicker Don McAulay. McAulay played for the Orangemen from 1983 - 1985 and was a part of the NCAA PAT record.

Biskup has been working with McAulay since he was in eighth grade. The two kickers speak frequently, Biskup said.
"McAulay's) been here before," he said. "I can talk to him and be can relate to what I'm thinking and what's going through my mind, that also helps."

"I think we all played great," Patton said. "The SW Missouri game was our toughest this season, but we pulled ourselves together and won. This year's team has great spirit and chernistry to go along with talent.

We are definitely improving." While team chemistry is an overused phrase in team sports, both Schulte and Patton feel that it is what has made this year's Orangewomen team successful.
"There is no doubt that this year's team has jelled better than those in recent years," Schulte said. "What this tearn lacks in talent it makes up for in chemistry and hustle."
"I wouldn't say that this team lacks the talent to compete with anyone," Patton said. "But we are getting along better than any other time I've been here. The attitude of the team has been great and that along with our talent will hopefully get us to the NCAA's."

Greek Council finds AXP guilty but will not punish

By KATHERINE DROUIN

Asf. News Editor
The Greek Judicial Board Tuesday found the Alpha Chi Rho fraternity guilty of violating the Code of Student Conduct, but said the fraternity had been disciplined enough by its national chapter.

T-shirts produced by members of Alpha Chi Rho were the subject of complaints filed May 2 by Gay, Lesbian Bisexual Student Association co president Charlie MeDonald. One complaint was filed with the university administration, the other with the Greek Judicial Board,
The front of the controversini T-shirts read "Homophobic and proud of it!" with a slash mark across a limp wrist. The back reads "Club faggots not seals!" with a crow brandishing a club over a prone, faceless figure.

Students plan restoration project  \section*{gy paula christian}

Students in Professor Frank Morigi's advanced interior design class are not only learning the skills needed to pass the class, but are also helping in the restoration of some of the area's historical buildings.

Morigi said he is approached each year by many area preservation groups that hope their buildings will be chosen as the class's restoration project.

His classes have won two major national design awards for restoration plans and in 1986 they received an award for renovation designs on a turn-of-thecentury firehouse, he said.
The dilapidated Memorial Chapel in Oakwood Cemetery was the focus of the classes' spring semester.project, he said.

Morigi said the Heritage Coalition and other preservation groups called on him asking that the students' designs help secure funding necessary for the chapel's restoration
The class researched the 112-year-old chapel and designed plans to restore and renovate it, he said.

Built before the highway
The chapel was built by Joseph Lyman Silsbee and served as the entrance to the front cemetery until it was closed off when Route 81 was built. The chapel is visible from the highway.

The chapel was in very poor condition because it was being appropriated by the derelict homelens," Morigi said. "The woodwork was being tom apart and used for firewood."
Students proposed several ideas for the chapel and the historic cemetery which would allow people to be present at all times and prevent any future vandalism, Morigi said.

The chapel could house the offices of area preservation groups and could also area preservation groups and could also serve as a museum with pictures displayserve as miseum with pictures displaying the history of Syraildings." Morigi said.
"Other ideas were to turn the chapel into a community center with lectures, theatricals, music and concerts taking place there," he said.
Morigi also mentioned planting gardens and conducting walking tours of the historic cemetery and park. He said there was also the possibility of having wedding ceremonies in the park.

This is not just a cemetery - it is a monument to the history of the city," he

In the complaints, MeDonald charged that the homophobic sentiments expressed on the shirts were a violation of Section 2 of the Code of Student Conduct.

The administrative complaint eventually led to an investigation by the Alpha Chi Rho national chapter and the expulsion of 18 brothers from the fraternity

National directive

Action required by the national chapter includes a mandatory sensitivity training program, 100 hours of cornmunity service and visits to the house from national representative each month.
The house will also be reviewed by the national chapter every semester for two years.

We nlways like to have more happen, said GLBSA treasurer Bill Taroli after the hearing. "But we're very pleased. We think this is a wonderful first step on campus by the Greek Council."

The board recommended that the sensitivity training be extended to the entire Inter-Fraternity Council, but otherwise said that no further sanctions were needed.
However, IFC promised a full investigation of the chapter if there were any more charges of harassment or other incidents.

The decision reached Tuesday night conlicts with conclusions reached by the Syracuse University administration. The administration ruled that the shirts did administration ruled that the not violate the Code of Conduct Greek Judicial Board Chief Justice Chris Licht said the university administration should have taken a stronger stance on the issue.

Annoyed with SU

"I'm annoyed that the university was afraid to take any position on this," Licht said.

The following is the official statement issued by the Greek Judicial Board in response to the complaint filed against the Alpha Chi Rho fraternity:

We, the Greek Judicial Board, find Alpha Chi Rho guilty of violating the Code of Student Conduct Section Two as it relates to the greek community as a whole. We feel the steps taken by the Alpha Chi Rho national fraternity are appropriate and contribute to a positive direction of change.
We do, however, feel that the university could have taken a more active role in resolving this issue, because : extends well beyond the geek comextends wel beyond the geek consity community, including faculty, adcommunity, including faculty, adthe greek community in the resolution of this campusencompassing is sue.

Shaw said tuition increases over the next three years will help cover financial aid and help cover financial aid and investments in hew student ac tivities but will have negligible impact on the budget's shortfall. At a press conference Wednesday morning, Shaw predicted a 6 percent tuition increase and a 4 percent salary increase.
"It's impossible to develop a plan where there is no tuition increase," he said.

Although the university's budget is 52 to 54 percent based on tuition, a hike alone will not close the gap with the shortfall.

The university has no intentions of lowering its admission standards to increase student enrollment.

Stefanko said that though the brothers living in the house this sernester were not responsi ble for the T-shirts, they realize they have to take responsibility
"We feel slightly wronged," Stefanko said. "But we will take moral responsibility (for the T-shirts)."
"grieving," he said, as programs are cut back and the university will take advantage of retiring staff.

During his senate address, he outlined several goals to reshape the university: more selective resource allocation to student programs; evaluation of SU would be limited to the criteria of quality, centrality and demand and more emphasis on areas with strong student interest.
"This is both good educational policy and good business," Shaw added.
Shaw also stressed support for research and graduate education. "We will carefully scrutinize expenditures in these areas," he said.

Shaw explained three phases leading to a final plan.
"The first two phases will provide the campus community with opportunities for full discussion of the issues and the plans for addressing them," he said. Phase one will begin Sept. 11 and end Nov. 15.

Abstract

By this time next year. 32 Kappa Sigma brothers will have a new place to call home. Plans are underway for construction of a chapter fouse on Walnut Place between East Adams and Hace between Ea The fraternity brothers are excited about the new house. which is the first to have been built on campus since the Lambda Chi Alpha house was constructed two years ago. "It's great that it's the construction) finally going to happen, and I wish some of the guys who were here in the past could share it with us," said senior Frank C. Nickodemus. a Kappa Sigma brother. "This is due partly to their hard work." The three-story, Georgian brick house will feature front and rear porches. The property will also have a garden and parking spaces

The interior will include a library, which will also serve as a meeting room, a study lounge and a recreation room in addi tion to rooms for the brothers.
Construction of the house wa financed by alumni fundraising and contributions.

Support from national "Strong support and determi. nation from the national headquarters and alumni were criti cal in making the house a reality," said Steve Gharibian. Kappa Sigma's rush chairman.
The SU chapter was originally established in 1906 , and was rechartered in 1989. Cur rently, the fraternity is using a house on Euclid Avenue as its post on campus, although only six brathers live there permanently.

The chief architects of the project are SU graduates.

Current chapter brothers as-

SU: Tightening its belt

Syracuse University is shrinking.
During a University Senate meeting last night, Chancellor Kenneth Shaw unveiled plans designed to prepare administration officials, students and faculty for a smaller university, which may include (surprise, surprise) a tuition increase and the removal of the School of Nursing. Other cuts in student services may fall in the areas of residence, dining and health services as well as bookstore allotments.

Cuts in these areas, which are particularly weak already, will affect SU students in a negative way.
The food in dining halls already leaves much to be desired. Residence halls are a mess. More cuts would only impede their ability to keep bathrooms clean and the halls swept. The bookstore charges exorbitant prices now; cuts in financial support will surely cause students more financial burden.

And all students know how long it takes to get their temperatures checked at the Health Center. Losing what little competence it now has may give students high blood pressure.

Chancellor Shaw should deeply consider whether these are the right cuts to be made at the university. If we tighten the university's belt too much, we may squeeze all the good from it.

LETTERS

Attack theories, not individuals

To the editor:
This letter is in response to Gerald T. Edwards' letter entitled "Academic freedom should prevail," which appeared in the Sept. 10 edition of The Daily Orange.

Edwards opposes punishment by the university of Alpha Chi Rho fraternity members responsible for the gay-bashing T-shirts that read "Homophobic and proud of it, club faggots not seals."

Edwards is equating academic freedom with expression of a discriminatory and violent idea.

He warns that without this form of "academic freedom" there will be no "intellectual growth." He goes on to say that these self-labelled homophobic individuals who "believe the message" (i.e. club Yaggats, notseals) should voice marginalizing a minority that their "moral opinions" to counteract the "demands of LGGC.for intellectual and social conformity in an extreme sense."

The validity of Edwards' argument lies in his advocacy of academic freedorn and intellectual growth. However, his application of these his application of these principles to the AXP gaybashing issue is historically invalid. Intellectual growth does not result in the majority demoralizing and Edwards further suggests that without such individuals expressing moral opinions"this country would no longer produce individuals like Albert Einstein, Ralph Nader and Thurgood Marshall."
poses no threat to the wellbeing of any persons.

Allow me to draw an exaggerated comparison. Substitute Nazis for AXPs and "Anti-Semitic and proud of it, club Jews not seals' for "Homophobic and proud of it, club faggots not seals."

A constructive alternative for those wishing to oppose a group or express nonconformity is to attack the ideology behind the group and not the people. Those wishing to oppose homosexuality should attack homosexuality on a theoretical level, not homosexuals.

Class grades do count  students who develop

To the editor:
'This letter is in response to the Sept. 9 article on Professor William Coplin's attitude towards grades.
I find many flaws in his theory that I would like to address.

Coplin believes that students should concentrate on getting a good education. I completely agree. That is what we, as agree.
I do not agree that getting good grades "denotes negativity." It does not have to be either good grades or a good education. They are interrelated and grades should measure a student's knowledge.
If this is not the case, then the system must be changed. Students should not be told to not worry about grades. This is in essence what Coplin is saying.
saying.
His statement that a person who receives an $F$ in a course probably learned the most is ridiculous. Students who receive $F$ 's are those who don't even go to class - not those. whotry hard and keep making mistakes. Coplin is basically telling students it is OK to fail a class.
I also do not agree with Coplin's statement about student/teacher relationships. On one hand, he says students and professors should and professors should saym that becoming friendly with professors is "grade grubbing" and destructive
He is stereotyping all relationships with professors as "brown nosers" as "brown nosers.
I believe that relating directly with a professor enhances a student's education a great deal. If this results in a better grade, then I think it is because the student gained a better understanding of the course through the ## relationship.

In addition, Coplin says grades cause students to compete against each other instead of work together. While I believe it is very important for students to cooperate toward a common goal, competition can often bring out the very best in a student. Sometimes students get results that would not have been achieved without the push of competition.

Competition is a fact of life in the real world; why shouldn't it be in the University?

Good grades can give students a much-needed edge at such a large university, both in applying to graduate school and the job market in these times of economic recession.
While I agree that if you are not getting the best grades. you may still be getting a good education, the opposite is not true.

I think professor Coplin needs to rethink his theory and the message he is sending out to students.

The Syracuse University College for Human Development (CHD) is introducing a revamped and "innovative" Human Ecology course this year, according to Susan Crockett, the college's dean.

Assistant Vice Chancellor for Instructional Development Robert Diamond said, "It's a significant change from what freshmen courses have looked like."
A poll conducted last year of freshmen and faculty asked how the program could be improved. These suggestions were taken into account in the new designs. The course was designed by a CHD task force with help from the Center for Instructional Development.
During the design, Crockett said members of the task force asked themselves, "What would be the best course we could design for freshmen?"
lectures and labs
The new course will be made up of two parts: lectures and laboratories.
The lectures will be given by a variety of speakers, Crockett said. Some of the lectures will address leisure time for college students, intimacy, decision mak ing, consurner policy, child, family and social policy and balancing multiple roles.

In labs, students will meet with professors in smaller groups to discuss the course's specific subjects.

These labs are meant to get students working in smaller groups. Each lab will be taught by a different professor, Crackett said.

This is to expose the student to different learning and teaching styles, she said.

The labs will cover severn areas such as word processing writing, group presentation, critical thinking, study habits, informational problem solving note taking and library use.
To make sure the instructors teach the same curriculum new teactbooks and manuals were written.
The course instructors also monitor the students' grades so they may aid them if problems arise. Students with academic problems will be referred to academic advisers.
"These skills will help them through the remainder of their college life and professional careers," Crockett said.

Diamond said, "It's helping them develop learning skills that will be crucial here and after they graduate."

A random selection of students will be asked to evaluate each lecture throughout the year.

A new study shows that a potentially fatal condition known as water intoxication has risen significantly amone infants.

According to the study, ingesting a large arnount of water in a short period of time can flood brain cells and cause them to swell.

Infants who are not breast-fed. especially those in poor families, are at particular risk. A common cause of water intoxication occurs when poor parents give babies water after they run out of formala.

Hybrid trees  yield ethanol

A new breed of poplar trees may be a vital source of ethanol, an environmentally sound alternative to gasoline, by the turn of the century.

Researchers are developing a strain of quick-growing poplars, one acre of which could yield 800 gallons of ethanol. Under ideal conditions, these trees grow faster than any in the world's northern temperate zone.

Ethanol, which is made from renewable materials, produces fewer waste materials than gasoline and therefore reduces air pollution.

The main disadvantage is the prohibitively high price.

Clinic treats anxious students

By OMAR ALI

Design Ediror
"You may begin," dictates the proctor stantly the front of the auditorium. Inthroughout rustling of test papers echo around you turn to the first page of the exam.

The questions stare you in the face, waiting patiently for answers as your eyes wander around the page. Your mind begins to wander but then switches off like a radio.

The anxiety sets in.
For most students at Syracuse University, test anxiety emerges around midterms and finals. Most students are able to overcome the clammy hands and butterflies as the exam proceeds.
But a few students allow test anxiety to overwhelm them, preventing them from doing their best, according to Mark Briggs.

Briggs is the director of The Fear Clinic, a service of the Alternative Behavioral Institute on E. Genesee Street.

The private-practice clinic specializes in the treatment of anxiety disorders, offering specialized and individuahized treatment for a wide range of anxiety treatment, syndromes.
"Most students who come from the university tend to seek treatment for test anxiety," Briggs said. "It's one of the students' biggest phobias."
Phobias, stress and disorders
The clinic also offers treatment for generalized anxiety, stress, phobias and obsessive-compulsive disorders.

With a professional staff, Briggs, a licensed psychotherapist and certified social worker, uses a variety of techniques including psychotherapy, hypnosis and relaxation therapy to treat disorders.
"We utilize cognitive, behavioral and relaxation therapies to help patients "Tercome their problems," Briggs said national level, which The Fear Clinic individualizes for each person who comes to us for assistance."

According to Briggs, estimates show about 10 percent of the general population suffers from some type of anxiety disorder, ranging from the fear of public speaking to shyness and test anxiety.

Anxiety can cause physical symptoms such as dizziness, chest pains, digestive disorders and shortness of breath, Briggs said.

Victims of anxiety disorders are at an increased risk for heart disease, high blood pressure and circulatory problems. They are also prone to alo suicide.

A way to gain relief  "Visits to a physician or mental health

These days, if your complexion is like Snow White's, you may not only be more attractive; you may also be healthier.

Fall and winter may be inevitable, but the current Indian summer is guaranteeing at least a few more days of warm weather. For those seeking those last summer rays during the next few days, there are some things to keep in mind about the dangers of tanning.

Healthy tan or deadly tan?
Since the early 1980s, people have become more interested in health and having healthy bodies. Along with diets, Nautilus gyms and vitamin pills, tans are generally considered signs of health and fitness.
However, doctors have begun to argue that the phrase "healthy tan" is an oxymoron.
The AAD explains that the body is reacting defensively when the skindarkening process takes place.
When exposed for a period of time to sunlight, the skin produces a pigment sun's ultraviolet rays.

Peg Camp, the Syracuse American Cancer Society communications director, goes so far as to condemn sunbathing. calling it "foolish." She says it takes very little to develop skin cancer down the road.
"Skin cancer is a result of cumulative exposure to the sun," Camp said. "Just one or two severe sunburns can lead to developing cancer when you're 40 or 50 ."

Realizing that you have skin cancer is often not easy. The problem, says Camp. is that most people tend to disregard changes in the complexion of an area of skin, specifically the moles on a person's body.
"If something appears (on your skin), or as soon as a mole changes, a person or as soon a doctor immediately.

Changes in a mole can include increases in size, color, itchiness or rough surface and bleeding.

Prevention's the best cure
Fortunately, skin cancer can be cured illnesses, the best medicine for skin cancer is preventive measures. The AAD has concluded that 80 percent of the harm caused by overexposure to the sun happens during the first 18 years of a person's life.

Camp says despite the coming change of seasons, people still need to be careful outdoors.
"Of course, the intensity of the sun lessens in the fall," Camp said. "But again, the cumulative effect is what we're concerned with... You can get a sunburn even when it's cloudy out, so you have to be careful."

Camp recommends that people wear long sleeves if they are going to be outside for a significant period of time. People should avoid sumbathing between 10 am . and 3 p.m., the time when the sun is at its strongest.

Wearing sunblock is also a tip she gives people. It's especially appropriate gow, as sking season is just around the corner.

According to Briggs, students can prevent test anxiety by avoiding procrastinationandexeessive use of alcohol or caffeine.
"Most importantly, give yourself time to get over your anxiety." Briggs said.

The Fear Clinic and the AIternative Behavioral Institute began sponsoring the first Phobics Anonymous in Central New York in August.

In addition, Briggs suggests keeping a positive frame of mind and acknowledging the anxiety, while staying focused on the task at hand.

Phobics Anonymous is a national organization of anxietydisorder sufferers who come tosether for mutual help, Briggs said.
"The program is modeled after Alcoholies Anonymons, which employs 12 steps to help patients overcome their addiction," Briggs said.

The Alternative Behavioral Institute, which administers The Fear Clinic, has aerved Central New York since 1972 .

It regularly counsels patients dealing with eating disorders, depression, addictions, obesity and sexual problems, as well as maxiety.

The clinic is a member of the Anxiety Disorder Association of America, a national organization based in Rockville. Md.
"The (Anxiety Disorder) Association is the premier organization that advocates the diagnosis, research and treatment of anxiety disorders," Briggs said. "People seeking treatment of anxiety-related problems can contact the association and be referred to clinics on a local level."

Los Angeles radio deejays Mark Thompson and Brian Phelps try to make the jump to television with their fulfillment oflifelong dreams in The Advenofures of Mark and Brion (Sun day, 7 p.m.). day, 13 -year-old boy suspects his small town may be entering The Twillight Zone in Eerie, Indiant (Sunday, 7:30 p.m.). Omri Katz stars as the young boy whose overactive imagination runs rampant ... or does it? James Garner is Man of the People (Sunday, 8 p.m.) when he is named to fill his late ex-wife's city council seat. Unfortunately for the people of the town, he's a con-artist.

And Robert Guillaume plays a detective in Venice, Calif. in the new sitcom Paciffc Station (Sunday, 8:30 p.m.).

Which new shows will survive and which will fail is at the mercy of the Nielsen ratings. But, based on past TV seasons, don't be surprised if most of these new shows are perma nently off the air by January.

CANES

"We're getting some confidence and we're starting to think we can compete physically with can compete kinds of teams."

Senior tight end Mark Chmura is a bright spot for the Eagles, having hauled in 11 catches, for 143 yards in the first catches for two games.

According to Coughlin, BC is on the right track.
"We have some outstanding players, just not enough of them." Coughlin said. "We're a young team but we certainly are going to get some great experience.
"You can't achieve national prominence without playing the types of teams we are playing. One man show

In most cases, a coach does not look for bright spots from his punter. Ask Temple coach his punter. A Jerry Berndt.

Temple punter Trent Thompson was named Big East Special Teams Player of the Week for his efforts in the Owls $41-3$ loss in Alabaina 41-3 loss in Alabama.

Thompson punted for 297 yards on six kicks, including a long of 58 and two other kicks that were downed inside the 'Bama 10-yard line. Berndt is hoping Thompson doesn't ever win the award again.
${ }^{\text {"Obbiously }}$ I wish Trent didn't have the opportunity to be player of the week, but we were proud of the job he did," Berndt said. "About the only positive part of the game for us was Trent the game

West Virginia running back Adrian Murrell was selected Offensive Player of the Week for his 152-yard, 31-carry performance in the Mountaineers 24-17 victory over Bowling Green.
Defensive back Steve Israel of Pittsburgh was named Defensive Player of the Week. Israel scored on an 81-yard interception return and again on a 35-yard fumble recovery tospark the Panthers to a 35-14 win against Southern Mississippi. Israel had a third touchdown nullified his 73 -yard punt return.

Payback time?

Pittsburgh coach Paul Hack ett spoke with revenge on his mind when talking about this week's Big East clash with Temple.

Last season, Temple handed the Panthers a 28-18 defeat at Pitt Stadium. That loss, which was No. 4 of Pitt's five-game season-ending slide, was a game Hackett would like to forget.
"This game has a lot of significance for us since Temple took it to us a year ago here, and basically embarrassed us," Hackett said. "We were a very undisciplined team last season."
Temple coach Jerry Berndt must regroup his squad for its second straight road game against a ranked team.
Quarterback Alex Van Pelt has led the Panthers to a 2-0 start and a No. 25 ranking.
"Van Pelt is without question one of the premiere quarterbacks in the country and their defense is playing with a reckless abandon," Berndt said. "We have our work cut out for us. We just have to try to regain our composure."

Paul Young, who took 14 shots overall, also had many close calls early. He said the team was starting to get frustrated.
"It was frustrating because Colgate's been an Achilles heel over the years, because we have never been able to beat them," Young said. "At the start of the game, it seemed like it would turn out that way again."

The Onondaga County Antique Dealers Association will hold its annual show and sale to benefit local charities and historic landmarks.

The event will be Sept. 14, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.. and Sept. 15 from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.. at St . Michael's Parish Center, Route 175 in Syracuse. A $$ 2.50$ donation will be collected, and parking is free.

Day care worker training scheduled The Onondaga County Child Care Council announces its fall session for training family day care providers. The 10 -week session will begin on Sept. 24 and run through Nov. 26. Topics include parent/provider communication, health and safety, operation and management, recordkeeping and taxes, child development, abuse and maltreatment and children's play.

The free training will be at Andrews Memorial United Methodist Church in North Syracuse from 6:30 to 9:00 p.m. Free child care is available on the premises, and a certificate will be awarded upon completion of the course.

The training, for new and experienced providers, will help to fulfill the 15 -hour requirement mandated by the new Family Day Care Registration System. For further information and pre-registration, call 472-6919.

Catholic Charities

 trains volunteersThe fall session of Catholic Charities' Volunteers in Parish Service (V.I.P.S.) training program will begin Sept. 24. Classes will be held each Tuesday until Nov. 5 from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The course, for parish outreach workers and human development volunteers, is open to all, regardless of religious or agency affiliation. The program will cost $$ 40$. The first session will be at Catholic Charities, 1654 W. Onondaga St, Syracuse.
game, Colgate started putting on some pressure. At 24:47, midfielder Brian Wicall just missed the crossbar.

SU coach Dean Foti said the Orangemen let Colgate back into the game by not scoring early.
"I think we could have made it easy for ourselves if we had finished some of the early opportunities that we had," Foti said. "Any time you let a team that's that athletic and that physical remain in the game, you kind of create problems for yourself."

The Orangemen started out strong in the second half also, but they couldn't put it past Colgate goalie Keith Sipes, who finished the game with a careerhigh 19 saves.

Sipes' biggest save occurred just six minutes into the second half when Nino Galich broke in alone. Sipes was able to make a diving glove stop.

SU goalie Steve Pollnow also played a strong game. At 28:58 of the second half, Pollnow made a glove save off a Scott Coleman shot to preserve the scoreless tie.
Foti said that Pollnow, who had 10 saves, was the biggest bright spot for the Orangemen.

I thought that Steve Pollnow played a great game," Foti said. "He was our attack, he was our defense. With his 75 yard punts he was our attack. With his stops, his saves, he was our defense, too."

The overtime started with play going back and forth. The first good chance came with the frst good chance came

When Young got the opportunity, he didn't disappoint most of the 885 people in attendance.
"We needed a little luck, and we had the luck," Young said. "I was able to put it away. It was a great team effort.
Colgate put on a lot of pres sure throughout the remainder of overtime. Pollnow stopped all preserve the $1-0$ victory.
"Basically, inovertime, you've just got to concentrate more on helping out the guys, telling them where to go, because everyone's getting fatigued," Pollnow said. "You just have to make sure that they're marking their men."
The Orangemen will try to continue their winning ways on Saturday against Big East rival Boston College at 12:30 p.m. in Boston.

That does it.
After watching the Atlanta Braves fire a combined no-hitter against the San Diego Padres on Wednesday night, I'm convinced that the Braves will win the National League West.

The Dodgers can pack it in. No matter how hot Darryl Strawberry gets, and no matter how many strikeouts Ramon Martinez chalks up, they won't win. It's that simple, in the majo rookie who hasn't been in the majors four weeks; and Alejandro Pena, who one month ago as a New York Met had no idea he'd be in a pennant race.Are they serious?

The Braves are getting MVP years from both Ron Gant and Terry Pendleton, and that will make a difference because players having those kind of years get the clutch hits in the big games.

Pendleton's home run was the only run in Wednesday's $1-0$ win.

Dave Justice would be the Braves' third MVP candidate if he didn't miss 50 games with a back strain. But his sweet swing is on an unstoppable tear.

The Dodgers aren't getting a big year from anybody in the lineup. Several players had big first halves, but it seems like the Dodgers are getting shut out at least once a week.

Brett Butler can't get on base. Juan Samuel has tailed off and he's made it public that he wants out of los Angeles come next year. Strawberry hasn't been worth half the $$ 4$ million salary he's making.

And then there's Eddie Murray, who since July has been a consistent member of the "Who's Not" club on member of the whorite television station.
Also working for the Braves is the Ted Turner factor. Something, someday is bound to go right for this man. (He's already committed his social life to Jane Fonda. Oops.)

Turner, who will soon marry Fonda in color, has taken a hands-off approach this year for the first time.
Good thing, because the man he hired to reshape the ballclub, John Scherholz, has made himself the leading general manager of the year candidate.
The last time the Braves resembled even mediocrity was 1982 when they won the NL West behind MVP Dale Murphy.

Now, with a pitching staff dubbed the "young guns" and a home crowd whose tomahawk cry during games is so energetic that it gives me goosebumps, the Braves can do no wrong.

Tom Glavine, an 18 -game winner and the leading Cy Young Award candidate in the NL, pitches for the Braves on Friday night when the Dodgers come in for three games. Fifteen-game winner Siteve Avery pitches for Atlanta on Sunday.
Los Angeles would win the division if it played every game at home. But it doesn't. And wouldn't you just like to see Tommy Lasorda lose something more than weight?

Abstract

After being shutout in its first two games of the season, and playing to a $0-0$ tie through regulation Wednesday night at the Carrier Dome against Colgate, it at the Carrier Dome against Colgate, it seemed like the Syracuse University seemed like the Syracuse

That was until Paul Young scored 2:17 into overtime to give the Orangemen, 1-2, a 1 - 0 victory.

Young scored the goal on a penalty kick after a Red Raider was called for a hand-ball.

Colgate head coach Mike Doherty said he didn't agree with the call. "It's overtime, tie ball game, and it's in a questionable area (on the upperarm)," Doherty said. "You don't call that. You don't decide a game on that.

Early on, it appeared like the game wouldn't have to be decided in overtime. The Orangemen came out of the gate flying with several scoring opportunities. As had happened in the Orangernen's first two games, losses to Duke and North Carolina State, SU had many near misses

The first near miss occurred at 7:30 of the first half, when Eric Puls broke

Preparing for a game for most athletes is a mix of nervous tension, and occasionally, some rather strange rituals.

Viewers pay for SU football

BY KRISTINA SAUERWEIN

Syracuse University football fans who want to watch this Saturday's game on television will have to dig into their wallets.
Cooke CableVision will broadcast SU's away games against the University of Maryland, tomorrow and Tulane University. Sept. 28, as pay-per-view events, according to Mary Frances, Cooke CableVision program manager.

It will cost subscribers $$ 20$ to see one game or $$ 36$ for both and season-ticket-holders $$ 18$ or $$ 32$, she said. Bars will be charged $$ 10$ times the number of their maximum fire capacity.
"The only alternative to pay-per-view is not to show the game on television," said Jake Crouthamel, SU's athletic game on Contracts the College Football Association, of which SU is a member, made with ABC And ESPN limit the times and distributions for live commercial games, Crouthamel said.

To show a live night game on commercial TV, other than on ESPN, the kickoff time has to be after 8 p.m. EST. Kickoff time for tomorrow's game is 7 p.mn. EST., Crouthamel said.
"Pay-per-view is the only way people in New York state can watch the game on television," he said

For an SU football game to be broadcast on commercial TV, it would have to be at noon on Saturday. The game would only be shown in the markets of the competing teams, and would conllict with the Big East's broadcasts. Crouthamel said.
"SU doesn't want to compete against the Big East games," he said. "That is not even an option."

SU's game against Tulane is being offered as a pay-perview event to benefit subscribers, Crouthamel said.

The Tulane game makes the pay-per-view package more attractive," he said. "Two games are better than one.

He said pay-per-view is ideal for a group of fans.
"One TV can accommodate a lot of people," he said. "People living in the dorms, for example, can pay a buck apiece and watch two games."

No commercials will interrupt the games, Crouthamel said.
"That"s one of the beauties of pay-per-view," he said. "The telecast doesn't get interrupted every two or three minutes with advertisements.

Last year, Syracuse University stadents threw away 6.72 million unused napkins, according to a University Food Services study.
Food services and the New York Public Interest Research Group have joined together to stop another 50,000 pounds of napkins from being wasted this year. said Bob Merli, project coordinator of NYPIRG.

The two groups have placed signs on napkin dispensers around campus urging students to take one napkin and not a handful, he said.
"Thaking more than one or two napkins and not using them is like throwing away trees," Merli said.

Saving napkins will also save money, according to Mark LoParco, an associate director of food services. He said SU lost $$ 4,032$ in unused napkins. "It's like throwing dollar bills in the garbage," he said.

The project was started in 1990 at Brockway Dining Hall, Loparce said. Brockway Dining Hall, Lofarco said.

Loparco said that food services is planking another study during this year to determine the effect of the signs.

He said that the program depends on peer pressure now. "Students are more concerned about the environment," he said. 'It's not a trendy thing to be concerned about - it's a necessary hing."

Viewing as humanitarian aid
The Israeli government views the loan guarantee as a request for humanitarian aid that shouldn't be coupled to the political issue of settlements.

Emotions can take over when discus sion turns to Middle East politics. In A Concise History of the Middle East, Arthur Goldschmidt, Jr. said it was in this region where the world's first cities rose, along with "the first governments, and the earliest religious and legal systems. Writing and the preservation of records were Middle Eastern inventions."

Despite this long and rich history, today's focus on the region is a primer on conflict: Arab vs. Israeli, Arab vs.

The cycle of violence see
The cycle of violence seems uncompro mising in this land where we often ignore what Goldschmidt calls "the quest for dignity and freedom of articulate peoples ... who have endured centuries of subjugation to outsiders

A number of political analysts have noted that the United States, due to its economic and military resources, is in a position to alter the level of benefit and risk for the states in the region by making bilateral commitments to them.

The ability to deter aggression is a major factor in the equation of Israel's willingness and ability to trade land for peace. During the Gulf War, 39 missiles struck Israeli cities and Israel did not strike back. Ze'ev Schiff, editor of the Tel Aviv daily, Ha'aretz, wrote in Foreign Affairs, "Israeli enemies witnessed not only the missile attacks but also the immediate U.S. aid to Israel in the form of batteries of Patriot missiles, the services of its satellites warning of missile launchings and the heavy bombing of the Iraqi launching sites throughout the war."
That support, Schiff points out, is also an aspect of deterrence.

Perhaps the Bush administration should refrain from pressuring either side, but act in ways that inspire confidence.

The Washington Post has suggested that Shamir is torn between pressure from the Bush administration to say yes to a peace conference and pressure from right-wing Likud Party members to say "ho. is caught between memories and responsibility - the memory of Jewish peril, the responsibility to seize a moment in history that could deflect another peril.'

Show us true colors

Will the real Clarence Thomas please stand?
By downplaying his past decisions and statements and offering nothing but tempered, non-committal suggestions at confirmation hearings, Thomas abandons his past and leaves us questioning what the future will bring.

He fails to articulate his view of abortion. In fact, he says he has no view of abortion. Get out the shovel. There's not a person in the United States who holds no opinion on this pressing issue

Thomas' performance at the hearings demonstrates his willingness to play political games to win a Supreme Court seat. He follows David Souter's tight-lipped lead, and will likely be appointed on the basis of what he doesn't say. Both learned from the overzealous Robert Bork's mistake.

When Thomas does speak, disaster strikes. Thomas suffers from Bushitus, the condition of saying things in plain English and then attempting to explain them away in not so plain" English, or reneging completely once the words no longer suit the audience.

The New York Times reports Thomas said he may have only skimmed a Lewis Lehrman article he referenced in a speech he made in 1987 about "Why Black Americans Should Look To Conservative Policies."

He said the article was valid in its explanation of the right to life as a "splendid example of applying natural law."

With obfuscated explanations like this, God only knows what Thomas will do if appointed.

But Bush nominates only those people who share his narrow ideology and systematically rejects those who do not. That trend, coupled with Thomas' past record, makes it safe to assume he will be less than an openminded democratic wonder on the bench.

Disallowing faculty or students to publicly display such "ideas" will not stop intellectual growth on campus. In fact, the act of outlawing it will terch those individuals that it is wrong.

Does he know that this great Jewish scientist left his native Germany precisely found refuge (thank Cod) in

I don't think that the university should further punish Alpha Chi Rho. Chancellor Shaw would make a statement condemning this act. He should enconirage some act. He should encourage sone Others, such as Connoisseurs Comestibles (a small cheese pizza and a bottle of Dom Perignon) are as expensive as $$ 104.95$.

We started with steamed clams ( $$ 1.49$ /dozen). which seemed to be a specialty, and garlic-cheese and regular pizza rolls ($2 each).

The clams were indeed delicious. The appetizer, reminis cent of summertime clambakes, was in and of itself worth the trip especially in a region where good seafood is hard to come by.

They were clean, tender and had a unique flavor. Some spices had obviously been added to the water in which they were boiled.

The pizza rolls were made on french bread. Both were smothered with melted cheese.

The garlic variety had just the right combination of butter and garlic, and the regular one was generously covered with a sweet tomato sauce.

Main courses prove 'decent'
It was difficult to decide on entrees as the menu offered a wide variety of foods.

Judging by the appetizers, We expected the main course to be better. However, no one was disappointed. The food was, well,

Diners enjoy Arturo's atmosphere and "decent Italian food."

All dinners came with a salad and homemade minestrone soup. The soup was superb with its blend of spices (parsley, oregano, basil), meatballs, sausage. zuechini, noodles and beans.

The salad, too, was satisfying with its healthy variety of vegetables such as peppers, onions, carrots, tomatoes and lettuce.

The first entrce we chose was Baked Fake Ziti ($5.95). Arturo claims it's "one shell of a dish" and with his gift for making red sauce, we agree.

The Squishy Squash (6.95). "nothing like eggplant parmesan because it's zucchini, not eggelant and steamed, not fried" was good.
The zucchini could have used more seasoning but the side of pasta was tasty.
The Chicken ($8.95) and Veal
($11.95) Artcaise, too, were decent.

The veal was definitely not worth the extra $3. It had a stingy, overcooked texture. The chicken was lighter.

Both had a sweet breading hat tasted like fried dough. The dishes were cooked in an herbed butter sauce, served over fettuc ini and topped with fresh whole mushrooms and broccoli.
Both were a little bland but after we added salt and pepper. they were OK amaretto and key lime pies. Arturo didn't skimp on the serving sizes here, either.

We couldr't decide which dessert was better. The rich chocolate amaretto pie was like a light mousse and was topped with whipped cream and chocolate chips.

The key lime pie was refreshingly tart, a perfect compliment to the sweet graham cracker crumb crust in which it was baked.

It took a while to get our appetizers and our check, but the main course came quickly.

We didn't mind the delays, though, as we felt at home in the college crowd atmosphere.

One key label of the alternative industry, Rough Trade, also collapsed under financial strain.
Fewer albums being released
Subsequently, the alternative industry is going against its nature, releasing a conservatively small number of new albums. The result is a limited choice for the consumer.
Although albums may be hard to find, they're still out there. Here are four albums worth hunting down:

Metallica Metallica Only a few years ago, Metalica found itself, along with several other bands, on the chopping block before the Parent's Music Resource Center. This week, much source Center. This week, much self-titled "Cowboys From Hell" find themselves on top of the Billboard 200 Tbp Alburns chart with their fifth album, Metalica.

The band's crossover from cultstatus to chart-topper comes withoutconcession to the "Moral Majority," as singer/guitarist James Hetfield continues to cover such controversial topics as the horrors of war, corruption in religion and the dark recesses of the mind.

Musically, however, Metallica does show a significant change in the band's sound from previous albums. Much of that new sound can be attributed to pop-rnetal producer Bob Rock (Motley Crue), whose full production style rounds off the edges of Metallica's traditionally razor-sharp sound (which culminated on the group's last album ...And Justice For AII).

Metallica matures
While ...And Justice For All thrived on chaos through superprecision, the arrangements on Metalica streamlined approach. No odd time signatures, no abrupt tempo changes, no rapid-fire dinm licks - just in your face, riff-ripping rock $n^{\prime}$ roar, highlighted on the album
But Metallica doesn't use the "Metal Up Your Ass" approach of the past, either. The band is of the past, either. The band is less interested in stretching the bounds of its technical precision and more into the emotion beand more into hind the music.
hind the music.
Most notably, the album contains no thrash-metal songs finally putting to rest any attempt to pigeonhole the band as the kings of speed-metal.
Instead, Metallica goes in the other direction, featuring slower songs and incorporating more melody and harmonies, as on the ballad "Nothing Else Matters."
The new album doesn't signify a change in style - simply a move away from the band's a move away from the bands past sterile-sounding aibums toits 10 -year existence.
Ned's Atomic Dusthin
Ged's Atomic
Just as the English charts seemed ready to be taken hostage by psychedelic-70s-wannabes, the indie scene received a well-needed kick in the teeth this summer in the form of Ned's Atomic Dustbin.

Cutting through sonic-pop
God Focider, Ned's debut LP, is 45 minutes of non-stop raw emotion, representing the most energetic English release since Jesus Jones' Liquidizer in 1989.

Combining super-fuzz guitar, rollicking bass lines and warpspeed drum patterns, God Fodderis a driving, yet lighthearted, pop album that should get most indie fans to "stop yawning and start yearning" again, as the Neds themselves say on the record.

Cutting through the sonicpop barrage is vocalist Jon Penney's sarcastic wailing. His deadpan humor, on songs like "What Gives My Son?" and "Kill Your Television," provides the perfect formula for an album that should pump some life back into an pump some life back into an otherw

The band, who set the standard for the Seattle/Sub Pop sound a few years ago, recorded Every Good Boy Deserves Fudge on a modest 8 -track studio setup (as opposed to the normal 24track). As a result, the record has all the flavor of a Saturday afternoon jam session -- unpolished and full of spontaneous energy.

Mellow guitars
At the same time, however, it is Mudhoney's cleanest, most thought-out and most experimental recording to date.

Songs like "Check-Out Time," with its '60s Hammond organ, or "Move Out," with its harmonica solo, show some unfarmiliar sides of the band.

Even Mudhoney's normally distorted-beyond-recognitionguitars are mellowed out on a majority of the album, as highlighted in the laid-back "Good Enough."

That was not meant to alarm you.

As far as we can tell, this is not something to be concerned about.

But we could be wrong
The Sludgemonkeys, who call themselves "the world's finest traveling blues, jazz, rock, folk, classical, country/western, neovaudevillian comedy show," will perform Sunday at the Coffeehouse at 9 p.m.

Joe Smith, lead vocalist and co-founder of the Sludgemonkeys, elaborated on this hyperbolic title.

According to Smith, there are only two Sludgemonkeys, himself and Curt Stetka, and they write and perform all their material.

Stetka plays guitar, kazoo and occasionally sings. In addition to vocals, Smith plays the harmonica, kazoo and "various other weird instruments."

He added that two other people will sit in with them on Sunday, but they are not Sludgemonkeys.
Smith and Stetka met last year when the two, freshmen at the time, were roommates in Lawrinson Hall.
While they have been performing together for only one semester, they have already made appearances at the Cof feehouse, Jamnesty, an openmike night at Lawrinson and an Earth Day benefit.

Before you hear the songs the Sludgemonkeys' titles are enough to let you know what you're dealing with.

Some of the offerings this

Goose on Barbiturates," "The Continuing Saga of Shlomo Shadownight" and of course "The Sludgemonkey Folk Song."
"The last one's sort of a crowd favorite," said Smith
Jennifer Gniady, a sophomore in the Newhouse School and the College of Arts and Sciences, said the band was popular in Lawrinson, where she also lived.
"A lot of kids came (to the open-mike night) just because they were performing," said Gniady. "They're a lot of fun."
Greg Bellerose, coordinator of the Coffeehouse, had a different response.

After some prodding, Bellerose would only say, with an ominous tone in his voice, "They're... different. Very different."

Stetka, who lists Eric Clapton and the Beatles as his chief influences, has performed with such groups as Mr. Thingy and the Flaming Tree Zebras. He said nothing, however, had prepared him for the Sludgemonkeys.
include, according to Smith, "women mailing themselves to us in crates and people crying moaning and wailing in the streets," their immediate goals are a little more earthly Ideally, they would like to videotape themselves - their routine involves a lot of visual humor - and send the tape to talent agencies.

They would love to spend the summer touring as an opening act for stand-up comedians, said Stetka.
Oh, by the way, they have officially earned the title of "world's finest traveling blues, jazz, rock, folk, elassical, country/ western. neo-vaudevillian com edy show."
"We attended a conference this summer with every other raveling blues, jazz, rock, folk, lassical, neo-vaudevillian comedy show in the world," Smith deadpanned.
"It was put to a vote, and we won.
have the certificate somewhere," added Stetka.

"I think for the first time before a good football team in a big league environment, he had a pretty good day," Krivak said. "I think the big thing is he didn't dig any holes for us. He played within himself."

Sandwisch was a three-sport star at Great Mills (Md.) High School, where he was a punter and quarterback. His best sport, however, was baseball.

Coming out of high school, Sandwisch was overlooked by big-name football schools. He did attract some attention from did attract some attention from several Division III schools, but turned those offers down.
"I didn't want to go to a small school," Sandwisch said, "I kind of got overlooked by the big schools and I thought I could play Division-I football. I wanted to go somewhere, where if football didn't work out, I'd like where I was."
Sardwisch was redshirted in 1987 and then did not play in 1988. As a sophomore, heplayed quarterback in two games throwing an interception and an incomplete pass. He also punted once and became the points - a job he still halds.
"I thought I could play here."

MARYLAND

The Orangemen gained 270 yards on the ground against Vanderbilt.

Syracuse will enter this game a little better prepared than they were against Vanderbilt's new multi-look system. This could allow the Orangemen to open up and get off to a better start than their sluggish open ing against the Commodores.

Having had the oppartunity to see them on film and having played them in 1988, we have a little history on them," Pasqualoni said.
"I'm not going to say that we're going to go out there and be wide open but I think we'll be wide open but I think we'll be a little bit more prepared in our approach at the start of the game," he added.
An SU offense which produced 17 second-half points and 492 yards total offense is reason for concern among the Maryland defense.
"They've got a really good offense and a lot of special skill guys," Maryland free safety Ron Reagan said. "(Marvin) Graves nell and Zolak. All three were NFL draft picks.

Sandwisch said he learned something watching each one rom the sidelines.
"You learn the things to look for on certain plays, things not to do in certain situations," he said. "You read the defenses just like they're reading them out on the field as you're standing on the sidelines.
"They were-kitid of like assistant coaches to us younger guys." Sandwisch was voted one of the Terrapins' captains last spring by his teammates.
Now as a senior, he feels his job is to help the younger players - just like he was helped.
Sandwisch's team goal is to win the Atlantic Coast Conference, but he has set some disence, but he has set some
"My personal goal is 60 percent passing or higher," he said. I don't want to turn the ball over. Id say six interceptions is ny limit for the year.
"I don't want to make any bad is always dangerous. If we can slow down the option, or even stop it, well be all right."
The Terrapins rushed for 167 yards and threw for only 125 in their win over Virginia.
"I'm sure Syracuse is going to really work on stopping our running game and force us to throw," Terps' quarterback Jim Sandwisch said. "We've been working on that this week and l believe we're going to pass a little bit more.'

Maryland runs what has been described as a pro-set offense and they generally use a single halfback.
"There's a lot of problems with it," Pasqualoni said. "There's a lot of multiplicity that Maryland uses. They have many sets and they motion and shift the many bets to force you to make adjustments.
"When you start making adjustments usually you end up with people out of position."
decisions. I want to make good decisions. As I go on from each game, I want to lessen the amount of mistakes I make."
Sandwisch finds himself in a situation similar to Syracuse University quarterback Marvin Graves. Both are playing in front of inexperienced offensive lines.

Sandwisch plays behind a two-year starter at center, a freshman at right guard, a former linebacker, a tackle coming off shoulder surgery and a left guard who started eight games last season.
"I try to help my line out as much as I can," Sandwisch said. "If someone gets in, I'm like, If someone gets in, I'm like,
'Don't hold, I'll get away from 'Don't hold, I'Il get away from them and Sandwisch did not participate in contact drills this week but is expected to start against the Orangemen on Saturday night.

Maryland coach Joe Krivale 1957 graduate of SU, is 0-2 against his alma mater since taking the head coaching position with the Terrapins in 1987.

Krivak said he isn't preparing any differently to play against the Orangemen

Other than the fact that $I$ graduated from there, there isn't anythingelse," Krivak said. "It's the (same) preparation for anybody else.
Were just going to have to can and see what happens."

Notes

The Terrapins will be without starting left tackle Steve Ingram, who suffered a spiralfracture of the right fibula. It is estimated he will miss 6-8 weeks.

Starting quarterback Jim Sandwisch and defensive tackle Lubo Zizakovic missed contact drills this week but are expected to start Syracuse leads the all-time series, dating back to 1920 , 16-14-2.

Syracuse University volleyball players Aimee Mask (9) and Jean Golti (10), shown here in metion earlier in the yeax, will lead the Orangewornen against Rutgers University, the University of Buffalo and Northeastern University this weekend in Manley Field House.

Orangewomen home for the weekend

By ZEV BOROW

Staff Writer
Although there may not be a lemish on the Syracuse University volleyball team's record, SU coach Dan Schulte said the team could still use a bit of a makeover.
While the Orangewomen swept their weekend matches last weekend at the Hofstra/ TDK Invitational to remain undefeated at 6-0, Schulte said there is room for improvement going into this weekend.

Syracuse faces off against the Rutgers University Scarlet Knights Friday night at $7: 30$ Knights Friday night at $7: 30$ the University of Buffalo Royals the University of Buffalo Royals at I p.m. and the Northeastern University Huskies at 5 p.m. on Saturday
The Orangewomen return to Manley Field House undefeated, confident, and, according to Schulte, much improved.
"I feet that we have played very well for this point in the season, Schulte said. "But we are definitely still improving and this is the most important and exciting part.

The Orangewomen will need to continue improving for their match with the Scarlet Knights. The Friday night matchup looks like it will the most challenging of the weekend
"Rutgers is a quality program and l'm sure that they will provide us with some stiff competition," Schulte said.

Last weekend's matches at Hofstra displayed the emerging talents of junior outside hitters Debbie Bennet and Aimee Mask.

We seem to be developing more depth at every position," Schulte said. "We are getting contributions from more and more of our players. and that will only increase the amount of things we are able to do on the court."
"Everyone is definitely stepping up and contributing," junor outside hitter Andrea Carson said. "The team is coming together well and really improving.

This weekend's matches will be the final tune-up for the Orangewomen before SU heads to Ohio for the Buckeye Classic held at Ohio State.
The Buckeye Classic will be the first real test for the Orangewomen, as Ohio State is currently ranked 14 th in the nation.
lina were both Final Four teams a year ago, and Parker said she knows Penn State has a lot of respect for the Orangewomen.
"(They respect us) even though we haven'tbeaten them," Parker said. "They look at us as the underdog, but they don't take us lightly.'

Parker said Penn State lost six starters from last season.
"That doesn't mean they're bad," Parker said. "It does mean heir experience is lacking.
Parker said the team saw North Carolina play last weekend.

The players weren't dazed by them" Parker said "We saw some weakness, and we think we can attack them.

Abstract

Welcome to Dave's Dartboard Friday the 13 th edition.

In honor of this special day, and in honor of Penn State's hard-fought 81-0 win over Cincinnati, I'd like to honor my favorite tearn with 13 reasons to hate Joe Paterno.

But he's not worth it. I've tried to be kind, I've tried to put up with Paterno. Hey, I'm not a cruel guy; I just can't keep quiet. Last week in this space, I ripped him. As the scores rolled in on the air, Saturday, I ripped him. Maybe it's not right, but - here we go again!

People have been defending Paterno because he had his backups in, and the club just "happened" to score 81 points. ARE YOU KIDDING ME? He's ARE YOU KIDDING ME? He's the one responsible for schedul- ing the Joe Pisarcik Fan Club. ing the Joe Pisarcik Fan Club. for Paterno because he's been criticized?

Spend your time feeling bad for Cincy coach Tim Murphy, whose team should be condemned.

As for Joe, that's all you'll hear from me on the matter. For about the next six paragraphs.

Klingler hype tilting the big picture

Is it possible these days to watch any kind of college foothall show and not hear about David Klingler and his chances for the Heisman Trophy?

It's getting ridiculous. Every time I turn on ESPN, CNN, ABC or CBS, there's more taik about the Heisman than about the national championship. And the talk, for now, revolves around Klingler, the record-setting quarterback from the University of Houston.

ROB GUYETTE SPORTS OPINION

The general assumption is that the Heisman is Klingler's to win or lose. For gosh sakes, it's the second week of the have all but been decided After Houston's 73-3 win over Lousiana Tech two weeks ago, ESPN did a live postgame interview with him and probed him into another clicheidden speech. That, in itself, is crazy. Is the media determining who wins he Heisman? You bet.
Last year after Ty Detmer led BYU's stunning upset of Miami in the season-opener, he was given the Heisman Trophy. No one gave him the rest of the season to lose it.

The Heisman Trophy is fun to talk about, but many of the television stations, which have enormous impact when it comes to these things, have started the hype too early

Can we at least wait until half the season is over before this all starts?
With Klingler's high profile and television's publicity assist. the rest of the nation's top talent is resorted to a Klingler injury as their only chance.
Talented Pac-10 players have no chance because they play many of their games at night and the day's Heisman hype begins and ends with out them.
The shame in all this is that college football is, above everything, a team game. I bet Klingler says in his Heisman Trophy acceptance speech that he couldn't have done it without his tearnmates. Detmer said it last (Klingler also said it in his preHeisman acceptance speech on ESPN.) In the Houston-Miami hype, there was not a single mention that the game would have national champion ship implications. A Houston win would put them in the top five with an easy road to the Cotton Bowl

But does anybody care? No. All the talk centered around how many touch down passes Klingler would throw and whether or not he'd still be the Heisman frontrunner.

Klingler appears to be a pleasant guy. His casual demeanor has helped win him votes already. His publicists at Houston have done a good job.

The Houston sports information department, which won the Feisman for Andre Ware two years ago when Detmer clearly had a better year, has no choice but to hype their main man

But it's up to the media to regulate what is news, and I den't think many of these broadcasters are thinking very hard.

Half the Heisman winners don't deserve the award. Let's hope Klingler has a good year and wins it on the field.

But this weekend the offensive line will take its first major exam.
The 22nd-ranked Orangemen face the University of Maryland and its four senior defensive linemen on Saturday at 7 p.m. at Byrd Stadium in College Park, Md.
'The first major task is getting ready this week so that we're prepared for the experience they have," SU center John Reagan said. "They're a large line. It's something that's really a challenge for us to try and prepare for.
The anchor of the 'Terrapins' defense s All-American tackle Larry Webster, who led Maryland down linemen in tackles with 75 last season. He also had three sacks.
Maryland, 1-0, presents more and different problems for Syracuse than Vanderbilt University did. The Orange, 1-0, beat the Commodores $37-10$ last weekend.
The Terrapins defense uses only two linebackers and a five-man line. Their defense held the University of Virginia to only two field goals in their 17-6 win last Saturday Right tackle Andrew Dees said some of the Maryland defensive schemes are similar to what the Orangemen use.
"(Those) shouldn't affect us that much," he said. "We know what we're doing against them so we're just going to work and make sure everything is going correctly.'

Maryland has also brought eight and nine defenders up to the line to try and stop the running game
"If they put eight or nine guys up there, I don't know how we're going to run the ball", Syracuse coach Paul Pasqualoni said. "We're going to have to be prepared to reduce the front, to get some of those people out of there."

Declining enrollment forces downsizing

BY ROY S. GUTTERMAN

News Editor

With an overall goal of slashing $$ 28$ million from Syracuse University's budget, the Chancellor's Ad Hoc Advisory Group released its report on schools and colleges today.
The group. which convened in March with former Chancellor Melvin A. Eggers, analyzed the projected drop in enrollment, revenues and the "fiscal challenges facing the university."
"The challenge is born out of many things - most outside our immediate control," Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw said Wednesday at a University Senate meeting.

Based on dernographic statistics, the report estimates an undergraduate enrollment drop of roughly 600 students for the 1991 year.
By 1995, the report predicts SU's total undergraduate enrollment will drop to about 9,600 , compared to With such undergraduate enrollment.
With such a drop, the university will be forced to downsize its four operating budgets as well as class size, ## faculty and resource allocation.

Facing a 'grieving period'
During a press conference Wednesday, Shaw said the university will undergo "a grieving period" as the university cuts back and consolidates programs.
In February, Eggers commenting on future cuts said, "Some will diminish our attractiveness to our undergraduates, but we will try to minimize that."
Academic Affairs - academic departments, programs of studies and non-administrative and support services - constitutes about 70 percent of the univer services-constitutes reducible budget. Schools and colleges comprise 60 percent of the Academic Affairs budget, the report stated.
"Substantial reductions" in schools and colleges "will be unavoidable," according to the report.

Cuts will be proportional based on revenue generated and enrollment in the individual schools and programs.
"In the absence of new revenue, downsizing an academic institution in response to an enrollment decrease will require a proportional reduction in the number of faculty," the report states.
"We must focus our resources on our highest-priority activities," Shaw told the Senate.

The report calls for a 20 percent reduction in SU's 4,300 employees - from administrators to tenured professors to physical plant workers.

Assessing values

"Some of the judgements to be made in the coming months will rely on an interpretation of th rimary values," the committee reported.
Administrators maintain that the university will not drop standards and fill classrooms with less-qualified students; however, the report states that the university will have to consolidate and restructure
The university "will need to consider carefully our competitive position in the academic marketplace, competitive position in according to the report.

Advisory group submits fiscal recommendations Staff ReportsThe following are excerpts from the Report on the Schools and Colleges at Syracuse University as submitted by the Chancellor's Ad Hoc Advisory Group.

Imtroduction:

The fiscal challenge facing private higher education has several underlying causes. Through the 1980 s virtually all universities experienced cost increases that were well beyond normal inflationary pressures.

The addition of new cost commitments, both among academic and administrative units, has been the result of a determination to maintain modern facilities, a desire to increase quality, a willingness to create new programs and a necessity to meet external requirements such as compliance with governmental regulations and various accredi tation standards.

On Tuition:
At private universities the costs of these additional expenses have been largely passed on to students through increases in tuition. There is now substantial resistance to the cost of private higher education, and it is neither feasible nor fair to maintain the steep upward spiral of escalating tuition costs.

The fiscal challenge facing Syracuse University is the result of cost escalation factors, declining enrollments, reduced state appropriations, reduced federal contributions to stulue projections from other sources. See GROUP Page 17

Women of Western countries still believe the women of Iraq live in the Dark Ages with no power or awareness, but Iraqi women have been fighting for equality for 70 years, said Hayatun Nesa, a doctoral candidate in the Syracuse University philosophy department.
Nesa spoke Friday about the plight of Iraqi women as part of the Women's Friday Series held in the Schine Student Center.

she said.

Few rights before 1920
Before 1920, Iraqi women had very few rights and were often killed if raped because rape was seen as a complete dishonor to the victim's family, she said.
"The only punishment (for a rapist), if any, was a short detainment of perhaps if any, was a short detainment of perhaps three months, Nesa said. As if to say they could just go off after this short. After 1920, and into the 1930 s , Iraqi After 1920, and into the 1930 s , Iraqi women began claiming rights and stopped wearing veils, she said. Forced marriages in urban areas became rare, actual laws regarding wornen were written and books about their movement were written and published, she said.
The Iraqi Women's League and its 42,000 members were recognized by the Iraqi government in 1953, she said. With this reoognition, wornen gained entry into the work force, received education and even received paid maternity leave, Nesa said.
In 1963, however, when the Bath Party took over, women lost their rights and three Women's League leaders were murdered and others were arrested and tortured, she said.

Strain from the war

As the Iran-Iraq War strained Iraq's manpower, women were once again called to the work force, she said. The war not only took away manpower, but also cut the salaries of women in the labor force, she said.

Low income, bad working conditions and emotional distress from dealing with sons and husbands in war left. Iraqi women seriously deprived, she said.

In 1981, the Women's League rebelled again. Iraqi and Kurdish women have been involved in armed struggle since that time, she said.
"The most important thing to resistance is that each individual is important and powerful and must retain their sense of identity." she said.
WThe power of resistance, in a metaphorical sense, is the power to tell the truth to the power," she said.
"Western understanding of resistance must be changed to see that resistance won't stop," Nesa said.

The Newhouse School has a bright future if the university maintains a commitment to invest in its quality. Enrollments can be maintained or increased, and we recommend some modest increase in enrollment accompanied additional institutional investment.

"Most of the decrease in undergraduate enrollment at SU has been in A&S and there, is no sign of this trend reversing."

A budgetary perspective of the College

The calculation of fiscal performance of sehools is bsesed strictly on credit hours of instruction. The index used calculates the implicit overhead returned by each achool to the university. This is the percentage of the budget of each school that it returns in revenues exceeding its university budget. Taition revenues are calculated for each school based upon the number of credit hours taught and the respective tuition rates. This total revenue less the average financial aid provides an estimate of the net revenue generated by instruction in that unit. Schools with implicit overheads of more than 100 percent may be seen as net fiscal contributors and schools with less than 100 percent may be seen as fiscal cost centers.

College for Human Development
uThis college includes several programs that are very popular with students and quite successful in retaining majors and placing graduates. Some of the programs may have the capacity to increase enrollment if they are marketed more aggressively, but enrollment projections in CHD are very sensitive to the enrollment demand in other schools from which it receives alternate offers. Budget changes for CHD should be essentially in proportion to the changes in enrollment.

Maxwell School

"The university's social sciences and public and international affairs proGrams are budgeted in the Maxwell School. Graduate students are formally enroled in Maxwell; undergrad
"Maxwell is the focus of a campaign to fund a new building and other investments for academic quality. The budget targets for Maxwell should be consistent with the priority statements for that carnpaign, should address the historical underfunding of the school and should take into account the enrollment changes that will occur as the undergraduate student body decreases in number."
School of Management
"The School of Management has been accredited in its undergraduate program since 1920; it has just recently succeeded in removing orobationary status imposed by the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools and Businesses. Enrollments have declined, perhaps in response to that probation.
"The university has recently invested in the School of Management to improve its quality.
"The availability of a minor course of study in the Management School can be a significant attraction to students in other schools and colleges. This school should become a fiscal contributor through a balanced approach to enrollment, service instruction and budget.

Category 3: Schools and collegescurrentlyreceiving substantial subsidies

The committee has recommended "strategic" actions to achieve the appropriate budgets for these schools. These could bossibly include enroliment increases, budget reductions,
School of Computer and Information School
"CIS has a very low undergraduate credit-hour load. Most of the revenue attributable to CIS comes from tuitionpaying graduate students.

A recent external review of the graduate program showed some problems within the school including narrowness of the program and low level of research, according to the report.
"The advisory group does not believe that the subsidy being provided to the school is justified, and we are not optimistic that the school can raise its subsidy to an appropriate level.
"Members of CIS and others have pointed to the overlap in curriculum, student interest and faculty interests between CIS and the computer engineering program in the College of Engineering. The School of Education has been a center of investment at SU for many years. "Undergraduate application de-

"Some of the larger units in the school generate very few credit hours and some generate very few credit hours and some of those have little or no sponsored research.

College of Engineering

"National interest in engineering is on the wane at present. The reduced number of students, plus the high cost of staff and operating expenses in engineering disciplines, has led to the need for a large subsidy. Reduction of this subsidy is a challenge for the next few years.
"There are no obvious candidates for program elimination, but significant reductions in the number of faculty, staff and teaching assistants are possible. Some flexibility may exist in increasing the proportion of academic year faculty

School of Information Studies
"This school overlaps with a number of other programs on campus and there is some debate as to whether the separais some debate as to whether the separation of information studies as an independent discipline is either org tionally or intellectually optimal.
"Almost all the undergraduate enrollment is derived from alternate offers.
"The challenge for ITS will be to maintain its high level of student support and increasing enrollment while advancing its scholarly profile. If it remains as an independent unit, ITS should eliminate its subsidy and become fiscally positive over the next several years by some combination of increased enrollment, additional external resources and/or reduced university budget."

College of Nursing

Nursing faculty do not have a strong record of scholarship. Undergraduate enrollment in nursing has been on the creased to one-third of the 1980 enrollment.

The suspect was last seen running toward the hospital.

A 22-year-old Syracuse University student reported his jacket containing his wallet was stolen following a fight in the intersection of University Avenue and Marshall Street early Sunday morning.

The victim was involved in a fight after a hit-and-run accident in the intersection, a police report said.

After the accident, he told police a Chevrolet Corsica drove away and then pulled over. A man exited the car and attempted to hit the victim, who ducked and threw the man to the ground
During the scuffle, the victim said his jacket was stolen.

A Syracuse University student reported that her house on the 1000 block of Enclid Avenue was burglarized Saturday.

The student told police she returned home and found the front door wide open. She said the door is usually locked.

She told police her bicycle and purse containing credit cards and identification were stolen.

The wallet was recoveredlater by police. There are no suspects. $■$

A Syracuse resident who tried to gain entry to Faegan's Pub without an verbally abusive and shattered a front door window Saturday night.

The bar manager told police that the suspect confronted him with threats, kicked a bouncer and proceeded to shatter the front door window of the pub, a police report stated.

The manager chased the suspect through a South Crouse Avenue alley and apprehended him on the 1100 block of East Adams Street by forcing the suspect to the ground.

When police offered first aid, the suspect threw the bandages on the ground and demanded his attorney.

A Syracuse University student reported a rock had been thrown through the living room window of his house on the 700 block of Livingston Avenue Saturday.

The student told police he was awakened by the sound of breaking glass. He went to investigate the noise and found a 6-inch-by-9-inch rock in the living room.

Police have no suspects.
A Syracuse University student reported his car burglarized Thursday in a Westcott Avenue parking lot.

The student told police the vent window on the passenger door was bent and two large speakers were stolen.

university know that downsizing the budget is a necessary evil that leads to cuts in important areas, namely academics.

But the approach the university proposes is faulty. The report, issued by the Chancellor's Ad Hoc Advisory Group, suggests that programs will be cut based on how much money they bring to the university and how many students enroll in these programs.

The report reads: "As a practical matter, and in a spirit of service, we have taken the position that any unit with a strong student enrollment should be preserved and nurtured." This cleverly-worded statement fails to enumerate for us the small colleges which are unworthy of "preservation and nurturing."

And he was right.
But I think the problem goes far beyond
pus. It will be a sad day when African-American Studies, Women's Studies, and other such programs are lumped together ("consolidated") in an Oppression Department.

Shortly after promises of making SU a more multi-cultural university were made, SU proposed its downsizing plan which stinks of elitism and effectively strips the university of any multiculturalism it has developed.

The report reads, "Some of the judgments to be made in the coming months will rely on an interpretation of the University's primary values." That would be reassuring if we weren't already painfully aware of them: looks and money.

You guessed it - Bird Library is haunted. I didn't jump to this conclusion hastily, I assure you. First I had to watch 30 episodes of "In Search Of" and drink a case of Coors Light. Then, I knew I was right.

The first clue came when $I$ ran into one of the Library Zombies.
They speak a language consisting entirely of call numbers. And they'll never stop searching, never, until they find that book.

Then, there are the Book Gremlins. These are the invisible creatures who take the exact book you need and hide it somewhere else.

The computer gays the book is there. The librarian says the book is there. But the Book Gremling have taken it and stashed it someGremlins have take

Of course, you'll never hear about any of this stuff on a library tour or in a university brochure. So I felt it was my duty to expose Bird's secrets, once and for all

With evil spirits roaming the stacks and construction expected to continue for the next 30 years, Bird Library will continue to be a problem.

But don't worry. Just ask Vinny. He'll be glad to help you out.

As a first-year student, I decided to join the Syracuse University Marching Band. I thought I would be able to meet new friends and get a head start on the transition to college life. The only worry I had was the atmosphere of the band. tional diborders. Maybe it was precisely his lack of a grasp on reality that so inspired this wide-eyed young boy.
A grand ol jump
Here was a man who looked at the Grand Canyon and said: "I think I can jump my motorcycle over that."

The Grand Canyon! It's like an entire state. Jets have a hard time crossing it. Evel was going to try it, though. All he needed was a motorcycle that could do 100 miles per hour, a 20 -foot wooden ramp and a 600 mph tail wind.

I never said I loved him for his brains.
Maybe I loved him because I tried to iump my Huffy over the creek in my

But it was probably just because my Mom hated him.
I think she resented the way I told her only a really horrible mother would not only a really horrible mother
 The greatest thingabout Evel was that he never took a hint. There he was hint. There he was in a hospital recovering from the first Grand Canyon croseing, and then the idea came to him.
An aerodynamically perfect, liquid-oxygen-burning, ultra-propulsion jet engine with a seat and a steering wheel. It gave Evel better acceleration, more power and greater lift off the ramp at that canyon's ledge.

Ultimate showdown

It was the ultimate showdown. The Rocketcar, The Canyon. Technology, Nature. Moron, Gravity.
True, the Rocketcar made it twice as far across the Canyon as the Harley, but that is like saying that Farm Aid IV did twice as much for farmers as Farm Aid III.

Luckily, Evel had calculated a safety plan with a 10 -mile margin of plan with a 10 -mile margin of error.
As the Rocketcar shot toward the canyon floor with Evel strapped to it like some pagan sacrifice, he opened the chute. Instantly, the parachute pack the American flag printed on it. The napkin was tied to the frame by twine. Once the parachute filled with air, the car wafted to the earth at MACH 2 .
wafted to the hospital.
As sort of a thank you to all the staff at Houston Memorial, Evel announced the most spectacular indoor stunt ever. Evel was to leap his bike (Rocketcar was in the shop) over 50 buses lined up inside the eighth wonder of the world, the Astrodome
I sat in front of my television all night to see my hero face his greatest challenge yet. Then he appeared in all of his red, white, and blue jumpsuit glory
Evel never actually went through with the stunt the first time he started at the ramp. He liked suspense and this was a stuntman who knew how to work a room.

Suspense wears thin
Suspense slowly turned to boredom as Evel repeatedly started his run and turned away right before he got to the ramp. Finally, Evel whipped of his It almet and began yelling at his pit corned over whether the stunt was going to over work.

Then the impossible happened. Evel left the building.

He later blamed equipment failure, but I knew he had chickened ouk. At least I finally saw why I loved him so. It was his sense of resolve. He would try things that would end with him crashing and the world making fun of him just to say he tried them. Rest assured that if sorneone said it was impossible, Evel would go down in flames proving them correct. Then one night he was afraid of what people might think. I guess I learned my lesson. If I hadn't, would I be writing this column?

Nunes, who serves as chapter director of SU's Best Buddies program, said an informational meeting will be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Room 202 of the Hall of Languages.

My goal is to break down the stereotypes of people with mental retardation and let people know that they're the same as you and me," Nunes said. "Most college students nevermeet someone with a disability unless there's someone in their family. This is a way they can meet."

Nunes said the program benefits both college students and their buddies. It gives the bud dies an opportunity to go out and do things they normally aren't able to, and it gives college students a break from school, Nunes said.
"Through Best Buddies, college students learn that there is really no reason to fear or pity people with mental disabilities," Nunes said. "You see how they are more able than disabled."

Good friends, good times

Nunes said 112 colleges and universities currently have Best Buddy chapters. College students who participate in the program are matched with a buddy who is mildly retarded but highly functional. Students meet with their buddies two or three times a month and go on four group outings a semester. Those events could include apple picking a trip to the applepicking, a trip to the zoo, a SU countered with a 10 -play, 74-yard drive culminating in sophomore quarterback Doug Womack's first career touchdown. Womack took a keeper on the option around the right end for a seven-yard run with 4:48 left in the half.

Defense and turnovers won the game for the Orangemen in the second half. As prolific and accurate as SU's offense was in the first half, the defense came to be just as dominating in the second.

The Orange, led by Lusardi, Rooks and nose guard Kevin Mitchell. forced three Terrapin turnovers in the third guarter and held the Terps to just 89 yards in the second half.

of scrimmage very well in the second half," said SU offensive coordinator George DeLeone. We hurt them in the perimeter (secondary) in the first half and they adjusted to the pasa in the second half. We did not do a good job exploiting (those adjustments) because we didn't have a good answer inside.
As the two faling offenses traded possessions it was the defense and special teams of the Orange that ultimately won the game.
With SU leading 24-17 and six minutes left in the game, Shelby Hill, who did not catch a pass and had been limited to only 37 yards on six punt returna, burst through coverage down, giving Syracuse its final margin of vietory. "We dominated in kicking and special teams and we dominated defensively," DeLeone said. "The only way we walked out of here with a win was because of our defense and special tearns."

On Enrollment Decline:
The decline in total enrollment will occur over several years as the smaller entering years as the smaller entering a decline in enrollment of between 18 and 22 percent over a five-year period that began with the class entering in Fall 1990.

Buaget Cues:

The total of academic and administrative budgets for fiscal 1992 is $$ 161.3$ million, of which $$ 112.2$ million is in Academic Affairs. The sum of the demic Affairs. The sum of the budgets for the sehools and budgets for the sehool colleges is $$ 69.1$ million.

Indeed, it seems appropriate that the university construct its budgets recognizing differential costs of certain kinds of teaching and scholarly endeavor.

Obviously, the magnitude of the budget reductions that need to be made will require substantial reductions in the budget of Academic Affaicy and of the schools and colleges.

However, we strongly urge that the university make every that the university make every attempt to preserve our primary attempt to preserve our primary functions - teaching and refunctions - teaching and research - by making proportionsearch - by making proportionately larger reductions in administrative costs.

This principle should guide the apportionment of the budget cut to Academic Affairs and within each of the academic units as well.

We strongly recommend that other budgets be reduced ingreater proportion than those or the schools and colleges, but substantial reductions in the substantial reductions in the budgets of the school and colleges will be unavoidable.

Faculty Recommendations:
We share the overwhelming view of faculty respondents that in the face of fiscal challenge the university must respond in a highly strategic fashion.

Some of the judgments to be made in the coming months will rely on an interpretation of the university's primary values.

Popular Units:
We believe that it is essential to reject an across-the-board or incremental approach that would damage some of our highest quality and most heavily enrolled units.

As a practical matter, and in a spirit of service, we have taken

Conclusion of Report:
The data and information compiled in this report and the views expressed are intended to provide a background for a cam-pus-wide discussion that should precede the formulation of a precede the formula detsiled action plan.
The Advisory Group will gratefully receive any comments on this report. We are continuing our work on the consideration of the academic support services and academic auxiliaries in Acadernic Affairs; we will issue a report on these units shortly.
We will also continue to provide information and advice to Chancellor Shaw and Vice Chancellor Vincow to whatever degree they request.

However, the substantiative discussions regarding the stradiscussions regarding the strategic plan for Acadernic Affairs tegic plan for Acadernic Affairs are now the responsibility of the university's regular governance structure.
We support the Chancellor's initiative to conduct a review of the administrative operations of the university, and we will cooperate with that process in any way that may be helpful.
We are confident that the SU community will join together in the discussions that gether in the discussions that will constructively shape our will constructivegy and in the challenging strategy and in the challenging task of implementing the final task of implementing the final plan. We believe that Syracuse University will ernerge from this era of challenge as a stronger. more vital and more strategically focused institution.

Tragedy inspires creation of program

By KARA FITZSIMMONS  Staff Writer

What began as a little girl's losing battle with brain cancer ended with the creation of a summer camp for children with cancer.

When Gary Mervis' daughter Teddi became terminally ill with brain cancer, Mervis founded a camp for children afficted with the disease. The camp, which came to be called Camp Good Days & Special Times, opened in 1980 with 63 campers and 75 volunteers. Today about 2,000 campers and volunteers participate every summer.
Julie Murfin, a sophomore at Boston University, has geen and experienced the healing power of Camp Good Days & Special Times firsthand. Murfin attended a program at camp called KATS, or Kids Adjusting Through Support, to help her deal with her grandfather's lung cancer. She found herself helping the volunteers and decided to become a Counselor-in-Training at Camp Good Days at the age of 16 .

Although some may find it depressing and heartbreaking to work with children who are terminally or gravely ill, Murfin sees it differently. She describes the experierfce as "probably one of the purest happy feelings, or however you say that A." ${ }^{\text {no }}$

A somber side
But of course, things are not always merry. One of the camp activities is a candlelight gathering in which campers express their feelings about fellow campers who have died.

One of Mufin's saddest memories is her recollection of one young girl saying, "It eeems like every time I get to know someone, they die."

Such is the experience of many children at Camp Good Days.

Sadder yet, according to Murfin, is saying goodbye to everyone at the end of the camp session. Neither camper nor campers and others helps the children counselor knows who will live to return cope with their emotions. the next summer.

Camp Good Days offers a wide variety Seeing the kid, not the disease
Murfin describes the volunteers as people who "can look past what is wrong with the kids and see that they are just kids."
That includes not pitying them, as hard as it is. "Some kids don't want to hear it," says Murfin. "Some want it, but you can't (give pity). It's detrimental."
Eventually, the people at Camp Good Days saw that the children with cancer were only reaping the benefits of the of activities to help the campers forget about their illiness for a time. They do everything from traditional summer to soaring in a hot air balloon, racing in go-carts, testing their bravery and skill in a ropes course far above the ground and splashing down a natural rock slide. Unfortunately, all those activitiescan't make the children forget what they face. A volunteer staff made up of former organization during the summer, and hole families touched by cancer were not being helped. The camp staff decided it was time to expand.
Camp Good Days & Special Times opened an office in Syracuse in 1987. Frank Towner, eastern New York state program director, and Kathryn-Friedman, Central New York coordinator, head up the local office.
The office coordinates support groups and other programs that aid families touched by cancer.
And the work of bringing a touch of joy and comfort to children continues.

Report recommends school restructuring

By JODI LAMAGNA
Editor in Chief
Appropriate consolidation and restructuring of schools and colleges may help maintain Syracuse University's commitment to quality in research, teaching and service, according to a report written by the Chancellor's Ad Hoc Advisory Group.

The group believes restructuring will enhance the university in four areas: improved quality of research and teaching, improved appeal to students, improved identity among potential donors and sponsors, and fiscal savings.

The five schools and colleges that were smaller than many departments within larger academic units were the focus of the group, according to the report. Architecture

The report recommends the consolidn-

Computer and Information Science
The faculty in the CIS department share research and teaching facilities with faculty in three areas, according to the advisory group's report.

These areas include computer engi neering, physics and mathematics.
The group advises that the CIS activities be moved into all three areas of study.
Information Studies
"The most obvious consolidation of Information Studies would be with the School of Management," the report said. See STRUCTURE Page 4

SU Security occupies temporary quarters

Contributing Writer
Syracuse University Security officers are comfortable in their temporary mobile offices, John Zrebiec, director of SU Security, said.

Plans for renovating security headquarters in the basement of Sims Hall have moved the security offices into three mobile offices, Zrebiec said.

He said security has been in the offices, which sit propped up on a few bricks in front of Sims Hall, since June.
"Over the summer, we were comfortable in our temporary facilities," he said. "So far, with all the students back, we still haven't had any problems.'

The offices in Sims Hall will be renovated to offer SU an upgraded security department, according to Lt. Jay Duda, head of the renovation committee.

Most of SU Security's departments have been moved into a smailer space in the mobile homes, Zrebiec said.

Because of difficulties involved with moving technical equipment, Zrebiec said the communications department is still located in the basement of Sims Hall.

Still answering calls
The small communications room remains active, with an officer answering emergency calls and distress alarms from the blue light system, he said.

The renovations, scheduled to begin this week, will give officers more advanced data systerns and improved space allocations, Duda said.
"We just outgrew the old facility," Duda said. "We need day-to-day increases in space allocation for interviewing suspects, report writing, and in the locker room and lunchroom area."

All renovations reflect the direct needs of the officers, Zrebiec said.
"I think it is important to say that the officers gave a strong input to guide the Design and Construction Department," he said.
SU's Design and Construction Department will oversee the development of the project, Duda said.

In SU Security's present quarters, Zrebiec said life has not changed much for the officers, except that they much for the officers, except to adjust to smaller spaces.

Duda said the renovation also has not affected where security officers send detainees.
"We have always sent detainees down to Syracuse Police," Duda said.
SU Security will remain in their mobile home until mid-November, when the renovation is scheduled to end.

Task force studies police relations

By JEREMY FREEMAN  Contributing Writer

The Syracuse-area Task Force on Community and Police Relations is halfway through its speakout series derelations in Syracuse.

The group will hold another speakout Thuraday at $7: 00$ p.m. at the Boys and Girls Club, 2100 E. Fayette St.

The speakout will present an opportunity for etudents and community members to voice their concerns and feelings about the police, said New York State Division for Human Rights Representative Valerie Woods.
The task force was created amid such recent events as the police beating of Rodney King in Los Angeles, Milwaukee police officers' alleged negligence in the case of serial killer Jeffery Dahmer, and recent charges of police brutality on Marshall Street, Woods said. The task force speakouts are intended to raise orce speakouts are intended to raise serious questions about the role of police abuses of power. she said.
The common thread present in the past two meetings has been one of substantial disrespect on the part of police," said Rainbow Coalition representative Alan Rosenthal.
Fact finding mission
The task force is primarily concerned with fact finding and has no legal authority to bear on elected officials, he said.

Rosenthal said that although a racial bias toward blacks is commonly voiced at the speakouts, the scope of police brutality extends wrell beyond that.

Citizens are being offered the opportunity to express their attitudes and recall experiences with law enforcement, he said.

"New York is definitely ready for the word of God," the 72 -year-old evangelist said.

Graham's appearance on the park's Great Lawn, the firat evangelistic crusade in New York City in more than 20 years, is expected to draw tens of thousands of people.

Graham baid he plans to preach at length about "love and how God loves you."

Dairy farmers

plan protest

Dairy farmers in Oneida County say they cannot pay their taxes.

The farmers, hurt by low milk prices, will mail notices to local tax collectors this month informing them they do not have the money to pay school taxes.

The notices were distributed to about 120 dairy farmers Thursday at the Sangerfield Inn where dairy farmers upset over low milk prices have been meeting twice a month since August.

The farmers said they hope the notices will prompt local officials to support federal dairy legislation that would regulate the nation's milk supply by introducing production quotas.

Family dairy farmers are on the brink of becoming extinct unless something is done to ensure profitable milk prices. said Peter lannucei, a Waterville dairy farmer who has been organizing the meetings

The dairy group also decided to disassociate itself from other dairy groups in the state planning to participate in a nintionwide milk strike acheduled for Oct: 1.

Empty words, empty pockets

The American people have been assured time and time again that President Bush is doing what he can to aid the plight of the unemployed in the United States. Yet his actions, especially recently, seem to directly contradict his words.
This summer, President Bush signed a bill designed to show his political concern about the issue of unemployment. The bill gave him the power to declare an economic emergency in the United States, which would help the unemployed by giving them compensation. However, an economic emergency was never declared, leaving the bill and the House of Representatives powerless.

Now, in an effort to force Bush to spend money on the unemployed, the House is debating another bill: one that would eliminate the need for Bush to declare anything. It would give money to unemployed people and their families until they can get back on their feet financially.

Since unemployment numbers are higher than they were last year at this time, a bill like this would make sense. Foreign aid to countries like Bangladesh as well as the proposed Most Favored Nation status for China continue to redirect revenues and potential markets from the United States to other countries.

President Bush must bite the bullet and make himself accountable to the American people for the skyrocketing unemployment rates. If he signs this bill and essentially takes the power out of his own hands and puts it with representives who are closer to the problems, he will be doing the country a favor.

And maybe Americans will have reason to start believing the president's words again.

T-shirts pose mindless threat

Since the beginning of the semester, we have heard everyone's opinion on the Alpha Chi Rho T-shirt controversy - except mine.

Those T-shirts were the ultimate example of mindless garbage. Anybody who participated in the manufacture, distribution, or BARRY $\quad$ wearing of the shirts ought STARK mirrorandask themselves MAKED if they are proud of their actions. actions.
I read about the T-shirt controversy in my homeThen newspaper. The last thing Syracuse University needed was another public relations nightmare. It didn't help in our pursuit of a better national reputation.

By the way - the best choice made was to not ban the T-shirts.

I'm not going to insult anybody's intelligence by claiming that the $T$-shirts fall under the category of academic freedom of expression. sion.

The message contained in the T-shirts will not stir the thought process. Academic freedom covers beliefs which have intellectual merit. covers beliefs which have intellectual merit. instance.

In America, we have freedom of speech. That includes immoral and unpopular speech. It also includes moronic speech. You have the constitutional right to make a fool out of yourself with the ideas you express. That is exactly what those members of the Alpha Chi Rho fraternity did.

Let's face it. If SU banned the T-shirts and other similar items, hateful thought is not going to suddenly disappear. Whether we like it or not, racism, sexism, and homophobia all exist, on campus and throughout the United States.

SU handled the situation perfectly by condemning the T-shirts but not taking any substantive action. The greatest form of punishment here just might have been being associated with the T-shirts.

Recycling trends foster guilt

Maybe you've heard it all before: Recycling is not only important. it's essential. Perhaps you're sick of the hype that warns against the threat of closing land fills, leveled forests, and choking sea life while informing us of the consequenses.
"Yeah, yeah, yeah", you may think to yourself, but never outwardly mutter, never outwardly mutter, nitive dissongence resultnitive dissonance resulting from what may have been a guilty feeling that you don't quite do your part is quickly subdued when you rationalize that you did, after all, throw your empty Cok box marked "Newspaper Only."

Oops.
Whether or not many of us are informed about recycling, one of the implicit requirements of attending a university is the ability to read. You don't need a 4.0 to understand that "Newspaper Only" does not mean dripping soda cans, banana peels, or candy wrappers. The theme is separation, Garbage mixed in with recycling and cans mixed in with paper is at best annoying to the garbage and recycling collectors, and at worst regressive, because it contaminates the recyclable material in the common bin so that it is unacceptriale.

Waste overwhelms and we want quick riddance of the remains of our daily activities (such as eating, drinking, shopping, cleaning). Many of us are so anxious to clean our hands of our own by-products that we'll employ the most convenient method to do so. Instead of holding on to that Coke can until we see a "Cans Only" bin, many people seem content to drop it in the nearest newspaper drop box garbage can, or on the nearest street corner so that they no longer have to deal with it.

Not all recycling involves the sorting of our trash for city or university collection. There are several ways individuals can conserve, too. It's not such a hassle to carry a reusable mug around rather than buy beverages in dispos able cups each time. Permanent razors take up less space in the bathroom and cost less in the long-run. Plastic produce bags and paper lunch bags often work just as well the second and third, even fourth and fifth time. Those and thira, even fourth and fith time. Those colorful flyers handed to you in Schine advertising poster sales or rallies make attractive tising poster sales or ralines make attractive mernos for household phone messages. At the memos for household phone messages. At the your calculus and Shakespeare texts after both the University and Orange bookstores refuse to buy them back, think about donating them to a book sale, used book store, or library. And is the mess youre going to make eating at dining hall or smack bar really going to requir more than one napkin? If you insist yes, at least don't just swipe an inch-thick stack. Start with one or two; you can always go back for more in emergencies.

See how easy it can be?
Thking care of the environment is by necessity more than a trendy matter. But i the only way you can understand it is in terms of your aocial acceptance, then let the potential ostracism of environmentalists scare you into becoming involved. For starters, simple lack of carelessness is a pretty safe guarantee agninst guilt.

Minorities speak out on environment

By GENARO C. ARMAS
Contributing Writer
The Brobab Society, a new student group on the SUNY College of Environmental Sci ence and Forestry campus. is dedicated to creating and pre serving a voice for black and Hispanic students on environmental issues, according to Bao bab Society President Chris Flores, a student of the College of Environmental Science and Forestry.

The fledgling organization which was formed last Aprit, consists of about 25 students.

It derives its name from a tree, common throughout the sub-Saharan region of Africa, which sometimes grows stur dier and older than California's redwoods.

Flores, also known as Kamua Seitu Karume, wants to change the general perception of the environmental movernent.
"When you viaualize the movement's image todisy, you think about hippies and tie-dyes. We must realize that all citizens are part of the environment, whether they live in Harlem, Watts or the Upper East Side.
"Everyone within the population has the power to impact the environment." Flores said.
What is most distressing, however, is the lack of involvement within the black and Hispanic communities.
"Most envi
Most environmental problems hit these areas worse because of poverty," said Flores. There is a lack of education. and understanding that they and understanding that they are ${ }^{\text {well. }}$
w
Where's the toxic waste?
In addition. Flores said the majority of toxic waste dumps and sewage plants are located in disadvantaged areas, auch as rural Alabarna and Hariern.
"The attitude of the American government, let alone the univeraty, has been one oflaispers faire," Flores said. "It is a silent issue."

According to Flores, this is a direct result of a lack of representation by the concerned groups.
"To combat this war, we must start at all levels of education African-Americans and Latinos are the last to receive any educa tion about the issue," Flores said. "If any informational materials are sent, it is done only as an afterthought
"The environment is mainly. seen as a middle-class concern." In terms of activities, the society is still in the planning stages.
"Our programs will not be immediately obvious." he said.

Participation is planned for Earth Day, as well as programs targeting area high schools and community centers.

Flores said. "We will also be working with other student groups and activities in a support capacity, such as Celebrate Dort capacity, such ss Cele and Latino History Month and various other organizations."
However, the group's present strategy is to lay down a firm foundation

Only group on campus
*As of yet, we do not know of any similar groups in other colleges. We are still reaching out for connections," Flores said. Among these connections are civic groups, such as the NAACP. The idea for the organization whe initiated by a group of poople, including Flores.
"We noticed in some of our classes the professory prevailing thought that Third World cultures and minority groups themselves were the problem with the environment," Flores said.

We must realize that it is not a problem with the people themselves, but an cconomic problem within these povertystricken cultures. There aren't many other alternatives these people can turn to." he said.
Florea maintains, however, that the future looks bright. At the society's first meeting. Flores received positive feedback and a willingness to work from his small but loyal group.
In terms of an organization in ESF, though, there is a substantial membership.

Flores also added, We are the first group at ESF to provide a sense of unity and cultural identity for minority students."
Students of all races are welcome to join Baobab, however.
"The environment is every one's problem," Flores gaid.

The self-supported group meets every Wednesday at 7

Ted Dellas was there, though he looked quite different. Fifty-five years ago, Dellas' perpetually tousled hair wasn't a stark white. He was only 11 years old.

Dellas, now 66, began working in 1936 at the restaurant his Greek immigrant father founded 11 years earlier. He and his two brothers, who have co-owned Varsity since 1947, have seen three generations of Syracuse University students come through the doors and plunk money on the counter.
"In the " 30 s, students dressed well suits and jackets and shirts and ties, said Dellas, gesturing towards one of the poster-sized photos on the wall. The picture depicts two students, one in a gray three-piece suit and the other in a white varsity sweater emblazoned with an orange ' S .'

Styles change
"After that everyone wore dungarees," Dellas continued. "It was total blue up here. Now people are starting to dresa better again.
A woman in a ripped sweatshirt walked by as he spoke.
"Of course, they're not quite there yet," he observed.
Dellas said Varsity has not always been the student hangout it is now. In the beginning it was mainly a place for neighborhood residents and only incidentally for students. Those students, too, were differentr Dellas said.

Job placement office aids education majors

By SHEILA DOUGHERTY Contributing Writer

Students in Syracuse University's School of Education who need help finding jobs should go to the Educational Placement Office, according to Neal Appelby, director of student services for the School of Education. The placement office helps students prepare job applications and resumes, offers workshops on interviewing techniques and notifies students of job openings, Appelby said.
"It's a service provided by the School of Education for education graduates to help them locate positions and follow through on the job application process," he said.
Graduating students pay a fee of $$ 35$ to open a placement file at the office, Appelby said. The office then sets up credentials and keeps letters of recommendation to be sent to prospective employers, he said.
"Education requires placement files," said Barbara Maphey, coordinator of education placement.
"People have come in and they've tried to apply to jobs in education without a placement file, but it's almost impossible now," she said.

Official files

Employers want prospective employees to send official credentials and reference letters, Maphey said.

The office publishes a weekly newsletter in which school districts advertise open teaching and administrative positions, Maphey said.

The newsletter is available for anyone who wishes to subscribe to it, but it is geared toward SU students, she said.

The publication advertises information about jobs in all 50 states, but the majority are from the northeastern United States, Maphey said.

early '30s," Dellas reminisced. "It was very art deco, with high-backed, wooden, blackwalled booths. We had all kinds of home-cooked meals and two different menus, for lunch and dinner. Students ate better then. Even students ate well-rounded meals."
It was only the demand for fast food after World War II that induced Varsity to switch to cafeteria-style dining and establish the restaurant as a place where students could relax.

Varsity entered its current era about 20 years ago when the homemade ice cream stand became the pizza kitchen it is today. Seven years ago Dellas introduced wings, and today dinners have all but disappeared from the menu to make room for better-selling items such as cheesesteaks and burgers.

But these menu changes haven't kept Varsity from becoming less and less of a student hangout in the past decade, according to Dellas. He said he knows fewer of the students than he did in past years.

As tirme goes by
The social structure was different then," he said. "The school dow so smali you conld walk out of 10 people. Now it's hard to get close."

Although he cited increased enrollment and new choices for students like the Schine Student Center, it's clear that Dellas believes students themselves have changed. He is hardpressed to think of stories from recent years but is full of tales out of the 1930 s and 1940 s .
Dellas talked about pep rallies held on Marshall Street the night before a big Syracuse Colgate football game, including one at which students poured gasoline down the streetcar tracks and lit a fire that torched the raile down to Genegee Street.

He remembers the time a He remembers the time a group of students drove a Model A Ford through the front doors of Varsity and ordered ice crearn
"During the '30s, students were more reserved, but I think they had much more fun," he said. "Kids today are drinking a hell of a lot more than those days. I think they're studying more today, though," he added.

With its garish orange walls juke box, hand-lettered menu and thick plastic soda glasses Varsity seems like a 1955 college hangout that made only a half-hearted attempt at entering the 1990s.

But one is taken aback at how new much of the venerable old Varsity is. Is it possible that the upside-down banners of vanquished SU football foes, seemingly stitched before the days of Jim Brown and Ernie Davis barely predates Coach Mac? And can it be that the four-word phrase "Your wings are ready" dates only to 1983 ?

That was then, this is now
And is it possible that the nostalgic atmosphere that makes Varsity so appealing is not enough for a man who longs for a time not 30 years past, but half a century?
"I like it both ways," Dellas said about the differences between working now or when he began. "But I guess I enjoyed the "30s more."

Dellas looked around the restaurant, glancing first at the taurant, glancing first at the new menu above the pizza en clave and finally stopping at th television in the middle of the dining room. "Sometimes I wish "It had cur old decor," he said "It would be unique today. There's nothing around like that anymore."

Dellas turned to Marie, his wife of 47 years, who was drumming her fingers on the cash register to the Chevrolet jingle coming from the TVV behind her She smiled and shrugged.

Dellas was asked how long he expects to be manning the same cash register.
"Forever and ever," he answered. "This is the fountain of youth. Everyone is always 17 to 22 years old. They never change. They never change."

For Mark Peterson and Tina Antonakakis, the waiting is over.

1991 Homeconin̄̄̄ . King and Queen Mark Peterson and Tina Antonnkakis were crowned Monday night at Varsity Pizza.

Antonakakis hopes to move to the District of Columbia after graduating and work on Capitol Hill or for the State Department.

From 208 to 2
The announcement was the climax of a selection process that began two weeks and 208 applicants ago.

First, all applicants took an exam on the history of Syracuse University.

From this test, the top 10 males and fermales were selected. These 20 students were then interviewed by a selection committee comprised of three judges.

Based on the interviews and the exam scores, the top three males and females were selected. The judges then chose the winners, but no one knew who won.

That is, until last night.
The runnersup were, in or rder, Bill Gehrman and Mitchell Messinger for king, and Randi Beth Goldberg and Stephanie Lynn Nazzaro for queen.
Until this year, the chief form of recognition for the king and queen was the seat of honor in he Homecoming parade.
This,year, however, something else has been added. During Saturday's football garne against Florida, Peterson and Antonakakis will be included in the half-time proceedings.

In addition, they may be called upon to speak to alumni groups.
Perhaps Peterson summed the evening up best when he said, It should be a great week for everybody."

Uynamic player:
On the first Maryland punt, Shelby Hill was hit in the chest by the Terps' Brandon Bertha despite his fair catch signal.

The hit to the chest kept Hill, in only his second game returning punts, out for two plays.

Hill got revenge on the Terrapins when he returned a punt for a 61-yard touchdown with 6:00 left in the game and the Orangemen leading 24-17.
"It was a good shot he took," Pasqualoni said. "You've got to give Shelby a lot of credit. He got knocked out on the first one, but he came back and knocked them out on the last one."

Hill's return was the first punt returned for a touchdown since Scott Schwedes broke an 80-yard return against Navy in 1986.

Mitchell on the nose
Maryland quarterbacks Jim Sandwisch and John Kaleo must have thought SU nose guard Kevin Mitchell was attached to their facemasks on Saturday night.

Mitchell, who was credited with $91 / 2$ tackles, including one for a loss and one for a sack, was in the Maryland backfield all night.
"Kevin is still getting better," Pasqualoni said. "Kevin's śtrong point is his intensity, tremendous athletic ability, quickness and speed.
"He's working hard and learning the fine points and techniques of the position."
Running away
An integral part of a wide receiver's job is runming, but SU receivers Hill and Qadry Ismail have been working overtime.

Hill returns punts for the Orangemen and Iamail returns kickoffs: Ismail is also the outside contain man on punt coverage.

Because of all this running, Pasqualoni said he will rotate his other wide receivers into the game more frequently.

The beneficiary of the majority of the additional playing time will be Antonio Johneon.
"I think one of the things we have to be careful of is how much running Qadry and Shelby are doing," Pasqualoni said. "They're covering punts. They're covering kickoffs. Shelby's now returning punts. We've got to get more receivers involved in the game. It's just too much for them."

Field hockey draws blank during weekend   By GIL PAGOVICH

The Syracuse University women's field hockey team of 1990 went $17-3$, and so far this year's squad has only one thing in common with last year's team.
Three losses.
The Orangewomen, 1-3, fell to Penn State 6-0 on Friday, and North Carolina on Saturday, 5-0.
SU coach Kathleen Parker said she was more disappointed

${ }^{4}$ All in all, it was a good victory for the team," Foti said. "There's a big difference between being 1-3 and 2-2. We tween being $1-3$ and $2-2$. We wanted to go up there, win the tough place to play. A lot of tough place to play. A lot of Guys hav eye Classic at Ohio State University.

The Buckeye Classic will pit the Orangewomen against what looks like their toughest compe-

than its record.

"The record doesn't bother me, Parker said. The scores from this weekend bother me."

Most irritating to Parker was the Orangewomen's lack of offense.
"I'm extremely disappointed that we were blown out by both that we," Parker said.

Still, Parker praised the Lady Lions, who were a Final Four team last year.
"Penn State is stronger than us at every position," Parker to that point, had to leave the game with a pulled ligament in one of his fingers. Charlie Wilke came in but didn't have to face any shots.
It is not known how long Pollnow will be out, but Foti said he wouldn't be worried if Wilke has to start any future contests.
"We're very comfortable and happy with Charlie in goal," Foti said. "It's one of those luxuries we have, that we have some good goalkeepers. I don't think we're losing much of anything at that position."
Foti also said that he wasn't surprised by the Orangemen's scoring outburst. He attributed their previous lack of scoring to the strong competition they've been up against.
"We're capable of scoring goals in bunches, and we'll always have that ability," Foti said. "With the first couple of opponents that we played, you can't go in to Duke (ranked ninth in the country) and N.C. State (ranked second in the country) and expect to score four goals."

Parker said Syracuse's loss to North Carolina could affect the team later in the season. "We should have had a better game with them," Parker gaid.
"It might hurt us down the line that we didn't."

Evert though the team dropped two games over the weekend, Parker praised the play of senior Diana Despiaumolina.

Because the team was easily defeated this weekend, Parker said the team has to win virtually all of its remaining games in order to qualify for postseason play.
"We've really got to win," Parker said. "We have no other choice. We have to win every lose very many more."

Carrier Dome helps writer catch his Z's

Watching college football is getting downright depressing.
I can stomach the recruiting violations, the hypocrisy of not allowing the players to partake in some of the revenue they generate, the disregard for the "student-athlete."
In fact, all that kind of enhances the game for me.
What gets me depressed on Saturday afternoons is having to watch all the schools where football games are fun and the crowd is genuinely excited.

Since the only colSince the only coltend are at the Carrier Dome, and the only college team I root for is Syracuse University, I get this empty feeling as I watch other college games.

Because, compared to going to a Game at somewhere like Michigan or Clemson, SU football garnes are about as much fun and excitement

The primary cause for the general aura of apathy that is connected with SU foothall on this campus is, without a doubt, the Carrier Dome.

The Dome, as we here at SU endearingly call it, is perhaps the closest one will come to watching a football game in a mausoleum

After walking into the air-tight, hermetically-sealed arena, one is immediately greeted by that office pool lighting which induces migraines and nausea.

If you're lucky enough to actually be a student at the university that the football team proudly represents, you are ushered to your seat in the corner of the end zone.

The 50 -yard line seats are reserved for the really berserk fans--55-yearold couples from DeWitt that are the epitome of what is the rabid, uncontrollable fan.
The entire atmosphere surrounding an SU football game at the Dome is sleep-inducing. I find myself looking at the scoreboard in the third quarter more for the time left in the game than the score.

Lets face it, watching football in doors from bad seats is not fun.

For everything the Dome has done to help the football program, it has made going to an SU home game a chore, and has helped foster the apathetic attitude that most students have toward the football team.

Dome football is sterile. The fact that Syracuse is often home to inclemdoor football.

Football was made to be played outdoors in the elements. SU fans would flock to games with blankets and thermoses of uh ... coffee.
Going to a game would be fun. Cold, but fun. Besides I'm sure the innovative student body would find ways to keep warm.

This weekend's homecoming game against Florida should be a frenzy of excitement. Hey, I would even settle for a good time. But I guess Fill just have to watch Notre Darne vs. Michi gan State on the tube for that, a hope I don't choke on a Dome dog.

Puls breaks out at BC

By JEFF ELBAUM
staff Writer
After compiling three goals and nine assists last season, Syracuse University soccer forward Eric Puls had been shut out through the first three games of this eason.
Now Puls leads the Orangemen in scoring:

Puls scored two goals, the last one coming with 7:15 left in the game, to break a 3-3 tie, and had one assist in the Orangemen's 4-3 victory at Boston College on Sunday.
"Eric played a good game," SU coach Dean Foti said. "He finished off the opportunities when he had them. He did some nice things on attack."

The Orangemen, 2-2 (1-0 in the Big East), started the game out a little slow. The Eagles, winless in their first two games, were hungry for a victory.

Boston College started the scoring at 7:30 of the first half on a goal by Chris Ogbonnah.
Ogbonnah scored again at 23:10, but not before Puls put Syracuse on the scoreboard at 18:50.

That goal was the first one for SU during regulation play this season. The Orangemen's only other goal up to that point came Sept. 11, on a Paul Young penalty kick in overtime against Colgate to give the Orangemen a 1-0 victory.
"It feels real good," said SU midfielder Malcolm Grace, who had an assist on Sunday. "We didn't score but one penalty

Orange truck along, remain undefeated

To paraphrase the Grateful Dead, as did Syracuse University volleyball coach Dan Schulte, the Orangewomen "just seem to keep on trucking along.
Schulte's allusion to the songwriting of Jerry Garcia was in reference to the Orangewomen's third consecutive weekend sweep at Manley Field House, where SU raised its record to $9-0$ for the season.
The Orangewomen won their opening two matches, Friday night against the Rutgers Scarlet Knights and then Saturday versus the University of Buffalo day versus the University of Buffalo Royals, without losing a game- SU $3-1$ victory over the Northeastern Hus-3-1 vies.
kien

The $9-0$ start is the best start of a season for the Orangewomen since SU began competing in the NCAA in 1981.
SU's early season success can be attributed to many factors, perhaps the greatest of which is the combined performance of seniors Jessica Paarlberg and Kathy Patton, as well as junior Annie Parisien.
The trio's success has given rise to a

You can't score without the ball.
But, despite having committed eight turnoverg in its first two games, the turnovers in its first two games, the Syracuse University football team, 2-0, Syracuse University has scored 68 points.

Syracuse coach Paul Pasqualoni said he is pleased with the two wins, but he can't be happy with all the turnovers.

We're certainly concerned about the turnover situation," Pasqualoni said. "Ball security is something I thought I coached last week, but obviously I'm not doing a good job at it.
"We talk about ball security all the time. We're going to continue to coach it and be positive about it. We feel it's something we have to get corrected."

Syracuse quarterback Marvin Graves has thrown three interceptions and fumbled three times in the Orangemen's two games.
Lusardi to the rescue
Syracuse fans had to hold their breath when inside linebacker Dan Conley was Lethal Weapon III. Whatever the name, Paarlberg, Patton and Parisien were again at the forefront of the SU attack ver the weekend.

Other Orangewomen who excelled over the weekend are freshman Tina Grasselli, who recorded fifteen assists against the Royals, and juniors Aimee Mask and Andrea Carson, who also turned in outstanding efforts.
"It was a good weekend for us," Schulte said. "We had contributions from a lot of different people, and we played pretty well."

While the Orangewomen are pleased with the 9-0 start, they are not surprised with the level the team has been playing at.
"We're pretty much where I think we should be at this point of the season," Paarlberg said. "We have been doing a lot of things well, but we have to stay focused and consistent. The toughest part of our season is yet to come."
"I think we are more relaxed and are communicating better than we have been since I have been here," Mask said. "Our passing and our defense have really improved, and I think we are all getting along really well."

As Syracuse University enters an era of downsizing with budget cuts and the probable consolidation of programs and schools, the Chancellor's Ad Hoc Advisory Group has made its recommendations based in part on proposed demographic and enrollment figures for the Northeast.

An estimated 406.590 high school graduations will occur in the Northeast in 1995, according to data from the Office of Enrollment Managernent.

Matriculated students of that year added to incoming freshman from that pool of high school graduations will make up the total SU undergraduate enrollment at a proposed 9,600 in a worst-case scenario.

The parasitic sea lamprey is threatening the $$ 4.7$ billion fishing industry in the Great Lakes.

Rep. Bob Davis, R-Mich., said the federal government needs to rescue the fishing industry.
The eel-like lamprey, which migrated to the lakes from the Atlantic Ocean more than 100 years ago, attaches itself to a fish with a sucking disk.
Lamprey kill fish by piercing acales and skin and sucking out bodily fluids.

During the 12 to 20 months of its adult parasitic stage, a lamprey can kill about 40 pounds of fish.

bused on broader mational visibility.
"A primary goal for the next few yenrs is to do everything possible to improve admission of qualified new studenta and retention of satisfactory students to increase total enrollments and improve graduation rates;" stated the report, which was submitted Monday to Chancellor Kenneth A. Shaw.

Some critics charge a drop in enrollment will also lower the university's standards in admitting new students.
"We do not belleve that it would be advisable to lower would be advisable to admissions standards, said the group, which is comprised of "Even more vital to our future is our reputation for academic excellence.
"Evidence from our past and from the experience of other universities indicates atrongly that if we accept leas wellprepared students, we will see reduced numbers of applications from better students in future years as our reputation diminishes:"

Other customary sources of income to the university are also failing to increase in proportion to costs.

Lost aid

The largest item of support from New York state is the Bundy prograrn, which provides Bundy prograra, which provides private universities in the state with a cash award based on the number of graduates each year. In 1991, the amount of the award decreased by 37 percent mmounting to a loss of $$ 2.3$ million for SU. A drop in enrollment will mean fewer graduates and less money from the Bundy program in coming years.

There are additional revenue losses that result from a drop in enrollment. Revenue decreases in enrohment. Revenuedecreases dence halls, dining services and dence halis, dining services and on the university's total resources.
Budget reductions made to date for 1990-91 and 1991-92 stand at a total of $$ 20.8$ milion. An estimated $$ 38.8$ million will be necessary for fiscal years 1992-93, 1993-94 and 1994-95 to help close the gap between revenues and expenses.

Buaget cuts of $$ 9.5$ million to date in the schools, colleges, acadernic support unita and administrative units represent about 5.6 percent of the base budgets of these units.

For example, for fiscal year 1992, tuition was raised 6.8 percent and a freeze in salaries and operating budgets occurred to holp reduce the deficit.
"It is assumed that for the next few years tuition increases will cover modest increases in compensation. operation expenses, and add-ons for essential purposes such as financial aid," the advisory group stated.

More cuts, more cuts

Additional cuts that will be required in the next three years (estimated at between $$ 23.5$ million and $$ 32.5$ million) represent another 15 to 20 percent of current base budgets in administrativeandacademicunits.
"Even deeper cuts will be necessary if the university decides to make more competitive compensation increases or to fund add-ons for investment in new activities or quality improvements in selected areas, the advisory group stated.
The total of scademic and administrative budgets for fiscal year 1992 is $$ 161.3$ million - $$ 112.1$ million in Academic Affairs. The total of the budgets for SU's schools and colleges is $$ 69.1 \mathrm{million}$.

Academic Affairs makes up about 70 percent of the university's reducible budget - that sity's reducible budget $\rightarrow$ that portion of the Educational and Gortion of the Educational and a fixed cost nor a transfer paya fixe ment.

If uniform budget reductions were imposed, about 40 percent of the reductions would have to occur in the schools and colleges.

The enrollment decline is also evident in similar private universities in the Northeast and across the country, forcing reductions in budgets and downsizing the universities.

The Ad Hoc Advisory Group noted the problem as it applies to SU.
"We share the overwhelming view of faculty respondents that in the face of fiscal challenge the university must respond in a highly strategic fashion.'

Society provides artisticopportunities

By MICHAEL FIYNN
Contributing Writer
Despite its name, the Comfort Society is not a therapy group for people with mattress problems, said Leslie Klecan, president of the society.
Namaed after George F. Comfort, who founded the Syracuse University art department in 1874 , the group started 10 years ago so people could gain firsthand art experience, she said.
"We're not a group of manic depressives, and we don't git around in lounge chairs smoking pipes," she said. "It's an organization that's there for organization thats there for peopld be rnusic, visual arts. percould be music, Visual arts, performingarta, or whatever. Hopefully, it's a kind of social netfully, it

The group is planning a trip to a 20th century museum of art in Buffalo and will continue a tradition of showing interesting movies, Klecan said.
"One of the things were going to do is bave one free film a month," she said. "They're not exactly 'artsy-fartsy' films. Last year, we showed a lot of David Lymeh films - things that aren't necessarily your fine art films."

Small but diverse membership
Despite a usual membership of between 10 and 25 people. Klecan is quick to point out the Klecan is quick to group's diversity.
groups aiversity.
"We have people from all different majors, and anyone different majors, and anyone from freshmen to "Eraduate students," ghe said. "We even had dents, she said. We even had returning students older than returning my mother.
"Last year, we had the guy who rings the bells in Crouse College.

A tradition has been the society's "Lunch and Learn" after noons, Members bring their Iunches and enjoy a stimulating talk frorn a guest speaker, Klecan said.

Last year, we had a visiting professor from England come in and speak on publishing because that's a big concern for people that are writing and taking classes in the arts," ahe said.
"He was very, very knowledgeable about everything, and he sort of sat around and had lunch ... just talking to people," lunch ... just talking to people." she said. The group often has professors hold speeches and talks on an informal basis.
"Many times you'll find them much more personable outside the classroom," she said.
Students taking Fine Arts 205 हnd 206 might be particularly interested in joining, she said.

Art and diversity
Klecan added that if studenta become involved in the society, they not only study the diversity of the arts in class, but also have a chance to meet people who honestly like the arts and even indulge in the arta for a living.
The group tries to accommodate members with certain intereste or those who want to see a new movie or exhibit.
As a graduate student. Klecan said she is conscious of the busy lifestyles of college students. She said last year the group had three formal meetings, and the rest of its time was opent coming in contact with apen art.

This year, the society plans to have four tormal meetings, she said. The first meetings of each bemester are important because the members decide on oflicers and set a tentative schedule for the upcoming months; she smid.

Genine Plunkett, the vice president of the society, said she is optimistic about the club's futirre.
"We're a small group now." she said, "but we're hoping to enlarge as much as we can. We're waiting for word on some events coming up that we can go to, and we want people to come to the meetings and tell us what they would like to do. We love input from our members."

The society receives a "small" amount of funding from the GraduateStudent Organization, Klecan said. Recently, the society appointed its first GSO repreacntative Maggie Thompson, who will serve as a link between the two organizations Klecan said

The proposed trip to Buffalo must be approved by the art department if the group plans on having school funding she said

Klecan said the group has been mismanaged in the past.
Problems in the past
She said past officers let the organization slide because of a lack of organization and consis tency in maintaining the group's intent - which is bringing people in touch with art and those who appreciate it.

Klecan said she and Plunkett have pinpointed those faults and now have the group running smoothly.
"We're going to really get people active," she said. "Not so people active, she said. "Not so much that they have they will be cornmitted but that they will be cornmitted and stay interested and take it and stay interested and take as an organization or a club rather than something where they go once and that's it

The society will hold ites firgt meeting in Room 441A of the Hall of Languages today at 4:15 p.m., she said. Klecan ssid that people who are interested in joining the society but can't make the meeting can leave a note in the group's mailbox in the Hall of Languages, Room 441 .

aution needed in the Gulf

About a year ago, the United States was gearing up for Operation Desert Storm.

Now, as the United Nations attempts to enforce the resolutions set by the cease-fire agreement, troops and ships are being sent to the Persian Gulf to flex American muscle in the region and force Saddam Hussein to disclose his country's weapon systems and holdings.

The Iraqi leader and his country's military must be treated with extreme caution by the United States and its allies. No American wants to see another conflict in the region, considering our ignorance of the weaponry Iraq possesses.

As one military analyst put it,

THE  PROMETHEAN

 ple play with the food you eat. No matter how many health regulations a restaurant swears to follow it only takes one disgruntled employee to piss in your soup.For the last six summers we have worked in different restaurants and have several true stories to tell.
Firat of all, a common misconception is that the customer at the table is in the power seat. You see these obnoxious fat bodies barking orders at the assumed subservient waiter or waitress. Yet what the customer doesn't see is the waiter smirking in the shadows of the kitchen as he spits in their salad. And he's a A waiter.

Saddam is "more than just another thug." During the Persian Gulf war, Saddam seemed willing to deprive his people and aid in their destruction in an exchange for power. There is no way to ensure this will not happen again.

The American people must, like it or not, prepare for an extended United States and allied military presence in the Persian Gulf, much like we did last year. Saddam is not cooperating with the UN agreement, which saved his own regime's power in Iraq.

All hope lies in the hands of the Iraqi leader and his willingness to comply with UN resolutions. However, caution and discretion are the only necessary actions at this point.

e 'cultured' food

are there. Most of the time it is not the chef who is vile and mischievous, though one of us witnessed a chef wiping his nose with his hands while working.

But beware of other employees. One of us worked with a man who found it funny to take his dirty foot and step on every salad in the walk-in refigerator. This man rummaged through a Waldorf salad and dug out every nut with his greasy, juicy hands because the customer sent it back to get the nuts out. This man, who had been in a 97 degree kitchen for eight hours, rubbed a crab cake underneath his armpit and proceeded to serve it with a smile.

This is more common than one wants to believe, but come on. Rice is washed in toilet bowls, old seafood is revived with lemon, food that lands on the floor is always served, rotting produce is offered incognito, and parasitic produce is offered incognito, and parasitic hot.

But don't worry, none of this happens in clean, cultured upstate New York.

Columnist should observe carefully

To the editor:

This is in response to Mr Wright's column, which appeared in the Sept. 13 issue of The Daily Orange

The Weightiifting Club, to which you were referring to, is an intramural club that anyone can join. Therefore, in "his case, it is not the university "sucking money out of your pockets." The Weightlifting Club was atarted three years ago for experienced lifters who wanted a good place to work ont.

Before we started, the university didn'teven have free weights available to nonvarsity athletes. But now, for a fee of $$ 15$, one can have the privilege of working out in the free weight room with other experienced lifters.

The $15 goes not only to pay the "helpful workers" but also to continually upgrade the free weight room. Im sorry if you think $$ 15$ is a lot of money. But for a serious lifter, it's nothing. I'm no rich man myaelf, and yet i was able to come up with $$ 144$ for a Gold's Gym membership this summer. I don't think $$ 15$ should be a problem.

Now about the hours. The Weightlifting Club owns more than half of the equipment in the room, and thus we should be (and are) entitled to half of the hours during the day. Since you stated that you have afternoon clasges, please note the open hours for the room are in the morning and in the evening, so what is the ## problem?

If you wanted the hours, you could have easily picked up a Recreation Services brochure at the entrance of Archbold (and bince you are an SU student, Im assuming you can read), or simply looked at the door to the weight room, where the hours are clearly posted.

For a "People Observer." you do not observe too well. In this case, Mr. Wright, you are indeed in a "club of idiots," with membership exclusive to you.

Don't use people as pawns   To the editor:   To the editor:  pressure larael to stop

The Jewish presence or "settlements" in the disputed territoriez are often blamed for the lack of peace in the Middle East. Fístory contradicts this conclusion.
The Arab states refused to negotiate peace with Israel even before 1967, when Iarael came into possession of the territories after five Arab countries invaded, and again when wettlement halted im 1978, during Camp David. The U.S. and Kiraeli govermmentsagree, and United Nations resolutions declare, that whether the land belongs to farsel or the Arabr, it mugt be negotiated. The suggestion be negotiated. Hesugrestion settlements by withholding lonn guarantees to the waves of Soviet and Ethiopian refugees should be seen as hostage taking and condem hostage taking and condernned. Think of the protest and indignation that would arise if Jews were banned from living in Efebronville,N.Y. How can it be suggested that Jews should be forbidden from living in the biblical city of Hebron, only a stone's throw from Jerusalem?
The absorption of Soviet and Ethiopian refugees in Israel is strictily a humanitarian issue. To link U.S. loan guarantees, which have a nomimal cost to this country, to the political issuie of Israel's gettlement policy is, in President Bush's terms, a "quid pro que," or a linking of unrelated issuea.

As of now, the U.S. State Department has reported that only about 1 percent of the immigrantshavechosen, under their own free will fnot from pressure from the Israeli govermment), to live in Judea and Samaria. The new immigrants should not become pawna in a political dispute for which they are not responsible and which is unrelated to their absorption in Israel.

Grades don't say it all  To the editor:

1 would like to respond to Gina Mazzariello's letter commenting on the Drily at Flint Hall on Sept 9 talk at Flint Hall on Sept. 9 . Some of the statements attributed to me by Ms. Mazzariello do not reflect my views, but the bottom line interpretation that I think learning is more important than grades is correct.

1 first developed my views from my experience as an undergraduate at Johns Hopkins where grade-grubbing pre-meds would push curves on multiple choice tents to a point where below a 90 was a C. Thoge same grade-grubbers had no interest in their community and freaked out when faced witha thought question.

My experience as a professor has supported my initial view. I know many students with 3.7 to 4.0 averages who are not as to 4.0 averages who are not as knowledgeable, creative or involved as gtudents with lower averages.
Ialsoknow several who have had much more difficulty gettingjobs than students with lower averages. As far as graduate, law and med schools go, grades are important, but what is even more unfortunate: standardized test performance is even more important than tests or grades.

My point can be made by asking the question, "W'
Is it choosing easier courses or courses that are evaluated in a way that favors your ability?

Is it memorizing the book or lexture rather than spending time thinking about and discussing the material or reading a supplementary book?

Is it defining your existence and self-worth in terms of your grade so that a $B, C$, or $F$ becomes a devastating experience?
Is it cheating to get the grades you want?
Is it failing to tell professors they need to explain the material more clearly or that "teaching is not telling" because you
Ms. Mezzariello may be concerned that my position is giving some students who don't seem to care about academics an excuse to party more. I hare that concern but arn confident that atudents like that probably have read neither The Daily Orange nor her letter.
And, more importantly, many of those students may be avoiding academics because they think that college is about grades, not learning.

Operation fetish tricks Americans

Just when Americans were being discharged from the recovery room following Operation Desert Storm, the "crush of Iraq," and the ensuing months ROYS. An tion, it's GUTTERMAN time for anOUT OF THE caplez tion. tion Determine Resolve, the latest operation to surgically dismantle the Iraqi military machine.

Possibly the greatest development born from the War of opment born irom the war of not: unprecedented unity among not: unprecedented unity among nations against a common enemy: Americans rallying beemy; Americans rallying behind "their boys" or
The groatest result of this war is the new military and pseudo-official classification of every action, cause or movement as "Operation."

This new lingo must have medical surgeons wallowing in self-unimportance. Tb think, nondoctors and mintary brass having the audacity to steal their thunder, thus trivializing operations, denigrating the half-decade of medical training.

With the advent of the operation classification. blase and triteactionsand everydayevents are invigorated and esteemed to a higher level. Of course, this to a higher level. Of course, this upgrade of importance dinin ishes and obluscates what they really are tithing. This leads to pun-continencal brainwash and upes people who do not possess the capacity to cut through the argon.
But it's so meat!
Here are some recent applications of the operation classificaion. military and non-military:

Maybe the last one is something a few more people should treat themselves to.

With yesterday's announcement of dispatching war planes to clean up a mess that the U.S. government whould have taken care of before the massive $\mathrm{Op}^{p}$ eration Withdraw from Iraq. there is something to look forward to - the welcome home party that awaits this batch of war heroes.
The excitement builds several cities have already announced that they will have the "fargest welcome horme tickertape paradedparty" in the history of modern celebration.
The problem may lie here. Perhaps President Bush got lonely and wanted aniother party.

Remember the old Eays of war when the winner got the real spoils?
In pre-historic war the winner got to eat the loser's food. wear his dead animal fur and steal his spear

In the Middie Ages, the winner got to pillage the village and force the loser's women into a life of shame.

In the 1500 g , the winner got the loser's ship, sailors and the booty.

In the 20Lh centary, the winner got to carve up Europe like a Thanksgiving turkey.

Now, the winner gets a wel come home party with former

New Yoxk Yankees owner George Steinbrenner.

Times have changed. But the winner also gets to. come back six months later, like the tourxiament of champions on the quiz show "Jeopardy."

Possibilities for this celebration are innumerable.
After surviving a summer of Operation Honor Our Troops, one can only wonder how this round will be able to top the last party.
Maybe New York City Mayor David Dinkins can top his last multi-million dollar parade. He has already put out the word inviting Saddam Hussein to be inviting Sad the Operaster of Cerernonies in the Operation Welcome Home If, the Next Day. After all, Saddam seems to be the only celebrity not welcoming home the troops.

But that would be ludicrous, the man America hated, nearly as much as Hitler, welcoming home "our" troops.

Yes, it is ludicrous. How could such a hated enemy of America take part in such a" "holy and patriotic* experience? Only true See GUTTER Page All Fifth-year genior Bryan Pelton decides on a video Saturday night at Westcott Video located at 111 Harvard Place.

Stores offer video variety

By KARA FITZSIMMONS Staff Writer

So it's a Friday night.
You're still saturated with alcohol from last weekend and a party just daesn't sound appealing. Even if you didn't drink last weekend, you're tired of the bar scene.

Vegetation in the ol residence hall room or apartment is starting to sound pretty good. Your alternative to the life of liquor? How about a relaxing evening with a rented movie?

For convenience, the video stores to know are Spectrum and Westcott Videos.

The video department of Spectrum is a part of the studentrun business located in the Schine Student. Center.

The prices at Spectrum are hard to beat. Monday through Thurs day regularvideosare $$ .99$ Thursday regularvideosare $$ .99$. Friday and Saturday regular Friday and Saturday regular videos are $$ 1.49$ and new revideos are $$ 1.49$.
leases are $$ 1.99$.

Besides the new releases and other common categories, Specrum also carries a cult section. Spectrum sells extra copies of new releases and unpopular movies after a few months.
All that is required for membership is a major credit card. The video department of Spectrum is open Monday through Thursday from $10 \mathrm{~g} . \mathrm{m}$. to 6 p.m. Friday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday noon to 8 p.m.

Cult classics

Westcott Videos is located only five minutes away from SU at 111 Harvard Place. Westcott offers the regular categories of movies, such as new releases, comedies and documentaries. However, they also specialize in foreign flicks, older movies and a category they call "cult classics." These movies are college cult favorites, like The Rocky Horror Picture Show Rental is $$ 2.25$ a night. For every 10 videos returned early, two rentals are free. Westcott also prints coupons in Money to Burn.
Membership is free with a major credit card. For the poor souls who don't own a credit card, memberships can be put on the account of another memon th ber.

Westcott Videos is open Monday through Saturday $11 \mathrm{a} . \mathrm{m}$. to 10 p.m., and Sunday noon to 9 p.m. For other poor souls who don't have a car, Westcott delivers videos to SU on the weekends in the winter.

Within only 15 minutes driv ing time of the Syracuse University campus, several video stores make their unique offerings.

Blockbuster Video, the "god" of video stores, has a store located at 3430 Erie Boulevard East, 10 to 15 minutes from SU. Of course, Blockbuster has thousands of titles. Of course, Blockbuster has alf the new releases. Of course, Blockbuster has many videos per new release title.

Syracuse

By IENNIFER GNIADY
Contributing Writer
As the search for new and exciting things to do in the Syracuse area continues, many people fall back on an old standby - dinner out on the town.
If this routine is getting a little worn-out or you're looking for a new place to take family and friends, try eating out ethnic style.

So what if up till now you haven't gotten beyond Varsity on Marshall Street?

Here to help you look like a true Syracusan are a few suggestions of interesting places to check out in the coming months.

Starting off close to home south-of-the-border cuisine has long been a favorite in America One place to try is Juanita's Mexican Kitchen at 600 Court Rd.

This casual restaurant serves authentic Mexican dishes unti 9:45 p.m. every night except Sunday. You don't need reserva cions, and the entrees are priced at about $$ 7$ to $$ 8$.
Try to go on the weekend when Juanita prepares her fresh house specialties.
Another popular choice for the less daring is one of the local Chinese restaurants.
Ling Ling Chinese restaurant is the noted recipient of the Golden Chopsticks award, an annual award given to the area's best Oriental restaurant.
Dinners cost about $$ 8$, with daily specials costing a little more.

Oriental options
Also serving Chinese food is the China Pavilion. China Pavilion serves Hunan, Mandarin, Szechuan and Cantonese styles of food, all of which are prepared by chefs native to the regions. The cost is comparable to Ling Ling's.

Both restaurants can be found on West Genesee Street and are open until 10:30 p.m. on weekends and 9:30 p.m. during the week.

For further adventures in Oriental cuisine, Kyoko Japanese Restaurant and Sushi Bar, located in Shop City, is a little more fanciful. For under $$ 25$ more fan enjoy teriyaki, sushi, one can enjoy teriyaki, sushi, ties of traditional Japanese cook-Kyoko accepts major credit cards. Be sure to call ahead for reservations.

With the beginning of the autumn season, what could be more appropriate than an Oktoberfest? If it's German fare you're looking for, then Danzer's is the place.

Billed as a Bavarian restaurant, this laid-back place is known for hospitality and great food. German specialties are plentiful, and the prices are reasonable at less than $$ 10$.
If the festive atmosphere isn't enough to lure you, Danzer's is enoug until a.m. for all the night owls. It's located just off

Middle East on M-Street
Middle Eastern cuisine may be new to you, but many people have already found out about this imported cuisine. For those staying near Syracuse University, King David's 13 an excellent choice.

While you might not expect Marshall Street to have much more than pizza and subs, King David's offers a choice.

The food is similar to Greekstyle cuisine, although it is billed as Lebanese cooking. King David's offers chicken and lamb entrees along with a wide selec-

ion of vegetarian dishes

If you want to dine here, plan to eat before 9 p.m., since King David's doesn't stay open as late as some of its neighbors.
Another option is Munjed's Middle Eastern Cafe. Located at 530 Westcott St., Munjed's offers a popular combination platter for $$ 7$.

The platter comes with meat or vegetarian selections and is perfect if you want to try alittle bit of everything.

Some of the favorite foods include falafel, shish-kebabs and grape leaves. On Friday evenings, the chef prepares a special rice dish.

Just in case you're still not up to truly different dining, the best bet for international-style dining is good old Italian food.

Giovanni's Ristorante at 2062 Erie Boulevard East is open until midnight and accepts all major credit cards. Dinner runs from $$ 5$ to $$ 14$ with daily house pecialties.
If you get there before 6 p.m., you can take advantage of the early bird special. In addition to lots of homemade Italian pasta dishes, steak and seafood are also featured.
Reservations are recommended in order to avoid a wait.

These suggestionsshouldi help to put a new twist on your dining experiences. Whether you've exhausted the local bar and grill joints or just want a break from the dining halls, ethnic food may just be the change of pace you want.

Symphony offers escape

By IENNIFER KRONSTAIN
Assf. Editorial Editor
The best-kept musical secret among Syracuse University students is not bar, and it's not a new dance club. It's culture, and the city of Syracuse is a lucky benefactor.
The Syracuse Symphony is opening its 31 st season in the city, and students have a special invitation to enjoy the music, according to Susan Kolodziejczyk, representative of the symphony.
"I think (students) will get a lot of entertainment for a little bit of money," Kolodziejczyk said.

Rush tickets, available a halfhour before the curtain rises, are sold for $$ 5$ to students with ID cards, she said.
Guest conductors this season include Peter McCoppin of Vancouver. Shunsuki FKori will be visiting Syracuse from the Tokyo symphony.

While the bulk of concerts are performed at the Civic Center in downtown Syracuse, the symphony will be playing throughout New York. Dates in Auburn, Ithaca, Watertown and Rome are being set, Kolodziejczyk said.
The group also performs "runout" concerts, where the ensemble plays one night only, she said.
Take a classical break
Going to the symphony is an opportumity for students to get away from campus and take a break from academic life, Kolodziejczyk said.
"Syracuse is the smallest city in the U.S. to have a professional orchestra," she said.

The 80 paid symphony members, 66 full-time and 14 parttime, will be playing in four different mini-series, each designed to target a specific audisigne.
"The Classics Series is the heart of the season,"

Kolodziejczyk said. It will include 14 concerts and will feature classical Western music such as Mozart, Beethoven and other traditional artists, she said.
"We'll do themed programs for the most part." said Kolodziejczyk of the Rops Series. The featured music genres will include big band music, holiday music and show tunes among others, she said.

Casual Classics is a Sunday afternoon series featuring light classical music. The series will include shorter performances of more familiar classical music. Audience members will experience a "sampler" of musical styles and compositions, Kolodziejezyk said.

On Saturday mornings, children from five to 10 years of age are the prospective audience as the symphony performs pieces from the Family Series. The show will include visual ele See SYMPHONY Page BB

Asst. Lifestyle Editor
Beginning next week, theater enthusiasts will suffer from an embarrassment of riches.

Theaters affiliated with Syracuse University will produce more than 15 plays and musicals this semester.

When community theaters such as Salt City and touring Broadway shows are included, a new show will open every weekend of the semester.

The 1991-92 theater season begins in earnest next weekend with the opening of two local shows and a special presentation.

On Sept. 26, WNTQ-93.1-FM radio personality Bob Brown takes on the title role in Stephen Sondheim's Sweency Todd: The Demon Barber of Fleet Street at the Salt City Center for the Performing Arts.

Brown, who has performed the title role in Salt City's Jesus Christ Superstar for several years, leads a cast of almost two dozen for four weekends.

The next day, Syracuse Stage opens its fall season with an opulent production of William toration classic The Country Wife. In addition to a number of Broadway and TV veterans, six SU students will appear in the play. One of these students, Stephanie Seeley of tast year's Oh, Cloris!, was described by director Julianne Boyd as having "a rather substantial role."

A special presentation
Finally, on Sept. 28, the Paul Robeson Performing Arts Co. will present a special one-night presentation of Paul Robeson: Thie Man and His Music at the Civic Center.

Americans, like Bob Hope, can support the troops.

Hope happens to be British.
Too many Amerjcans were duped into the hyped patriotism of the Operation - with their little flags stuck to car windows like stuffed Garfield dolls and hike stuffed Garfield dolls and new red, white and blue bumper stickers - like children tricked into believing that an operation will not hurt. Until that child awakens the next day in the recovery room with a sewn up scar or an amputated limb -it will hurt.
Too many supported the war, but for the wrong reasons or for the sake of being with the in-crowd." For many it was unpopular to support the war for its implicit support of American allies or to ensure cheap oil or to take out a dictator -. they supported it because it was the thing to do.

Half a year after the operation the scar festers and the problems remain
America nearly took out the bad guys, but, obviously, little was solved and America's problems were put on the back burner.

SAT Ecores dropped to an all-time low; unemployment remained at a five-year high point. American companies are mov ing abroad; education is down and tuition is up. Land development grows and no one can afford to buy a house and there are enough super-malls.

America has been selling out at bargain basement rates. Many of yesterday's bargains - tools. weapons, factories, technology and knowledge - are boomeranging, only to smack the nation across the face in front of the world.

The one operation neglected by all is the one the country needs the most - Operation America.

But it is more fun and prob ably easier to have an operation than a solution.

About 50 percent of the crowd missed his performance. What a shame.

Petty in Wonderland
Petty, accustomed to delivering stellar performances after 15 years, turned in a typical performance.

The stage, dressed up as an Alice in Wonderland-like treeAlice in wonderland-ike tree-ceived a visit from a harmonicabearing psychedelic dragon. The stage set-up wascreative, and the band wasn't shabby either. Fifteen years of playing together has made them pretty tight.

Not so tight, however, that they couldn't avoid depending too much on old tricks. In fact, Petty relied most heavily on his two most recent records, Full Moon Fever and Into The Great Wide Open.

Petty touched upon what he called one of his "best threechord songs," "Free-Fallin," which seemed, judging by the crowd response, to be the Syracuse regional anthem.

He covered the feisty "Yer So Bad," the matter-of-fact "Love is a Long Road" and the energetic rocker "Running Down A Dream." He also played the crowd-pleasing "I Won't Back Down."

Petty makes some noise

Petty drew as generously from his most recent release Into The Great Wide Open. playing off-thecuff sarcastic wonders "Learning To Fly," "Into The Great Wide Open," "Out In The Cold" and the final encore "Makin" Some Noise."
Petty knew he couldn't deny his formative years and thus played "Listen To Her Heart," "American Girl," "Breakdown" and "Refugee."
He also paid respect to "a great Irish poet," Van Morrison, breat Irish poet, van Morrison, by cover

The encores began shakily, and, with the exception of a choppy Bob Dylan-esque version of "The Waiting," were probably not the wisest choices to close the show.

PITT

The revived Panthers will be hard-pressed to hold on to their ranking, as they face upcoming challenges in Maryland, Notre Dame, Syracuse and Penn State. Even if they are not invited to a post-season bowl game, Hackett said, the team will be improved from a season ago. difficult July and August and it had a profound effect on the heart of our team," Hackett said. "Our seniors have showed the younger guys how to approach the game week in and weel out This team is more together and more focused than a year ago."

Back to reality

While Pittsburgh was last season's surprisingly bad squad, the Temple Owls were the East's pleasant surprise.

Coach Jerry Berndt's team turned things around last season, finishing $7-4$ after a disastrous $1-10$ record in 1989.

Temple opened this year with an ugly $41-3$ loss at Alabama and were beaten soundly at Pitt last week.

The road show continues this week, as should the losing streak, as the Owls travel to Clemson to take on the eighth-ranked Tigers.
Despite the tough start and this week's tough opponent. Berndt has remained optimistic.
"We know our backs are against the wall, so we're going down to Clemson as a heavy underdog and we know upsets happen every week," Berndt said. "We're going down to Death Valley and I'm going to read Psalm 21 to see if I can get some extra motivation for our guys."

Punter Trent Thompson was handed the starting quarterback job over benched QB Anthony Richardison last week. Thompson hardly lit a fire under the Owis however as he completed a paltry 8 of 21 pass completed a paltry 8 of 21 pass interceptions. Berndt's assess interceptions. Ber's assessment of Thompson's play shows the desperate state the Owls are in.

I think we found an offensive leader last week in Trent Thompson," he said.
Hurricane watch
Last week's classic showdown between the Miami Hurricanes and the Houston Cougars turned into a letdown.

The No. 2 Hurricanes walked all over the Cougars 40-10, extending their Orange Bowl winning streak to 39 games.

For their part in the debacle, Miami quarterback Gino Tor retta and Kevin Williams wer named Big East Offensive and Special Teams Players of the Week, respectively.

Torretta torched the Cougars secondary for 16 completions, 365 yards and four touchdowns.

Miami coach Dennis Erickson said he is pleased with Torretta's development.
thought Gino had an out-lot and used a lot of man coverage," Erickson said. "He gets better all the time, has a great arm and really reads the defenses well."

The loss dropped Houston from No. 10 to No. 21 in the AP poll and upped Miami's record to 2-0. Miami has the week off to prepare for a Sept. 28 contest

Syracuse backup linebacker John Lusardi was named Big East Defensive Player of the Week for his emergency-role performance against Maryland.

Lusardi had a game-high 14 tackles, including seven solo after replacing Dan Conley in the first quarter. He also scored the winning touchdown with an interception in the Terrapin endzone.

"And suddenly everything in life became that much better..."

INJURY

Conley and Young were the Orangemen's top two tacklers last geason with 126 and 111 respectively.

Thus far this season, Young has 20 tackles and Conley has 12 stops.

The loss of Danny is going to hurt us a little bit," Young said. "We were sound coming into the year with everybody where they were. Now that he's out, it disturbs us a little bit."

Pasqualoni said the team just needs to regroup with Conley needs to regroup with Conley out for season.
"We feel bad because Danny is such a great, unselfish kid," Pasqualoni said. "I think the team is going to be fine. I think we'll regroup and we'll come back out after them and do the best we can."

Regardless of whoever replaces Conley, they won't possess as much game experience or the same type of continuity Conley shares with Young.

John Lusardi, who had 14 tackles including seven solo and an interception for a touchdown an interception for a touchdown last week, will start this Saturday against the University of Florida in Conley's spot.

Lusardi was named Big East Defensive Player of the Week for his efforts after Conley was injured.
September 19, 1991
"I'm not used to playing with John like I am with Danny," Young said. " Tm going to have to get a feel for John
'I'm going to have to pick it up a little bit more than I usually do. Really keep things going out there.
Pasqualoni said he also may use back-ups Matt Greco and Reggie Terry or move Chip Tbdd from outside linebacker. Those players will work on drills in practice.
"We're fortunate we have a good group of linebackers," he said. "They're all going to have to fire it up We'll find out now or our depth is at the lime What backer position."

Young said he now needs to assume more of a leadership role.
"(John's) catching on to things pretty quickly," Young said. "Irm out there helping him out a little bit so that helps him out. a lot.
${ }^{4}$ I can go out and get him set where he's got to go, so he doesn't have to do it all himself." Pasqualoni credits Young with settling down Lusardi when he first entered the game.

Lusardi said having Young working with him is a tremendous advantage.
"It gives me a little confidence boost," Lusardi said, "knowing that he's beside me, knowing what's going on. I'm sure (he's) helping me if I have to know something."

Syracuse gains early lead, holds on 3-1

By JEFF ELBAUM Staff Writer

The Syracuse University soccer team enjoyed a rare commodity Wednesday night at the Carrier Dome - breathing room.

The Orangemen, $3-2$, built up a 3-0 lead in the second half before defeating a young Long Island University squad, 3-1.

In their first four games this season, the Orangemen's largest lead had been one goal.
"It felt a lot better," said SU midfielder Malcolm Grace, who scored a goal and an assist on Wednesday. "We got ahead early, but we kind of let down after we got a couple goals on them. That allowed (LIU) to get the last goal. But I think we were a lot more relaxed after we got a couple goals up on them."

Grace put SU on top early, as he scored only 2:25 into the game.

The play started with Paul Young booting the ball forward from mid-field. LIU goalie Gary Gonzalez charged out to clear the ball, but he miss-kicked it right into the charging Grace's shoulder. Grace caught up with the ball 10 yards from the goal and tapped it into the empty net

Young put the Orangemen up 2-0 at $27: 42$ of the first half on an assist from Grace.
Grace trapped the ball with his chest, on the right side of Gonzalez, and centered it to Young, who blasted the ball in from five yards out.
LIU couldn't muster up any offense in the first half as it didn't even have a shot on goal.

Blackbirds coach Arnoid Ramirez Jr. said he wasn't surprised.
"I hate to say it, but I knew it would be very difficult to win it would be very difficult to win here," Ramirez said. "The best we ever did in this place was tie. a number of years ago. Our team is very young. It's going to take a while."

The second half was played a little more evenly, as Syracuse assimilated some reserves into the line-up.
SU built a 3-0 lead as Paul Young scored his second goal of the game and third of the season 14:06 into the half.

Young's goal came on a pretty passing play, where the ball went from Nino Galich to Eric Puls and finally to Young, who placed it in from 13 yards out.
LIU finally got on the scoreboard with 17:38 left in the game on a goal by Walter Bustamanta to finish the scoring.
${ }^{\text {Sig }}$ U defender Chris Wright said mis-communication led to LIU's goal.
"There was a loose ball on the top of the 18 -yard line," Wright said. "There was one guy that wasn't marked. The ball came open. The guy found his opporopen. The guy found his opp Young, who now leads Orangemen with three goals, said the victory was an important one.

"This is a big win," Young said. "We were $0-2$, and now we've won three straight. We just have to keep focused and the wins will come gradually.

 now," said quarterback Shane Matthews, the SEC Player of wasn't for our defense, we might have lost the Alabama game."The Gators defenge, which has finished ranked in the top five each of the past three seasons, has recovered six fumbles and intercepted three passes in its first two games.
"When was the last time Alabama got beat like that?" asked Syracuse coach Paul Pasqualoni. "We"re in the very deep end of the pool."

The Alabama win, coupled with a $59-21$ win over San Jose State, has put Florida near the top defensively again. Opposing quarterbacks have been sacked seven times and had 18 hurried passes.
"Last week was a big win for us," Culpepper said. "We had a couple breakdowns, which were mostly mental mistakes. Rut those can be corrected."

Leave it to the coach, however, to find something wrong with last week's film. Steve Spurrier, in his second year as the head coach, said the Gators' secondary missed assignments were covered up by a tremendous pass rush.
"I'm sure (Syracuse) is going to look at the tapes and see some holes back there," Spurrier said. "Our pass rush was so good the quarterback didn't so good the quarterback didn' have time to see son guys open downfield."

Another Florida flaw, according to the coach, was that its defensive tackles spread too wide on the field and left room up the middle.

Spurrier said the running ability of Syracuse quarterback Marvin Graves concerns him. Graves is more mobile than either the San Jose State or Alabama quarterback, and his ability to run the option presents problems, Spurrier said.
"We hope we're smart enough not to open the gates again and say, 'Go ahead, Marvin, take off through the middle," Spurrier said.

Graves has lost three fumbles in the first two SU games, but his ability to hold on to the ball and run the freeze option will be key to the Orangemen's ability to keep Florida's defense honest.

Culpepper said the Gators* biggest fear is Graves' ability to pass out of the option formation. "Graves can fake, pitchout and then drop back into the pass after freezing the linebackers with the run," Culpepper said. "The whole defense is going to have to be on the top of its have to

Gators pack their bags
Florida is playing its first road game after opening the season with two at home.

The Gators are smarting after getting blown out in two of their final three road games last year. Tennessee beat UF 45-3 in Knoxville and Florida State roiled $45-30$ in handing the Gators their only two losses of the season.

Matthews said Spurrier has emphasized winning on the road as the Gators, who won the SEC last year while on probation, try to attain a national championship.
"He's talked about how we're going to hang out together more on the road, have a little more team unity," Matthews said. "If we're going to be a top five tearn: we have to do well on the road."

Spurrier said this week he thinks the Gators have a chance to be No. 1. And winning a big game on the road - something they couldn't do last year -is a must.
""We have something to prove to ourselves and our fans that we can win on the road without we can win on the road without 83,000 people cheering for us," 83,000 people ch
Culpepper said.
Dome disadvantage?
Florida has not played a garne in a dome stadium since 1982. The Gators will have a light workout on Friday afternoon to get used to the lighting and atmosphere.
"Syracuse is probably 10 points better at home." Spurrier gaid.
'io combat any noise problems, the Gators have installed hand signals to send in the offensive plays.
${ }^{\text {"We know its going to be }}$ loud," Matthews said. "But we don't think that could or should be a factor. We'd like to take the crowd out of the game."
Fast flankers
Matthews has defended last years All-SEC selection by throwing eight touchdown passes in the first two games; But Matthews, who hit 15 -of- 27 passes for 251 yards against the Crimson Tide, has been aided by a deep set of wide receivers.

Harrison Houston and Willie Jackson have each caught three touchdown pesses. Florida will touchdown passes. Florida win Sullivan. Tre Everett, Monty Duncan and Henry Haston also Duncan and

Drug habit  ruins Nixon's success story

Imagine going through nearly a decade vainly trying to find success in your given profession.

Imagine finally obtaining that success and then throwing it all away because of drugs.

Imagine still, getting another chance because people trusted your word.

Then, imagine, screwing it up all over again.

Can't picture such a bleak and utterly disappoint ing genario for yourself?

If you're At lanta Braves out Nixon was suspended for 60 day without pay on Monday after the result of a drug test showed cocaine use on Sept. 7

Nixon also tested positive in July but commissioner Fay Vincent re sisted a suspension because "we were giving him the benefit of the doubt."

Nixon had seemingly earned that benefit after testing negative in over 200 drug tests since 1987.

In 1987, Nixon, then a member of the Cleveland Indians, tested positive for drug use. He later enroiled in a rehabilitation program, and because of that fact and the subsequent negativedrugtests, Vincentbelieved Nixon when he said the July result was a mistake.

Nixon, who was batting .297 with a league-leading 72 stolen bases, will now miss the remainder of the Braves' resurgent season and any postseason play the team may earn.

Forgive me for sounding naive to the world of pro athletics, but I can't believe this.

Granted, drug tests are not infalli ble, but let's face it, it is very likely that in this case the results were accurate.

Nixon's speed had been noted for years, but he was never able to reach base enough to use it. His lack of hitting transformed him into a jour neyman who toiled for four different teams.
This year, though. Nixon finally reached his potential, and the league saw the results in his 72 steals and major contribution to Atlanta's pennant chase.

Why then did he revert back to his days as a cocaine user?

Was he so overwhelmed with his sudden success that he tried to hide in the drug's fantasy world?
Did the amount of money he knew he would make come contract time intimidate him into finding a poor way to spend it?
The answer simply is, Nixon has a serious problem. To sacrifice every thing you've worked for because of some white powder you haven't touched in four years indicates that.

Nixon's only comment to reporters was. "It's something that really hurts." I hate to use cliches, but the phrase, Fool me once, shame on you, fool me twice, shame on me,' is too appropriate to pass up here
Nixon's drug habit fooled everyone including himself.

Much has been said of the similarities between Syracuse University's Dan Conbetween Syracuse Un

The two inside linebackers now have something else in common - both have suffered the same injury.
Conley, who tore the anterior cruciate ligament in his right knee against the University of Maryland, joins Young and several other SU players who have had knee reconstructions.

Conley underwent two-and-a-half hours of surgery on Sunday after a magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) exam showed the tear and surrounding cartilage damage.

Young underwent the same operation after tearing two ligaments against Army in the second game of 1989.

Young was on the kick off return team when his injury occurred
Conley was the third Orangeman attempting to bring down Maryland's

Chad Weistling in the right flat after a one-yard reception.
"It's almost similer because we really didn't get hit," Young said. "But it was kind of like my foot caught in the turf and my knee just twisted right around. I knew it right away "His was kind of the same because he jumped and landed down and just twisted his knee and tore his ligament."

SU trainer Don Lowe said the cause of Conley's injury was the additional tension put on his knee when he tried to stop.
"(The) probable cause was he ran and, as he started to decelerate, his body twisted and the stress then tore the ligament," Lowe said.
Conley has been released from the hospital and will wear a brace to immobilize his knee. The brace allows him to adjust the degree of motion in the knee, and after several weeks his mobility should increase.
Following Young's surgery, also performed by team physician Dr. Bruce Baker, he wore a cast for six weeks.

Young said the brace Conley will wear should give him an advantage in the healing process.
The rehabilitation process could last

Young's injury occurred on artificial turf, which has been the culprit for many knee and ankle injuries. Conley's, how ever, came on natural grass.
"It's very ironic in the day and age of grass versus AstroTurf," Syracuse coach Paul Pasqualoni said. "We have more injuries on grass then we do on Astro Turf - it's a mystery."

Lowe said the playing surface was not a factor in the injury

Probe cracks down on research

By ROXANNE PATEL
Daih Pennsylvanian, U. of Pennsylvania
A federal investigation into mismanaged funds at more than 20 U.S. research institutions may force universities to absorb more of their research-related expenses and revamp federal grant guidelines.

Officials said the congressional investigation, which began last spring when federal auditors uncovered what they believe to be $$ 200$ million of unnecessary charges from Stanford U., will strictly limit the amount of government moncy universities receive for research-related expenses.
According to Dennis Fitzgibbons, spokesman for the congressional subcommittee heading the review, schools have uniformly misinterpreted "vague" federal guidelines, causing administrators to misuse taxpayers' moncy at numerous institutions.
"As John Dingell (D-Mich., and head of the subcommittee) said, Stanford is unfortunately more the rule than the exception," Fizgibbons said.
The congressional probe involves government support money, including administrative and maintenance costs accrued from federally funded research. These expenses make up indirect research overhead, which is money added to a research grant for sufficient research support.

Indirect overhead falls into two categories - administrative expenses and maintenance expenses - and is tacked onto every federal research grant.
Administrative support money is used to pay research assistants and administrators who spend time on particular projects. The maintenance moncy is used for the upkeep of research buildings and helps pay for utilities, equipment and supplies.
Stanford's indirect overhead rate was 78 percent at the start of the probe, which means for every $$ 100$ a researcher received, the university got an additional $$ 78$ for support costs. Stanford's current overhead rate is 55.5 percent.

During the past decade, Stanford adminisurators used hundreds of thousands of taxpayers' dollars, intended to cover overhead costs, to fund the campus shopping center and for depreciacion of the school's yacht.

Stanford President Donald Kennedy resigned in the wake of the Stanford investigation, saying it would be difficule to lead the university with the concroversy surrounding his role as president.
But Stanford spokesman Terry Shepard said the $$ 200$ million the university may have misspent is in dispute by administrators who believe Stanford should not have to pay back money the government already has approved toward indirect research appropriations.
The Office of Naval Research said Stanford has not proven its cosss were higher than the allotted percentage provided by the government. It says Stanford should have to pay a lot of that $$ 200$ million back.
paya lot of that $$ 200$ milion back
Stanford administrators disagree Shepard said. Stanford began paying back the government for misspent government appropriations this year, and $$ 1.35$ miltion has been paid back thus far, he said.

Tom Robertson, deputy regional inspector general for the Department of Health and Human Services, said many of the schools charged the government for "entertainment" expenses - charges he said clearly are not related to research support.
"The federal government should not have to pay for membership in country clubs... or for things like the yacht at Stanford," Robertson said.

Stanford's misspendings also included $$ 7,000$ in linen for the president's house. $$ 2,500$ to refurbish a grand piano, $$ 3,000$ for a cedar-lined chest, $2,000 a month for flowers in the president's house, $$ 4,000$ for See RESEARCH, Page 7

Lawmakers show support for ROTC

By SHANNON JACKSON the Lantrm, Ohio State U.

New legislation in Ohio and Illinois prohibiting the removal of ROTC programs from public colleges and universities has ensured that group's status on campuses nationwide.

But some activist groups see the measure as a reinforcement of discriminatory hiring policies carried out within those Army reserve units.

The Ohio measure, buried inside the state budget, passed July 11. The Illinois legislature passed a bill June 26 amending the current statutes governing Iflinois higher education.
"It's a bleak day for chose 'politically correct' at Ohio State University," said Ohio Sen, Eugene Watts, R-Galloway, speaking of the ROTC measure.

Watts, who is also an OSU associate professor of history, said the measure ensures all students equal access to education through ROTC scholarships.

ROTC adheres to the U.S. Department of Defense policy, which states "homosexuality is incompatible with military service."

Nationwide, the ROTC program has been criticized on college campuses because of the Department of Defense's anti-gay and lesbian policy. That policy often conflicts with some schools' nondiscrimination policy.

The measure gives colleges and universities the legal authority and backbone to say, "We can't (remove the ROTC from campus)." said Ohio Rep. Roberi Netzley, the chief sponsor of the measure. Netzley said he plans to bring this legislation to other states at the American Legislative Exchange Council meeting this month.

However, schools like Ohio State and Illinois Stare say the legislation will not affect campus ROTC efforts because neither calls for the removal of the program.
"The legislation means we can't throw ROTC off campus, but we weren't going to throw them off in the first place," said Pat Smith, of the Illinois State Student Board of Directors.

No more 'Bert and Ernie' for Oregon State prodigy

By LAURI REES and KIMBERL.Y WHITE Daity Barometer, Oregon State U.

Like the average kid, David Noor has been having fun with his friends this summer.

But he won'c be seeing much of them this fall. David, who will be 12 when classes begin, will be busy with his freshman year at Oregon State U.

David is the youngest student ever admitted to OSU.
"I'm as nervous as a college freshman would be," he said."I don't think the other studenuswill bother me.
"I'm not nervous about the curriculum because I've seen it before and it's at my level."

Because of state admissions requirements, David needed to take a high school equivalency test. He passed the test, which is normally given to students 16 and older. with no problem.

David's mother, Jackie Noor, said her son has been ahead of other children since an early age. She said David could count to 10 at 22 months, could say the alphabet at 2 1/2, and taught himself to read before he was 8.
"He just picked up a Bert and Ernie book and started reading it," she said.

His ability to read at an carly age meant

David had to grow up fast. At 4 or 5 years old, while reading from an encyclopedia. David discovered that Santa Claus wasn't real.
"He came in crying, saying (the encyclopedia) said it was a myth," his mother said.

David attended kindergarten mostly for the social interaction with other children, then skipped to the third grade. He soon finished elementary school and then had some correspondence schooling from a private school.
Last year he completed his high school education at home. Math and science are among his favorite subjects, David said.

He is studying precalculus, which should help with his fall classes in electrical engineering orientaion and chemistry.

As for David's career objectives, he plans to major in electrical enginecring, then study law. He also hopes to graduate from study law. He also hopes OSU by age 15, he said.

I might not be able to work at law until later, so I could work in electrical engineering," David said.

David plans to attend law school at Willamette U. in Oregon, then pursue a political career.

He is attending OSU because the school is close to home, and it is his father's alma mater.

But the Ohio legislation could stand in the way of a $U$. of Cincinnati faculty and student resolution calling for the ROTC's removal by 1992 if the policy is not rescinded.
"This legislation is not a setback," said Bill Rubenstein, director of the American Civil Liberties Union Lesbian and Gay Rights Project. "(The legislation) is evidence of how scared the other side is."
In order for the Department of Defense to change its policy, gay rights advocates and campus organizers say a major university needs to set the trend by removing ROTC from campus or taking a firm stand against its disciplinary policies.

But so far, no schools have stepped forward.
"A big school needs to set the precedent," said Paul Hendley, an ACLU spokesman. "All eyes are focused" on schools like the U. of Wisconsin and the U. of Minnesota where there has been a lot of progress lately. Hendley said.

Nationwide, the ACLU has racked at least 70 campuses that protested the Defense Department's policy.
The ROTC, with more than 40,000 students enrolled supplies more officers to the military than all the military academies combined, said Joe Bartley, public combined, said Joe Bartley, information officerat Fort Knox, Ky.
Last year, six ROTC scholarship students were discharged for being homosexual, said Major Doug Hart, a spokesman for the Department of Defense. In all, the military discharges about 1,000 people each year for homosexuality, he said.
Nationally, a bill introduced by Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-NY, would deny federal funds to schools that refuse access to the defense department. Solomon created the bill in response to two California school districts which banned federal recruiters.
"The Illinois and Ohio legislation is just one more roadblock we have to overcome," said Michael Verveer, co-president of the Student Association at the UW and a national campus leader in the ROTC movement. "In addition to fighting on the campus level, we are going to have to fight on the state political level as well."

Oavid Noor, 12, will be the youngeat sturdent ever at Oregon State U. when he starts classes thls fall.

He plans to live at home with his family without participating in extracurricular activities.
"I don't think I'd be able to relate with the older students," he said.
In his spare time David likes to play with his friends, many of whom also are gifted and home-taught.
He likes to play with his dog and cat, program compucers and watch television.

He said his favorite television shows are "Quantum Leap" and "Newton's Apple."
David also enjoys playing the clarinet. He placed first in the solo and trio division of a regional music competition.
At first, his parents believed that David would attend college through his musical talents first. "We thought he might attend college on a clarinet scholarship." his mother said.

But government officials said misuse of research funds was revealed at all of the investigated schools, including $$ 791,000$ at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, $$ 500,000$ at Harvard U. Medical School, $$ 402,000$ at the U. of Pennyivania and $$ 260,000$ at the $U$. of Piteshurgh.
At MIT, investigators revealed that the inappropriate charges include: $$ 24,000$ for functions at the president's house, $$ 19,600$ for flowers in the public meeting area below the president's residence, $\mathbf{$ 2 7 , 3 1 7}$ for legal fees relating to federal hearings and $$ 10,000$ for variuus gifts.
 Indirect reaserch monise wion funded thits thopplase conter.

In the audit of Penn's 1987 expenses, reviewers uncovered similar charges: $$ 137.980$ in wages and benefits for alumni relations personnel, $$ 964$ for alumni mailings, $$ 194$ for alumni parties after two football games, $14,500 in travel expenses and $$ 73,800$ in administering gifts and trusts.

And at Pitt, unallowable charges in 1989 included, among other things, salary and benefits for the president's driver and $$ 2,425$ for the president's Christmas cards.
Some of the reported expenses are clearly inappropriate. and administrators attribute them to miscalculations or accounting errors, while university and government adrninistrators blame Office of Management and Budget guidelines for many of the discrepancies.
"It's important to note that part of the problem that all of us see is that a lot of (the research contracting guidelines) are open to interpretation," said Jesus Mena, a U. of Califonia, berkeley, spokesman.

To combat the misunderstandings, OMB has begun revising the rules for judging what expenses the government considers appropriate. Stanford, meanwhile, will institute a system of checks and balances to revamp its indirect costs procedures.

Being PC is tougher than it looks

ByIINDA LYONS
The Ohlahoma Daily, U. of Oklahoma
Inm suffering from terminal weirdness this morning.
It ail started last week. I was on the phone with my best bud. Margaret, doing my boyfriend's dishes when 1 was struck by the political incorrectness of my situation. 1 immediately confessed my ctansgression to Margaret (that being the fecling that 1 was playing right into the hands of this particular man's male supremacy by allowing him to fish white simultaneously geting his dishes done).
To my personal delight, Margaret pointed out that I would be doing the exact same thing if I were a lesbian and my girlfriend was the one who did all the cooking instead of my boyfriend.
"Whewt" 1 thought. -That was a close one. "Congratulating myself on my newily discovered ability to achieve equanimity in a personal relationship, llooked down into the dishwasher and, to my hotror, discovered another big-time transgression in the area of political correctness: ALL of those coffec cups I'd been washing were made in foreign countries! Yes. that Life's-a-bitch-then-youdie" cup was made in lapan. "The Far Side" cartoon cup was made in Taiwan. The $R$ 表 $R$ Roofing Company cup was made in England.
In my dazed astonishment, I emptied the last of that Colombian coffec out of the last of the Japanese coltee cups and made for the door.
I climbed into the driver's side of Renaldo's foreign sports car, shoved Happy Mondays (relatively new British rock group) into the tape deck and shammed on the gas.
I realized that the more politically correct thing to do at this point would have been to carpool around until I had my thoughis more together, or perhaps even walk around for awhile, but come on...let's be reasonable.

Just when I had begun to accept my heterosexualiry, I was confronted with the role that I was playing in the creation of the massive foreign trade deficit. Even the gas pedal beneath my foot was attached to a foreign car.
The whole issue of political correctness has been making me ponder so. Take for instance my children. My children are American! Well, that is to say that once you get past the frish and French blood, they're pretty American. Of course, it might be more folitically correct to go out and adopt some un-American children from Third World countries, but if I really wanted another face around the hotuse, I'd just get rid of this French IUD.

Of course, that brings us to another point. which is that I would surely disregard all foreign trade deficits to use RU 486, the French abortion pilt, if the American government which oppresses me would just OK it.

All of this talk is really unnecessary, actually. considering that Renaldo once purchased (and sill owns) a good old-fashioned Arnerican vasectomy, but oh well.
So, anyway, I was driving around confused. remember? After a while. I (naturally) got hungry.

First I considered stopping for a picza and a Coke (what could be more American?), but then 1 remembered that Coke sweetens apartheid so there went that idea. Then 1 Eigured I could stop at McDonald's, (no Ialian food there, right?), but iremembered the rain forests and well, you know. (I would like to add, incidentally, that pizza is really pretty American if you consider that the Sicilians didn't have tomatoes unill the British shipped some over from the New World... . Of course. 1492 inn't really the year that America was discovered but, hey, if we're gonna get into correcting history, we'll be here all day).

Finally. I decided to jus go home and check the reffigeralor. There in the frecxer was a ton of venison.
Now, this is politically incorrect not only because eating meat means eating animals (excuse me, are those leather tennis shoes you're wearing? ) but also because this particular animal had been alive out there in the woods until Renaldo came along.
This knowledge caused me to reflect on the frowns I would get if people knew that I have my very own hunting ficense in my (leather) wallet, but I don't feel so guilty, knowing as I do that hunters conuribute $$ 3$ million a day 10 the preservation of vildife. So there!
About this time, my lawyer called. Now there's something to be proud of, right? I have contracted the services of an American lawyer.

Of course, this is pretty common because 70 percent of the world's lawyers are American. interestingly enough, 70 percem of the world's garbage also is generated by Americans.

About this time, 1 am coming to grips with the fact that I am suffering frotn a French disease of the soul.

Something has to be done.
My life must change. It's beginning to feel a little too Kafka-esque.
I turned on the (Sony) television, inviting thousands of American-made commercials into my field of vision. I was lighting up an American cigarette when I realized that Phitip. Morris put huge bucks into Jesse Helms* pocket last year. I was about to pull a Sylvia Plath when 1 realized that all the knives in the house were German-made.

1 knew there was only one thing $l$ could do at this point and strode over to the liquor cabinet. There, between the French and German wines was all the hard stuff.

I couldn't decide between the Russian vodika and the British gin so 1 just poured a litite of both into a big styrofoam cup, added a litte Canada Dry Cinger Ale and proceeded to tie on an old-fasbioned American drunk.

Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition!

Cartoonist pokes fun at PC world

By KRISTI MCDOWELL
The Lumberjack, Northern Arizona U.
Superheroes used to leap tall buildings in a single bound and drive cool cars out of caves.

But Jeff Shesol's modern-day superhero, Politically Correct Person, is more likely to combat ethnic slurs and chauvanistic catcalls than to fly an invisible jet or match wiss with a penguin.
P.C. Person is one of the characters in "Thatch," a comic surip written by Shesol, a 1991 graduate of Brown $U$. The strip, which features J. "Thatch" Thatcher, chronicles the trials and tribulations of students at Wayland U.
"Thatch" broke into the national spotlight when a friend of Shesol's wrote an article about politital correctness for the New York Times and submitted some P.C. Person cartoons with it. Shesol said he never expected to see them in the Times.
"They ran it, and they ran it big," Shesol said. "The media spin started rolling, and surprisingly it still hasn't stopped."

Shesol's PC works also were featured in The Wall Street Journal, The Boston Globe and Newsweek. He has since released "Thateh.. Featuring Politically Correct Person.- a compitation of strips from his work at the Brown Deily Herald, and has been a guest on several local television shows.

Shesol believes political correctness is an important issue, but said the actions of the politically correct are sidiculous.
-Tactics of the PC are divisive. counterproductive and usually pretty silly," he said.

Shesol featured P.C. Person in nonsensical situations, frequently piting him against archenemy Insensiuve Man. One strip shows P.C. Person trying to persuade a student to choose Amazon Crunch ice cream instead of chocolate chip because it is the environmentally sound choice.
Later, P.C. Person is troubled when he discovers Insensitive Man telling a boy to call females "chicks.
"We don't call them 'chicks!' Or 'girls!' They're women!" P.C. Person says. When the boy points out that females are only 9 years old, P.C. Person replies, "Well, they're prewomen."
Shesol said the issue has reached its peak in terms of media attention.
I think PC has been overhyped - it's not as oppressive a problem as more conservative journalists have made it out to be.* he said. II do think it's been overblown. be. he said.
buil don't hink it should go the other way." Margaret Smith, a Brown senior, said she agrees with Shesol.
(Political correctness) definitely can be taken to an extent where it can be damaging by threatening cultural heritage, being insensitive or saying something that could insensitive or saying someuh be trisinterpreted, she said.
Although Srnith said she is unsure of her own view of the movemenh, she said Shesol's P.C. Person strips were an effective way to characterize PC.
Shesol recognizes the political incorrectness on campus as well.
"It exists." Shesol said. "It's a problem, and people need to change their behavior. It's not as if you can't discuss anything, but there are limits. There really are things you can't talk about." He listed affirmative action and a father's role in an aborion as two taboo discussion topics.

ferf Shesol divea a tongue-in-cheek look at the PC movemert in hle book Thatch... Foaturing Pollitically Correct Perton."

The heightened awareness of the political correctness issue combined with the P.C. Person cartoons have brought a wave of publicity for "Thath."
The cartoons dealing with political correctness in his book make up less than 10 percent of the book but account for 99 percent of the publicity. Shesol said.
"It's good and bad to be typed as the PC cartoonist," he said. "I know my strip wouldn't have been noticed without P.C. See Cartoonist. Page 16

Zoned out: New ordinances help give students the boot  \section*{By JOHN CHEVES}  "The local zoning laws say only three

The Manteater, U. of Missouri, Columbia
Forget environmental awareness and cultural diversity. The new trend on campus is zoning laws.

City councils, zired of dealing with strained relations between town residents and offcampus students, are dictating how students live.

These restrictions, which limit how many unrelated people can live in one house, will force some students out of their homes. While the total rent remains unaffected, the amount paid by each resident increases.
Zoning laws are the latest twist in the student-resident relationship. and they helped one angry neighbor throw the book at Regrie Grant, a senior at the U. of florida in Gainesville.
unrelated people can live together," Grant said. "But we had five, and of course our neighbors counted us as we walked in and out.
"They reported us to the really company. We were forced to move out of our house because the owners wouldn't renew our leasc."
Grant thinks he knows the reasoning behind the decision.

The owners knew we were having these parties because the cars were all blocking the streess, and people were urinating in all of the neighbors' yards," Grant added. "It was a residential area, and I guess we didn't live up so their standards."

Not all stidents are facing confrontations with reluctant neighbors.

Only the Lonely

Study choots how lonely collegestudents stay lonely with dlating drought

ByALIISON LUCAS
The Daity Norkwestern, Northwestern U.
Loncliness can be a major factor leading to bad dating strategies on college campuses, according to a study done by two Northwestern U. professors.

Northwestern communication studies Professor Michael Roloff and former Asst. Prof. Robert Bell examined loneliness in relation to dating scrategies on campus from a sample of 178 undergraduates.

Students were asked to evaluate their loneliness level. The professors then created a loneliness scale ranging from zero to 80 . according to Bell, who is now at the U . of California, Davis.

The poll then asked how students would pursue a romantic relationship and what

Residents

Jutio Lana, a senior at the U. of Missouri, Columbia, has lived on Bouchelle Avenue for more than a year. Her neighborhood is across the street from the UM campus. just behind a row of fraternity houses.

Although Columbia recently passed zoning laws similar to Gaineswille's, the mix of residents on Bouchelle works well.

Bouchelle is pretty quiet." Lana said. "When kids do throw paries, they try to keep the noise down. -Our neighbors have only asked us to tell them which nighis we'll throw a party so they can go out for the evening and avoid the worst of it.-
"...The cars were all blocking the streets, and people were urinating in all of the neighbors' yards... . I guess we didn't Ine up to their standards."

- Regryie Grant

Lana's neighbors, both attorneys, gave free legal advice to the studenis and even attended a few of their parties.

However, not all Columbia residents are as eager to share their space with the louder, more active student population. Chester Edwards, a Columbia city councilman, was recalled from office earlier this year after endorsing a student housing development near an already-established neighborhood.

Less than a month later, the Alpha Omicron Pi sororify purchased a house in a residential area, only to be chased out when their neighbors filed a lawsuit to block the women from moving into the house.
But some areas use the student-resident relationship to a mutual advantage. At the U. of Wisconsin. Madison, both sides have respect for each other.
"li's pretty good here," said Greg Larson, a junior at UW. There's one UW student on the town council, and the mayor's a UW alumni, so the city gets along with the students."

Bob Brennan, director of local affairs at the Madison Chamber of Commerce, said the good student-resident relations are sweetened by the money UW brings into town. A recent study atudy by Brenran showed that $$ 2.4$ billion is pumped into the local economy each year by $U W$ and its 45,000 students.

In larger cities, however, the college barely affects the economy. Georgetown U. and George Washingion U., both in Washington, D.C., often are targets of local neighborhood associations who want students to stay on campus.
"Our relations with the residents are not that good," said Ted Goesth, a GWU student They don'c tike us. They call the police on us when we throw parties.
"Every year, they meet with the university president and yell at him. ${ }^{*}$ they would write in a monologue for a college dating service, Rolofi said.
The study found lonely people less likely to put themselves into situations where they woutd meet new people.
"They were less likely to use contrived encounters," Roloff said. "On the other hand, people who are not lonely choose situations where they could mect new people.
Sarah Young, a junior at Northwestern, agreed.
-The loneliest people are the ones who lock themselves in their rooms and don't meet people," Young said. "When you go out, you always see the same people, and it's always the outgoing, very friendly types who are there. The quiet and shy don't meet pcople.

Gabi Kahn, a junior at Wesleyan U., said lonely students aren't always perceived as lonely. Sometimes they are viewed as independent. The drawback, Kahn said, is that you don't really get to know people. "People at Weslcyan feel like they don't want to put themselves on the line."
In the second part of the study, students were asked to write out a monologue for a hypothetical video dating service.
Lonelier peole were more likely to give information, such as "name, rank and serial number," Bell said. But if the information was personal, they tended to leave it out.
People who were less lonely described their personalities and the things they liked to do, Roloff said. "Non-lonely people would give more of a description of 'who I am."

Cope's 'Suicide' lashes out at indifference

Jutian Cope's tateat Pegty Suicide ha pure pop joy.

By MATTHEW P. MOORE

The Auburn Plainsman, Auburn U.
Julian Cope could be described as a survivor of sorts.

Cope fronted one of the great English bands of the late 70 s , the Teardrop Explodes, and following is demise in 1982 the went onto even greater success as a solo artist.

Cope projects an unflattering view of people as a whole, not to damn them. but to warn chem.

Nowhere is this more evident than on Cope's 1991 release Peggy Suicide, an 83minute double album that lashes out at the indifference of humaniry toward the planet and nature, poll taxes in England, war and everything that goes down everyday to make life on carth more unbearable.

Cope said that Peggy Suicide ". . . is a vision of the world I had some months ago. In that vision. Peggy Suicide was Mother Earth."

Cope said he called the album Peggy Suicide because Mother Earth is poised on the highest cliff of infinity about to leap ofr.
Cope said the album is his message to the world that "...I'm back. I'm lucid, wellmeaning, and I'm not an asshole."

Peggy Suicide excels as a concept album.
It opens with "Pristeen," a Velvet Underground-type ture that's about a man who is falling in love with his ideal woman and finding out that she's net what he thought she was at all.

Cope said Peggy Suicide is a metaphor for the treatment that Mother Earth receives ## from people.

Cope sometimes deems it necessary to rovide his audience with a subtic yet forceful aural masterpiece about the human condition, the role of religion in society or the desecrations caused by politics.
Prgsy Suicide provides an eerie homespun cham that combines a garage sound with precise, rhythmic percussion. The nowing keyboards combine with guitars that sometimes break into chaos. It's pure pop joy.
Cope is at once engaging and disparaging. poetic and depressing. His chaotic gloominess is apparent in the lyrics to his single "Charlotte Anne," from 1988's My Nation Underground.
"And in my room, I'm alone in my room. And in my casket $I^{\prime}$ m alone in my gloom, and may be in here for awhile," Cope sings in rhythmic patter. with what sounds like a slow, upbeat Celtic-like flute.

On his 1987 relcase Saint jutian, Cope dives headlong into the subject of religion and tackles it with bullish tenacity.
He sings on the dule track, 1 mes God in a car in a dreaming dreaming ankerside. And I was very unkind. I said, "You locked us out of forest and gave us a mind."

Most of Cope's work sounds angry and vociferous. but different from protestations afforded listeners by other bands.
Cope's singing style hasn't changed much from his previous works. Still rough and ragged and unpolished, Cope belts out his message with a ferocity that won't or can't stop.

Shubert Dip

The latest European wonderkids use the traditional house beats meet guitar rock' rend and inject a huge dose of dance-a-tronic bass rhythms.
Sounds tike Jesus
Jones, doesn'tit?
Maybe, but EMF's sound is more fluid and their whirlwind guitars cut through the back-beass with a litule more ummph.
 giving them more credibility than most indie/dance fusion acts.
EMF's free spirit of wreckless mirth and unbridied energy comes through crisp and loud on their EMI release, Schubent Dip. The first singte, "Unbelievable," has been a big success on both sides of the Atlantic, on and off the dance floor.
The album as a whole combines EMF's passion for both straight-ahead rock and passion for both straight-ahead rock and groove-bound dance music. EMF ray look young and fresh enough to tour with the New Kids, but their music evokes a cough, determined, self-made working class effort that bands 10 years older are still tring to produce. Fharles Marshall. 7he Daily Tar Heei, U. of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

Fishbone

The Reality of My Surroundings

Fishbone's new release, The Reality of My Surnoundings, is the epitome of its title. "If I Were A... I'd," which is broken up into four parts on the aibum, says it all: "If $t$ believed everything 1 saw on relevision, I'd think like the Brady Brunch and eat Wendy's for lunch."

The "Parental Advisory/Explicir Lyrics" label attached to the album is fair warning to songs such as "Naz-tee May-en" and "Junkies Prayer."
"Prayer" is take-off on the Lord's Prayer with lyrics that read "My pusher who art in the crack house, hallowed be thy bitches and hoes... forgive us for we have no control or selfrespect.-
Although The Reality of My Suroundings has some unusual beats and intelligent lyries, it doesn't compare to the band's Truth and Soulalbum.
The Reality of My Surroundings is an eclectic mix of hard- core funk and ska. It's interesting, but a bit too hip for hip's sake- Nellie Jane Darlington, The Daity Lobo, U. of New Mexico

Jesus Jones  Doubt

No Doubt about it-Jesus Jones is one of the most exciting bands to come along in years. Jesus Jones takes cynical. jabbing lyrics, and adds dark, savage guitars and catchy synth melodies to come up with a truly original hybrid.
Hold $\mathrm{Me}^{\mathrm{n}}$ and $\mathrm{I}^{\prime} \mathrm{m}$ Burning" simmer with cold emotion waiting to explode.
"International Brighe Young Thing" and "Real, Real, Real," are bouncy extraterrestrial pop spiked with sarcastic lyrics.
With Doubt, Jesus Jones has come up with a masterpiece of cynicism and rage, perched upon the fragile line between smart danceable hip-hop pop and bludgeoning industrial energy.

While Doubx is an excellent album, Jesus Jones' first album, Eiquidizer, was a better effort from the band and is probably a better investoment for first-time Jesus Jones listeners. © Sean Leary. The Northern Star, Northern Ilinois U.

R.E.M.

Out of Time

R.E.M. has always prided itself on the diversity of musical styics within a single album, and the band's latest Warner Bros. release, Out of Time, continues the tradicion.
The only problem is a few songs that fill the "quota" of experimental rhythms and vocals are just plain bad.
"Shiny Happy People" is an annoying tune indicatuve of its tide, saved by he backupvocals of Kate Pierson of the B-52s.
But cuis such as the popular "Losing My Religion" and "Half a World Away" combine great lyrics, complex melodies and strong rhythms to produce true

R.E.M. hits

"Belong" is the most enthralling song saving the album from becoming a total waste of plastic.
Although Out of Time is still signature R.E.M., with Suipe's cracking voice and lyrics that don't necessarily rhyme, it doesn't compare favorably with their previous efforts. $\boldsymbol{F}$ Meredith Petran, The State Nows, Michigan State U.

Students suckered by get-rich-quick scams

By SUSAN GILES

The Ball State Daily Nrus, Ball State U.
Faced with a recession and a gloomy job market, some college students are resoring to quick cash mail schemes.

But it may be their own cash that's going the quickest.

Earn $$ 1,000$ for stuffing 1,000 envelopes. There has never been anything quite like this opportunity," che faceless voice on the 900 number woos.

Work-at-home schemes like this can be appealing, especially to college students. The hours sound ideal. The tasks sound simple. The money sounds ouxtanding

But many organizations, like the Consumer Education Council (CEC) at Ball State U., have dealt with work-at-home schemes before.

They advise students to beware, If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is, they say.

CEC worker Catherine Howard said college students are a target audience because they can be naive about schemes and want to make easy money.

The most prevalems work-at-home schemes include stuffing envelopes, assembling toys or dolls, reading books. clipping newspaper articles, sewing at home, and raising laboratory animals.

Sometimes it's all for nothing.
Howard said the company might not buy the assembled produet, even after students have inyested considerable time and monny. telling them it "is not acceptable quality."

Letter-stuffing seems to be the most common scheme.

Ads promise from $$ 1,000$ to $$ 3,000$ a month for stuffing envelopes, but the bureau said the plans outlined in the ad would require several hundred dollars more for advertising, postage, envelopes and printing

Although "get rich quick" scams are common, steps are being taken to shut down some operations-
The Postal Inspection Service said it puts about 3,500 work-at-home operations out of business each year through mail stop orders, consent agreements and criminal proceedings.
An example of a complaint letter mailed to the Federal Trade Commission shows one person's bad experience with work at home jobs.

The victim called an 800 number to respond to a job offer, but the number referred the person to a 900 number.
That number told the person to leave a message or send a self-addressed, stamped envelope for more information. The charge for the 900 number was $$ 18$. No employment information ever came.

DAVE BOEVERT, THE TARTAN, CARNEGIE MELIONU

Anytme a customer has a name and address of a company, they can call us, Howard said.
Howard added that tough financial times could contribute to even more of the questionable operations in the future. That means the seam operators will be looking harder for people who need quick cash. like college students.
"The more into a recession we get, the more people are going to want extra money." she said.

Avoioing the Rip-Off

Catherine Howard, of the Consumer Education Council. offered the following suggestions for spotting a scam:

Ads often have 900 numbers in small print. Television ads may say the number so fast that people do not realize it is a toll call. "A 900 call will cost you. I've seen charges up to $$ 35$," Howard said.

Look for the natae, telephone number and address up front. "Some (companies) are so coy, they will give their name but no location, Howard said.

Geting the address of a company is essential because without it there would be no way for watchdog groups to check out a complaint.

- Schemes usually do not have a contact person with the company. Ofien the prospective employee does not know the name of the person he is dealing with over the phone.

Finally, many operations do not have references. They will use general statements to entice scudents like. "Sam from Illinois made $$ 3,000$ in one month."

The FTC suggested these questions for a potential employer.

What tasks will be required?

- Will 1 be paid on salary or commission?
- Who will pay me and when will I get my first paycheck?
- What is the total cost of the work-athome program, including supplies, equipment and membership fees, and what will I get for my money?
$\square$

Art

want," she said.
There are other options, but the cost isn't much better.
Lucy Stewart uses metals in her artwork, and she pays a precious price ordering supplies from surplus companies.

I pay upwards of $$ 400$ per semester, "Stewart said.
Adrienne Walteking, who also avoids the hassles of her classmates by ordering from a warchouse, spends even more money. She estimated her art expenses at $$ 1.000$ per semester.
Three years at that rate has pushed her inco tremendous debt.
"Hopefully, once you graduate, you'll sell paintings to make the money back, or get a good job, or marry a rich husband." she joked.

Another art student, Quentin Davis, economizes by using materials be finds. Using trash and parts of discarded machinery keeps his semester total at about $$ 100$, he said.

Time is money, so instead of using money I don't have, 1 spend five hours looking along the side of the road," Davis said.
After spending weeks on a project and the cash to match it, many artists have to destroy their work or pay exorbitant storage costs. A slide takes the place of the actual artwork and that gets filed in a porfolio.
Sykora doesn't thint the slides do her work justice.
"All this money you put in, and it comes out a twoinch square."

U. of Arizona 'humanizes' classes with computers

By THOMASJ. MCLEAN
Arizone Daily Wildeat, U. of Arizona
A new computer system is being used at the $U$. of Arizona College of Medicine that allows for more student-teacher interaction and may end the days of boring classroom lectures.
The IBM Advanced Academic System uses small keypads hooked up to a computer that allows students to respond to multiple-choice or true-false questions during a lecture, said Steve Louie, senior support systems analyst with the division of academic resources in the College of Medicine.

Student responses are collected by the computer and displayed in graph form on an overhead projection screen. Louie said.

The instructor can then see if students are understanding the material based on the number of correct or incorrect answers.

The UA College of Medicine is the first medical school to use this technology, Louie said." What I see here and elsewhere is that professors are becoming increasingly disenchanted with lectures," Louie said.

The new system helps both students and professors determine their weaknesses so they can be corrected.

The system has been in use for less than two months and

He belonged to Phi Beta Kappa, rraduated as class marshall and worked as assistant news editor at his school's newspaper. Although he found a job, he still couldn't reach the goal he set for himself.
"I said I would aim for a salary of at least $$ 20,000$ a year and a paper with a 30,000 circulation," he said. "I had to settle for about $$ 16,000$ and a circulation of 14,500."
Eileen MrGearry, career planning and placement director at the $U$. of Nevada-Las Vegas, said she also is seeing more underemployed students than nonemployed students.
For example, she said hotels are offering graduates desk positions until they can afford to open top management positions.

But many recent graduates who don't want to wait until the job scene improves are discovering that graduate school is one way to bide time and prepare for the competitive market.
"What's been going on is some fairly substantial increases in applications over the past two years," said Peter Syverson, of the Council of Graduate Schools.
Syverson's organization maintains contact with 400 universities with graduate programs. On a nationwide average, he said most schools have seen about a $10-15$ already has been used in a few medical classes with good results, Louie said.

The computer can handle up to $\mathbf{4 0 0}$ keypads at one time and is connected with a personal computer that displays the questions on an overhead projector. The medical college is equipped with 100 keypads.
The advantage of the system is that all students respond to the questions anonymously and no longer need to feel embarrassed if they give an incorrect response, Louie said.

Professors also are able to continually test students and no longer need to wait for an exam to see if the students learned the material, louie said.
The system is relatively inexpensiveconsidering the advantages, he said. Each keypad costs $$ 94$ and a large lecture hall could be set up for about $$ 25,000$, he said.

Student response has been positive so far, mostly because the system helps "humanize" lectures, Louic said.

Medical students at the $U$. of Arizona think the new system will help them prepare for classes, and some students like the keypads because it gives them insight as to how teachers-are going to test their classes throughout the semester.

It gave us an idea of the type of questions he would ask (on an exam)," said Kerry Schlecht, a second-year medical student who has used the system.
Sehlecht said she tiked using the keypads and felt they helped her get more out of the lecture. Louie said he feels that this technology will revolutionize undergraduate teaching because is is so flexible.
"The future of it is going to be great," he said.

For grads who are willing to work for almost nothing yet get the opportunity to help people in underprivileged parts of the world, the Peace Corps is another option.
Jeff Ferry, an employce in the director's office at the Peace Corps national headquarters in Los Angeles, said inquiries into the Peace Corps have increased, but applications have not.
"It's generally because people cannot find a job and they're willing to do whatever to occupy their time...and they have a desire to help these third world countries," he said.
Although the employment market does not look good for first semester graduates, there may be light at the end of the recession tunnel for those who can be patient. Experts expect the job market to open within a year.
"Some of the reports I've seen are saying that things will let up by the beginning of winter," McGearry said. "Often the rebound from this might take a full year."
Other college administrators and faculty agree that the economy is getting healthier.
We're getting signs the recession is ending, though it's quite murky at the moment," Gardner said. "A college education is still one of the best buys there is, and we continue to place people. It's just taking longer."

Kathy Drouin, Daily Orange, Syracuse U., contributed to this story.

hell of it."

He said the mid-year tuition increases varicd around the country, ranging from 3 percent at the U. of Oregon to a national high 59 percent in the State U. of New York system.
Sweeney decried some state legislatures for political posturing during a time when they should be concerned with curing the college budget crunches. "Raising taxes is very unpopular, so they look for revenue sources - like jacking up tuition some more," he said.

Sweeney said there is no particular pattern to the budgetary woes, but said that clearly the nation's coasts - especially the two large state-supported university systems in New York and California - are feeling the brunt of the economic downturn.
The SUNY increase, which amounts to roughly $$ 500$ per student, came after eight years of stable costs for students there.

The nine-campus $U$. of California system suffered a $$ 312$ million cutback, causing fees to increase 40 percent, said Judson King, provost for the professional schools King, provost for the profes and colleges at UC, Berkeley.
Berkeley is saving money by offering an early retirement plan to its employees who have many years of service. A bout 600 faculty and staff, including a Nobel Laureate, took the early retirement option, he said. The U. of California system also plans to decrease the number of students admitted by about 5,500 , King said.

Dick Gable, a professor at the U. of California, Davis, suggested in May that the university's top adminisurators take a pay cut to help soften the budget crunch. King said nothing has been done on that suggestion, but other measures have been taken to cut administrative costs.

We're in the mode of slimming down our operation," he said. King also described the carly retirement plan as "encouraged aturition." Even more grim. Sweeney says, is the possibility that it could get worse. Budger cuts and tuition increases at state-supported colleges and universities may not stabilize when the recession ends, carrying rising costs into the next century, he said.

There aren't enough mechanisms in place to protect funding for higher education, he explained.

The biggest priorities in most state budgets are federally mandated programs like Medicaid, and elementary and secondary education. "When the recession ends, the mandates won't disappear. (The states) will still have funding crunches, and there's not a lot of public desire to raise taxes," Sweeney said. "And the federal government is restrained by its own budget problems.
"It doesn't look good," he added. "State budget problems will probably continue through the rest of the decade, so we're not out of the woods yet - it's only 1991."

Programs scramble for conference spots

By CHRIS TALBOT
Forida Flambeau. Florida State U.
Imagine the national college football system is a jigsaw puzzle. Now take the puzale, throw it against the wall, and you have college foot ball for the ' 90 s.
In less than a year, an unprecedented number of college football teams have switched conferences or abandoned their independent status in a scramble to secure spots in major conferences.
"The ' 80 s was a decade when....the (independent schools) could no longer survive," said Chris Plonsky, assistant commissioner of the retamped Big East Conference.

So in search of conferences and financial stability they went.

Penn State, Arkansas, Florida State, Miami (Fla.), South Carolita and some smaller schools joined and switched conferences in search of lucrative television packages.

Penn State began the exodus in January 1990 when the school gave up its independence and joined the Big Ten Conference.
-That decision for us to join the Big Ten, that triggered all these changes going on," Penn State Athletic Director James

Abstract

College Poll Kickofi Confused by all the changes in college football? Blinded by all the preseason hype? Then look for the weekly U. College Football Poll, compiled by college students for college students, appearing weekly in your school newspaper this season.

Tarman said. "We just sat back in amazement that all (the switching) happened."

The Nittany Lions were followed by Arkansas, which abandoned a 77 -year association with the Southwest Conference to head to the nearby Southeastern Gonference.
The Razorbacks were joined in the SEC by South Carolina, which traded independence for the 12 -team superconference.
According to Frank Broyles, Arkansas athletic director, his school did not sever its ties with the SWG because it wanted to leave. The Razorbacks made the move out of necessity.
"We were not unhappy in the Southwest Conference," said Broyles. "We've had a long and happy relationship with See CONFERENCES, Page 25

Heading for a postseason playoff?

Football alliance ensures national champ-maybe

By MARK BABINECK

The Daily Texan, U. of Texas, Austin
After years of debate about a college football national championship, the major bowls and conferences decided to sette the score once and for all.

Whether or not they succeeded depends on who you talk to.
The group created an alliance involving four bowl games (the Cotion. Fiesta. Orange, and Sugar), five athletic conferences (The Big East, Atlantic Coast, Big Eight. Southwest and Southeast) and Notre Dame. The new ground rules will begin on Jan.1. 1993. The Pac-10 and Big Ten conferences elected not to participate.
-The whole intent of this was to create a situation which would get the selection process 10 a point that it wouldn't be completed unil after the season was over," said Mickey Holmes, executive director of the Sugar Bowl.

The traditional bowl arrangements will remain the same, with the champions of the Big Eight, SWC, and SEC going to the Orange, Cotton, and Sugar bowls. respectuvely. The Fiesta Bowl will remain an open bowl. The remaining slots in those bowls will be filled by a five-team pool consisting of Notre Dame, the Big East and Texas and Oklahoma stand to benefft from the proposed national champlonship system, but UT Athietic Director DeLoss Dodds, inset, calls the alliance the "worst possibie thing."
ACC champions, and two other highly ranked at-large teams.
In the new alliance, the top-ranked team will face the next highest-ranked team available. This arrangement should increase the possibility of a true national championship game between the No. 1 and No. 2 teams and eliminate the early bowl pairings of the past few years.
-Last year (the bowl selections) happened virtually in the first week of November. How in the world can you expect to have meaningful pairings if you do it that carly?" Holmes said.

Holmes stressed the alliance is not a step toward the national football playoff that many college fans have been calling for.
"That was never the intent, to create some sort of playoff," he said. "The threat... of a playoff system would lead the bowls to the same status of the dinosaur."
Notre Dame Athletic Director Richard Rosenthal is happy to see his school become See PLAYOFF, Page 27

Bowls, conferences should wake up and smell the roses By RICK SCHULTZ The Daily Californian, U. of California, Berkeley

What a joke. Over the summer, a few college football bowls got together with some conferences and formed a nice little agrecment that says they will try to match up the No. I and No. 2 teams in a "national championship" game everyyear.

But it accomplishes something few thought was possible. It makes college football's post-season even more confusing-

The agreement is nowhere near a playoff system that would determine an indisputable national champion. There is still a chance that two teams will be claiming the national title at the end of the year, as was the case in 1990. Georyia Tech finished first in the UPI poll, while Colorado was No. 1 in the Associated Press poll.
And then there's Notre Dame, the school that became its own conference, with a guaranteed berth in a major bowl every year.

Let's not South Bend the rules too See MESS, Page 27

Conferences

the SWC. But because of the influence of television we have been forced to make a change."

Florida State also abandoned its independent status to join the Atlantic Coast Conference for Iinancial reasons.
"I think we were standing in a dangerous area being independent," said Florida State Athletic Director Bob Goin. "I've often said it's nice being independent, but we're not an island."

Tom Mickle, assistant commissioner of the ACC, said this conference decided to add the Seminoles in response to the moves by Penn State and Miami.
"We could see that college football was changing," Mickle said. "We had to move or become surrounded."

But Miami clearly demonstrated how football conference jumping can make for strange bedfellows.
The Hurricanes joined the newly formed Big East Conference to secure a media markes that reaches 33 percent of the country. But lack of competition in the otherwise weak conference should ensure the football powerhouse lopsided victories and possibly alienate other Big East fans.
John Paquette, the director of public relations for the Big East, recognized the current gap in the taient level.
-In the beginning, Miami will dominate. But, hopefully, the competition will cause the schools to improve," Paquette said. "We felt pressure to establish a football league. Miami was the best team olat there. We went for them."

 DAVID KLINGLERGillette shines its athlete spotlight this month on David Klingler, quarterback of the U. of Houston Cougars.

Klingler, who established himself last year as one of the most dominant quarterbacks in college football history, is everybody's favorite candidate in the race for this year's Heisman Trophy.
Although the ink is still wet on the 33 NCAA recards Klingler broke or tied last year, he appeass poised to completely rewrite those books this year.

Klingler threw for an amazing 5140 yards and 54 touchdowns last season, shattering previous marks held by Andre Ware and Jim McMahon, respectively.

But that should be a mere prelude to this year's action.

Klingler has the luxury of operating within head coach John Jenkins' seemingly unstoppable run-and-shoot offense. In addition, Klingler's supporting cast appears well-endowed with the talent to back him up. The Cougars, the No. 14 pick in this year's preseason U. College Football Poll, will be aiming to better last season's 10-1 record.
Of course, the Houston quarterback is still haunted by the ghost of former teammate Ware. Because he arrived on the heels of another quarterback sensation, Klingler will have to silence the critics who claim Jenkins' system, not the quarterback, is responsible for his phenomenal stats.

No doubt, he'll just let his arm do the talking.

Students cope with 'yuppie flu'

By KIMBERLY YOUNG  Maroon, Loyola U.

You're depressed, moody and irrational. Your shor-term memory is shot. You're fevered and weak. You're constantly ured but can never fall asleep.

You probably think the feeling is natural - you're a college student.

But your condition might not be natural at all. You might have Chronic Fatigue Syndrome.

CFS, for years ridiculed by the medical community as the "yuppie flu," now is recognized as a legitimate illness, said Anna Davis, a doctor at East Jefferson General Hospital in Louisiana. A new viral illness of an unknown origin. CFS became an epidemic in the last decade, Davis said.

Similar to AIDS in some symptoms, CFS attacks the immune system, causing it to dysfunction, overact, and enable other viruses and bacteria to attack the body.

Although the exact method of transmission is undetermined. CFS often is triggered by stress. College students, frequently stress mongers, are at a high risk of contracting the virus, Davis said.
-In a recent research study, 3,000 CFS patients were found never to experience REM sleep," Davis said. "Symptoms can reduce one's ability to function by 50 percent."

For students, the disease can be devascating. Katie Woods, a junior at Tulane U., knows this all too well. Woods was diagnosed last year with Chronic Epstein-Barr Virus, a disease closely related to CFS.
"In classes, I'd get so anxious and light-headed I would have to ran out," Woods said. "I remember one time, I didn't even have the energy to run to class."

Woods' demanding schedule and the emotional stress of her parents' separation preceded the illness. Because of the disease, Woods dropped several classes and finally withdrew from her premed major.
-Some nights I would lie in bed tossing and turning, and I would cry in frustration with being unable to fall asleep," Woods said. "The next day I couldn't get up or $I$ 'd feel strung out - kind of a hung-over feeling."

Woods said diagnosing the illness was half the battle. Her boyfriend believed she was having a nervous breakdown. while her friends blamed her feelings on her vegetarian diec.
"The first doctors (I visited) were so quick to slap me on antidepressants," Woods said. "Nobody believes it; they just say you're stressed out or depressed."

The disease is frustrating for usually ambitious, active people. Patients suffering from the disease have a sticide rate six times higher than non-patients, even though the disease has a mere 5 to 8 percent mortality rate, Davis said.

"I remernber panicking and wondering 'What's wrong with meam I dying," " Woods said.
CFS is not curable but can be treated symptomatically. Even though the disease isn't "in the mind," therapy and emotional support has proven extremely helpful, Davis said.

Davis, a leading expert in the study of CFS. theorizes that the cause of the disease is somehow environmentally related. As the body's immune system copes with the increased toxicity of the environment, CFS and other relatively new viruses invade humans in near-epidemic proportions, Davis said.

The disease is known to run in families, and since it is viral, it could be genevically encoded.
A recent national research program on CFS by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control reported receiving 1,000 calls per month from CFS sufferers.
CFS in its varying degrees can be active in a person for up to 14 years, but is capable of becoming dormant, Davis said. In therapy, Woods was taught to view the illness as a gift. She said she has learned to cope and is doing much better this semester.
-I realized that I'm not like everyone else. I get sad looking at children running around and playing," she said. "My friends like going out late drinking, but I have to plan when I will go out and stick to a sleeping schedule."

Georgia profs search for anti-DUI drug

By ROSALYN THOMPSON

The Red E Black, U. of Georgia
If research by two U. of Georgia professors goes as planned, students someday may be able to buy a powder from the local drugstore that will lower their blood alcohol levels so they can drive home safely.
David Whitmire, a chemical engineer, and Larry Cornelius, a professor of small animal medicine. are conducting lab experiments on a synthecic enzyme designed to combat the effects of alcohol by removing ethanol from the bloodstream.
If it receives FDA approval, Whitmire's enzyme could be available in hospital emergency rooms in the next two to three years.

Whitmire hopes to have his secret formula patented by Christmas. The product could reach the market as early as 1998.

The biggest drawback to the research has been its cost. Whitmire said one dose can cost up to $$ 20,000$.

Whitmire said the enzyme's most imporant use would be in emergency rooms, where patients must wait for surgery because the mixture of alcohol and anesthesia can be fatal.

But he hopes that the enzyme's potential commercial success will lead to less havoc in those emergency rooms.
"Some people have pointed out to me that it's a license to drink." Whitmire said. "But that's the person's choice. It really only has one function to sober you up."

Rollerblades: Transportation trend of the '90s

By TIM WIESENHAN
Kentucky Kernel U. of Kentucky
College students are careening across campus, leaping over curbs and crashing into trees - and they're loving every minute of it.

Rollerblades, a trademarked name for in-line skates, have replaced rollerskates as the preferred mode of stylish transportation and exercise on campuses across the counury.
"Rollerskates are like, the '70s," said Arizona State U. rollerblader Tom Tuberty. "Rollerblades are lighter and more maneuverable than regular skates. Rollerblading is a good aerobic nonimpact form of exercise. It is definitely going to continue to grow."

More than 1 million pairs of in-line skates have been sold in the U.S. during the last decade, and 2 million pairs are expected to sell this year alone, according to Mary Hougen, a spokeswoman for Rollerblade, the leading manufacturer of in-line skates. Since its introduction in 1981. the Rollerblade has captured more than 50 percent of the in-line skate market.
"Last year there was barely anybody wearing thern," said William Eurego, manager of the Beach Bum skate store in Miami. "If you were rollerblading, people just thought you were weird. This year I get people from ages 10 to 50 renting rollerblades."
The modern skates, which can cost anywhere from $$ 90$ $10 $ 330$, are comprised of ankle-snug, nylon padded ski boots bolted to four or five polyurethane wheels. But bladers say the thrill is worth the cost.
"The first time I tried it I felt like I was (ice) skating on cement," said Eric Frederickson, a blader from St . Louis. "When I first got on rollerblades, it was incredible. I get the urge to go blading almost every day."

Rob Hayslett, a sophomore at the U. of Kentucky, calls blading "ferocious."
"You get so hyped doing it," Haysleut said. "It's just something about picking up speed $\rightarrow$ and you're not doing anything. You're thinking, 'I'm going to die.' You start shaking, and panicking. Your knees start to buckle."
But to those less inclined to such bursts of adrenaline, in-line skates can offer practical health benefits, like lowimpact aerobic cross-training.
"If you run all the time, if you ride all the time, you just start to burn out," said Hayslet. "If you get on (in-line skates), it will save your knees from road shock."

Of course, hurling your body into trees and cars isn't very good for your health. so experienced bladers suggest beginners learn on a parking lot or other uncrowded area so they can adjust to the tricky rubber heel brake on the skates.

Hougen stressed that rollerbladers should always wear a helmet, shoulder pads and helmet, shoulder pads and knee pads while blading. Climbs you slow down and hope you survive to the top; and the descents you hope you survive to the bottom without crashing," Hayslett said.

And of course, the pact also contains another major flaw: it leaves out two of the top conferences in the nation.

Championship

a major player in the agreement. The arrangement ensures the Irish an appearance in a major bowl every year.
"It's not a perfect solution to ensuring that the No. 1 and No. 2 teams meet, but it's a significant enhancement" Rosenthal said.

Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds agrees with Rosenthal on one point - it's anything but perfect. He contends that if the Longhorns were to win the SWC and Nebraska were to take the Big Eight and the teams were ranked No. 1 and No. 2, there would still be no national championship game because the teams are committed to different bowls. And countless scenarios like that could ruin the ideal championship game.
"The best thing for us would be to have an alliance with the flexibility for any possible national champion," he said. "The second best thing would be to do nothing. The worst possible thing would be to leave it (the proposed bowl alliance)."
All the bowl bosses have sounded their agreement with the plan, and Fiesta Bowl officials are particularly pleased.

That bowl, played in Tempe, Ariz., was chosen from a group of games vying for the fourth slot in the agreement, including the Citrus, Gator. Blockbuster and Holiday bowls.

Conspicuous by its absence is the Rose Bowl, the only major game whose teams are automatically determined. The Big Ten and Pac-10 send their champions to Pasadena each year. If a No. 1 or No. 2 team comes from those conferences, the Rose Bowl could render the new alliance's top matchup meaningless.
Granted, the last team to emerge from Pasadena as national champion was the $U$. of Southern California in 1972. However, in most of 1991's preseason polls, the Big Ten's Michigan and Pac-10's Washington are among the top three picks in the nation. Add perennial power Penn State to the Big Ten schedule in 1993, and it further damages the alliance's chances of fielding a title game.

Confused? Probably, but most agree that the arrangement takes at least a small step toward creating a national championship game.
"I think it's better than what we have ever had," said Florida State Athletic Director Bob Coin. "They went back and looked at it and found that 12 out of the last 15 years, number one would have been against number two (if this systern was used).
"It means that there is more flexibility and the bowls are going to be rewarded with the highest rankings. I think that's good."

E Jim Tincher, Oklahoma Daily, and John Shiploy, The Daily Iowan, also contributed to this story.

minding their own business, which, by the way, is doing quite well, thank you.
"We get 100,000 people in the (Rose) Bowl every year," said Jack French, the bowl's executive director. "It's hard to beat success.
"It was our choice not to be a part of it," said French. "We have our own arrangements - a good arrangement."

So, like the little kids who weren't invited to the party and then say they didn't want to go in the first place, the Pac-10 and Big Ten conferences are thumbing their collective noses at the pact.
And why shouldn't they? Now entering its 78th year, the Rose Bowl's popularity makes it the country's most financially successful bowl, said Bill Fin, assistant executive director of the Rose Bowl. Simply put, the "granddaddy of them all" is a cash cow.

This slightly improved pseudochampionship setup shouldn't hurt the self-sufficient Tournament of Roses at all.
Nobody's pulling the wool - or the Cotton - over anybody's eyes here. We can see there is still no playoff that guarantees an indistputed national champion.

It is possible that the top two teams wiI play each other in a bowl game this year. But wouldr't it be sweet if it was No. 1 Michigan and No. 2 Washington or vice versa?

Come on NCAA, wake up and smell the Roses.

SAS opposes student-only policy

By MARK A. BROUSSEAU Asst. News Editor

A new policy banning non-students from attending events in the Syracuse University Underground met with sharp criticism and public concern Wednesday night at a public forum.
The policy went into effect last weekend sparking concern about the relationship between SU and the community.
The forum was organized by Student African-American Society President Vaughn Irons in response to community members who believe the move will prevent interaction among blacks in the area.
The policy was implemented after a fraternity gathering in The Underground erupted into a fight where several individuals were injured on Aug, 30 .
The fight involved SU students and Syracuse residents.
"The purpose of getting together tonight was for SAS to reach back into the night was for SAs to reach back into the community." so important."

The policy restricts non-college students who are not signed into the function by an SU student, said Director of Student Programs Peter Baigent.
Baigent said the policy would be

"We shouldn't have to pretend that we want an access route for 15 -ycar-olds to party with 19 and 20 year-alds," said Vice President for Public Relations Robert Till.
Peters said the policy assured that scheduled events would not be interfered with.

There have been four or five incidents in the history of the Schine, but this has been the worst, said Baigent.
"I wanted the administrators to see the individuals involved before the policy is cut and dry," Irons said.

There are positive individuals here that we want to include," he said

Peters said he "will look for the best effect on students while being sensitive to the community.
"We are keeping an open mind toward evaluating a policy," he said.

Policy prevents interaction
Irons said SAS disagrees with the policy because it prevents the group from giving something back to the community and from including peers in its programs.

Syracuse resident Arley Pressley said If they are not in The Underground, they will be on Marshall Street. And then they won't be fighting brothers and sisters, they will be fighting Caucasians."
Baigent said University Union is also concerned because the policy has economic implications.

My sense is that we have just started to talk about this issue," said Associate Dean of Summer Sessions Horace Smith.

The concern is how to eliminate the munity," he said.

There were 14 members on the panel that created the policy, including sid students.

Another public forum will be on Oct. 3 at an on-campus location.

The forum was held in the New Jerusalem Church of God and Christ on South Salina Street.

Syracuse University's computer engineering program was ranked third in the nation in a recent curriculum assessment.

He said the assessment was timely because the program is currently in the process of restructuring.
The atudy was conducted by the computer science depart ment at the University of Missouri-Rolla.
It examined the curriculum and the content of courses compared to the recommendations for a computer engineering prograrn established by a group of professional societies, Stabler said

SU's program ranked third behind Purdue University and Southern Methodist University.
The survey and assessment examined schools accredited by the Accreditation Board of Engineering and Technology (ABET) or the Computer Science Accreditation Board (CSAB).

Criteria included data on student enrollment, duties in the areas of undergraduate teaching and graduate teaching. administrative loads, computer related research, the use of undergraduate teaching and admission qualifications

"We've got this dilemma.". said Student African-American Society President Vaughn Irans.

Court needs $#$ black presence

"We want somebody black in there. but we need somebody that represents the beliefs of African-Americans veruds someone that just looks like us," he said.

The nomination of someone with' proven conservative track record waa inevitable, senior Joachim Rogers said.
"Bush knew he had to replace an African-American with an African-African-American with an AiricanAmerican." Rogers said. "But anyone that Bush is going to name is going to that Bush is going to $n$

It is critical, however, to have a black on the Supreme Court regardless of his political and ideological slance. Irons said.

"Young minorities need to be able to look at the Supreme Court and gain a positive visual concept - to see some reflection of themselves

Preparation is everything

Thomas was exceptionally prepared by the Bush administration to follow a script that revealed very little," he said. Banks said because Thomas was so prepared he was able to dodge important issues brought forward by the committee such as abortion and Alfirmative Action, and whether he would interpret the language of the Constitution broadly or narrowly

Thomas sidestepped these issues by maying that he was obligated to make rulings based on the wording of the Constitution and that his personal be liefs had no bearing on his decigions.

In many casca, however. Thomas con tradicted statements he has made in the past, leading the commitee to question whether he was being truthful or simply teiloring his answers to earn the confirmation.

Responding to another question on abortion by Sen. Herb Kohl. DWis., Thomas waid, "Wifether or not I have a view is irrelevant."
Thomas later said that his past statements in support of natural law were political theories that would have no relation to his duties as a justice.

Entering the second week of hearings, the Senate Judiciary Committee backed off, fearing accusations by Thomas supporters of badgering the nominee. the Associated Press reported

Vote or remain silent

It's a simple fact of life that people complain about the Student Government Association. Since this has always been the case, one might wonder why students don't infiltrate the system and act rather than fire empty complaints that have no impact.

SGA was forced to extend its election through next week due to lack of voter turnout. This is ridiculous, as voting takes about 10 seconds and is the best way to correct errors within the organization.

Elect motivated, committed people, and we'll get things done. Fail to vote, and we might end up with selfinterested resume-stuffers who don't care enough about the organization to attend meetings, let alone do anything of substance for the student body.

When nobody votes, the results do not fairly reflect the views of the student body. SGA is a powerful group on campus and should represent the student body - especially at budget hearing time when SGA determines how to ration funds among fellow student groups.

Qualified people should be involved in this allocation process. And while some of these people do end up on SGA, others, who have nothing going for them but a few friends willing to vote, are elected as well.

Vote, or else live with the consequences and keep your mouth closed. You only have yourself to blame.

Fans forced to pay-per-view

Will anyone with morals please show their face at this time? Whose scheme was it to make people pay for broadcasts of Syracuse University's road football games? Sorry, not all of the away games, just the ones we can't see on ABC or ESPN, or something like that. see on ABC or ESPN, or something like that. | ERIC | The only way they could |

VIEW MASTER don't fit that description. Things really aren't going our way, I guess. Oh well.
So, basically they are doing us a favor by $$ 36$ ( $$ 18$ and $$ 32$ for season ticket holders) if we want to see both games. Wow, they are really looking out for us. They care about the loyal SU fans so much that they are granting permission to essentially buy tickets for away games.

This is nothing but a big scam, and it's just the beginning. Pay-per-view seems to be the future of television. In just a few years, rather than checking your local listings to see what will be shown, you will pick the game you want to see via pay-per-view.

You will sit down with your grandkids one day and reflect on the "good old days" when you could just turn on the television and see Monday Night Football on your television for free. You didn't care what game it was, you just sat there and enjoyed it. Then you will go on to say, in your day, you didn't have to pay for the evening news, or Wheel of Fortune, and even the Home Shopping Club was free. Your grandkids will probably think you are making up those stories because things will have changed so drastically.

They might even ask you to tell the story about when tuition at Syracuse was only $$ 20,000$ or when the word womyn had an "a" $$ 20,000$ or when the word womyn had an "a" in it. They may ask for their favorite tale, the one about how an institution for higher learning didn't put in crossing lights amid $$ 2.5$ million in street renovations.

Whatever the case, the pay-per-view era is beginning now, and it's going to snowball, so don't take things for granted. Enjoy whatever games you can while they are still free. And let's hope that we don't lose some of the free things that we cherish. Somewhere down the things that we cherish. Somewhere down the road, couldn't you just see SU requiring an road, couldn't you just see SU requiring an entrance fee to walk through the Quad, needing tickets to attend your class in Watson needing tickets to attend your class in Watson Theater, or having to pay to read View Master? Count your blessings.

LETTERS

Apathy degrades SU

To the editor:
I am really writing this letter in response to two articles that appeared in The Daily Orange on Sept. 17.

The first article I wou to speak about is Wendy Kaplan's on recycling. I would like to wholeheartedily endorse her contention that we, as her contention that we, as college students, should be able to read. I mean, how difficult is it to read and understand "Newspapers or Cans Only?

Last year, I spent almost half an hour in my floor's trash room separating the trash out from the recycled goods, and putting the things that are recyclable in their proper containers. I did this because I could not stand to see the already recycled goods go to waste. It made me angry that intelligent students could not take the extra three seconds it takes to separate and place things properly. It makes such a big difference for aminimum of effort.
The second article that I would like to address is Zev Borow's sports opinion column On Tuesday, he wrote an article about how boring football games are in the Dome.
He contends that fans at such He contends that fans at such schools as Michigan and Clemson are so into the game that it makes the games fun to watch. He says outright that the cause of fan apathy is the Dome. He says that "Dome football is sterile." Well, I would like to submit that the problem is not the Dome but the so-called fans like him. It is not the outside stadiums at schools like Michigan but th fans themselves that mak football fun. Instead of football fun. Instead of appreciating the fact provides protection from Dome provides protection fer Instead of joining the marching band, of which I am a member, and the cheerleaders in cheers and singing he complains about fan apathy. I suggest that if he would cheer and sing along, not only might he enjoy the game more but he might get others to join in, who would get still others to join in as well. If Zev, and others, did all this they might even forget that they were in the Dome, as I do each Saturday. I would suggest that this weelcend's Homecoming garne would be the perfect time to start enjoying the games and the Dome instead of complaining.

State governments need to work closely with local governments, New York Secretary of State Gail S. Shaffer said at yesterday's Thursday Morning Roundtable discussion.

Shaffer, who is also the chair person of the Governor's Blue Ribbon Commission on Consolidation of Local Governments, said local governments need to cater to the needs of their corn munity members Shaffer said many politicians neglect the needs of their communities by following a state. wide systern to govern their regions.

Fans left with few alternatives

After four weeks back on campus, many alternative music fans may have noticed that Syracuse's outiets for new music are fewer than ever before.

When Buggsy's closed at the end of this summer, Marshall

BRUCE BUCKLEY FLESH

which offered Alterative Night on Fridays, closed recently for renovations. And because of ft nancial cutbacks, Spectrum Records was forced to reduce its alternative/import section.

Fortunately, some alternatives are still out there.

Desert Shore Records is the university area's oasis for alternative records.

University Union and UU Television will get in on the act beginning this fall as they present Club Cerotic, an alternative dance club in The Underground on Tuesday, Sept. 24 at 7:30 p.m. Also, UU Television mi be starting up ran pron alter native video show $7 b$ The $B a t-$ cave, available on campus TV and Community Access Channel 7.

WERW, the only alternative radio station in the area, will begin broadcasting for the first time on the 750 AM frequency. As for shows, you can catch tive bands at UU's Cofteobouse tive bands at UU's Coffeehouse in the Faculty Center on Sundays and the Jabberwocky in Schine Dining on Fridays, or even at a local party (if you can find one that isn't busted).

In the meantime, you still have your album collection to tide you over, and here are four recent releases to consider picking up:
Wonder Stuff: Never Loved Elvis
The Wonder Stuff never loved Elvis or any other pretentious pop star who rode out his career on the musical marketing machine. In fact, there isn't much the Wonder Stuff likes about the Woncept writing their own prilliant pop songs.

After a two-year hiatus, a near breakup and the departure of bassist Rob "The Bass Thing" Jones, the band has come back with a fresh, new approach to its sound, incorporating Irish folk music with the wonderful pop stuff of the past.
This new pop-meets-the Pogues sound comes thanks to the band's new member, multi instrumentalist Martin Bell. His jangly banjo and raucous fiddleplaying grace every track on the album.

The Wonder Stuff mix the best of the old and the new on their new album, Never Loved Elvis, Just don't call them pop stars.

Despite the additions to their sound the Wonder Stuff still follow the old punk tradition of lashing out at anyone they want lashing out at anyone they wan lashing out atee MUSIC Page BB

ESF Homecoming hails alumni

Homecoming Weekend for the alumni of the State University College of Environmental Science and Forestry is scheduled for Friday and Saturday.
Activities planned for the reunion those those clasges with years ending in

" 1 " and 6 " "1" and " 6 " will clude faculty receptions, a dinner/ dance at the Sheraton University Inn, tours of the campus and a football game Saturday afternoon, in the Carrier Dome with Syracuse University playing nationally-ranked Florida.

Dr. Harrison H. Payne, Class of 1950 , and emeritus vice president of Student Affairs, said, "Homecoming has grown in popularity, and as president of the Alumni Association, it's always a pleasure to welcome alumni back to their alma mater."
Justin F. Culkowski, class of 1973 and ESF Director of Alumni Aftars said weach fac Allynnithans, said, Bach rac ulty will be hosting alurni from their particular acadernic program on Friday. This is a new feature for formecoming and one which 1 think will prove very popular as alurnni want to talk to faculty in their acadernic major.'

Alumni will have an opportunity to meet the current officers of the Association and learn about the various alumni activities at the annual alumni meeting on Saturday.
According to Payne, "For alumni who prefer a quiet walk in the woods, ESF alumnus and Beaver Lake Nature Center naturalist Greg Smith, class of 1974 has offered to lead alumni on a walk and canoe trip at this premier park in Central New York."

The friendships that are rekindled over these reumions are a atrong drawing factor for the alumini. Culkowski said, "I think a measurement of the attractiveness of Syracuse is the great distance alumni will travel to attend Homecoming. We antici pate alumni from California and even Alaska to enjoy reunions and other Homecoming activities."

Other activities planned for the weekend include a tour of the Lorenzo Mansion in Cazenovia, a visit to the Burnett Park Zoo, salmon fishing near Pulaski, a visit to a fish hatchery in Altmar and the Anheuser. Busch Octoberfest in September on Saturday at the State Fair grounds.

ingugazi is based on nonconverition. With an original convention, wand and lymics musical approach and lyyics that slap society in the face, Fugazi refuses to be force-fed by anyone -surviving instead on a steady diet of nothing.

The band's concept of anticommercialism becomes more apparent with every album as Fugazi's sound moves farther away from the norm.

As with the band's past albums, Steady Diet of Nothing thrives on dramatic arrangements of minimal drums and dissonant guitar, which sud denly turn full blown and furi ous and recede just as suddenly, Songs like "Long Division" and "Exit Only," however, show the band taking the albur the band takimg the album a step further with obscure guitar

But Fugazi isn't about hardcore - it's about Fugazi. The band makes the unorthodox seem sensible by incorporating unconventional scales and widely varying rhythm patterns into a straightforward framework of its songs.

Subsequently, Steady Diet of Nathing shows Fugazi's unique ability to make new music in a time when sampling and retrogression are so prominent.

Infectious Cirooves: The Plague That Makes Your Booty Move ... It's The Infectious Grooves

Get ready to kick out the jams and move your booty to the beat because Infectious Grooves is in the house.

On The Plague That Makes Your Booty Move..., singer Mike Muir, bassist Robert Trujillo Muir, bassist Robert Truyile
(both of Suicidal Tendencies) (both of Suicidal Tendencies) and drummer Stephen Perking (of Jane's Addiction) have laid (of Jane's Addiction) have laid their serious projects aside to produce a hilarious collection of funk/metal fusion.

The album features the work of 12 musicians in total, including some vocal overdubs by Ozzy Osborne on the song "Therapy."

The song "Punk It Up" opens the alburn with Muir boasting, "Straight from another world, another time, another thought, we've come to are the beat, to free the groove and watch you rot."

And so they do, busting out a combination of righteous grooves and laughable lyrics that will leave funk fans in a frenzy.

While the mood is lighthearted: on Infectious Grooves, hearted: on Infectious Grorves, the musicianship is serious, as on "Monster Skank" an unbelievable fusion of speed metal, fumk, ska and jazz. Most notable is the mind-boggling bass work of Robert Trujillo on aongs like "Infecto Groovalistic"
On the whole, Infectious Grooves is a serious sampling of the silly side of funk's finest.

Curve: Blimalfold EP/Frozen EPP

Here are two EP's by a group who is currently one of the latest, hottest bands on Lon don's indie scene. If you're wondering why you haven't heard of them-don't. Rare copies are still only available on import, but a search for these records would be in order for indie fans.

Pre-programmed percussion and thundering, diatorted bass drive Curve's hypnotic rhythms Overdriven wah-wah and distorted feedback guitar creates a distinct atmosphere for sono a distinct atmosphere for song such as nen Littie Girla an

Most
Most gripping, though, is singer Toni Halliday's bitter sweet vocals lingering delicately over the band's full-biown fervor.

While Curve may still be fresh on the scene. Halliday and bassist Dean Garcia (originally of Eurythmics) have survived a series of failed projects gince the mid-1980s. (Eurythmics member Dave Stewart has continually supported Halliday and Garcia gince their first projecta, and he stuck around to back the duo on this latest project.)
Aside from the help of Ste wart, much of the band's sound can be attributed to veteran producer Alan Moulder, who has worked with such bands as Ride, My Bloody Valentine and The Jesus and Mary Chain.

"If he was a white American with the sume views, you wouldn't have all this controversy. You wouldn't hear anyching from the Urban League or the NAAACP. You would still hear atuff from the National Organization of Women, but that's it."
"It's good that he's AfricanAmerican." Rogers said. "But I don't think he will push for equal rights the way Thurgood did."
Thomas' testimony was completed Tuesday. The Senate Judiciary Committee spent the rest of the week listening to testimony from organizations and lobbies, including several pro-choice and liberal black organizations, protesting Thomas' pending confirmation.
The hearings are expected to be concluded early next week.

ANALYSIS
During Thomas testimony, Metzenbaum spoke of a hearing he chaired regarding the Freedom of Choice Act. He related to Judge Thomas testimony given by women who had been maimed by illegal abortions.
"Prior to the Roe decision," Metzenbaum said, "only wealthy women could be sure of having access to safe abortions.

Metzenbaum said that Roe's reversal would have "horrifying" consequences and asked in an appeal to the judge's "sense of compassion, whether or not you believe the Constitution protects a woman's right to an abortion."

Thomas said he would be "very, very pained" to have a woman "subjected to an environment like that." He concluded once again, however, "... as difficult as it is for me to anticipate or want to see that kind of illegal activity, I think it would undermine my ability to sit in an impartial way on an important case like that.'
Thomas' past is well-documented. His opening statement at the hearings in which he recalled hearing his grandfather called "boy" was genuine and moving. Quindlen noted he is a man who could look out the courthouse windows "and see the buses transporting criminal defendants, adding, 'I say to myself almost every day: but for the grace of God, there go I.""
Quindlen wishes she had confidence that Thomas "considered those of us who feel the same way when we see a group of desperate women in a clinic waiting room."

The columnist labeled it insulting that an issue so intimately affecting the lives of milions of women could be reduceditó a political fandango and a peevish annoyance for a Senator who will never have to think twice about who holds jurisdiction over the territory Her his skin.
Her conclusion: "A man in robes who is capable of looking at men in handcuffs and seeing himselfought to recognize that."

Men of Syracuse University:

Persuing academic exceilence by studying at a university is pertaps the most important and wisast decision a man can make. There is more to college life, however, than simply stuctying.
S.U. offers many opportunities for its students to get involved in campus activitigs. The finest of these is the Greek system. The Syracuse Greek system is a strong one whth over 40 fraternities and sororitles.

A fraternity can offer a man many experlences - soctal, academic, philanthroplc, athietic. Fratemity can also provide a sense of belonging which otherwise would be dificult to find on a campus of thls size.

The Brothers of Lambeta Chi Abla belleve that we offer ute best of these experiences. We would jlike you to see for yourself during Fratemity rush.

Rush is the process by which prospective members wisin fraternity houses in order to decide which one is right for them. Alhough the process is somewhat intimicating, you should keep one thing in mind - when you visti a fratemity you are juding them as much as they are judging you. Ask what that fraternity can do for you, what their requirements are, DO THEY HAZE?

Join us for rush - we'ref sure you'll make another wise decision.

Usually when you can't wait to open something, it's because you don't know what is inside.

Syracuse University women's tennis Coach Jesse Dwire, however, was anxious to open the season on Tuesday because he knows exactly what he has.
"I'm excited to see what happens this season because we had no one graduate, and everyone returning has another year of experience," Dwire said.
SU opened with an 8 -1 seasonopening win over Colgate University on Tuesday.

Singles winners for the Orange were Maria Pilar Merono, Sharie Liberatore, Corrina Bode, Jennifer Agate, and Sara Dickson.

Radio Guy two back in race for case  By DAVE MAGER

Guest Columnisl
And now, this week's episode of "As the Dart Flies." Here are some of the cliffhangers to be picked up during Week 4:

1) Will the saga of "P" and his team continue towards a happy ending; or will lead-man Dan Conley's stay in General Hospital hurt the show during the upcoming sweeps?
2) Is the West Virginia team as dead as "Dallas?"
3) Haven't they canceled that lame Northwestern program yet?
4) Will the sleepy town of Lincoln. Neb., ever make it into the 20th century?
5) Why do they play football at Columbia when no one in隹 City seems to care?
6) Which has been more of a flop: Jim Everett or network "Premiere Week?"

Florida (-8) at Syracuse
It's still early, but two of the next three games (Florida and Florida St.) could tell us whether Syracuse (2-0) plays on New Year's Day or earlier in the bowl season.
State is tops in the nation -it will be tough in Tallahassee. Florida is No. 5. An upset is a possibility at the Dorne, but Dan Conley's season-ending injury has created uncertainty.

Yes, John Lusardi was outstanding against Maryland. But his effectiveness in the long term is in question. He's not Conley.

NFL Game of the Week -LA Rams ( +8 1/2) at San Francisco
The start of the season for these two teams (both 1-2) reads like a bad sitcom pilot. Like a show whefe Redd Foxx makes jokes about Della Reese's weight. Or a wacky romp about a home improvement show host who can't fix anything. Ha, ha, ha The Rams and 49ers have been

So far this season, LA's Jim Everett has looked like Jim Nabors. (Although I hear Gomer Pyle could throw a mean spiral.) It's hard to believe a guy who used to be one of the best in the NFL is putting up worse numbers than Jeff Kemp and Tom Tupa.

The Niners running game is still sick. Keith Henderson, who has about as many moves as Florence, is their leading rusher. The Rams play well in San Francisco - they should cover. San Francisco 28, LA Rams 27.

No. 5 Florida provides major challenge for Orange

By JOSH BARNETT
Staff Writer
Homecoming weekend means many things: bonfires, peep rallies, fun and an easy football opponent

For Syracuse University this weekend, three out of four isn't bad.

The 18th-ranked Orangemen host the 5th-ranked University of Florida Gators on Saturday at $3: 30 \mathrm{p} . \mathrm{m}$. in the Carrier Dome.

The Gators, 2-0, who have scored 94 points in their two wins, aren't the typical homecoming opponent.
The Orangemen, $2-0$, are blocking out the hoopla surrounding homecoming and just getting prepared for the Gators, according to SU free safety Tim Sandquist.
"Whether it's homecoming or a Wednesday afternoon, we've got to get ready for them," Sandquist said. "We're going to play them just as hard. I think (homecoming) is more of a fan thing.
"Fans like to see a win on homecoming and that's what we're going to get them, a win. If it was Liverpool High School, we'd practice just as hard."

A sellout crowd is expected at the Dome for the game, and linebacker Glen Young said the Orange need to keep the fans in the game.
"We've got to get the crowd into it," Young said. "If anything happens and (Florida) pulls away a little bit, they've got to stay with us. Hopefully, they can cause enough of a ruckus to keep (the Gators') offense off balance."
Florida quarterback Shane Matthews said playing in the Carrier Dome for the Gatorg' first road game should be a challenge.
${ }^{\text {an }}$ I enjoy going into other people's places," he said. "It will show us how good we are.
The fun coming to the Dorne may not be too joyous for SU fans, if it comes in the form of Florida's "Fun N' Gun" offense.

The Gators passing garne has produced 590 yards and eight touchdowns in their two wins.

Florida will rotate six wide receivers but Matthews' favorite targets thus far have been Harrison Houston and Willie Jackson. Each has caught three touchJackson. Each

Also in the receiver rotation are Alonzo Sullivan, Tre Everett, Monty Duncan and Henry Haston.

The constant series of fresh legs wil be a challenge to the SU secondary.
"They're going to put in who they can to get the job done," Sandquist said. "I to get the job done," Sandquist said. "I feel whoever comes in, whether they're feel whoever comes in, whether they're fresh or not - I'm in good condition and whatever they throw at us."

hatever they throw at us." Florida's speed on the perimeter also poses a problem for the Orange.
"I don't know what you can do to negate speed," Syracuse coach Paul Pasqualoni said. "I think it changes the game. We all know they're very, very ast." Gators coach Steve Spurrier said the narne used to label his offense is just a creation of Florida's promotional stafi because his team can also gain yardage on the ground.
(Errict Rhett) ran for 170 yards against Alabama," Spurrier said. "We don't just throw it all over the place.
"We try to hope for balance. Our offense is, very simply (stated), if they play back hopefully we can run it. If they've got a whole bunch of people up See GATORS Page A13

SU to be tested by top teams

By ZEV BOROW

Staff Writer
If it is true that a team is only as good as its last game, then the Syracuse University volleyball team has been as good as it gets during their opening nine matches of the 1991 season.

However, this weekend's Buckeye Classic at Ohio State University will help decide if the Orangewomen, 9-0, are as good as their undefeated record suggests.
The weekend tournament pits SU against what should be its toughest. competition of the season.

The Orangewomen face the No. 14 ranked Buckeyes on Friday night, followed by matches with the Loyola Marymount Lions and the North Carolina Tar Heels on Saturday.

"This weekend's competition will without a doubt be the most competitive we have faced this year, and maybe even all season," Coach Dan Schulte said. "Ohio State and Loyola are top 20 teams, and North Carolina is up and coming. Victories will not come easy."

Schulte said this weekend will be a good litmus test for the Orangewomen.
"I wouldn't eay that the first part of our schedule hasn't been challenging, but I don't think we've really been pushed yet," Schulte said. "This weekend will really decide how good we are and how far we really have to go to reach the next level, and be a top team nationally.*

Ohio State features All-American candidate Lisa Whistler, an outside hitter The Orangewomen will come back with the talented front line of Jessica Paarlberg, Annie Parisien and Andrea Carson.

According to Ohio State coach Jim Stone, Syracuse will be among the tallest teams the Buckeyes will gee all season.
"They (SU) are a very big and talented team," Stone said. "We will have to use passing and ball control in order to get around that. All of the weekend's matches will be tough but I would say that we are pretty confident and ready."

If the Orangewomen could pull out two weekend victories, they would have a chance of cracking a top 20 ranking. See OHiO Page Al3

Police brutality charges lifted

By ERIN NEFF
Managing Editor

The Internal Affairs division of the Syracuse Police department has cleared two police officers of brutality charges. However, seven Syracuse University students who filed complaints against the officers have yet to be formally interviewed.
The students nled citizen complaint forms Aug. 30 after witnessing what they considered to be police brutality during the arrests of Adrian Thomas and Chris Smith in the alley off South Crouse Avenue shortly before midnight that night.
In a joint statement, the students allege officers Mark Kleist and Chad Monroe "forcibly restrained (Thomas), one holding his arms, one blocking his legs, and the third officer held the man in a choke-hold and repeatedly pounded on his face and skull with his fist."

The seven students were contacted by police since the night of the arrests, but ient meeting time for interviews at the Public Safety Building, according to Lisa Skop, an SU senior who filed a complaint.
Internal Affairs officers say the case is closed and the decision clearing Kleist and Munroe will stand. However, Skop says, the students have a meeting about the incident on Wednesday with Capt. the incident on Wednesday with Capt. hear their case.

Conflicting schedules
The students could not find a joint time to meet with officers before due to their busy schedules, she said. Many of the students who filed the complaints are leaders or active members of student organizations.
The lawyer representing Thomas had also asked the students to wait before talking to police as his client considered taking action, she added.
In a meeting two weeks ago, Thomas thanked the students for getting involved and filing the complaint. He also told them of his plans to file lawsuits against the city of Syracuse, the police department and the two officers involved, Skop said Sunday.

Police have no records of complaints of brutality filed by Thomas or Smith. Neither could be reached for comment Sunday.
The incident in question began when police asked Thomas to dump the beer he was holding. It is illegal to hold open containers of alcohol in public, according to Syracuse's open container law.

At this point, the version of the story from the seven student witnesses and the police report vary considerably.
About 200 students gathered to watch as the police attempted to arrest Thomas for disorderly conduct.

An 18-year-old Syracuse University student reported a possible sexual abuse Friday after she attended a party at the Sigma Chi fraternity house Thursday.
The woman attended the party with members of her sorority, however, she told police she left the main floor and went upstairs.

She told police that, despite being stamped under 21 , she drank half a bottle oícisainipastie and four or five cups of alcohol-spiked punch, a police report said.

told police she remembered going into bedroom with a man, the report said.The report stated that she remembers kissing the man but telling him, "I will not sleep with you because I have a boyfriend.

The woman remembered kissing him again as she felt a penetrating pain, the report said. She complained again, but could not remember if he stopped or not
She remembers that she then got out of the bed and got dressed, the report said.
She told police another man came into the room as she was getting dressed. She then left the house by walking down the fire escape.

The woman went to her boyfriend's apartment and later went to the SU Health Center for treatment
A staff member at the center said there was evidence of sexual activity and penis penetration, the report said.
The woman was taken to CrouseIrving Memorial Hospital where a rape kit was taken, the report stated.

The clothing she wore the night of the incident was submitted as evidence and a voluntary affidavit was signed

Members of the fraternity contacted last night were unable to comment on the case.

The case has been forwarded to the District Attorney's office and the victim desires prosecution. the report said.

Syracuse gives fans a game to remember

By ROB GUYETTE

Expressing the excitement created by Syracuse University's stunning victory over Florida on Saturday was best done by one of its players.

I just want the next 24 hours to last so long," linebacker Glen Young said after the Orangemen shocked No. 5 Florida 38-21 in a nationally-televised game in the Carrier Dome. "I don't want to think about classes, about homework, about anything else.
The 24 hours are over, and now that Young has caught up on his weekend homework, he and the rest of the 18 th homework, he and the rest of the inking ranked Orangemen will start thin
But the memories from Saturday will probably stay with them and the 49,823 fans in attendance for a long time.
First, there was Kirby DarDar, a little-known redshirt freshman, returning the opening kickoff 95 yards on a reverse play that gave SU an emotional boost it never lost.
There was Qadry Ismail bursting into the national spotlight for reasons other than his brother as he caught six passes for 95 yards and a touchdown.
There was Doug Womack, a tiny sophornore quarterback, sprinting past the highly-rated Gators and leaping over two defenders to score a fourth-quarter touchdown.

And there was the fourth-quarter drive, in which an inexperienced SU offensive line manhandled the worn down Florida defense to secure the win. "We obviously got a good tail-kicking," said Florida coach Steve Spurrier. "From the kickoff to the last play of the game. Syracuse was better than us. I'm glad we don't have to play them again."
That Syracuse won was not as big a surprise as the margin of victory and the convincing manner in which it was done.
"I can't tell you we expected to score 38 points," said SU coach Paul Pasqualoni. "Our kids rose to the occasion.
Syracuse never trailed and sent the favored Gators home with a feeling similar to what other Florida teams had given the Orangemen in the past few years.
In 1989, Florida State whipped SU 41-10 in the Carrier Dome. Last year in Miami, the Hurricanes posted a convincing 33-7 victory.
But on Saturday the Orangemen. aided by a Homecoming crowd whose excitement reached a level not heard since 1987, ignored their past inability to win an important regular season See WIN Page 8

Syracuse residents calling for po ce department reforms criticized city pollice relations and Syracuse Univer sity at a community speak-out Thurs day.
Some Syracuse residents said police openly discriminate against black city residents and ignore actions by SU students.

This discrimination leads to fric ion between Syracuse residents and SU students, residents charged.

Tensions on Westcott Street began when the local movie theater started showing movies that black youths wanted to see," said Rev. Millicent Collins, who raised three children on the city's east side.

As a resident of this country, I know that whites always become intense when they see a group of black males in one place together," she said.

Collins said police would line up in front of the movie theater when it was closing to intimidate the children.

She said the police were creating a situation of tension.

But while police were harassing local youth. they were ignoring inebriated college students, she said.

A police officer told local children Westcott Street is students' territory, said Jackie James, a resident of Syracuse's east side for seven years

Police officers tried to enter the meeting but were asked to leave so they would not discourage attendance.

"Maybe if they lose their city jobs. they will start to understand." she said.

Proposals for a civilian review board of police affairs to remedy abuse of police power were common recommendations from speakers.

James said she watched police invade an apartment and harass and beat children who were no older than 15.
"I'll slap the black off you boy," an officer said to one of the children, James said.

James said police could not give a legitimate reason why her child was handcuffed and released.

Myths surrounding rape, such as blam ing the victim for wearing provocative clothing or drinking too much alcohol, can be grouped into two all-inclusive myths which must be dispelled, said Dr. Joan Gibson, director of the Syracuse University R.A.P.E. Center.
The two myths are that preventing rape is the individual's responsibility and that women should try to avoid potentially dangerous situations.

An example of rape being the woman's responsibility is the myth that the man cannot stop having sex once he has started and therefore the woman must be the one to stop any sexual activity. she stid.

I think any of us will agree that if a guy and a girl are in a bed making out or making love or whatever and his mother walked in the door, he would stop like that and be up and out and chatting with his mother immediately:" she said.
This myth of personal responsibility comes from the fact that it is more acceptable in American society for young boys to be more physically assertive than young girls, Gibson said.

The United States in particular has is taught from a bouncing baby boy that you bounce boys harder than girls," she said.

Behavior is the root

It is expected behavior in certain situations that males are more mentally, physically and sexually aggressive, Gibson said.

In adolescence their self-worth gets tied up with how well they compete mentally, physically and sexually," she said.

The underlying message in American child rearing is that women are fragile, vulnerable and need someone to watch over them, and men are strong, masculine and can take care of themselves, she said.
This message puts women in a subor* dinate position to men. Gibson said Raising children without the attitude of the fragile girl and the rough boy will begin a change in the American societal attitude toward wormen, she said.
"Until then we need to take a look at our own personal needs," she said.
Social institutions such as-pornography, print and broadcast media and movie content in American culture are

Community forum calls for improved relations with SU

Syracuse University and city relations are definitely strained and need to be improved, city residents and SU students agreed at a community forum Wednesday.

The campus and community need to understand each other," said Syracuse resident Kyle Tape.
"People who go there think they are better. They think they can do no wrong," he said.
"There is a communication gap that needs to be worked out," said Syracuse resident Wendolyn White

But both sides need to talk or it won't be solved," she said. "The people at this forum are not the problem

They will have another opportunity at the next public forum on Oct. 3 at an on-campus location.
"They think since they are on the hill and we are down the hill, we have nothing to offer them," Tape said.

He said the relationship is about to explode and the people don't realize it."
"People down here don't have much to do. so they go up and bring negatives do. So they go up with them." he said.

Responding to policy

"Black people are trying to overcome so many of the sarne issues," Syracuse resident Carl Newton said.
"The comrnunity of Syracuse has become our community." Irons said.
"A lot of people on campus don't see themselves as a part of the Syracuse community," he said. "The hill is a factor."

Use fee for students

Syracuse University issued a wise policy in banning unrepresented nonstudents from attending events in the SU Underground.

Student African-American Society President Vaughn Irons expressed his displeasure with the policy, citing the reason that it would prohibit interaction between SAS and other blacks in the area.

Irons also expressed concern that "positive individuals" who should be included in campus activities would be excluded. That may be, but this happens to student groups across the board.

Such groups as The Daily Orange and the Student Government Association have to reject non-student contributions each year. Since they are student organizations, they exist for student use.

These three groups share one common thread: they all accept and use student fee money. This money is theoretically channelled back to the students. This money should promote campus activity. That may sound greedy, but it's not.

In fact, the student-only policy is more accommodating of non-students than its title suggests. Under the policy, students can bring nonstudents to events, as long as they sign them in as guests. This policy does not ban non-students from student fee events. Rather, it attempts to steer clear of events like the fight which erupted after a fraternity gathering at the Underground on Aug. 30. The fight involved Syracuse residents and students, and resulted in several injuries.

SU has proven time and again that it cannot deal effectively with its own students. The administration is wise in realizing it should not enact a policy making it responsible for the policing of the community as well.

But just as ailly, and more ciangerous, is the university's attempt to muffe Chang by punishing her. Dean Golden's letter to Chang, published in Thre Daily Orange, castigatea her for causing "stigma, for not being "responsible."

I think the better word for what the university is doing is "censorship."

Like the right to cheap beer and the rigint to sleep late, the right to free speech is

Who decides what is responsible? The prudes who banned Lady Chatterley's Lover didr't think D.H. Lawrence was "responsible.

The folks after Salman Rushdie's hide didn't believe The Satnnic Verses were very tresponsible." And in the eyes of the Chinese government, the protesters in Tiamanman Square were not a "responsible" lot.
The path to book-burning and ideological witch-hunting is paved with forced "responsibility.

Pat Chang dismisses the free speech issue, saying it only benefits "the oppressor." But she's wrong. It's the most potent weapon she has.
Free Speech Follies, Part It:
This week's "ignorance is bliss" award goes to the person or persone (and inse those tevms loosely) who spray-painted the cute "FU $$ U$ " slogans all over campus sidewalks.

Let's think about this for a moment.
Using the "Van Halen Album Title" school of acronym deciphering, I assume the painter is attacking Syracuse University for being an callous, money-grubbing institution.
All in all, it is a pretty fair charge to make against what is essentially a callous, moneygrubbing institution.

But Im aure that one of the things bothering the mysterious graffiti person is the enormous amount of money SU fleeces from students.

Now, consider. Who has to clean up the spray paint? SU, of course Removing paint from sidewalics costs money. And can you guess to whom the university passes the cost of cleaning it?

O.K. I get it: protest the high cost of an SU education by making it more expensive.

At least Pat Chang had the good sense to use paper.

To the editar:
In a mystifying editorial on Sept. 16 about the Ad Hoc Group's recent report, you suggested that important programs such as African American Studies and Women's Studies are seriously threatened by the approach the university is adopting to unavoidable budget cuts. Since the Department of African American Studies and the Women's Studies Program are both in the College of Arts and both in the College of Arts Sciences, I wrant to set the record straight. No suggestion record straight. No suggestion has been made by anyone, as has been made by anyone, as

The Women's Studies Programis Interdisciplinary Programs, and, like the others, is different in structure from an academic department. We have every intention of maintaining it as a vigorous part both of our academic programming and our community
A more careful reading of the Ad Hoc Group's Report would make apparent its recurrent emphasis on programmatic quality as a principal criterion. Healy's greatest success in raising awareness is through Jamnesty concerts which are held worldwide. Participating Jamnesty concerts which are held worldwide. Participating performers have included Sting. Sinead O'Connor. U2 and performers have in Bruce Springsteen.

The objective of Jamnesty is to "give information to an audience that is basically 25 or younger," said Emily Hennen, coordinator of Syracuse University's Amnesty chapter. "His opinion is that its the only way to reach them, Healy will be reviewing Amnesty International in his speech. The organization has been in existence since 1961, and Healy wunts to let the audience know what Amnesty is all about.

"Jack... he basically has a presence, you know. He is a charismatic man. He is responsible for massive increases in enrollment in Amnesty." Hennen said.
Amnesty surrent standing is l.i million people world wide, $$ 00.000$ of which are Americans

A well-rounded man

"He is a very. very animated speaker. very intelligent, very knowledgeable, very diplomatic. He's got all the qualities necessary to do something like this." Hennen said.

Also speaking will be Reza Jalali, a Kurdish former prisoner of conscience. A display of photographs and artifacts depicting Kurdish life coincides with Jalati's speech and will be on display in the Noble Room of Hendrick's Chapel. howings are on Tharsday Stept 26,6 to 10 p.ma. and Friday Sept. $27,8 \mathrm{am} . \mathrm{m}$ to 8 pm . The photographs, taken by Jafali's friend. Kaverina Weslien, aremeant to raise awareness of the Kurdish people.
Amnesty International abides by the Declaration of Human Rights. The basic principle behind the organization is that people have the right to express themselves. Amnesty's efforts are to protect citizens from their governments. ensuring their rights.

Amnesty has three mandates. The first is to attend to prisoners of conscience. These are people who are imprisoned based upon their political views, religious beliefs or ethnic backgrounds. Amnesty will help these people provided they have not advocated violence in any way.

Amnesty helps these people through a series of letters, petitions and telegrams. The purpose is to alert the rest of the world concerring these prisoners' whereabouts.

Secondly. Amnegty deals with political prisoners, making sure they are given a fair and speedy trial. Otten. trials are slow or even nonexistent. The third mandate is to work slow or even nonexistent. The third mandate is to work toward abolishing torture and the death penalty in all cases.
Hennen's basic goal for SU's local chapter is to increase enrollment., Although last year there were more than 50 people on paper, not nearly that many people actively participated on camplis. "Amnesty waints to constartly gain the awareness of other students.

I have learned a butt-load at Syracuse, and I have had quite a few good courses and professors. The good has been outweighed, however, by classes like logic, in which the highlight of the gemester

So I sign up for Chinese. Cood move.
On the first day the teacher asked us why we wanted to learn Chinese. Most of the class either wanted to do business in the Far East after they graduated, or aiready knew the language and needed an easy class. I told her that I wanted to be able to watch Godzilla movies in their original larguage so that I could pick up some of the nuances that I might have lost watching the dubbed versions.
I know now that Godzilla is from Japan. and China is a completely different country.

When CBS Iirst aired Northern Exposure in the summer of 1990, it was well-received by crities and generated decent ratings. Seeing they might have a good show on their hands, the network exectitives wisely ordered more episodes, which began airing in April on Mondays at 10 p.m.

Then a funny thing happened - the show became a hit.

It has added even more clout to CBS winting Monday night schedule and returns tonight with a new season of episodes.

Set in the fietional cown of Cicely, Ala f but filmed in Washington state), Northern Expo sure is in some ways derivative of ABC's late Twin Peaks.
Like Peaks, Northern Exposure is set in a small town full of unusual people. ## Ground

By KENT FISCHER
Asst. Sports Editor
Running backs Terry Richardson and David Walker have been splitting play ing time since spring practice last year.

In Saturday's $38-21$ upset of the University of Florida, the two backs split more than time - they split the Gator defense to the tune of 166 yards rushing.

Richardson, who was held to only 36 yards rushing through the game's first three quarters, ripped off 50 of his 85 yards on seven carries as the workhorse of Syracuse's game-clinching, fourthquarter drive.

Richardson got the call on five consecutive plays as he burst, spun and danced for three first downs on runs of seven, 14 and 12 yards. The drive went for 72 yards and took more than eight minutes off the clock.

Walker was the Orange's most effective rusher before that as he ran for 81 yards on only 10 carries. Walker also scored SU's second touchdown when he swept around the right end for a 10 -yard score.

Offensive coordinator George DeLeone said Syracuse was able to churn the game out on the ground because they had the Gator defenders running laterally trying to stop the option.

We had a chance if we could get them to run along the line of scrimmage, DeLeone said. "If we could get them moving down the line against the option, instead of moving upfield, then we thought that would open up the power game. That was a great part of our offense today."
Syracuse balanced the run with an effective passing game in the first half. effective passing game in the first half. rushes. In the second half, however, the rushes. In the second haif, however, the Orangemen's backfield depth began to wear down the Gator defensive line. SU wear down the Gator defensive line rushed 34 times in the second half.

Every one of our (backs) is capable of making big plays," Richardson said. "The offensive line was opening some good holes for us. When you have the lead, why put the ball in the air?"

All in all, seven different players carried the ball for the Orangemen

Sophomore back Marcus Lee saw his first pressurized action of 1991 in the second half and rattled off 45 yards on just eight carries.

Lee's performance was crucial in that he gave Richardson and Walker some much-needed rest as the Orangemen ground it out late in the game.
"I was running as hard as I could (late in the game)." Richardson said. "But when we got down to the five, I was so exhausted I had to take a blow," of fullbacks," head coach Paul Pasqualoni said. "We wanted to get Marcus Lee in the game because he practices so hard and he's so talented that he deserves to get in the game."

Walker said that as long as Syracuse finds success with its game plans, he doesn't care how many Orangemen get to carry the ball.
"Hey, as long as they keep moving the chains and scoring, it doesn't bother me a bit." Walker said.
Quarterback Doug Womack saw extensive action during two late-game scoring drives afterstarter Marvin Graves injured his toe in the first half Womack's presence was too much for the worn-down Gators to handle. The sophomore scored on a three-yard run and rushed for an additional 38 yards.

aren't stupid," Florida coach Steve Spurrier said. "We just couldn't stop him.

According to DeLeone, Womack is quickly emerging as one of the nations' premiere option quarterbacks.
"Doug is as fast as any guy on the Florida team." Deleone said. "With Marvin not as healthy we thought (our option plays) would be better with Doug in the game.

Doug is an exceptional option quarterback. If he were at Oklahoma or Colorado right now he'd be a marquee player. He's a (Colorado quarterback) Darien Hagan type who, to his credit, is being very patient, and when he gets in the game he does a great job.

Walker said the Orangemen were prepared to play with the faster, deeper Florids team, but said he never thought as they did.
"We thought we could play with them," Walker said. "But never in my wildest dreams did I think we could dominate them. Our offensive line made some great holes and we were able to control the ball and the second half." control the ball and the second half.

The Gators defense was ranked among the best in the SEC, especially against the run.

Before Saturday's game, Florida was allowing an average of 111.5 yards per game against the rush. Florida allowed San Jose State just 83 yards on the ground in its opening win two weeks ago. Alabama fared a little better last week gaining 140 yards

We never really stopped (Syracuse), spurrier said, "I didn't think they could go up and down the field like they did."

But, the UF running game had -3 yards rushing in the first half.
"I think they're a team that's an excellent passing team," Pasqualoni said. "But, they do a lot with the draw. I thought our kids reacted very well to the draw. We felt we had to stop the draw and that opened up some underneath passes at times.
"I initiated the philosophy $\rightarrow$ keep them all back and allow chem to run or react back to the pass. That's what we were trying to do, stop the run."
The Gators fared no better in the second half and finished with -17 yards for the game. Knowing Matthews had to pass, the SU defense sacked him three times for 51 yards.
"I don't know how many games (Matthews) has been in where he has felt as much pressure throwing the football consistently during the course of the ganne," SU defensive coordinator Kevin Coyle said "I think our ruys did a good job think our guys did a good job Wp front when we rushed four. bit We did cor with some he a and mixed up our coverages."

A botched handoff from Graves to Richardson late in the third quarter - SU's only turnover of the game - gave the Gators the ball at the 7 -yard line.
Two plays later, Matthews hit Willie Jackson in the end zone from four yards out to cut the SU lead to $28-21$ with $4: 56$ left in the quarter.
The Orangemen had committed eight turnovers in their previous two games, but the fumble was their only turnover against the Gators.
-We knew one play couldn't stop the way we were executing all day," Graves said. "We just said to ourselves: the points we have on the board wasn't going to win the game. We needed more."
"That's what we did. We went down and got more."

Syracuse rebounded from the turnover-turned-touchdown and put together an 11 play, 80 -yard drive to rebuild its lead to 14 points.
Doug Womack capped the drive with a 3 yard touchdown run womack leapt ouer a de fender on the right side for the end touchdown 48 seco
When the Orangemen got the ball again with $13: 22$ remaining in the game, Syracuse put together a 17 -play, 72 -yard drive, running $8: 09$ off the clock. afohn Biskup eapped the drive with a. 25-yard field goal.

I think the ( $8: 09$ ) was more important than the three points," Pasqualoti said. "That wras key."

Florida coach Steve Spurrier said tive Orangemen beat his team in iall areas.
WWe had abod game plan and they had a better game plan," Spurrier said. "I give Coach Pagqualoni all the credit in the world. We were out-coached all the way.

When I came to Syracuse When I came to Syracuse, a lot of people back home said, 'Why go up North?" Richardson said. "This is the reason why."

Rooks said this win will serve as a reason for the Orangemen to remain undaunted by highranked foes in the future.
"We had no fright in us," Rooks said. "I know we're not intimidated by anyone anymore."

Coming into the game, is would have been easy for the Orange to be intimidated by the Gators who had just come oft a 35-0 whipping of Alabamp
"People said a lot of positive things about Florida this week," Sandquist stid. "We knew they were a dangerous team.'

Following the game, however. it was Spurrier who was intimi. dated and acknowledged the Orangemen's explosiveness.
"They outplayed us up and down the line." Spurrier said. "I'm glad we don't have to play them again. We couldn't stop them."

all reinforcing the myths about rape, she said.

The issue that arises with pormography is the message it conveys that a woman will have sek with anything that's around," Gibson said.
${ }^{\text {"It's part and parcel in porn }}$ that aggressive sex, any kind of sex with men, women, animals or anything, is good for women," she said.

Desensitizing rape

According to Gibson, men and women who view porn about violent sex will look at instances of rape and will question whether a rape actually occurred.

Porn desensitizes one to the violence of rape," she said, "It conveys a right that men can put women in such a demeaning position."
*Pornography as a part of social fabric is something that perpetuates the attitude of women's responsibility." she said.

The media tends to not cover

Granados, a native Costa Rican, said underdevelopment unites the countries of Latin America.

Most people living in these underdeveloped countrics want to become developed." he said. "But that does not mean they want to live like the people in the countries that are presently developed."

A general lack of identity about being Latin American contributes to underdevelopment, Cranados said.
"We share no common culture or history," he said. "That's a risky statement, but it's true. "Latin America is characterized by tremendous diversity.
attempted rapes and gives the wrong impression of rape situations, Gibson said.
"Most of the time you can only read about completed and usually very violent rapes, not usually very violent rapes.
the attempts. $G$ Gibson said.

This lack of reporting on attempted rapes gives the reader. viewer or listener no sense of ever being able to escape, she said.

According to Gibson, the media should report on where the rape or attempted rape occurred, whether it was a stranger or non-stranger rape and resources for individuals such as crisis centers.
"You get no sense of ever being able to recover or what your available resources are. she said.

The second myth on trying to avoid dangerous situations includes four pre-rape signals, she said.

Everyone has personal space and someone checking out how much sexual liberty they can take with you should be considered an invasion of that space," she said.

Sexual innuendos and sexual

There are many cultural differ ences between the countries and here is atso no single history unifying the countries."
But Granados said he believes Latin Americans have to realize their identities to improve their countries.
"Latin America will be forced to come together and make a future," he said. "We will share a common history.
"We are Latin American now because we share a common identity. We identify ourselves as Latin American and we are identified by others as Latin Amentican. A Latin American American. A Latin identity does exist.
jokes at inappropriate times are signals and should not be permitted, she said

Another signal is the need for power and control, she said.
"American dating customs lesitimize the use of force... who controls the social relationship is the big issue," Gibson said.

Hostility or anger?
The third signal is expres sions of hostility and anger, especially hostility coward women by men, she said.

The final pre-rape signa! is the acceptance or denial of in terpersonal violence, she said.
-Violence is man's way of controlling women and there is an acceptance of using force to get what you want in our society,"Gibson said.

Using force to intervene is something we as a nation need to deal with," she said.
"Men will always justify abuse by blaming the other person," she said.

None of these things individually can point out a rapist, but men and women should use them as a guideline for monitoring themselves, she said.

Federal law expands job rights for mentally ill

Erriployment rights of the mentally ill will be expanded by a new law protecting people with disubilities
The federal law that takes effect in July will prohibit businesaes asking whether job applicants have a history of mental illness.
Once hired, employees with mental problems will be entitled to extra support and accommodation so long as they can perform essential job requirements. The law, however, does not protect workers who cannot perform the fundamental duties of their jebs.

Psychologizis and government offi. cials said they expect the law to dimin ith the stigma of mental illness and reduce discrimination involving milhions of Ameri. ans.

Experts estimate at least 60 million Americans between the ages of 18 and 64 will experience a mental disorder during their lifetime.
